business, to state what had become of the movables, immovables, stock-in-trade and outstandings and to give any other details that may be relevant. In reply to this the plaintiff sent Ex. IV-A dated January 7, 1924, through his Vakil Ganapathiappa Pillai. In this for the first time the information is given that the accounts were closed on January 28, 1923, the properties of the partnership being taken over at the then market price. It refers to the former notice, Ex. XI, and alleges that it was already mentioned in it that Kailasam Pillai consented to the plaintiff taking over of the partnership properties. This last statement is incorrect there being no such allegation in the prior notice. Then it says that it is not possible to give in a mere reply notice the details of the accounts. It was then alleged that the plaintiff never raised any objection to anybody interested in Kailasam Pillai coming and examining the accounts. The plaintiff offers to show the accounts to any person coming on behalf of defendant No. 2 within a month from the date of the notice. This notice, it may be said, gives a fair opportunity to defendant No. 2 to look into the accounts and gave also some information about the details of the settlement of January 28, 1923, though no such offer had been made previously. But this offer was not availed of by defendant No. 2. She sent nobody to examine the accounts and to raise specific questions about the validity of the entries therein. It appears that, up to the date of the suit, she merely kept quiet without utilising the offer made by the plaintiff. The present suit was filed on July 6, 1925, by the plaintiff.

Issues Nos. 3, 4 and 5 raise the questions as to what are the movable and immovable properties, the outsandings and the liabilities of the partnership. Issue No. 2 is now immaterial. Issue No. 1 arises only in the cross-appeal. Without recording any evidence on any of the issues the Subordinate Judge referred the whole matter to a Commissioner and after the receipt of the Commissioner's report he dealt with the issues. One of the points strenuously pressed before the Commissioner and afterwards before the Court was as to the price which the plaintiff should have paid for the salt pans. As to this it will be convenient first to state the legal position. Prima facie, the plaintiff is not bound to take the salt pans. If he takes the salt pans at a price agreed upon between the parties, then no question arises. But if he takes the salt pans, though not bound to take them, and credits in favour of the partnership some price of his own fixing, i. e., behind the back of the other partner the other partner is not bound by such valuation and if he questions the valuation, the Court is entitled to scrutinise it. So far, the parties are agreed. But defendant No. 2 says that while she is entitled to repudiate the taking over by the plaintiff at a price of his own fixing, she is not bound to take back the pans and she is entitled to insist that the plaintiff should now be compelled to pay the proper price of the pans in January 1923. The plaintiff, while conceding that if his price is not found to be the proper price by the Court his taking over might be set aside, contends that he cannot be compelled to purchase them at the price found by the Court to be the proper price. The only result of setting aside his taking over of the salt pans would be that his so-called one-sided purchase is simply set aside, the pans remain as partnership property.

If the parties agree to wind up the partnership, the Court may sell the salt pans or if defendant No. 2 is willing to retain them she may take her share of them. But the third alternative suggested that the plaintiff can be compelled to take the pans at the price now found by the Court to be the proper price does not exist. To direct such a course would be according to him to compel the plaintiff to complete a contract never existed or to thrust a purchase upon him which he never agreed to take. In Muthiah Chetty v. Veerappa Chetty (1) myself and Jackson, J. held that a settlement by which one partner takes the partnership assets solely for himself on a valuation fixed by himself is not prima facie binding on the other partners, "and the Court is entitled to look into the matter." In that case Mr. Varadachari, who appeared for the respondent argued that the price at which the partner took over the assets was a proper price. That point was found against him and another price was found by the Court below as the proper price. The respondent in that case was willing to take the properties at the price fixed by the lower Court and Mr. Varadachari did not raise the further argument before us that he was not bound to take the properties at the price fixed by the lower Court. In that case the respondent was very anxious to retain the house in Rangoon at whatever cost and the argument that the purchase should not be thrust upon him against his will was never urged before us. In these circumstances, that case cannot be authority for the proposition now contended for by the appellant. In Vyse v. Foster (2), the articles of partnership contained a term that if any partner dies his share was to be purchased by the other partners and the value of his share was to be paid by promissory notes. It was found that the surviving partners took over the share of the deceased partner under this term, that there was no misconduct and that the omission of the formality by which promissory notes were to be executed for the price did not vitiate the purchase, and the suit by one of the children of the deceased partner asking for profits or interest on the value of the father's share was dismissed. At p. 329* Lord Cairns laid down three rules in the case of the death of a partner: (1) If there is nothing special in the contract of partnership and there is no settlement of account, the estate of the deceased partner is entitled to the benefit of a share of the profits which were made in the trade after his death; (2) if there was an option given to the surviving partners to take his share on certain terms, then those terms must be acted upon, and (3) if they are not acted upon, this partnership remains unliquidated and the estate of the deceased partner will again be entitled to a share of the profits. So far as the profits of the partnership subsequent to the death of Kailasam Pillai are concerned, there is no difficulty in laying down the rule of law as to what the rights of defendant No. 2 are. They are now expressly stated in s. 37, Partnership Act, and this section is substantially in conformity with the rule laid down by Lord Cairns. In the present case there is no term in the articles of partnership and as defendant No. 2 does not agree to the taking over by the plaintiff at the price fixed by him it may be that she is entitled to her share of the profits of the partnership acquired after the death of Kailasam Pillai and which may properly be attributed to her share of the partnership assets. But we are not now dealing with the question as to what share of the profits defendant No. 2 is entitled after Kailasam Pillai's death.

(1) 121 Ind. Cas. 488; A I R 1929 Mad. 627; 52 M. 509; 29 L W 636; (1929) M W. N 345; 56 M L J 776; Ind. Rul. (1930) Mad. 184.

We have first to deal with the question as to the disposal of the corpus of Kailasam Pillai's share of the partnership assets. I do not think that the decision in Vyse v. Foster (2) helps us in this matter. In Syers v. Syers (3). It was held that a partnership at will in a music hall and tavern was started in June, 1869, and that it was afterwards, dissolved by a letter of August 1872. As to the intervening period the plaintiff was entitled to a share of profits, and also to a share of the assets as they stood in 1872, the date of dissolution. As to the share of the assets it was held that the Court of Chancery had power either to grant a sale of the undertaking as a going concern or to make a proposal for the purchase by the owner of the seven-eighths share of the plaintiff's one-eighth share. The decree in that case accordingly directed that a valuation should be made of the one-eighth share of the plaintiff and that an option should be given to the defendant-appellant to take it at that valuation. If he takes it at that valuation no further accounts are to be taken, but if he does not take it at the valuation fixed by the Court, the last clause of the decree provides that the music hall and tavern be sold as a going concern and that the assets be divided between the parties. This last provision to some extent supports the argument of the plaintiff. But Mr. Srinivasa Ayyangar appearing for defendant No. 2 contends that there was no taking over by the defendant in that case and, therefore, the question did not strictly arise. The decision in Lord Provost etc. of Edinburgh v. Lord Advocate (4), relates only to the profits acquired since the death of the partner, and has nothing to do with the corpus of the property in Cassels v. Stewart (5), it was found that the assignment of the interest of one partner to another was in exact conformity with the agreement in the articles of partnership and cannot be questioned by a third partner. It was also observed at p. 73* that a partner acquiring any benefit by using his posi-

(2) (1874) 7 H L C 318; 44 L J Ch. 37; 23 W R 355; 31 L T 177.

*Page of (1874) 7 H. L.—[Ed.]

(3) (1876) 1 A C 174; 24 W R 970; 35 L T 101.

(4) (1879) 4 A C 823.

(5) (1881) 6 A C 64; 29 W R 636.

*Page of (1881) 6 A. C.—[Ed.]

tion as a partner is bound to communicate it to the others and he should not separate his interest from theirs.

The principle is stated in Lindley on Partnership, Edn. 9, pp. 395 and 396, in respect of renewals of leases. The case in Manley v. Sertori (6), also relates to profits earned after the death of a partner. The case in In re Bess; Bess v. Bess (7), also deals with the case of renewal of a partnership lease and the duty of one partner not to acquire any special advantage over any other partner (p. 61*). The decision in Hordern v. Hordern (8), was very much relied on by Mr. Srinivasa Ayyangar. In that case the articles of partnership provided that on the death of one of the partners the survivor should pay to the executors of the deceased the full share to which they may be entitled on the taking of a general account of the partnership assets, the assets being valued by mutual agreement or by valuation in the usual way. It was held by the Privy Council that this clause was a binding contract of sale and purchase and that the valuation was only an incident in carrying out the same. Mr. Srinivasa Ayyangar contends that as the plaintiff had himself taken over the share of Kailasam Pillai his act was binding upon him and he could not go behind it and now offer to return the share. The valuation of the share is only an incident and he must now be compelled to take the share at the proper price which the Court may now find. But I do not agree with this contention and I am of opinion that this case does not help the appellant.

In that case there was a contract between the partners that the surviving partner should take over the share of the deceased partner at a proper valuation. The moment the proper valuation is arrived at by the Court, the contract of sale and purchase can be made to operate. But in the present case we have no such contract. What the plaintiff did was strictly illegal on his part and unless defendant No. 2 accepts it the only thing we can do is to set it aside. We cannot proceed further and insist upon the carrying out of a contract into which he never entered and compel him to take over the properties at a valuation to be arrived at by the Court. The decision in Hugh Stevenson & Sons v. Aktiengsellischaft Fur Carton Nagen Industrie (9), again does not help us. It was there held that the German Company were entitled to a share of the profits made after the dissolution by reason of the war by the carrying on of the business by the English Company with the aid of the German Company's share capital. In some of these cases there is no question of the valuation of the corpus because the corpus of the property consisted of merely capital and not of immovable property or any right analogous to the right in salt pans and that portion of the case presented no difficulty. But it does present some difficulty in the present case. On the whole I have come to the conclusion that so far as the salt pans themselves are concerned, while agreeing with the contention of the appellant that the value at which the plaintiff has sought to take them over is an undervalue and, therefore, does not bind her, she is not entitled to insist on the plaintiff taking her share of the partnership at the proper valuation which may now be arrived at. Defendant No 2 will now be entitled to her share of the partnership propery which she may keep and manage if she so likes. But if she does not, she may ask for a sale of the salt pans as a part of the winding up. We are not satisfied that the sale made by the Commissioner after the preliminary decree was a sale made after due advertisement.

That sale realised only Rs. 44,000 as against Rs. 69,090 at which the plaintiff took them over with the result that the lower Court found that the plaintiff was entitled to a larger sum than he prayed for in his plaint. We do not think we can allow such an anomalous result. The salt pans should be sold only after proper advertisement, i. e., after giving not less than a month's notice fixing the price the plaintiff had paid as upset price. If after one or two attempts no higher offer is forthcoming, they should be regarded as sold to the plaintiff at the price he took them over and defendant No. 2 would not be entitled to obtain anything under this heading. If there is a higher offer, defendant No. 2 will get the benefit of the higher price and interest between January 1923 and the date of such sale.

Now coming to the next heading argued

(6) (1927) 1 Ch. D 157; 96 L J Ch. 65; 136 L T 238.

(7) (1903) 2 Ch. D 40.

(8) (1910) A C 465; 80 L J P C 15; 26 T L R 524; 102 L T 867.

*Page of (1903) 2 Ch. D.—[Ed.]

(9) (1918) A C 239; 87 L J K B 416; 118 L T 126; 34 T L R 206; 62 S J 290.

by the appellant, this relates to 6,83,600 maunds of salt left at the time of Kailasam Pillai's death. This salt consisted of two portions, the stock in Arumuganeri and the stock in Tuticorin. On the estimate of the Commissioner he found that the Tuticorin salt actually fetched a profit of Rs. 1,313-8-0. It is said that the reason for the profit was that the salt was mostly exported to Calcutta and other outside ports. But in the case of Arumuganeri salt it was sold at a loss of nearly Rs. 20,000 because there were four or five other salt merchants at the time and they had all considerable stocks of salt and it was not easy to dispose of such a large stock of six lakhs of maunds. Whatever the reasons may be after carefully considering the arguments of the learned Advocate and the report of the Commissioner, vide p. 361, etc., I am unable to find sufficient materials for differing from the conclusion of the lower Court. The average price at which the salt was taken by the plaintiff ranged from one anna per maund up to 4 annas 6 pies per maund. As regards the sales by the plaintiff in 1922, 1923 and 1924 the average price secured by him ranged from 6 pies per maund to 6 annas 6 pies per maund and the Commissioner finds that as a matter of fact in the re-sale of the stock by the plaintiff he sustained very heavy loss. And in cases where the average price ranges so widely as from 6 pies to nearly 7 annas, it is impossible for the Court at this distance of time to find that there is any impropriety in the act of the plaintiff. Even on the footing that the Court is entitled to scrutinise the taking over by the plaintiff at the instance of defendant No. 2, we are unable to say that the price credited by the plaintiff in favour of defendant No. 2 is improper. The matter might have been left at that stage in the Court below. But what the Court did was because defendant No. 2 would not accept the price at which the plaintiff took over the stock of salt, it proceeded to consider the amount realised by the sale of the salt by the plaintiff as if it was a sale held on account of the partnership and debited a considerable portion of the loss to defendant No. 2. We do not think this portion of the lower Court's action is justified. The moment we find that the price at which the plaintiff took over the salt is the proper price, there is an end of this item, and it is unnecessary to debit further loss to defendant No. 2 simply because she refused to recognize the price paid by the plaintiff as the proper price.

The third item argued is the item of outstandings. As already mentioned, para. 13 of the plaint refers to this item and the amount of the outstandings is mentioned as Rs. 37,000. As a matter of fact during the pendency of the suit some more outstandings were collected by the plaintiff and this nearly amounted to about Rs. 18,000. As to the remaining outstandings they were all sold in auction and the plaintiff purchased them at a valuation of Rs. 300 and defendant No. 2 questions the propriety of the sale. Though apparently this sale looks like a sale at an under-value, on a closer scrutiny, we do not think there is anything substantial in this item. Of the Rs. 37,000 outstandings the most important item is an item of Rs. 31,000 due on a mortgage and an item of Rs. 2,356 due as an unsecured debt from a firm called S. P. S. N. Brothers of Madura. The debt due from this firm alone amounts to Rs. 33,492 and the balance consists of small items due from various persons. The mortgage decree against S. P. S. N. Brothers was executed and Rs. 18,000 was all that could be realised. As to the other debts practically nothing has ever since been collected by the plaintiff. The plaintiff is even now willing that defendant No. 2 should take any share of these debts if any portion of them has since been realised or should have a declaration of her right to a share in these items. In these circumstances I think that there is really nothing in this item.

The next item which was the subject of controversy between the parties is an item of Rs. 5,251-11-0 due from defendant No. 2's husband to the plaintiff on an account called Tanadu chitta or private account. The books containing the private account are produced by the plaintiff and at one stage I thought that this fact was a fact supporting the plaintiff's case. But Mr. Varadachari with his usual fairness pointed out that all defendant No. 2's papers and documents were with him and they were produced by him and that no particular significance should be attached to the fact that the books are produced by the plaintiff. Leaving therefore this fact aside we have got to see what do these account books really represent. These books contain a number of debit items representing the amonnts spent by Kailasam Pillai for his private expenses,

As many of these books open with a debit, it is difficult to see whence the amounts were obtained by him to enable him to incur the expenses. After the debits amount to Rs. 3,000 or Rs. 4,000 sometimes we find a large credit from the partnership account, very often a credit large enough to wipe off the debit and leave a surplus. On the basis of such entries it is argued by Mr. Varadachari that the debits really represent drawings from the partnership funds. As each expense was incurred the amount was really drawn from the partnership account, but instead of the amount being entered in the account at the time, they were all totalled up later and a lump sum was entered as if it was drawn on that date.

Now, after the debits and credits cancelled each other for some time, the last of the debits remaining at the time of Kailasam's death were not counter-balanced by any credit item and these debits amount to Rs. 5,251. Mr. Varadachari therefore contends that they are really drawings from the partnership funds and that defendant No. 2 is bound to pay those drawings amounting to Rs. 5,251, or in other words the amount should be taken as a debit item against her. It is contended on the other hand by Mr. Srinivasa Ayyangar that though sometimes the debit items were counterbalanced by credit items large enough to wipe them out, there are other entries showing that the credit item did not always wipe off the debit item. It was sometimes a smaller item of credit than the debit. His argument is that the credit item represented a real credit when actually drawn but where there was no such entry, no such drawing from the partnership fund should be presumed. The consideration that if Kailasam did not draw the amount from somewhere he could not have incurred the expenses raises the suspicion that perhaps Mr. Varadachariar's explanation is true. But his case suffers under one disadvantage. With his explanation the account books cease to be accurate account books with the value of account books. The very object of accounts being kept especially of day books is the value that is to be attached to the entries made as each event happened. It is on the likelihood of such entries being made that the value of accounts depends. But if an argument is advanced that though a drawing is made from the partnership account it is not debited in the day book at the time when it is drawn but only a lump sum is debited several months afterwards, it is not a proper day book; it ceases to be such an account book to which Courts are accustomed to attach value. He relied upon an account (a rough note book) known as ditta chitta. His argument is that the balances in the day books of the firm did not represent the real cash balances on any particular day. To get the cash balance not only the final account in the day books should be taken but also of the various other account books containing debits and credits including the tanadu chitta, and only when all these are put together, the actual cash balance can be ascertained. One such ditta chitta in which the amounts in the various accounts were brought together in one place and the total was arrived at was filed. When the attention of P. W. No. 1 (the accountant) was drawn to the cash balances in the day books, he said that the cash balances could only be ascertained by looking at the ditta chittas : vide Ex. SS.

Now though one such ditta chitta was filed, it does not relate to the period now in question and though he was given time to produce the ditta chitta for the period in question the plaintiff was unable to produce it. So that even if the one ditta chitta which was only filed for the previous year somewhat supports the plaintiff's argument we cannot extend it to the period in question by reason of the absence of the ditta chitta.

The utmost that can be said in his favour is that there is a suspicion that possibly his argument is correct. There are other difficulties. These tanadu chitta accounts date from 1908 and if the last figure in them is taken, the result would be to debit the plaintiff with the result of all the former accounts ranging from 1908. But it is conceded that all the accounts between the plaintiff and Kailasam were settled somewhere in 1921 and the result of the older accounts need not be considered. Again the actual totals of these day books and tanadu accounts seem to be written by the plaintiff later in pencil before being filed and afterwards inked and the totals were not made by Kailasam himself. The truth of the matter is that the exact nature of these tanadu accounts is wrapped in some mystery. It is not possible for the Court to unravel it and the party who relies upon such uncertain and indefinite accounts and accounts which on the face of the argument do not represent the actual transaction that took place must fail. On this ground I would hold that so far as this item is concerned, the appeal should be allowed and the plaintiff should lose this item.

The next item that was argued relates to interest. The plaintiff is charging interest at the end of each year after deducting also counter-interest. This in substance amounts to charging compound interest. The appellant contends that the plaintiff is not entitled to compound interest and relies on Suleman v. Abdul Latiff (10). But Mr. Varadachari replies that the accounts themselves show that whenever accounts were settled at the end of each year, the parties have charged interest on the overdrawings of each partner. At the various stages of the case each side was insisting upon the payment of counter-interest on the footing that he was going to recover some amount. Defendant No. 2 herself repeatedly filed objections before the Commissioner saying that interest ought to be charged against the plaintiff on some real or supposed items due to her. In these circumstances I must hold that the plaintiff is entitled to compound interest on the principal he has charged. But of course on our findings with reference to the tanadu chitta such portion of it as is attributable to Rs. 5,251-11-0 must now be excluded. Otherwise the plaintiff is entitled to the interest he claims.

Now as already stated on the accounts made up by the plaintiff there is a sum of Rs. 21,431-6-4 due to him and on the findings we have now arrived at as above, only a sum of Rs. 5,251-11-0 with its interest must be excluded out of this. Roughly there is a sum of Rs. 16,000 due to the plaintiff. I say roughly because the actual accounts may have to be taken on the basis of our findings and with reference to the further consideration to be pointed out. This sum of Rs. 16,000 would be due to the plaintiff on the footing that the taking over of the salt pans by the plaintiff for Rs. 69,000 odd stands. If defendant No. 2 is now willing to accept that purchase by the plaintiff, then the matter becomes simple and this sum of Rs. 16,000 would be due to the plaintiff. But if defendant No. 2 does not wish to accept that purchase the Rs. 69,000 has to be credited to the plaintiff and debited to the partnership and the salt pans will remain to be dealt with either by re-sale or otherwise. As already mentioned they must either be sold again unless defendant No. 2 chooses to retain them. But for the purpose of determining the question whether on a valuation defendant No. 2's share of the partnership can be valued at a particular figure so that defendant No. 2 may be entitled to interest on that figure for the subsequent years as profit or actual profits earned on the principle of s. 37, Partnership Act, we have still to consider the valuation of the salt pans in 1923. It is contended for defendant No. 2 that the valuation of Rs. 69,000 is an under-valuation. We are inclined to agree with this contention.

In dealing with this portion of the case the Subordinate Judge has not considered one important document relied on by defendant No. 2 (Ex. 5). This document relates to the sale of certain salt pans on June 14, 1922, a few days before the death of Kailasam and six months before the plaintiff's taking over. Under that document 54 pans were sold for Rs. 9,415. It is conceded by all parties that these pans are of a bigger size. They are what are called one cent pan, whereas the pans which are in question in this suit are not of that size but are only 5-8ths cent pans. This document works at Rs. 167 a pan and 5-8ths cent pans would be valued at Rs. 104. And according to Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, even making a reduction of Rs. 20, each pan in question ought to have been sold for Rs. 84, and 1,327 pans in the suit ought to be valued at Rs. 1,12,800. But even on this footing, i. e., crediting an extra Rs. 44,000 as the price of salt pans, the quarter share of Kailasam would only be Rs. 11,000 still leaving him on the debit side at the date of his death, viz., June 1922. Whatever reasonable valuation we give for the salt pans and debiting the highest figure suggested by Mr. Srinivasa Ayyangar himself, we find that the debit side (Rs. 60,000) cannot be wiped out. The result of this finding would be that even crediting the full value of the pans for the purpose of valuation of defendant No. 2's share at the date of Kailasam's death, we are not able to find the actual share of Kailasam, taking the account of his liability, on the credit side. And if it is on the debit side she is not entitled to any interest on the valuation. If defendant No. 2 insists on her share of the actual profits earned from 1922 up to now she will be entitled to it, and Mr. Varadachariar has not objected to it.

(10) 124 Ind. Cas. 891; A I R 1930 P C 185; 57 I A 245; 58 C 208; (1930) A L J 868; 34 C W N 737; Ind. Rul. (1930) P C 267; 32 Bom. L R 1152; 59 M L J 121; 52 C L J 10; 32 L W 184; 24 P L R 328 (P C).

The case will now have to go back to the Court below for taking the final valuation on the following basis: (1) Defendant No. 2 must now finally elect, forgetting all the past transactions, whether she will accept plaintiff's purchase of the salt pans at the price for which he took them over or whether she still insists upon another sale in which case they will be sold after reasonable notice with the plaintiff's price as the upset price and the sale will be taken into account only if a higher sum is realized; if not it will be regarded as if it never happened. In the case of a higher price being realized, defendant No. 2 may share in the benefit of this extra amount, but in that case she will have to pay interest on the ground of her debit being enhanced by one-fourth x Rs. 69,000 from January 1923 up to the date of such sale. But either if she accedes to the sale or if the sale results in no higher price, the old purchase by the plaintiff will stand and no further accounts need be taken on this matter; (2) defendant No. 2 is not entitled to any interest in substitution of the profits of the partnership as one of the alternatives allowed to her by law because on valuation her share of the partnership assets turns to be on the minus side. But if she insists she is entilted to a proportionate share of the profits actually earned (on the basis of the principle of s. 37, Partnership Act.)

It is sufficiently seen from the above judgment that probably a good deal of loss was suffered by the firm. That is certainly the plaintiff's case. Anyhow if defendant No. 2 wants an account to be taken of the subsequent profits she is entitled to it; subject to these two points being worked out, the further debits against defendant No. 2 will be taken as Rs. 16,179-11-4 minus any interest on Rs. 5,251 which has got to be deducted. This account should be taken by the lower Court or by the Commissioner. To this amount the result of the sale of the salt pans and the profits should be added. If defendant No. 2 does not want any further accounts to be taken, the decree of the lower Court will stand modified as a decree against defendant No. 2 for Rs. 16,179-11-4 with further interest from January 28, 1923 at 12 per cent compound interest upto the date of the lower Court's decree and 6 per cent on the aggregate amount up to date of payment. If the matter ends here the parties will give and take proportionate costs on the basis of this figure. But if further accounts are taken because defendant No. 2 wants them to be taken, the costs will be finally given when the figures are finally ascertained, but they will be on the same principle, i. e., of giving and taking proportionate costs. In A. S. No. 85 of 1928 the parties will have proportionate costs here and in the lower Court on the footing that the plaintiff succeeds to the extent of Rs. 16,179-11-4. In A. S. No. 128 of 1929 the appellant will have costs on Rs. 15,000. These appeals having been set down to be spoken to this day, the Court made the following Order.—In case defendant No. 2 elects to accept the value given by the plaintiff to the salt pans, the question whether plaintiff should be compensated to the extent of Rs. 728 as the value of 11 pans confiscated by Government on account of the alleged obstruction of defendant No. 2 will be considered and decided by the Court below and provided for in the final decree.

A/D. Order accordingly.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 495 of 1929

BENNET AND BAJPAI, JJ.

November 20, 1934

Chaudhari S. AFZAL HUSAIN AND AFTER HIS DEATH Chaudhari Syed IQBAL HUSAIN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

CHHEDI LAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS —RESPONDENTS

Muhammadan Law — Wakf — Mutawalli effecting usufructuary mortgage of wakf property with previous sanction of Court—Mortgage for justifying necessity —Validity of—Sanction, if can be given retrospectively—Fraudulent intent—When can be said to be made out.

A usufructuary mortgage of wakf property by a mutawalli who is a shia, though made without sanction of the Court may be retrospectively confirmed by the Court. Such a mortgage made without previous leave of the Court is not void if made for a justifiable necessity. [p. 796, col. 2.]

Where it is found that by the usufructuary mortgage in question the accumulation of interest under the simple mortgage and the decrees was prevented and the transaction would therefore have been beneficial to the dedicated property and that the transaction should have received sanction, the usufructuary mortgage should be held to be valid in law. [p. 798, col. 1]

[Case-law discussed.]

It cannot be said that the mere statement in a deed of wakf that the property was free from all sorts of debts and liens, although it may be incorrect, indicates that there was any fraudulent intent.

Nor will the mere fact that the mutawalli subsequently made a number of leases for five years which he was authorized to do under the wakfnama would indicate any fraudulent intent. [p. 794, col. 2.]

F. C. A. from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Allahabad, dated May 17, 1929.

Messrs. Hyder Mehdi and Zafar Mehdi, for the Appellant.

Messrs. K. N. Katju and M. N. Kaul, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This is a first appeal brought by one Chaudhari Saiyid Afzal Husain, the sole plaintiff, and continued after his death by his son, Chaudhri Saiyid Iqbal Husain, who was defendant No. 2. The contesting respondent, defendant No. 1 is Chhedi Lal. The plaint sets out that the plaintiff, Afzal Husain, was the owner in possession of the property in the list attached to the plaint and that on January 18, 1919, he executed a 'waqf' 'alal aulad' that is, waqf for his descendants of the property dividing the property into two portions. One village Mauza Samorai, Mahal Rustam Ali, and certain houses and groves were dedicated for religious and charitable purposes. The plaint does not mention further in regard to the other waqf property, but the deed of waqf printed on page 57 shows that the 26 remaining villages were created a waqf for the benefit of the family of the plaintiff and he was made the first mutawalli with defendant No. 2 to succeed him. When the family should become extinct, there was a gift over for religious and charitable purposes. The waqf property is referred to in the plaint as list A. Paragraph 2 of the plaint sets out that at the time of the execution of the 'waqfnama' one of the villages dedicated, Mauza Ajora Buzurg, Mahal Afzal Husain, was hypothecated in lieu of Rs. 5,000 to one Sheo Pal Brahman under a mortgage-deed, dated April 15, 1916. Paragraph 3 states that in order to pay off the aforesaid amount and other amounts which were due by the plaintiff, the plaintiff desired to mortgage with possession villages given below to Chhedi Lal and that a mortgage-deed was executed in the shape of a deed called a 'supurdnama' on March 20, 1924. It is to be noted that although the language of the plaint is rather loose, only the 26 villages dedicated to the family use formed the subject of the 'supurdnama' which is printed on page 97. Paragraph 4 of the plaint sets out the following items and we understand the paragraph to indicate that the defendant No. 1 was to pay off these items:

	Rs.	a.	p.
Amount due to Sheo Pal under a mortgage-deed ..	5,000	0	0
'Zar-i-peshgi' on account of lease of Bisheshar Prasad ...	3,780	0	0
'Zar-i-peshgi' on account of lease of Saiyid Tanzim Husain ...	2,500	0	0
'Zar i peshgi' on account of lease of Patwari Din ...	1,800	0	0
Decree for profits held by Muhamad Hamid Ullah and Mohi Uddin ...	500	0	0
Decree for profits held by Munshi Abdul Subhan ..	1,132	3	6
Decree in respect of pay of Ali Sher Khan ...	500	0	0

Paragraph 5 states that the defendant No. 1 did not pay any of these items, that the plaintiff continued in possession and his servants made collections and deposited the amount at the place of the defendant and the defendant sent the amount to meet expenses. Paragraph 6 sets out that in September 1925 an account was made between the parties, according to which a sum of Rs. 8,844-1-6 was found due to defendant No. 1 and that the plaintiff to pay off this sum and other amounts executed a document in favour of defendant No. 1 for Rs. 20,000 under which the consideration was the Rs. 8,844-1-6 already mentioned as due to defendant No. 1, another sum of Rs. 827 also due to defendant No. 1, Rs. 1,132-3-6 due to other persons which was not paid, and a sum of Rs. 8,196-11 which the document stated was received in cash. In regard to this cash payment, it was pleaded that only Rs. 4,524-13 was received and received by instalments at later dates. It was, therefore, claimed that Rs. 5,804-11 were not received out of Rs. 20,000 consideration. The document in question which is a simple money bond is dated December 14, 1925, and is printed at page 121. Paragraph 7 states. "The plaintiff had assigned the amount in order to save the property from being sold by auction and when that amount was not paid off, the plaintiff took objection to the application for removal of 'lambardar' which was made on behalf of defendant No. 1 on February 4, 1926, or thereabout. Ultimately on June 25, 1926, defendant No. 1 was declared to be entitled to make collections with certain conditions, but as he did not comply with those conditions, the plaintiff began to make collections." This is a somewhat cryptic paragraph but apparently it states that the 'supurdnama' was executed in order to save the property from being sold by auction and that a dispute took place in regard to possession. Paragraph 8 sets out that the defendant No. 4, a daughter of the plaintiff, brought a suit for cancellation of the 'supurdnama' which was decreed by the learned Subordinate Judge on September 14, 1927. We may note that that decree was upheld by this Court and that an appeal is pending before their Lordships of the Privy Council. Paragraph 10 sets out that the 'supurdnama' is invalid and null and void and as defendant No. 1 did not pay any amount thereunder, he is not entitled to remain in possession. Paragraph 11 sets out that defendant No. 1 alleged himself to be entitled to possession also of the property in list B. Paragraph 12 states defendant No. 1 has obtained a separate bond in lieu of the money which was due to him Under these circumstances, he has no right to remain in possession in lieu of any amount due to him when he has already obtained a separate bond in lieu thereof. The relief asked for was:—

(a) It may be declared that the document dated March 20, 1924, is utterly invalid and null and void, and that the plaintiff is in lawful possession of the property given in list (B) as a 'mutawalli'.

(b) The plaintiff may be put into possession of the property entered in list (C) by dispossession of defendant No. 1.

Now it will be noted that no allegations are made in the plaint as to why the 'supurdnama' is invalid and null and void. These defects in the plaint are remedied by arguments of Counsel for the appellant so far as it is possible. It is to be further noted that the plaint is defective in not explaining anything in regard to list (C) for which the plaintiff asks for possession. It is, however, the case of the appellant that in the 14 villages of list (C) mutation was effected for the defendant No. 1 on the 'supurdnama' and for that reason the suit for those 14 villages is for possession. In the 12 villages in list (B) mutation was not effected and the name of the plaintiff remains. List (B) of 12 villages and list (C) of 14 villages make up the 26 villages mentioned in the 'supurdnama'.

The written statement of defendant No. 1 was to the effect that the deed of waqf was fictitious and invalid and executed merely to avoid payment of dues due to creditors and to practise fraud upon present and future creditors and was not intended as a valid waqf, that the plaintiff had borrowed the amounts set out in para. 4 of the plaint and had represented to defendant No. 1 that the plaintiff wanted to go on a pilgrimage to Karbala Maula and that the son of the plaintiff was inexperienced, "therefore he requested the contesting defendant to manage his property, and so far as possible, to try to pay off his debts" and accordingly the 'supurdnama' of March 20, 1924, was executed. Paragraph 24 sets out that mutation was effected for defendant No. 1 in 14 villages and that the plaintiff made collections through his servants and appropriated the entire profits for himself, that when an account was made up in 1932, the sum of Rs. 8,844-1-6 was found due to the contesting defendant by the plaintiff and the plaintiff and his son admitted this as correct and affixed their signatures on the simple money bond for Rs. 20,000 on December 14, 1925, and that disputes continued between the parties and on December 18, 1928, the plaintiff out of dishonest motives executed a lease for 5 years of a part of the property in favour of one Tanzim Husain. In para. 28 it is alleged that more than Rs. 20,000 are still due to contesting defendant. In para. 30 it is alleged that the suit by the daughter of the plaintiff was in collusion with the plaintiff. It was further urged in para. 31 that the plaintiff was bound by the documents executed by him and in para. 32 an estoppel is pleaded.

Several issues were framed, of which the following are important for the decision of the appeal:—

(1) Is the plaintiff estopped from impeaching the validity of the deed of March 20, 1924, executed by himself in favour of Chhedi Lal, defendant No. 1?

(3) If an estoppel does not bar a plea of the invalidity of the deed of March 20, 1924, was the plaintiff competent validly to execute the said deed in spite of the previous deed of January 18, 1919?

(5) What money, if any, is due to Chhedi Lal, defendant No. 1 under the deeds of March 20, 1924, and December 14, 1925? Is the plaintiff entitled to obtain possession of the disputed property without first paying the dues of Chhedi Lal, defendant No. 1?

(6) Is Chhedi Lal, defendant No. 1 estopped from disputing the validity of the deed of January 18, 1919? If not, is the said deed fictitious?

(7) Does s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act vitiate the deed of January 18, 1919?

The learned Subordinate Judge has held on Issue No. 1 that the plaintiff is estopped from impeaching the validity of the 'spurdnama'. On Issue No. 3 he found that the plaintiff was competent to execute the 'supurdnama'. On Issue No. 5 he found that the plaintiff was not entitled to obtain possession of the property covered by the 'supurdnama' without first paying defendant No. 1. On Issue No. 6 he found that Chhedi Lal was not estopped from disputing the validity of the waqf and that the deed of waqf was fictitious. On Issue No. 7 he found that the waqfnama was void under s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, as being made to defeat the mortgagees and subsequent creditors. The suit was, therefore, dismissed by the lower Court.

The plaintiff has appealed against these findings. After the decision of the lower Court, there was a decision of a Bench of this Court in the appeal against the decree in favour of the daughter of the plaintiff. That decree was upheld by a Bench of this Court and defendant No. 1 has taken the matter in appeal to their Lordships of the Privy Council. Accordingly the defendant No. 1 made a preliminary objection to this appeal being heard and contended that the hearing should be stayed under s. 10 of the Civil Procedure Code until the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council.

That application was opposed by the appellant and a Bench or this Court has held that the appeal should be decided without being stayed under s. 10. Accordingly the appeal has been heard by us. We first of all consider the question of the validity of the deed of waqf as it comes first in point of time. The lower Court considered the validity of the deed of waqf on pp. 35 to 37 and found that "to all intents and purposes, the alleged 'waqf' was a sham and that Afzal Husain was the real owner of the property covered by the alleged 'waqf' at the time when the 'supurdnama' was executed and that the plaintiff did not divest himself of the proprietary interest." One of the criticisms levelled against the waqfnama is that it is stated that the endowed property was free from all sorts of liens, debts and liabilities. This was not correct as at the time there were three mortgages on the waqf property. One of these due to Sheo Pal is set out in the plaint. There were also mortgages due to Ahamd Husain and Partab Singh. The plaintiff made various arrangements for the payment of these mortgage debts. On January 8, 1919, there was a sale-deed printed on p. 53, by Afzal Husain to Mahabir Singh. In it he provided for the payment of the mortgage of Ahmad Husain and also of a promissory note due to Ahmad Husain and also for a mortgage of February of 22, 1918, in favour of Chaudhri Surju Singh in which is a reference to the document in favour of Partab Singh. We do not think that the mere statement in the deed of waqf that the property was free from all sorts of debts and liens, although it may be incorrect, indicates that there was any fraudulent intent. We do not think that the execution of the deed of waqf could affect the rights of the previous mortgagees or that it was intended to affect their rights. We do not think that the mere fact that the mutawalli subsequently made a number of leases for five years which he was authorized to do under the waqfnama would indicate any fraudulent intent. The defendant No. 1 in taking his supurdnama took it from the plaintiff under the description of mutawalli and defendant No. 1 was well aware of the existence of the deed of waqfnama. Defendant No. 1 accepted that document and did not challenge it in any way and in a suit which was brought in 1926 by defendant No. 1 along with the plaintiff, the plaintiff was described as mutawalli (see page 157). It was only when disputes arose in regard to property and when a daughter of the plaintiff filed her suit in 1927 that the defendant No. 1 changed his mind in regard to the waqfnama and put forward a case that it was a fictitious document. We do not agree with the lower Court and we consider that it has not been shown that the waqfnama was a fictitious or fraudulent document and we consider that it complied with the provisions of the Mussalman Waqf Validating Act (Act VI of 1913) and that it is valid. A further objection was taken in regard to accumulation of income. It was provided in para. 4 of the waqfnama that after paying off Government dues and maintenance allowance and village expenses, the rest of the income should be employed in purchasing other property. In a table attached at the end of the waqfnama, it was stated that 20 per cent. would be available for this purpose. This estimate was extremely optimistic as no amount has actually been available in any year for such purpose. We do not think that the provision would invalidate the waqfnama, nor do we think that the waqfnama is invalid under the provisions of s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act. It is true that there were three mortgages in existence at the time of the execution of the waqfnama, there is, however, nothing to show that the waqfnama was intended to be a fraudulent transfer which would affect the interest of the mortgagees. In our opinion the interest of the mortgagees could not have been affected by this subsequent transaction, nor is it shown that any of the creditors at that time or the subsequent creditors would have been defrauded by the waqfnama. Learned Counsel for the appellant pointed out that it was necessary for the respondent to show that fraudulent intention existed on January 18, 1919, at the time of the execution of the waqfnama. We are of opinion that no such fraudulent intention has been shown. We, therefore, hold that the waqfnama was a valid document.

We now come to the question of the validity or otherwise of the supurdnama of March 20, 1924. As already observed the plaint does not give any ground on which the plaintiff asks that this document should be declared invalid and null and void. The plaint sets out subsequent transactions and alleges that defendant No. 1 did not make the payments which he undertook to make under this document. The mere failure of defendant No. 1 to carry out the document would not be a reason for the document to be declared null and void. In para. 12 of the plaint it was set out that defendant No. 1 obtained a separate bond, that is the simple money bond of December 14, 1925, and had no right to remain in possession. It is suggested that this obtaining of a separate bond in some way made the supurdnama null and void. We consider that the plaint was defective in not expressing the grounds on which the relief was based. When we come to the grounds of appeal we find the allegation in the eighth ground:

"Because the deed of supurdnama being not within the competence of the mutawalli, the Court below would have in any case passed a decree for possession subject to the payment of any sum if found due to the respondent" and in ground No. 5:

"Because the Court below has erred in holding that the deed of December 14, 1925, was an auxiliary deed, on the other hand it wiped off the debt due to the respondent under the deed of March 20, 1924."

These two grounds give the basis on which the appeal has been argued in regard to the validity of the supurdnama. The questions, therefore, are:

(1) Whether the mutawalli was competent to execute the supurdnama, and

(2) Whether the supurdnama was terminated by the simple money bond of March 20, 1924?

We will deal with the second question first as it is a very small matter. The supurdnama of March 20, 1924, provides for defendant No. 1 taking possession of 26 villages and making certain payments to previous debtors of the mutawalli and managing the property and making payments of Rs. 1,600 every six months to the mutawalli and his son and making advances for the marriage of the daughters of the mutawalli (para. 10). These payments were to come partly from the income of the property and in para. 3 there is a provision for the rate of interest of Re. 0-8-6 per month for advances made by defendant No. 1 from his own pocket, the rate being changed to Re. 0-9-0 after five years. This interest was not to be compound. In para. 12 it was provided:

"If without the payment of the amounts due to the aforesaid persons, we, the executants, desire to take back the waqf villages from the supurdgi of the said amin, we shall pay to the supurddar whatever amounts he might have paid up to that time to the persons mentioned above, or any amount which he might have paid on our account and in respect whereof he might possess a receipt together with interest at the rate mentioned above. In such a case the supurdar shall reconvey the waqf property and shall render an account of the income and expenses."

In para. 13 it was provided:

"When the entire amount or the amounts due under the mortgage zerpeshgi lease money, the amounts of the ruqqas, payable on demand the amounts of the decreases, and also the amounts which the supurddar might have paid from his own pocket together with interest, etc., thereon, have been fully paid off from the profits and income of the waqf property, the supurddar will relinquish all the waqf villages."

It was, therefore, within the competence of the parties to terminate the possession of defendant No. 1 in accordance with either of those paragraphs. It cannot be argued with any hope of success that the bond of December 14, 1925, purported to terminate the possession in any such manner. There is no reference in that bond to the termination of possession at all. The bond merely sets out that accounts had been taken for the years 1331 and 1332 Fasli and a sum of money was found due and further advances were due and that the entire amount of Rs. 20,000 would be repaid in eight years with interest at Re. 0-8-6 per month till five years and Re.0-9-0 after five years and with compound interest at yearly rests. Learned Counsel for appellant contends that this document provides the defendant No. 1 with a personal remedy and that he could sue on this document for the amount in question. That may be so but the document does not purport to terminate the interest created by the supurdnama. It is merely a collateral security in favour of defendant No. 1 and does not interfere with the rights under the supurdnama which had existed at the time by which defendant No. 1 was entitled to retain possession of the property until his debts and advances were paid. We, therefore, find that the bond of December 14, 1925, in no way affected the rights of defendant No. 1 under the supurdnama. Learned Counsel argued that if we held that the supurdnama was invalid and that defendant No. 1 was entitled to retain possession until he was paid then this document would amount to a payment. We do not consider that the execution of a collateral security does amount to a payment and in the hypothetical case assumed by Counsel his argument does not apply. We now turn to the main issue of this appeal that is, whether the mutawalli was competent to execute the supurdnama.

Learned Counsel for the respondent based his case on the competence of the mutawalli on certain text books of Muhammadan Law, and certain rulings. In Tyabjis Principles of Muhammadan Law, Second Edition, page 555, it is laid down in regard to Shias, para. 464 (2) :

"According to Shia Law the beneficiaries under a waqf may validly make a lease of the waqf property or otherwise transfer or alienate it for the period during which they are entitled to the benefit of the waqf but so that such lease or transfer or alienation does not prejudice the rights of any succeeding beneficiaries."

the plaintiff was admittedly a Shia. For the respondent the contention is that under the Shia Law a mutawalli is entitled to transfer the usufruct of the property although he is not entitled to transfer the ownership of the property by sale or by mortgage which might end in a decree for sale. Considerable argument was made in regard to the supurdnama in question and in part of the case for respondent it is argued that the supurdnama is something different from a usufructuary mortgage, that it was a kind of agreement by which defendant No. 1 was to manage the property during the absence of the plaintiff. We consider that the document cannot be regarded as a contract of management. The provisions in the document are that possession is to be taken from Rabi, 1331 Fasli by defendant No. 1 and that he is to pay certain sums of money and to retain possession until those sums of money are paid back to him. We consider that these conditions make the document a usufructuary mortgage within the definition of the Transfer of Property Act. The question therefore is whether a mutawalli who is a Shia may execute a usufructuary mortgage, and whether in such a case the transaction will be valid during the lifetime of the executants. It is to be noted that although the plaintiff is now dead his son defendant No. 2, who is appellant, was his successor as mutawalli according to the deed of waqf, and this son was also an executant of the supurdnama in question. The supurdnama begins: "We Chaudhri Saiyid Afzal Husain, mutawalli of the waqf, and Chaudhri Saiyid Iqbal Husain, subsequent mutawalli" execute the document. The distinction which was drawn in Tyabji between a transfer for the period during which the mutawalli was entitled to the benefit of the waqf and a transfer or alienation which would prejudice the rights of succeeding beneficiaries has not been so carefully drawn in other text books. We find in Ameer Ali's Muhammadan Law, Vol. I 3rd Edition of 1904, p. 370, a statement:—

"The mutawalli is not entitled under any circumstances to create any encumbrance by way of mortgage upon the waqf property without the sanction of the Qazi, nor can the beneficiaries hypothecate waqf property."

The distinction is not drawn between a transfer of the income and a transfer of the property. In Mulla's Principles of Muhammadan Law, 10th Edition of 1933 on p. 151 it is stated that a mutawalli has no power without the permission of the Court to mortgage, sell or exchange waqf property or any part thereof unless he is expressly empowered by the deed of waqf to do so. Mulla goes on to state that it has been held in Calcutta in Nimai Chand Addya v. Golam Hossein (1) that a mortgage of waqf property though made without the previous sanction of the Court may be retrospectively confirmed by the Court and that the mortgage without the previous leave of the Court is not void ab initio. In this ruling there was a full consideration of the texts of Muhammadan Law in original. The case arose where there was a waqf and certain costs of partition were incurred and the Collector fixed a date for sale of the estate for these costs. The mutwalli made a mortgage of a portion of the waqf estate and of his own property to raise money to avert the impending sale. The mortgage, therefore, was created under grave necessity of an urgent nature. Sanction was not given for the mortgage. On pages 191 and 192* the Court drew a distinction between those cases where the income alone is pledged and those cases where there was a sale of the property by the mutawalli. The Court held on p. 189*:

(1) 3 Ind. Cas. 353; 37 C 179; 11 C L J 317; 14 C W N 537.

"It is but rational to hold that the approval of the Cadi was deemed requisite, primarily with a view to make sure that the loan was necessary, and in this view approval, antecedent or subsequent, ought to be equally effectual. Tested in the light of these principles, it is clear that in the case before us the mortgage ought to be treated as a valid charge upon the waqf properties."

On p. 191* it was stated:

"It is sufficient for us to observe that judicial pronouncements of the highest authority are to be found in the reports in support of the view that not the corpus but the income alone can be pledged under such circumstances."

In Sailendranath v. Hade Kaza (2), which was also a case which referred to Shias, there was a further consideration of this question, and it was held that a mutawalli differs from shebait or a mahant and has no power without the permission of the Court to mortgage, sell or exchange waqf property unless he is expressly authorised by the deed of waqf to do so. Reference was made with approval to Nimai Chand Addya v. Golam Hossein (1) where it was held that a mortgage made by a mutawalli without the previous sanction of the Court is not void if made for a justifying necessity and may be retrospectively confirmed by the Court. In Amrit Lal Kalidas v. Sheik Hussein (3), it was held in regard to a mortgage of waqf property that the plaintiff acquired no right under his mortgage which would extend beyond the lifetime of his mortgagors. This also supports the case for the respondent.

For the appellant reference was made to Askari Hussain v. Chunni Lal (4), where it was held that the District Judge takes the place of the Qozi to sanction transfers of waqf property. Reference was also made to Abdur Rahim v. Narayan Das (5). In the ruling we find on p. 47*:

"Their Lordships are of opinion that for an advance of money, otherwise than to satisfy the legitimate needs and purposes of the waqf, no part of the property held in waqf is chargeable either by the settlor or by the Court."

Under this dictum the question would arise whether the purpose was one which was for the legitimate needs of the waqf. Learned Counsel also relied on Hamiduddin Ali Shah v. Court of Wards, Nanpara, 18 Ind. Cas. 319 (6), a ruling of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner in Oudh. That ruling dealt with the case of a simple mortgage and not of a usufructuary mortgage, and it was held that such a mortgage would be invalid without previous sanction. On a review of all these rulings we are of the opinion that the distinction drawn in Nimai Chand Addya v. Golam Hosein (1) is a distinction which we should follow and that in the present case the validity of the mortgage depends on whether we consider that the usufructuary mortgage was one which should have been sanctioned by the District Judge if an application had been made to him previous to the execution of this supurdnama. Now the plaint sets forth the circumstances under which the supurdnama was executed. The plaint admits that it was executed in order to pay off the amount due to Sheopal under the mortgage deed which he held over the property which was waqf. That mortgage deed was a simple mortgage and it was open to Sheopal to bring a suit for sale of the property if he was not paid. In para. 4 of the plaint three zarpeshgi leases are set out, all of parts of the mortgaged property, which the mutawalli desired should be paid off. That paragraph also mentions three decrees for profits which were held by co-sharers against the mutawalli. It is clear that the encumbrances were on the mortgaged property and were encumbrances which it was in the interest of that property to liquidate. The transaction, therefore, was clearly one intended to preserve the waqf property. Under these circumstances we have no doubt that a District Judge would have acted correctly in giving sanction for the supurdnama.

(2) 137 Ind. Cas. 500; 59 C 586; A I R 1932 Cal. 356; 54 C L J 328, 35 C W N 193; Ind. Rul. (1932) Cal. 326.
(3) 11 B 492.
(4) 122 Ind. Cas. 674; (1930) A L J 205; A I R 1929 All. 849; Ind. Rul. (1930) All 274.

*Pages of 37 C.—[Ed.]

(5) 71 Ind. Cas. 646; A I R 1923 P C 44 at p. 47; 17 L W 509; 32 M L T 153; 44 M L J 624; 25 Bom. L R 670; (1923) M W N 441; 38; Cr. L J 242; 28 C W N 121; 50 C 329; 50 I A 84 (P C).
(6) 18 Ind. Cas. 319.

*Page of A I R 1923 P. C.—[Ed.]

Another point to be noted is that compound interest on the mortgage deed of Sheopal was accumulating. By the usufructuary mortgage in question the accumulation of interest under the simple mortgage and the decrees was prevented and the transaction would, therefore, have been beneficial to the dedicated property. We consider, therefore, that the transaction was one which should have received sanction.

For the appellant the argument is advanced that the respondent No. 1 did not actually pay off any of these previous charges. We consider, however, that, the question we have to examine is what was the state of affairs at the time when sanction would have been the subject of an application. The subsequent conduct of the parties would not have been known then to the District Judge and, therefore, could not have influenced him. Further we are of opinion from the evidence on the record that the failure of defendant No. 1 to pay the previous debts in this document is a failure which arises from the action of the plaintiff himself. In the plaint the plaintiff himself admits that he continued in possession of the property and prevented defendant No. 1 from obtaining possession or making collections. This state of affairs is shown by the accounts for 1331 and 1332 Fasli which formed the subject of the bond of December 14, 1925. There was a rendering of accounts by defendant No. 1 to the plaintiff as he was bound to do under the supurdnama, and it was admitted by the plaintiff and his son that no less than Rs. 8,444-1-6 were due to defendant No. 1 for the first two years of his tenure under the supurdnama. Under these circumstances it could not be expected that the supurdnama bound the defendant to supply further large sums from his own pocket for the purpose of paying off the previous debts. For the next two years we have accounts printed on pp. 495 and 496 for 1333 Fasli which show that an amount was due to defendant No. 1 for that year of Rs. 4,877-2 and on p. 497 for the year 1334 Fasli which show that an amount was due to defendant No. 1 for that year of Rs. 4317-2-3. These accounts were proved by defendant's witness Bhagwandas, the general agent, on p. 26 where he states:

"The papers exhibited OO are the extract, I prepared from my master's siahas of 1333, 1334 and 1335 Fasli. The extract is correct. I have on me the original siahas from which I prepared the extract."

We are satisfied, therefore, that the supurdnama has not been shown to be invalid.

We now proceed to deal with the question of estoppel of the plaintiff. The lower Court has held that the plaintiff was estopped from denying the validity of the supurdnama. That estoppel is claimed under the general law of estoppel in s. 115 of the Evidence Act which provides that when one person has by his declaration, act or omission intentionally caused or permitted another person to believe a thing to be true and to act upon such belief, neither he nor his representative shall be allowed in any suit or proceeding between himself and such person or his representative to deny the truth of that thing. In the supurdnama the recital states that the plaintiff is mutawalli of the waqf and that his son is the subsequent mutawalli and that they execute the supurdnama transferring possession to defendant No. 1 of the village in question. That document amounts to a representation that the plaintiff as mutawalli was competent to make that transfer. The document was acted upon and possession was transferred and sums of money were received by the plaintiff under this document. The receipt of the sums of money was admitted. It was not for a number of years afterwards that the plaintiff brought the present suit on May 11, 1928. For that period the plaintiff acquiesced in the supurdnama. He has now come forward and the argument advanced on his behalf is that he was not competent as mutawalli to execute the supurdnama. Clearly the case comes within the language of s. 115 of the Evidence Act. The argument of learned Counsel for appellant was that because the plaintiff was under the Muhammadan Law not competent to execute this supurdnama, therefore, the provisions of s. 115 of the Evidence Act would not apply to him. In our view this proposition of law is incorrect as it is enunciated and also because we consider that the plaintiff can validly execute the supurdnama under the provisions of the Muhammadan Law provided sanction is given, and we consider that the sanction can be retrospectively applied by this Court.

In the seventh ground of appeal it was urged that the Court below was bound to find what money was due to Chhedi Lal, defendant No. 1, at the date of the decree. This was a reference to Issue No. 5. We have referred to the bond of December 14, 1925, under which there was an admission that for the first two years Rs. 8,444-1-6 was due on the accounts and a further sum was taken making Rs. 20,000 in all. The plaintiff in para. 6 of his plaint alleged that his admission in that bond as regards the payment of Rs. 8,196-11 in cash should not be accepted against him and that actually only Rs. 4,524-13 was received by him out of that amount and also that the sum of Rs. 1,132-6-6 was not paid to other persons. We have already referred to the accounts for 1333 and 1334 Fasli which shows that other large sums were due to defendant No. 1. The claim in the written statement is that not less than Rs. 20,000 was due to defendant No. 1. We do not think that there is any necessity to ascertain the exact sum which is due to defendant No. 1 as in our opinion the plaintiff has failed to show that he has any right to possession in the manner in which he asks, that is by a declaration that the supurdnama is null and void. The plaintiff has not sued for possession of the property on payment of whatever sum is due to defendant No. 1. If and when the plaintiff brings a suit for that purpose, in our opinion, it will then be proper for the Court to go into that question and ascertain the exact sum which is due, but the present suit is merely one for a declaration of nullity and in our opinion that question does not arise.

For these reasons we dismiss this first appeal with costs.

N. Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Civil Revision Petition No. 428 of 1934
October 10, 1934
ABDUL RASHID, J.

GANGA SAHAI-BHAGMAL—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER
versus
MOLAR—DEFENDANT—OPPOSITE PARTY

Evidence—Expert evidence—Finger-print expert—Evidence of—Value—Burden of proof—Execution of entry proved—Burden of proving want of consideration lies on executant.

The evidence of handwriting experts has often been found to be faulty but so far as finger-prints are concerned, it has never so far been found that two finger-prints can be identical in all respects Consequently the evidence of finger-print experts is entitled to much weight.

Where, by the evidence of finger-print expert the execution of an entry is proved, the burden of proving want of consideration is on the executant. Ram Chand v. Chhunan Mal (1), followed.

C. R. P. from the decree of the Small Cause Court Judge, Delhi, dated May 14, 1934.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Bhagwat Dayal, for the Opposite Party.

Judgment.—This petition for revision arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff for recovery of Rs. 300 from the defendant on the basis of a bahi account. The allegation in the plaint were that Rs. 100 were advanced to the defendant on October 18, 1929, and Rs. 35 and Rs. 215, on October 24, and that the defendant had repaid a sum of Rs. 100 on November 9. In support of his claim the plaintiff produced his bahi. The thumb-impresion below the item of Rs. 100 was too blurred to admit of any comparison. The item of Rs. 35 did not bear any thumb-impression. The item of Rs. 215 bore a thumb-impression which on comparison by the Phillaur Thumb-Impression Expert was found to tally with the thumb-impression of the defendant. The learned Judge of the Small Cause Court, Delhi, disbelieved the oral evidence of the plaintiff and so far as the bahi is concerned, remarked that expert evidence with respect to finger-prints is not conclusive evidence of the advance and that it had often been found that the opinion of these experts was faulty. On these findings the suit of the plaintiff was dismissed.

The plaintiff has preferred a petition for revision to this Court and it has been urged on his behalf that as the execution of the bahi entry regarding the item of Rs. 215 has been definitely established by the production of expert evidence, the trial Court had erred in dismissing the suit regarding this item. The evidence of handwriting experts has often been found to be faulty, but so far as finger-prints are concerned, it has never so far been found that two finger-prints can be identical in all respects. The evidence of the finger-print expert definitely proves that that the entry regarding Rs. 215 was thumb-marked by the defendant. In these circumstances it was for the defendant to prove that he had not received this sum. Reference may be made in this connection to Ram Chand v. Chhunan Mal (1). The questions of jurisdiction and limitation were also raised on behalf of the defendant. These questions were, however, not decided by the trial Court. I hold that the items of Rs. 100, and Rs. 35 have not been proved but it has been proved that the entry regarding Rs. 215 bears the thumb-impression of the defendant and that the onus shifts to the defendant to prove that this was not advanced to him.

(1) 88 Ind. Cas. 301; A I R 1925 Lah. 471; 6 Lah. 470; 2 Lah. Cas. 85; 7 Lah. L J 306; 26 P L R 369 (F B).

For the reasons given above I accept this petition for revision, set aside the decree of the Judge, Small Cause Court, dated May 14, 1934, and remand the case to him for re-decision with respect to the item of Rs. 215 and the other points involved in the case in accordance with law. The parties will be given an opportunity to adduce additional evidence if they choose to do so. The costs will abide the result of the litigation.

D. Petition accepted.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 621 of 1932
April 17, 1934

IQBAL AHMAD AND COLLISTER, JJ.

MITTHU LAL—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat CHAMELI AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS

U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 4—Person acting as lambardar and collecting rents—Presumption—Whether he can say that he was not legally appointed—Custom—Village expenses should be allowed on basis of gross rental—Hindu Law—Widow—Co-widows—Transfer by one—Transfer not challenged by other—Presumption of transfer being made with latter's consent.

Where a person was the de facto lambardar, and acted as such and collected rents, he cannot afterwards say that he had not been legally appointed. Having accepted the post of lambardar, it must be presumed that he consented to perform the obligations which go with the post.

Village expenses should be allowed on the basis of gross rental.

Where one of two Hindu co widows executes a gift deed, the deed is voidable at the option of the other co-widow and none else has the right to challenge it during the latter's lifetime. When she has not challenged it, it must be presumed that the transfer was made with her consent.

S. C. A. from a decree of the District Judge, Aligarh, dated March 9, 1932, modifying that of the Assistant Collector, First Class, Etah, dated April 17, 1930.

Messrs. Baleshwari Prasad and Binod Behari Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. B. L. Gaur, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This is a defendant's appeal arising out of a suit for profits which was filed by the plaintiffs under s. 226 of the Agra Tenancy Act in respect of the years 1332 and 1334 Fasli. The plaintiffs were Hub Lal and his son, Ram Rachpal. The former has since died.

One Daryao Singh died leaving two widows, Musammat Surja and Musammat Jumna, and on his death his 10 biswas share in the village devolved upon the said widows. On September 9, 1921, the widows jointly executed a usufructuary mortgage of 5 biswas in favour of Hub Lal. Musammat Jumna had a daughter by name Musammat Brindaban, who was married to Hub Lal, and plaintiff No. 2, namely Ram Rachpal, is their son. On January 9, 1922, Musammat Jumna executed a deed of gift in respect of 5 biswas (2½ biswas being proprietary rights and 2½ being mortgagee rights) to Musammat Brindaban and Ram Rachpal. It is not disputed that the rights of Musammat Brindaban have now devolved upon Ram Rachpal. Musammat Jumna died about 4 years before the institution of this suit.

The plaintiffs' case was that Hub Lal was a co-sharer of 5 biswas as mortgagee in possession in the years in suit and that Ram Rachpal was a co-sharer of 2 biswas, 10 biswansis in 1332 and 1333 Fasli and of 2 biswas and 7½ biswansis in 1334 Fasli.

The Court of first instance decreed the suit of the plaintiffs for Rs. 1,070-0 9. The lower Appellate Court has allowed the appeal in respect to Rs. 40 but in other respects has confirmed the decree of the trial Court.

The first plea which is taken before us is that the defendant-appellant is a thekadar and not a co-sharer, and that a thekadar cannot legally be appointed lambardar.

Under s. 4 of the Land Revenue Act, a lambardar is defined as "a co-sharer of a mahal appointed under this Act to represent all or any of the co-sharers in the mahal".

Whatever the position of a thekadar may be under the Act of 1926, it cannot be denied that he was not a co-sharer under the Act of 1901. On the other hand, it is perfectly clear that the defendant in this case was the de facto lambardar. It is not pleaded before us that he was appointed without his consent, and it is admitted that he acted as lambardar in the years in suit, and that as lambardar he collected rents. This being so, it does not lie in his mouth to say that he had not been legally appointed. Having accepted the post of lambardar, it must be presumed that he consented to perform the obligations which go with the post. In our opinion, therefore, this plea cannot prevail.

The next point taken is that Musammat Jumna was only competent to transfer her life interest to Ram Rachpal and Musammat Brindaban and it is argued that her deed of gift ceased to be operative after her death.

It is a fact that Musammat Jumna had only a life-interest in the property which she has thus transferred, and her deed of gift was voidable at the option of her co-widow, Musammat Surja. No one else had the right to challenge the transfer during the life-time of Musammat Surja, and since Musammat Surja herself has not done so, it must be presumed that the transfer was made with her consent.

The third plea taken before us is that the defendant-appellant is not liable to pay profits on the basis of gross rental.

The lower Appellate Court has found that the tenants were solvent, so much so that their rents were enhanced, and the Court points out that the defendant-appellant has failed to show that he filed any suits against the tenants or destrained their crops in order to realise the rent. No receipt books were produced before the Court to show how much was realised in the way of rent and from whom it was realised, and the defendant made no effort to have the rents entered up in the siyaha. In the circumstances the Courts below were justified in giving the plaintiffs a decree on the basis of gross rental.

The only point which remains is as regards village expenses.

The Court of first instance allowed village expenses at the rate of 5 per cent. on the net profits, but the lower Appellate Court has allowed village expenses at the rate of 10 per cent. We consider, however, that these should be on the basis of gross rental, and on this calculation it is conceded by Counsel that the defendant-appellant is entitled to a further set off of Rs. 90.

The result of our findings is that we allow this appeal to the extent that we reduce the amount which has been decreed by the lower Appellate Court in the amount of Rs. 90 only. This suit is, therefore, decreed for Rs. 940 with past interest at 12 per cent. and pendente lite and future interest at 6 per cent. The parties will pay and receive costs in proportion to success and failure.

N. Appeal allowed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Original Civil Jurisdiction Award No. 27 of 1933

August 30, 1933

RANGNEKAR, J.

FAZALALLY JIVAJI RAJA—PETITIONER

versus

KHIMJI POONJI & Co.—OPPOSITE PARTY

Arbitration—Arbitrators to act together—Every stage of proceeding must be in presence of all—Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), ss. 6, 11—Submission, mode of—Intention of parties is sole guide—S. 11, scope of—Award by association on appeal by board of directors from awards of umpire under bye-law, held can be filed under s. 11 and is final decision—All members of board of directors not signing award—Irregularity can be rectified—Mercantile usage contrary to justice cannot be supported by Court of law.

Where there are several arbitrators, all must act together and each must act in the making of the award. Every stage of the proceedings must be in the presence of all, and every judicial act to be done by two or more must be completed in the presence of all who do it. Consequently where the composition of board of directors had changed from time to time since the appeal went before the board and the award was given by some of them only and some of those who were present at the earlier meetings were not present later and did not form part of the Board which made the award :

Held, that the award was not legal and must be set aside.

[Case-law referred to.]

The intention of the parties must be the sole guide for determining the mode of working out the submission and reaching a final decision. The law of arbitration is based upon the principle of withdrawing the dispute from the ordinary Courts and enabling the parties to substitute a domestic tribunal. Once that tribunal reaches a final decision as contemplated or agreed upon by the parties, then the Arbitration Act steps in to help the parties to enforce the said decision [p 804, col. 2.]

Section 11, Arbitration Act, in terms does not apply to an award made on appeal by the Board of directors, but if the decision of the Board which is called an award under the bye-law, which is filed under the Arbitration Act, is the final decision under the submission in accordance with the Act, then, it would be an award made by the arbitrators under the submission between the parties. [p. 805, col. 1.]

[Case-law referred to]

The award ought to be signed by all the members of the Board who joined in the making of it. But the omission to do so is a mere irregularity capable of being rectified. [p. 807, col. 2.]

However well established the usage or practice may be, if it is contrary to natural justice, it cannot be upheld in a Court of law. Consequently mercantile usages, in the conduct of references, cannot be supported if they are contrary to the principles of natural justice. [p 810, col. 1.]

Messrs. F. J. Coltman and M. V. Desai, for the Petitioner.

Mr. M. C. Setalvad, for the Opposite Party.

Order.—The respondents are cotton brokers and members of the East India Cotton Association, Ltd. The petitioner entered into certain forward transactions with them for the sale of Broach cotton April-May delivery 1933. The petitioner is not a member of the East India Cotton Association, Ltd. In respect of the said dealings the respondents claimed from the petitioner a sum of Rs. 1,35,141. The petitioner denied his liability to pay the said sum, and a dispute arose between the parties. The contracts were subject to the bye-laws of the East India Cotton Association, Ltd., and under bye-law No. 38 the dispute was referred to the arbitration of two of the members of the East India Cotton Association, Ltd. Before the arbitrators evidence was led on behalf of the parties, but no record was kept by the arbitrators of the proceedings before them. The arbitrators differed, whereupon the dispute was referred to Mr. Boyagist of Messrs. Langley & Co., as an umpire. Evidence was led before the umpire also, and he put certain questions to the arbitrators. No record, however, was kept by the umpire of the proceedings before him. On November 22, 1932, the umpire made his award in favour of the petitioner. The respondents, thereupon, filed an appeal against the said award to the board of directors of the Association under by-law No. 39, to which the petitioner submitted a rejoinder.

The appeal was first heard on February 21, 1933, at which meeting certain members of the board of directors were present. The parties appeared by Counsel, and the arguments of the Counsel for the respondents were partly heard on that day. The hearing of the appeal was then adjourned to March 6, 1933. It did not reach a hearing on that day, and was further adjourned to March 15, 1933. At the hearing of the appeal on March 15, some of the directors, who were present at the hearing of February 21, were not present, and some other directors, who were not present at the hearing of February 21, were present. At this hearing Counsel for the respondents finished his arguments, and Counsel for the petitioner commenced his; but as the same were not finished on that day, further hearing was adjourned to March 17, 1933. At the hearing on March 17, 1933, some of the directors who were present at one or both of the previous hearings were not present, and some directors who were not present at the earlier meetings or either of them were present. The petitioner applied for an adjournment of the hearing of the appeal, but his application was refused. Thereupon, the petitioner withdrew from the appeal, and the directors who were present at the said meeting made an award in favour of the respondents, and set aside the award of the umpire. By this award the board of directors awarded a total sum of Rs. 1,35,141 to the respondents against the petitioner with interest.

This award was filed in this Court on March 23, 1933, and notice thereof was given by the Secretary of the East India Cotton Association, Ltd., to the petitioner on the following day. On March 24, the respondents applied for execution of the said award, and in execution got the petitioner's property attached under a warrant of attachment. It is under these circumstances that the petitioner has filed the present petition, and he contends that the award cannot be filed under s. 15, Arbitration Act, and, secondly, that it is illegal, void and of no effect. His contentions briefly are: (1) That the award of the board of directors in appeal from the award made by the umpire is not within the Arbitration Act and cannot be filed, as it is not the award either by the arbitrators or the umpire, and he prays that it should be taken off the file: and (2) the award is illegal on the ground that it was made by persons some of whom were not present at the earlier hearings, and some who were present at the earlier hearings had not joined in the making of the award, and that the arbitrators did not act together in the making of the award, and the award is against the principles of natural justice. At the hearing one more ground was taken on behalf of the petitioner in support of his first contention, and that is that the award is not signed by all the members of the board of directors who made the award, but only by the chairman of the board.

Exhibit A is a statement giving the names of the directors present at the various meetings. The statement is admitted to be correct on behalf of the respondents. The statement shows (1) that the three directors who were present at the first meeting of February 21, were not present at the second meeting of March 15, (2) two of the directors who were present at the second meeting of March 15, were not present at the first meeting of February 21, (3) one member present at the first meeting of February 21, was not present at the second meeting of March 15, but was present at the final meeting of March 17, (4) two members present at the second meeting of March 15, were not present at the final meeting of March 17, (5) two members who were present at the first meeting of February 21, were not present at the final meeting of March 17, and (6) six members who were present at the first meeting of February 21, were also present at the second as well as the final meeting of March 15 and 17, respectively.

The respondents deny that the award is not within the Indian Arbitration Act, and they contend that the proceedings before the board of directors in the matter of the said appeal and the award are in accordance with the articles of association and the by-laws of the Association and are valid and binding on the petitioner. They further state that ever since the inception of the Association, appeals in respect of awards under the by-laws have been heard and disposed of at meetings of the board of directors convened from time to time and at such meetings the directors present have not been the same and have been different, and this fact was well known to the petitioner. They further say that the petitioner acquiesced in the proceedings although he knew that some of the directors present at each of the said three meetings were different; and assuming there was an irregularity, such irregularity was waived by or on behalf of the petitioner. As regards the second contention they say that it is the practice of the board of directors of the East India Cotton Association, Ltd., when appeals are being heard against awards, to circulate beforehand all papers relating to the appeal to all the members of the board of directors, and also when the hearing of the appeal is stayed over several hearings, to circulate from time to time to all the members of the board of directors the proceedings which take place at each of the said meetings. They further say that by reason of this practice though all the members of the board of directors may not happen to be present at all the meetings, they are kept well informed as to the proceedings which take place at each of the meetings of the board of directors in respect of all appeals heard by them. They say that having regard to the constitution of the Association and the bye-laws made by them, the award made by the board is valid and binding.

It may be stated that the evidence of the Secretary of the Association shows that the contention of the respondents as regards the practice followed by the board of directors is well founded, but as no record of the evidence taken by the arbitrators or by the umpire was kept, all that was circulated was the correspondence between the parties, the contracts and the award of the umpire, as well as the minutes of the meetings of the board of directors.

The first question is, whether the decision of the board is an award capable of being filed in Court under s. 11, Arbitration Act. There is no dispute in this case that the contracts between the parties were subject to the rules and bye-laws of the East India Cotton Association, Ltd. The material bye-law is bye-law No. 38 which, inter alia, provides that all disputes arising out of or in relation to contracts, whether forward or ready, and whether between members or between a member and a non-member, made subject to these bye-laws, shall be referred to the arbitration of two disinterested persons, one to be chosen by each party. It further provides that the arbitrators shall have power to appoint an umpire, and shall do so if and when they differ as to their award. The explanation to the bye-law says that the award shall be deemed to have been made on the date when the arbitrators have first recorded their decision in writing. Then there is a proviso for the appointment of an umpire and for the time within which the umpire has to make his award. Sub-clause E provides that the award of any two arbitrators or their umpire shall be final and binding on both parties, subject to a right of appeal to the board within ten days from the date of publication of the award. The bye-law further says that if either pary to the dispute refuses to abide by and perform the decision of the arbitrators or the umpire or their board, as the case may be, the award shall be filed in the High Court, and such party shall pay the costs between attorney and client in connection with the filing and enforcement of the award, unless the Court shall otherwise direct. It is argued that this last provision for filing the award in the High Court contemplates that the award made by the board has also to be filed in the High Court. That, no doubt, seems to be so, but the question as to what award can be filed in this Court must turn on the provisions of the Indian Arbitration Act. Bye-law No. 39 says (omitting unnecessary words) that an appeal shall lie to the board.

Section 2, Arbitration Act, says that the Act applies only in cases where, if the subject-matter submitted to the arbitration were the subject of a suit, the suit could, whether with leave or otherwise, be instituted in a presidency town. Section 4 (b) defines a 'submission' as meaning a writtten agreement to submit present or future differences to arbitration, whether an arbitrator is named therein or not. It will be seen from this definition that it makes no attempt to lay down how the arbitration is to be worked out and what should be the number of arbitrators. Subject to the provisions of s. 6, the Act leaves it open to the parties to settle the lines on which the arbitration is to be carried out. Section 6 is in the following terms:

"A submission, unless a different intention is expressed therein, shall be deemed to include the provisions set forth in Sch. 1, in so far as they are applicable to the reference under submission."

It is clear from this section that the intention of the parties is to be the sole guide for determining the mode of working out the submission and reaching a final decision. The law of arbitration is based upon the principle of withdrawing the dispute from the ordinary Courts and enabling the parties to substitute a domestic tribunal. Once that tribunal reaches a final decision as contemplated or agreed upon by the parties, then the Arbitration Act steps in to help the parties to enforce the said decision. Section 19, Arbitration Act, enables the parties to apply to the Court for a stay of the suit brought by his opponent in defiance of an existing submission to refer disputes to arbitation. Now there is no doubt, having regard to the terms of the contract between the parties which, as I have said, are subject to the bye-laws of the association, that, if either party had instituted a suit in this Court for determining the disputes which arose between them, the other party would have successfully maintained an application for stay of the suit under the provisions of s. 19. If this is correct, then it is difficult to see why there is a submission between the parties within the meaning of s. 19, Arbitration Act, and not a submission between the parties within the meaning of other sections of the Act. The term "submission" is construed very broadly. A contract which provides that a dispute arising in relation thereto should be tried by a foreign Court is considered a submission of any dispute arising between the parties to the arbitration of such foreign Court. In Haji Abdulla v. Stamp (1) a policy of marine insurance provided:

".....All disputes must be referred to England for settlement, and no legal proceedings shall be taken to enforce any claim except in England, where the underwriters are alone domiciled and carry on business."

The plaintiffs who had a claim under the policy filed a suit to enforce it against the defendants underwriters in the High Court of Bombay. The defendants took out a chamber summons under the Arbitration Act for an order staying the proceedings in the suit. It was held that the above clause in the policy of insurance amounted to a submission to arbitration, and that therefore, the suit should be stayed pending the result of such arbitration. In Austrian Lloyd Steamship Co. v. Gresham Life Assurance Society (2) a policy of life insurance was effected by a foreigner with an English insurance company, which had a branch office at Budapest. The policy, which was in the French language, provided that the premiums and insurance moneys should be payable at Budapest, and contained a condition, of which the English translation was as follows:

"For all disputes which may arise out of the contract of insurance, all the parties interested expressly agree to submit to the jurisdiction of Courts of Budapest having jurisdiction in such matters."

It was held that the above-mentioned condition constituted a submission within the meaning of s. 4 (English) Arbitration Act, 1889. It is unnecessary to multiply authorities, but I may as well refer to Krichner & Co. v. Gruban (3) which also is to the same effect. The scheme about arbitration in the bye-laws of the Association seems to be complete. There is, first, a provision for an award by the arbitrators. In the event of the arbitrators not agreeing, there is a provision for a reference to an umpire, and the decision of the umpire is final subject to an appeal to the board. The bye-laws themselves show that what is contemplated is the decision of either the arbitrators or the umpire or the board, and it is this decision which the bye-laws expressly call an award which is to be filed in this Court. This is clear from the wording of para. 2, sub-cl. F of bye-law No. 38. It is argued that s. 11 of the Act in terms contemplates an award made only by arbitrators or an umpire, and excludes an award made by the board of directors in appeal from the award of the umpire.

(1) 80 Ind. Cas 523; A I R 1924 Bom. 381; 2 Bom. L R 224.

(2) (1903) 1 K B 249; 72 L J K B 211; 19 T L R 155; 51 W R 402; 88 L T 6.

(3) (1909) 1 Ch. 413; 78 L J Ch. 117; 99 L 932.

Undoubtedly, the section in terms does not apply to the award made on appeal by the board of directors, but if the decision of the board which is called an award under the bye-law, which is filed under the Arbitration Act, is the final decision under the submission in accordance with the Act, then, in my opinion, it would be an award made by the arbitrators under ' the submission between the parties. There is no definition of the term "arbitrators" or "umpire," or even of "arbitration." There is no doubt that these terms are used in a very wide sense.

What is contemplated is that there should be a submission within the meaning of s. 4 of the Act, and a final decision under that submission arrived at by the domestic tribunal in the manner agreed upon between the parties. So long as the tribunal is agreed upon and so long as the method of reaching a final decision is agreed upon in accordance with the submission between the parties, I see no difficulty in holding that the final decision of the domestic tribunal agreed upon under the submission would be the award which could be filed under the Act. It is clear law in England that a reference can be made to a fluctuating body or to a committee of a trade association who appoint certain of their members to act. As an authority for the proposition I may refer to In re Keighley; Maxsted & Co. v. Durant & Co. (4), in which the form of the contract and the submission is similar to the present case. The contract in that case contained a clause that all disputes arising out of it should from time to time be referred to two arbitrators who should have power to call in a third, the award of any two of them will be binding and conclusive, with a proviso that in case either party should be dissatisfied with the award, he might appeal to the appeal committee of the London Corn Trade Association, subject to the rules of that association. By those rules the appeal committee consisted of twenty-five members, who in each case brought before it had to elect five members from their body, who heard the appeal, and who had to confirm the award appealed against, unless four out of the five concurred in reversing or varying it; the award of the appeal committee was then signed by the chairman of the body that heard the appeal, and was to be final and conclusive of the matter in dispute.

The rules further provided that in case of death, illness, etc., of any of the five members, the appeal committee shall from time to time elect a new member or members in his or their place. In that case it was argued on behalf of the appellants that there were no arbitrators or umpire within the meaning of s. 10, Arbitration Act (52 & 53 Vic. C. 49), of 1889, and that it was a scheme of arbitration not provided for by the Act. The respondents were not called upon, and the argument was completely disregarded, and the correct position was put by Lord Esher, M. R. in this way (p. 407*):

"I am of opinion, that the appeal must be dismissed. The parties are related by a contract of purchase and sale, which is the only contract between them. A dispute arose with reference to that contract, the question at issue being whether the purchasers were bound to accept a quantity of wheat when tendered to them. In the contract the parties had agreed, in case a dispute should arise, to refer it to the arbitration of certain persons (who were, I suppose, members of the corn trade) as arbitrators and under certain conditions; if no objection was taken by either party to the award, it was of course to be final; but if either party wished to take the matter to an umpire, or by way of appeal, as the parties call it, then the umpire was to be the appeal committee of the London Corn Trade Association. The case accordingly went to arbitration, and one of the parties, being dissatisfied with the award, wished the case to go before the umpire. Now, the parties had not only agreed that the committee should be the umpire, but they had agreed that it should act according to the rules of the London Corn Trade Association, which were well known; and when the committee which consisted of 25 persons, came to be umpire, they, acting under their rules exercised their duty by appointing out of their own body a committee of five to act as umpire in the dispute. And it may be noticed here that, by the rules, if one of five members of the committee died before the matter was finally determined, another member of the body of 25 might be appointed in his place."

The submission in Produce Brokers Co.

(4) (1893) 1 Q B 405; 62 L J Q B 105; 7 Asp. M C 268; 41 W R 437; 68 L T 61.

*Page of (1893) 1 Q. B.—[Ed.]

Ltd. v. Olymplia Oil and Cake Co , Ltd. (5) is exactly similar to the submission and the contract between the parties in the present case, and in these terms (p. 315*) :

"13. All disputes from time to time arising out of this contract including any question of law appearing in the proceedings . . . shall be referred to arbitration according to the rules endorsed on this contract . . ."

It was never suggested in that case that such a contract and submission were outside the scope of the Arbitration Act of 1889. The question in the case was, whether the arbitrators had jurisdiction to determine the existence of a custom, and Earl Loreburn observed that in his opinion the appeal arbitral committee had jurisdiction finally to find as they did in regard to the custom of the trade, and dealing with this point Lord Sumner observed as follows (p. 332*) :

"Arbitration clauses, substantially the same as that before your Lordships, are characteristic of all these forms of contract. The system has been devised by mercantile men to suit their needs and they have found it highly beneficial ; they have been naturally anxious to establish trade control over the transactions of the trade as completly as possible. A construction which would have conferred on the appeal committee a true arbitral function as to the interpretation and performance of the printed contract, and a provisional and appealable function over so important a matter as the customs of the trade itself, would have been equally anomalous and inconvenient.

Further, I think, the transaction in question is eminently one with which the established arbitral tribunal is fitted to deal in its entirety."

Mr. Coltman argues that the English decisions are no guide on the point as there is a difference between the English Arbitration Act of 1899 and our Indian Arbitration Act of 1899. Under s. 12 of the English Act, an award can only be filed in Court with leave obtained from the Court ; under our Act no such leave is necessary, and the award can be filed without leave, and on being filed, is capable of being executed summarily as a decree of the Court. He further argues that the Indian Arbitration Act does not provide for every kind of eventuality, and relies upon a judgment of this Court in Gopalji Kuverji v. Morarji Jeram (6). He concedes that the award made by the board would be a good award, but he contends that it can only be enforced by a suit, not summarily under the Indian Arbitration Act. Apar from special circumstances, there is no reason for supposing that if an award is made by what is called in the cases to which I have referred as an 'appeal committee,' on an 'appeal arbitral committee,' leave would be refused in England. The real question is whether there is a submission between the parties within the meaning of the Act followed by arbitration in the manner agreed upon resulting in a final decision. If so, that final decision is an award, and I do not see why it cannot be filed in Court even under the Arbitration Act. In In re Kighley, Maxsted & Co. v. Durant & Co. (4) the decision of the appeal committee is described by Lord Esher, M. R., as the decision of the umpire and the proceedings before the appeal committee as umpirage, although in that case the award of the arbitrators was unanimous.

On this point in India there has been no reported decision in any authorized reports, but exactly the same point arose in Heeralal & Co. v. Joakim & Co. (7). In that case, according to the contract between the parties, a dispute was referred, firstly, to arbitrators then to an umpire, and then to a committee of appeal from him; and the Court held that the award made by the committee of appeal fell within the terms of the Indian Arbitration Act. It is pointed out in that decision that such forms of contract are used in certain trades and the awards made under similar submissions were treated as good and valid awards within the meaning of the Indian Arbitration Act. Reference was made to Chandanmull v. Donald Campbell & Co. (8) and to Surajmull Askaran v. Chandmull Moolchand (9) and although the precise question which arises in this case was not raised, such a submission was also before their Lordships of the Privy Council in E. D. Sassoon & Co. v. Ramdutt Ramkissen Das (10). After the arguments of Counsel in this case were finished and I reserved my judgment, Mr. Setalvad appeared before me and stated that the point involved in this case had come up for decision before our Court. I thereupon directed that the matter should be men-

(5) (1916) 1 A C 314; 85 L J K B 160; 60 S J 74; 32 T L R 115; 114 L T 94.

(6) 50 Ind. Cas 411; A I R 1919 Bom. 24; 43 B 809; 21 Bom L R 308.

*Pages of (1916) 1 A. C.—[Ed.]

(7) 103 Ind. Cas. 648; A I R 1927 Cal. 647: 55 C 180; 31 C W N 730.

(8) 54 Ind. Cas. 289*n*; 23 C W N 707*n*.

(9) 103 Ind. Cas. 631; A I R 1927 Cal. 601; 31 C W N 686.

(10) 70 Ind. Cas. 777; A I R 1922 P C 374; 49 I A 366; 50 C 1; 37 C L J 336; 44 M L J 755; 27 C W N 660; (1923) M W N 372; 18 L W 537 (P C).

tioned to me again on notice to the other side, and this was done. Mr. Setalvad produced a copy of the decision of Kanga, J., in Sukhdev Ramdeo v. Dharamsey Jetha & Co., O. C. J. Appeal No. 50 of 1922 decided on October 2, 1922, by Shah, Ag. C. J. and Crump, J., and the decision of the Appeal Court confirming the same. The submission in that case included a term to the effect that the award of the arbitrators or their umpire shall be final and binding subject to a right of appeal to the Cotton Contracts Board. The contract was subject to the rules and regulations of that board. Kanga, J., dealt with the point in this way:

"That contention is that the proceedings which culminated in the award did not fall within the Arbitration Act, and that the Arbitration Act does not contemplate any appeal from the unanimous decision of two arbitrators, and therefore their petition, which is under the Arbitration Act, should be dismissed on the ground that there is no submission and award, and that the case falls outside the scope of the Arbitration Act. I must say that this argument came upon me as a great surprise, for I am aware of numerous awards of the Cotton Contracts Board which have been entertained by this Court as falling within the Arbitration Act. On carefully examining the argument, it seems to me that there is nothing in it. Section 4, Arbitration Act, defines a submission as follows: 'Submission means a written agreement to submit present or future differences to arbitration whether an arbitrator is named therein on not.'

Now there is no doubt that the parties may instead of resorting to ordinary Courts of law, have a domestic forum: see s. 8, Contract Act.

Therefore if under s. 4, Arbitration Act, the letter constitutes a submission, and if according to the terms of that submission the award is made, it cannot be contended that the submission and the award fall outside the scope of the Arbitration Act."

The learned Judge referred to In re Keighley, Maxsted & Co. v. Durant & Co., (4) in support of the view which he took. In appeal, Shah, Ag. C. J., observed as follows:

"In the appeal before us the only point urged is that the submission by the parties to arbitration under r. 51, Cotton Contracts Board, constituted under the Bombay Act, 1919, is not valid. It is conceded that the award by the arbitrators may be valid but it is contended that the interference by the Board on appeal is not contemplated by the Arbitration Act, and that the award made by the Board on appeal from the decision of the arbitrators is outside the scope of the Act. It is however clear from s. 6, Arbitration Act, that it is open to the parties to express their intention at the time of submission to carry out the arbitration on such lines as the parties are willing to agree to. In the present case assuming, without deciding, that the nature of the original contract between the parties as to which the dispute had arisen, was outside the class of contracts referred to in s. 2 (a) Act I of 1919, it was open to the parties to agree to an arbitration to be carried out on the lines stated in r. 51 framed under that Act.

Apart from any decision, I see no difficulty in holding that an award made on the agreement of the parties in that manner is within the scope of the Act. It is as much an award in respect of which the parties can seek relief under the Arbitration Act as an ordinary award made by arbitrators as contemplated by that Act from which there is no appeal to any Board as in the present case. This point is covered by the decision of the Court of appeal in In re Keighley Maxsted & Co. v. Durant & Co. (4), which has been referred to in the judgment of the lower Court. It is a decision under the English Statute of 1889, corresponding to the Arbitration Act and the point that has been argued by Mr. Desai on behalf of the appellants here was raised in that case and disallowed."

It is argued by Mr. Coltman that the observations of Shah, Ag. C. J., are obiter dicta. I am not prepared to agree, but, assuming that they are, it seems to me to be clear that although the precise question raised now as to whether an award by the board of directors could be filed under s. 11 of the Act or not was not specifically raised in that case, the Appeal Court found that it was within the Indian Arbitration Act, and that decision is binding on me. The bye-laws in this case are statutory. It is not contended that the Act or the bye-laws are ultra vires, and obviously, they are not, in view of s. 80-A, Government of India Act. The bye-laws being valid and the contract being subject to the bye-laws the scheme of the arbitration provided by the by-laws is binding on the parties, and the final decision of the domestic tribunal agreed upon would be an award, and, in my opinion, could be filed under s. 11 of the Act.

The second ground on which it is argued that the award should be taken off the file is that the award is not signed by all the members of the board who made it. In this case the award is only signed by the chairman. It is argued that the decision of the board can be signed by the chairman only as any other resolution passed by the board of directors. There is no bye-law as to how the decisions of the board or the resolutions made by them are to be signed. In similar cases in England there is a distinct provision as to how such awards should be signed: see In re Keighley, Maxsted & Co. v. Durant & Co.(4). Section 11, Indian Arbitration Act, states that when the arbitrators or the umpires have made an award, they shall sign it, and that being so, in my opinion, the award ought to have been signed by all the members of the board who joined in the making of it. But the omission to do so is a mere irregularity as pointed out by Russell on Arbitration and Award, Edn. 12, p. 431, and is capable of being rectified. If necessary, I would have remitted the award for being signed in accordance with s. 11 of the Act; but, in view of the conclusion to which I have come, I do not think it necessary to do so. This brings me to the last and perhaps the most important point in the case. From the facts I have set out above, it is clear that the composition of the board has changed from time to time since the appeal went on before the board, and when the decision was given, clearly some of those who heard the arguments at the earlier meetings were not present and did not form part of the board which made the award. The question, then, is, whether the award or the decision of the board under such circumstances is legal and can be accepted.

Section 14, Indian Arbitration Act, provides that where an arbitrator or umpire has misconducted himself or an arbitration or an award has been improperly procured, the Court may set aside the award. Mr. Setalvad argues that a reference may be made to a fluctuating body, and relies on Parish of Rathven v. Parish of Elgin (11). He further says that under the bye-laws the Board means the Board of Directors acting through at least the quorum of their members at the meetings called and duly constituted. There is no bye-law which fixes the quorum. But the learned Counsel relies on Art. 61 of the articles of association, according to which six directors shall be a quorum for the transaction of the business of the Board. As to his first contention undoubtedly that case is an authority for the proposition that a reference can be made to arbitration to a fluctuating body. But to make a reference to such a body is one thing and how that body is to act and in what manner and what members are to act as arbitrators is another thing, and that question was expressly left open by Cairn, and his observations are as follows (p. 538*):

"I apprehend that in this country there is nothing whatever which would prevent persons who are minded to refer to arbitration from referring to the arbitration of an incorporated society, consisting of a number of members or to the members of an incorporated society. How the arbitration so made should be worked out—by what numbers it should be decided—whether at a public meeting or in what way—is quite a different question which may be kept distinct from the question of whether such persons can be selected as arbiters."

On this point I may refer to Russell's observations in his book on Arbitration and Award, Edn. 12, at p. 36, which are as follows:

"A reference may be to a body or class of persons who may vary from time to time and the reference will be treated as being to the members of the body or class at time when the dispute comes up for decision."

As pointed out above in In re Keighley, Maxsted & Co. v. Durant & Co. (4), one of the rules of the London Corn Trade Association was to the effect that out of the twenty-five members who formed the appeal committee, five members had to be elected members to hear the appeal. There is no such bye-law under the bye-laws of the East India Cotton Association, Ltd. Prima facie the parties were entitled to a decision of the board. The board is the tribunal agreed upon. There is no provision for delegating the functions of the board to a particular number of directors. It is true that the board is defined to mean: "the Board of Directors of the East India Cotton Association, Ltd., acting through at least a quorum of their number at a meeting of that Board duly called and constituted."

But there is no bye-law which fixes the quorum. It is true that the articles of association provide for six directors acting as quorum. The articles of association, however, are not binding on the petitioner according to the decision of the Appeal Court in Radhakison Gopikison v. Balmukund Ramchandra (12), as the petitioner admittedly is not a member of the East India Cotton Association, Ltd. But assuming that the petitioner knew that six directors formed a quorum does that mean that different members can sit at the meetings of the board at different times to hear the appeal and give their decision on it? I think not. In my opinion, it would be a mockery of justice to say that A, B and C can partly hear an appeal for one day, C, D and E, partly on the following day, and G, D and H at the third meeting and the latter make their award. And this is the length which logically speaking, the respondents have to go to justify their contention. It must be remembered that the board under the submission is a tribunal although it is a domestic or private tribunal and it has to act as far as possible judicially. Assuming that the board under the bye-laws can act through a quorum once the particular directors forming the quorum become fixed, I do not think that in the matter of the determination of an appeal a change in the personnel of the quorum is contemplated at any rate in the absence of a specific bye-law to that effect. Once you have a meeting of the board through its quorum to consider the appeal, the board is crystallized as a judicial body for the purposes of appeal.

(11) (1875) 2 Scotch App. 535.

*Page of (1875) 2 Scotch—[Ed.]

(12) 128 Ind. Cas. 614; A I R 1931 Bom. 41; 55 B 332; 32 Bom. L R 1319.

If there is one proposition which is firmly established by authorities more than any other in regard to arbitration, it is this that where there are several arbitrators all must act together and each must act in the making of the award and this is not denied. Indeed Mr. Setalvad concedes it. Every stage of the proceedings must be in the presence of all, and every judicial act to be done by two or more must be completed in the presence of all who do it. In Margan v. Boult (13), the facts were that the umpire and one of the arbitrators in the absence of the other arrived at a decision, though they informed him of it and afforded him an opportunity of objecting thereto before finally and formally making their award. The Court consisting of Cockburn, C. J., Crompton and Blackburn, JJ., observed as follows:

".....it would be dangerous to allow an award to stand under such circumstances. It was not a mere communication of the decision which was sufficient for it was not easy to eradicate an impression once produced and allowed to sink in the mind. There ought to have been a meeting of all three, for the purpose of mutual discussion of the matter, before arriving at any decision. It was essential to the right exercise of the judicial function by several persons, that there should be this joint consideration and discussion of the matter, before any of them arrived at a decision upon it. In this case the arbitrator of the applicant ought to have been allowed an opportunity of hearing what was urged by the other, and of making any answer to it, and urging any arguments in support of the opposite view before the umpire had formed an opinion upon the question. It would be a most dangerous precedent to allow an award to stand which had virtually been arrived at and resolved on by the umpire on the ex parte statements of one of the arbitrators, in the absence of the other. On that ground, therefore the award must be set aside. . . ."

In In re Plews & Middleton (14) Lord Denman, C. J., observed that an award is procured by unfair means if it is arrived at by a departure from natural justice in ascertaining the facts. In that case, ascertaining the facts by one arbitrator apart from the other and by an examination of an interested witness was held to be a departure, not merely from an established course of procedure, but from natural justice. Coleridge, J. observed (p. 852*)

"To uphold this award would be to authorize a proceeding contrary to the first principles of justice. The arbitrators here carried on examinations apart from each other, and from the parties to the reference; whereas it ought to have been conducted by the arbitrators and umpire jointly, in presence of the parties."

The observations of Lord Denman, C. J., are also to the same effect. In that case what happened was that by arrangement between themselves the joint arbitrators questioned a witness separately and in the absence of the parties. Each then stated the result of his inquiry to the other, and the reports agreeing, they made their award. The Court set aside the award on a motion as procured by undue means, the course pursued being inconsistent with natural justice. In Lord v. Lord (15), Coleridge, J., observed (p. 406†)

"It is now clearly established that every judicial act, to be done by two or more, must be completed in the presence of all who did it; for those who are to be affected by it have a right to the united judgment of all up to the very last moment."

In In re Beck & Jackson (16) it was held that upon a reference to three arbitrators, or any two of them, an award made by two, in the absence of and without finally consulting the third cannot be supported. In that case Cresswell, J. approved of the rules stated by Russell on Arbitration and Award in these words (p. 700‡)

"I find the rule thus stated in Russell on Arbitration, p. 209,—speaking of the duty of joint arbitrators,—'As they must all act, so must they all act together. They must each be present at every meeting; and the witnesses and the parties must be examined in the presence of them all; for the parties are entitled to have recourse to the arguments, experience and judgment of each arbitrator at every stage of the proceedings brought to bear on the minds of his fellow-judges, so that by conference they shall mutually assist each other in arriving together at a just decision: In re Plews & Middleton (14), Little v. Newton (17), Stalworth v Inns (18).

I may also refer to three Indian decisions which were cited by Mr. Coltman. They are also to the same effect: Nand Ram v. Fakir Chand (19), Thammiraju v. Bapiraju (20), Ma Sin v. Ma Pu (21).

(13) (1863) 11 W R 265; 7 L T 671.
(14) (1845) 6 Q B 845; 14 L J Q B 139; 66 R R 572.
(15) (1855) 5 El. & Bl 404; 26 L J Q B 34; 3 W R 553; 1 Jur. (N S) 893; 103 R R 525.
(16) (1857) 1 C B (N S) 695; 107 R R 861.
(17) (1841) 9 D P C 437; 2 Scott (N S) 509; 2 Man & G 351; 5 Jur. 246: 10 L J C P 88: 58 R R 436.
(18) (1844) 13 M & W 466; 14 L J Ex. 81; 2 Dowl. & L 428; 9 Jur. 285; 67 R R 680.
(19) 7 A 523; A W N 1885, 139.
(20) 12 M 113.
(21) 121 Ind. Cas. 801; A I R 1930 Rang. 136; 7 R 715; Ind. Rul. (1930) Rang. 129.

*Page of (1845) 6 Q B.—[Ed.]
†Page of (1855) 5 El. & Bl.—[Ed.]
‡Page of (1857) 1 C. B. (N. S.)—[Ed.]

Mr. Setalwad relies on the decision in In re Keighley, Maxsted & Co. v. Durant & Co. (4) and that part of the judgment which directed that the award should be remitted for further consideration of the appeal committee although one of the members had by that time been dead. It is true that in that case the award was remitted. It must however be remembered that in that case there was a distinct rule which was a part of the contract and submission by which such a contingency was provided for, and, under that rule, the vacancy could be supplied. But that does not mean that the appeal committee would change its personnel from time to time. It only means that you have a different body to re-hear the whole appeal and finally to dispose of it. Under the rules of the Association, the tribunal was definite and a fixed body. In this case, however, there is no similar rule, and, therefore in my opinion, this decision is not of much help to Mr. Setalvad. I think, it would be desirable if the East India Cotton Association, Ltd., framed a similar or suitable rule to provide for such a contingency.

It is said that hundreds of appeals have been heard in this way by the board of directors, and the respondents rely upon the practice. But, in my opinion, the procedure followed, at any rate in the absence of specific rules, is irregular and contrary to natural justice, and, however well established the usage or practice may be, if it is contrary to natural justice, it cannot be upheld in a Court of Law. It is clear law that mercantile usages in the conduct of references cannot be supported if contrary to the principles of natural justice, and this is clear from the decisions to which I have referred. In In re Brook and Delcomyn (22), it was held that although mercantile arbitrators are not bound by the strict rules of evidence, yet they cannot be permitted to transgress that fundamental principle of justice which declares that no man shall be condemned, either civilly or criminally, without being afforded an opportunity of hearing the evidence adduced against him, and offering his defence. At p. 414* Erle, C. J., observed :

"I have always a great desire to give effect to mercantile customs, and to the awards of mercantile arbitrators, unless they infringe upon principles of wider importance."

Then it is said that the petitioner acquiesced in the proceedings although he knew that the personnel was changing, and, therefore the irregularity, if any, is waived by him. In the first place, I am not at all satisfied that the petitioner, who is not a member of the Association and is not shown to have been acquainted with the directors, would be in a position to make out that one or two people who were present at the first meeting were not present at the next, or that one or two other people at the next were not present at the earlier meeting. But, apart from that, however, on the last day he asked for an adjournment. It does not appear why the adjournment was required. The adjournment was refused and then he withdrew. That being so, and having regard to the facts of the case, in my opinion, the respondents have failed in establishing a case for waiver set up by them. Apart from this, I am doubtful that where the proceedings were conducted in the manner in which they have been in this case, it is merely an irregularity which can be waived by a party. The time for objecting really arose on March 17. On that day the petitioner asked for an adjournment. That being refused, he withdrew. It is difficult to see how the question of waiver can arise in these circumstances. In support of his contention, Mr. Setalvad relies on Moseley v. Simpson (23). But in that case the proceedings were commenced de novo, and there was an agreement not to impugn the award on any ground.

Lastly, it is submitted that as six directors were present throughout at all the meetings, the award made by the board being the award of the quorum of the board of directors is a good award. As I have pointed out, there is no bye-law which fixes the quorum binding on the petitioner. Under the bye-laws he is entitled to the benefit of a decision of all the directors acting through a quorum which was not fixed. Mr. Setalvad relies on Beck v. Sargent (24), and contends that if the award made is that of the arbitrators and a stranger joins in it, the award is still good. In that case, however, the award was made by all the arbitrators and the joining of a stranger was held not to affect the validity of it. In this case there is nothing to show that the persons who were not present at the earlier meetings did not influence the decision, and, in any event, they cannot be said to be strangers, as they were (22) (1864) 16 C B (N S) 403; 10 Jur. (N S) 704; 10 L T (N S) 378; 139 R R 517.

*Page of (1864) 16 C. B. (S. N.)—[Ed.]

(23) (1873) 16 Eq. 226; 42 L J Ch. 739; 21 W R 694; 28 L T 727.

(24) (1812) 4 Taunt 232.

also the members of the board. They were arbitrators just as much as the other six, and some who were present at the earlier meetings were not present at subsequent meetings. It is difficut therefore to see how it can be said that the award made in this case is the award of the six members who were present throughout, and not the award of all the members who were present at the final meeting. There is nothing to show that even these six directors agreed upon the award or whether the award is unanimous.

I must, therefore, accept the second contention, and set aside the award. The petition must, therefore, be made absolute with costs. Security discharged. Taxed costs as on the original side long cause scale.

D. Award set aside.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

March 5, 1934

BUCKLAND, ACTG. C. J.

In the matter of DEWANGUNJ BANK & INDUSTRY, LTD.

Companies Act (VII of 1913), s. 153—Depositor becoming decree holder against company—Company subsequently embarking on scheme—Such depositor, if bound by it—Remedy of decree-holders

A depositor ceases to be a depositor when he obtains a decree against the company and becomes a decree-holder against it. When after passing of such decrees the company embarks upon a scheme and a meeting is called and notice is sent to all depositors, the decree-holder creditors, are not bound to attend the meeting and any scheme framed at such a meeting is not binding on them. The meeting, though sanctioned by the Court, has no right by a mere definition to include the decree-holders within the scope of depositors, any more than a company has the right by definition to include its general trade creditors Where the meeting includes the decree-holders as depositors and the Court sanctions it per incuriam or because the circumstances are not sufficiently explained to the Judge, the decree-holders can get the scheme modified by the Court, by having such portion of the scheme which affects them expunged from the scheme. Raghubar Dayal v. Bank of Upper India, Ltd. (1), distinguished.

Mr. Page, for the Applicants.

Mr. Sushil Sen, for the Bank.

Order.—This is an application on behalf of two persons who have obtained decrees against the Dewangunj Bank & Industry, Ltd., for an order modifying a scheme sanctioned by this Court under s. 153, Companies Act, by an order made on July 17, 1933.

The circumstances were that the present petitioners were depositors in the company and on January 3, 1933, they obtained a decree against the company for Rs. 2,561 being the amount of their claim. They thereupon, as it has been submitted and in my judgment rightly, ceased to be depositors and became decree-holders against the company. The decree provided for payment by instalments extending over six years. The decree has been recognised by the Bank, a payment having been made on April 13, 1933. Subsequently thereto the company embarked upon a scheme to which the sanction of the Court would be required under s. 153, Companies Act, and the usual orders were made, firstly, that of May 23, by Panckridge, J., directing a meeting of the depositors of the company for the purpose of considering the scheme and on a subsequent date the meeting was held. The petitioners had notice of the meeting but did not attend as they had already obtained decrees. The scheme of arrangement between the depositors and the company provided, broadly speaking, that depositors should not be entitled to demand payment of their deposits but would be paid over a period extending, to 15 years. The scheme was duly adopted but with a very important modification which provided as follows:

"Those who have instituted suits and obtained decrees in respect of his or her deposits including costs, if any, shall also be deemed as creditors and the scheme shall be binding on them as well."

The object of this modification was transparently clear, to include among depositors the petitioners who had already obtained decree. Sanction of this Court was in due course given to the scheme with that modification, but there is nothing to show that the attention of the learned Judge who gave the sanction was ever drawn to this modification or to its effect, nor does it appear that the petitioners had any opportunity of appearing on that application. Application is now made to have the words which were added to cl. 2 of the scheme expunged. The effect of the order sought would be to maintain the sanction given by the order of July 17, 1933, to the scheme but without such modification.

It is contended on behalf of the company that the agreement was binding upon the petitioners in spite of the fact that they had obtained decree, and in support of this contention I have been referred to Raghubar Dayal v. Bank of Upper India

Ltd. (1). Their Lordships of the Privy Council in that case laid down a rule which has no applicability whatever to the circumstances of this case. It was there decided that a depositor who had obtained a decree between the time when the agreement to a scheme was arrived at general meeting and the time when the Court gave its sanction to the scheme was bound by the scheme on the ground that the agreement became binding from the date when it was arrived at subject to the subsequent sanction of the Court. Here the position is entirely different. The decree had been obtained long before there was any question of a scheme or the meeting or the sanction of the Court being obtained to the scheme, and the authority cited is of no assistance to the company in support of the contention that the applicants are bound by the agreement to the scheme at the meeting on July 2, 1933.

A further point is taken whether I have jurisdicion to entertain this appliction and make the order. It is suggested that the proper course to be followed is for the decree-holder to execute their decrees, which I am told would be at Rungpur, when they could contend before the local Court that they were not bound by the scheme. Not only would it be embarrassing to throw the burden of deciding the point upon the local Subordinate Court but I see no reason for justice being done in this matter by an extremely roundabout method. At the time when the notice of the scheme of the proposed meeting was given the petitioners had ceased to be depositors. They were fully justified in not attending the meeting. The meeting, I conceive, though sanctioned by the Court, had no right by a mere definition to include the petitioners within the scope of depositors, any more than a company would have the right by definition to include its general trade creditors, and in my opinion the petitioners are not bound by the scheme. The scheme having been sanctioned by the Court doubtless per in curiam or because the circumstances were not sufficiently explained to the learned Judge, the applicants' only remedy in my judgment is to come to this Court to have the scheme modified.

(1) 50 Ind. Cas. 429; A I R 1919 P C 9; 46 I A 135; 41 A 566; 36 M L J 526; 17 A L J 533; 23 C W N 697; 21 Bom. L R 481; 22 O C 106; (1919) M W N 500; 1 U P L R (P C) 51; 30 C L J 214; 26 M L T 178; 10 L W 374; 6 O L J 423; 13 Bur. L T 31 (P.C).

There will be an order in the alternative form set out in the summons, expunging from the scheme the words "those who have instituted suits and obtained decrees in respect of his or her deposits including costs, if any, shall also be deemed as creditors and the scheme shall be binding on them as well."

Costs of this application will be paid by the company. Certified for Counsel.

D. Application allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeals Nos. 283 to 285 of 1932

August 27, 1934

NASIM ALI, J.

SRISH CHANDRA PAL CHOUDHURY—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

RAJANI KANTA BISWAS AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 180-A, cl. (15), 115 (c)—No dispute about status of tenant or enhancibility of rent or area—Held, dispute was only about amount of rent and no second appeal lay—In settling fair rent, Court can consider rate payable if portion of holding is kept fallow under panchan system.

Where in a case there is no dispute about the status of the tenants or about the enhancibility or otherwise of the rent and also as regards the area for which the rent is to be assessed, the decision is only about the amount of rent settled and no second appeal lies. Badri Narayan v. Abdul Madal (1), relied on.

In settling the amount of fair rent, the Court is entitled to take into consideration the rate which is payable by tenants, if a portion of their holding is kept fallow under the panchan system.

C. A. from appellate decree of the Special Judge, Nadia, dated July, 7, 1931.

Messrs. A. N. Bose and Hemanta Kumar Bose, for the Appellants.

Mr. Ramendra Mohan Majumdar, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—These three appeals arise out of three applications under s. 180-A, Bengal Tenancy Act, by the tenants for determination of uniform annual money rent in respect of lands held by them under the utbandi system. The defence of the defendant landlord was that the applications were not maintainable in their present form and that the prayers of the tenants were not sustainable under the law. The landlord also alleged that the lands were very much improved by the excavation of a khal for flow of excess water at his cost. The learned Assistant Settlement Officer, after consideration of all the materials which were placed before him by the parties, held that the rate of Re. 1-2-0 per bigha would be the fair rent for the lands in respect of which no kabuliyats were executed by the tenants and Rs. 2 would be the fair rent per bigha for the lands in respect of which kabuliyats were executed by the tenants.

Appeals were then taken by the tenants to the Special Judge. The learned Special Judge came to the conclusion that the nature and extent of improvements alleged to have been effected by the landlord by the opening of the khal could not be determined with any degree of precision. He was also of opinion that the fair and equitable rent should be determined irrespective of the question of any contract between the parties. He also held that the average of the amount that was actually paid as rent for the lands for the previous six years could not be determined as the papers filed by the landlord were not reliable.

The learned Judge then considered whether he could take into consideration any of the elements which are mentioned in the proviso to cl. 9 of s. 180-A, Bengal Tenancy Act. The learned Judge, after examining the materials on the record was of opinion that cls. (a), (b) and (c) were not sufficiently attracted in these cases. He was, however, of opinion, that in fairness to the landlord the question of improvement should be taken into consideration and in fairness to the tenant the element of panchan should be considered in determining the fair rent. After taking these two factors mainly into consideration, the learned Judge varied the rate fixed by the Assistant Settlement Officer by fixing Re. 1-6-6 per bigha for kabuliyat lands and Re. 1 for the non-kabulirat lands. Hence the present appeal by the landlord. A preliminary objection was taken to the competency of these appeals by the learned Advocate for the respondents on the ground that in view of the provisions of s. 180-A, cl. 15, Second Appeals to this Court are not maintainable inasmuch as the Special Judge has only settled fair rent in these cases. In other words the contention is that the dispute in these cases being only about the amount of rent second appeal was barred under s. 180-A, cl. 15 read with s. 115 (c), Bengal Tenancy Act. From what has been stated above it is clear that in these cases there was no dispute about the status of the tenants or about the enhancibility or otherwise of the rent. There was no dispute also as regards the area for which the rent was to be assessed. Consequently I am of opinion, that the decision of these cases is only a decision about the amount of rent settled. See the unreported case in Badri Narayan v. Abdul Madal (1) decided by this Court on March 12, 1934. The preliminary objection must, therefore, prevail. The appeals are accordingly dismissed.

Mr. Bose appearing on behalf of the landlord, however, prayed that these appeals might be treated as applications for revision in these cases. It was contended by Mr Bose that the learned Judge has no jurisdiction under the law to take into consideration the panchan system in settling the amount of rent in view of the provisions of s. 180-A, Bengal Tenancy Act. I am unable to accept this view of the matter. In setting the amount of fair rent, the Court is entitled to take into consideration the rate which is payable by these tenants, if a portion of their holding is kept fallow under the panchan system. It is argued by Mr. Bose that unless the area of the panchan land in each particular year be known, it would be inequitable to take panchan rate into consideration in settling the fair rent, inasmuch as the quantity of panchan land in the holding of each tenant might vary from year to year. I am unable to accept this contention and to hold that without a correct determination of the area of panchan land in each particular year, it would not be fair to the landlord to take the general rate for panchan land into consideration in fixing the annual rate of rent. I am, therefore, not inclined in view of the facts of these cases to interfere as I am not satisfied that there has been a failure of justice in these cases. The prayer for taking these appeals as applications for revision cannot, therefore, be entertained.

D. Order accordingly.

(1) 154 Ind. Cas. 466; A I R 1935 Cal. 97.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 51 of 1932

January 25, 1935

GRILLE, J. C.

ABDUL RAHIMAN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

ABDUL WAHAB—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT

C. P. Tenancy Act (I of 1920), Sch. II, Art. 1—Whether applies to a claim for joint possession in holding.

Article 1, Sch. II, C. P. Tenancy Act, relating to possession or dispossession of or from a holding does not include a question of a claim for joint possession or resistance of such a claim in that holding. Amarchand-Radhalal v. Ramjiwan (2), referred to.

A person who is in joint possession cannot be said to have been dispossessed or excluded from possession of the holding by his co-tenant since his right of possession extends over the entire holding. Consequently, Art. 1, Sch II of the C. P. Tenancy Act has no application to such a case and the ordinary rules of the Limitation Act must apply. Ganesh Prasad v. Bhawani Pershad (1), dissented from.

Special enactments which derogate from the ordinary law must be strictly construed.

S. C. A. against the decree of the District Judge, Nagpur, in Civil Appeal No. 26 of 1931, dated September 26, 1931, arising out of Civil Suit No. 105 of 1926, dated April 21, 1931, in the Court of the First Sub-Judge, Second Class, Nagpur.

Mr. M. R. Bobde, for the Appellant.

Mr. R. N. Padhye, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—The parties to the suit out of which this appeal arises are Muhammadans, the plaintiff being the paternal uncle of the defendant. The plaintiff sued for a declaration that he was the sole absolute occupancy tenant of certain fields and the sole malik makbuza of another field and prayed that an entry made by the Superintendent of Land Records declaring that his nephew was joint tenant and proprietor with him should be corrected. The defendant in the first place pleaded that a suit for mere declaration did not lie and that a suit for possession would have to be brought and the appropriate court-fees paid. On a preliminary issue on this fiscal question it was held that the plaintiff would have to add a prayer for possession on the ground that he was out of actual possession at the time of the filing of the suit. The prayer was accordingly added. The defendant resisted the claim of the plaintiff and maintained that he was entitled to joint possession under Muhammadan Law and also pleaded that he had been in exclusive possession of the fields in suit since the year 1916 (the suit was instituted in the year 1929) and that the plaintiff's claim was, therefore, time-barred. The trial Court found that the facts alleged by the defendant which would entitle him to joint possession in law were disproved, namely that his grandfather had devised the property by a will equally between his two sons and that the defendant was in any case entitled to 6 annas share of the property as the heir of his grandmother. The Court also found that the defendant had been managing the cultivation on behalf of the plaintiff, his uncle as there was nothing to show that he ever put forward his own claim to the fields adversely to the plaintiff and that his possession was never adverse. The plaintiff's claim was accordingly decreed in full. In an appeal by the defendant the decision on the facts giving rise to the defendant's inheritance under the Muhammadan Law was upheld, but the Court found on the evidence that the defendant had been in possession for five or six years before the suit as a co-tenant of the tenancy fields, that so far his possession must be regarded as adverse to the plaintiff's exclusive interest in the property and that as his joint possession had continued for more than two years, the plaintiff's claim for absolute possession of the tenancy fields must be considered barred by virtue of Art. 1 of the Second Schedule of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act. The decree of the trial Court was accordingly modified by allowing joint possession of the tenancy fields, although the decision in regard to the malik makbuza field was upheld as adverse possession had not been proved to have extended beyond 12 years from the death of the plaintiff's father and the defendant's grand-father who was the full owner. It may here be mentioned that this person, Kondumiya, died in the year 1922. A second appeal against this finding is now preferred by the plaintiff.

It is not disputed that the title both to the malik makbuza field and to the occupancy fields lies with the plaintiff-appellant, and the only question for determination is whether the ordinary principles of limitation apply or the particular article enacted in the Second Schedule of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act; in other words whether defendant's adverse possession must continue for two years or for 12 years in order to perfect his title. It may be noted that the claim that the Schedule of the Tenancy Act applied, which was successfully urged by the defendant in first appeal, was not taken into the trial Court at all, and the defendant relied on the assumption that his title to the fields was based on adverse possession since the year 1916, which he pleaded. This assertion was entirely untenable since Kodumiya did not die until 1922 and it was not disputed that he was in entire possession and enjoyment of the property until his death. Indeed the mainstay of the defendants' case was that the property was bequeathed in equal shares by Kodumiya just before his death. The trial Court considered that the plaintiff had never been out of possession at all, but the lower Appellate Court found that the evidence adduced was in no way incompatible with the defendant's claim that he was in joint possession at the time of the institution of the suit and held that he had been so since the year 1923-24. Had it not been for the existence of the special provision in the Tenancy Act in respect of limitation of the period within which a dispossessed tenant might make a claim for his tenancy, the appeal would have been dismissed in its entirety, as the lower Appellate Court confirmed the finding that the title both to the malik makbuza field and the absolute occupancy fields lay with the plaintiff and that the plaintiff failed only in respect of the latter as his claim was time barred.

The decision of the learned District Judge on the question of limitation is incorrect and I am of opinion that Art. 1 of the Second Schedule of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act has no application to the case. That article which fixes the period of limitation at two years runs :

" For possession of a holding by a person claiming to be a tenant from which he has been dispossessed or excluded from possession by any person."

The defendant-respondent relies on a decision of this Court by Mohiuddin, A.J.C., in Ganesh Prasad v. Bhawani Pershad (1), where it was held that a right to joint possession, being a lesser right than that of exclusive possession, is included in the special provision of limitation relating to the exclusive right and, therefore, the limitation prescribed by Art. 1 of Sch. II of the Tenancy Act will apply alike to claims for exclusive joint possession. With all respect I am unable to follow that decision. The plaintiff had been held all along and is admitted to be at least in joint possession of the fields. A person who is in joint possession cannot be said to have been dispossessed or excluded from possession of the holding by his co-tenant since his right of possession extends over the entire holding. It is not contended that the holding has even been divided, and the question of exclusion from a part of the holding does not, therefore, arise. Special enactments which derogate from the ordinary law must be strictly construed, and I am unable to hold that an article relating to possession or dispossession of or from a holding can include a question of a claim for joint possession or resistance of such a claim in that holding. As held by Kinkhede, A.J.C., in Amarchand Radhelal v. Ramjiwan (2), to hold that to interpret the words "possession" and "person" in such a manner as if they comprise within their scope a claim for joint possession and include a dispossession or exclusion from possession by a co-owner or co-tenant will be tantamount to holding that exclusive possession held by one co-tenant must necessarily be presumed to be adverse so as to give the other tenant who is excluded an immediate right to sue the person in possession for ejectment, which the learned Additional Judicial Commissioner held was opposed to all principles of law relating to joint property. It follows, therefore, that since Art. 1 of Sch. II of the Tenancy Act is not applicable to the circumstances of the present case, the ordinary rules regarding limitation for the plaintiff's suit must apply. The title is admittedly with the plaintiff and no attempt has been made, or indeed could be made, to support the defendant's original contention that he has been in exclusive possession of the property for 12 years. He was not even in joint possession for that time.

There is no need to go into the question whether, from the facts found, adverse possession should have been presumed or no. The judgment of the lower Appellate Court is set aside and the decree of the trial Court is restored. The defendant will pay the plaintiff's costs throughout.

D.

(1) 108 Ind. Cas. 785; A I R 1928 Nag. 178.

(2) 111 Ind. Cas. 76; A I R 1928 Nag. 96; 10 N L J 174.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 53 of 1930

August 22, 1934

MITTER AND EDGLEY, JJ.

TULSI BIBI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

FARRAK BIBI AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Court-fees—Question of—Depends on allegations in plaint—One co-sharer filing suit for partition alleging that he is in joint possession with defendant—Court-fees, payable—Partition — Several persons entitled to succeed to property—Property belonging to them jointly—Possession of one is constructive possession on behalf of all—Co-sharers.

The question as to what the proper court-fees ought to be levied on the plaint depends on the allegations which are contained in the plaint.

Where the plaintiff files a suit for partition of his share and alleges that he is in joint possession with the defendant co-sharer, the suit is a suit for partition and ad valorem court-fee need not be paid; but if the Court finds that evidence establishes that he is altogether out of possession, it can ask for ad valorem court-fees.

Where several persons become entitled on the death of the last owner to succeed to the estate of the last owner, the properties belong jointly to all of them and possession of one co-sharer is really a constructive possession on behalf of all. Bidhata Rai v. Ram Charitar Rai (1), relied on.

C. A. against the decree of the Sub-Judge, First Additional Court, 24 Parganas, dated November 27, 1929.

Mr. Shyamadas Bhattacharji, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Nagendra Nath Dutt, Satyendra Chandra Sen, Subodh Chandra Dutt and Surjya Kumar Aich, for the Respondents.

Mitter, J.—This is an appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge of 24 Parganas, dated November 27, 1929, by which he dismissed the plaintiff's suit on her failing to put in ad volorem court-fees for her share within a fortnight of the date of the judgment. The suit was one for partition and was instituted by Tulsi Bibi who is the appellant before us. It is stated in the plaint that one Golam Jalani Khan, a Peshawari Muhammadan, who was a wealthy land-holder and a brick manufacturer of Topsia in the District of 24-Parganas and was governed by the Kakezai custom of inheritance prevailing in his clan died on or about 23rd day of March 1927 leaving considerable movable and immovable properties, that upon the death of the said Golam Jalani Khan the plaintiff, now appellant, and the defendants Furokh Bibi and Najibunnessa Bibi jointly and absolutely inherited the estate left by the said Golam Jalani Khan by virtue of such special custom of inheritance prevailing in the Kakezai clan by which he was governed. She further states that the plaintiffs and the said defendants obtained joint possession of the said estate and the management thereof was entrusted in the hands of Furrokh Bibi she being the senior member of the family who from time to time paid various sums of moneys to the plaintiff and the other defendant Najibunnessa Bibi. In para. 7 she recites that the defendant Najibunnessa Bibi, in collusion with the defendant Furokh Bibi, secretly and without the knowledge of the plaintiff instituted a suit for partition being title Suit No. 107 of 1927, against the said Furokh Bibi ignoring her rights altogether. It is stated in para. 13 that Furokh Bibi is all along and still is in management of the said estate and has failed and neglected to render to the plaintiffs a true and faithful account in respect of the income thereof though repeatedly called upon by the plaintiff to do so. On these allegations she prayed for partition by metes and bounds of the estate of Golam Jalani Khan and allotment of plaintiff's one-third share to her to be enjoyed by her in severalty and absolutely. There were other reliefs which were asked for including relief for an injunction restraining the defendant from dealing with the income of the joint estate or any part thereof and from proceeding with the partition by virtue of the fraudulent compromise in title Suit No. 107 of 1927. The two preliminary issues that were tried by the Subordinate Judge were to this effect, namely (1) and (2)

"Has the necessary court-fee been paid?"

"Is the plaintiff entitled to get any relief without a prayer for recovery of possession and without setting aside the document dated April 25, 1927, alleged to have been executed between the plaintiff and defendant No. 1 as mentioned in the plaint?"

The Subordinate Judge also stated in his judgment the respective contentions of the plaintiff and defendants. The plaintiff contended that the court-fee payable was the one payable in a suit for partition, namely a sum of Rs. 15, whereas the defendants contend that as it appears that she was out of possession, the suit cannot proceed unless ad valorem court-fees are paid. After recording the objections of the parties the learned Subordinate Judge said this:

In my opinion the arguments advanced on the defendant's side are quite cogent and reasonable and I am of opinion that the plaintiff must pay ad valorem court-fees for her alleged share and that there ought to be a prayer that the alleged instrument is void in law."

Against this decision the present appeal has been brought by the plaintiff and it is contended on her behalf that the Subordinate Judge has gone wrong on the question of court-fees. The question as to what the proper court fees ought to be on the plaint depends on the allegations which are contained in the plaint, and the plaintiff states clearly in para. 3 that immediately after the death of Golam Jalani Khan when succession opened out she being the wife of Golam Jalani Khan became entitled to 1-3rd of the properties and she was in joint possession of the said estate. Reliance was placed on behalf of defendants in the Court below on an affidavit which was filed by the plaintiff's karpardaz, when the karpardaz is alleged to have stated that the plaintiff was out of possession of the properties which form the subject-matter of partition. The affidavit is printed at p. 15 of the paper book and the relevant paragraph is para. No. 16. That paragraph runs as follows:

"That in spite of repeated requests the said Furrokh Bibi is preventing your petitioner from entering into possession of the said brick field and of other properties and from sharing the management of same."

There is no allegation here that she was not in possession of any portion of the joint property including the dwelling house. We do not think that on the materials before the Court the Subordinate Judge was right in treating the suit as one when the plaintiff has admitted that she was out of possession of the joint property. In a case where several persons become entitled on the death of the last owner, to succeed to the estate of the last owner the properties belong jointly to all of them and possession of one co-sharer is really a constructive possession on behalf of all. This is a principle which has been accepted and firmly established. Reference may be made in this connection to the decision in Bidhata Rai v. Ram Charitar Rai (1) where Mookerjee, J., pointed out that the plaintiff is entitled to maintain a suit for partition if his possession to some part of the joint property is admitted or established, but if it is established that he is not in possession at all of any portion of the joint property, or that there has been a complete ouster, he must sue for recovery of possession and partition and pay ad valorem court-fees upon a plaint appropriately framed for the purpose. It is pointed in that case that in order to maintain a suit for partition the plaintiff must be in actual or constructive possession of the properties, and whether he has such possession or not, is to be determined in view of the principle that the possession of one of the co-owners, is prima facie the possession of all the co-owners, and his possession must be presumed to be in conformity with right and title as co-owner. Having regard to this accepted and well known principle we are of opinion that this suit is really a suit for partition on the materials as were before the Court. Consequently on the court-fee of Rs. 15 which were paid on the plaint the plaintiff is entitled to maintain the suit.

(1) 6 C L J 651; 12 C W N 37.

The result is that the decree of the Subordinate Judge dismissing the suit is set aside and the case is sent back to him for the determination of the other issues. It will be open to the subordinate Judge, after the evidence has been gone into, if he finds that evidence establishes that she is altogether out of possession, to ask for ad valorem court-fees. The plaintiff-appellent is entitled to get her costs in this appeal. These costs are to be realised from defendants Nos. 1 and 2. The hearing-fee is assessed at five gold mohurs.

Edgley, J.—I agree.

D. Order accordingly.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 182 of 1934

August 28, 1934

COSTELLO, J.

RASH BEHARI SANYAL—APPELLANT

versus

GOSTO BEHARI GOSWAMI—RESPONDENT

Calcutta Improvement Act (V of 1911), s. 77 (1) (b)—Property sold by widow acquired compulsorily—Claim to compensation by reversioners and purchaser—President of Tribunal deciding under s. 77 (1) (b)—Appeal, whether appeal against order relating to compensation—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), ss. 8, 7 (iv) (c).

Where a property which had been sold by a widow was compulsorily acquired and the reversioners and the purchaser claimed to take compensation of money and the President of Calcutta Improvement Tribunal decided under s 77 (1) (b) of the Calcutta Improvement Act:

Held, that the appeal from his order was not an appeal against an order relating to compensation and s. 8, Court Fees Act, was not applicable. The claimants were really asking for a declaration and some consequential relief, namely that the money should be invested instead of being handed over to the purchaser and the case fell under ss. 8, 7 (iv) (c), Court Fees Act.

Messrs. Satindra Nath Mukherjee and Satischandra Munshi, for the Appellant.

Mr. Bijan Kumar Mukherjee, for the Crown.

Order.—This matter arises in connection with an appeal sought to be filed by one Rash Behari Sanyal under s. 3 (1), Calcutta Improvement (Appeals) Act, 1911, from a decision of the President of the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal sitting alone by virtue of provisions of s. 77 (1) (b), Bengal Act V of 1911. Of the parties to the appeal the appellant and the second and third respondents had been the claimants before the President of the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal in a case in which the question at issue was whether or not a sale which had been made by a lady Bhuban Mohini Debi of certain immovable property in Calcutta, had been made by her for legal necessity and so passed an absolute right in the property to the purchaser who was Gosto Behari Goswami, the first respondent to the appeal. The property which is the subject-matter of the proceedings had been acquired by the Calcutta Improvement Trust compulsorily and a sum of Rs. 6,339-6-0 had been awarded to Gosto Behari Goswami as the owner of the property at the time when it was acquired, as compensation. The Sanyals claimed in the proceedings before the President of the Tribunal that they were the reversioners of Bhuban Mohini's husband, and therefore entitled to the property in question, or to the proceeds of the sale of it after the death of Bhuban Mohini. Whether they were so entitled or not of course depended upon the question whether the sale made by Bhuban Mohini was made for legal necessity and whether it was of such a nature as to confer on the purchaser an absolute interest or merely an interest for the duration of life of Bhuban Mohini.

The claimants in the proceedings before the President of the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal, asked for a declaration that they were in law the reversioners, and consequently that the amount of the compensation money ought not to be handed over to Gosto Behari Goswami, but should be invested by the President of the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal under the provisions of s. 32, Land Acquisition Act, 1894. When the appeal was lodged a difference arose between the officer whose duty it is to see that the proper Court-fee was paid, and the Advocate for the appellant upon the question of what the amount of that fee ought to be. The matter was then put before the Registrar of the Court in his capacity as Taxing Officer, and he was of opinion that it was of such general importance that he ought to refer it for the decision of the Chief Justice under the provisions of s. 5, Court Fees Act, 1870. Under the provisions of this section it was open to the Chief Justice to decide a matter of this kind himself or to appoint another Judge of the Court in that behalf. It is in that way that the matter comes before me for final decision.

The officer concerned with the question of court-fees who is referred to in Letter of Reference by the Registrar as the Stamp Reporter, seems to have taken the view that the question of the amount of the fee to be paid on the filing of this appeal was affected by the terms of s. 8, Court Fees Act. That section provides that the amount of the fee payable under the Act on a memorandum of appeal against an order relating to compensation under any Act for the time being in force for the acquisition of land for public purposes shall be computed according to the difference between the amount awarded and the amount claimed by the appellant. I may say at once that, in my opinion, this is not a case of an appeal against an order relating to compensation under any Act. The appeal is really against the decision of the President of the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal whereby he held that the sale by Bhuban Mohini was made for legal necessity, and therefore Gosto Behari Goswami had acquired an absolute interest in the property and so was entitled to retain for his own use the whole of the compensation money which had been awarded, and the Sanyals had no interest whatever in that money. Accordingly the President had declined to invest the money under the provisions of s. 32 and was prepared to hand it over in its entirety to Gosto Behari Goswami. If it were held that the sale by Bhuban Mohini had only resulted in a transfer of a Hindu widow's interest, the position would seem to be that the money ought to be invested so that the purchaser of the property would enjoy the interest accruing thereon, for the period of life of Bhuban Mohini, and after that the principal sum would revert to the Sanyals. It is quite clear, in my opinion that the dispute between the Sanyals and Gosto Behari Goswami cannot in any sense be properly said to be concerned with the amount of compensation payable by reason of the compulsory acquisition of the property owned by Bhuban Mohini. The Sanyals in the proceedings before the President of the Improvement Tribunal were really asking for a declaration and some consequential relief, namely that the money should be invested instead of being handed over to Goswami. In that view of the matter this would seem to be one of that unsatisfactory class of cases, which fall within the provisions of s. 7, sub-s. (iv) (c) where the amount of fee payable is more or less left to the discretion of the plaintiff himself, in that the section provides that in suits brought to obtain a declaratory decree or order, where consequential relief is prayed, "the plaintiff shall state the amount at which he values the relief sought." This provision has recently been discussed by a Full Bench of this Court in Narayanganj Central Co-operative Sale and Supply Society, Ltd. v. Maulvi Mafizuddin Ahmed (1).

Dr. Mukherjee who appears on behalf of the Crown in the matter now before me, was disposed to agree that it would not be easy to contend that in the present circumstances the matter is other than one within the ambit of the provisions of s. 7 (iv) (c) to which I have referred. But on the other hand the learned Advocate appearing for the appellant has conceded that the matter is one which may well be treated as falling within the provisions of Sch. II, Art. 17 (iii), Court Fees Act, which provides that a memorandum of appeal in connection with a suit to obtain a declaratory decree when no consequential relief is prayed, must bear a definite fee of Rs. 20. One has only to put the provisions of s. 7 (iv) (c) and those of Sch. II, Art. 17 (iii) in juxtaposition to show how unsatisfactory and anomalous some of the provisions of the Court Fees Act are. I pointed out in the judgment which I gave in the Full Bench case already referred to, that it seems desirable that the legislature should put the provisions of this Act into a more satisfactory shape. If the property acquired by the Improvement Trust had not been sold by Bhuban Mohini, it is obvious that the only question which could have been agitated by the Sanyals was the question whether or not they were in fact the reversioners.

Upon the exact phraseology of s. 7 (iv) (c) and that of Sch. II, Art. 17, (iii) respectively, I should be disposed to hold that this is a case where subject to the qualifications mentioned in the Full Bench case, the Sanyals as claimants and now as appellants could have assigned an arbitrary value to the proceedings. That is a highly unsatisfactory state of affairs for the reasons I gave in my judgment in the Full Bench case. In the present instance, however, having regard to the very reasonable and proper attitude taken on behalf of the appellant, I think the answer to the Reference should be that the court-fee to be paid on the memorandum of appeal is the sum of Rs. 20 as provided for in Sch. II, Art. 17 (iii), Court Fees Act, both sides having agreed that Sch II, Art. 17 (vi). will not apply. The appellants have already paid a fee of Rs. 15. The deficit of Rs. 5 must be put in within a week.

D. Reference answered.

(1) 149 Ind. Cas. 3; A I R 1934 Cal. 448; 6 R C 536; 59 C L J 233; 38 C W N 589; 61 C 796.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 263 of 1929

May 19, 1934

BRIDE AND DIN MOHAMMAD, JJ.

SECRETARY OF STATE—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

AKBAR SHAH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VII, r. 6—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 19—Plea of limitation resting on certain acknowledgment taken for first time at time of argument—Whether can be allowed—Evidence—Admission—Previous statement by party, when can be legal evidence.

When a plaintiff deliberately takes up a definite position as to when the cause of action arose, he cannot be allowed to shift his ground later on, when he finds that position untenable. Thus the plaintiff cannot be allowed to take up a new plea of limitation resting on certain acknowledgment at the stage of arguments, when he finds his original position untenable. To adopt such a course is unfair, as the defendant has no notice either of the plea or of the statements in certain documents on which reliance is sought to be placed and he cannot, therefore, be reasonably expected to meet the plea. Pancham v. Ansar Hussain (2), relied on. [p. 822, col. 2.]

A previous statement made by a party cannot be made legal evidence in the case and used against him as an admission by merely filing an attested copy of that statement, without putting it to the party concerned. Muharram Ali v. Barkat Ali (6) referred to.

F. C. A. from a decree of the Senior Sub-Judge, Rawalpindi, dated October 30, 1928.

Messrs. Des Raj Sawhney and M. A. Majid, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Dev Raj Sawhney and Lakshmi Narayana Pandit, for the Respondent.

Bhide, J.—The plaintiff in this case is one Haji Akbar, Shaha contractor, who undertook to construct certain blocks of buildings at Cliffden and Willow Bank in Murree for the Army Department. The contract was entered into on May 27, 1920, and a part of the work was carried out by August 1920, but in that month, the plaintiff (according to his allegations in the plaint) had to postpone the work owing to his religious engagements and leave Murree. In his absence the military authorities got the rest of the work carried out by another contractor without giving him due notice. The plaintiff had been paid Rs. 40,485-11-0, for blocks Nos. 2 to 7 and 12 at Cliffden before he left and he was satisfied with this payment, but as the Army Department refused to pay him for the rest of the work, he instituted the present suit against the Secretary of State for India in Council on July 29, 1925, for recovery of the following amounts:

(a) Rs. 23,000 on account of the construction of Blocks Nos. 1, 8, 10 and 11 at Cliffden and Blocks Nos. 3 and 4 at Willow Bank; (b) Rs. 7,000 price of the materials left on the spot which were utilised by the contractor who succeeded the plaintiff with the consent of the Military Authorities; (c) Rs. 3,000 on account of extra water charges incurred by the plaintiff owing to scarcity of water; (d) Rs. 1,585-8-3 due to plaintiff as shown in ledger account of the plaintiff, kept by the Military Authorities and (e) Rs. 6,780 on account of security deposit:

Total: Rs. 46,365-8-3.

The defendant pleaded that the plaintiff joined the Hijrat movement and abandoned the work on August 8, 1920, without notice. The plaintiff was sent a telegram that unless he returned to the work by August 15, his contract would be cancelled, final measurements would be taken and other arrangements made to carry out the work. The plaintiff, however, failed to appear and in fact communicated that owing to the Hijrat movement and his religious views he could not complete the work. The work was accordingly given to another contractor and completed by him. When final measurements were taken it was discovered that the work done by the plaintiff on Blocks Nos. 2 to 7 and 12 was worth Rs. 17,633-13-0 only while he had been paid Rs. 40,485-11-0 and that he had been overpaid to the extent of Rs. 22,851. The defendant admitted that the following amounts were due to the plaintiff, but claimed to have adjusted them against this over-payment:

"(a) Rs. 13,398-10-0 for blocks Nos. 1, 8, 10 and 11 at Cliffden and Nos. 3 and 4 at Willow Bank (the plaint recited that this sum was due for blocks Nos. 1, 4, 8, 10 and 11 at Cliffden and block No. 3 at Willow Bank, but it was admitted before us that this was a mistake and that block No. 4 referred to in connection with this item was at Willow Bank and not at Cliffden). (b) Rs. 1,585-8-3 due on the ledger account (c) Rs. 540 on account of extra water charges incurred by the plaintiff. (d) Rs. 6,780 security deposit.

As regards the materials alleged to have been left on the spot, it was pleaded the plaintiff had been given credit for the same in the final bills. The defendant alleged that a sum of Rs. 825-7-1 was due from the plaintiff after giving him credit for the above amounts as against the over-payment and further claimed damages to the extent of Rs. 18,521 on account of loss sustained by him owing to breach of the contract by the plaintiff. Lastly it was also pleaded that the cause of action, if any, arose in August 1920, and the present suit instituted in July 1925 was barred by time. A number of issues were framed by the Court and after a protracted trial the plaintiff was awarded a decree for Rs. 18,681-6-0 consisting of the following items:

"(a) Rs. 8,155-15-0 on account of blocks Nos 8, 10 and 11 at Cliffden and 4 at Willow Bank. (b) Rs. 1,585-8-0 on the ledger account. (c) Rs. 1,619-13-0 on account of materials left by the plaintiff on the site, (d) Rs. 510 on account of extra water charges. (e) Rs. 6,780 on account of security deposit."

The counter-claim of the defendant was dismissed. From this decision defendant has appealed and the plaintiff has filed cross-objections with respect to certain items disallowed by the trial Court. It may be stated at the outset that the defendant's claim to damages is not being pressed in appeal and that the learned Counsel for the plaintiff also conceded in respect of the cross-objections that there was no evidence on the record to sustain his claim in respect of the materials and water charges for any sum in excess of the amounts allowed by the trial Court. The amounts due in respect of the ledger account and the security deposit are not in dispute. As regards the amount due in respect of blocks Nos. 1, 8, 10 and 11 at Cliffden and Nos. 3 and 4 at Willow Bank for which the plaintiff originally claimed Rs. 28,000, the plaintiff has now limited his demand to the sum which was admitted by the defendant to have been due for these blocks, viz., Rs. 13,398-10-0, and has only claimed in the cross-objections the difference between this amount and the amount allowed by the trial Court for the same. It will appear from the above that the two main points on which the decision of this appeal and the cross-objections will depend are:

"(a) Whether there had been an overpayment of Rs 22,851-14-0 in respect of blocks Nos. 2 to 7 and 12 as alleged by the defendant. (b) Whether the plaintiff's suit was barred with respect to all or any of the items claimed".

As to the first point, the defendant relies on the final measurements taken by the defendant's officers when the plaintiff abandoned the work and failed to appear in response to the telegram sent to him. According to the defendant these measurements are binding on the plaintiff. There is no doubt that according to these final measurements there was an overpayment of Rs. 22,851-14-0, but on behalf of the plaintiff, it is contended that these final measurements are wholly unreliable and that he is not bound by them as none of the clauses relied on by the defendant are applicable to the circumstances of the case. In order to determine this question it is first necessary to see who broke the contract and which of the clauses of the contract are applicable. According to the plaintiff he had merely postponed the work for a few days owing to his religious engagements and it was the defendant who broke the contract by giving the work to another contractor in his absence. This contention I have no hesitation in rejecting. (His Lordship went through the evidence and proceeded). It is significant that the present suit was not instituted till five years later and that the plaintiff has not ventured to claim any damages for the alleged breach of contract on the part of the defendant. He has contended himself with claiming only the price of the work actually done by him and of the materials left on the spot.

It seems to me perfectly clear from the above facts that it was the plaintiff who broke the contract by abandoning the work and in the circumstances the defendant was of course fully justified in putting an end to the contract and giving it over to another contractor (vide s. 39, Contract Act). According to the defendant, cl. (3) of the contract was applicable and action having been taken under sub-cl. (c) thereof the plaintiff was not entitled to recover any amount in excess of what was certified by the Assistant Commanding Royal Engineer to be due to him. But the opening words of cl. (3) show that it is applicable only when the "contractor shall have rendered himself liable to pay compensation amounting to the whole of his security deposit" under any clause or clauses of the contracts (vide Ex. P-18 at pp. 90-104 of the Printed Record). We have therefore to turn to the other clauses of the cantract to see whether this condition is fulfilled. The learned Counsel for the defendant was unable to point out any clause in the contract applicable to the circumstances of the case under which the contractor had rendered himself liable to pay compensation amounting to the whole of his security. Strange as it may appear, there is no distinct clause in the contract providing for the consequences of abandonment of work; but we must take the contract as it stands. The learned Counsel for the defendant-appellant referred to cls. 2 and 6, but neither of these clauses appears to be applicable. Clause (2) deals with delay in execution of the work, while cl. (6) refers to the action to be taken on the completion of the work. Reference was also made to the final portion of the plaintiff's own tender, but this only says that the contractor shall abide by the conditions of the contract and forfeit his security in default thereof. What cl. (3) requires is that the contractor should have rendered himself liable to compensation amounting to the whole of his security under some clause or clauses of the contract before action is taken under any of the sub-clauses thereof. I am unable to see that this condition can be said to have been fulfilled in this case. The amount due to the plaintiff must therefore be determined on the evidence on the record and the final measurements taken by the defendant's officers or the amount certified by them as due to the plaintiff cannot be held to conclude the matter. (After discussion of the evidence his Lordship concluded). I would accordingly hold that, the evidence on the record does not establish the alleged overpayment of Rs. 22,851 in respect of blocks Nos. 2 to 7 and 12.

The second point for decision is that of limitation. I have found above that it was the plaintiff who broke the contract when he abandoned the work on August 6, 1920. His cause of action for the price of the work done by him and for the price of the materials alleged to have been wrongfully appropriated by the defendant therefore arose on that date. So far as the work is concerned, Art. 56, Limitation Act, would seem to apply, while the claim for the price of the materials would appear to be governed by Art. 48. In either case the period of limitation would be three years and the present suit instituted in July 1925, would prima facie be barred. The plaintiff alleged that it was the defendant who broke the contract. Even on this basis, Art. 115 would apply and the period of limitation would again be three years. The plaintiff alleged in the plaint that the cause of action arose in September 1922 when the construction of work was completed. But the work was completed not by him, but by another contractor and no attempt was made before us by the learned Counsel for the plaintiff to maintain the position taken up in the plaint.

It was, however, contended that although the cause of action arose in August 1920, and the period of limitation was only three years, it was kept alive by subsequent "acknowledgments" on the part of the defendant but no such plea appears to have been taken or put in issue. The defendant had distinctly pleaded in para. 13 of the written statement of January 25, 1926, that the cause of action, if any, arose in August 1920, and the suit was barred. But the plaintiff in his replication merely denied the correctness of this defence. He did not plead that even if the cause of action arose in August 1920, it was kept alive by any subsequent acknowledgments falling within the purview of s. 19, Limitation Act. The plaintiff did not produce any such acknowledgments even in the course of evidence and it was only at the last stage in the course of arguments before the learned Judge of the trial Court that an attempt was made to rely on statements appearing in certain documents produced by the defendant as acknowledgments for the purpose of saving limitation. Now, the defendant had no notice at all that plaintiff was going to rely on any statements in these documents for this purpose and the Counsel for the defendant rightly objected to such a plea, which depends on questions of fact, being entertained at the last stage during the course of arguments. The learned Judge, however, has entertained this plea on the ground that the defendant had also raised certain pleas at a last stage. But this was hardly any ground for entertaining new plea involving questions of fact for the first time in the arguments. The proper course in my opinion would have been to reject such pleas on either side.

Order VII, r. 6, Civil Procedure Code, requires that when a suit is instituted after the expiration of the period of the law of limitation, the plaint shall show the ground upon which exemption from such law is claimed. In the present case, plaintiff's suit was based on an alleged breach of contract on behalf of the defendant and it is conceded before me that the period of limitation for such a suit is three years according to Art. 115, Limitation Act: see Muhammad Ghasita v. Siraj-ud-din (1). The suit having been instituted more than three years after the cause of action arose in August 1920, was prima facie barred by time. It was, therefore, incumbent on the plaintiff to state in the plaint even on the facts as alleged by him how the suit was within time, but he failed to do so. He no doubt stated that the cause of action arose when the work was completed in September 1922, but that position was wholly untenable and in my opinion, that statement could not have been made in "good faith". I do not think a plaintiff can be allowed to evade the clear provisions of O. VII, r. 6, Civil Procedure Code, by making an incorrect statement of this kind. Moreover, the defendant had pleaded in reply that the cause of action arose in August 1920, but the plaintiff merely contended himself with denying the correctness of the defendant's plea. This can only be interpreted to mean that he stuck to his position that the cause of action arose when the work was completed in September, 1922, but that he had no other defence if it arose in August 1920, as alleged by the defendant. In Pancham v. Ansar Hussain (2), it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that when a plaintiff deliberately takes up a definite position as to when the cause of action arose, he cannot be allowed to shift his ground later on, when he finds that position untenable. In my opinion the facts of the present case are analogous and the plaintiff could not be allowed to take up a new plea at the stage of arguments when he found his original position untenable. To adopt such a course would be obviously unfair as the defendant had no notice either of the plea or of the statements in certain documents on which reliance was sought to be placed and he could not, therefore, be reasonably expected to meet the plea.

On the above findings the plaintiff's plea as regards the alleged acknowldgment must be ruled out altogether. I may, however, add that even if the plea were entertainable, none of the documents relied on before the trial Court appears to me to contain any such acknowledgment as would bring the suit within time under s. 19, Limitation Act. The documents so relied on are mentioned in Question B in the judgment of the learned Senior Subordinate Judge (vide p. 65 of the printed record) and these are Exs. P-10, P-11, P-12, P-13, P-14, P-16 and Ex. D. W. No. 3/1. Exhibits P-10, P-12, P-13, P-14 and P-16 do not contain any acknowledgment but on the contrary require the plaintiff to pay certain amounts claimed by the defendant. Exhibit P-11 and D. W. No. 3-1 also do not appear to contain any definite "ackowledgment" of a subsisting liability in respect of the plaintiff's present claim. These were, moreover, written after the expiry of three years since the cause of action arose in August 1920, and could, therefore, be of no avail as acknowledgments under s. 19, Limitation Act. The learned Counsel for the plaintiff advanced a feeble argument in the end that limitation was saved by s. 13, Limitation Act, as the Secretary of State for India in Council against whom the suit is instituted resides out of British India. As to this it need only be pointed out that the suit is not against the Secretary of State or the Members of his Council in their personal capacities but according to s. 79, Civil Procedure Code every suit against the Government has to be instituted in this form. There is no force in this contention.

(1) 66 Ind. Cas. 490; A I R 1922 Lah. 198; 2 Lah 376.

(2) 39 Ind. Cas. 650; A I R 1926 P C 85; 53 I A 187; 48 A 457; 24 A L J 736; (1926) M W N 520; 24 L W 241; 31 C W N 324 (P C).

It would appear from the above that the plaintiff's claim for work done as well as materials must be held to be time-barred. There is, however, one item claimed by the plaintiff, viz., the security deposit of Rs. 6,780, to which a different period of limitation applies, viz., that laid down in Art. 145. According to this article the period of limitation in respect of this item would be 30 years. It was conceded before us that the suit with respect to this item is within time, but it was urged that the defendant was entitled to forfeit the security and had done so. This was not, however, the plea taken up by the defendant. The defendant had merely pleaded that the security deposit was duly deducted from the overpayment of Rs. 22,851. But as it has been found above that the alleged overpayment is not proved, plaintiff must be held to be entitled to a refund of this item. I would accordingly accept this appeal in part and reduce the amount decreed in favour of the plaintiff to Rs. 6,780 only. The cross-objections fail and are hereby dismissed. As regards costs neither side seems to have taken the trouble to put forward its case properly and elucidate all the necessary facts. I would therefore leave the parties to bear their costs throughout.

Din Mohammad, J.—I concur in the judgment recorded and the decree passed by my learned brother Bhide, J. Order VII, r. 6, Civil Procedure Code, explicitly provides that where the suit is instituted after the expiration of the period prescribed by the Law of Limitation, the plaint shall show the ground upon which exemption from such law is claimed. This rule was interpreted as long ago as 1914 by a Division Bench of the Chief Court, Punjab, in Gobinda Mal v. Santa (3), in which the facts were very similar to the facts of the present case. Shah Din, J, who delivered the judgment with the concurrence of Beadon, J., discussed the previous authorities on the point and decided that under O. VII, r. 6, the plaintiffs were bound to show in the plaint the grounds upon which exemption from the Law of Limitation was claimed and as there was no mention in the plaint of the alleged acknowledgment of liability by the defendants, the plaintiffs could not be allowed to rely on it. This judgment was followed by a Division Bench of the High Court Lahore in Uttam Chand v. Thakar Devi (4), Scott-Smith, J., who delivered the judgment with the concurrence of Campbell, J., observed that having regard to the provisions of O. VII, r. 6, Civil Procedure Code, the plaintiff could not be allowed to set up a ground of exemption for the first time in appeal. It would not be fair to the defendant to allow the plaintiff an opportunity of proving that there had been an acknowledgment as now alleged. The learned Counsel for the respondents relied on Parmeshri Das v. Fakiria (5), which lays down that if the plaintiff mentions one ground of exemption in the plaint, he is not debarred by the provisions of O. VII, r. 6, from taking another and an inconsistent ground to get over the bar of limitation and could consequently rely upon the acknowledgment made in the pleas of the previous case. Scott-Smith, J. was one of the Judges who decided this Letters Patent Appeal and as has been pointed out above, he was also a member of the Bench that decided Uttam Chand v. Thakar Devi (4). He himself distinguished the case of Parmeshri Das v. Fakiria (5), on the ground that while there a ground of exemption was mentioned in the plaint, in Uttam Chand v. Thakar Devi (4), no ground of exemption from the Law of Limitation at all was claimed in the plaint. The learned Judges observed that it was clear to them that the plaintiff never intended to set up any acknowledgment as entiting him to an exemption from that law. In this case also as would appear from the plaint neither any exemption was specifically pleaded nor does it appear that the suit as framed contemplated any exemption from the law of limitation. The case therefore is on all fours with Uttam Chand v. Thakar Devi (4), and the plaintiff cannot be allowed to take advantage of any acknowledgment whatsoever.

(3) 26 Ind. Cas. 441; A I R 1914 Lah. 337; 83 P R 1914; 232 P L R 1915.

(4) 69 Ind. Cas. 419; A I R 1922 Lah. 39; 3 Lah. 233; 4 Lah. L J 190.

(5) 60 Ind. Cas. 772; A I R 1922 Lah. 230; 2 Lah. 13; 3 Lah. L J 22.

My learned brother has however for his satisfaction scrutinised all those documents which were intended to be relied on by the plaintiff for the purpose of s. 19, Limitation Act, and I entirely agree with him in his finding that in none of those documents any such words have been used which would amount to an acknowledgment of a subsisting liability within the meaning of s. 19. Most of the statements relied on are mere official communications between the Military Authorities inter se and are nothing more than expressions of opinions which were held by one officer and dissented from by another. Moreover, it has not even been established that the persons responsible for those opinions were in any way authorized to burden the Secretary of State with their so-called admissions. A party cannot be permitted to take his opponent by surprise and in these circumstances I am definitely of opinion that no such statements could be availed of at the final stage of the case without the plaintiff ever having intended to use them as acknowledgements of without any opportunity having been given to the defendants to explain what they really conveyed. It is a well settled law that no such grounds of objection can be allowed to be entertained at the fag end of a case as cannot be decided upon the record before the Court.

Even in the case of the parties' admissions, a Bench of this Court laid down in Muharram Ali v. Barkat Ali (6), that a previous statement made by a party cannot be made legal evidence in the case and used against him as an admission by merely filing an attested copy of that statement, without putting it to the party concerned. In the case before us, although the defendant examined Sub-Contractors Lys and Mr. Richards, not one question was put to either of them to explain what these words signified which he had employed in his official correspondence. It is quite possible that in every case they were in a position to offer a satisfactory explanation or to wash away the apparent effect of the so-called admissions attributed to them. I agree therefore that the plaintiff is only entitled to the refund of his security, and to no more. As regards costs also, I agree that the parties should bear there own costs.

D. Order accordingly.

(6) 125 Ind. Cas. 886; A I R 1930 Lah. 695; 12 Lah. 285; Ind. Rul. (1930) Lah. 662.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 121 of 1933
February 28, 1935
NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

BABOO SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
RAM MANOHAR AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 142—Applicability — Adverse possession — Dispossession of plaintiff—Considerations for deciding the question—Property not capable of enjoyment in possession of one co-sharer—Conduct of vendees from other co-sharers—Co-sharers—Sale by some co-sharers—Co-sharer in possession, if can be presumed to know contents of deed—Possession of one—Whether should be considered to be constructive possession of others—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 100—Second appeal—Finding of fact arrived at in complete disregard of legal questions involved — Whether can be interfered with in second appeal.

Where property in dispute consists of lands actually cultivated or of house capable of actual occupation and the plaintiff sues for possession of such property on the allegation that he was dispossessed by the defendant, Art. 142 is undoubtedly applicable and the plaintiff must show that his dispossession occurred within twelve years before the institution of the suit. But where the property is of such a nature that it is not capable of actual physical possession or where the property, though capable of physical possession, is in the occupation of one through whom the plaintiff can be in constructive possession, different considerations apply. In considering the question whether the plaintiff was dispossessed within twelve years or whether his possession discontinued within twelve years, the nature of the property and the position of those actually occupying it, if it is capable of actual occupation, must be taken into consideration.

A co-sharer cannot be presumed to know the contents of a registered document, executed by persons who impliedly denied his title by executing the document.

Held, that where the property (a tank) and its appurtenances are not capable of enjoyment and there is no suggestion that the defendants so conducted themselves in relation to the tank purchased by them as to amount to the plaintiff's dispossession, the plaintiff's possession must be taken to have continued till the defendants' possession became adverse as regards continuity and extent.

In the case of co-sharers possession of any one of them must be considered to be constructive possession of all unless the person in actual possession ousted his co-sharers in denial of their rights.

Where the finding of the lower Appellate Court is so worded as to amount to a finding of fact but it has been arrived at in complete disregard of the legal propositions involved in the consideration of the question; the finding is vitiated by errors of law and can be interfered with in second appeal.

S. C. A. from the decision of the Second Additional Sub-Judge of Allahabad, dated October 18, 1932.

Messrs. Damodar Das, Hyder Mehdi and Zafar Mehdi, for the Appellant.

Mr. Shiva Prasad Sinha, for the Respondents.

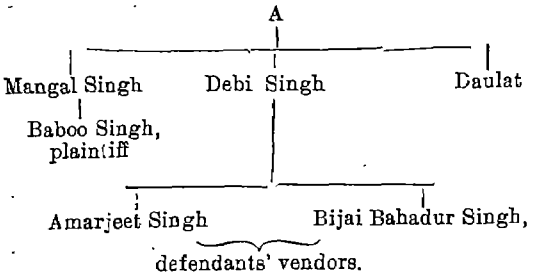
Judgment.—This appeal has arisen from a suit brought by the appellant for a declaration of his right to half of the tank in dispute and in the alternative for possession. Both the Courts below dismissed the suit as barred by limitation.

The plaintiff is one Baboo Singh. The defendants are vendees from Amarjeet Singh and Bijai Bahadur Singh under a sale-deed, dated April 27, 1917. The relationship between the plaintiff Baboo Singh and the defendants' vendors will appear from the following pedigree:—



It has been found by both the Courts below that the tank in dispute (No. 708 old and 851 new) was purchased at an auction by Daulat, who acted in that transaction on behalf of himself and his two brothers. Daulat died issueless and his interest devolved upon his two brothers either by survivorship or by inheritance, a point which is not material, as in either case after the death of Daulat Singh the plaintiff's father and the father of the defendants' vendors were co-sharers. Plaintiff succeeded to the interest of his father, while the defendants' vendors succeeded to the interest of their father. On these facts there can be no doubt that the plaintiff and the defendant's vendors were co-sharers. There was controversy in the lower Court as to whether Baboo Singh, was in actual enjoyment of the tank or whether Amarjeet Singh and Bijai Bahadur Singh alone were in possession. All of them being co-sharers, possession of any one of them must be considered to be constructive possession of all unless the person in actual possession ousted his co-sharers in denial of their rights. There is no suggestion either in the pleadings or evidence that before the sale-deed, dated April 27, 1917, Baboo Singh's right was denied by the defendants' vendors or that Baboo Singh was in any manner ousted from the constructive possession which he must be deemed to have had. On the question of limitation there is another important point which both the lower Courts have overlooked and which, in my opinion, has a very important bearing on that point. The property in dispute is a tank with a belt of parti land round about it. It is not suggested in evidence, nor is there any finding in the judgments of the lower Courts, that the tank and the belt of land surrounding it were capable of actual enjoyment. The tank does not appear to be one of those hollow lands which can be cultivated in particular seasons of the years or that it yields any crop of any kind, such as singhara. There is also no suggestion that it yielded any fish which could be the source of income to the owners of the tank. The sale-deed obtained by the defendants describes the property conveyed thereby as a tank measuring 4 bighas 17 biswas with three babool trees standing on its bhita. I have mentioned these facts in detail to show that the rightful owner cannot be considered to be out of possession only because he is not able to establish by evidence definite acts of possession. In such cases possession must follow title.

First of all the lower Courts addressed themselves to the question whether Arts. 142 or 144 applies. They held that having regard to the allegations contained in the plaint Art. 142 is the proper Article to apply. Having arrived at that conclusion, they addressed themselves to the further question as to whether the plaintiff established his possession within limitation, that is to say, whether the plaintiff had proved such acts of possession as could be considered to save limitation. As already stated, in this connection they completely ignored the fact that the property is not one in respect of which the plaintiff, or for the matter of that the defendants' vendors, could have exercised any definite acts of possession. They also overlooked the fact that Baboo Singh and the vendors of the defendants being co-sharers, possession of one co-sharer is constructive possession of all. This is not the first case which has recently come to my notice in which Subordinate Courts have viewed Art. 142, Limitation Act, in such a manner as to make it almost impossible for a plaintiff to establish his possession within limitation in cases in which the plaintiff may well be considered to be in constructive possession through others or his possession must follow his title having regard to the nature of the property. Where property in dispute consists of lands actually cultivated or of house capable of actual occupation and the plaintiff sues for possession of such property on the allegation that he was dispossessed by the defendant, Art. 142 is undoubtedly applicable and the plaintiff must show that his dispossession occurred within twelve years before the institution of the suit. In such a case it may be necessary for him to adduce evidence showing when his own possession ceased and that of the defendant or of any other trespasser began. But where the property is of such a nature that it is not capable of actual physical possession or where the property, though capable of physical possession, is in the occupation of one through whom the plaintiff can be in constructive possession, different considerations obviously apply. A man may be in possession of his property without actually occupying it. In considering, therefore, the question whether the plaintiff was dispossessed within twelve years or whether his possession discontinued within twelve years the nature of the property and the position of those actually occupying it, if it is capable of actual occupation, must be taken into consideration. As already stated, in the present case the plaintiff must be deemed to have been in constructive possession of the tank in dispute, even assuming the vendors of the defendants, who were his co-sharers, were alone in possession and the tank was capable of actual possession. The plaintiff's title was never denied expressly or by necessary implication till April 27, 1917, when the defendants obtained a sale-deed from the plaintiff's co-sharers. The sale-deed is a registered document, but the plaintiff cannot be considered to have obtained knowledge of its contents only because it was registered. A subsequent transferee or any other person having occasion to deal with any property may be fixed with notice of a prior registered instrument because he is put to inquiry and is expected to inspect the Registration Office; but a co-sharer cannot be presumed to know the contents of a registered document, executed by persons who impliedly denied his title by executing the document. It is obviously impossible to expect that every owner of property must periodically inspect the Registration Office to find if any other person has dealt with his property adversely. At the same time if the vendee takes possession of the vended property in a manner which is calculated to give clear notice, to the person whose title is affected by the sale, that his right is denied and he is excluded, the vendee's possession will be adverse. Applying this rule to the present case, if the defendants took possession of the tank and the belt of land around it in a manner amounting to a denial of the plaintiff's right and exclusion of his possession as it was before the sale, the plaintiff's constructive possession terminated, and if the suit was brought more than twelve years after the date of such dispossession or discontinuance of possession, the suit would be undoubtedly barred. There is no suggestion in the judgments of the lower Courts that the defendants so conducted themselves in relation to the tank purchased by them as to amount to the plaintiff's dispossession. As already mentioned, the tank and its appurtenance were not capable of enjoyment. The plaintiff's possession must be taken to have continued till the defendants' possession became adverse as regards continuity and extent.

The plaintiff's case is that in 1928, there was a dispute between the parties about the cutting of babool trees, and the defendants then set up their exclusive right and possession which necessitated the present declaratory suit. To be on the safe side the plaintiff claimed possession in the alternative. I do not consider that these allegations attract the application of Art. 142, Indian Limitation Act. If the question were of importance, I would apply Art. 141 to a case of this kind. But as in my opinion it makes no difference, having regard to the circumstances of the case, whether Art. 142 or Art. 144 be applied, I have approached the case as if Art. 142 is applicable. If the plaintiff's allegation is true, his dispossession occurred in 1928. If it is not true, and it is not suggested by the defendants that there was any occasion before 1928 when the parties could come in conflict, plaintiff's possession must be inferred from his title which was unaffected by anything taking place before or after the sale-deed of 1917. The property being what it is, his possession followed title. In all these circumstances, I am clearly of opinion that the lower Courts have arrived at an incorrect finding in holding that the plaintiff failed to establish his possession within limitation.

The learned Advocate for the appellant strongly pressed upon me the view that the finding of the lower Appellate Court is one of fact and is conclusive in second appeal. It is true that the conclusion is so worded as to amount to a finding of fact but it has been arrived at in complete disregard of the legal propositions which are involved in the consideration of the question and which I have indicated above. In my opinion the finding is vitiated by errors of law and it is open to me to interfere with it in second appeal. This is, of course, on the assumption that Art. 142, is applicable. If Art. 144 be applied the finding which does not affirm defendants' adverse possession is beside the mark.

One of the pleas put forward by the defendant-respondents was that the plaintiff is not entitled to possession except on payment of compensation for improvements made by them. This plea was embodied in the third issue framed by the trial Court which found that the defendants spent Rs. 288, in re-digging the tank. That Court did not, however, express any opinion as to whether the defendants are entitled to half of that amount from the plaintiff. The lower Appellate Court disposed of the case on the question of limitation without entering into any other question arising in the case. It is unnecessary to make any further enquiry on this point as Mr. Panna Lal, the learned Advocate for the appellant, expresses his client's readiness to contribute half of the sum spent by the defendants.

The result is that I declare the plaintiff's suit to be in time and pass a decree for joint possession in respect of half of the tank. As the defendants' claim to compensation has been conceded, I direct that parties should pay their own costs in all the Courts. The defendants shall be entitled to recover Rs. 144 by execution of decree.

N. B.—Leave to appeal under the Letters Patent is granted.

N. Decree passed.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal from Appellate Decree No. 383 of 1931

March 8, 1935

MOHAMMAD NOOR AND VARMA, JJ.

MAHINDRA OJHA—DEFENDANT —APPELLANT

versus

SITARAM OJHA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT

Hindu Law—Joint family—Mitakshara—Undivided member, if can transfer his share—Alienation—Statement that transferor has a specific share—Whether constitutes separation—Partition.

A member of a joint Mitakshara family cannot make a transfer of his undivided share in the ancestral estate for his own benefit.

Although from statements of separation in the deed of transfer itself an inference of fact may be drawn that there was a partition, yet simply a statement in the deed that the transferor has a specific share will not constitute separation as a matter of law.

It cannot be said that if an undivided member of a family transfers his share by will or inter vivos, the transfer is valid simply because he specifies the share. Jumma Ram v Mansab Rai (1), explained and dissented from, Amar Dayal Singh v. Har Pershad Sahu (2) and Balgobind Das v. Narain Lal (3), referred to.

A. from a decision of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Shahabad, dated September 19, 1930, affirming that of the Munsif, Second Court Buxar, dated July 31, 1928.

Mr. D. N. Varma, for the Appellant.

Mr. B. P. Sinha, for the Respondent.

Mohammad Noor, J.—The suit out of which this second appeal arises was instituted by the plaintiff-respondent for a declaration that a deed of gift said to have been executed by his uncle Radha Prasad Ojha in favour of the defendant is not genuine and (is) null and void. It was alleged by the plaintiff that he and his deceased uncle Radha Prasad Ojha were members of a joint Hindu family and therefore even if the deed in question was genuine, the donor was not competent to make a gift of his undivided share in favour of the defendant. The defence was that the deed was genuine and that the uncle and the nephew had separated in Kartik 1334 (corresponding to 1926). In support of separation the defendant produced a certain document which has been marked as Ex. G in the suit. The trial Court at first refused to take this document into evidence, and on other evidence adduced before it decreed the suit. The defendant appealed, and the learned Subordinate Judge remanded the case with an order that the document in question be taken into evidence for the limited purpose of proving partition, but not for the purpose of proving what particular properties were allotted to each co-sharer. This was done and as I have said the document was marked as Ex. G in the case, but the learned Munsif again decreed the suit holding that the deed of gift was suspicious and that it was not properly attested as the witnesses to the deed did not speak of its having been executed in their presence. He further held that there was no partition between the plaintiff and his uncle and that Ex. G was not genuine.

There was again an appeal by the defendant. It was argued mainly on the basis whether or not there was a partition between the plaintiff and his uncle. The learned Subordinate Judge held that they were joint and that Ex. G, which purports to be evidence of partition, was not genuine. He, therefore, dismissed the appeal. The defendant has preferred this second appeal.

Two points have been raised before us. One is that the learned Subordinate Judge having found that the signature of the plaintiff on Ex. G was genuine was not justified in holding that the deed itself was not genuine. I do not find any such finding in the judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge. What happened was this. The learned Munsif gave as one of the reasons for holding Ex. G to be not genuine that it was signed in Kaithi characters while the plaintiff used to sign his name in Devanagari. The learned Subordinate Judge, while he gave some reasons against the genuineness of Ex. G, found that the plaintiff used to sign both in Devanagari and Kaithi Hindi and said that though he did not agree with the reasons given by the learned Munsif he nevertheless held the document to be not genuine. This is a finding of fact and is conclusive in second appeal. As this was the only point argued before the learned Subordinate Judge, the appeal is fit to be dismissed on the ground that it is concluded by the finding of fact.

Mr. Varma has, however, urged a point which does not seem to have been raised either before the trial Court or before the learned Subordinate Judge. He contends that assuming that there was no partition, as alleged, in Kartik 1334, which was sought to be proved by Ex. G, nevertheless as the uncle of the plaintiff in the deed of gift specified his share in the joint family property as half and stated that he was separate from his nephew, this statement itself constitutes separation and therefore the deed is valid. He has drawn our attention to the fact that the question of attestation mentioned by the trial Court does not arise now since the definition of attestation in the Transfer of Property Act has been amended and the amendment has a retrospective effect. If we could accept this contention of the learned Advocate it would have been necessary for us to remand this case, because there is no finding of fact by the learned Subordinate Judge about the genuineness of the deed of gift. The learned Munsif, as I have said, has only said that the deed was suspicious. A clear finding of fact about its genuineness would have been necessary. It is not, however, necessary to adopt this course. In my opinion, the point of law which is urged by Mr. Varma has no foundation. He has relied upon a decision of the Lahore High Court in Jumma Ram v. Munsab Rai (1). There the question was whether a certain bequest in a will was valid. The question depended upon the fact whether the testator was joint with his nephews or separate from them. The District Judge relied upon a document showing that the parties had separated. The High Court pointed out that the deed relied upon by the District Judge was subsequent to the will, but their Lordships said:—

"Nevertheless, there is the fact that the shares are specified also in the will, the testator's share being mentioned therein as one-third, and we think that this would suffice to constitute a separation in law, an unequivocal declaration by a member of the co-parcenary body of his intention to be divided in status being sufficient to effect a severance without an agreement by all the co-parceners being required".

The terms of the will are not given in the report. If their Lordships intended to lay down that if an undivided member of a family transfers his share by will or inter vivos, the transfer is valid simply because he specifies the share, then with all respect I cannot agree. This will practically be nullifying a series of decisions which have held that an undivided member of a joint Mitakshara family cannot make a transfer of his share. We can, however, conceive of cases in which from statements of separation in the deed of transfer itself an inference of fact may be drawn that there was a partition, but simply a statement in the deed that the transferor has a specific share will in my opinion not constitute separation as a matter of law. In Amar

(1) 67 Ind. Cas. 812; A I R 1922 Lah. 473.

Dayal Singh v. Har Pershad Sahu (2) it was held that an intention to separate from the rest of the joint family cannot be inferred from the fact that the member of the family executing a mortgage purported to hypothecate only his own share out of the whole property. In the case of Balgobind Das v. Narain Lal (3) it was held that it is the settled law of the Mitakshara, as administered in Bengal and the North-West Provinces, that a Hindu cannot, without the consent of his co-parceners, sell or mortgage his undivided share in the ancestral estate for his own benefit. In that case there was a conflict between a mortgage of half share executed by the son and a sale of a portion of that share in execution of a decree against him. It was held that the son's co parcenary interest passed to the purchaser at the auction and that the only remedy of the mortgagee was to attach and sell any unsold portion of the mortgaged-property in execution of a money decree against the mortgagor. It will be seen in this case that the Court sale was held to be valid but not the private mortgage executed by the son. The law is exactly the same in the case of a gift or will.

I see no merit in this appeal and I would dismiss it with costs.

Varma, J.—I agree.

N. Appeal dismissed.

(2) 58 Ind. Cas. 72; 5 P L J 605; 1 P L T 511.

(3) 20 I A 116; 15 A 339; 6 Sar. 313; 17 Ind. Jur. 425 (P C).

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 20 of 1933

February 26, 1935

NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

QUTUBUDDIN—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

MANGALA DUBEY—PLAINTIFF AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 53—Scope of—Gift—Compromise and decree affirming validity of gift deed—Compromise, if can be deemed collusive—'Collusive', significance of—Co-sharers—Transfer by one of land held in severalty—Other co-sharers, if can have transfer set aside and take joint possession with transferor.

Under s. 53, Transfer of Property Act, a deed, unless it was meant by the executant thereof to be fictitious, is only voidable at the option of the creditors; and if it is not avoided by the latter, it is a perfectly valid instrument as between the parties to it.

If the plaintiff and the defendant in an action compromise, and the compromise is given effect to in the decree, it cannot be considered to be collusive, unless it is a fraud on the rights of third persons. The word "collusive" is not a term of art and generally implies an understanding between two persons in fraud of the rights of third persons. As between the parties to a transaction no question of collusion can arise only because they acted in concert—a characteristic which is common to all agreements. A party to it or any one claiming under him is estopped by the compromise and the decree affirming the validity of a deed of gift executed by him. Nor is a third party entitled to raise any question in respect of the binding character of the deed of gift.

One of several co-sharers in an undivided mahal cannot transfer to a stranger, lands held by him in severalty and if he does so, the other co-sharers are entitled to have the alienation set aside, to eject the transferees and to take joint possession with the transferors Jamna v. Jhalli (1) and Mohamad Sher Khan v. Bharat Indu (2), referred to.

S. C. A. from the decision of the Subordinate Judge of Azamgarh, dated December 7, 1932.

Mr. Mukhtar Ahmad, for the Appellant.

Mr. Kanhaiya Lal Misra, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This is a plaintiff's appeal and arises from a suit for possession of two plots: Nos. 394-1 and 494, by ejectment of defendant No. 1, who claims it under a mortgage deed executed by defendant No. 2. The plaintiff and defendant No. 2 are recorded co-sharers of a 'khata' in which the plots in suit lie. The trial Court decreed the plaintiff's suit so far that joint possession was allowed to the extent of 11/12. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

The 'khata' in which the plots in suit are situated originally belonged to one Makhdum Bakhsh. In 1906 he executed a deed of gift in respect of the entire khata in favour of his daughter's sons, Abdur Rauf and Muhammad Hanif. Makhdum Bakhsh subsequently died, leaving a daughter, Wasiha Bibi, and her two sons, the donees, Qutubuddin is the son of Zaibun Nisa, daughter of Wasiha Bibi. Mutation of names was effected in favour of the donees, Abdur Rauf and Muhammad Hanif. The latter died, apparently unmarried, and his share devolved partly on his mother and partly on his brother and sister. The sister also died, leaving the plaintiff and her mother Wasiha Bibi as her heirs. Wasiha Bibi thus obtained a fractional share in the 'khata' from her deceased son and daughter, though she got nothing on the death of her own father, Makhdum Bakhsh, who had gifted away the entire share to her sons. Abdur Rauf made a gift of his share to the plaintiff. Wasiha Bibi executed a deed of mortgage with possession to defendant No. 1 Mangala Dubey, in respect of plots Nos. 394-1, and 494. Thereupon the plaintiff instituted the suit which has given rise to this appeal for exclusive possession of the plots in dispute impugning the deed of mortgage and the right of the mortgagee to remain in possession of the plots which formed part of the undivided property of the plaintiff and Wasiha Bibi, from whom defendant No. 1 admittedly derives title. The suit was contested by defendant No. 1, who pleaded that the deed of gift, under which the plaintiff claims title and which was executed by Abdur Rauf, was fictitious and fraudulent and conferred no title on the plaintiff. The plaintiff had also impugned the mortgage relied on by defendant No. 1 on the ground that Wasiha Bibi did not intelligently execute it in favour of defendant No. 1, nor did she receive any consideration in respect thereof.

Both the lower Courts have concurrently found that the mortgage deed in favour of defendant No. 1 is perfectly valid. This finding must be accepted, and defendant No. 1 should be treated as a mortgagee with possession from Musammat Wasiha Bibi. The lower Appellate Court upheld the defence as regards the validity of the deed of gift in favour of the plaintiff. It is somewhat difficult to ascertain the exact finding of that Court on this part of the case. It is alleged on behalf of the respondent that the finding amounts to a declaration that the deed of gift was void. I shall advert to this question presently.

It is no longer in dispute that Abdur Rauf executed a deed of gift in favour of the plaintiff in 1918, and had it registered. Mutation of names was effected in his favour in respect of the share of Abdur Rauf in the 'khata' we are concerned with. Abdur Rauf subsequently instituted a suit for cancellation of the deed of gift, alleging that the deed was fictitious and was not given effect to. The suit was compromised and a decree dismissing the suit in terms of the compromise was passed on April 26, 1920. The decree clearly states that the deed of gift be declared to be valid and the plaintiff's suit be dismissed. This was the effect of the compromise, which however provided that certain house and sir and khudkasht lands would remain in possession of Abdur Rauf. After sometime Abdur Rauf appears to have instituted another suit again impugning the deed of gift as before. He also impugned the compromise and the decree passed in the earlier suit. As regards the compromise, he said that it was collusive. Excepting the plaint, no other document relating to that suit has been filed by any of the parties. It is conceded on both sides that the suit was eventually dismissed. It is not suggested that Abdur Rauf was not in possession of the share to which the deed of gift related. In the face of this history it is surprising that the lower Appellate Court upheld the defence that the deed of gift is not valid and confers no title on the plaintiff. The learned Subordinate Judge, who heard the appeal, refers to some evidence showing that Abdur Rauf was indebted to certain persons and that he dealt with one or two plots as if he were the owner after the deed of gift. The suggestion that Abdur Rauf was indebted was based on some oral evidence and the admission of the plaintiff that Abdur Rauf was indebted to one Kanhaiya Lal, who was paid off by the donee (the plaintiff) after the deed of gift. The learned Subordinate Judge also referred to the allegation of Abdur Rauf himself in his plaint in the suit brought for cancellation of the deed of gift. On these facts the learned Subordinate Judge held that the deed of gift had been executed to defraud the creditors and was, therefore, void. He failed to take note of the fact that no creditor ever challenged the deed of gift. He is apparently of opinion that a deed of gift executed to defeat the creditors is necessarily void. This is not a correct proposition. Under s. 53, Transfer of Property Act, a deed, unless it was meant by the executant thereof to be fictitious, is only voidable at the option of the creditors; and if it is not avoided by the latter, it is a perfectly valid instrument as between the parties to it. That the deed of gift in question was not fictitious is abundantly proved by the fact that mutation of names was effected and that the donee (the plaintiff) has been in possession of the gifted share and his right is questioned only as regards the two plots which are now in dispute. The decree, though based on the compromise, is, in my opinion, conclusive as regards the validity of the deed of gift. Abdur Rauf or any one claiming under him, is bound by the decree which affirmed the validity of the deed of gift. The learned Subordinate Judge has brushed it aside with the remark that it was "collusive". He did not pause to consider what a collusive transaction means. If the plaintiff and the defendant in an action compromise, and the compromise is given effect to in the decree, it cannot be considered to be collusive, unless it is a fraud on the rights of third persons. The word "collusive" is not a term of art and generally implies an understanding between two persons in fraud of the rights of third persons. As between the parties to a transaction no question of collusion can arise only because they acted in concert—a characteristic which is common to all agreements. It is not suggested that the object of the compromise between the parties to this suit was to prejudice the right of any one else. As already stated, Abdur Rauf, or any one claiming under him, is estopped by the compromise and the decree from questioning the validity of the deed of gift. Much less is a third person like defendant No. 1 entitled to raise any question in respect of the binding character of the deed of gift. For these reasons, I set aside the finding of the lower Appellate Court so far as it relates to the validity of the gift relied on by the plaintiff-appellant.

The learned Advocate for the appellant has referred to Jamna v. Jhalli (1) and Mohamad Sher Khan v. Bharat Indu (2) and contended that one of several co-sharers in an undivided mahal cannot transfer to a stranger lands held by him in severalty and that if he does so, the other co-sharers are entitled to have the alienation set aside, to eject the transferees and to take joint possession with the transferors. One of these cases is the decision of a Division Bench, and I am bound by it. The lower Courts have found as regards one of the plots in dispute that it was in exclusive possession of Wasiha Bibi. If she had not executed the mortgage deed relied on by defendant No. 1, the plaintiff would not have been entitled to joint possession with her; but as ruled in the cases already referred to, he becomes entitled to joint possession after ejecting the transferee. Acting on this view, the Court of first instance decreed joint possession to the plaintiff, declaring his share to be 11/12. It did not, however, pass any decree for ejectment of defendant No. 1, the transferee. The latter appealed to the lower Appellate Court; but the plaintiff did not file any cross-objection, nor did he prefer a separate appeal of his own. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit, holding that the plaintiff had no right under the gift set up by him, but went on to observe that if the deed of gift had been found by it to be valid, it would have decreed joint possession to the plaintiff. According to the calculation of shares made by that Court, the plaintiff's share comes to 121/144, and not 11/12, as assumed by the trial Court. It is clear that the plaintiff acquiesced in the form of the decree passed by the trial Court and did not insist on the ejectment of defendant No. 1. None of the grounds taken in the memorandum of appeal in this Court is directed against the ejectment of defendant No. 1. In this state of things, I do not think that a decree for ejectment of defendant No. 1 need be passed. In the view of the case I have taken, the decree of the trial Court should be restored, declaring the plaintiff's right to be 121/144, as found by the lower Appellate Court. The order of the trial Court decreeing mesne profits is also restored.

The result is that the appeal is allowed with costs. The decree of the lower Appellate Court is set aside and that of the Court of first instance is restored with this modification that the plaintiff's share shall be considered to be 121/144 and not 11/12.

Leave to appeal under the Letters Patent is refused.

N. Appeal allowed.

(1) 55 Ind. Cas. 94; 18 A L J 129.
(2) 106 Ind. Cas. 656; 25 A L J 983; A I R 1928 All. 59.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 144 of 1933
July 25, 1934

MOHAMMAD NOOR AND LUBY, JJ.

BANARSI PRASAD CHAUDHURY—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—APPELLANT

versus

KIRTYANAND SINGH BAHADUR AND OTHERS—DECREE-HOLDERS—RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 48—Application for execution—When should be treated as continuation of previous application—Previous application not proceeded with—Bar removed—Fresh application, if one to revive proceedings which had to be stopped.

An application for execution must be treated as a continuation of the previous application where the previous application could not be proceeded with on account of a bar having been placed by the allowance of the claim; and once the bar was removed that execution can proceed and the fresh application is nothing more than an application to revive the proceeding which had to be stopped. Rudra Narain Guria v. Pachu Maity (2), applied.

C. A. from the original order of the Sub-Judge, Monghyr, dated June 2, 1933.

Mr. Janak Kishore, for the Appellant.

Messrs. D. L. Nandkeolyar and Raghunath Jha, for the Respondents.

Mohammad Noor, J.—This appeal is by the judgment-debtor and is directed against an order of a Subordinate Judge of Monghyr, holding that the execution case instituted before him was not barred under s. 48 of the Civil Procedure Code. The decree under execution was passed by the Subordinate Judge of Bhagalpur on July 1, 1918, and in about April 1928, it was brought on transfer to Monghyr where an application for execution was made on April 10, 1928. Certain properties seem to have been attached in execution of the decree but a claim to the property preferred on behalf of an idol was allowed on December 25, 1929, and apparently the execution could not proceed further. The decree-holder had to institute a suit under O. XXI, r. 63, for a declaration that the property which he sought to attach and sell was in fact the property of the judgment-debtor and liable to be sold for satisfaction of the decree. The suit was decreed on September 20, 1932; and a week later, on September 28, 1932, the present petition for execution was filed. The objection raised was that the application was barred under s. 48 of the Civil Procedure Code. The learned Subordinate Judge has held that as the decree-holder was prevented from executing the decree on account of the fraud of the judgment-debtor committed within 12 years of the date of the decree, the execution was not barred. The fraud consisted in falsely setting up a claimant and thereby forcing the decree-holder to fight out a civil suit. The judgment-debtor has preferred this appeal.

In order to appreciate the argument of the learned Advocate who has appeared on behalf of the appellant, it is necessary to mention a few more facts. It seems that after the decree-holder was prevented from proceeding to sell the property on account of the claim having been allowed, he sought execution of the decree by the arrest of the judgment debtor and an application to this effect was made on June 18, 1930. Somehow or other this application was dismissed on September 30, 1931, but this Court ordered on March 22, 1933, the execution to be revived and in fact that application is still pending. It has been kept in abeyance till the present application for execution, which is the subject-matter of the appeal is disposed of.

The learned Advocate contended that s. 48, of the Civil Procedure Code had no application, firstly, because the decree-holder was not prevented from execution as in fact he proceeded to execute his decree by the arrest of the judgment-debtor; and secondly, because the institution of a suit by itself did not constitute fraud. As to the first contention, as the learned Subordinate Judge has pointed out, it is open to a decree-holder to have his decree executed in any manner provided by law. If the decree-holder now finds that on account of the suit having been decided in his favour, he can pursue a certain property with some amount of certainty that the decree will be realised, he cannot be forced to pursue his application for the arrest of the judgment-debtor. He may, if he likes, do so if he fails to realize the decree by the sale of the property. As to his second contention that the institution of a suit does not constitute fraud, the learned Advocate has relied upon the case of 1912, Raghunath Prasad v. Kashi Prasad (1). There the institution of certain kinds of suits was on the facts of that case, held not to constitute fraud. One of them was a suit by a person claiming title to the property on the foot of a mortgage, which suit ultimately was unsuccessful. It is obvious that if the claim of a third person is disallowed, the decree-holder is not prevented from executing the decree and cannot, therefore, plead this as a ground for exclusion from the operation of s. 48. In this case now before us the claim was allowed, and the decree-holder was forced to bring a suit. Another kind of suit mentioned in the head note as not constituting fraud was a suit instituted under s. 283 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 by the decree-holder who purchased a house in execution of his decree after the objection of the purchaser of the same property from the judgment-debtor had been allowed and which suit was afterwards successful. The head-note is somewhat misleading. It appears from the body of the judgment that the claim of the third person was preferred and allowed after the decree-holder had purchased a property in execution of his decree, and then the decree-holder had to bring the suit for declaration of his title which was successful. It is obvious that the suit could not have been under s. 283 of the old Code, but under s. 332 (now O. XXI, r. 103), as the claim and the suit were after the sale. It is obvious that the institution of such a suit could not have prevented the execution of the decree. I do not see any reason why the present case should not come within s. 48 of the Civil Procedure Code. In my opinion, therefore, none of the contentions of the appellant is tenable.

(1) 13 Ind. Cas. 88; 15 C L J 678.

Apart from the applicability of s. 48 of the Civil Procedure Code, this application for execution can safely be treated as a continuation of the application in which the property could not be sold on account of the claim having been allowed. This was exactly what was held in the case of Rudra Narain Guria v. Pachu Maity (2). No doubt the question before the Calcutta High Court was not one under s. 48 of the Civil Procedure Code but under the Limitation Act. But the principle is exactly the same. There also a claim was allowed, and the decree-holder had to institute a suit for a declaration of his right to execute his decree against the property. After the suit was decreed, the decree-holder filed a fresh application for execution. Their Lordships held that that application must be treated as a continuation of the previous application because the previous application could not be proceeded with on account of a bar having been placed by the allowance of the claim: and once the bar was removed that execution could proceed and the fresh application was nothing more than an application to revive the proceeding which had to be stopped. Taking any view of the case, namely, whether we apply to it the exceptions mentioned in s. 48 of the Civil Procedure Code or treat the present application as a continuation of the previous application, the execution must proceed. The proceedings are not barred by limitation.

I would dismiss this appeal with costs.

Luby, J.—I agree.

N. Appeal dismissed.

(2) 23 C 437.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 3167 of 1931

August 23, 1934

MITTER, J.

JOGESH CHANDRA ROY—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Srimati SACHCHHANDA AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Easement—Prescription—Right of way—Mere discontinuance of user is not an interruption or abeyance of enjoyment even though such cessation occurs while right is being acquired.

In order that a prescriptive right may be successfully claimed, the pathway must be enjoyed peaceably and openly as an easement without interruption for more than 20 years. The term interruption refers to an adverse obstruction and not a mere discontinuance of user. A person may be said to be in enjoyment of a right of way during a period of time, though he does not use the way every moment. Cessation of user is not an invariable indication of the abeyance of enjoyment of a right, that is, it is not inconsistent with the continuance of the enjoyment of the right.

[Indian and English case-law referred to.]

Cessation of user for a time while the right is being acquired does not stand on a different basis from cessation when the right has already been acquired by 20 years' enjoyment. Sturges v. Bridgman (5), explained.

C. A. from appellate decree of the Sub-Judge, Second Additional Court, Chittagong, dated August 15, 1931.

Messrs. S. C. Basak and Nripendra Chandra Das, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Narendra Kumar Das and Rohinibinod Rakshit, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal is on behalf of the defendant. It arises out of a suit instituted by the plaintiffs for declaration of their right of way from their homestead over the bank of the defendant's tank to a public highway farther south and for a permanent injunction restraining the defendant from putting obstructions. The plaintiffs alleged that they had acquired the right of way by prescription and alternatively they say that the way is a way of necessity. Although the lower Appellate Court has given a decree to the plaintiffs also on the footing that the way is a way of necessity, that part of the judgment is not sought to be supported before me. The plaintiffs and defendant hold under different landlords and the plaintiffs' homestead and the bank of the defendant's tank had never been held under a common title. The only question, therefore, in this appeal is whether the findings arrived at support the claim based on prescription.

The defendant took the defence that the plaintiffs' homestead had been abandoned for about 24 years, and that there had not been any user for a long period. They accordingly contended that the plaintiffs' claim based on prescription cannot be supported. The first Court found that the plaintiffs did not occupy their homestead for six or seven years, holding that there could not be any possible claim based on prescription. The lower Appellate Court did not agree with this finding. The material findings arrived at by the lower Appellate Court, are the following : (i) the pathway had been used for more than 50 years: (ii) that the homestead of plaintiffs had never been abandoned, (iii) that it was not a fact that the plaintiffs ceased to live in their homestead for six or siven years (iv) that since the death of plaintiff No. 1's son (which occurred in 1900) the plaintiff had been living sometimes in her daughter's house and sometimes in her own homestead.

The appellant relies on the last finding and says that the continuity in the enjoyment has been broken and the plaintiff's claim based on prescription must be negatived. The findings of the Subordinate Judge make it clear that 20 years' enjoyment had been completed before the plaintiff's son died when the plaintiff began sometimes to live with her daughter and sometimes in her own hut. In order that a prescriptive right may be successfuly claimed the pathway must be enjoyed peaceably and openly as an easement without interruption for more than 20 years. The term interruption refers to an adverse obstruction not a mere discontinuance of user: Carr v. Foster (1), Hollins v. Verney (2), Smith v. Baxter (3). A person may be said to be in enjoyment of a right of way during a period of time though he does not use the way every moment. Cessation of user is not an invariable indication of the abeyance of enjoyment of a right, that is, it is not inconsistent with the continuance of the enjoyment of the right: see Gopal Chandra v. Bankim Behary (4). I would accordingly hold that the learned Subordinate Judge is right in holding that the plaintiffs have a right of way over the bank of the defendant's tank which right has been acquired by prescription.

The appellant has argued before me that cessation of user for a time while the right is being acquired stands on a different basis than when the right had already been acquired by 20 years' enjoyment and in support of this proposition the case of Sturges v. Bridgman (5), has been cited before me. That case is no authority for the proposition contended for. It only re-affirms the principle laid down in the well-known case of Charles Dalton v. Henry Angus & Co. (6), that an enjoyment physically incapable of interruption would not confer any right of easement by prescription. Besides, as I have pointed out, plaintiff No. 1 began to live in her daughter's house, off and on, only after the enjoyment had been completed for more than 20 years.

Another point has been raised that the learned Subordinate Judge has proceeded upon a misconstruction of Ex. B. That is a deposition of plaintiff No. 3 in a criminal case. I am not satisfied that the said document has been misconstrued but assuming it has been, that does not raise any question of law for it is only a piece of documentary evidence. For these reasons I dismiss the appeal with costs.

D. Appeal dismissed.

(1) (1868) 3 Q B 581; 2 G & D 753; 11 L J Q B 264; 6 Jur. 837.

(2) (1885) 13 Q B D 704; 53 L J Q B 420; 48 J P 580; 33 W R 5.

(3) (1900) 2 Ch. 138; 69 L J Ch. 437; 48 W R 458; 82 L T 650.

(4) 51 Ind. Cas. 372; A I R 1919 Cal. 357; 29 C L J 421; 26 C W N 121.

(5) (1880) 11 Ch. D 852; 48 L J Ch. 785; 28 W R 200; 41 L T 219.

(6) (1881) 6 A C 740; 50 L J Q B 689; 30 W R 191; 44 J P 132; 44 L T 844.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 1439 of 1930

October 9, 1934

MOHAMMAD NOOR AND LUBY, JJ.

Sri SATYANARAIN SAMI AND ANOTHER —APPELLANTS

versus

JAMUNA BAI AND ANOTHER— RESPONDENTS

Occupancy holding— Lessee of non-transferable occupancy holding purchasing it during term of lease but before amendment of Bengal Tenancy Act in 1907—Dedication to idol—Validity of—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885)—Amendment of 1907, if retrospective—Transfer of non-transferable occupancy holding—Whether void or voidable.

The amendment of the Bengal Tenancy Act in 1907 does not affect a right which has already become vested prior to the amendment which has no retrospective effect. Where, therefore, the lessee of a non-transferable occupancy holding has purchased it during the continuance of the lease but before 1907 and has dedicated it to an idol, the dedication is perfectly valid. Harrington v. Dwarka Prasad (1) relied on Raghubar Mahto v. H Manners (3) not followed Chandra Churdeo v. Laldhari Prasad Singh (2), referred to.

A transfer of a non-transferable occupancy holding is not void but voidable.

C. A. from appellate decree of the District Judge, Muzaffarpur, dated July 31, 1930.

Messrs. S. M. Mullick, L. K. Jha and P Jha, for the Appellants.

Messrs. B. N. Mitter and N. N. Roy, for the Respondents.

Mohammad Noor, J.—The suit out of which this second appeal arises was instituted by the plaintiff-respondents under O. XXI, r. 63, Civil Procedure Code, for a declaration that about 12 bighas of land situated in village Khrhat Golapur is liable to be sold in execution of their decree against defendants Nos. 3 and 2 and that the claim of defendant No. 1, an idol, was wrongly allowed. The suit was dismissed by the trial Court but has been decreed by the Court of Appeal below. Defendant No. 1 has preferred this second appeal.

The facts are these: The defendants Nos. 2 and 3 obtained a temporary lease of the village from the plaintiffs and in 1906 during its continuance acquired by purchase the occupancy right of the land which is the subject-matter of the present litigation. Later, in 1909, they dedicated this land in favour of the idol, defendant No. 1. Their lease expired in the year 1320 (corresponding to 1913). By that time their financial conditions became bad and they defaulted in payment of the rent. The plaintiffs obtained a decree for rent, and in execution of it sought to sell the land as the property of defendants Nos. 2 and 3. A claim was preferred on behalf of defendant No. 1 on the basis of the dedication made in the year 1909, which was allowed. Hence the present suit. The learned Subordinate Judge found the dedication valid and bona fide.

The learned District Judge has decreed the suit relying mainly upon the fact that just about a year before the expiry of the thika lease, defendant No. 3 executed on his own behalf a kabuliyat in respect of the land in suit in favour of the plaintiff, Ex. 3, in which it is stated that the purchase of the occupancy rights in 1906 was invalid as there was no custom of transferability of the holding in the village, and therefore he (defendant No. 3) was taking the settlement from the proprietors. The kabuliyat does not purport to be on behalf of the idol.

It has been contended before us that if by the purchase of the year 1906 the property was legally vested in defendants Nos. 2 and 3 and thereafter defendants Nos. 2 and 3 legally dedicated it in favour of defendant No. 1 in 1909, the execution of the kabuliyat by the defendant No. 3 who was the shebait of the idol would not take away the vested interest of the idol and the kabuliyat executed by defendant No. 3 must be taken to have been executed for the benefit of the idol.

This leads us to the consideration of whether the purchase by defendants Nos. 2 and 3 of occupancy right of the land and its later dedication was valid, as the holding was non-transferable, without the consent of the landlord. It was contended by the appellant before us as well as before the learned District Judge that in spite of the fact that the land was a non-transferable occupancy holding, the transfer to the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 was valid as it was a transfer to persons who were entitled to give consent and recognise that transfer. The case of Harrington v. Dwarka Prasad (1) was relied upon before the learned District Judge. He seems to have accepted this contention so far as the transfer was in favour of defendants Nos. 2 and 3 as it was prior to the year 1907, when the Bengal Tenancy Act was amended by enacting that an ijardar or a lessee was not entitled to acquire occupancy right even by purchase during the continuance of the lease. He, however, seems to be of opinion that as the dedication in 1909 was after the amendment of the Act in 1907 it was not valid. Here the learned District Judge is clearly in error. If by virtue of the purchase in the year 1906 the occupancy right became vested in defendants Nos. 2 and 3 as has been held in Harrington v. Dwarka Prasad (1) above referred to, they were entitled to deal with it in any way they liked. The amendment of the Act in 1907 did not affect a right which had already become vested in them prior to the amendment which has no retrospective effect. Therefore when in 1909 they dedicated the land to the idol, the dedication was perfectly valid. Assuming that the land dedicated was a non-transferable occupancy holding, defendants Nos. 2 and 3 as transferors did consent to it by the dedication itself as they in 1906 consented to and recognised the transfer to themselves. It was held in Harrington v. Dwarka Prasad (1) that a thikadar during the period of the lease stood in the place of the landlord for that period and was the landlord of the raiyat, and as such, could give consent to the transfer of a non-transferable occupancy right and could consent to a transfer to himself. We must, therefore, hold that in taking a transfer to himself in 1906 he consented to it and in making the transfer by himself in 1909 he again gave consent to it. Perhaps the learned District Judge did not consider that in the year 1909 when the dedication was made, defendants Nos. 2 and 3 were still the lessees of the village, and as such, they could recognise that transfer. The principle has also been laid down by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Chandra Churdeo v. Laldhari Prasad Singh (2).

(1) 55 Ind. Cas. 59; A I R 1920 Pat. 577; (1920) Pat. 11; 7 P L T 533.

Mr. H. N. Mitter who appears on behalf of the respondents has relied upon Raghubar Mahto v. H. Manners, 11 Ind. Cas. 389 (3) for the proposition that even before 1907 a lessee could not during the term of his lease acquire occupancy right by purchase. We are unable to follow it in view of the clear decision of this Court in Harrington v. Dwarka Prasad (1). The case relied upon by Mr. Mitter seems to have been dissented from in this Court in J. P. Morgan v. Ramjee Ram (4), where their Lordships observed:

"We must hold that prior to the Act of 1907 the acquisition by thikadar of an occupancy right by purchase was not barred by s. 22 (3)."

We must follow the two Division Bench decisions of this Court and hold that defendants Nos. 2 and 3 acquired a valid right in the lands in question by purchase in the year 1906 and validly transferred it to the idol in the year 1909. Once we hold that the property was validly transferred to the idol and vested in it, the kabuliyat, Ex. 3, executed by defendant No. 3 in favour of the plaintiffs will be of no avail, and we must construe it as having been executed by the shebait for the benefit of the idol. The view taken by the learned Subordinate Judge was correct. Apart from the validity of the transfer, I am of opinion that the quesion cannot be raised by the plaintiff in the present suit. A transfer of a non-transferable occupancy holding is not void but voidable. The suit to avoid it had become barred when the present suit was instituted nor is the suit framed on that basis.

I would allow this appeal with costs reverse the decree of the learned District Judge and restore that of the learned Subordinate Judge. The plaintiffs will pay the costs of defendant No. 1 of the lower Appellate Court also.

Luby, J.—I agree.

N. Appeal allowed.

(2) 139 Ind. Cas. 550; A I R 1932 P C 264; Ind. Rul. (1932) P C 295; 63 M L J 731; (1932) M W N 1174; 16 R D 535; 56 C L J 360; 37 C W N 98; 14 P L T 57 (P C).

(3) 11 Ind. Cas. 389.

(4) 56 Ind. Cas. 366; A I R 1920 Pat. 97; 5 P L J 302; (1920) Pat. 168; 1 P L T 310.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 1589 of 1933

January 15, 1935

ADDISON AND DIN MOHAMMAD, JJ.

HARGOBIND AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

GURDAS MAL—PLAINTIFF AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), ss. 59, 60—Widow surrendering her share in occupancy right to landlord two years before her death—Assignee of co-tenant, being stranger to family, if can assail the surrender.

Under s 59, sub-s. (5) read with s. 60 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, a surrender, even if assailable can be attacked by the landlords alone and by none else and where the surrender by a widow has taken place in favour of the landlords themselves, it is perfectly valid and unimpeachable. By s. 59, sub-s. (1), cl. (c), on the termination of the widow's interest under s. 59, sub-s. (1) cl. (b) it is only the male collateral relatives of the widow's deceased husband who are entitled to succeed to the occupancy rights and an assignee from a co-tenant being a stranger to the family and not falling under that category has no right of succession and consequently no right of attack. Even if it be conceded that the assignee is entitled to inherit the rights by virtue of the rule of survivorship among joint tenants, there is nothing left to be inherited at the time when the widow died, she having already surrendered her interest two years before.

[Case-law referred to]

S. C. A. from the decree of the District Judge, Jullundur, dated May 8, 1933, modifying that of the Subordinate Judge, Third Class, Jullundur, dated October 10, 1932.

Mr. Achhru Ram, for the Appellants.

Mr. Jagan Nath Agarwala, for the Respondent.

Din Mohammad, J.—Kanshi Ram, Musammat Dhan Devi and Gobind Ram possessed occupancy rights in 19 kanals 11 marlas of land situate in Banga. They held the land in the following shares:—

Kanshi Ram—1-6th.

Musammat Dhan Devi—1-3rd.

Govind Ram—½.

Kanshi Ram was adjudicated an insolvent in 1919 and his share on being sold by the Official Receiver was purchased by Gurdas Mal-Gobind Ram died in 1920 and his share went to the landlords in 1928 after a hard contest in the Courts between all the parties concerned including Gurdas Mal. In the same year Musammat Dhan Devi surrendered her rights in favour of the landlords and two years after she died. On July 5, 1930, the present suit was instituted by Gurdas Mal for possssion of 5-6ths share of the land mentioned above alleging that being a joint tenant he was entitled to succeed to the land left by his co-tenants, Gobind Ram and Musammat Dhan Devi. The landlords resisted this suit on various grounds and contended inter alia that so far as Gobind Ram's share was concerned, the plaintiff being a party to the former litigation that was started on Gobind Ram's death was debarred from reagitating the matter in the present suit and as regards Musammat Dhan Devi's share, the surrender in their favour was valid and the plaintiff had no locus standi to challenge it. The Subordinate Judge decreed the suit but on appeal the District Judge while reversing the decision of the trial Court in respect of Govind Ram's share maintained it as regards Musammat Dhan Devi's share. It is against this decision that the landlords have appealed.

Counsel for the appellants contends that under s. 59, sub-s. (3) read with s. 60 of the Tenancy Act, the surrender even if assailable could be attacked by the landlords alone and by none else and that as the surrender in this case had taken place in favour of the landlords themselves, it was perfectly valid and unimpeachable. He further maintains that by s. 59, sub-s. (1), cl. (c), on the termination of the widow's interest under s. 59, sub-s. 1, cl. (b), it is only the male collateral relatives of the widow's deceased husband who are entitled to succeed to the occupancy rights and that an assignee from a co-tenant being a stranger to the family and not falling under that category has no right of succession and consequently no right of attack. He finally urges that even if it be conceded that the plaintiff was entitled to inherit the rights by virtue of the rule of survivorship among joint tenants, there was nothing left to be inherited at the time when the widow died.

We have given due consideration to these arguments and have come to the conclusion that this appeal should succeed. The law is quite clear on the point that a widow's transfer in contravention of the provisions contained in s. 59, is not void but merely voidable, and that too, at the instance of the landlords only (s. 60 of the Tenancy Act). Even, therefore, if the principle enunciated in Kanshi Ram v. Chet Kuer (1), that a widow's surrender amounts to an alienation, be applicable here the plaintiff has no right to challenge the surrender in this case, Rugha v. Mughli (2), relied on by the respondent also does not advance his case any further. It does not lay down any law which is not already contained in the section itself and where it uses the words 'next claimant' it does so merely in reference to s. 59, sub-s. (1), cl. (c) and not in any general sense so as to include even a person other than the 'male collateral relative of the deceased tenant.' Similarly nothing that is laid down in Moti Lal v. Kartar Singh (3), militates against the view we have taken in this case. The surrender being complete two years before the widow's death, there was nothing left, as urged by Counsel for the appellants, which could have gone to the plaintiff and Moti Lal v. Kartar Singh (3), applies only where the deceased tenant has a share in the holding which is to pass on his death. The law as to the right of challenging the widow's alienations in these circumstances has been laid down correctly in Thando v. Hasham Ali (4), and we are in entire agreement with that decision.

We hold, therefore, that the plaintiff had no locus standi to attack the surrender of her rights by Musammat Dhan Devi in favour of the landlords and accept this appeal. The suit is thus dismissed in toto. The parties will bear their own costs in the lower Appellate Court but the appellants will get their costs both here and in the trial Court.

D. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 111 Ind. Cas. 203; 10 Lah. 237; 29 P L R 581; A I R 1928 Lah. 932.

(2) 19 Ind. Cas. 855; 2 P R 1914; 138 P W R 1913; 236 P L R 1913.

(3) 127 Ind. Cas, 1; 11 Lah. 427; A I R 1930 Lah. 515; 31 P L R 644; Ind. Rul. (1930) Lah. 801 (F B).

(4) 130 Ind. Cas. 517; A I R 1930 Lah. 942; Ind. Rul. (1931) Lah. 309.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Civil Revision Petition No. 352 of 1934

February 1, 1935

RANGI LAL, J.

NANAK CHAND—DEFENDANT—PETITIONER

versus

HAZARI MAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. IX, r. 13, s. 115—Held, decree was indivisible and could not be dismissed against one and allowed to proceed against the other—Revision.

Held, that the decree against father and son was one and indivisible and it could not be allowed to stand against father alone, and where such a result comes from the lower Court's decision, the High Court can interfere in revision. Bhura Mal v. Har Kishen Das (1) and Mahomed Hamidullah v. Tohurennissa Bibi (1), relied on.

C. R. P. of the order of the District Judge, Delhi, dated January 24, 1934 affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Second Class, Delhi, dated February 20, 1933.

Mr. Kishan Dayal, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—A suit was brought against Nanak Chand and Kastur Chand, who are father and son, on the basis of a trust deed said to have been executed by them. An ex parte decree was passed against both of them on July 20, 1932. The father applied to have the decree set aside on August 3, 1932, and the son applied separately on August 4, 1932. The trial Court dismissed both the applications on February 20, 1933. The learned District Judge accepted the appeal of the son and set aside the decree against him but he dismissed the appeal of the father. A petition for revision against the order dismissing the appeal of the father has been filed to this Court.

It has been urged that the learned District Judge has failed to consider the proviso to O. IX, r. 13, of the Civil Procedure Code, which lays down that where the decree is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against one defendant only it may be set aside as against all or any of the other defendants also. The question for consideration is whether the decree is or is not of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against one defendant only. It has been urged before me that the validity of the trust deed relied on by the plaintiffs is not admitted and if the decree against the father stands and the suit is allowed to proceed against the son, it may result in two inconsistent decrees. The decree is one and indivisible, and complications may arise if it is allowed to stand against the father and not against the son. Bhura Mal v. Har Kishen Das (1) and Mahomed Hamidullah v. Tohurennissa Bibi (2), support the position taken up by the petitioner. This Court can interfere in revision because a clear provision of law seems to have been ignored by the learned District Judge.

I accept the petition and set saide the ex parte decree against the father also. No order as to costs.

D. Petition accepted.

(1) 24 A 383; A W N 1902, 76.
(2) 25 C 155.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 374 of 1928
February 14, 1934
SUNDARAM CHETTY AND PANDRANG RAO, JJ.

K. GNANADESIKAM PILLAI AND OTHERS —DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus
ANTONY BENATHU BOOPALARAYAR —PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT

Lease—Construction—Property usufructuarily mortgaged—Same property leased to mortgagor—Collateral security clause in lease deed—Suit for rent after more than 12 years—Held, mortgagor was holding over as tenant and rent could be recovered for three years prior to suit—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 116—Stamp Act (II of 1899), s. 6—Deed both lease and mortgage—Stamp duty payable.

The defendant created usufructuary mortgage of his property in favour of the plaintiff on January 18, 1911. The mortgagee-plaintiff instead of actually taking possession of property, granted a lease of the same property to the defendant on January 19, 1911, on a fixed annual rent, payable up to the time of the redemption of the "othi" which was for two years according to the mortgage agreement. The lease deed contained a collateral agreement by way of mortgage under which the property was offered for security for payment of rent due under the lease. Certain amount, towards the rent due under the lease was paid by the mortgagor in 1916, and accepted by the mortgagee. After a period of 12 years, the present suit was brought by the mortgagee for recovery of the sum alleged to be due under the lease deed;

Held, that the usufructuary mortgage deed and the lease deed were parts of the same transaction, and the lease was for a period of two years only and the continuance of possession after the expiration of this period of two years, by the mortgagor must be taken to be that of a tenant holding over on the original terms of the lease.

Held, also that the collateral security clause in the lease-deed not being any part of the terms which constituted the transaction of the lease, the clause could not be carried over after the determination of the lease, i. e., two years.

Held, further that the plaintiff could recover the rent due for three years prior to suit only.

Where a deed is to be taken both as a lease and as a mortgage, it must bear a stamp leviable in the case of a mortgage, which requires a higher stamp duty.

A. against the decree of the Sub-Judge, Tuticorin, dated February 27, 1928.

Messrs. K. Bajah Ayyar, V. Ramaswami Ayyar and V. Seshadri, for the Appellants.

Mr. A. Swaminatha Ayyar, for the Respondent.

Sundaram Chetty, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit filed by the plaintiff for the recovery of a sum of Rs. 8,981-14-8 alleged to be due under a registered lease-deed, dated January 19, 1911, and executed by defendant No. 1, under which there was an agreement to pay an annual rent of Rs. 368-8-0. Properties comprised in the lease-deed were mortgaged by defendant No. 1 with possession to the plaintiff under a mortgage-deed dated January 18, 1911, for Rs. 2,500. The mortgage-deed and the lease-deed have been filed as Exs. A and E, respectively. The suit is for the recovery of the arrears of rent due under the aforesaid lease-deed and the charge created under Ex. E is also sought to be enforced. According to the contention of defendant No. 1 the usufructuary mortgage was for a term of two years and the lease granted by the mortgagee was also for the same period of two years, and that at the end of that term, he surrendered possession to the plaintiff, as he did not pay either the arrears of rent or the mortgage amount. His case is that the plaintiff himself was in actual enjoyment of the properties since then. There is also the plea of limitation. One of the questions for consideration is whether the lease in question evidenced by Ex. E must be deemed to have been granted for a term of years only or for an indefinite term. On this point, we have to construe the terms of Exs. A and E. It is clear that the usufructuary mortgage deed and the lease deed are parts of the same transaction. Ex. A recites in clear terms that the other right is to be for a period of two years, on the expiry of which term defendant No. 1 should redeem the mortgage by paying a sum of Rs. 2,500. Instead of actually taking possession of the mortgaged properties, the plaintiff granted a lease of the same to the mortgagor under Ex. E. In this lease deed, the rent fixed for each year is Rs. 368-8-0 which defendant No. 1 as lessee had to pay up to the time of redeeming the othi

He agreed to pay rent every year by 19th, January. Then there is the collateral agreement by way of mortgage, under which the properties mentioned in the schedule were offered as security for the payment of rent due under the lease deed. Ex. E is virtually a combination of a lease and a mortgage. It is true that, in the lease deed, there is no specific mention of the term of the lease, but we have to read both these documents together in order to understand the true intention of the parties. When the parties chose to fix a period of two years for the enjoyment of the properties by the mortgagee and for the redemption of the mortgage by the mortgagor, it is not unlikely that the lease was also intended to be for the same period as that of the mortgage. It seems to us that the term in the lease deed, that the rent is payable up to the time of the redemption of the othi should be understood as the time contemplated or fixed for redemption in the mortgage deed itself. Some argument was based upon the circumstance that the lease deed bears a stamp of Rs. 4. It is urged that if the lease is for a term of two years only, a stamp of Rs. 2 would be sufficient, but if it is a lease for an indefinite term, then a stamp for Rs. 4 would be necessary as per cls. 3 and 4 of Art. 35, Stamp Act. In this view, the learned Subordinate Judge treates the lease evidenced by Ex. E as one for an indefinite term. But we think that that is not the necessary inference to be drawn from the fact that the lease deed bears stamp of Rs. 4 as we have already said that Ex. E is a combination of a lease and a mortgage.

If the lease is for 2 years, the total rent payable would be between Rs. 700 and 800. If for the payment of this sum a collateral security of immovable property is also given, the document has to be viewed as a simple mortgage. When it is to be taken both as a lease and as a mortgage, it must bear the stamp which is leviable in the case of a mortgage, which requires a higher stamp duty. It is possible that a stamp of Rs. 4 was used as the document evidenced a simple mortgage also as stated above. Furthermore, even if there is some ambiguity as to the period of the lease really intended by the parties in the recitals in Ex. E, the evidence given by the plaintiff himself leaves no room to doubt what the real intention of the parties was. Even in his chief examination, he admits that 2 years' term was inserted to fit in with the period of the othi. And in his cross-examination, he would say that defendant No. 1 asked for the lease to last for the term of the othi, and that the talk was for 2 years from the beginning. He denies that there was any agreement for one year's lease.

On the other hand, he says that defendant No. 1 himself insisted on the lease being for 2 years. In the face of these admissions, the present contention raised on behalf of the plaintiff that the lease was intended for an indefinite term so as to last till the actual repayment of the mortgage amount cannot be accepted as correct. If the lease evidenced by Ex. E was for a fixed term of two years only, that lease must be deemed to have determined on the expiration of that period. If the lessee (defendant No. 1) continued to be in possession of the properties even after the determination of the lease by efflux of time in what capacity was he in possession like that? Either he must have been a tenant holding over or a trespasser. Under s. 116, Transfer of Property Act, if a lessee remains in possession after the determination of the lease and the lessor accepts rent from the lessee or otherwise assents to his continuance in possession, the lease is, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, renewed from year to year in the case of the lease of immovable property for agricultural or manufacturing purposes. According to the case of the plaintiff, there was a payment of Rs. 1,000 by defendant No. 1 in 1916 towards the rent due under the lease. If this is true, we can hold that the lessor assented to the lessee continuing the possession even after the determination of the lease. It is alleged in the plaint that the plaintiff granted receipt to defendant No. 1 at the time of this payment. Even in the notice issued to defendant No. 1 (Ex. F-1), reference was made to this payment but no reply was sent by defendant No. 1 to that notice. Even in a suit subsequently filed by the plaintiff for the recovery of a sum of money due on another simple mortgage-deed executed by defendant No. 1, reservation of his right to sue for arrears of rent due under the lease was made.

If the main plea of defendant No. 1 that he surrendered possession at the end of the two years' term is not believed, then there is nothing improbable in the plaintiff's story that in 1916 a sum of Rs. 1,000 was paid to him towards rent. We shall deal with the question of the alleged surrender presently. The plaintiff has sworn to the truth of the alleged payment in his evidence and this fact is not even denied by defendant No. 1 in the witness-box. The learned Subordinate Judge has believed the evidence of the plaintiff and we see no reason to disagree with his finding. If so, defendant No. 1's continuance of possession after the expiration of the original term of two years must be taken to be that of a tenant holding over. Coming now to the question, whether, as a matter of fact, defendant No. 1 did surrender possession at the end of two years, there is only oral evidence on both sides. (After discussing the evidence the judgment concluded.) We therefore do not think fit to disturb the finding of the lower Court that the defendant No. 1 had been in possession of the properties in question even after the expiration of the original term of two years. Now, a further question arises whether the plaintiff is entitled to recover arrears of rent for the whole period as claimed in the plaint. This claim is for more than 12 years before the date of the suit. The claim would not be barred by limitation, if the mortgage or charge created under Ex. E enures for the benefit of the whole of the claim, and if the payment of Rs. 1,000 towards prinicipal and interest mentioned in the lease deed is also true. As we have already stated, defendant No. 1 must be deemed to be a tenant holding over, subsequent to the expiration of two years from the date of Ex. E. If so, a tenancy from year to year is created by operation of law. In the absence of an agreement to the contrary, we can take it that the same terms of the lease for the fixed period of two years also hold good for the fresh tenancy from year to year. It is argued on behalf of the respondent, that the charge created under Ex. E for payment of rent should also hold good for the entire amount of rent due as arrears, since the creation of the fresh tenancy from year to year.

This involves a consideration of the question what really are the terms of the lease as such, and what are outside the scope of the lease transaction and are simply collatteral to it. As we read the document, Ex. E, we find that it evidences a grant of lease of immovable property, whereby an annual rent is fixed and such rent is also to carry interest. The other part of the document evidences a mortgage created by defendant No. 1 as security for the payment of rent due under the lease deed. The decision of a Division Bench of this Court reported in Kutti Amma v. Madhava Menon (1), seems to be a direct authority against the contention put forward on behalf of the respondent. In that case, there was a Verumpattam lease for one year executed by the mortgagor to the mortgagee which, after fixing the amount of rent, provided for payment of interest in case of default in the payment of rent on the due date, and it was a registered instrument. As regards the clause whereby the charge was created, the learned Judges were of opinion, that the clause was not a term of the lease, as a lease, which could be deemed to be imported into the terms on which the lessee was allowed to hold over. In this view, they held that the claim for arrears of rent beyond the three years before the date of the suit was barred by limitation. In the present case, all that we can say is, that the mortgage created under Ex. E can only be enforced for the recovery of rent due for the term of two years. After the determination of that lease, when the tenancy from year to year was created, it is not possible to carry over this collateral security which is certainly no part of the lease transaction, so as to enable the plaintiff to claim the arrears of rent for the whole of the subsequent period, as if that mortgage was also created for the rent due subsequent to the transformation of the tenancy into one from year to year.

(1) 11 M L J 186.

The test is not whether the particular clause in Ex. E is or is not repugnant to the terms of the lease. On the other hand, the true test is whether this clause can really be deemed to be any part of the terms which constituted the transaction of the lease itself. In a recent decision reported in Dasarathi Kumar v. Sarat Chandra (2), it was held that a stipulation in the original lease that at the expiration of the term, the the lessee should give up possession without notice, could not be imported into the new tenancy created by holding over and the acceptance of rent. The principle of that decision is in consonance with the view we have expressed. If the mortgage created under Ex. E is of no avail to the plaintiff for the recovery of rent due subsequent to the expiration of the term of two years, he can only recover the rent due for three years prior to date of suit according to ordinary law. The plaintiff is, therefore, entitled only to the arrears of rent at the rate of Rs. 368-8-0 per annum for three years before date of suit, together with the interest 12 per cent. per annum on the amount of each year's rent from the date when it falls due, i. e., from January 19, 1924, January 19, 1925, and January 19, 1926, up to date of suit. In modification of the decree of the lower Court, a decree will be passed in plaintiff's favour for the aforesaid amount, viz., Rs. 1,312-12-6 together with interest at 6 per cent. from the date of suit till realization, recoverable from out of the family properties in the hands of defendants Nos. 2 to 4. In the peculiar circumstances of this case, we think fit to direct the parties to bear their own costs throughout.

A.-D. Decree modified.

(2) 149 Ind. Cas. 722; A I R 1934 Cal. 135; 37 C W N 971; 6 R C 630.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Letter Patent Appeal No. 15 of 1934

January 8, 1935

DALIP SINGH AND BHIDE, JJ.

WARAS AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat FATIMA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Custom (Punjab)—Succession—Arains of Chunian Tahsil, Lahore District—Sister of last male-holder whether a preferential heir to collaterals of third degree.

Among Arains of Chunian Tahsil, Lahore District, the sister of the last male-holder is a preferential heir to collaterals of the third degree.

L. P. A. against the judgment of Mr. Justice Jai Lal, dated November 20, 1933, passed in C. A. No. 909 of 1932, reversing that of the Additional District Judge, Lahore, dated April 9, 1232, which reversed that of the Subordinate Judge, Fourth Class, Chunian, dated April 23, 1931.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Nazir Ahmad and Muhammad Husain, for the Respondents.

Dalip Singh, J.—The only question arising in the case is whether among Arains of Chuninan Tahsil, Lahore District, the sister of the last male holder is a preferential heir to collaterals of the 3rd degree. The trial Court in my opinion rightly placed the onus on the sister in the first instance, but pointed out quite correctly again that the onus was light in view of the exception stated in the riwaj-i-am to the general answer to question No. 61. The exception is no doubt confined in terms to villages in the proximity of Lahore, but in view of the fact that custom is ordinarily tribal and not local and the previous judicial decisions in Zainab v. Amir (1) and Jhandi v. Chiragh Din (2), which appear to have considered cases throughout the Lahore District and the instances given in the Schedule, and the particular instance relating to self-acquired property in this village itself, the onus was in my opinion light and has been sufficiently rebutted. In any event the learned Counsel for the appellant has entirely failed to show that the judgment of the learned Judge sitting in Single Bench is wrong. I would, therefore, dismiss the appeal with costs.

Bhide, J.—I agree.

D. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 174 P R 1889.

(2) 112 Ind. Cas. 840; 10 Lah. 422; A I R 1928 Lah. 870.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 1879 of 1933
March 11, 1935
ABDUL RASHID, J.

Sayed MUHAMMAD HUSSAIN AND OTHERS —PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS
versus
DIN MUHAMMAD AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

*Custom (Punjab)—Water rights—Batala—Ars—Held, that the custom whereby defendants could use* ars of old well for carrying water of new well to fields, existed.

Held, that the defendants had established the existence of a local custom in Batala whereby they could use the ars (water channels) of the old well for carrying the water of the new well to their fields on specified days.

S.C. A. from the decree of the District Judge, Gurdaspur, dated August 8, 1933, modifying that of the Subordinate Judge, Fourth Class, Gurdaspur, dated March 14, 1933.

Mr. R. L. Anand I, for the Appellants.

Mr. Muhammad Munir, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal arises out of an action brought by the plaintiffs-appellants for a permanent injunction to the effect that the water of the new well constructed by defendant No. 1 in Khasra No. 446 should not be allowed to pass through the ars (water channels) of the old well. It was alleged in the plaint that there was a well in Khasra No. 430 which was jointly owned by the parties, that defendant No. 1 had a right to take the the water of this well for irrigating his fields on certain specified days through ars (water channels) which pass through some of the fields of the plaintiffs. The defendant had constructed another well and had begun taking the water of the new well through the old water channels, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to restrain him from using the old water channels for carrying the water of the new well to his fields. The defendants pleaded inter alia that there was a local custom in Batala whereby they were entitled to use the ars of the old well for carrying the water of the new well to their fields provided they used the ars for the water of the new well only on specified days according to the old turns. Both the lower Courts held that the defendants had established the existence of a custom whereby they could use the ars of the old well for carrying the water of the new well to their fields on specified days The learned District Judge, however, granted a certificate to the plaintiffs on the question of custom, and the plaintiffs have preferred the present second appeal to this Court.

The learned Counsel for the appellants has taken me through the evidence in the case and has contended that the evidence adduced by the respondents does not establish the custom on which they rely. The defendants' witnesses have quoted eleven instances wherein persons who have constructed new wells have used the water channels of the old wells for irrigating their fields from the new wells. Two of the witnesses produced by the defendants are Municipal Commissioners and nine others are proprietors in Batala. Several of them have sunk new wells and have used the old ars for irrigating their fields from the new wells.

In none of these instances did any of the co-sharers object to the old ars being used for carrying the water of the new wells. This evidence, in my opinion, conclusively establishes the custom relied upon by the defendants.

The evidence in rebuttal is of the flimsiest character. The plaintiffs have produced two witnesses, who merely state that ars of the old well cannot be used by a co-sharer for carrying the water of the new well. They have not given any instances. This evidence is far too vague and inconclusive to rebut the evidence produced on behalf of the defendants.

For the reasons given above I hold that the learned District Judge has decided the case correctly and I, therefore, dismiss this appeal with costs.

The cross-objections preferred by respondent No. 1 on the question of costs are also dismissed with costs.

D. Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 212 of 1930
August 16, 1934
MITTER AND EDGLEY, JJ.

RATI LAL NANJI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS
versus
UTTAM LAL SARCAR AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Partnership—Representation by one, whether binds the other—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 49—Money decree against one partner—Sale of partnership property—Whether operative against the other.

Any representation by one of the partners will not bind the other partner.

Order XXI, r. 49, Civil Procedure Code, is an imperative provision of the statute and renders the sale of partnership property in execution of the decree in a money suit against one partner, invalid and inoperative as against the other partners.

A. against the decree of the Sub-Judge, Asansol, dated July 23, 1930.

Messrs. A. K. Roy, Susil Chandra Sen and Amarendra Nath Bose, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Sarat Chandra Bose and Gopendra Nath Das, for the Respondents.

Mitter, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiffs from a decree of the Subordinate Judge of Asansol, dated July 23, 1930, by which their suit claiming several reliefs was dismissed. The reliefs claimed in the plaint are: (1) that certain coal lands mentioned in Sch. (1) to the plaint be declared to be the joint and partnership properties of plaintiff No. 1 and defendant No. 2 constituting the firm of Khengarji Amrital & Co., (plaintiff No. 2): (2) that a decree in Money Suit No. 207 and the subsequent proceedings thereof are not binding on the plaintiffs or either of them; (3) that the sale in execution of the said decree is void or even if it be held to be valid is not binding on plaintiff No. 1 and his share has not been affected thereby, and (4) that it be declared that plaintiff No. 1 has a right to redeem the schedule properties and the decree for redemption may be passed after taking an account of what would be due to the principal defendant.

The case stated in the plaint is that the principal defendant Uttamlal Sarkar and his co-sharers are the joint owners of Mauza Jote Dhamo and that the one-half share of the said undivided mauza belongs to the said defendant and the remaining half share to his co-sharers; that in the said mauza there is a plot of land measuring 527 bighas the under-ground coal mining rights thereof was demised to one Mr. James Kirkwood by two leases one of which was executed by the principal defendants on January 28, 1920, in respect of his undivided half share and the other by his co-sharers Hem Chandra Sarkar and others on the same date and at the same time in respect of the remaining eight annas: that on April 17, 1920, Mr. Kirkwood demised on certain terms his rights in the said plot of 527 bighas acquired under the two leases to the proforma defendant for the firm of Khengarji Amritlal & Co., the partners whereof were the proforma defendants Amritlal Ojha and the late Nanji Khengarji, the father of plaintiff No. 1 that on June 20, 1921, Mr. Kirkwood conveyed to the firm of Khengarji Amritlal & Co., the right which he had under the two leases, viz., his right to receive royalty from the said firm under the sub-lease of April 17, 1920; that the said firm became the tenant under the principal defendant and his co sharers in respect of the premises demised by the leases of January 28, 1920, that plaintiff's father had 7 annas share in the colliery that plaintiff No. 1's father died on March 3, 1928, that on the death of his father the plaintiff became entitled to his entire share in the partnership business regarding the Jote Dhamo Colliery; that some time in August 1928, plaintiff No. 1 came to know that the colliery has been sold in execution of a decree obtained by defendant No. 1 for the royalty of the said colliery that as a result of his inquiries it transpired that defendant No. 1 had instituted a suit (Miscellaneous No. 207 of 1924) against defendant No. 2 for certain amount due to him in respect of royalty of the colliery and had obtained a charge decree on April 21, 1926, which was eventually confirmed by the High Court on January 18, 1928, that defendant No. 1 proceeded to sell some of the properties covered by the said charge decree and that he himself had purchased the same at a grossly inadequate price of Rs. 700, the real price being Rs. 1,25,000; that in the said suit neither plaintiff's father nor the plaintiff was made a party that the plaintiff believes that defendant No. 1 followed an illegal and irregular procedure in bringing about the sale, that the properties being partnership properties could not be sold by defendant No. 1 in execution of a decree against defendant No. 2 alone and the partnership properties have not in fact been sold. On this state of pleadings the plaintiffs asked for the reliefs which have already been stated. There were several defences to the suit but it is only necessary to mention those defences which bear on the points raised by the present appeal. They are: (1) that defendant No. 2 was the sole owner and proprietor of the firm of Khengarji Amritlal & Co. (2) that the defendant No. 1 executed the decree in Suit No. 207 of 1924 quite legally and purchased the properties at a fair price (3) that the plaintiff allowed himself to be represented by defendant No. 2 in all transactions regarding the disputed colliery with the lessors and is bound by the decree in Money Suit No. 207 of 1924, on the principle of estoppel, acquiescence and waiver. On these pleadings several issues were framed.

Issue No. 2 is to the following effect: Is plaintiff No. 1, a partner in the firm of Khengarji Amritalal & Co. (plaintiff No. 2) The finding of the Subordinate Judge on this issue is in favour of the plaintiff-appellant. He has held that Nanji Khengarji who was a partner in the firm of Nanji is the father of plaintiff No. 1. The finding of the Subordinate Judge on this part of the case has been challenged by the respondent by way of cross-objection and we have heard the respondent on this point but nothing that we have heard from the respondent induces us to take a view different from that of the Subordinate Judge on this point. It is true that no deed of partnership was produced in this case, besides it appears that the conveyance (Ex. 4) executed by Amritlal Ojha in favour of the firm shows that Amritlal Ojha was not the sole partner, for in that document Amritlal describes himself as a member of the firm of Khengarji Amritlal & Co. This document is dated January 22, 1921 (see p. 17, part 2). The subsequent conveyance by Mr. Kirkwood, dated June 20, 1921, is in favour of the firm Khengarji Amritalal & Co. see Ex. 5, p. 20, part 2. It also appears that in Ex. 9 series a published report of the Government of the list of coal mines worked under the Indian Mines Act, Nanji father of plaintiff No, 1, is also shown as the partner of the firm and these reports extend from 1920 to 1927 see pp. 9, 10 and 25, part 2. We have no doubt on this documentary evidence that the plaintiff's father was the partner of the firm. The respondent in support of his cross-objection has seriously commented on the fact that Amritalal Ojha has not gone into the witness box and that his agent Maniklal who was present in Court has not also been examined and that when material evidence is withheld, an inference unfavourable to the party withholding the evidence should be drawn. Chunilal, however, has been examined on behalf of the plaintiff and he proves that Nanji was the proprietor of the colliery and that he was appointed by Nanji some ten years before he was deposing to look after the work of the colliery. We are therefore of opinion that the Subordinate Judge has rightly decided the issue in favour of the plaintiff. This disposes of the cross-objection.

Issues No. 3 and 4 raise the question as to whether Amritlal represented the firm in Money Suit No. 207 of 1924, and whether the decree obtained by defendant No. 1 for royalty of the colliery in Money Suit No. 207 and the sale in execution thereof are binding on the plaintiffs. It is to be noticed in this connection that plaintiff No. 1 is the son of one of the partners and plaintiff No. 2 is the firm of Khengarji Amritalal & Co. The Subordinate Judge has held on the evidence of Uttam Lal Sarkar, defendant No. 1 alone, that Amritalal represented plaintiff's firm and the plaintiffs are bound by the decree against defendant No. 1 and the sale thereunder. This finding of the Subordinate Judge has been challenged by the learned Advocate-General who appears for the plaintiffs-appellants. After reading the evidence of Uttamal we do not think that any case of presentation has been made out.

On the other hand the receipts which Uttamlal gave to Khegarji Amritlal & Co., would go to show that Uttamlal was treating the company as the tenant. These receipts extend over the period of four years commencing from July 29, 1924, and ending with November 28, 1927; (see Ex. 7 series) pp. 38 to 41, part 2. Some of the receipts cover a period subsequent to the institution of the suit of 1924, and they make it clear that the tenant was the firm. After issuing the receipts, defendant No. 1 who was plaintiff in Suit No. 207 might have added the firm as party to the suit if he wanted to make the decree in the suit binding on the firm. The evidence of defendant No. 1 is that Amritalal told him that he had acquired Kirkwood's interest in the firm but any representation by one of the partners will not bind the other partner, Nanji. If defendant No. 1 had only cared to look into the conveyance by Kirkwood, he would have at once discovered that the transferee was the firm, one member of which was Amritalal. This conveyance at p. 21, part 2, refers to the pottah of April 17, 1920, granted by Kirkwood in favour of Amritalal where Amritlal is described as a member of the firm. The receipts and these documents show conclusively that the doctrine of representation cannot be availed of by defendant No. 1. For the above reasons the conclusion of the Subordinate Judge that Amritalal represented the firm cannot be supported. It follows from this that the sale is not binding either on plaintiff No. 1 and cannot affect his interest nor is the sale binding on the firm, i. e., plaintiff No. 2. The share of plaintiff No. 1 in the partnership seems to be five and half annas, and the sale so far as he is concerned, does not bind him.

The next question for consideration is what is the effect of the sale so far as the firm plaintiff No. 2 is concerned. Order XXI, r. 49, Civil Procedure Code, provides that save as otherwise provided by that rule property belonging to a partnership shall not be attached or sold in execution of a decree other than a decree passed against the firm or against the partners of the firm as such. This is an imperative provision of the statute and renders the sale in execution of the decree in Money Suit No. 207 of 1924, invalid and imperative as against the plaintiffs or either of them. It appears from the application for execution dated March 16, 1928, pp. 47 to 50, part 2, that the decree-holder prayed for realization of the decretal amount including costs and interest by auction sale of the colliery in question, that in the said execution case the property was sold and was purchased by the decree-holder for Rs. 700 only see Ex. 2, p. 63, part 2. The sale as we have held is inoperative but there is an alternative prayer in the plaint that it be declared that the first plaintiff has the right to redeem the schedule properties and a decree for redemption be passed after taking an account of what will be due to defendant No. 1. Having regard to the fact that Amritalal Ojha represented to defendant No. 1 that he was sole partner of the firm, it will be just to grant the plaintiff the alternative relief claimed by him and we accordingly set aside the decree of the Subordinate Judge dismissing the plaintiff's suit and direct that plaintiff No. 1 be allowed to redeem the properties which have been sold and that a decree for redemption be passed after taking an account of what will be due to defendant No. 1 in accordance with the provisions of O. XXXIV, r. 7, Civil Procedure Code, read with r. 15. Considering all the circumstances of the case, we are of opinion that each party should bear its own costs throughout.

Edgley, J.—I agree.

D. Decree set aside.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Civil Revision Petition No. 590 of 1933

April 9, 1934

ABDUL RASHID, JJ.

SOHAN SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—PETITIONERS

versus

MOOL SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—OPPOSITE PARTIES

Decree—Ex parte decree—Appeal from—Adjudication regarding rights and liabilities of the person against whom ex parte decree is passed—Jurisdiction of trial Court to set aside ex parte decree.

Where the Appellate Court has adjudicated regarding the rights and liabilities of the person against whom an ex parte decree has been passed, the ex parte decree against such person cannot be set aside by the trial Court, but where there has been no adjudication regarding the rights and liabilities of such person in the Appellate Court, the trial Court is entitled to entertain an application for the setting aside of the ex parte decree against him. The fact that a person has been impleaded as a pro forma respondent in the appeal does not in any way affect the jurisdiction of the trial Court so far as the setting aside of the ex parte decree against such person is concerned.

[Case-law referred to.]

C. R. P. from an order of the Junior Sub-Judge, Sheikhupura, dated May 11, 1933.

Mr. A. R. Khosla, for the Petitioners.

Mr. J. G. Sethi, for the Opposite Parties.

Judgment.—The facts bearing on the question of law involved in this petition for revision may be shortly stated. On March 21, 1931, Sohan Singh and three others instituted a suit for recovery of Rs. 1,134-4-0, on the basis of two promissory notes against Hira Singh and his son Mul Singh. On May 20, Sardar Kirpal Singh, Subordinate Judge, passed an ex parte decree for Rs. 1,075, against Mul Singh, defendant No. 2, and dismissed the suit against Hira Singh. Mul Singh applied to have the ex parte decree set aside, and his application was accepted and the ex parte decree was set aside on October 10. No notice was issued to Hira Singh defendant of the application presented by Mul Singh for the setting aside of the ex parte decree.

After the ex parte decree against Mul Singh had been set aside, the suit, seems to have proceeded against both Hira Singh and Mul Singh. On March 4, 1932, the Subordinate Judge dismissed the claim of the plaintiffs against Mul Singh, but granted them a decree for Rs. 1,134-4-0 and costs against Hira Singh. This decree against Hira Singh was ex parte. On April 2, 1932, Hira Singh applied for the setting aside of the ex parte decree passed against him on March 4, on the ground that after the dismissal of the suit against him on May 20, 1931, he had never been served with a notice and that the suit had been wrongly restored as against him also. This application was accepted by the Subordinate Judge on May 11, 1933, and against this order the plaintiffs have preferred the present petition for revision. When the suit of the plaintiffs was dismissed against Mul Singh on March 4, 1932, they preferred an appeal to the learned District Judge, praying that they may be awarded a decree against Mul Singh also, and that the Subordinate Judge had erred in giving them a decree against Hira Singh only. In that appeal they made Hira Singh a pro forma respondent, but no relief was claimed against him as their suit against him had been decreed by the trial Court. This appeal was dismissed by the District Judge.

It was contended on behalf of the petitioner that the learned Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction to set aside the ex parte decree passed against Hira Singh respondent as that decree had merged in the decree of the Appellate Court, and that it was only the Appellate Court which could set aside such a decree. It was urged that the learned Subordinate Judge had placed reliance on a ruling of the Madras High Court reported as Subramania Iyer v. Varadarajulu Naidu (1), but that this ruling did not lay down sound law and was opposed to the view taken by the other High Courts. Reference was made in this connection to p. 547 of Mulla's Civil Procedure Code, Edition 9, where it is remarked that:

"the High Courts of Calcutta, Allahabad and the Chief Court of Oudh have held that where an appeal is preferred from an ex parte decree, and the decree is confirmed or otherwise disposed of in appeal under O. XLI, r. 32, the Court which passed the ex parte decree has no longer any power to entertain an application to set it aside even if the application was made before the appeal was filed. This is because the decree of the lower Court is merged in that of the Appellate Court."

The learned Counsel also relied on Hedlot Khasia v. KaRan Khasiani (2) and Abdul Khalef Molla v. Bama Charan Chetterji (3), and contended that as Hira Singh was a respondent in the appeal preferred by the plaintiffs, he could not present an application to the original Court for the setting aside of the ex parte decree. It was, however, conceded that if Hira Singh had not been made a respondent in the appeal, the ex parte decree against him could have been set aside by the trial Court.

On behalf of the respondent reliance was placed on Kalimuddin Ahmad v. Esahakuddin (4) and Raghunandan Chaube v. Bhuwal Tiwari (5). It is unnecessary to deal with all these rulings in detail. The principle underlying the rulings seems to be that where the Appellate Court had adjudicated regarding the rights and liabilities of the person against whom an ex parte decree has been passed, the ex parte decree against such person cannot be set aside by the trial Court, but that where there has been no adjudication regarding the rights and liabilities of such person in the Appellate Court, the trial Court is entitled to entertain an application for the setting aside of ex parte decree against him. The fact that a person has been impleaded as a pro forma respondent in the appeal does not in any way affect the jurisdiction of the trial Court so far as the setting aside of the ex parte decree against such person is concerned: vide Brij Lal Singh v. Mahadeo Prasad 12 Ind. Cas. 669 (6). For the reasons given above I am of opinion that the Subordinate Judge had the jurisdiction to deal with the application of Hira Singh for the setting aside of the ex parte decree.

The learned Counsel for the petitioners raised several contentions dealing with the merits of the case. I am reluctant to deal with these points as any remarks made by me may prejudice the fair trial of the case in the lower Courts. Moreover, the only question that can be raised in revision must be one connected with the illegal or irregular exercise of jurisdiction by the trial Court. I therefore dismiss this petition for revision. Parties shall bear their own costs in this Court.

D. Petition dismissed.

(1) 103 Ind. Cas. 146; 26 L W 19; 53 M L J 110; A I R 1927 Mad. 722.

(2) 13 Ind. Cas. 377; 15 C L J 241.

(3) 140 Ind. Cas. 586; 36 C W N 747; A I R 1932 Cal. 773; Ind. Rul. (1933) Cal. 7.

(4) 83 Ind. Cas. 220; 51 C 715; 39 C L J 399; 28 C W N 795; A I R 1924 Cal. 830.

(5) 140 Ind. Cas. 178; 54 A 423; A I R 1932 All. 340; (1932) A L J 257; Ind. Rul. (1932) All. 605.

(6) 12 Ind. Cas. 669; 17 C W N 133; 15 C L J 432.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Letters Patent Appeal No. 37 of 1934

January 31, 1935

ADDISON AND DIN MOHAMMAD, JJ.

ATMA RAM—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

MUKHI RAM AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS FIRM GULAB RAI GUJJAR MAL, AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Succession—Debts—Priority—Personal debts of deceased take priority to all claims against heirs who are in possession of property.

When an heir succeeds to the property of the deceased, he takes it subject to the charge of his debts. In other words, that portion of the property does not devolve in fact on the heirs, which is required to satisfy the debts of the deceased and it stands apart, as it were, for the creditors of the deceased. That being so, the personal debts of the deceased being a first charge on the property left by him, takes priority over all claims against the heirs who were then in possession of the property. Bhola Nath v. Maqbul-un-nissa (1) and Hajee Abdullah Sahib v. Alanji Abdul Latif Sahib (3), relied on.

L. P. A. against the order of Mr. Justice Abdul Rashid, dated February 27, 1934, in Civil Appeal No. 705 of 1933, reported as 150 Ind. Cas. 964 reversing that of the District Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated January 6, 1933, who reversed that of the Subordinate Judge, Second Class, Hoshiarpur, dated June 6, 1932.

Mr. Fakir Chand, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Achhru Ram and Hem Raj Mahajan, for the Respondents.

Din Mohammad, J.—The facts bearing upon the question of law involved in this Letters Patant Appeal are as follows:—

The firm Gulab Rai-Gujjar Mal instituted a suit for recovery of Rs. 26,000 against Salig Ram and his grandsons. On June 11, 1921, the parties filed a compromise discharging Salig Ram and holding his grandsons alone liable for the amount found due. Salig Ram died some time in 1924. On June 2, 1924, Salig Ram's creditors, Mukhi Ram and others, brought a suit for recovery of their debt due from Salig Ram personally. This suit was instituted against Salig Ram's grandsons as his legal representatives or heirs. A decree was made in this suit in favour of Mukhi Ram and others. In the course of the execution proceedings taken by the firm Gulab Rai-Gujjar Mal against Salig Ram's grandsons, a house belonging to Salig Ram attached and sold. Mukhi Ram and others claimed priority for their claim in the sale proceeds of this house, on the ground that the property being personal of Salig Ram, his debt due to them must be satisfied first. This claim was resisted by the firm Gulab Rai-Gujjar Mal, on the ground that as the property was now in the hands of the grandsons, it should be deemed to be their property for all purposes and hence liable for the firm's decree against them. Mukhi Ram and others' claim was disallowed. They then instituted the present suit on the same allegations, which was decreed by the Subordinate Judge but dismissed by the District Judge on appeal. An appeal was preferred to this Court against the order of the District Judge and Abdul Rashid, J. before whom the appeal was heard, reversed his judgment and ordered that the deceased's property should first be applied to the satisfaction of the decree against the estate of the deceased, and that the firm be required to refund the amount received by it by the sale of the house. The firm appeals.

We have no hesitation in affirming the decision of the learned Judge of this Court. The law applied by him is well established, being based on sound principles of English Law. A similar question came before a Division Bench of the Allahabad High Court in Bhola Nath v. Maqbulunnisa (1), and the learned Judges there following Kinderley v. Jervis (2), held that the personal debts of the deceased being a first charge on the property left by him, took priority over all claims against the heirs who were then in possession of the property. In Haji Abdullah Sahib v. Alanji Abdul Latif Sahib 57 Ind. Cas. 854 (3), the Allahabad judgment was cited and approved. At page 857 Wallis, C. J. who delivered the judgment remarked as follows:—

"I consider the father's creditors have a prior claim to the money as it belonged to the father and could be taken by the sons only subject to their rights to have their debts paid from it."

As remarked above, we are in respectful agreement with this view. When an heir succeeds to the property of the deceased, he takes it subject to the charge of his debts. In other words, that portion of the property does not devolve in fact on the heirs, which is required to satisfy the

(1) 26 A 28; A W N 1903, 184.

(2) (1856) 22 Beav 1; 25 L J Ch. 538; 2 Jur. (N S) 602; 4 W R 579; 111 R R 238.

(3) 57 Ind. Cas. 854; 28 M L T 34; 12 L W 70; 39 M L J 91.

*Page of 57 Ind. Cas.—[Ed.]

debts of the deceased and it stands apart, as it were, for the creditors of the deceased. That being so, the creditors' prior claim cannot be resisted in law, the heirs being entitled only to the residue left after the satisfaction of the personal debts of the deceased.

The question of refund presents no difficulty. This suit was instituted at a time when the assets had not yet been realised by the firm, and if in the meantime they have done so, they must refund the amount wrongfully received by them.

We, therefore, uphold the judgment of the learned Judge and dismiss this appeal with costs throughout.

D. Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Suit No. 2186 of 1931
March 20, 1934
BUCKLAND, AG. C. J.

PROTIVA SUNDARI DEBI - PLAINTIFF
versus
SARADA CHARAN GOHO AND OTHERS —DEFENDANTS

Mortgage—Property not mortgaged included in sale proclamation and sold—Mortgagor not rectifying sale proclamation—If disentitled from recovering property—Suit to set aside such sale—Held, it may be treated as an application under s. 47, Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), made on day the plaint was presented—Receiver—No attempt made to interfere with his right to property in his care—Receiver, if a necessary party—Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), s. 47.

Where property which is not included in mortgage is included in the sale proclamation and sold the mortgagor is not disentitled from recovering the same, merely because he abstains from rectifying the sale proclamation. Something more is necessary to enable the mortgagee to entitle him to bring to sale in execution of his mortgage decree such property. Willmott v. Barker (1), referred to.

The Receiver of the property of a party to litigation, is not a necessary party if no attempt is made thereby to interfere with the right of the Receiver to the property entrusted to his care, where the subject-matter of suit is not in the possession of the Receiver. Jotindra Nath v. Sarfaraj Mia (2), distinguished.

A suit was instituted to set aside a Court sale in respect of property not included in the mortgage:

Held, that the suit might be treated as an application under s. 47, Civil Procedure Code, made on the day on which the plaint was presented.

Messrs. W. W. K. Page and A. K. Roy (Jr.), for the Plaintiff.

The Advocate-General and N. Chatterjee, for the Defendants

Judgment.—The plaintiff in this case asks for a declaration that the sale held by the Registrar of this Court on September 25, 1931, in Suit No. 1120 of 1927 is not binding. The facts are not in dispute. The plaintiff's husband and one Himangshu Sekhar Gupta were the joint owners of a moiety of a printing press known as the 'Gupta Press' situate at No. 221, Cornwallis Street, and the copy-right in a publication known as the 'Gupta Press Panjika' as well as other publications.

"The owner of the other moiety was the defendant Sushila Bala Debi. In the year 1918 Sushila Bala Debi brought a suit against the plaintiff's husband for partition and accounts, and on June 28, 1918, Mr. Nripendra Nath Bose was appointed Receiver. The terms on which he was appointed are set out in para. 3 of the plaint, and he was appointed to take possession of the 'Gupta Press' with its goodwill, leasehold rights, machinery, stock-in-trade, printing machineries, copyright and materials of and in the Gupta Press Panjika or Year Book, corrugated iron roof room on the first floor of premises No. 221, Cornwallis Street, to be sold as a going concern by the Receiver, and the copyright in other publications, with liberty to the parties to bid and set off half the amount of the bid less Rs. 4,000.

On December 20, 1923, the Receiver was directed to print the publication known as the 'Gupta Press Panjika' for the year 1924-25 and to raise Rs. 5,000 at 12 per cent on the security of the Gupta Press concern for, I presume, the purposes of financing the publication, which he did by a mortgage dated August 8, 1924, whereby he borrowed Rs. 5,000 from the defendant Sarada Charan Goho on the security of what I may very shortly state was the press and its goodwill. The defendant Goho brought a suit in this Court on his mortgage and obtained a final decree which directed the mortgaged properties to be sold, and it is alleged that at the sale in execution of the decree not only was the mortgaged property sold but other property not included in the mortgage was also sold. So far as the plaintiff charges that that was done fraudulently, such charge has now been withdrawn and the case has been limited to the claim to have the sale set aside so far as it affects property which was sold and which was not the subject of the mortgage and, therefore, should not have been sold. What was mortgaged was "all beneficial interest and goodwill in the said business carried on under the name and style of Gupta Press at 221, Cornwallis Street, Calcutta, and secondly, all and singular the several chattles and things belonging to the said Gupta Press concern and specifically described in the schedule hereto."

Turning to the schedule, one finds there five items which are sufficiently specific not to admit of much error. There is no mention of any publication or of the 'Gupta Press Panjika' to which I understand a certain value is attached. To the plaint is attached a schedule in two parts, the first part of which admittedly includes the property covered by the mortgage, and the second part of which includes items admittedly not within the schedule to the mortgage but which, it is argued on behalf of the defendant are within the general words in cl. 1 of the deed which I have quoted, and, if not comprised therein, admittedly are not within the security. Various other defences, more or less technical, have been taken and they are comprised in the following issues:

1. Is the Receiver a necessary party to this? 2. Did defendant in execution of his decree cause to be sold property not covered by the mortgage in his favour? 3. Is the plaintiff entitled to restrain the defendant from publishing 'Gupta Press Panjika' or other publications mentioned in para. 2, Sch. A? 4. Are s. 47 and O. XXI, r. 78, bars to the maintainability of his suit? 5. Was sale proclamation and notice settled on notice to the plaintiff? If so, what is the effect thereof? 6. To what relief, if any, is the plaintiff entitled? On issue No. 5 no argument has been addressed to me by the learned Advocate-General, though he exhibited the affidavit of service of notice to the parties to the mortgage suit to settle the sale proclamation and the minutes of the Registrar when he settled the sale proclamation. But Mr. Page on behalf of the plaintiff has referred me to the observations of Fry, J., in Willmott v. Barker (1) (at p. 104*), upon which he relies for the purpose of showing that there was no acquiescence on the part of the plaintiff. As I have said, the learned Advocate-General, though he submitted the issue and put in the relative documents, did not argue the point, and no question of estoppel being raised, it does not appear to me that the plaintiff is necessarily bound if the notification of sale actually and in fact included property which is not the subject of the security. It would, I conceive, require something considerably more than mere abstention on the part of the plaintiff to enable the defendant to say that he was entitled to bring to sale in execution of his mortgage decree property which belonged to the mortgagor though it was not subject to his mortgage.

Taking the other issues in order, it has been argued on the authority of Jotindra Nath v. Sarfaraj Mia 6 Ind. Cas. 214 (2) that the Receiver was a necessary party to this suit. But that was a case in which the property, the subject-matter of the suit, was actually at the time in the possession of the Receiver. That is not the case here, and the learned Judges observed:

"It is obvious that the Receiver of the property of a party to litigation, is not a necessary party if no attempt is made thereby to interfere with the right of the Receiver to the property entrusted to his care."

There is no question in this suit of interfering with the right of the Receiver. The defendant Goho has no interest in the rights of the Receiver. The Receiver was the representative of the parties in the suit in which he was appointed. It may be that, if this suit should succeed, the property recovered should be handed back to the Receiver, but that is not a matter in which the defendant Goho is interested. In my judgment this is not a case in which the Receiver is a necessary party. I will pass over Issue No. 2 because that involves a question of construction to which I shall presently return. Issue No. 3 is only a question of relief. With reference to issue No. 4 Mr. Page on behalf of the plaintiff has conceded that this suit is not maintainable and that he cannot resist the arguments advanced, but he has invited me on the authority of Biru Mahala v. Shyamabhurn (3), which is one of the authorities cited on behalf of the defendant to adopt the course then followed by the learned Judges and to treat this suit as though it were an application under s. 47, Civil Procedure Code. As in that case, the suit has been instituted in the Court which has jurisdiction to execute the decree and by which the order for sale was made and under whose direction the sale was held,

(1) (1880) 15 Ch. D 96; 28 W R 911; 43 L T 195.

*Page of (1880) 15 Ch. D.—[Ed].

(2) 6 Ind. Cas. 214.

(3) 22 C 483.

This, as pointed out there, is merely a defect in form, and I see no reason why the same course should not now be adopted: and if it is adopted, the only logical course is to treat the suit from the beginning as though it were an application made on the day on which the plaint was presented. In that case no question of limitation will arise. This is admitted. A question of limitation would only arise if the suit were treated as though it were an application under s. 47 made now or on some date subsequent to that on which the plaint was presented, but I see no reason for that and I direct that this suit shall be treated as an application under s. 47, Civil Procedure Code made on the day on which the plaint was presented.

The only question which remains to be decided is whether what was sold is covered by the mortgage. What was sold was the beneficial interest in the business. That means the legal interest in the business. That does not carry anything specific. Then there was sold the goodwill in the business. Now goodwill is something intangible and immaterial which must have some relation to something else. It was the goodwill of the business, but it is not specified as the goodwill in any publication or anything of that nature. So far as any question of anything other than a chattel is concerned, that disposes of the matter. The second part of the clause specifically restricts the security to the chattles and things belonging to the Gupta Press concern which are described in the schedule. Admittedly nothing in Sch. 2 to the plaint is to be found in the schedule to the mortgage deed. Nothing in Sch. 2 to the plaint, in my view, is comprised within the first part of the clause which I am now considering. That being so, it follows that that which is to be found in Sch. 2 to the plaint is not within the security and, therefore, was sold by the defendant in execution of his mortgage decree though it was property not covered by the mortgage in his favour. In these circumstances the plaintiff is entitled to relief. The defendant will restore to the Receiver appointed in Suit No. 674 of 1918 the properties specified in Sch. 2 to the plaint. The plaintiff will be entitled to her costs as though this were an application made under s. 47, Civil Procedure Code. As regards any costs which have been incurred and which would not have been incurred if an application had been filed in the first instance, both sides will bear their own costs.

D. Order accordingly.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 296 of 1933
June 27, 1934
YOUNG, C. J. AND RANGI LAL, J.
MIHAN SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
SHIV DITT SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Custom (Punjab)—Reversionary right—Sale of—Whether ipso facto becomes sale of land

The sale of a reversionary right ipso facto does not become a sale of the land which falls to the reversioner when succession opens out. Alabaksh v. Gulam (1), Padmur v. Achha (2) and Narayan Singh v. Lharam Singh (5), followed, Buta Singh v. Jhandu (3), dissented from.

S. C. A. from the decreee of the District Judge, Ludhiana dated November 2, 1932.

Order of Reference.

Dalip Singh, J.—The pedigree table of the parties is given in the judgment of the learned District Judge. The plaintiff Mihan Singh, sues for the entire estate left by Ran Singh on the ground that Ran Singh left a widow Musammat Jai Kaur who is now married to Mihan Singh, plaintiff, and has thereby forfeited her rights. The other reversioner Sadda is dead and hence Mihan Singh is entitled to his share. The suit was originally brought as a declaratory suit on January 13, 1926, but as the Revenue Authorities partitioned this property between Mihan Singh and certain people, who claimed as alienees from Sadda, the plaint was amended into a suit for possession. The plaintiff's case was that Sadda could not transfer his reversionary rights and that the sale which was made in 1909, was void as Musammat Jai Kaur was alive at the time. He also impeaches the sale for want of consideration and necessity. The plaintiff stated that Sadda had died in December 1924. The defendants denied this. After Musammat Jai Kaur's remarriage which took place on April 13, 1917, mutation had taken place on September 25, 1920, when the parties to the present litigation were shown as jointly owning the property. Up till 1920, Musammat Jai Kaur continued in possession though she had re-married in April 1917. The learned District Judge in appeal dismissed the plaintiff's suit holding that it was barred by limitation on the ground that in Alabaksh v. Gulam (1), Padmur v. Achha (2), and Buta Singh v. Jhandu (3), it was held that:

"where a reversioner purports to sell his reversionary rights in an estate during the lifetime of the widow of the last owner, the transaction amounts to no more than a mere agreement to sell which takes effect immediately on the death of the widow, so that the date of alienation is not the date of the sale by the reversioner but the date of the death of the widow on which the transfer takes effect."

He held therefore on the authority of these rulings that in the Punjab the sale of reversionary rights is not void. It can be enforced when the estate falls into possession. He held therefore that the alienation of reversionary rights by Sadda in 1903, became an alienation of property on the remarriage of Musammat Jai Kaur in 1917. The plaintiff's suit for a declaration was therefore barred under Art. II, Punjab Act, I of 1920, and the suit for possession was similarly barred. He made a casual reference that the suit was also barred by the rule of res judicata, but the learned Counsel for the respondents very properly did not rely on this because I do not think the learned District Judge intended to give a decision on the point, he having previously stated expressly that he was deciding the appeal on the question of limitation alone.

The question involved in this appeal raises a point of some difficulty. It may be correct that in the Punjab where the Transfer of Property Act is not in force, an agreement to sell reversionary rights is not void as an agreement and can be enforced when the succession opens out, but it is a different proposition to hold that when a person has sold his reversionary rights then ipso facto when the succession opens out the sale of the reversionary rights becomes the sale of the land which falls to the reversioner on that date. It was held by the Privy Council in Hamath Kuar v. Indra Bahadur (4), that sale of reversionary rights could not be effected by deed of sale for the right was not capable of being so transferred. It has been held that a reversionary right is a spes successionis and therefore the sale of such rights does not need registration. To my mind it appears to be a totally different question as to whether such an agreement can be enforced when succession opens out against the vendor or his representatives. I find however that in Buta Singh v. Jhandu (3), where the suit was to set aside the sale on the ground of lack of consideration and necessity, it was held that the date of limitation was the date of the widow's death. This would certainly support the position of the learned District Judge. Similarly in Naranjan Singh v. Dharm Singh (5), another Division Bench approved of this ruling and allowed a declaratory suit to proceed. On the other hand in Padmur v. Achha (2), the learned Judge held that a suit for specific performance lay to enforce the agreement. I find it difficult to reconcile these rulings. If the sale of reversionary rights ipso facto became a sale of land on the succession opening out the suit should be one for possession and not a suit for specific performance of an agreement to sell. I also find it difficult to reconcile the remarks in Buta Singh v. Jhandu (3), with the Privy Council decisions. A suit by a reversioner to set aside a sale of reversionary rights would not lie, for custom only empowers the reversioner to bring a suit to set aside the alienation of ancestral land and the sale of reversionary rights is not a sale of ancestral land according to the Privy Council, and therefore until steps are taken to enforce the alienation, it would remain merely an agreement to sell and there would be no question of any suit by a reversioner to have the sale of reversionary rights set aside. Such a suit obviously could not be brought in the present case in 1909, when the sale itself took place and I am unable to see that the death or re-marriage of the widow should somehow or other give the reversioner power to bring a suit to have the sale set aside. In view, however, of the Division Bench authorities I consider that this case should be referred to a Division Bench for a decision on the question of limitation.

Mr. Nand Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Mohammad Shah Nawaz, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—The only question for decision in this case is whether the sale of a reversionary right ipso facto becomes a sale of the land which falls to the reversioner when succession opens out. It has

(1) 13 P R 1899.

(2) 89 Ind. Cas. 792; A I R 1926 Lah. 39; 1 Lah. Cas. 286.

(3) 61 Ind. Cas 375; A I R 1921 Lah. 133; 3 U P L R (L) 49; 3 Lah. L J 211.

(4) 71 Ind. Cas. 629; A I R 1922 P C 403; 50 I A 69; 45 A 179; 9 O L J 652; 44 M L J 489; 37 C L J 346; 27 C W N 949; 1 P L W 383; 26 O C 223; 33 M L T 216 (P C)

(5) 129 Ind. Cas. 29; A I R 1930 Lah. 928; Ind. Rul. (1931) Lah. 109; 31 P L R 909.

been held in Padmur v. Achha (2), that a sale of a reversionary right does not effect a transfer of property but merely gives rise to a right which the Court will enforce when the inheritance falls into possession. The same view was taken by a Division Bench of the Chief Court in Alabaksh v. Gulam (1), and by a Division Bench of this Court in Naranjan Singh v. Dharm Singh (5). The learned Judge in Chambers, who has referred this case to a Division Bench, found that he could not reconcile the authorities mentioned above with the ruling in Buta Singh v. Jhandu (3). In that case it was held that the date of the alienation was not the date of the sale of his reversionary right by the reversioner, but the date of the death of the widow on which the transfer takes effect. This decision was based on Alabaksh v. Gulam (1), but in that case all, that was held was that the vendee of a reversionary right can enforce the agreement when succession opens out. Anyhow the balance of authority is against the view taken in Buta Singh v. Jhandu (3). It cannot by any means be said that in this case there was a sale of ancestral property on the date on which the widow remarried. Act I of 1920, has therefore no application to the case. This being so, the ordinary period of limitation, i. e., 12 years would apply to the case. The nature of the suit is that of an ordinary title suit against a trespasser. We are, therefore, of opinion that the suit was not barred by time. The decree of the learned District Judge is therefore set aside and the case is remanded for decision on the merits. Appellant's costs to be paid by the respondents both in this Court and the Court below.

N. Case remanded.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Civil Miscellaneous Petition No. 12 of 1930

May 18, 1934

TEK CHAND AND MONROE, JJ.

In the matter of BOMBAY HOUSE., LTD.,

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 35, 141—Creditor's application for liquidation of company not bona fide—Costs—Company.

Where it is clear that the action of the petitioning creditor in making the application for the winding up and in insisting upon further proceedings in liquidation is not bona fide, the entire costs of the liquidation should be paid by him. In the absence of a clear provision in the Companies Act dealing with a case of this kind, the matter is governed by s 35, Civil Procedure Code. Under that section the High Court can pass proper orders in this behalf.

Referring Order.

Tek Chand, J.—This is an application by Mr. N. D. Kapur, Official Liquidator of the Bombay House, Ltd. (in Liquidation), praying that: (1) a reasonable amount be fixed as his remuneration and (2) orders be passed as to who is to pay him the cost of the liquidation and the amount of his remuneration. The relevant facts are that on November 25, 1930, the Bharat Insurance Co., Ltd. (hereinafter called the "petitioning creditor") presented an application in this Court for the compulsory winding up of the Bombay House, Ltd., (hereinafter called the "Company") alleging that a certain sum of money was due to it by the Company on decrees obtained from the Civil Courts at Lahore, and that the Company was unable to pay its debts. The application was duly advertised and there being no opposition was granted by the Court on March 13, 1931. On the same day it was ordered under s. 164, that all subsequent proceedings in the liquidation, including the appointment of an Official Liquidator, be taken in the Court of the District Judge at Lahore. The District Judge, at the suggestion of the petitioning creditor, appointed Mr. N. D. Kapur as the Official Liquidator by his order, dated November 6, 1931.

On March 7, 1932, the Liquidator reported the Company was a private Company, which had not done any business since 1928, that it had no Office nor any assets, that no trace could be found of three out of the four directors, that after much effort he had been able to get in touch with the managing director, who had stated that he had no records or account books with him and that there was no assets of any kind available. The liquidator submitted, that in these circumstances, no useful purpose would be served by continuing the liquidation proceedings, and prayed that the Company be dissolved. He also submitted a list of the out-of-pocket expenses which he had incurred in issuing advertisements, etc., and prayed that the petitioning creditor be ordered to pay him the amount. Along with this petition, he attached a letter from S. N. Ahmad, the managing director of the Company, stating that the Company had closed its business in October 1928, and that in his absence the petitioning creditor had attached the entire property of the Company including its records, account books and other documents, and sold its assets, and by this act it had ruined the Company. It was also stated that the debts due by the third parties to the Company had become time-barred.

The petitioning creditor opposed the Official Liquidator's application, for dissolution of the Company and prayed that the Official Liquidator be ordered to proceed with the work of liquidation in co-operation with the petitioning creditor," and that he be directed to arrange for the public examination of the directors of the Company, which was likely to disclose the true state of the affairs of the Company and lead to the discovery of the frauds which were alleged to have been committed by the directors. It was denied that the petitioning creditor had attached the books of account or the stock-in-trade of the Company. On hearing these objections, the District Judge passed an order under s. 195 for the public examination of the managing director and also ordered that the other directors be summoned. After much difficulty, the liquidator was able to secure the attendance of the managing director. A considerable time was taken upon in disposing of his objections, after which he was examined before the District Judge. In the course of these proceedings the petitioning creditor pressed for the prosecution of the managing director. On June 23, 1933, the learned District Judge held, that there was:

"absolutely no prima facie case against the Managing Director on any grounds under which his prosecution could be lodged."

He found as a fact that in execution of a decree obtained by the petitioning creditor against the Company for recovery of arrears of rent and ejectment, the entire goods in the premises of the Company, together with a number of books of account and papers, had been removed. He had ordered the Official Liquidator to make enquiries as to what had become of these account-books, but in spite of his best efforts they could not be traced in the malkhana or elsewhere, and the learned Judge came to the conclusion that they had been either misplaced or lost. The conduct of these proceedings against the managing director naturally required money and no funds or other assets had come into the hands of the Liquidator. Accordingly, on May 6, 1932, he made an application to the District Judge stating that he had already spent about Rs. 100 from his pockets, that the public examination of the directors was likely to cost about Rs. 200 more and that other expenses of the liquidation might cost a further sum of Rs. 200. He therefore asked for permission to raise a loan of Rs. 500 to cover these expenses. On May 10, 1932, the District Judge passed an order under s. 179 (g) granting permission to the Official Liquidator to raise a loan of Rs. 300 on the security of the assets of the Company. No loan, however, appears to have been raised as the Company had no assets whatever.

On August 24, 1933, the Official Liquidator presented another application before the District Judge, stating that for 19 months he had worked as a Liquidator and spent money out of his own pocket for carrying on the proceedings at the instance of the petitioning creditor and in issuing the necessary advertisements, processes, etc. He accordingly prayed that arrangements be made for payment of the amount to him, and that a reasonable sum be fixed as his remuneration for the work done. The District Judge has forwarded the application to this Court for necessary orders. Notice of the application was duly served on the petitioning creditor and I have heard Counsel on their behalf.

It is contended on behalf of the liquidator that the petitioning creditor (Bharat Insurance Co.) be made to pay him the cost of the liquidation and his remuneration. He urges that the liquidation proceedings were started at the instance of the petitioning creditor, who being the sole creditor, of the Company had already attached and sold all the available assets of the Company and caused their account books to be removed. Their sole object in making the application for winding up appears to have been to use the machinery of the liquidation Court for putting pressure on the managing director and the other directors of the Company with a view to make them pay the decretal amount from their personal funds. The liquidator also urges that the petitioning creditor was all along fully aware that the Company had ceased to do any work, and that it had no assets of any kind, and that shortly after his appointment when he represented to the Court that no useful purpose would be served by proceeding with the liquidation and applied that the Company be dissolved, the petitioning creditor opposed the application and insisted that the public examination of the managing director be conducted and his co-directors prosecuted. The Liquidator therefore prays that the petitioning creditor, who is responsible for all these proceedings, be ordered to bear his entire expenses.

Counsel for the Bharat Insurance Company while expressing his inability to deny the correctness of the facts as stated above, points out that there is no provision in the Indian Companies Act under which his client could be ordered to pay the expenses incurred by the liquidator and his remuneration. The point is not covered by authority and is, I think, of sufficient importance to be decided by a larger Bench. I accordingly refer the case to a Division Bench and direct that a very early date be fixed, of which notice be given to the Official Liquidator and Counsel for the Bharat Insurance Company.

Mr. Durga Das Jain for the Bharat Insurance Co., Ltd., for the Respondent.

Order.—The facts are set out at length in the referring order dated May 11, 1934, and it is not necessary to repeat them here. After hearing Counsel for the petitioning creditor, we are of the opinion that the petition for the winding up of the Company was not made in good faith by the petitioning creditor (Bharat Insurance Company). The Bharat Insurance Company was the sole creditor of the Bombay House, Ltd., and it appears that in execution of its decrees it had already attached and sold all the available assets of the Company and had caused the account books of the Company to be removed from its office. The facts on the record leave no doubt in our minds that the sole object of the petitioning creditor in applying for the winding up was to put pressure on the managing director and the other directors of Company to pay the decretal amount from their personal funds. Very soon after his appointment the Official Liquidator brought it to the notice of the Court that the Company had stopped business three years before, that it had no assets of any kind, that the whereabouts of the directors were not known and that no useful purpose would be served by proceeding with the liquidation. He accordingly suggested that the only proper course to adopt was to dissolve the Company forthwith. The petitioning creditor however opposed this prayer and moved the Court that the Liquidator be directed to trace the managing director and other directors and have them publicly examined. It was suggested that such examination would lead to the discovery of frauds which had been committed by them and for which they should be prosecuted. Accordingly the learned District Judge directed the Liquidator to trace the directors and arrange for the public examination of the managing director. After much effort, the liquidator was able to secure the attendance of the managing director and he was publicly examined. After examining him the learned District Judge held that there was:

"absolutely no prima facie case against the Managing Director on any grounds under which his prosecution could be lodged."

He also found that long before the application for winding up of the Company had been made, the petitioning creditor had got the entire goods in the premises of the Company seized and sold in execution and the account books removed. It is clear from what has been stated above that the action of the petitioning creditor in making the application for the winding up and in insisting upon further proceedings in liquidation was not bona fide, and we do not see why in the peculiar circumstances of the case the entire cost of the liquidation be not paid by them. As already stated, the Company has not got any assets and there is no reason why the Official Liquidator, who was appointed at the instance of the petitioning creditor and conducted the entire proceedings at their request should suffer personally. In the absence of a clear provision in the Companies Act dealing with a case of this kind, the matter is governed by s. 35, Civil Procedure Code. Under that section, read with s. 141 of the Code, we have ample authority to pass proper orders in this behalf. Under s. 35, costs are in the discretion of the Court, and the Court has fully power to determine by whom, or out of what property, and to what extent, such costs are to be paid and to give all necessary direction for the purpose aforesaid.

In our opinion this is a fit case in which the petitioning creditor (the Bharat Insurance Company) should pay to the Official Liquidator his out-of-pocket expenses in the liquidation proceedings together with a reasonable amount as his remuneration, which we fix at Rs. 150. The Official Liquidator will submit a detailed account of his out-of-pocket expenses to the learned District Judge who, after having it properly checked, will issue a payment order against the Bharat Insurance Company for the amount found due plus Rs. 150 as the Liquidator's remuneration. There will be no order as to costs of this hearing.

N. Order accordingly.

PRIVY COUNCIL

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements (Settlement of Singapore).

December 3, 1934

LORD ATKIN, LORD ALNESS AND SIR SIDNEY ROWLATT.

C. KASIVISVANATHAN CHETTIAR —APPELLANT

versus

S. V. S. CHOKALINGAM CHETTIAR—RESPONDENT

Straits Settlement Ordinance No. 56 (Limitation), ss. 9, 3—Verbal assignment by attorney to himself of property known to be his principal's — Property vests in him in trust for principal—Purpose of trust must be found in object for which he was appointed, —Held, that the purpose for which property vested in attorney as attorney of administrator, was specific.

Where a verbal assignment was made by the appellant, as attorney of the administrator, to himself, of property known to be his principal's :

Held, that he was in a fiduciary capacity and the only result of the proceeding was that the property became vested in him in trust for the administrator.

Held, also that the appellant dealt with the property in a fiduciary capacity antecedent to such dealing and the purpose for which it became vested in him must be found in the purpose for which that capacity was conferred upon him. Soar v. Ashwell (1), referred to.

Held, further that the purpose for which the property became vested in the appellant was specific. If he was regarded in the light of a trustee for the administrator, the purpose was specific. But even if it was to administer the estate and account for the residues to the next of kin, the purpose was also specific. Khaw Sim Tek v. Chuah Hooi Gnoh Neoh (2), explained. Lam Kin Sang v. Cheang Kok Sang (3), relied on.

Messrs. A. B. Vaisey, K. C. Cecil, and W. Turner, for the Appellant.

Sir Gerald Hurst, K. C. and Mr. C. D. Myles, for the Respondent.

Sir Sidney Rowlatt.—This is an appeal from the judgment of the Court of Appeal of the Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements (Settlement of Singapore), dated September 14, 1931, setting aside the judgment of Mills, J., delivered on October 25, 1930, and giving judgment in favour of the respondent.

The suit was begun by writ issued on March 9, 1925, by S. Muthuraman Chettiar, suing as the administrator de bonis non of one S. V. S. Supramaniam Chetty deceased (herein called "the Intestate"). The respondent was substituted as plaintiff, suing in the same capacity, by an order dated September 26, 1928.

As originally framed the suit was against E Kong Guan. The appellant was added as a further defendant by an order dated September 7, 1925. The claim against the appellant with which alone this appeal is concerned, was to make him accountable for certain shares in a rubber estate called Leong Watt Hin Rubber Estate (afterwards converted into 1,250 shares in Leong Watt Hin Estate, Ltd.) and the primary question was whether such shares, which passed into the hands of the appellant under the circumstances to be hereinafter examined, were the private property of the intestate or the property of a firm in which he was a partner, his share therein having been subsequently acquired by the respondent. On this issue there were concurrent findings of fact in favour of the respondent which their Lordships intimated at the hearing that they would not disturb and the main question left is whether the claim was barred by limitation. It is so barred unless the property in question became vested in the respondent in trust for a specific purpose within the meaning of s. 9 of Ordinance No. 56 (Limitations) of the Ordinances of the Straits Settlements.

For some time prior to 1912 the intestate had been the managing partner in a firm of money lenders carrying on business at Malacca under the style or "vilasam" of P. M. S. He also carried on a private business on his own account under the vilasam of S. V. S. His interest in P. M. S. was in the form of a one-half share in a Hindu undivided family which owned a quarter share in P. M. S. The family vilasam was V. E. S.

Before 1912 the intestate had become interested with Guan, the first defendant, in the rubber estate already mentioned, which it is convenient to call, (as was done in the argument), "L. W. H."

In the early part of 1912, as the result of transactions which it is unnecessary to relate in detail, the position was as follows: The land was in Guan's name, but belonged to Guan and two other Chinese associated with him for the purpose of this venture. Guan's interest in it was to the amount of 13/20, afterwards changed to 13/22, the other two holdings, after the alteration, 6/22 and 3/22 respectively. The intestate, as sub-partner with Guan, was entitled to 5 of his 13 parts or shares. About August, 1912, the intestate, being in bad health, left Malacca for India, where he died on December 9, of that year, leaving a widow and son, Shanmugan, and two daughters. On May 2, 1913, the widow gave a power of attorney to one Kadappa to apply for letters of administration in the Straits Settlements and these were granted to him on August 1, 1913. Kadappa was at this time managing P. M. S. as a paid agent.

According to the evidence of Guan, Kadappa came to Malacca about May, 1913, and discussed with him the intestate's affairs, including the L. W. H. shares. In his examination-in-chief, Guan did not say whether this was before or after the grant of letters of administration. In his cross-examination, he said it was before. In his re-examination he said Kadappa told him later that he had taken out the grant. The substance of the conversation according to Guan's evidence was that Kadappa told him to wait for the arrival of the intestate's son (Shanmugan). In cross-examination he said "Kadappa told me to hand the shares over to Shanmugan and the manager of P. M. S." In re-examination he gave Kadappa's words as being "Then" (referring to Shanmugan's arrival) "we can settle." It was suggested in the argument before their Lordships on behalf of the appellant, on the strength of this evidence, that Kadappa had, by these words spoken to Guan, administered this asset and that was the end of the matter. Their Lordships are unable to take this view. Apart from the doubt as to the date of the conversation, it does not appear to their Lordships that what took place amounted to a final dealing with the asset from the administrator's point of view.

In 1913, the appellant who was already a partner in P. M. S., went to India and acquired the share of the intestate's family in that firm. He was now the predominant partner and in 1914 returned to Malacca and took over the management. On April 5, 1914, Kadappa gave a power of attorney to the appellant to act in the administration of the intestate's estate and as his attorney and in his name to perform a numerous class of acts, being those necessarily called for in an administration. The power gave the appellant power to appoint a substitute. Kadappa left Malacca for India in 1914 and died there in 1917. It was held at the trial of the present suit that this power-of-attorney was invalid. No argument founded on such a contention was seriously pressed on the hearing of this appeal and in view of the appellant's actions, the question is an academic one.

In 1915, Shanmugan came to Malacca. It appears that according to the Hindu Law applicable to the estate of the intestate Shanmugan or the son was beneficially entitled to the whole, subject to maintenance of the widow and daughter till marriage. In the colony, however, the estate vested in the administrator, who alone could deal with it. This being the state of affairs, the appellant and Shanmugan on July 16, 1915, made an agreement evidenced by receipts exchanged between them, that they should divide the intestate's 5 shares in L. W. H. equally, each taking $2\frac{1}{2}$ shares. The appellant was—to quote the language of both receipts which is in this respect the same—"to take all actions to obtain agreement, etc.," and he was to account to Shanmugan for his half. At the time of making this agreement, the appellant must have known that these shares belonged to the intestate's estate which he was administering.

Following on this arrangement of July 16, 1915, a meeting took place between Guan, the appellant, Shanmugan and one P. V. Palaniappa Chetty, when the three latter concurred in requesting Guan, firstly, to hand over to Shanmugan the scrip of certain shares which had belonged to the intestate, but with which this appeal is not concerned, and secondly, as regards the 5 shares in the L. W. H. property, that they should be transferred to P. M. S., Kasi, that is, to the appellant under the vilasam of the partnership P. M. S. From that time, Guan said that he considered the owner of these 5 shares to be P. M. S.

In 1915, the property L. W. H. began to yield profits and there was a distribution among the partners in October of that year. The proportion attributable to the 5 shares of the intestate was paid to the appellant as P. M. S. Kasi, who also received all subsequent profits and, when the property was transferred to a company, all the dividends on the shares representing the intestate's interest.

On June 5, 1916, the appellant purported to exercise the power of substitution expressed to be conferred upon him by the power-of-attorney given to him by Kadappa and appointed one Muthiah Chettiar as his substitute for the purpose of the administration of the estate of the intestate.

There was evidence that, notwithstanding this substitution, and even after the death of Kadappa which occurred on November 24, 1917, terminating beyond all question the power-of-attorney given by him, the appellant acted as Kadappa's attorney and made an application to the Court in that character in connection with the sale of some land. In the view of their Lordships, however, a termination of the appellant's agency under power-of-attorney whether in 1916, by the substitution of Muthiah or in 1917 by the death of Kadappa, does not affect the situation, inasmuch as the appellant had already, namely, at the interview with Guan and Shanmugan in 1915, been recognized by Guan as the person to whom he was to account for the intestate's interest in the L. W. H. property. In pursuance of that arrangement (so Guan deposed), Guan subsequently, namely, by an indenture of July 5, 1916, formally transferred that interest to the appellant.

At the end of 1917, a few days before the death of Kadappa, the L. W. H. property was transferred to a Company, called the Leong Watt Hin Estate Co., Ltd., and the appellant received, by direction of Guan, 1,250 shares in that Company as representing the intestate's interest.

Although by the agreement entered into with Shanmugan in July, 1915, the appellant had agreed to hold one half of the 5 shares for the account of Shanmugan, he did not account to him for any part of the profits he received. Early in 1924, Shanmugan came from India to Malacca and asked the appellant for the money due to him on the $2\frac{1}{2}$ shares. The appellant told him that his partners in P. M. S. claimed all the 5 shares as belonging to that firm and he suggested that Shanmugan should sue the partners. In the end, Shanmugan accepted from the appellant $18,000 and released his claim. This according to the appellant's evidence was a private transaction of his own with which his partners in P. M. S. were not concerned.

On November 1, 1924, the intestate's widow gave a power-of-attorney to one Muthuraman Chettiar to apply for letters of administration to the estate of the intestate and on December 20, these were granted to him de bonis non.

On March 9, 1925, Muthuraman commenced the present suit against Guan as sole defendant, the appellant being added as second defendant by order dated September 7, 1925. Later in the proceedings the widow having died, the respondent took out letters of administration de bonis non as attorney of the daughters and was substituted as plaintiff.

By the statement of claim delivered on February 10, 1926, the plaintiff claimed as against the appellant a transfer of the 1,250 shares in the L. W. H., Ltd., an account of the dividends received and damages. There was no allegation of fraud. The appellant, by his defence delivered on June 20, 1926, pleaded limitation and by supplemental defence delivered on October 11, 1926, pleaded inter alia, that the right to the 5 shares in the original L. W. H. venture now represented by 1,250 shares in L. W. H., Limited, had been the property of P. M. S. and further, that any question regarding them had been settled by the agreement of July 16, 1915. On October 12, 1926, he served a third party action on Shanmugan, claiming to be indemnified by him against the plaintiff's claim by virtue of the arrangement in 1918 by which the appellant had bought out Shanmugan for $18,000.

In 1927, Shanmugan commenced an action in India against the appellant, claiming the 1,250 shares in L. W. H. Ltd., and alleging that the agreements of 1915 and 1924 were obtained from him by misrepresentation and fraud. He raised the same contention in his pleading, delivered on February 6, 1929, as third party in the present action. The suit in India is still pending. The Judge's notes at the trial of the present suit contain a statement that it had "been stopped pending this present case," but whether it has been formally stayed does not appear.

The suit was tried before Mills, J. in September and October, 1930. No oral evidence was called for the plaintiff, the present respondent. For the defendants oral evidence was given by, among others, Guan and the appellant. At the close of the case of the second defendant (the present appellant) his Counsel admitted that he could make no case for indemnity against the third party Shanmugan and the Judge ruled there and then that the third party claim be dismissed. Shanmugan was never called to substantiate his charges of fraud. Nor had his Counsel put those charges to the appellant on cross-examination.

On October 25, 1930, Mills, J. delivered a written judgment in which he found that the 5 shares in the L. W. H. venture were the private property of the intestate. As regards the responsibility of the appellant for the L. W. H. shares, he dealt with the matter as follows:—He held that the power of attorney from Kadappa to the appellant was void, as not authorised by the power of attorney given by the widow to the former and that the appellant, though accountable for the shares, was so only as an alienee without value given. He held, therefore, that the suit against him was barred by limitation not having been brought within six years from July 15, 1915. He was of opinion that the appellant, in dealing with the shares on that date, was not acting as a trustee nor was he in the position of a person receiving trust property and dealing with it in a manner inconsistent with trusts which he was cognizant, because he did not receive the trust property as such, but throughout the negotiations which culminated in the arrangement of July 16, 1915, acted solely in his capacity as partner and manager of the firm P. M. S. and supported the claims of the firm in opposition to the claims of the deceased man's estate. The learned Judge said that he confined himself to findings absolutely necessary for the determination of the issue in order that the parties to the Indian litigation might not be embarrassed by comments or dicta.

The respondent appealed to the Court of Appeal and the appellant cross-appealed against the dismissal of his third party claim against Shanmugan. This cross-appeal was, however, abandoned by Counsel and Shanmugan was released from the proceedings in the course of the arguments. Shanmugan is not a party to the present appeal.

The learned Judges in the Court of Appeal concurred with the finding of the trial Judge that the interest in the L. W. H. venture was the private property of the intestate, but held that the appellant, in dealing with that interest, had acted as a trustee by virtue of the power of attorney given to him by Kadappa and that he was not protected by limitation.

The learned Judges further expressed the opinion that the appellant had been guilty of fraud at every stage of his transactions with the family of the intestate. The order of the Court directed an account of all moneys received by the appellant or his agents in respect of the L. W. H. shares and an account from November 20, 1917, of all moneys received or which ought to have been received by the appellant or his agents in respect of the 1,250 shares in the L. W. H. Company and an enquiry to ascertain what had been the highest value, which a share in the L. W. H. Company had reached prior to the date of the judgment. The Court further directed that in taking the account, the appellant should be debited with punitive interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. It was further, by consent of the third party, declared that the appellant was entitled to set off to the extent of Shanmugan's interest, the $18,000 paid to the third party under the arrangement of January 7, 1924, against what should be found due from him. Further consideration was adjourned with liberty to apply.

Upon the question of limiation, their Lordships agree with the conclusion arrived at by the Court of Appeal.

The point turns upon s. 9 of Straits Settlements Ordinance No. 56 (Limitations) which is as follows:—

"Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained no suit against a person in whom property has become vested in trust for any specific purpose or against his legal personal representative or assigns, not being assigns for valuable consideration, for the purpose of following in his or her hands such property, shall be barred by any length of time."

The cardinal fact in the case is that the appellant in dealing with this asset of the intestate's estate acted in the character of attorney to the administrator. The arrangement between the appellant and Shanmugan on July 16, 1916, was entered into to deal with the question whether the interest in the L. W. H. venture had been the intestate's private property, as Shanmugan was alleging or not. To any settlement of that question the legal personal representative of the intestate was a necessary party. Shanmugan could not bind the estate and unless it was to be bound by the participation in the transaction of the appellant in the character of attorney for the administrator, that transaction would not furnish a title enabling the appellant to obtain from Guan, as he did, first an assignment of the intestate's interest in L. W. H. and afterwards the shares in the limited company.

What took place, therefore, was a verbal assignment by the appellant, as attorney of the administrator, to himself, of property known to be his principal's. He was in a fiduciary capacity and the only result of the proceeding was that the property became vested in him in trust for the administrator. This is not a case in which a stranger has possessed himself of trust property under circumstances which make him bound by the trust and in which it is then necessary to inquire into his exact position with reference to the section under discussion or to the English doctrine of express trusts. The appellant here dealt with the property in a fiduciary capacity antecedent to such dealing and the purpose for which it became vested in him must be found in the purpose for which that capacity was conferred upon him. The position is the same as if the administrator himself had vested the property in the appellant for the purposes of the administration instead of the appellant vesting it in himself by virtue of his powers as attorney. In the course of the arguments, their Lordships were necessarily referred to the decision of the Court of Appeal in England in Soar v. Ashwell (1). Whatever limits may have to be observed in the application to the construction of this section in the Limitations Ordinance of the Straits Settlements of the English decisions as to express trusts, the reasoning of the Master of the Rolls and Bowen, L. J., in that case afford ample support for the particular step in the present argument which consists in referring the possession of the appellant to his antecedent fiduciary capacity.

It remains to consider whether the purpose for which the property became vested in the appellant was specific. If he is regarded in the light of a trustee for the administrator, the answer is obviously in the affirmative. But even if it was to administer the estate and account for the residue to the next of kin, the purpose was also specific. It was suggested in the argument on behalf of the appellant that the judgment of this Board delivered by Lord Buckmaster in Khaw Sim Tek v. Chuah Hooi Gnoh Neoh (2), was an authority for the broad proposition that distribution under an intestacy is never a specific purpose. Their Lordships are not of that opinion. They concur in the explanation of that judgment given in Lam Kin Sang v. Cheang Kok Sang (3), namely, that it only deals with the case where a specific trust has been declared on its face exhausting the fund, but, that trust being void in law, the fund has to be dealt with as upon an intestacy in contradiction of the purpose named.

There remain certain subordinate questions. It is unfortunate that to bring Shanmugan into the suit, recourse was had to the misconceived procedure of a third party notice. The position was that if as between the appellant and Shanmugan the arrangements of July 16, 1915, and January 7, 1924, stand, the appellant has an equitable defence to the extent of the sum to which Shanmugan will be beneficially entitled out of the money for which the appellant is accountable. If, on the other hand, those arrangements are avoided for fraud, there is an equitable defence only to the extent of the $ 18,000 which Shanmugan received under the latter arrangement. This latter result has been, in fact, achieved by the order of the Court made by consent of the parties though not relevant to the pleadings. It seems, however, to their Lordships that the issue of fraud on which it depends, has never been regularly tried. It was only introduced by the pleading delivered by the third party and he was discharged from the action without being called upon to support his allegations, on the ground that the third party procedure was inapplicable. The issue is, however, relevantly raised in the action now pending in India, and, under the circumstances the proper order in the present suit is that execution (except for costs and the amount of any expenses properly incurred by the plaintiff and his predecessor as administrators de bonis non), be stayed until the suit in India has been determined. The widow being dead and the daughters now apparently married, it appears prima facie that Shanmugan is the only person interested. The order must provide that the stay will become perpetual failing due prosecution of the litigation in India and there must be liberty to apply.

With regard to the enquiry directed by the order of the Court of Appeal to ascertain the highest value reached by a share in the L. W. H, Ltd., it appears from the written judgments delivered, that it was left to be determined upon further consideration before a single Judge whether the respondent could elect to take the value of the shares instead of the shares themselves and how that value was to be estimated. Their Lordships understand this question has been determined on further consideration and on appeal by the Court of Appeal. These orders are not before their Lordships in this appeal.

(1) (1893) 2 Q B 390; 42 W R 165; 69 L T 585.
(2) 102 Ind. Cas. 832; (1922) 1 A C 120; A I R 1922 P C 212; 49 I A 37; 25 Bom. L R 121; 30 M L T 160; 26 C W N 495 (P C).
(3) (1929) S S L R 62.

Their Lordships will duly advise His Majesty that the appeal be dismissed subject to a variation of the order of the Court of Appeal by the introduction of a stay of execution as already described.

There will be no order as to the costs of the appeal.

D. Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellant.—Messrs. Lowe & Co.

Solicitors for the Respondent.—Messrs. Peacock & Goddard.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 444 of 1930
March 1, 1935

ADDISON AND DIN MOHAMMAD, JJ.

BAHADUR CHAND AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat RAMON BAI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Custom (Punjab)—Succession—Aroras of Khanewal, District Multan—Whether governed by Hindu Law—Alienation by widow—Cognates, whether can challenge—Hindu Law—Alienation—Widow.

Held, that an Arora of Khanewal in the District of Multan is not governed in the matter of succession by Hindu Law but by Customary Law and the cognates of the propositus have no locus standi to challenge the alienation made by the widow.

F. C. A. from the decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Multan, dated November 2, 1929.

Mr. S. N. Bali, Mr. Dev Raj Sawhny, Mr. Charanjiv Lal for Mr. Fakir Chand, for the Appellants.

Messrs. R. C. Manchanda and S. C. Manchanda, for the Respondents.

Din Mohammad, J.—The dispute in this case relates to the property of Gela Ram who was an Arora of Khanewal in the District of Multan. The pedigree-table is printed at pp. 44 to 49 of the paper book and will explain the relationship of the parties to the suit, out of which this appeal has arisen.

On Gela Ram's death his widow Musammat Ramon Bai and his mother Musammat Vishan Devi succeeded him in equal shares. On November 20, 1916, Musammat Ramon Bai made an oral gift of a part of the property held by her in favour of her deceased husband's relative Sohna Ram and on January 9, 1928, she settled the remaining property on him by a registered deed. Thereupon the plaintiffs who are cognates of Gela Ram instituted the present suit for a declaration that both the alienations mentioned above should not affect their rights after the death or remarriage of Musammat Ramon Bai. Three of the cognates did not join them and were impleaded as defendants in the suit. The plaintiffs based their claim on Hindu Law while both Musammat Ramon Bai and Sohna Ram resisted it mainly on the ground of custom according to which the plaintiff had no locus standi to control Musammat Ramon Bai's alienations. The Senior Subordinate Judge held that the plaintiffs were heirs of Gela Ram, and as such competent to sue, that in matters of succession and alienation parties followed custom, that the widows succeeded as absolute owners, that the gift made in 1916 could not be challenged owing to the efflux of time and that both the gifts were valid, having been made for services rendered. As a result of these findings, he dismissed the suit. The plaintiffs have appealed.

In our opinion, the most crucial point in this case is whether the parties follow Hindu Law or custom. If it is found that they are governed by Hindu Law, there can be no question but that the plaintiffs who are Bandhus will be entitled to succeed to Gela Ram's property and will thus be competent to control the alienations of his widow who held only a limited estate. If, on the other hand, the family is governed by custom, the plaintiffs being cognates will have no locus standi to challenge the alienations in suit.

The onus of proving that the family of Gela Ram was governed by Hindu Law was placed on the plaintiffs and from a perusal of the evidence led by them, it is evident that they have hopelessly failed in discharging it. They had examined only three witnesses in the case, namely, Musammat Ramon Bai defendant No. 1, Shada Ram, defendant No. 4, and his brother Raju Ram, defendant No. 5. All of them have unequivocally stated that they do not follow Hindu Law but custom. In addition to this the evidence adduced by the contesting defendants themselves fully supports their allegation that they are governed by custom. It is further proved that Musammat Vishan Devi had alienated her property without any objection on the part of the plaintiffs.

Besides, there is ample testimony to support the defendants' assertion in the various records of the Customary Law of the Multan District, which have been compiled from time to time, the latest being Emerson's Customary Law of 1923-24.

Answer to Question No. 35 runs as follows :—

"Aroras, Khatris and Brahmins of the Multan town, except Pushkarna Brahmins, follow Hindu Law. All other Hindu and Muhammadan tribes admit that succession in the first place goes to the sons * * and failing them to the widows for lives and in the latter's absence, to unmarried daughters until marriage and failing them to the collaterals within four degrees * * *. In the absence of the collaterals within four degrees, daughters and failing them, daughters' sons and in default of daughters' sons sisters and their sons succeed * * *. Among Hindus, however, daughters seldom exclude collaterals within four degrees The rural Hindus of Multan Tehsil say that a widow is entitled to maintenance only. The Hindus of Shujaabad and Kabirwala say that failing widows unmarried daughters are entitled to succeed until marriage."

In answer to Question No. 53, it is stated by the rural Hindus of the Multan Tehsil that mother and widow get maintenance only. Here also it is stated that Aroras, Khatris and Brahmins of Multan except the Pushkarna Brahmins of Multan town, follow Hindu Law. It may be mentioned here that Counsel for the appellants laid great stress on this part of the answer and contended that the word "Multan" here meant the whole of the District of Multan and not the town of Multan only. But reading this answer with the answer to Question No. 35 quoted above, it is evident that the reference is to Multan and not to the whole District of Multan.

In answer to Question No. 57, the Hindus of Lodhran and Kabirwala Tehsil stated that the mother would inherit if a proprietor died leaving no widow but a mother and a daughter. It may be mentioned here that what was known as Kabirwala Tehsil before is the same as Khanewal Tehsil now.

In answer to Question No. 59, whether daughters took a share when there were no sons, all Hindu tribes said that in the absence of sons and of widows, unmarried daughters were entitled to maintenance until marriage.

In answer to Question No. 70, all tribes stated that the property would go to sisters and failing them to their sons and in their absence to the original owners of the same got when a man died leaving no male lineal relations, no mother, no widows, no daughters and no daughters' sons.

In answer to Question No. 82, the reply was that the property would devolve on owners of the same got in the first instance and failing them it would become shamilat patti and if there were no pattis, would become shamilat deh if a man died intestate leaving no relations. Reading this answer with the answer to Question No. 70 it appears that the word "relations" here is confined only to those relations who are enumerated there, and does not include cognates.

It follows from the above, that cognates do not appear at all in the chain of succession provided for in the Customary Law relating to this District and are, therefore, ineligible to succeed under any circumstances. The inevitable result is that the plaintiffs have no locus standi to challenge the alienations in dispute.

We, therefore, affirm the decision of the Court below and dismiss this appeal with costs.

D. Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 1377 of 1932

January 6, 1934

HILTON, J.

Musammat AISHAN BIBI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS-APPELLANTS

versus

ALLAH DITTA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS

Custom (Punjab) — Succession — Non-ancestral property — Reversioners — Sandhu Jats — District Lahore — Gift to daughters, by widow — Reversioners, collaterals of fourth degree, if exclude daughters—Wajib-ul-arz of 1855—Ancestral property —Riwaj-i-am of 1868—Gift by Sandhu Jat widow— Self-acquired immovable property of husband—Gift, if valid—Clear statement of custom—Burden of proof on him who disputes—Practice—Original version of Customary Law in vernacular and English version of the same—Which to be preferred.

Among Sandhu Jats of Lahore District, daughters are excluded in respect of non-ancestral property by reversioners as the fourth degree collaterals.

Land under the wajib-ul-arz of 1885 refers only to ancestral land. Rahmat Ali Khan v. Sadiq-ul nissa (1), followed.

According to riwaj-i-am of 1868, Lahore, even self-acquired immovable property of husband cannot be gifted by the widow.

The burden is on him, who disputes the clear statement of special custom in Customary Law (Punjab), to prove the contrary. Beg v. Allah Ditta (2), relied on.

If there is any difference in the original vernacular and the English version of the Customary Law, the English version should be preferred on the ground that it is the final draft.

S. C. A. from the decree of the District Judge, Lyallpur, dated June 27, 1932.

Mr. Nazir Ahmad, for the Appellants.

Mr. Niamat Rai, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—On September 5, 1930, Musammat Aishan, widow of Buta, a sonless proprietor, gifted 110 kanals 7 marlas of land to her daughters, Sardar Bibi and Mehraj Bibi. The reversioners of Buta in the fourth degree have sued to challenge the gift. The parties are sandhu Jats of Kot Begum, now in the Sheikhupura, but originally in the Lahore District.

The trial Judge dismissed the suit but the plaintiffs have obtained a decree from the lower Appellate Court and this Second Appeal on a certificate is preferred by the defendants.

Both the Courts below held that the land is non-ancestral qua the plaintiffs but while the trial Judge decided that the parties being bound by general agricultural custom, a gift by the mother to her daughters of the acquired property of her husband was permissible as an acceleration of succession; the learned District Judge on the other hand has found that the riwaj-i-am evidences a special custom among Sandhus of Kot Begum disallowing such a gift and that the initial onus is thereby thrown upon the defendants to prove its validity. He held that their evidence is insufficient for this purpose. Thus the questions that now arise for determination are, whether the riwaj-i-am clearly evidences such a custom; if so, should an initial presumption in its favour not be made, and if it should be made, has it been rebutted.

The first document to be considered in this connection is the wajib-ul-arz of the 1855 Settlement (P-9) which sets forth that if a sonless proprietor gifts any land to his daughter during his life-time, she becomes its owner; otherwise the nearest reversioner inherits and the daughter is disinherited. In the present case there was no gift during Buta's life-time and the entry, therefore, favours the plaintiff reversioners. However, I think that as the passage makes no distinction between ancestral and acquired land, it should be taken as referring only to ancestral land, as laid down in Rahmat Ali Khan v. Sadiq-ul-nissa (1)and other authorities. This entry, may, therefore, be excluded from considerations in determining the point at issue.

Next there is the riwaj-i-am of 1868 (P-10) which mentions that a Sandhu Jat widow can gift the movable property of her husband, whether ancestral or self-acquired, but not the immovable property. This document thus favours the reversioners and in my opinion, seems to mean that even self-acquired immovable property cannot be gifted by the widow. By itself, however, it would not perhaps be conclusive. The Customary Law of the Lahore District by R. C. Bolster compiled in 1916 is, however, clearly and definitely in favour of the special custom set by the reversioners. Question No. 56 deals with the nature of a widow's interests and the answer is that a widow can alienate only for necessity the land of her husband whether ancestral or self-acquired. In the present suit, however, the question at issue is not so much the widow's power to alienate for necessity but the right of the daughters to succeed in presence of the collaterals and their consequent claim to receive non-ancestral land by way of a gift in acceleration of succession. I pass, therefore, to Questions Nos. 61 and 62 which deal with this matter. The answers to these two questions assert very distinctly that, among Jats, daughters are excluded by male lineal descendants through males, however distant, and that no distinction in this connection exists between ancestral and acquired property of the father not even between the immovable and movable property. The following note below Answer No. 61 may be quoted at length:

"The feeling in favour of the custom excluding daughters is so strict that it gives even members of the village community a prior right of succession, while in the case of the agnatic line becoming extinct, escheat to Government is recognized. But modern feeling combined with the growth of personal as against communal ideas of ownership tends to let daughters inherit to the exclusion of agnates five and in some cases more generations distant."

In the present case the plaintiffs are collaterals of the fourth degree and the above quoted remarks are, therefore, very strongly in their favour: A criticism has been made on behalf of the appellant-defendants that the English version of the Customary Law differs in material respects from the Urdu version from which it is stated in the introduction to have been compiled. Even if there were a difference I think that the English version should be preferred on the ground that it is the final draft. The alleged differences, however, are unimportant and do not affect the main principle.

There being thus a very clear statement in the Customary Law of the special custom contended for by the reversioners there is no reason why the initial onus should not be placed upon the defendants to disprove it, a proposition for which there is ample authority in Beg v. Allah Ditta (2). It has been argued before me that reliance was not placed by the plaintiffs upon the foregoing passages in Bolster's Customary Law of Lahore District until the first appeal was heard by the learned District Judge, and that there was, therefore, a shifting of the onus in the lower Appellate Court, which, it is maintained, has prejudiced the defendants. I find, however, that even in the trial Court the plaintiffs contended for a special custom, and moreover, the third issue framed in that Court did actually cast the onus on the defendants of establishing that plaintiffs are bound by the gift. That being the case I do not agree that the defendants have been prejudiced by the course of the arguments in the lower Appellate Court. An initial presumption in favour of the special custom excluding daughters having thus been set up, it remains to consider whether there is an evidence to rebut that presumption and disprove the special custom. Although the present suit relates to non-ancestral land, instances of the succession to ancestral land among Sandhus Jats by daughters, if any, might be relevant, on the ground that if daughters could succeed to ancestral land they could surely inherit non-ancestral land also. Instances, however, of exclusion of collaterals more remote than the fifth degree would not rebut the presumption in favour of the special custom, having regard to the remarks contained in the Note to Answer No. 61 (set forth in extenso above) and to the fact that plaintiffs are of the fourth degree. No such instances have been cited of Sandhu Jats of Lahore nor does the oral evidence appear to refer to any clear instances of that nature. I must accordingly accept as correct the conclusion of the learned District Judge that the plaintiffs as fourth degree collaterals exclude the daughters in respect of non-ancestral property. The appeal of the defendants, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

(1) 138 Ind. Cas. 280; A I R 1932 Lah. 353; 33 P L R 117; Ind. Rul. (1932) Lah. 468; 13 Lah. 404.

D. Appeal dismissed.

(2) 38 Ind. Cas. 354; A I R 1916 P C 129; 44 I A 89; 44 C 719; 45 P R 1917; 12 P W R 1917; 21 M L T 310; 32 M L J 615; 19 Bom. L R 388; 15 A L J 525; 21 C W N 842; 26 C L J 175 (P C).

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Civil Revision No. 61 of 1934

July 13, 1934

GRILLE, A. J. C.

LOKMAN—PLAINTIFF—APPLICANT

versus

HALKU—DEFENDANT—NON-APPLICANT

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 195 (3), 476—Order by Small Cause Court Judge, Saugor, under s. 476—Appeal from, whether lies to Additional District Judge, Saugor, or to District Judge, Jubbulpore.

The Additional District Judge sitting at Saugor determines all matters arising from the Saugor Revenue District and there is no limitation either by general or special orders of the Local Government or by any particular order of the District Judge, which debars the Additional District Judge from hearing an appeal under s. 476, Criminal Procedure Code, which comes before him in the ordinary course of the distribution of the business. Consequently an appeal from an order of the Court of Small Causes, Saugor, under s. 476, Criminal Procedure Code, lies to Additional District Judge, Saugor, and not to the District Judge, Jubbulpore.

Application for revision of the order of the Additional District Judge, Saugor, dated December 7, 1933, in Miscellaneous Appeal No. 9 of 1933, arising out of Miscellaneous Judicial Case No. 122 of 1932, dated February 10, 1933, of the Court of the Judge, Small Cause Court (Second Sub-Judge, First Class) Saugor.

Messrs. K. K. Tiwari and J. Sen, for the Applicant.

Messrs. A. V. Khare and W. B. Pendharkar, for the non-Applicant.

Mr. V. Bose, for the Crown.

Order.—The applicant Lokman applies in revision against the order of the Additional District Judge, Saugor, filing a complaint against him in respect of offences said to have been committed in the conduct of a civil suit. An application under s. 476 of the Code of Criminal Procedure was originally made by the non-applicant in the Court of Small Cause, Saugor, in which Court the offence complained of is said to have taken place. That Court declined to make a complaint, but that decision was reversed in an appeal made to the Additional District Judge.

It is contended in revision that in entertaining and allowing the appeal the Additional District Judge acted without jurisdiction and that the only Court competent to hear the appeal was the Court of the District Judge, Jubbulpore.

It is settled law that, in respect of offences committed in Courts of Small Causes and orders passed in respect of complaints made or refusal to make complaints under s. 476, of the Criminal Procedure Code, by such Court, an appeal lies not to the High Court but to the Court of the District Judge to which Court, within the meaning of s. 195, sub-s. (3) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the Court of Small Causes is held to be subordinate: Chidda Lal v. Bhajan Lal (1) and In re Ram Prasad Malla (2). The only point for determination then is whether an appeal from the order of the Court of Small Causes, Saugor, should lie to Additional District Judge, Saugor, or to the District Judge, Jubbulpore.

It is contended that the words:

"To the principal Court having Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such Civil Court is situate".

In sub-s. (3) of s. 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure can have reference only to the District Court situated at Jubbulpore. The Court of Small Causes at Saugor is situated in the Civil District of Jubbulpore which comprises the Revenue Districts of Mandla, Jubbulpore and Saugor. In this Civil District the Courts having Original Civil Jurisdiction are those of Subordinate Judges of the Second Class, Subordinate Judge of the First Class and the District Court. The principal Court then having Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction is the District Court. The argument that the principal Court having Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction in this area is the Court of the District Judge situated at Jubbulpore and that the Court of the Additional District Judge sitting at Saugor is inferior to it and, therefore, incompetent to entertain the appeal is apparently based on the fact that the latter Court is popularly described as the Court of the Additional District Judge, Saugor. The appeal certainly lies to the District Court, and the Judge of the District Court sits at Jubbulpore. The jurisdiction of the Additional District Judge sitting at Saugor is that of the District Court under the provisions of s. 26, sub-ss. (1) of the Central Provinces Courts Act. The Local Government is empowered to appoint one or more Additional Judges to any District Court and such Additional Judge exercises the jurisdiction of the Court to which he was appointed and exercises the powers of the Judge of the District Court. The correct appellation of the Judge who decided this appeal is Additional Judge to the Court of the District Judge, Jubbulpore, sitting at Saugor, and the appointment of the Judge is gazetted in those terms. The appeal, therefore, was made in the principal Court having Ordinary Additional Jurisdiction in the Jubbulpore District, and the Additional Judge had jurisdiction to hear the appeal. His jurisdiction is subject only to any general or special orders of the Local Government as to the class or value of suits and appeal which he may decide, and no general or special order which would bar his jurisdiction in respect of this particular class of appeal exists. Neither has any other restriction in respect of the distribution of the Court business in the control of the Judge of the District Court been brought to my notice. The ordinary procedure is that the Additional District Judge sitting at Saugor determines all matters arising from the Saugor Revenue District and there has been no limitation either by general or special orders of the Local Government or by any particular order of the District Judge, which debars the Additional District Judge from hearing this appeal which came before him in the ordinary course of the distribution of the business.

On the merits of the case it is sufficient for me to say that I am in agreement with the conclusion of the learned Additional District Judge. A prima facie case warranting a complaint has been made out.

The application in revision accordingly fails and is dismissed with costs. Pleaders' fee Rs. 30.

D. Application dismissed.

(1) 42 Ind. Cas. 167; A I R 1917 All. 405; 39 A 657; 15 A L J 721; 18 Cr. L J 935 (F B).

(2) 4 Ind. Cas 6; 37 C 13; 10 Cr. L J 454; 13 C W N 1038; 10 Cr. L J 454.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Appeal against Appellate Order No. 25 of 1930

October 5, 1934

BEASLEY, C. J. AND KING, J.

SADANALA GANGARAJU—APPELLANT

versus

INDRAGANTI SUBBAYYA (DIED) AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 182 (5), Expl. I—Application for execution against surety more than three years after decree—Limitation—Principal judgment-debtor and surety, whether joint-debtors—Applicability of Expl. I.

A surety for the satisfaction of a decree is neither a joint judgment-debtor nor a person against whom a decree has been passed severally with any portion of its subject-matter distinguished as payable or deliverable by him within the meaning of Expl. I to cl. (5) of Art. 182 of the Limitation Act. An application for execution against a surety is not therefore governed by Expl. I but by the simple unqualified words of Art. 182, cl. (5).

Though a surety is technically liable from the date of the decree, in equity his liability arises only upon the failure of the judgment-debtor to satisfy the decree and the decree-holder who is proceeding against the principal debtor is not bound to file a formal and otherwise futile petition against the surety before the period of three years expires in order to keep alive the decree against the surety Narayan Ganpatbhai Agsal v. Timmaya (1), Mohamed Cassim v. Jamila Bee Bee (2,) Raja Ragunandan Prasad Singh v Raja Kartyanad Singh Bahadur (3) and Honda Ram v. Firm Seth Kunwar Bhan Sukh Nand (6); not followed. Mohamad Hafiz v. Mohamad Ibrahim (4) and Badar-ud-Din v. Mohamad Hafiz (5), followed.

Appeal against the appellate order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Rajahmundry, dated April 22, 1929, and made in Appeal No. 32 of 1929 (A. S. No. 122 of 1928, District Court, East Godavari) preferred against the Order of the Court of the District Munsif of Ramachandrapur in S. A. No. 522 of 1928 in O. S. 283 of 1916 on the file of the Additional District Munsif's Court, Rajahmundry.

Judgment.—The appellant in this appeal is the decree-holder in O. S. No. 283 of 1916 on the file of the Additional District Munsif of Rajahmundry. The respondent is a surety for the satisfaction of the decree by the judgment-debtor. The decree in question was confirmed in appeal on February 23, 1922. In 1922 and again in 1924 execution was taken out by the appellant against the legal representatives of the judgment-debtor. Some of the assets of the judgment-debtor were sold and the decree was satisfied in part. In April 1927 and again in October 1927 execution was taken out against the surety. When his property was about to be sold in March 1928, the surety (respondent) raised the objection that execution as against him was barred, and this objection was upheld both by the executing Court and on appeal by the Sub-Judge of Rajahmundry. Hence the second appeal by the decree-holder to this Court.

The Article of the Limitation Act which governs this case is 182, cl. 5. This allows three years' time from the date of the final order passed on the last preceding application for execution made in accordance with law. That date is admittedly October 4, 1924 and, therefore, if cl. 5 alone is looked to, both the execution applications of 1927 are in time. But cl. 5 is subject to Explanation I the second part of which runs as follows:—

"Where the decree or order has been passed severally against more persons than one, distinguishing portions of the subject-matter as payable or deliverable by each the application shall take effect against only such of the said persons or their representatives as it may be made against. But where the decree or order has been passed jointly against more persons than one, the application if made against any one or more of them or against his or their representatives shall take effect against them all."

We have been referred to a number of decisions which deal with similar facts to those in the present case and with the application of this explanation to the case of a surety, but they are by no means uniform. The earliest is Narayan Ganpatbhai Agsal v. Timmaya (1), where it is laid down that a principal judgment-debtor and a surety are not joint judgment-debtors and, therefore, an execution petition taken out for the first time against a surety more than three years from the date of the decree is not saved from the bar of limitation by the fact that previous execution petitions had been taken out against the principal judgment-debtor. This ruling has been followed by the High Courts of Rangoon Mohamad Cassim v. Jamila Be Bee (2), and Patna Raja Ragunandan Prasad Singh v. Raja Kartyanand Singh Bahadur (3). The Allahabad High Court, however, has taken a different view in Mohamad Hafiz v. Mohamad Ibrahim (4), and Badr-ud-din v. Mohamad Hafiz (5), holding that a surety is neither a joint judgment-debtor nor a person against whom a decree has been passed severally with any portion of its subject-matter distinguished as payable or deliverable by him. Explanation I, therefore, does not apply to a case like this at all, and it must be governed only by the simple unqualified words of cl. 5 itself. The Lahore High Court also dissents from the view held in Bombay, Rangoon and Patna but for a different reason. It is held in Honda Ram v. Firm Seth Kanwar Bhan Sukh Nand 67 Ind. Cas. 301 (6), that a surety and a principal judgment-debtor are joint debtors as each is liable for the whole amount of the decree. In Madras there is no reported case dealing with this point though we have been referred to a decision of a Bench

(1) 31 B 50; 8 Bom. L R 807.

(2) 111 Ind. Cas. 479; 6 R 334; A I R 1928 Rang. 282.

(3) 120 Ind. Cas. 309; 8 Pat. 310; A I R 1929 Pat. 595; Ind. Rul. (1930) Pat. 21; 11 P L T 220.

(4) 58 Ind. Cas. 791; 43 A 152; 18 A L J 988; 2 U P L R (A) 376.

(5) 77 Ind. Cas. 129; 44 A 743; 20 A L J 726; A I R 1922 All 481.

(6) 67 Ind. Cas. 301; 4 U P L R (L) 70; A I R 1922 Lah. 457; 38 P W R 1922; 74 P L R 1922.

of two Judges in C. M. S. A. No. 62 of 1913 which follows Narayan Ganpatbhai Agsal v. Timmaya (1), without any discussion of any possible alternative view.

In this conflict of authorities we are of opinion that the method of approach adopted by the Allahabad High Court is the right one. None of the rulings cited from Bombay, Rangoon or Patna lays it down positively that the case of a judgment-debtor and his surety falls within Explanation I. They all assume without any discussion that as the judgment debtor and his surety are not joint judgment-debtors, an execution petition against the former will not avail to save limitation as against the latter. We agree with the Allahabad view that Expl. I does not contemplate a case of this kind at all and, therefore, that cl. 5 itself is the only provision by which this question of limitation must be determined. And this view, we think, is very clearly in accordance with natural justice and the real meaning of suretyship. When a surety guarantees the payment of a decree debt what is ordinarily contemplated is that the decree-holder will proceed first (as he has done here) against the principal judgment-debtor and if he fails to realise his decree in full from him, he will then proceed against the surety for the balance. The surety may no doubt be technically liable from the date of the decree but in equity his liability arises only upon the failure of the principal judgment debtor to satisfy the decree, and in practice it will be only on the happening of that contingency that the decree-holder will think of proceeding against him. In these circumstances it seems to us unreasonable to hold that a decree-holder who may often find that proceedings against the principal judgment-debtor occupy him for more than three years, must file a formal and otherwise futile petition against the surety before the period of three years expires, in order to keep alive against him a remedy which he has not yet thought of using.

For these reasons we hold that the order and judgment of the Courts below are wrong and must be set aside. The appeal is allowed with costs throughout, and the Execution Petition (No. 522 of 1928) ordered to be restored to file and be disposed of according to law.

L. A. Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Jury Reference No. 2 of 1935
March 5, 1935
DHAVLE AND ROWLAND, JJ.
RAMJANAM TEWARI AND OTHERS —ACCUSED
versus
EMPEROR OPPOSITE PARTY

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 307, 298, 194, 196-A (2)—Sessions Court accepting jury's verdict on one charge and disagreeing with jury on another charge—Reference to High Court under s. 307—Competency of — Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss 498, 120-B—Absence of complaint as required by s. 199—Charge under s. 498 added—Question, if charge was proper—Whether one of law—Charge under s. 498 without complaint — Jurisdiction to frame—Trial, validity of—Conspiracy—Object to commit cognizable offence punishable with rigorous imprisonment for over two years—Sanction, if necessary.

It is not open to a Court of Session to accept the verdict of the jury on one charge and disagree with the jury on another charge and refer the matter to the High Court under s. 307 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Emperor v. Hazari Lal (1), relied on.

Where a case was committed to the Sessions Court under ss. 366, 420 and 120-B of the Penal Code, but though there had been no complaint by any person competent under s. 199, Criminal Procedure Code, to make one, the Court added a charge under s. 498 Penal Code and the charges under ss. 366 and 498 being tried by jury, a verdict of guilty under s 498 was brought against some of the accused:

Held, that whether the charge under s. 498 of the Penal Code was or was not proper was a question of law; and under s. 298 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it was the Judge's plain duty to decide that question himself instead of leaving it to the jury and that if the Judge was not really satisfied that the additional charge was not proper, there was no reason whatsoever why he should have treated it as question of fact and left it for the jury to deal with.

Held, also that the charge under s. 498 was framed and tried without any jurisdiction at all, having regard to the terms of s. 199 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and that all the proceedings that followed upon that charge were equally without jurisdiction.

Where the object of the conspiracy is to commit cognizable offences punishable with rigorous imprisonment for more than two years, under s. 196-A (2), Criminal Procedure Code, no sanction is necessary for a charge under s. 120-B, Penal Code.

J. R. made by the Additional Sessions Judge of Shahabad in his Letter No. 129, dated January 17, 1935.

Dhavle, J.—This is a reference under s. 307 of the Code of Criminal Procedure made by the Additional Sessions Judge of Shahabad in a case which was committed to the Court of Session under ss. 366, 420 and 120-B of the Indian Penal Code. It appears that on the assurance of the Assistant Public Prosecutor that there was authority for adding a charge under s. 498 of the Indian Penal Code, the learned Judge framed an additional charge under this section, even though there had been no complaint up to that stage by any person competent under s. 199 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to make one. The charges under ss. 366 and 498 were tried by jury, and the jury brought in an unanimous verdict of guilty under s. 498 against four of the accused persons and of not guilty under that section against the other accused persons, and of not guilty under s. 366, in respect of all the accused persons. The learned Judge told the jury that the Assistant Public Prosecutor had not been able to satisfy him that s. 199 of the Code of Criminal Procedure did not prevent the Court from taking cognizance of an offence under s. 498 of the Indian Penal Code, and he left it to them to consider whether the charge under s. 498 of the Indian Penal Code was proper. The verdict of the jury shows that they considered that the charge was "proper" (to use the language of the learned Judge), and as this was not his view he has made this reference under s. 307 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

On the face of it the reference is incompetent. Section 307 is clear enough, and has been interpreted in several cases, including Emperor v. Hazari Lal (1) which was decided in this Court not long ago and which points out how it is not open to a Court of Session to accept the verdict of the jury on one charge and disagree with the jury on another charge and refer the matter to the High Court under s. 307 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The learned Judge has apparently accepted the verdict of the jury in respect of these four persons on the charge under s. 366, for he has limited his reference to the charge under s. 498 and says that the verdict on it is, "contrary to law." Limiting the reference in this manner is, however, not the only error that the learned Additional Sessions Judge has fallen into. Whether the charge under s. 498 of the Indian Penal Code was or was not "proper" as the Judge called it, was a question of law; and under s. 298 of the Code of Criminal Procedure it was his plain duty to decide that question himself instead of leaving it to the jury. Why he should not have called upon the Assistant Public Prosecutor to produce his authorities then and there and looked into them before proceeding with the trial instead of acting on his assurance and framing the charge, does not appear any more than why he should finally have left to the jury what it was for himself to decide. If the learned Additional Sessions Judge was not really satisfied that the additional charge was not "proper", there was no reason whatsoever why he should have treated it as question of fact and left it for the jury to deal with. But the rejection of the reference as incompetent is not the only order that we are called upon in the circumstances of this case to make. We think we ought to point it out to the Court below that the charge under s. 498 was clearly framed and tried without any jurisdiction at all, having regard to the terms of s. 199 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and that all the proceedings that have followed upon that charge are equally without jurisdiction. It is in fact impossible to do anything with that charge in the absence of a complaint under s. 199, so far as the trial referred to us is concerned.

It appears from the record that the learned Judge has also fallen into another error. The charge under s. 120-B of the Indian Penal Code was dropped on the ground that no sanction was obtained. But the object of the conspiracy was to commit cognizable offences punishable with rigorous imprisonment for more than two years, and it should have been obvious to the Assistant Public Prosecutor and the Additional Sessions Judge, from a mere perusal s. 196-A (2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, that in such a case no "sanction" was necessary.

Rowland, J.—I agree.

N. Order accordingly.

(1) 137 Ind. Cas. 190; 11 Pat. 395; 13 P L T 93; A I R 1932 Pat. 156; (1932) Cr. Cas. 273; Ind. Rul (1932) Pat. 148; 33 Cr. L J 505.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal Suit No. 2399 of 1930

January 10, 1934

ROY, J.

NILADRI NATH MUKHERJEE AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS

versus

MADAN THEATRES LTD., AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS

Copyright—Copyright Act 1911 (1 & 2, Geo. V, Ch. 46), ss. 1, 2—Existence of copyright not denied—Representation and performance of the works—Whether constitute infringement of copyright—Printing of books, if necessary to infringe copyright before Copyright Act 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. V, Ch. 46.)

Where the existence of copyright in certain books is not denied, then the representation and performance of the works of the author by the defendants amounts to an infringement of copyright under ss. 1 and 2, Copyright Act of 1911.

Obiter.—In order to infringe the plaintiff's copyright in books, it is not essential that the defendant should print the books even before the Copyright Act of 1911.

Messrs. S. B. Singha and S. N. Rudra, for the Plaintiffs.

Messrs. K. P. Khaitan, Agarwalla, S. C. Roy and U. C. Laha, for the Defendants.

Judgment.—This is another suit by the three grandsons of Rai Bahadur Bankim Chandra Chatterjee who were the plaintiffs in Suit No. 2400 of 1930, Niladri Nath Mukherjee v. Satish Chandra Mukherjee (1), for the recovery of damages for infringement of copyright. The facts are not in dispute. Counsel for the plaintiffs handed in to me a chronological list of events which was admitted by Counsel for the defendants and which I have directed should be kept on the file. The issues submitted in this suit were practically the same as in suit No. 2400 of 1930 and were the following:

(1) Have the plaintiffs any interest in the copyright in any of the books mentioned in the plaint? (2) Has the defendant company infringed the plaintiffs' copyright as alleged in para. 5 of the plaint? (3) Is the suit barred by limitation? (4). What reliefs, if any, are the plaintiffs entitled to? (5). Is the suit maintainable having regard to the fact that the plaintiffs do not claim any right or declaration of title to property?

By my judgment in the last suit I have held that the plaintiffs are entitled to the copyright claimed along with defendant No. 2, and I decided the issues as to maintainability of the suit and limitation in favour of the plaintiffs. Counsel for defendant No. 1 in this suit intimated to me at the outset that so far as those issues were concerned, he would not advance further arguments as he had been following the arguments in the last case. Issues Nos. (1), (3) and (5) are decided in favour of the plaintiffs.

Counsel for defendant No. 1 Madan Theatres, Limited, has, however, argued that though the plaintiffs might be entitled to to copyright in the books there had been no infringement of copyright. The infringement complained of in this case as has been alleged in para. 5 of the plaint is that the defendant Madan Theatres, Limited had represented and performed or caused or permitted to be represented and performed the works mentioned in the plaint or parts thereof at places of dramatic and public entertainment in Calcutta. In its written statement the defendant company admitted what had been alleged in para. 5 of the plaint but denied that the representation or performance was unauthorised or wrongful. They never disputed that copyright existed in the works mentioned in the plaint but only contended that the plaintiffs had no interest in the copyright. Counsel for the defendant company however sought to argue in Court that the rights of the parties were governed by the old Copyright Act XX of 1847) and that the plaintiffs' copyright in the books could only be infringed if the defendant printed the books.

There is no substance in this argument but I do not think it is necessary to discuss the matter at all as in my view it is not open to the defendant company to raise this point on the present pleadings. The existence of the copyright in the books not having been denied, it follows that what the defendant company had done amounted to an infringement of copyright under ss. (1) and (2), Copyright Act of 1911 (1 and 2 Geo. V. c. 46). Reference may be made in this connection to the case of Sitanath Basak v. Mohini Mohan Singh (2), which was cited by learned Counsel for the plaintiffs. Issue No. 2 is therefore answered in the affirmative. With regard to Issue No. (4) I do not think the plaintiffs are entitled to any relief against defendant No. 2 and the suit should be dismissed against him.

As against defendant No. 1, there will be a decree for an injunction and for discovery as claimed in prayers (b) and (c) of the plaint. There will be a reference as to damages and an enquiry will directed to ascertain the profits made by defendant No. 1 by the infringements complained of and the plaintiffs will be entitled to 3-4ths share of such profits. The reference would be to such officer as the Registrar may appoint. The plaintiffs will be entitled to the costs of this suit against defendant No. 1. There will be no order for costs with regard to defendant No. 2.

N. Decree accordingly.

(1) 152 Ind. Cas. 835; A I R 1934 Cal. 668; 38 C W N 604; 7 R C 320.

(2) 81 Ind. Cas. 754; A I R 1924 Cal. 595; 39 C L J 134.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Civil Revision No. 524 of 1934
February 11, 1935
DHAVLE, J.
Rani BHUNESHWARI KUER
—PETITIONER
versus
Musammat DEVKI KUER AND ANOTHER—OPPOSITE PARTY

Bengal Cess Act (IX of 1880), ss 56, 52, 54, 47—Cesses, if become payable only after publication of notices under ss. 52 and 54—Absence of special contract—Tenant, if liable to pay anything except under s. 56—S. 47, if applies to rent-free tenures.

Under s. 56, Bengal Cess Act, cesses only become payable after publication of the notices required by ss. 52 and 54; and this would contradict s. 62 if the latter section were construed to mean that such cesses can be realised before publication of the notices. Rash Behari Mukerjee v. Pitambari Choudhrani (1), followed.

In the absence of a special contract nothing is lawfully payable by the tenant defendant except under s. 56 which requires as an indispensable preliminary that notices should be served under ss. 52 and 54 of the Cess Act.

The addition of s 64-A to the Act makes it clear that s. 47 has no application to rent-free tenures. Pitambar Chowdhury v. Rahmat Ali (2), referred to.

C. R. against an order of the Munsif, Second Court, Gaya, dated July 30, 1934.

Mr. S. N. Ray, for the Petitioner.

Messrs. B. P. Jamuar, Rajini Kant Sinha and M. M. Prasad, for the Opposite Party.

Judgment.—In this case Mr. Jamuar who appears for the opposite party urges at the outset that there is no room for interference in revision as there is no question of jurisdiction involved. Mr. S. N. Ray who appears for the petitioner has endeavoured to meet this by saying that the lower Court has completely overlooked s. 62 of the Cess Act and has wrongly refused to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law.

The suit was for recovery of cess, and the defence was that notices under ss. 52 and 54 of the Act were necessary but had not been given. There was no dispute that the property in respect of which the cess was claimed is a rent-free Jagir. The operation of s. 62 in such cases was considered in 1888 in Rash Behari Mukerjee v. Pitambari Choudhrani (1), where Beverley, J. with whom Norris, J. concurred pointed out that under s. 56 cesses only become payable after publication of the notices required by ss. 52 and 54; and that this would contradict s. 62 if the latter section were construed to mean that such cesses can be realised before publication of the notices. Mr. Ray points out that the plaint was amended to cover a claim not for double the cess as provided in s. 58, but for the ordinary cess only. But under s. 56 even this amount only becomes payable after publication of the notices "and not otherwise" Mr. Ray urges that that would not prevent realization of cess at the old rate, but the case does not seem to have been conducted on that footing below, and I see that the only witness examined for the plaintiff, a law-clerk, cannot even say in which year the cess claimed was assessed, nor does there appear to be anything in the record to show what the old cess, if any, was. It thus seems perfectly clear that in the first place there is no error of jurisdiction committed by the lower Court, and secondly that the view taken by the lower Court is supported by good authority. Mr. Ray has proceeded to argue that the petitioner's claim should have been allowed under ss. 69 and 70 of the Contract Act. The answer to this is that no special contract being even alleged, nothing was lawfully payable by the tenant defendant except under s. 56 which requires as an indispensable preliminary that notices should be served under ss. 52 and 54 of the Cess Act. Reference was made to s. 47 of the Act, but the addition of s. 64-A to the Act makes it clear that s. 47 has no application to rent-free tenures, as was pointed out in Pitamber Choudhury v. Rahmat Ali (2). There is no merit in the application either, quite apart from the fact that the preliminary objection raised by Mr. Jamuar is perfectly sound.

The application is dismissed. Hearing fee, three gold mohurs.

Application dismissed.

(1) 15 C 237.

(2) 65 Ind. Cas. 138; 1 Pat. 218; 3 P L T 282; (1922) Pat. 167; A I R 1922 Pat. 301.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 295 of 1934
July 11, 1934
BECKETT, J.
RODA MAL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
NIGHAHIA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—
RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXII, r. 4—Tort-feasors—Death of one—Non-impleading of legal representatives—Suit, if abates as against the other.

Where one of two tort-feasors dies and his legal representatives are not brought on record, the suit or appeal does not abate as against the other.

S. C A. from the decree of the Senior Sub-Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated November 10, 1933.

Mr. Fakir Chand, for the Appellant.

Mr. H. J. Rustomji, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—The plaintiff purchased a strip of land in the hills. The defendants, or some of them, came upon the land and cut down certain trees. The plaintiff then sued them to recover the cost of the timber which they had removed. The defendants raised the defence that they had received permission from the lambardar, Nabi Bakhsh; and it was decided that Nabi Bakhsh should be added as a party. Nabi Bakhsh died during the course of the suit and his legal representatives were not brought upon the record within time. The lower Court has held that the suit cannot proceed without them and has dismissed the plaintiff's claim.

The plaintiff has appealed on the obvious ground that the death of one tort-feasor cannot affect the case against another, this contention seems to be correct. It appears from the record that Nabi Bakhsh appeared in Court and stated that he has given permission to the defendants to cut down the trees because they stood on shamilat land which did not belong to the plaintiff. The finding of the lower Court on the question of title is in favour of the plaintiff and the learned Senior Subordinate Judge says that this question was not pressed in arguments before him. If the defendants entered upon the plaintiffs' land under permission given by the lambardar by mistake, it is difficult to see how the plaintiff's right to claim compensation could be affected by the inclusion or exclusion of Nabi Bakhsh from the list of defendants. It is true that he was held to be a necessary party in a previous decision of this Court but the order in question merely means that his inclusion was necessary if a final adjudication was to be obtained on the question of title, which had been raised in the suit and not that he would still be a necessary party if it was found that the denial of the plaintiff's title by the defendants was entirely unfounded. It is possible that the defendants may still have a good defence in reply to the plaintiff's case, but the suit cannot be dismissed merely because Nabi Bakhsh or his legal representatives no longer appear on the record.

For these reasons I set aside the decision of the lower Court, which is based upon a preliminary point, and remand the suit for determination on the merits. Stamp fee will be refunded and the plaintiff will receive his costs in this Court from the defendants. Other costs will be costs in the suit.

N. Case remanded.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 286 of 1931

September 3, 1934

AGARWALA AND SAUNDERS, JJ.

BABAN MISRA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS —APPELLANTS

versus

BISHWANATH PANDE AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS

Equity—When to be invoked—Considerations—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s 92—Widow—Purchaser from widow discharging mortgage debt—Reversioner, if entitled to possession only on payment of mortgage debt paid—No allegation of bad faith on part of purchaser—Good faith, if to be proved.

If equity is to be invoked it should be only in favour of persons shown to have acted disinterestedly and in good faith with no intention of securing any unfair advantage for themselves.

Where a purchaser from the widow holding a life-estate discharges a mortgage debt out of the consideration for the mortgage and on the death of the widow, the reversioner sues for possession of the property, credit should be given to the mortgage amount paid by the purchaser. In such case, if the plaintiff reversioner does not impute bad faith on the part of the purchaser, the latter is not bound to allege or prove good faith. Chinna Alagumperumal v. Vinayagathammal (3), distinguished, Mohammed Shumshool Hooda v. Shewukram (1), and Jagdeo Sahu v. Mahabir Prasad (2), referred to.

C. A. from the appellate decree of the District Judge, Muzaffarpur, dated December 3, 1930.

Messrs. S. M. Mullick, B. C. De and R. Jha, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Parmeshwar Dayal and S. N. Banerji, for the Respondents.

Saunders, J.—This appeal is by the defendants in a suit brought by the reversionary heirs of one Pokhai Pande for possession of land sold by his sister-in-law Musammat Tetri while she held the estate in lieu of maintenance after the death of his widow.

The sale of approximately six and a half bighas of land was effected by means of two documents executed in 1922 in favour of defendant No. 1, who is her nephew. A portion of the land covered by one of these sale deeds, 1 bigha 4 kathas 3 dhurs, had been given in usufructuary mortgage to another person by Pokhai Pande in 1911, the sum secured by the mortgage being Rs. 899. This sum and a sum also for redemption of another mortgage which had been executed by Musammat Tetri herself were left with defendant No. 1, who in 1924 sold the 1 bigha 4 kathas 3 dhurs to defendants Nos. 2 and 3 for Rs. 1,203 without having redeemed either of the mortgages. Defendants Nos. 2 and 3 redeemed the usufructuary mortgage and obtained possession of the land which they had bought from defendant No. 1. Separate written statements were put in by defendant No. 1 and by defendants Nos. 2 and 3 and in both the written statements the plaintiffs claim to be the reversioners of Pokhai Pande was denied and it was pleaded that the sales by Musammat Tetri had been for necessity.

The trial Court decreed the suit and an appeal against the decree was dismissed by the District Judge of Muzaffarpur. This second appeal is by the three defendants, but it is pressed only on behalf of defendants Nos. 2 and 3. Mr. Mullick appearing for the appellants did not question the findings of the lower Courts as to the plaintiffs' right as reversioners or as to the invalidity of the alienations by Musammat Tetri, but he contended that defendants Nos. 2 and 3 are entitled to a refund of the Rs. 899 which they paid to the usufructuary mortgagee. He relied on the decisions of two cases, Mohamed Shumsool Hooda v. Shewukram (1) and Jagdeo Sahu v. Mahabir Prasad (2). In the former case a mortgage subsisting upon an estate at the time of a sale by a widow with only life interest in the estate was afterwards redeemed by the purchaser and the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council held that it was equitable that when the plaintiff claims the estate, credit should be given to the purchaser for the payment of the mortgage which otherwise the plaintiff himself would have had to meet. In the other case the reversioners of a deceased mortgagor instituted a suit for possession against the person who had purchased the mortgaged property and had deposited the mortgage debt and the view was taken by this High Court that although, as in the present case, s. 92, Transfer of Property Act, did not apply because the section was enacted after the sale, yet the transferee was entitled to the equitable relief claimed by him and that credit should be given to him for the payment of the mortgage debt.

Mr. Parmeshwar Dayal appearing for the respondents attempted to distinguish those cases from this case for the reason that in the former, the payments had been made in good faith whereas defendants Nos. 2 and 3 failed to satisfy the Courts below that they were honest purchasers of the property. He contended also that it is not open to these defendants to claim equitable relief on this ground as they did not do so in their written statement and did not cause any issue to be framed for adjudication of the claim, but contested the suit on same grounds as those taken by defendant No. 1, stating only as regards the sale that it was executed by defendant No. 1 in their favour for consideration and was in every way valid and binding on the estate. The plaint, however, contained no allegation that called for an assertion of good faith on their part. All that the plaintiffs stated in the plaint regarding these two defendants was that they were impleaded as defendants because they were subsequent purchasers of some of the properties and a declaration was prayed for that the first defendant had no right to sell any of the properties to them. The claim was made by these defendants during the hearing of the suit and it was rejected merely because they did not give evidence as witnesses to prove that the purchases have been made in good faith. I do not consider that it was necessary for them to do so when there was no imputation of bad faith in the plaint. In the appeal to the District Judge the plaintiffs' claim to be given possession of the property was not questioned, the appeal being argued only on the ground that the appellants were entitled to a refund of the money they had paid to the mortgagees. The learned District Judge dealt with the point at some length and rejected the claim because he found that defendant No. 1 had acquired the properties dishonestly with the intention of keeping the estate out of the hands of the reversioners; taking the correct view that if equity is to be invoked, it should be only in favour of persons shown to have acted disinterestedly and in good faith with no intention of securing any unfair ad vantage for themselves. But nothing that the learned Judge has said regarding the dishonesty of the transactions can have any reference to defendants Nos. 2 and 3 on whose behalf the claim must have been intended to be made for the claim was not open to defendant No. 1 who did not redeem either of the mortgages. The confusion of their case with the case of defendant No. 1 seems to have been due to the fact that the defence taken by these defendants was virtually the same as his. Nevertheless, as I have said, there is no reason to suspect bad faith on their part. Mr. Parmeshwar Dayal has referred to the case of Chinna Alagumperumal v. Vinayagathammal (3), where a transferee of the property of a minor which he obtained from a person who was not the minor's guardian was found not to be entitled to be reimbursed the money which he had spent for the benefit of the estate. The facts however are clearly distinguishable from the facts of the present case as there was a distinct finding in that case that the transferee's conduct throughout had been dishonest. In the present case I do not see why the plaintiffs should obtain the property free of the encumbrance which they would have had to pay if the property had not been sold to defendants Nos. 2 and 3 and so derive a very substantial benefit from the transaction which they have successfully impugned. I would, therefore, dismiss the appeal so far as defendant No. 1 is concerned, and allow it partly in favour of defendants Nos. 2 and 3 by adding a declaration to the decree that the plaintiffs will not be put in possession of the 1 bigha 4 kathas and 5 dhurs bought by these defendants from defendant No. 1 until the plaintiffs have paid to them the sum of Rs. 899. The three defendants will be liable for three-quarters of the plaintiffs' costs in the Courts below and the parties will bear their own costs of this appeal.

(1) 22 W R 409; 2 I A 7; 4 B L R 226 (P C).
(2) 153 Ind. Cas. 602; A I R 1934 Pat. 127; 13 Pat. 111; 15 P L T 13; 7 R P 3 7.

Agarwala, J.—I agree.

D. Order accordingly.

(3) 117 Ind. Cas. 731; A I R 1929 Mad. 110; 55 M L J 861; 29 L W 6.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 1295 of 1928

May 19, 1934

BHIDE AND DIN MUHAMMAD, JJ.

FEROZE KHAN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

UMAR HAYAT AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Custom (Punjab)—Succession—Self-acquired property—Riwaj-i-am entry against married daughters—Onus of proof—Shifting of onus—Presumption held rebutted on evidence on behalf of daughter -Janjúha Rajputs of Jhelum.

Even in the case of a riwaj-i-am unsupported by instances, the presumption lies in favour of its correctness and a duty is cast upon those who challenge it to rebut this presumption. Consequently, the onus is on the daughters to prove that even after their marriage they excluded the collaterals if the property was the self-acquired property of their father. But the presumption in such cases is so weak that on a mere proof of a small number of instances to the contrary it stands rebutted and the onus is then shifted on to the collaterals to prove that they exclude married daughters from the self-acquired property of their father:

Held, in a case of Janjuha Rajputs of Jhelum that the presumption was rebutted by evidence adduced on behalf of the daughters.

[Case-law discussed.]

F. C. A. from the decree of the Senior Sub-Judge, Lyallpur, dated February 10, 1928.

Messrs. Nanak Chand and Mehar Chand Sud for the Appellant.

Messrs. Shamair Chand, Ladha Ram and Qabul Chand, for the Respondents.

Din Muhammad, J.—The parties to this suit are Janjuha Rajputs of Jhelum. One Mirza Khan of Pindi Saidpur, Tahsil Pind Dadan Khan, was granted about four squares of land in the District of Lyallpur whose proprietary rights he acquired during his life-time. On his death he left him surviving a widow, Musammat Karam Bibi who succeeded to the usual life estate and two daughters, Irshad Begam and Mastura Begum. Musammat Karam Bibi died on September 24, 1916, and on her death, the whole ancestral property of Mirza Khan was inherited by his reversioners while the entire self-acquired property situated both in the District of Jhelam as well as in the District of Lyallpur was mutated in favour of her daughters. On the death of Irshad Begam, her share of the property devolved half and half on her husband and her minor daughter, Musammat Sardar Begam, respectively. On the death of the husband his share was mutated half and half in the names of his two sons, Ayyub Khan and Umar Hayat, and on the death of the former his share passed on to the latter. On the death of Mastura Begam her estate went to her son Aurangzeb. The present position therefore is that Umar Hayat is in possession of one-fourth of the self-acquired property of Mirza Khan, deceased, Musammat Sardar Begam holds one-fourth, while the remaining half is held by Aurangzeb. Mirza Khan had three brothers, named, Nadir Ali, Nawab Khan and Sarfraz Khan, whose descendants were alive at the time when the present suit was brought by Feroze Khan, one of the two sons of Sarfraz Khan for the recovery of the possession of Mirza Khan's self-acquired lands in the District of Lyallpur to the extent of his own share. This suit was instituted on October 9, 1926, against Umar Hayat, Aurangzeb and Musammat Sardar Begam on the allegation, inter alia that according to the custom prevailing in the tribe of the parties, a daughter was excluded from the landed property of her father even if it was self-acquired. The defendants denied this custom on which an issue was framed casting the burden of proof upon the plaintiff to prove his preferential right as against the daughters of Mirza Khan. The learned Subordinate Judge, after examining in detail the oral evidence led by the parties as well as the instances cited by them, came to the conclusion that the custom relied upon by the plaintiff was not proved and consequently he dismissed his suit with costs.

The plaintiff has preferred an appeal to this Court, mainly on the ground that as the entries in the Riwaj-i-am, of the Jhelum District prepared by Mr. Talbot in 1900 were against the succession of married daughters both as regards ancestral and the self-acquired property, the trial Court erred in law in placing the onus on him and that even if it had been rightly placed, he has succeeded in discharging it, and is, therefore, entitled to a decree. Mr. Nanak Chand, who appeared on his behalf, has strenuously urged before us that in view of the pronouncement of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Beg v. Allah Ditta (1) and the subsequent rulings of this Court based thereon and in face of the reply given by the representatives of the Janjuna tribe to Questions Nos. 17 and 58 of the Riwaj-i-am, the initial presumption lay in favour of the appellant. He contends that for the last eight or nine years, the law has been gradually laid down that even in the case of a Riwaj-i-am unsupported by instances, the presumption lies in favour of its correctness and a duty is cast upon those who challenge it to rebut this presumption. This is no doubt true. I have therefore no hesitation in holding that the onus should have been placed on the daughters to prove that even after their marriage they excluded the collaterals if the property was the self-acquired property of their father. The learned Counsel for the respondents has very frankly conceded this proposition of law but he contends that the presumption in such cases is so weak that on a mere proof a small number of instances to the contrary it stands rebutted and the onus is then shifted on to the collaterals to prove that they exclude the married daughters from the self-acquired property of their father. I may, however, note here that the case as originally presented by the plaintiff was that a daughter succeeds in no case (para. 7 of the plaint) and as this was evidently against the entries of the Riwaj-i-am, which recognises the right of an unmarried daughter to succeed to her father's estate, whatever the nature of the property, the learned Subordinate Judge appears to have placed the onus on the plaintiff. It is only because the retention of the self-acquired property after the marriage is opposed to the entries in the Riwaj-i-am and is being claimed by the daughters that the onus should have been placed on them.

It becomes necessary, therefore, to closely examine and scrutinise the evidence of the parties both oral and documentary to see whether sufficient material has been brought on the record one way or the other. For the plaintiff reliance is placed on the oral evidence as well as on the copies of mutations, Exs. P-3 to P-7 (a), in most of which, I may say at once, it has not been clearly established that the property, which was the subject-matter of the mutation, was the self-acquired property of the last male owner. Exhibit P-3 is a case from the village of the parties. Fateh Ali, a Janjuha Rajput, was succeeded by his daughter Musammat Begam Jan and the record shows that the collaterals in whose favour a mutation had been entered by the Patwari after the marriage of Musammat Begam Jan, did not agree to the step taken by him and she is still enjoying the land. The plaintiff produced this copy with the object of showing that daughters forfeit their inheritance on marriage. This, however, is not proved by this document.

(1) 38 Ind. Cas. 354; A I R 1916 P C 129; 44 I A 89; 44 C 749; 45 P R 1917; 12 P WR 1917; 21 M L T 310; 32 M L J 615; 19 Bom. L R 388; 15 A L J 525; 21 C W N 842; 26 C L J 175 (P C).

Exhibit P-4 relates to village Sherpur. It is no doubt true that on the death of Karim Ullah Khan his property was mutated in the names of his collaterals in the presence of his daughter, Musammat Razia, but it is admitted by the plaintiff himself that she was only one year old at the time of her father's death and afterwards died in her infancy. Similarly as shown by Ex. P-5 on the death of Musammat Sultan Begam her daughter, Musammat Said Begam, was ignored in favour of her husband's collaterals, but the mortgagee rights, which alone constituted the self-acquired property of her father, were only valued at Rs. 75 and as she is married to a respectable gentleman of the position of Lieutenant Sahib Khan, D. W. No. 3, it appears that she did not think it worth her while to claim that infinitesimal share of her father's estate. Even if these two instances were taken at their face value, they do not help the plaintiff's case. Exhibit P-4 rather proves that in thus depriving the daughter of the self-acquired property of her father, the Riwaj-i-am was being ignored which by virtue of the reply to Question No. 57 conferred the estate on her until marriage at least. The rest of the documentary evidence mostly concerns Machhis, Maliars, Jats and Awans of Jhelum, but though the custom amongst all the tribes is uniform, these instances do not help the plaintiff, inasmuch as it is not clear, as has been indicated above, that the property concerned in these mutations was self-acquired of the last male owner. It would appear, therefore, from the above resume of the plaintiff's evidence that he has not been able to quote any instance in which a married daughter was ousted by the collaterals of her father in the matter of succession to his self-acquired property. According to the Riwaj-i-am of the district there is no distinction between ancestral or self-acquired property so far as the succession of daughters until marriage is concerned, and there can be no presumption, therefore, that the land to which the daughters had originally succeeded and of which they were deprived at the time of their marriage was only self-acquired, as was urged by the learned Counsel for the appellant when explaining the value of the instances cited by him.

As against this, the defendants have produced both oral and documentary evidence to show that the daughter has successfully asserted her claim to the self-acquired property of her father as against the collaterals in spite of the definite entry in the Riwaj-i-am. They have quoted instances to show that not only before the Revenue Officers but even in the Civil Courts, this claim has been recognised. Exhibits D-4, D 5, D-12, D-15, D-16, D-23 and D-24 relate to the previous course of succession to the land in suit as well as to the other self-acquired property of Mirza Khan, and in almost all these cases, the contesting reversioners remained unsuccessful in establishing their claim. Exhibit D-2 proves that Musammat Fazal Nur, a married daughter of Shah Alam Khan a Janjuha Rajput of Bajwala, succeeded to his self-acquired property in the presence of a collateral Shah Nawaz, who by mutual compromise was assigned 4 kanals of banjar land only. Exhibits D-17 D-18 and D-19 show that Musammat Sardar Begam, daughter of Sarfraz, Gakhar retained her father's estate even on her marriage, although the reversioners went up to the Court of the District Judge. Exhibit D-13 is the copy of a judgment of the Subordinate Judge at Pind Dadan Khan, upholding the claim of Musammat Said Begam, daughter of Nawab, Janjuha, as against his collaterals. Exhibit D-21 is a copy of the order of the Collector, Jhelum, upholding the right of Musammat Karam Nur who had succeeded to her father Nawaz, a Rajput of Tahsil Chakwal to retain her inheritance even after her marriage. It will be interesting to note that some of the instances cited by the plaintiff himself clearly refuted his contention that a daughter does not succeed to her father's estate in any case, as they clearly indicated that a daughter had originally inherited her father's estate.

From the defendant's instances, it would be evident that in almost all cases where there had been a contest between the collaterals and the daughters as regards self-acquired property of the last male owner, the claim of the daughters not only to succeed to the property but also to retain it even after their marriage has been invariably recognised. These instances in my view would be quite sufficient to shift the onus on to the plaintiff to prove that he had a superior claim to the married daughters of Mirza Khan.

The learned Counsel for the respondents has invited our attention to several authorities of the Punjab Chief Court as well as of this Court to show that the Riwaj-i-am of 1900 prepared by Mr. Talbot had been declared to be inconsistent and unsatisfactory. Reference may be made among others to Khuda Yar v. Fatteh (2). In Sultan v. Sharfan (3), a Division Bench of this Court observed that the declaration in Talbot's Customary Law that a married daughter cannot inherit even the self-acquired movable property of her father verges on an absurdity. In Nadran v. Mahamad Husain (4), Addison, J., followed an earlier Riwajiam in preference to this Riwaj-i-am. In Mahomed v. Jiwani (5), Abdul Rashid, J., decided in favour of the daughters on the basis of two instances which he thought were sufficient to rebut the presumption created by the entries in the Riwaj-i-am under discussion. Similarly in a case from Shahpur reported in Khan Beg v. Fateh Khatun (6), it was remarked by Tek Chand and Coldstream, JJ., that where the custom recorded in the Riwaj-i-am is opposed to the rules generally prevailing, the presumption will be considerably weakened and where the Riwaj-i-am affected adversely the right of females who had no opportunity whatever of appearing before the Revenue Authorities, the presumption will be weaker still and only a few instances might be sufficient to rebut it. It may also be useful to indicate that the author himself expressed a doubt as to the correctness of some of the replies that he had recorded in his compilation. In the note appended to the reply to Question No. 57 he has remarked that the answers were somewhat doubtful as they were opposed to the general custom prevalent amongst the agricultural tribes of the province. In the preface to his book also he suggested that most of the statements made to him were those of the persons intersted in them and could not serve as a sure guide to determine the real state of affairs. He observes as follows:

"The Code may be taken to be a correct record of the Customary Law of the people as stated by them, but it does not follow that it is in all cases a correct record of the customs actually existing as the more intelligent tribesmen, who usually act as spokesmen on an occasion of this kind, sometimes allow their opinion as to what customs are expedient to override their knowledge of the customs as they are."

Moreover, it is a matter of common knowledge that the trend in these days is in favour of daughters especially in case of all Muhammadan tribes residing in the northern districts of the Punjab and people are now generally being found inclined to right the immeasurable wrong they had so far been doing to their female heirs. Daughters have been treated of late as a favoured class when opposed to the collaterals of a remote degree even in the case of ancestral property, and the learned Counsel for the respondents has invited our attention to various authorities of this Court relating to a number of districts in the province where the right of daughters to succeed to the self-acquired property of their father even in the presence of brothers and nephews has been clearly recognised. Reference may also be made in this connection to para. 23 (2) of Rattigan's Digest of Customary Law where this has been laid down as a general custom of the Province implying thereby that the exclusion of daughters from the self-acquired property of their father should be treated as exceptional case.

In view of the above, I have no hesitation in holding that the learned Subordinate Judge arrived at a right conclusion in dismissing the suit of the plaintiff, and I would dismiss this appeal with costs.

Bhide, J.—I agree that the presumption attaching to the entries in the Riwaj-i am has been rebutted by the evidence on the record and that this appeal must, therefore, be dismissed with costs.

N. Appeal dismissed.

(2) 8 P R 1906; 64 P L R 1906.
(3) 111 Ind. Cas. 846; A I R 1928 Lah. 703; 10 Lah. 249.
(4) 132 Ind. Cas. 209; A I R 1931 Lah. 450; Ind. Rul. (1931) Lah. 545.
(5) 151 Ind. Cas. 318; A I R 1934 Lah. 363; 17 R L 118; 2 P R 732; 36 P L R 267.
(6) 135 Ind. Cas. 769; A I R 1932 Lah. 157; 13 Lah. 276; 32 P L R 890; Ind. Rul. (1932) Lah. 161.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 403 of 1926
July 9, 1934

TEK CHAND AND BHIDE, J.

ABDUL RAFI KHAN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Pandit LAKSHMI CHAND AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Abatement—Appellant minor—Next friend pardanashin lady—Respondent dying in different district – Abatement, if should be set aside – Custom (Punjab) —Alienation—Gohna Tahsil of Rohtak District—Male proprietors, powers of—Necessity—Application of money—Act of good management

Where the appellant is a minor residing in another district and his next friend is a pardanashin woman and the death of the respondent takes place in a different district, there is sufficient cause to set aside the abatement.

A male proprietor in the Gohana Tahsil can alienate immovable property freely except for immoral purposes.

[Case-law discussed.]

A vendee is not expected to see to the application of the money by the vendor to the purposes mentioned in the sale-deed.

Where a proprietor sells his land in the village on seeing that his staying there is not safe and with a view to purchase land elsewhere, and he settles there, the sale is an act of good management and cannot be disturbed under any rule of law.

F. C. A. from the decree of the Senior Sub-Judge, Rohtak, dated November 23, 1925.

Messrs. M. L. Puri and M. C. Sud, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Shamair Chand, J. L. Kapur, Qabul Chand, J. N, Agarwal and Nand Lal for Mr. Prabhu Dial, for the Respondents.

Bhide, J.—The plaintiff Abdul Rafi Khan who is a minor son of Shamshad Ali Khan, a Rajput land owner of Gohana in the Rohtak District, brought this suit for a declaration that two sales of ancestral land effected by Shamshad Ali Khan by sale deeds, dated April 29, 1915, and July 21, 1916, for Rs. 26,000 and Rs. 28,000, respectively, in favour of Pandit Lakshmi Chand, defendant No. 1, should not affect his reversionary rights. It was alleged that the parties are governed by custom and that the sale being effected without any valid necessity are not binding on the plaintiff. Defendant No. 1 had transferred portions of the land sold to him to other persons and these were all impleaded as defendants.

The vendees denied that the plaintiff was a son of the vendor Shamshad Ali Khan and further raised the pleas that the suit was barred by limitation, that according to the custom prevailing in the Gohana Tahsil of the Rohtak District, the vendor could alienate ancestral land even without necessity provided the alienation was not effected for immoral purposes, and finally that the alienations were, in fact, made for valid necessity.

The trial Court found that the plaintiff was the son of the vendor and the suit was within time, but held that the parties were governed, by a custom according to which the vendor had power to alienate the land except for immoral purposes, and lastly, that the sales were effected for valid necessity. On these findings the suit was dismissed and the plaintiff has appealed.

A preliminary objection was raised that the suit had abated in part as the vendee Pandit Lakshmi Chand and two of the subsequent transferees, viz., Chhatar and Ramji Lal had died and no applications had been made within time to bring their legal representatives on the record. As regards Pandit Lakshmi Chand, it appears that he died at Delhi on February 9, 1934, while the application to bring his legal representative on the record was made on May 19, 1934. The application was thus admittedly out of time by 9 days; but it was explained on behalf of the appellant that he lives usually in Hardwa Ganj in the Aligarh District, that his next friend is a pardanashin lady and that Pandit Lakshmi Chand having died in Delhi, she did not come to know of the death in time. A similar explanation was offered in respect of the delay in making applications to bring on the record the legal representatives of the other two deceased respondents. On behalf of the respondents it was alleged that these two respondents died about 3 or 4 years ago and it was, therefore, urged that such abnormal delay should not be condoned. But there is nothing on the record to show that these respondents died 3 or 4 years ago. In view of all the circumstances, we consider that sufficient cause has been shown for the delay in making the applications for impleading the legal representatives of the deceased respondents and we accordingly set aside the abatement of the appeal in respect of the three respondents.

On the merits of the appeal, the learned Counsel for the appellant contended that the finding of the learned Senior Subordinate Judge, that an alienation made by a Rajput proprietor of the Gohana Tahsil of the Rohtak District could not be challenged unless it was made for immoral purposes, was incorrect, that the custom governing the Rajputs was the same as the general custom in the province according to which alienations of this kind are not binding unless made for valid necessity, and lastly, that no necessity for the alienations in question had been established.

As regards the point of custom, the oral evidence is of little value and was not relied on by either party. The learned Counsel for the appellant relied mainly on certain judicial decisions and the Riwaj-i-am of the Gohana Tahsil, which, he urged, had been misinterpreted by the trial Court. The judicial decisions relied on by him were Exs. P-8, P-11, P-13, P-9 and P-10.

The first three are of little value. Ex. P-8 is a judgment by Agha Muhammad Sultan Mirza, in which he merely follows an earlier judgment of his (Ex. P-9) in which he has dealt with the question at some length. He also relies on a judgment of Lieutenant-Colonel Knollys, dated March 29, 1920, and one of Mr. Anderson. The former appears to have been set aside by this Court in Giani v. Tek Chand (1), while the latter is not on the record. In Exs. P-11 and P-13, the point of custom was either assumed or not argued. Exhibit P-9, Agha Muhammad Sultan Mirza, Munsif First Class, has discussed the question of custom at some length. In Ramji Lal v. Tej Ram (2), a Full Bench decision of the Punjab Chief Court, it was held that the rule laid down in Gujar v. Sham Das (3) with respect to the central districts of the Punjab that there was a presumption that ancestral immovable property could not be alienated by a member of a village community without necessity, was applicable to the whole of this province. Starting with this presumption, the learned Munsif went on to point out that most of the decisions in which it was held that the proprietors of land in the Rohtak District had unrestricted powers of alienation were based on an enquiry made under the orders of Mr. Clifford, Divisional Judge, in Har Dayal v. Ram Raj, Civil Appeal No. 235 of 1896. He criticised the enquiry and expressed the opinion that it was of a superficial character and insufficient to displace the presumption as regards the existence of restrictions on the power of alienating ancestral immovable property as laid down in Ramji Lal v. Tej Ram (2). The last decision relied on (Ex. P-10) was by the District Judge, Karnal, in which he referred to the entries in the Riwaj-i-am of the Gohana Tahsil and held that they did not show that a male proprietor could alienate land without necessity. He distinguished the rulings reported in Giani v. Tek Chand (1) Uggar Sain v. Telu (4), and Kala v. Ram Chand (5), on the ground that these relate to the Rohtak Tahsil. I shall presently deal with the Riwaj-i-am of the Gohana Tahsil, the terms of which were not discussed by the learned District Judge in this ruling and which in my opinion was not correctly interpreted by him. The learned Counsel for the appellant further relied on two reported rulings: Budal v. Kirpa (6) and Ghansham v. Balak Ram (7). The latter was a case of gift by a Brahman in Jhajjar Tahsil and it is not in point. The former (which appears from a reference to the record to be a case from Gohana Tahsil) is, no doubt in appellant's favour; but this ruling does not discuss any previous decision or the Riwaj-i-am. It makes no reference also to the enquiry made under the orders of Mr. Clifford in Civil Appeal No. 235 of 1896 and it has not been followed in subsequent rulings as pointed out in Kala v. Ram Chand (5).

The respondents relied on a certain number of judicial decisions copies of which have been marked as Exs. D-50 to D-55 and D-62. Most of these judgments are based on the inquiry made under the orders of Mr. Clifford in Civil Appeal No. 235 of 1896 referred to above, the last one containing a useful resume of the more important earlier decisions. It is true that some of these judgments do not relate to the Gohana Tahsil, but the inquiry ordered by Mr. Clifford in the aforesaid appeal covered the whole of the Rohtak District and was not confined to any particular Tahsil. As a result of Mr. Clifford's decision in that appeal, which was subsequently followed in a large number of cases, a note was appended to the answer to question No. 102, in the compilation of the Customary Law of the District by Mr. Joseph in the year 1911, to the effect that a sonless proprietor in the Rohtak District can sell or mortgage his land without necessity and such alienations cannot be impugned unless made for immoral purposes. This view has now been followed in several reported decisions: see, e. g. Sheoji v. Ali Khan 20 Ind. Cas. 475 (8) and Telu v. Chuni 20 Ind. Cas. 373 (9) and was recently endorsed in a Division Bench judgment relating to the Gohana

(1) 64 Ind. Cas. 549; 4 Lah. 111; A I R 1922 Lah. 69; 11 P L R 1922.
(2) 73 P R 1895.
(3) 107 P R 1887.
(4) 71 Ind. Cas. 829; 122 P L R 1923; 4 Lah. 113; A I R 1923 Lah. 1923.
(5) 73 Ind. Cas. 988; 4 Lah. 282; 75 P L R 1923; 5 Lah. L J 404; A I R 1924 Lah. 102.
(6) 23 Ind. Cas. 211; 148 P L R 1914; 76 P R 1914; A I R 1914 Lah. 140.
(7) 36 Ind. Cas. 215; 94 P L R 1916; 181 P W R 1916; A I R 1916 Lah. 145.
(8) 20 Ind. Cas. 475; 230 P L R 1913.
(9) 20 Ind. Cas. 373; 231 P L R 1913.

Tahsil reported as Behari v. Bhola (10). The view expressed by the learned Munsif in Ex. P-9 that the inquiry made under the orders of Mr. Clifford was a superficial one and cannot be supported. In Telu v. Chuni (9), it was pointed out by Scott Smith, J., that the enquiry was a very exhaustive one. It appears from the record of that inquiry that all available mutations regarding sales and mortgages were examined and every effort was made to ascertain the custom in the District as far as practicable. It is remarkable that no instances of any attempt to challenge alienations on the ground of want of necessity prior to 1893 were forthcoming (vide Ex. D-58).

The decisions on which the learned Counsel for the appellant has sought to rely appears to proceed mainly on the presumption as to the existence of restrictions on the power of alienation of ancestral immovable property by a member of a village community. This rule was originally laid down in Gujar v. Sham Das (3) with reference to the central Districts of the Punjab, but was extended to the whole of the province in Ramji Lal v. Tej Ram (2). But the presumption appears to have been based in the latter ruling merely on an inference drawn from the origin and character of a village community and not on any positive evidence as to the existence of such restrictions, outside the central Districts of the Punjab. It was pointed out by Chatterjee, J., in Hasan v. Jahana (11) that the rule laid down in Ramji Lal v. Tej Ram (2) could not be accepted without some limitation and that the words "creed, tribe and locality apart" should be read into it. According to the Punjab Laws Act, the initial presumption in the case of Hindus and Muhammadans in this province is that they are governed by Hindu and Muhammadan Law, and if a custom modifying these laws is alleged, it has to be proved. As pointed out by Robertson, J., in Daya Ram v. Sohel Singh (12) a view which has been endorsed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Abdul Husain Khan v. Sona Dero (13).

" the legislature did not show itself enamoured of custom rather than law, nor does it show any tendency to extend the 'principles' of custom to any matter to which a rule of custom is not clearly proved to apply. It is not the spirit of Customary Law, nor any theory of custom or deductions from other customs which is to be the rule of decision but only any custom applicable to the parties concerned."

It has been pointed out in later rulings of the Punjab Chief Court, as well as of this Court, that custom is not a matter of theory but of fact, that it is not always logical and cannot be deduced by inferences of Pala Singh v. Lachami (14) and Amin Chand v. Bujha (15) and Gurbhaj v. Lachhman (16). In view of these authorities, I must say with all deference that the rule as to presumption laid down in Ramji v. Tej Ram (2), is open to question and this was sufficiently demonstrated in the case of the Rohtak District by the inquiry made under the order of Mr. Clifford in Civil Appeal No. 235 of 1896.

Coming now to the Riwaj-i-ams, it appears that in Tupper's Customary Law compiled in 1879, it was stated that a proprietor in the Rohtak District had unrestricted power-of-alienation and the revesioners could only exercise their right of pre-emption in the event of a sale (vide answers to questions Nos. 25 and 27 at page 176, Vol. 2). It appears, however, that the Riwaj-i-ams for the different Tahsils of the Rohtak District varied and the wide proposition as stated above does not seem to be sustainable at least in the case of the Gohana Tahsil. The relevant question and answer with respect to sales of ancestral land in the Riwaj-i-am of this Tahsil prepared in 1879 are in the following terms (vide Ex. P-4):

Question—

Under what circumstances can a proprietor sell his immovable property?

Are there any circumstances under which he cannot do so?

Answer—

Every proprietor is competent to sell or mortgage his immovable property, whether ancestral or self-acquired, for payment of revenue and fine imposed by Court and for defrayal of marriage, funeral and household expenses, and expenses of a pilgrimage to Mecca.

He is not competent to effect a sale or mortgage to follow immoral pursuits.

The phraseology used is not perhaps happy but it seems clear from the answer that the only circumstances in which a proprietor cannot sell his property are when the sale is intended for immoral purposes. The first portion of the answer mentions in

(10) 144 Ind. Cas 616; 14 Lah. 600; 34 P L R 342; A I R 1933 Lah. 339; 6 R L 4.

(11) 71 P L R 1904; 96 P L R 1904.

(12) 110 P R 1906; 31 P L R 1907.

(13) 43 Ind. Cas. 306; A I R 1917 P C 181; 45 C 450; 16 A L J 17; 4 P L W 27; 34 M L J 48; 22 C W N 353; 23 M L T 117; 27 C L J 240; 1 P L R 1918; 20 Bom. L R 528; 12 S L R 104; 45 I A 10 (P C).

(14) 32 Ind. Cas. 16; 105 P R 1915; 73 P L R 1915 Sup.; A I R 1916 Lah. 141.

(15) 32 Ind. Cas. 29; 107 P R 1915; 70 P L R 1915 Sup.; A I R 1916 Lah. 128.

(16) 88 Ind. Cas. 550; 26 P L R 217; 6 Lah. 87; A I R 1925 Lah. 341; 1 L C 492; 7 Lah. L J 133.

a general way what are considered to be necessities, but apparently without being exhaustive. The learned Counsel for the appellant urged that the concluding portion of the answer was redundant, but there seems to be no justification for holding it to be so. It was a definite answer in reply to the question as to the circumstances under which a proprietor could not alienate his immovable property and there is no justification for ignoring it. Reading the answer as a whole, it seems to me that a proprietor in the Gohana Tahsil can alienate immovable property freely except for immoral purposes. This rule is in consonance with Hindu Law, which, as is well-known, prevails to a considerable extent in the Rohtak and other districts forming part of the old Delhi territory. The correctness of the custom as stated above was affirmed by the inquiry made by Mr. Clifford and has been accepted in many subsequent decisions. It was also accepted recently in Behari v. Bhola (10).

I accordingly hold that the learned Senior Subordinate Judge was right in his conclusion that the plaintiff had no locus standi to challenge the sales in dispute unless they were proved to have been made for immoral purposes. The plaintiff has produced a certain amount of evidence to show that the vendor was a man of immoral character, but it is by no means convincing. The vendor was less than 20 years of age at the time of the sales and it can hardly be believed that he was addicted at that age to prostitution, drink and other vices as stated by the witnesses. Besides, most of the evidence relates, as pointed out by the learned Senior Subordinats Judge, to a later period. There is nothing to show that the consideration for the sale deed was intended for immoral purposes, and the sales cannot, therefore, be held to be invalid on this ground, according to the custom governing the parties.

In view of the above finding, it is not necessary to go into the question of necessity for the sales; but I may point out briefly that the sales appear to have been necessitated by peculiar circumstances and may reasonably be looked upon as an act of good management, even according to the custom, generally prevailing in the province. It appears that the relations between the family of the plaintiff and tenants in the village, where the land was situated had become very strained and three members of the family including the father of the vendor had been recently murdered. Security proceedings were taken under s. 107, Criminal Procedure Code, against the tenants but unfortunately these proved infructuous. As a result, the members of the family, finding their position in the village precarious, sold their lands one by one as they found it difficult to manage them or recover rent (vide Exs. D-1 to D-7 and D-10). It is, therefore, not surprising to find that the vendor Shamshad Ali, who was a youngster aged less than 20, had lost his parents and was living with his maternal relations in the United Provinces, found it necessary to adopt the same course. It may be noted that the sales were made with the sanction of the Deputy Commissioner under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. The circumstances necessitating the sale were mentioned in Shamshad Ali's application to the Deputy Commissioner dated April 23, 1915 (vide Ex. D-13). It was also stated in the sale deeds that the vendor wanted to buy other lands. Further it is in evidence that he did actually buy some land in the United Provinces for Rs. 11,000 and also purchased mortgagee rights in other land for Rs. 24,682, shortly after the sales (vide Exs. D-63 and D-66). The land was bought in the name of K. Muhammad Mahfuz Ali Khan, father-in-law of the vendor and he gifted it in favour of the vendor's wife; but there is ample evidence on the record to show, as pointed out by the learned Senior Subordinate Judge, that this was merely a device to defeat the claims of possible pre-emptors. Further, there is evidence on the record to show that Shamshad Ali built a house for himself at a cost of about Rs. 8,000 or Rs. 9,000 in 1917-18. It is well-established that a vendee is not expected to see to the application of the money by the vendor to the purposes mentioned in the sale deed, but the facts stated above are sufficient to show that the vendee acted in good faith and that the money was not wasted on any immoral pursuits.

The consideration for the two sales as stated in the deeds was Rs. 26,000 and Rs. 28,000. The learned Senior Subordinate Judge has held that only Rs. 24,000 and Rs. 23,000 out of the consideration were satisfactorily proved to have been paid and the rest was probably fictitious. It was urged that the vendee cannot be held to have acted in good faith unless it was shown that the above sums represented the proper market value of the land sold. But the evidence on the record shows that Fayyaz Ali Khan, who was a co-sharer to the extent of one-half share in the same khata, sold his share for Rs. 48,000 (vide Ex D-3). Considering this fact, there is no adequate ground to hold that the land was sold below its market price.

In view of all the facts stated above, I feel no hesitation in holding that the sales in question were fully justified in the circumstances of the case and were an act of good management. In Jai Singh v. Darbara Singh (17), a sale of ancestral land by a person governed by ordinary custom was upheld as an act of good management, when the land was bringing him little income and he found it necessary to migrate to China to make a living. The same principle would apply to the present case.

On the above findings, this appeal must fail and I would accordingly dismiss it with costs.

Tek Chand, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

D.

(17) 89 Ind. Cas. 302; 6 Lah. 137; 26 P L R 329; A I R 1925 Lah. 396.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 1317 of 1933.
April 26, 1934
ABDUL RASHID, J.

AUTAR SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus
LAL SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS

Mortgage—Mortgage of reversionary rights—Validity of, in the Punjab—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 43.

A contract mortgaging a spes successionis in a province where the Transfer of Property Act is not in force can be enforced as an agreement to convey the estate when it falls into possession. A mortgage of the reversionary right of succession is, therefore, enforceable in the Punjab, although it does not effect a transfer of property at the time of the sale. Annanda Mohan Roy v. Gour Mohan Mullick (5) and Naranjan Singh v. Dharam Singh (6), followed.

[Case-law discussed.]

S. C. A. from the decree of the Additional District Judge, Lahore, dated June 10, 1933.

Mr. Mehr Chand, for the Appellant.

Mr. Tirath Ram, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—The facts relevant to the decision of the question of law arising in this case may be shortly stated. Autar Singh, defendant, and Musammat Ishar Kaur were joint owners in equal shares of two plots of land, one of which was situated in village Fatta Khoja and the other in village Sagga. All the joint land in village Fatta Khoja was in possession of Autar Singh, and the whole of the land in village Sagga was in the possession of Musammat Ishar Kaur. On March 19, 1928, Autar Singh defendant mortgaged 190 kanals of land situated in village Fatta Khoja in favour of the plaintiffs for Rs. 6,500. The mortgagees were put in possession of the land. A short time after the mortgage, Musammat Ishar Kaur, applied for partition of her share, and thereupon, 138 kanals 16 marlas out of the mortgaged land were granted to her, while 51 kanals 4 marlas fell to the share of the defendant. Shortly afterwards Musammat Ishar Kaur died, and the defendant succeeded to her rights as well, as he was her husband's nearest reversioner. The plaintiffs instituted the present suit on July 1, 1932, for a declaration to the effect that they were mortgagees with possession in respect of 190 kanals of land situated in Fatta Khoja by virtue of the mortgage deed, dated March 19, 1928. They also claimed an injunction restraining the defendant from dispossessing them or interfering with their possession. The plaintiffs alleged in their plaint that at the time of the execution of the mortgage deed the defendant had made a representation that the land in dispute belonged to him, and that in any case as the entire area had now fallen to the share of the defendant, he could not deny the plaintiffs' claim. The defendant pleaded, inter alia, that the plaintiffs were fully cognisant of the fact that he was owner of only one-half share of the land in dispute, and that the other one-half belonged to Musammat Ishar Kaur, and that, therefore, the plaintiffs were not entitled to the relief claimed. The trial Court held that in every sale or mortgage of immovable property there is an implied covenant that the title of the alienor is not defective in any manner, and that in accordance with the provisions of s. 43, Transfer of Property Act, the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain possession of the mortgaged property as the entire mortgaged property had fallen to the share of the defendant on the death of Musammat Ishar Kaur. The plaintiffs were granted a decree with costs against the defendant.

On appeal the learned District Judge confirmed the decision of the trial Court, and the defendant has now come up in Second Appeal to this Court. The learned District Judge has given the following findings which may be quoted in extenso

"Autar Singh was mortgaging the entire land as his own and not mortgaging the reversionary rights he held in Musammat Ishar Kaur's land. He clearly stated on oath that he made himself out to be the owner of the entire land. Bur Singh, P. W. No. 2 who is an attesting witness to the mortgage deed deposed that Autar Singh expressly represented the entire land to be his own It is true that the mortgagees were perhaps not unaware of the fact that Musammat Ishar Kaur originally held a one half share in the land, but considering that Autar Singh was in possession of all the joint land in Fatta Khoja and Musammat Ishar Kaur was in possession of all the joint land in village Sagga, they (mortgagees) might well have been induced to believe that by a family arrangement Autar Singh had become the sole proprietor of the land in suit. The case is in my opinion fully covered by s. 43, Transfer of Property Act, which lays down that where a person fraudulently or erroneously represents that he is authorised to transfer certain immovable property, and professes to transfer such property, for consideration, such transfer shall, at the option of the transferee, operate on any interest which the transferor may acquire in such property at any time during which the contract of transfer subsists."

It was argued by the learned Counsel for the appellant that the right of an heir succeeding to an estate cannot form the subject-matter of any valid contract and that if such a right is transferred, the contract is absolutely void. It was further urged that it was unnecessary to determine in such cases whether the doctrine of spes successionis was applicable to the Punjab in view of the fact that the Transfer of Property Act does not apply to this province, as the transfer of spes successionis is void under Hindu Law also. Reference was made in this connection to the following Privy Council Rulings: Sham Sundar Lal v. Achhar Kunwar (1), Amrit Narayan Singh v. Gaya Singh (2), Annanda Mohan Roy v. Gour Mohan Mullick (3), Harnath Kunwar v. Indar Bahadur Singh (4) and Ananda Mohan Roy v. Gour Mohan Mullick (5). In my opinion, no question of the transfer of a spes succcssionis arises in the present case. The learned District Judge has found that Autar Singh mortgaged the entire land in dispute as his own property and that he did not purport to mortgage the reversionary rights he held in Musammat Ishar Kaur's land. In view of this finding, the rulings relied upon by the learned Counsel for the appellant are inapplicable to the present case. Moreover, it was held in Naranjan Singh v. Dharam Singh (6) that a sale of a reversionary right of succession, though at the time of the sale it does not affect a transfer of property, gives rise to a right which the Court will enforce when the inheritance falls into possession. Such a contract is enforceable in a province where the Transfer of Property Act is not in force. Annanda Mohan Roy v. Gour Mohan Mullick (5) was considered in this ruling and it was pointed out that the observations in the Privy Council ruling were confined to cases arising in the provinces where the Transfer of Property Act was in force. It was held in Letters Patent Appeal No. 87 of 1924 by Sir Shadi Lal, C. J., and Le Rossignal, J., that a contract mortgaging a spes successionis in a province where the Transfer of Property Act was not in force could be enforced as an agreement to convey the estate when it fell into possession. The present suit is suit for a declaration, and the mortgagees are already in possession of the property in dispute. The facts of the case referred to above are, therefore, on all fours with the present case. Reference may also be made in this connection to Malak Allah Bakhsh v. Ghulam (7). It was maintained on behalf of the appellant that the principle underlying s. 43, Transfer of Property Act, was inapplicable to the present case as the mortgagees knew that Musammat Ishar Kaur was the owner of one-half of the land in village Fatta Khoja, and that, therefore, they were not misled by any erroneous representation made by the defendant-appellant. This point, however, cannot be raised in Second Appeal as the learned District Judge has found as a fact that Autar Singh mortgaged the entire land representing it to be his own property and did not reveal the fact that Musammat Ishar Kaur had any right in this land. The observations of the learned District Judge that the mortgagees were perhaps not unaware of the fact that

(1) 21 A 71; 25 I A 183; 2 C W N 729; 7 Sar 417 (P C).

(2) 44 Ind. Cas. 408; 45 C 590; 23 M L T 142; 22 C W N 409; 27 C L J 296; 34 M L J 298; 4 P L W 221; 16 A L J 265; (1918) M W N 306; 7 L W 581; 20 Bom. L R 546; 45 I A 35 (P C).

(3) 65 Ind. Cas. 27; 48 C 536; 25 C W N 496; 33 C L J 457.

(4) 71 Ind. Cas. 629; 45 A 179; A I R 1922 P C 403; 9 O & A L R 270; 9 O L J 652; 44 M L J 489; 37 C L J 346; 27 C W N 949; 50 I A 69; 18 L W 383; 26 C C 223; 33 M L T 216; 5 P L T 281; 2 Pat. L R 237 (P C).

(5) 74 Ind. Cas 499; 50 C 929; 21 A L J 718; 4 P L T 609; A I R 1923 P C 189; (1923) M W N 803; 45 M L J 617; 25 Bom. L R 1269; 33 M L T 365; 50 I A 239; 28 C W N 713; 40 C L J 10 (P C).

(6) 129 Ind Cas. 29; 31 P L R 909; A I R 1930 Lah. 928; Ind. Rul. (1931) Lah. 109.

(7) 13 P R 1899.

Musammat Ishar Kaur originally held a one-half share in the land do not mean that the mortgagees were aware at the time of the execution of the mortgage deed that Musammat Ishar Kaur had any share in the specific fields that from the subject-matter of the mortgage.

For the reasons given above I am of opinion that as the defendant did not purport to mortgage a spes successionis the mortgage cannot be held to be void ab initio, and that in any case the case is fully covered by the principles underlying s. 43, Transfer of Property Act. I, therefore, hold that the decision of the lower Court is correct and dismiss the appeal with costs.

N. Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 37 of 1934
May 21, 1934
COSTELLO AND LORT-WILLIAMS, JJ.
SAMARENDRANATH MITRA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS
versus
PYAREECHARAN LAHA—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXII, rr. 4, 11, O. IX, r. 9, s. 11—Certificated guardian appointed guardian ad litem*—Such person ceasing to be certificated guardian—Whether ceases to be guardian* ad litem, ipso facto*—Suit dismissed for want of prosecution under O. IX, r. 9—No issues tried*—Res judicata*—Words and phrases—"Cause of action"—Meaning of.*

Normally if a minor wishes to institute a suit and he has a certificated guardian then that certificated guardian is the right person to act as the next friend of the minor. If, on the other hand, a suit is brought against a minor who already has a certificated guardian then he is the person who must be appointed guardian for the suit unless the Court otherwise decides. There is no inherent disqualification in all persons other than certificated guardians to be a guardian ad litem. Where a person appointed guardian ad litem at the time when the suit was started is in fact the certificated guardian, the appointment is strictly in conformity with the provisions of sub-r. (2), O. XXXIV, Civil Procedure Code. The mere fact that he subsequently ceased to be the certificated guardian, and somebody else was appointed in his stead, does not of itself impose such an absolute and fundamental disqualification that he automatically vacates his office and becomes functus officio. The only way of getting rid of a guardian ad litem who has once been properly appointed, is under the provisions of r. 11, subject perhaps to the implications of sub-r. (1), r. 4. [p. 886, col. 2.]

The question of res judicata does not arise where a suit is dismissed for want of prosecution, under O. IX, r. 9, Civil Procedure Code, and the issues which are raised or might have been raised are never tried out and there is no judicial determination of any of them.

It is quite correct to define "cause of action" as meaning all the congeries of facts which it is necessary for the plaintiff to establish before he can ask the Court to grant the relief which he claims in the suit.

C. A. from original in Extraordinary Civil Suit No. 4 of 1933.

Messrs. Sudhir Roy and N. Sanyal, for the Appellants.

Messrs. S. N. Banerjee, Page, K. Basu Roy, Advocate General and Sambhu Banerji for Mr. Kshettri, for the Respondent.

Costello, J.—The facts, out of which this appeal arises, are set forth in the early part of the judgment of Buckland, J. In order to make it clear, however, how it came about that only certain issues were decided by the learned Judge it is necessary that I should recite some of the salient facts. In the year 1931, one Krishnakatyayanee Mitra became entitled to the estate of her grandfather, Kumarkrishna Deb, in the right of a Hindu lady. It is said that her husband, Asokenath Mitra, was a man of dissolute habits, who had dissipated the properties which he had himself inherited from his own father. The story is that Krishanakatyayanee Mitra was induced by her husband, Asokenath Mitra, to borrow various substantial sums of money and to create mortgages and other securities on the estate which she had acquired from her grandfather, in order that the personal debts of her husband might be paid off, and also to provide him with funds for what is described as his "evil propensities." It is said that the result of these operations was that Asokenath Mitra and his wife were in such financial straits that they, in conspiracy with an attorney named N. C. Mandal, and a man named Amalkanta Sarkar, who was their son-in-law, entered into various projects for the purpose of raising large sums of money for discharging the antecedent liabilities whereby their infant sons were deprived of the interest which they would eventually have acquired upon the cessation of their mother's estate.

On March 25, 1927, Amalkanta Sarkar was appointed guardian of the person and property of the present plaintiffs, the two sons of Asokenath Mitra and Krishnakatyayanee, who are minors. Amalkanta Sarkar was ostensibly appointed for the purpose of safeguarding the reversionary interest of the plaintiffs in the property. The conspiracy alleged may be described thus: The Solicitor N. C. Mandal, advised Asokenath Mitra to induce Krishnakatyayanee to surrender her interest in her grandfather's estate to the minors, which was done, and the Solicitor arranged for a loan on the security of a mortgage of the properties. It is said that the defendants, Pyareecharan Laha and Anandacharan Laha, are relations of the Solicitor. The surrender having been made, the Solicitor then filed a petition on behalf of the then guardian of the plaintiffs, Amalkanta Sarkar, before the District Judge of the 24-Parganas, and obtained permission to raise a loan of Rs. 2,50,000 on behalf of the minors by means of mortgage of the properties. That was done on August 16, 1929. On September 22, 1929, another petition was put in before the District Judge of 24-Parganas asking for approval of the draft mortgage to be prepared in favour of the Laha defendants. On September 27, 1929, a deed of surrender and a mortgage-deed for Rs. 2,50,000 in favour of the Laha defendants was executed by Amalkanta Sarkar. Part of the allegations against the defendants is that the whole of the money was retained by the Solicitor defendant, N. C. Mandal, and that no part of it came into the hands of Amalkanta Sarkar, as guardian of the minors.

It was, subsequently, found that the surrender might not have been entirely valid in law because certain portions of the property inherited by Krishnakatyayanee Mitra had not been included in the original deed of surrender. Consequently on October 5, she executed an instrument which has been referred to as a Deed of Rectification of the Deed of Surrender. I would pause here to say that it is not material for our present purpose to discuss the question which might have arisen as to whether a surrender of this kind was properly within the contemplation of the provisions of Hindu Law. That point has not been taken. But the surrender is challenged on the ground that the whole matter was in the nature of a plot to deprive these minors of their reversionary rights in regard to the property.

On April 12, 1930, the attorney, N. C. Mandal, again made an application to the District Judge, 24-Parganas, and on that occasion asked for permission to raise a further loan of Rs. 80,000 also on the mortgage of the estate. It was, in fact, a second mortgage of the same property as that comprised in the mortgage to the Lahas. It is said that as a result of that transaction, the Solicitor defendant received for his own benefit a sum amounting to Rs. 44,000 and that Amalkanta Sarkar, the then guardian, and Asokenath Mitra, the father of the minors, also received large sums for their own purposes. The allegations made by the minors against their parents and their guardian and the attorney relate to the transactions I have just described.

After an interval of a few months—about November 12, 1930,—the Lahas instituted a suit on the mortgage to them and that was suit No. 2090 of 1930. In that suit they made Krishnakatyayanee a defendant and also Lakshmeenarayan Kshettree who was a second mortgagee, the man who had lent the Rs. 80,000. On November 22, 1930, Amalkanta Sarkar, who, as I have already said, had been appointed guardian of the person and the properties of the present plaintiffs on March 25, 1930, was appointed guardian ad litem of the minors in the mortgage suit and for the purposes of that suit, and that it is an important fact to be borne in mind, having regard to what transpired subsequently. On April 30, 1931, a man named Asheshnath Mitra, who is also some kind of relation of the present plaintiffs, made an application to the District Judge of the 24-Parganas at Alipore, asking for the removal of Amalkanta Sarkar from the guardianship of the minors on the allegations that he was neglecting and disregarding their interest and had in effect worked hand-in-hand with the parents of the minors and this Solicitor N. C. Mandal, to defraud the minors of their properties. On that date, an order was made appointing Asheshnath Mitra guardian provisionally. It was also directed that the eldest of the three minors (there were three at that time) who was aged about 20, should appear before the Court.

Then, on May 5, 1931, the suit with which we are concerned, was instituted by the minors, the present plaintiffs and their elder brother, through their next friend and guardian, Asheshnath Mitra. It is to be noted that at that time he was, strictly speaking, only provisionally the guardian. However, he instituted a suit, which is suit No. 936 of 1931, asking for a declaration that the four instruments I have mentioned, viz., the deed of surrender, the first deed of mortgage, the deed of rectification, and the second deed of mortgage were of no effect and invalid in law and for an order setting aside those instruments. On the same day, an application was made in that suit by the minors through their guardian. This application was made by the minors for an injunction restraining the plaintiffs in the mortgage suit, that is to say, Lahas and the Kshettrees, from proceeding with their suit, and on the application an interim injunction was granted. On May 7, an order was made appointing Asheshnath Mitra as guardian of the minors, subject to his furnishing security as specified and directing the removal of Amalkanta Sarkar from the guardianship which he previously held. On that date, the eldest of the three minors appeared before the Court and apparently expressed some opinion in the matter. On May 14, the matter of the application in suit No. 936 made for the purpose of staying the mortgage suit came again before the Court and on that occasion an order was made without prejudice to the rights of the parties in suit No. 936 of 1931, that the mortgage suit being No. 2090 of 1930, should be proceeded with The mortgage suit, apparently, was pursued in the usual course.

On May 14, 1931, a preliminary decree was made in the mortgage suit. The mortgage suit was in fact not defended and the usual preliminary decree was made. One of the allegations in the present suit, in effect, is that the mortgage suit was allowed to go undefended, owing to the deliberate action or rather abstention of the guardian ad litem Amalkanta Sarkar. What is complained of with regard to that decree is that the mortgagee ought to have made it their business to have substituted Asheshnath Mitra in place of Amalkanta Sarkar, as guardian ad litem of the minor defendants. On June 9, 1931, Asheshnath Mitra definitely became the guardian of the person and property of the minors having satisfied the District Judge with regard to the matter of the security which he had been directed to furnish. It is clear therefore at any rate, as from June 9, 1931, Asheshnath Mitra was in a position to take such steps as he thought fit in the interest of the minors.

On July 24, 1931, suit No. 936 of 1931 was dismissed for want of prosecution. It was said that Asheshnath Mitra had to go away to Benares owing to the illness of his mother. That is the explanation given on behalf of the plaintiffs. On the other hand, it was suggested, on behalf of the defendants in the present suit, that what really happened was that the non-appearance of Asheshnath Mitra was really consistent with, and indeed in pursuance of, the whole conspiracy. It is suggested that Asheshnath Mitra was really acting in conjunction with the parents of the minors, and with the solicitor in getting himself made a certificated guardian, in order that he might then accuse the other conspirator, Amalkanta Sarkar, of having betrayed the interests of the minors in connection with the antecedent transaction. I am bound to say, speaking for myself and looking at the matter in due perspective, that one cannot altogether be free from a suspicion that that may have been the true state of affairs. We are, however, not concerned with that aspect of the matter at the present stage.

On May 13, 1932, a final decree was made by Ameer Ali, J., in the mortgage suit (No. 2090 of 1930), and at that time, so far as the records show, Amalkanta Sarkar was still the guardian ad litem of the infant defendants. Against that final decree there was an appeal, but that appeal was dismissed for want of prosecution on February 2, 1933, and some three months later the eldest of the three minors, Sailendranath Mitra died. It is to be observed that the mortgagees had clothed themselves with full rights in the way of enforcing their mortgage as early as June 30, or at any rate, February 2, when the appeal of the defendants was finally dismissed. One result of that appeal against the final decree was that the mortgagors had succeeded in staving off execution under the final decree for a period of some nine months.

Nothing more was done by the mortgagors until June 29, 1933, when the mortgagees were enforcing their security by bringing the mortgaged properties to sale, and on that date a rather curious thing happened. A suit was filed in the Alipore Court asking for a declaration that the decrees obtained in the mortgage suit No. 2090 of 1930, including presumably the decision of the Court of Appeal, were void and the properties were not saleable in the execution proceedings and also for a perpetual injunction restraining the defendants, that is to say, the mortgagees, from putting the decrees which they had obtained to execution. One cannot fail to observe, in passing, that it seems somewhat strange that Asheshnath Mitra, acting for these minors, thought fit to take himself to the Court of a Munsif at Alipore, in order to challenge the decrees made by this Court. The defendants in that "extraordinary" suit (it was extraordinary in more senses than one) took appropriate proceedings for having that suit transferred to the Original Side of this Court, and on August 1, 1933, there was an order transferring the suit on certain terms, one of which was that the defendants in the suit, the mortgagees, should provide a sum of money to enable the plaintiffs to pursue the suit in this Court.

On August 17, 1933, there was an order for amendment of the plaint which is of some importance, as some of the amendments clarified the attitude which the plaintiffs were taking up as regards the whole of the transactions entered into by their parents by the solicitors and by their former guardian. On August 30, 1933, an order was made in the suit that certain issues should be tried as preliminary issues, obviously a proper order in the circumstances, because, in one view of the matter, the determination of those issues might have put an end to the whole of the proceedings. It is in consequence of that order that the suit came before Buckland, J., and from his decision it now comes before us in appeal. The order was made by Panckridge, J., and he directed that the following issues should first be tried:

"(1) Whether the minors are properly represented in suit No. 2090 of 1930, (2) whether this suit is barred by res judicata and by principles analogous thereto, and (3) whether the suit is barred under O. IX, r 9, Civil Procedure Code."

With regard to the first of those issues, the learned Judge came to the conclusion that there was no such defect in the form of the proceedings in suit No: 2090 of 1930, as would operate to make either the preliminary decree or the final decree obtained in that suit, invalid. The learned Judge puts the matter in this way:

"On the first issue it is submitted that the minors are not properly represented because O. XXXII, r. 4, Civil Procedure Code, provides that where a minor has a guardian appointed by competent authority, no person other than such guardian shall act as the next friend of the minor or be appointed his guardian for the suit unless the Court considers otherwise."

And then the learned Judge says:

"The certificated guardian of the minors was undoubtedly appointed as their guardian ad litem at the inception of suit No. 2090 of 1930, and there can be no question that at the time the minors were properly represented within the meaning of the section."

Mr. Roy has argued before us, on behalf of the plaintiffs-appellants, that as Asheshnath Mitra was appointed guardian of the person and property of the minor on May 5, 1931, and Amalkanta Sarkar was removed from the guardianship on that date, at the time when the mortgage suit came to trial, the minors were not properly represented in that Asheshnath Mitra had never been substituted in place of Amalkanta Sarkar. The learned Judge came to the conclusion that if a person has once been validly appointed guardian ad litem he remains such and properly represents the minors, or lunatics, as the case may be, unless and until he has been removed from the office of guardian ad litem. This point is of considerable importance. Mr. Roy was quite unable to put before us any direct authority on the point. I ventured to suggest to Mr. Roy that hitherto it has never occurred to any one seriously to argue that a guardian who has been properly appointed guardian ad litem ipso facto ceases to be guardian ad litem merely because some other person has got himself appointed guardian of the person and property of the minor plaintiffs, by some other Court. I have mentioned the fact that in the present instance the guardian ad litem was appointed by this Court in suit No 936 of 1931. The certificated guardian was appointed by the Court at Alipore and it struck me as being somewhat remarkable and that it might lead to considerable inconvenience, if orders made by some other Court were to have the effect of abrogating orders made by this Court, in a pending suit. In my opinion, that position cannot arise, however, because I take the view that once a person has been properly appointed guardian ad litem, he only cease to be guardian ad litem in one or other of the ways specified in O. XXXII, r. 11 which says in sub-r. (1).

"Where the guardian for the suit desires to retire or does not do his duty, or where other sufficient ground is made to appear, the Court may permit such guardian to retire or may remove him, and may make such order as to costs as it thinks fit."

Then in sub-r. (2) it is provided that:

"Where the guardian for the suit retires, dies or is removed by the Court during the pendency of the suit, the Court shall appoint a new guardian in his place."

In my opinion, as there are no other direct provisions in the Code in regard to this matter, it must be taken that there are only three ways by which a guardian ad litem can cease to function as such during the pendency of a suit: (1) by his retirement with the permission of the Court. It should be noted that under the old Code, even that was not allowed. (2) By his death, and (3) by his removal by an order of the Court itself. It is to my mind of great significance in these proceedings that though Asheshnath Mitra got himself appointed certificated guardian by a Court at Alipore, he never came to this Court to ask for the removal of Amalkanta Sarkar from being guardian ad litem in suit No. 936 of 1931, even though he was making before the Alipore Court very serious allegations as to the integrity and diligence of Amalkanta Sarkar. I think I ought perhaps qualify what I have said with regard to the termination of the office of guardian ad litem, during the pendency of a suit, by saying that it may perhaps be that if a guardian ad litem became of unsound mind, he might by reason of the provisions of r. 4, sub-r. (1), thereby become so disqualified that he would cease to act as guardian for the suit.

It is to be noted that the provisions of sub-r. (1) are in general terms and they lay down that any person who is of sound mind and has attained majority may act as next friend of a minor or as guardian for the suit. I emphasize the words "may act" because it is quite arguable from that phraseology that a person who ceases to be of unsound mind, can no longer 'act' as guardian for the suit. But what we are concerned with, in the present case, are the provisions of r. 4, sub-r. (2) and they are as follows:

"Where a minor has a guardian appointed or declared by a competent authority, no person other than such guardian shall act as the next friend of the minor or be appointed his guardian for the suit unless the Court considers, for reasons to be recorded, that it is for the minor's welfare that another person be permitted to act or be appointed, as the case may be."

Now the effect of that rule is that normally if a minor wishes to institute a suit and he has a certificated guardian, then that certificated guardian is the right person to act as the next friend of the minor. If on the other hand, a suit is brought against a minor who already has a certificated guardian then he is the person who must be appointed guardian for the suit unless the Court otherwise decides. That last proviso, to my mind, indicates that there is no inherent disqualification in all persons other than certificated guardian to be a guardian ad litem. In the present proceedings, at its inception, the suit was undoubtedly properly constituted because the person appointed guardian ad litem at the time when the suit was started, was in fact the certificated guardian. Therefore the appointment was strictly in conformity with the provisions of sub-r. (2). It seems to me that the mere fact that he subsequently ceased to be the certificated guardian, and somebody else was appointed in his stead, does not of itself impose such an absolute and fundamental disqualification that he automatically vacated his office and became functus officio. In my opinion, the only way of getting rid of a guardian ad litem who has once been properly appointed, is under the provisions of r. 11, subject perhaps to the implications of sub-r. (1), Rule 4, which I have mentioned. In that view of the matter, it follows that the decision of the learned Judge on issue No. 1 was correct. Buckland, J, then says:

"It is further argued that the interests of Amalkanta Sarkar were adverse to those of the minors. As to that I express no opinion. This involves questions of fact, and questions of fact are not being considered at this period. The learned Advocate-General objects that the plaintiffs are not entitled to take such point on their pleadings. As to that again, I express no opinion, and I leave it for determination by the learned Judge to whom may fall the duty of determining this case upon the facts should such occasion arise."

Now, that passage means this: The learned Judge held, and in my opinion rightly, that the question whether or not Amalkanta Sarkar had done his duty as a guardian ad litem, in the mortgage-suit, was not a matter which was before the Court at that time, because it was not really comprehended within any of the issues which had been ordered to be tried as preliminary to the trial of the actual suit itself. The learned Judge was therefore right in saying that the question was not a matter with which he need concern himself. If as a result of his decision on the other points in the suit, the matter ultimately proceeded to trial, then that would be the proper time for the question of the conduct and the position of Amalkanta Sarkar to be gone into. Mr. Banerjee has argued before us, just as the learned Advocate-General has argued, that in any event, this question was not properly raised on the pleadings in the suit and he referred to paras. 13 and 14 of the plaint which appear at page 5 of the paper book. Paragraph 13 says:

"That the plaintiffs state that defendant No. 5 was at all material times under the control and domination of defendants Nos. 6 and 7 he, and he having sacrificed the interest of the plaintiffs and their eldest brother for his own ends and the benefit of defendants Nos. 6 and 7, his interest became adverse to that of the minor plaintiffs and their brother."

Paragraph 14 says:

"That having come to know that the guardian appointed by Court, i. e., defendant No. 5, is acting adversely to the interests of the minors, the present guardian applied to the Court of the District Judge, 24-Parganas, in Act VIII, Case No. 57 of 1927, for removal of the said guardian for appointment of a new guardian."

Now, looking at para. 13 by itself, it would seem that the allegation there was something in the nature of a suggestion that the guardian Amalkanta Sarkar had an interest in the property itself which conflicted with that of the minors: but there is undoubtedly in para. 14 an allegation in general terms that he was "acting adversely" to the interests of the minors, and eventually the defendants took up the challenge contained in para. 14 as is shown by their denials in para. 6 of the written statement which are these words:

"They do not admit the occasion for such appointment or that defendant No. 5, Amalkanta Sarkar acted adversely to the interest of the minors."

Upon that state of the pleadings, it does seem to us that there is or may be an issue to be tried as to whether or not this man, Amalkanta Sarkar, acted traitorously, or negligently, or fraudulently in connection with the minors' affairs and, in particular, in connection with the mortgage-suit. The other two matters, which were before Buckland, J., were in one sense interwoven, though in another way they were distinct. Those issues were in effect whether in regard to the issues in the suit one ought to apply the principle of res judicata having regard to the matters in issue in suit No. 936 of 1931, and whether the present suit is barred by reason of that suit No. 936 of 1931 having been dismissed for want of prosecution under the provisions of O. IX, r. 9. Now the learned Judge took the view, and we think quite rightly, that properly speaking, no question of res judicata arises at all because the issues which were raised or might have been raised in suit No. 936 of 1931, were never tried out and there was no judicial determination on any of them. It is not necessary that I should quote any authorities in support of that proposition. As regards the effect of O. IX, r. 9, the rule says:

"Where a suit is wholly or partly dismissed under r. 8, the plaintiff shall be precluded from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action."

It then proceeds to say:

"But he may apply for an order to set the dismissal aside and if he satisfies the Court that there was sufficient cause for his non-appearance when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall make an order setting aside the dismissal....."

Although that is a procedure very frequently resorted to, however, it was not a ken in the cases of suit No. 936 of 1931. I have already indicated that the plaintiffs seem to have become queiscent after that suit had been dismissed, and that it was only after a considerable period that they eventually instituted the present suit. What we have to decide is whether the present suit is in respect of the same cause of action as suit No. 936 of 1931. Now the learned Judge discussed the point at some length and he compared the allegations which were made in the plaint in suit No. 936 with the allegations made in the plaint in the present suit and he said:

"The first seven paragraphs of the two plaints are substantially the same."

And then he proceeded to discuss the subsequent paragraph and said:

"Up to the point prior to the mortgage suits there can be no question that the cause of action are identical."

But in regard to this suit he said

"In the present plaint.....the suit is referred to and the decree is attacked in para. 21, but that is attacked on the ground of the conspiracy which in the earlier plaint was the ground of the conspiracy which in the earlier plaint was the ground of the attack upon the mortgages, and so far as there is any new cause of action in para. 21, it relates back to the subject-matter of the former suit. The only fresh grounds upon which the mortgage decree is attacked are to be found in para. 20 but that does not state any cause of action upon which the plaintiffs would be entitled to relief. Substantially the whole matter now put in issue was the foundation of the former suit and in these circumstances I hold that the suit is barred under O. IX, r. 9, Civil Procedure Code."

It may no doubt be the case that substantially the whole matter, now put in issue was the foundation of the former suit. Looking at the matter from a non-technical and non-legal point of view I have no doubt that any average person of ordinary common sense would at once say:

"are not the two suits to all intents and purposes the same and that which the plaintiffs are now seeking to get is exactly the same kind of thing they sought to obtain in the previous suit."

That no doubt would be a sensible and reasonable view to take but we have to administer the law as it is and we have to look at the matter having in mind the technicalities and niceties of adjectival law and the definitions of "cause of action" which are to be found in the authorities. I do not propose to recite a concatenation of those authorities. It is sufficient I think for the present purpose if I quote the well known passage from Read v. Brown (1), where Lord Esher said when he was referring to the meaning of the phrase "cause of action arising";

(1) (1888) 22 Q B D 128; 58 L J Q B 120; 37 W R 131; 60 L T 250.

"It has been defined in Cooke v. Gill (2), to be this every fact which it would be necessary for the plaintiff to prove if traversed in order to support his right to the judgment of the Court, it does not comprise every piece of evidence which is necessary to prove each fact but every fact which is necessary to be proved. It has been suggested to-day in argument that this definition is too broad but I cannot assent to this, and I think that definition is right."

Reference may be made to the case of Engineering Supplies, Ltd. v. Dhandhania & Co. (3), where the Court of Appeal consisting of the Chief Justice and C. C. Ghose, J., upheld a judgment of my learned brother Lort-Williams in which he discussed the authorities and followed the principles laid down in Read v. Brown (1), supra. In one of the cases decided in India it was said:

"The cause of action is a bundle of essential facts which it is necessary for the plaintiff to prove before he can succeed in the suit."

I think it is quite correct to define "cause of action" as meaning all the congeries of facts which it is necessary for the plaintiff to establish before he can ask the Court to grant the relief which he claims in the suit. In the present case no doubt a great of the averments in the plaint were merely reiteration either in the same or other language of the averments in the plaint in suit No. 936 of 1931. No doubt the basic factor in the plaintiffs' case, in the other suits, was what they have described as the conspiracy between their parents and their present solicitor and the former guardian in connection with the four transactions—two in connection with the surrender of the property and two in connection with the mortgages, but it is a fact that in their present plaint in para. 21 as amended, they have added this:

"The plaintiffs state that the said ex parte decree and the final decree made in the said suit No. 2090 of 1930 of the Honourable High Court were procured in pursuance of the conspiracy and were made without jurisdiction and are, therefore, a nullity and void ab initio."

It seems to be tolerably clear that as regards the greater part of their case, the plaintiffs are relying on the original conspiracy but before they can get a declaration that the preliminary and final decrees in the mortgage suit are invalid, they will have to prove that those decrees were in fact made. It happens that the defendants have admitted the making of those decrees but it would have been open to them to have denied that the decrees were made, that is to say to traverse the plaintiffs' allegation in regard to the decrees in which case, the fact of the making of the decrees would have been one which the plaintiffs would have been bound to prove in order to succeed in this suit. That statement of the position seems to bring the matter within the four corners of the definition of "cause of action". We, therefore, though speaking for myself with some hesitation come to the conclusion that the view taken by the learned Judge cannot be sustained and, as regards the technical point, we must hold that the suit is not barred by O. XI, r. 9, and that the cause of action is not wholly the same as that in suit No. 936 of 1931, particularly having regard to the fact that there are averments with regard to a matter which had not even arisen at the time when the former suit was dismissed for want of prosecution, namely, the validity of the actual decree.

The case must, therefore, be sent back to the Court below for the determination of the two questions, namely, (1) the question of whether Amalkanta Sarkar did in fact act adversely to the interest of these minor plaintiffs, and (2) the vital question of whether the plaintiff are entitled to have it declared that the two decrees in the mortgage suit are bad by reason of the conspiracy or conspiracies alleged. The position is this, that as we think the learned Judge was wrong in his decision on as regards Issue No. 3, and as he never dealt with the question of whether the interest of Amalkanta Sarkar were adverse to those of the minors, the suit will have to be proceeded with. No doubt the learned Judge before whom the case comes up for trial will have due regard to the fact that there was a prior suit and that certain issues were raised in that suit, which, therefore, should be excluded from the present suit together with any other matters which might have been put in issue in the former suit.

It follows that the appeal will be allowed to the extent I have indicated but, in view of all the circumstances, we think that the costs of the proceedings before Buckland, J. and before this Court should abide the ultimate result of the trial. We express the opinion that it is desirable that the hearing of the suit should be expedited. By consent, the sale which was to have taken place in execution of the decree in the mortgage suit will be stayed until the determination of the suit.

Lort-Williams, J.—I agree.

D. Appeal allowed in part.

(2) (1873) 8 C P 107; 42 L J C P 98; 28 L T 32; 21 W R 334.

(3) 134 Ind. Cas. 65; A I R 1931 Cal. 659; 58 C 539 Ind Rul. (1931) Cal. 769.

RANGOON HIGH COURT

Criminal Revision Applications Nos. 628-B, 629-B and 630-B of 1934

November 14, 1934

BRAUND, J.

V. A. S. M. CHETTYAR FIRM AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY

Burma Municipal Act (III of 1898), s. 148—Pawn-broker—Who is—Isolated transaction does not make person pawn-broker.

A "pawn-broker" is a person who "carries on the business of pawn-broking." It implies one who systematically lends money upon the security of pawns, and "carrying on business" implies, "a series or repetition of acts." It is a question of fact in each case whether a "business" is being carried on, and each case must be determined by its own special circumstances unless there can be found some systematic course of lending upon pawns or such repetition as to amount to a reasonable inference that it forms part of the particular Chettyar's money-lending business to lend on pawns. His status as a pawn-broker within the Burma Municipal Act, 1898, and the rules thereunder cannot be held to be established.

A Chettyar whose business is to lend money on promissory notes and upon security of land cannot be said to be a pawn-broker where he advances an isolated loan to another on security of a chattel. Kirkwood v. Gadd (1), Newman v. Oughton (2) and Emperor v. Kanappa Chetty (3), relied on.

Cr. R. App. from an order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Yenangyaung, in Criminal Summary Trial Nos. 56, 58 and 59 of 1934.

Mr. P. K. Basu, for the Applicant.

Mr. Tun Byu, for the Crown.

Order.—These are three connected cases which have come before this Court in its capacity as a Court of revision. In each of the three cases the applicant is a Chettyar firm, carrying on business at Yenangyaung. There is nothing on the record to show that the normal business of any of them differs in any way from usual business of a Chettyar firm; that is to say, the lending of money upon promissory notes and upon the security of land.

The cases are of importance to the Chettyar community as a whole, because in each of them there has been proved by the Municipality of Yenangyaung a single instance only of a loan to a member of the public upon the security of a chattel, and it is sought by the Municipality upon that ground to involve the applicants in an offence under s. 148 (renumbered 202), of the Burma Municipal Act, 1898, upon the footing that they are respectively carrying on business as "pawn-brokers" contrary to the provisions of that Act, and of the Municipal bye-laws made thereunder, s. 142, (renumbered 195) of the Burma Municipal Act, 1898, empowers the Municipal Committee, from time to time at a special meeting, to make bye-laws (inter alia):

"(1) for rendering licenses necessary for pawn-brokers and determining by public auction or otherwise the amount to be paid for any such license and the conditions subject to which they shall be granted and may be revoked."

and s. 148 cenumbered 202), which I have referred to above, provides for a fine not exceeding Rs. 500 in the case of any contravention or failure to comply with any such rule or bye-law, This is a typical instance of bureaucratic legislation.

The rules or bye-laws made by the Yenangyaung Town Committee in pursuance of the Act purport first to define a "pawn-broker" as:

"every person who carries on the business of taking goods and chattels in pawn for loans of money not exceeding Rs. 250 in any one transaction, provided that nothing in these rules shall apply to persons taking goods and chattels in pawn for loans exceeding Rs. 100 when the rate of interest or other profit does not exceed Rs. 15 per cent per annum."

Rule 2 provides that:

"no one shall carry on the business of a pawn-broker within the Yenangyaung Town limits without a license from the Committee;"

and the subsequent rules provide for the terms and conditions on which licenses are to be granted.

The only point relied upon before me by the applicants is that the applicants are not "pawn-brokers," and have done nothing to render themselves "pawn-brokers," within the meaning of the Burma Municipal Act, 1898; although a number of other points were taken at the hearing before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate. If they are not "pawn-brokers" within the meaning of this Act, then, whatever the definition purported to be given to the word "pawn-broker" by the bye-laws, the Act and the bye-laws have ex-hypothesi no application to the applicants.

A "pawn-broker" I conceive to be a person who "carries on the business of pawn broking." It implies one who systematically lends money upon the security of pawns; and "carrying on business" implies, in the words of Lord Loreburn, L. C., in Kirkwood v. Gadd (1) "a series or repetition of acts." I prefer the tests of "frequency" and "method" to that of "profit;" for it is possible to conceive of many cases in which a course of dealing may well amount to a "businsss" without the object necessarily being profit or gain. But, as was pointed out by Lord James of Hereford in the same case, it is a question of fact in each case whether a "business" is being carried on, and each case must be determined by its own special circumstances.

(1) (1910) A C 422; 79 L J K B 815; 26 T L R 530; 54 S J 599; 102 L T 753.

In each of the present cases the Municipality has attempted to prove only one isolated instance of a loan upon the security of a chattel. In two of these cases there is nothing more: but, in the third, (that of V. A. S. Muthiah Chettyar) there is a causal statement by one of the defence witnesses that "all the Chettyar firms in Yenangyaung receive articles of gold, etc., on pawn." This witness has, I understand, no connection with or knowledge of the business of the applicant firms. No authority for this statement is given and, as I have said, the prosecution itself has made no attempt to prove any systematic dealing in pawns by the three applicants. I must, I think, in each case treat the Municipality as having proved no more than the three isolated transactions, which, indeed, are admitted.

In my judgment an isolated transaction of this kind does not constitute the person concerned a "pawn-broker" any more than an isolated loan by one man to another would constitute the former a "money-lender" in any technical sense. It is true that the business of a Chettyar is that of money-lending; and that it can be urged, the lending of money upon the security of a pawn is only one form of a money-lender's business, while the lending of money upon the security of a promissory note or of land is another. It is said that whether you lend money on one form of security or another makes no difference for in each case you are carrying on the same business by a varied method. That, however, I think, is a fallacy. For, in this country, there is a perfectly well understood and recognised division between the business of a Chettyar and that of a pawn-broker. Each has a separate and distinct business, though each concerns the lending of money. A "trainer" trains race horses, while a "jockey" rides them. They are not, surely, carrying on the same business because their respective avocations both happen to concern race horses. In my judgment therefore unless there can be found some systematic course of lending upon pawns or such repetition as to amount to a reasonable inference that it forms part of the particular Chattyar's money-lending business to lend on pawns, I do not think that his status as a pawn broker within the Burma Municipal Act. 1898, and the rules thereunder is established. I find considerable support for this view in the English case of Neman v. Oughton (2) and in the case in this Province of Emperor v. Kanapa Chetty (3), and it accords with the view expressed by his Lordship Dunkley, J., in this Court in Criminal Revision No. 1-B of 1931.

For these reasons therefore the convictions by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Yenangaung in Criminal Summary Trials Nos. 56, 58 and 59 of 1934 must, in revision, be set aside, and the fines upon the applicants repaid. I should add, for the benefit of the Chettyar community that this decision goes no further than to hold that, in the particular circumstances of the present cases, the status of "pawn-brokers" has not been proved by the Municipality. It must not, however, be supposed that this decision has any application to a case in which a Chettyar firm can be shown to dabble in lending on pawn to an extent sufficient to constitute a "business," and it should be further appreciated that, in view of the kindred natures of the business of a money-lender and a pawn-broker slight evidence only might be sufficient for that purpose.

D. Conviction set aside.

(2) (1911) 1 K B 792; 80 L J K B 673; 27 T L R 254; 104 L T 211.

(3) 4 L B R 8; 6 Cr. L J 118.

RANGOON HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 17 of 1934

December 6, 1934

PAGE, C. J. AND MYA BU, J.

NAN KEE—APPELLANT

versus

AH FONG—RESPONDENT

Tort—Person procuring act of another, when liable for consequences—Motive, whether material—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VI, r. 4—Party pleading fraud or misrepresentation—Onus.

There are two grounds only upon which a person who procures the act of another can be made legally responsible for its consequences. In the first place, he will incur liability if he knowingly and for his own ends induces that other person to commit an actionable wrong. In the second place, when the act induced is within the right of the immediate actor and is, therefore, not wrongful in so far as he is concerned, it may yet be to the detriment of a third party; and in that case, the inducer may be held liable if he can be shown to have procured his object by the use of illegal means directed against that third party. The motive or intention of the person doing the act is nihil ad rem. If it is a lawful act, however ill the motive might be, he has a right to do it If it is an unlawful act, however good his motive be, he would have no right to do it. Motives and intentions in such a question is absolutely irrelevant.

A party who relies on plea of fraud or misrepresentation, must establish these charges. Abdul Hossein v. Charles Agnew Turner (5) and Mahomed Mira Ravuther v. Savvasi Vijaya Raghunadha (6), referred to.

F. C. A. against the judgment and the decree in Civil Regular No. 376 of 1933, dated January 3, 1934.

Mr. McDonnell, for the Appellant.

Mr. Clark, for the Respondent.

Page, C. J.—The appellant and the respondent are pawn-brokers at Pegu, and the appellant was the holder of a pawn shop license which expired on March 31, 1933. A public notice calling for tenders for pawnshop license for a period of one or three years was issued by the Municipality of Pegu on February 11, 1933. On February 28, 1933, the Sub-Committee of the Municipality received 8 tenders. The persons who submitted the tenders were present at the meeting. The tender of the respondent which was Rs. 19,500 per year for a period of three years, was the highest and was accepted. The tender of the appellant was only Rs. 10,200. The respondent executed a security bond and became entitled as between himself and the Municipality to receive the pawnshop license for three years from April 1, 1933. On March 7, the appellant and three other persons who had submitted tenders for the pawnshop license made an application to the Commissioner of Pegu to revise the action of the Municipality in accepting the tender of the respondent. By his order of March 24, the Commissioner of Pegu refused to interfere and rejected the petition. On March 27, the appellant presented an application to the Minister of Education, representing the Local Government, for an order staying all further proceedings in respect of the issue of the pawnshop license to the respondent, and restraining the Municipal Committee, Pegu from allowing the respondent to act in the licensee until application of the appellant in revision had been heard and determined by the Local Government. On March 28, the Local Government ordered that all further proceedings in connection with the license should be stayed until the revision application had been determined.

Now, the petition of March 27, for stay order was in the following terms :

"In the Office of the Honourable the Education Minister. Miscellaneous Revision Application No. of 1933. Subject : The Pawn Shop License at Pegu The humble application of Nam Kee, Pawnshop License of Pegu.

Most respectfully Sheweth :

1. Your petitioner along with four others on March 7, 1933, filed a revision application protesting against the scrutiny of tenders in respect of the pawnshop license at Pegu. The said application has been disposed of by the Office of the Pegu Commissioner.

2. Your petitioner is informed and believes the same to be true that Ah Fong, whose tender is alleged to have been accepted by the Municipal Committee, Pegu, is attempting to conduct the business of the pawnshop within three or four days hereof, and to deprive him thereby of his rights to the pawnshop under his tender.

3. Your petitioner submits that if pending the disposal of his revision at this office the said Ah Fong and the Municipal Committee are not restrained from disturbing him (the petitioner) in the conduct of his pawnshop he will suffer serious and irreparable loss.

4. It is, therefore, just and necessary that the rights of your petitioner should not be disturbed pending his revision, and that the status quo should be maintained.

5. Your petitioner undertakes to file his revision at this office as soon as possible.

Wherefor your petitioner prays that the Honourable Minister for Education may be pleased to order a stay of all further proceedings in respect of the pawnshop license of Pegu, to restrain the Municipal Committee, Pegu, from allowing the said Ah Fong to act as the licensee of the pawnshop and to make all necessary directions for the said purpose.

And shall ever pray."

On April 20, 1933, three of the persons who had submitted tenders for the pawn shop license, of whom the appellant was one presented a formal petition to the Minister for Education for an order :

"to set aside the license given to the said Ah Fong, to direct the disposal of the license either by public auction or by calling for fresh tenders, and to make such further or other order as may seem just and proper."

Certain affidavits were filed by the parties for and against this application in revision. On June 2, the application in revision to the Local Government was rejected ; and on June 6, the license was issued by the Municipality, Pegu, to the respondent. In these circumstances the respondent has filed the present suit for the purpose of obtaining damages from the appellant for wrongfully procuring the Local Government to issue an order restraining the Municipality from issuing the licence to the respondent, and thereby depriving him of the opportunity of carrying on the business of the pawnshop from April 1, till June 6. At the trial a decree was passed in favour of the respondent.

Now, it is common ground and we find 1898, A. C. P. that the Local Government was legally entitled to pass the stay order: E. and B. 216 that damage thereby resulted to the respondent; (3) that the appellant had a legal right to apply for the stay order. I decline to plunge into the welter of judicial decisions on this subject, because, in my opinion, for the purpose in hand the law applicable to the present case is to be found in the judgment of Lord Watson in Allen v. Flood (1):

"There are, in my opinion, two grounds only upon which a person who procures the act of another can be made legally responsible for its consequences. In the first place, he will incur liability if he knowingly and for his own ends induces that other person to commit an actionable wrong. In the second place, when the act induced is within the right of the immediate actor and is, therefore, not wrongful in so far as he is concerned, it may yet be to the detriment of a third party; and in that case, according to the law laid down by the majority in Lumley v. Gye (2) the inducer may be held liable if he can be shown to have procured his object by the use of illegal means directed against that third party."

In my opinion the motive or intention of the appellant in procuring the stay order in the circumstances obtaining in the present case is nihil ad rem; for:

"this is not a case in which the state of mind of the person doing the act can affect the right to do it If it was a lawful act, however ill the motive might be, he had a right to do it. If it was an unlawful act, however good his motive be, he would have no right to do it. Motives and intentions in such a question as is now before your Lordships seem to me to be absolutely irrelevant: per Lord Halsbury in Mayor Aldermen and Burgesses of the Borough of Bradford v. Edward Pickles (3)."

Illegal means in this connection acts which are illegal not because they are morally wrongful, but because they are legally wrongful. In Sorrell v. Smith (4) at p. 716, Lord Dunnedin observed:

"When A by his action causes loss to B., the sole question is, was A's action a tort ? and the law as to what is and what is not a tort may be said to be well settled. With any law, however well settled, difficulties, may and do still arise in its application to the ever varying kaleidoscope of circumstances. But except for that there cannot be said to be much difficulty in the law of tort. One noticeable attempt for its extension was put an end to by Allen v. Flood (1). I shall have to revert to that case, but in its application to action by an individual, and that was all that as a decision it dealt with, it settled that the only question was, was there a tort ? and that in the solution of that question the motive of the doer of the act had no significance."

Now, applying the law thus enunciated to the facts of the present case the only question that falls to be determined is what were the illegal means, (if any), alleged and proved by which the appellant procured the stay order from the Local Government. In paras. 6 and 7 of the plaint it is alleged:

6. That as the defendant was unsuccessful he that is the defendant with view to obstruct and prevent plaintiff from starting his business as a pawnshop licensee, and to enable him the defendant to continue to carry on his pawnshop business which would have ordinarily terminated on March 31, 1933, falsely and maliciously made certain averments in a petition addressed to the Honourable the Minister of Education knowing the same to be false and untrue, alleging corruption on the part of the plaintiff and the Municipality of Pegu, and succeeded in inducing the Honourable the Minister of Education to pass an order preventing the plaintiff from opening his two pawnshops on April 1, 1933, with the result that it enabled the defendant to continue to carry on the said business until June 6, 1933, when he was ousted.

7. That in consequence of the said false and malicious allegations and insinuations made against the plaintiff, the plaintiff was prevented from opening his business of two licensed pawnshops on April 1, 1934."

The defendant in para. 6 of his written statement called upon the plaintiff to give full and better particulars of the "false and malicious allegations" and:

"averments alleged to have been made by defendant according to paras. 6 and 7 of the plaint."

Thereafter on September 11, 1933, the plaintiff furnished the following particulars of the allegations referred to in paras 6 and 7 of the plaint:

1. "In his application and affidavits to the Honourable the Minister of Education the defendant made the following false and malicious allegations and averments.

2. That the transaction between the plaintiff and the Pegu Municipality has created a dangerous precedent which will inevitably leave the door open for dishonest and corrupt practices in transactions between the Municipality and the public.

3. That he was prevented from checking the opening of the tenders, and had every reason to believe that this departure from the usual procedure and practice as required by law was deliberate and designed.

The action of the Municipality (in dealing with the plaintiff) left the door open for fraud and corrupt practice. That immediately after the declaration that Ah Fong's tender of Rs. 19,500 had been accepted he (the defendant) vigorously protested against the whole proceeding and challenged its fairness. His protest was ignored."

Now, by O. VI, r. 4, Civil Procedure Code :

"in all cases in which the party pleading relies on any misrepresentation, fraud, breach of trust, wilful default or undue influence, and in all other cases in which particulars may be necessary beyond such as are exemplified in the forms aforesaid, particulars (with dates and items if necessary) shall be stated in the pleading."

(1) (1898) A C 1; 67 L J Q B 119; 46 W R 258; 77 L T 717.

(2) (1853) 2 El. & Bl. 216; 1 W R 432; 22 L J Q B 163; 17 Jur. 827; 95 R R 501.

(3) (1895) A C 544.

(4) (1925) A C 700; 94 L J Ch. 347; 133 L T 370.

*Page of (1925) A. C.—[Ed.]

It was incumbent, therefore upon the plaintiff-respondent in the present case to establish that the stay order had been procurred by the appellant by means of the particular charges as laid : Abdul Hossein v. Charles Agnew Turner (5) and Muhammad Mira Ravuthar v. Savvasi Vijaya Raghunadha (6).

True it is that in the revision application of April 20, 1933, and in the affidavits filed in support of it such statements as those set out in the particulars of the allegations in para. (6) and (7) of the plaint were made, and that it was proved at the trial that they were unfounded; and further, it may well be that these misrepresentations were made deliberately and fraudulently with a view to prevent the license being granted to the respondent. But they failed in their object; for the appellant's application in revision was rejected by the Local Government, and the license was issued to the respondent. It is common ground, however, that the misrepresentations alleged in the particulars are not to be found in the petition of March 27, upon which the stay order was granted. In order to make good the deficiency in his case, it was contended by the learned Advocate on behalf of the respondent, and the learned trial Judge held, that the stay order was obtained because the learned Advocate who presented the petition for must be assumed to have supported a stay order to the Local Government the petition by oral submissions containing the substance of these misrepresentations. In the course of his judgment, Leach, J., observed :

"It was argued on behalf of the defendants that the order was not obtained as a result of these affidavits, but as the result of the petition of March 27, 1933 It is true that that petition does not contain allegations of the nature of those contained in the affidavits which were subsequently filed, but it seems to me that they must have been advanced by the defendant's Advocate when the stay order was obtained, otherwise it is difficult to say any justification for the order."

The answer to this contention, in my opinion, is two-fold : (1) that although the respondent specifically set out in the particulars that he filed the misrepresentations upon which he relied in support of his claim, it is not alleged or suggested in the particulars or elsewhere in the pleadings that these allegations or any of them were orally made by the learned Advocate who presented to the Minister of Education the petition for a stay order on the appellant's behalf, and (2) that there is not a scintilla of evidence on the record to justify the contention that the learned Advocate supported the petition on March 27, 1933, as such oral submissions. No evidence in that behalf was led at the trial and no attempt was made by the respondent to obtain the evidence of the learned Advocate who presented the petition for a stay order to the Local Government. If an allegation of that nature had been set out in the pleadings and an issue had been raised in respect of it, it may well be that the evidence of the learned Advocate who presented the petition on behalf of the appellant on March 27, 1933, would have been forthcoming, or that evidence in rebuttal would have been led.

In these circumstances it follows that the respondent has failed to prove the illegal means by which he alleged that the appellant had procured the stay order in question. The result is that the appeal is allowed, the decree of the trial Court set aside, and the suit dismissed with costs in both Courts.

Mya Bu, J.—I agree.

D. Appeal allowed.

(5) 11 B 620; 14 I A 111; 5 Sar. 25; 11 Ind. Jur. 352.

(6) 23 M 227; 27 I A 17; 7 Sar. 661 (P C).

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 1968 of 1933

July 17, 1934

AGHA HAIDAR, J.

KANSHI RAM AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, MOGA—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT

Punjab Municipal Act (III of 1911), ss. 172 (1), 188—Sanction under s. 172 (1)—Form of—Grant of sanction under s. 172 (1)—Imposition of conditions, legality of—Seal of Municipal Committee—Value of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 5—Appeal within time—Absence of names of parties in power-of-attorney—Defect pointed by office after limitation—Defect removed—Extension of time, if can be given.

The plaintiffs applied to the Municipal Committee to build two tharras of certain measurements in front of their shops, abutting on the public street and overhanging a municipal drain. The matter was placed before the Municipal Committee and on July 19, 1930, the following resolution was passed: "Sanctioned as recommended by the Building Sub-Committee. The necessary agreement deed be obtained before issuing the permit." No permit was issued to the plaintiffs, but they were given by the office of the Municipal Committee a copy of the plan which they had filed in the said office This plan bore the seal of the Municipal Committee with the words "manzur shud" meaning "granted."

There was also a reference in their map, to the resolution :

Held, that the plan containing the words quoted above, accompanied with the seal of the Municipal Committee must be considered as permission in writing.

No particular form is prescribed in which the permission is granted under s. 172 (1), Punjab Municipal Act.

In granting sanction under s. 172 (1), Punjab Municipal Act, the Municipal Committee cannot impose any condition on the grantee nor can a sanction once granted be revoked. Municipal Committee, Delhi v. Chambeli (2), Kirpa Ram v. Notified Area Committee, Pindi (3) and Damodar Das v. Municipal Committee, Bhatian, Delhi (4), followed.

The seal of the Municipal Committee when affixed, is equivalent to signature of the Secretary or some other competent Municipal Officer.

Where the power-of-attorney in favour of the Counsel for the appellants did not give the names of the parties at the time of filing the appeal but the defect was removed on the office pointing it out after the expiry of limitation :

Held, that the appeal could not be said to be barred by time. At any rate it was a fit case for extension of time under s. 5, Limitation Act. Shambhu Nath v. Badri Das (1), referred to.

S. C. A. form decree of the Additional District Judge, Ferozepore, dated May 8, 1933.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Suraj Krishen, M. L. Puri and Sambu Lal Puri, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This appeal arises out of a suit for on injunction against the Municipal Committee, Moga, prohibiting it from interfering with the plaintiffs' erecting tharras in front of their shops according to the sanctioned plan granted to them. There was a prayer for damages, but no argument has been addressed on the point and it was in fact formally withdrawn. Both the Courts below have dismissed the plaintiff's claim and they have come up to this Court in second appeal.

A preliminary objection was raised on behalf of the respondent that the appeal in this Court was time-barred. It was pointed out that the judgment of the lower Appellate Court was delivered on May 8, 1933, and the appeal was only filed on October 2, 1933, when the High Court reopened after the long vacation. On October 15, 1933, the power of attorney, which Mr. Shamair Chand, Counsel for the appellants had filed along with the memorandum of appeal, was returned to him by the office, because it did not give the name of the parties. On December 8, 1933, the power of attorney was re-filed by Mr. Shamair Chand. It was therefore argued that on these facts it may be taken that the appeal was really presented on December 8, 1933, when Mr. Shamair Chand re-filed the power of attorney with the names of the parties entered in it. I do not think there is any force in this objection. The omission of the names of the parties in the vaklatnama was a mere accidental oversight and should he condoned. In any case, I would be prepared on the facts stated above, to extend the benefit of s. 5, Limitation Act, to the appellants. Reference may be made in this connection to Shambhu Nath v. Badri Das (1). In this case the name of the pleader was not entered in the vakalatnama by mistake, but this was not held to be fatal to the appeal. The principle, however, applies to the present case and I overrule the preliminary objection.

I now come to the facts which led to the present litigation. The plaintiffs applied to the Municipal Committee, Moga, to build two tharras of certain measurements in front of their shops, abutting on the public street and over-hanging a municipal drain. The matter was placed before the Municipal Committee and on July 19, 1930, the following resolution was passed:

"Sanctioned as recommended by the Building Sub-Committee. The necessary agreement deed be obtained before issuing the permit."

It is admitted that no permit was issued to the plaintiffs, but they were given by the office of the Municipal Committee a copy of the plan which they had filed in the said office. This plan is an important document, because it bears the seal of the Municipal Committee with the words "manzur shud" which means "granted." There is also a reference in their map, to the resolution No. 21, dated July 19, 1930. On August 21, 1930, a resolution was subsequently passed by the Municipal Committee, cancelling the former resolution, but in the meantime the plaintiffs had built the tharras. Thereupon the Committee issued a notice to the plaintiffs under s. 172 (2), Punjab Municipal Act (Punjab Act III of 1911) requiring them to remove the tharra which they had constructed. The case for the plaintiffs is that they had built the tharrra with the written permission of the Committee and that the resolution, in so far as it required them to execute an agreement, was ultra vires and that in any event the Municipal Committee having sanctioned the building of the tharra had no power to add any conditions to the sanction. In my judgment there is considerable force in the appellants' contention. In the first place the plan referred to the resolution which had been passed by the Municial Committee, sanctioning the building of the tharra. It may be taken that no perticular form is prescribed in which the permission is to be granted and in my opinion this plan with the words quoted above written on it together with the seal of the Municipal Committee must be considered as permission in writing. It is true that no signatures of any Secretary or other Municipal Officer are to be found on this plan, but the seal of the Municipal Committee is there. In this connection I refer to the following passage in Aiyangar's Law of Municinal Corporations in British India, Edn. 2, p. 186:

(1) 61 Ind. Cas. 410; 43 A 392; 19 A L J 183.

"The seal of the Corporation, when affixed, is equivalent to signature by a natural person and places the Corporation in a similar position."

My attention is drawn to s. 77 of certain bye-laws which had been framed in accordance with the directions of the Local Government under s. 31 (3), Punjab Municipal Act, III of 1911. This section merely says that the Municipal Secretary shall sign notices, processes, sanctions and permits, issued on behalf of the Committee. It is apparent that this bye-law merely prescribes and enumerates certain duties imposed upon the Municipal Secretary, but it is nowhere laid down that if his signatures do not appear on a document, otherwise valid, it would become invalid. I therefore hold that the plan already mentioned amounted, under the circumstances, to the permission in writing given by the Secretary to the plaintiffs.

No bye-laws have been framed under s. 188, Punjab Municipal Act, empowering the Municipal Committee to impose conditions while granting sanction under s. 172 (1) of the Act I adhere to the view expressed by me in Municipal Committee, Delhi v. Chambeli (2), and hold that no conditions could be imposed upon the grantee of the permission. Furthermore, a sanction once granted cannot be revoked: vide, Kirpa Ram v. Notified Area Committee, Pindi Bhatian (3). See also Damodar Das v. Municipal Committee, Delhi (4).

I do not understand what the lower Appellate Court meant by saying that the plaintiffs obtained a copy of the plan noted above, irregularly, that they had not taken the trouble of asking for a certified copy of the resolution and therefore under the circumstances the erection of the structure was at the plaintiffs' own risk, and the defendant Committee had a right to reconsider its decision before it conveyed permission to the plaintiffs.

It is not disputed before me that the plan bore the seal of the Municipal Committee and contained other particulars which I have already mentioned. It is not even suggested that this plan was a forged document It was a documeut issued by the Municipality and I do not see anything in the manner of obtaining it which would deprive it of its efficacy and prevent the plaintiffs from treating it as a valid document and making full and legitimate use of it. Again, I cannot understand why serious penalties should be imposed upon the plaintiffs for not having obtained a certiffed copy of the resolution, so long as it is brought to the notice of the Court. The learned Judge had decided the case against the plaintiffs on these grounds only, though he seemed to have been inclined in his favour on other questions. But in order to avoid the necessity of a remand to the Court below, I have recorded findings on all the points which were urged by the Counsel for the parties in the course of the arguments. No other points were raised. I therefore allow this appeal and setting aside the judgment and decree of the Court below, decree the plaintiff's suit with costs throughout.

N. Appeal allowed.

(2) 123 Ind. Cas. 84; A I R 1930 Lah. 246; 31 P L R 228; Ind. Rul (1930) Lah. 388; 11 Lah 276.
(3) 100 Ind Cas. 813; A I R 1927 Lah. 891.
(4) 27 P R 1901; 96 P L R 1900.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Civil Revision Application No. 74 of 1934

August 17, 1934

FERRERS, J. C. AND O'SULLIVAN, A. J. C.

FIRM OF MURLIMAL SANTRAM—APPLICANT

versus

MESSRS. BANARSIDAS & SONS AND ANOTHER—OPPONENTS

Karachi Small Causes Courts Act (IV of 1929), s. 32—Section covers any order in any case—Application on pure question of fact, whether precluded—Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), s. 19—Application for stay—Court's duty—Application rejected—Order not set aside—Second application, if maintainable—Sufficient cause in refusing application for stay—Charge of fraud or forgery—Court's jurisdiction to refuse stay—Application for postponement of hearing of suit, whether a step in proceeding irrespective of intention of applicant—Jurisdiction—What constitutes—Erroneous order, if can be attacked collaterally—Interpretation of statutes—Language and plain meaning to be examined.

By a plain reading of s. 32, Karachi Small Causes Courts Act, there is nothing whatsoever to warrant the interpretation that it covers only "final orders." It is wide enough to cover any order in any case. [p. 898, col. 1]

Words "according to law" would preclude a multiplicity of applications on questions of pure fact unless substantial injustice has resulted. Rupchand v. Minhomal (6), relied on. [ibid.]

In an application for stay of a suit under the Arbitration Act, it is the prima facie duty of the Court to stay and the onus lies on the plaintiff to show why he should not be bound by the agreement to refer. Abdulla Haroon v. E. D. Sassoon (9), referred to [p. 900, col. 1.]

Where an application for stay is rejected and the order is not set aside, a second application for stay is barred by res judicata even if the first order is erroneous. [ibid.]

What is a sufficient cause for refusing to stay on an application for stay under s. 19, Arbitration Act, depends on the particular facts of each case. The fact that a submission clause does not include all the matters which are the subject of legal proceedings may be a sufficient cause for refusing to stay. When there is charge of fraud or forgery, against one of the parties to a submission clause, a Court has discretion to refuse a stay. Generally speaking, where the party charged desires a public inquiry, the Court will generally refuse to send the case to arbitration but where the party making the charge desires that the matter should be dealt with in Court, the Court will be less inclined to stay the suit. But to ensure a proper discretion in refusing to stay a suit on an allegation of fraud or forgery, the Court should ascertain that there is some foundation for such a charge; otherwise there will be a tendency to allege fraud in any case in which a party to a submission clause wishes to avoid arbitration. [p. 899, col 1.]

[English case-law referred to.]

An application made to the Court for postponement of the hearing of the suit is a step in the proceedings within the meaning of s. 19, Arbitration Act, irrespective of the intention with which the application is made. Whether the applicant wishes to have further time to file a written statement or to raise as a bar to the suit the agreement to refer to arbitration, in either event, his application is an application to invite the Court to do something which would enable him to establish his defence. It is for the Court to determine whether any particular act or application is a step in the proceeding, irrespective of the fact that a party may not have had any intention of submitting to the jurisdiction of the Court. Bhowanidas Ramgobind v. Panachand Luchmipat (27), referred to. [p 901, col. 2.]

Jurisdiction is the power to hear and decide and the power to decide is the power to decide erroneously as well as correctly. Consequently, unless an order has been vacated, it is operative between the parties and cannot be ignored and challenged collaterally in different proceedings. Banarsidas & Sons v. Murlimal-Santramdas (1) and Malkarjun v. Narhari (8), relied on. [p. 889, col. 2.]

In arriving at a conclusion as to the meaning of an enactment, the proper course is in the first place to examine the language of the statute and ask what is its plain meaning and not to start arguing how the law previously stood. Bank of England v. Vagliano Brothers (5), followed. [p. 898, col. 1.]

Mr. Dipchand Chandumal, for the Applicant.

Messrs. Assudamal Rewachand and Srikishindas H. Lulla, for the Respondents Nos. 1 and 2.

Judgment.—This is an application under s. 32, Karachi Small Causes Court Act, to reverse an order of the learned Small Causes Court Judge who has rejected an application filed before him by the applicants under s. 19, Arbitration Act, to stay a suit pending in the Small Causes Court.

The facts briefly are that the opponents No. 1 (plaintiffs) ordered by a forward contract from the applicants (defendant No. 1) a consignment of galvanized iron sheets to be sent out from Europe. The contract was brought about by opponent No. 2 (defendant No. 2) acting as a broker. There was no written agreement signed by the parties, but each party entered the terms of the contract in his own books, opponent No. 1's entry in this respect being, it is alleged, signed by the broker, opponent No. 2. Between the making of the contract and the arrival of the goods an increased duty on galvanized iron had been imposed by Government and a dispute arose between the applicants and opponents No. 1 as to who should pay the extra duty. The disputants agreed to refer their differences to arbitration. Opponents No. 1 alleged that it was a term of the contract that the applicants should pay the increased duty and maintained that the entry in their books signed by the opponents No. 2 bore this out. The applicants denied that they had consented to such a condition and contended that if opponent No. 2 had agreed to do it, he had exceeded his authority as an agent.

The dispute was referred to arbitration on December 23, 1931. On February 20, 1932, the arbitrators differed and could not agree upon an umpire. The opponent No. 1 thereupon on February 22, 1932, filed a suit in the Small Causes Court against the applicants and opponent No. 2 claiming an alternative relief against each. The summons was served on the applicants on March 14, 1932. On March 16, 1932, an application under s. 19, Arbitration Act, was made by the applicants to the Judicial Commissioner of Sind for stay of the suit. On March 17, 1932, the parties appeared in the Small Causes Court through their respective Pleaders and the following note in the diary indicates what occurred on that day:

"Plaintiff by Mr. Assudomal, Defendant No. 2 by Mr. Lulla, Defendant No 1 by Mr. Kodumal. Adjourned by consent. Written statement in seven days. (Mr. Kodumal says that he has applied for stay as there is clause of submission between the parties)."

On April 11, 1932, the Judicial Commissioner's Court granted an ad interim stay. On the same date the applicants filed in the Small Causes Court, Karachi, an application under s. 19, Arbitration Act, for stay of the suit and another under s. 151, Civil Procedure Code, for an ad interim stay and the case was adjourned to May 4, 1932. On May 4, 1932, the learned Small Causes Court Judge passed the following order on the application under s. 19:

"Pleaders heard. Rejected."

The entry from the diary on this date reads:

"Mr. Kodumal for the defendants says the stay order has been passed by the Judicial Commissioner's Court. Mr. Manghumal for the plaintiffs. Written statement in five days. As to stay order as it has not been received by the Court, fix hearing."

Thereafter before the suit could be decided the stay order from the Judicial Commissioner's Court was produced in the Small Causes Court. The interim stay order passed by the Judicial Commissioner's Court had been confirmed on July 22, 1932, by Aston, Additional Judicial Commissioner. At this time there existed a conflict of decisions of this Court as to whether the application for stay should be filed in the Court before which the suit was pending or in the Court of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind in its District Court Jurisdiction, or in the Court in which the Award under the Indian Arbitration Act, has to be filed, i. e., the Arbitration Court which incidentally in Karachi is the Judicial Commissioner of Sind in its District Court jurisdiction. It was apparently for this reason that the applicants had applied under s. 19, Arbitration Act, to both, the Court of the Judicial Commissioner and the Small Causes Court.

Against Aston, Additional Judicial Commissioner's order of July 22, 1932, confirming the stay of the suit, a revision application was filed in this Court in its High Court jurisdiction, and, in view of the existing difference of opinion as to in which Court the application lay, the matter was referred to a Full Bench. The Full Bench decided that the application under s. 19, Arbitration Act, should be made to the Court before which the proceedings are pending. The decision is reported in Banarsidas & Sons v. Murlimal Satramdas (1). About this time s. 19, Arbitration Act, was amended by Act XXI of 1933, which now brings the law into conformity with Full Bench decision.

In consequence of the Full Bench ruling the applicants filed an application for stay under s. 19, Arbitration Act, in the Small Causes Court on May 2, 1934. The learned Small Causes Court Judge rejected the application on May 26, 1934, and directed that the suit proceed. On the date he was hearing the case, the present application in this Court against the Small Cause Court Judge's order of May 26, 1934, was filed and an ad interim stay obtained. Mr. Assudomal for opponents No. 1 has raised a preliminary point of some importance and is supported by Mr. Lulla who appears for opponent No. 2. It is contended that the present application does not lie because the order sought to be set aside is an interlocutory order and as decided by a Full Bench of this Court in Khudabux v. Panjo (2), the High Court has no jurisdiction to interfere in revision with an interlocutory order. Reliance was placed on a decision of the Privy Council in Ramchand v. Goverdhan Das Ratanchand (3), in which it was held that an order refusing to stay proceedings under s. 19, Arbitration Act, does not finally dispose of the rights of the parties, but leaves them to be determined by the Courts in the ordinary way and is, therefore, not a "final order." Incidentally that decision was with reference to the term "final order" in s. 109, Civil Procedure Code, which relates to appeals to the Privy Council. The case of Abdul Rahman v. Cassim & Sons (4), was also referred to in the same connection.

It was argued that a decision of this Court in favour of the view that an application is competent under s. 32, Karachi

(1) 146 Ind. Cas. 1019; A I R 1933 Sind 376; 27 S L R 451; 6 R S 106 (F B).

(2) 127 Ind. Cas. 673; A I R 1930 Sind 265; 24 S L R 277; Ind. Rul. (1930) Sind 289.

(3) 56 Ind. Cas. 302; A I R 1920 P C 83; 47 I A 121; 47 C 918; 24 C W N 721; 18 A L J 591; 22 Bom. L R 606; 31 M L J 27; 15 L W 15; 2 U P L R P C 94; (1920) M W N 407; 28 M L T 27; 14 S L R 191 (P C).

(4) 142 Ind. Cas. 328; A I R 1933 P C 58; 60 I A 76; 11 R 53; 10 O W N 195; 37 L W 33; (1933) M W N 166; Ind. Rul. (1933) P C 59; (1933) A L J 244; 64 M L J 307; 35 Bom. L R 331; 37 C W N 405; 57 C L J 136 (P C).

Small Causes Court Act, to reverse or vary an interlocutory order would result in a multiplicity of such applications. A number of decisions have been quoted as to the circumstances under which revision lies to this Court. The determination of the preliminary question rests on a proper interpretation of s. 32, Karachi Small Causes Court Act, which is in the following terms:

"The Chief Court may for the purpose of satisfying itself that a decree or order made in any case by the Court was according to law, call for the case and pass such order with respect thereto as it thinks fit"

I think we cannot do better than follow Lord Herschell's dictum in Bank of England v. Vagliano Brothers (5), that in arriving at a conclusion as to the meaning of an enactment the proper course is in the first place to examine the language of the statute and ask what is its plain meaning and not to start arguing how the law previously stood.

This method is particularly apt in the present case. Section 32 appears to be merely a slightly modified form of s. 25, Provincial Small Causes Act, and a proper interpretation is dependent on the plain meaning of that modification. By a plain reading of s. 32 we can see nothing whatsoever to warrant the interpretation that it covers only "final orders." It would appear to us to be wide enough to cover any order in any case. All the arguments which have been addressed to us on the point are based on the wording of s. 25, Provincial Small Causes Court Act, in which the words "case decided" occur. That section is as follows:

"The High Court, for the purpose of satisfying itself that a decree or order made in any case decided by a Court of Small Causes was according to law, may call for the case and pass such order with respect thereto as it thinks fit."

Both this section and s. 115, Civil Procedure Code, have reference to a case which has been "decided" and in so far as the question of revision against an interlocutory order is concerned, the two sections are on the same footing. Now, nearly every High Court in India at one time held that it had power to revise an interlocutory order under s. 115, Civil Procedure Code, and at another time it held that it had not such power and there was a plethora of rulings on the point. In so far as this Court is concerned, the matter has been set at rest by the Full Bench decision in Khudabux v. Panjo (2), referred to above. In that case and in the rulings of the other High Courts the decision always turned upon the construction of the word "decided." In the words of Wild, Additional Judicial Commissioner, in Khudabux v. Panjo (2):

"The answer to the question depends on whether an interlocutory order is a case which has been decided."

And his conclusion is given in the following terms:

"In my opinion, the employment of the words 'case which has been decided' in s. 115, Civil Procedure Code, tends to show that the legislature did not intend to allow revision of anything which was of an interlocutory nature. There was no reason why it should have intended this, as there would always be a revision of the final order if no appeal lay and the Court had exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law, etc."

In s. 32, Karachi Small Causes Court Act, the important word "decided" has been omitted and the argument upon which the decision in Khudabux v. Panjo (2) and parallel cases turn, has no application. The reason for this omission is not manifest and if the omission was deliberate, it is not clear why the words "in any case" were retained. It has been stated from the Bar that the section has been taken wholesale from the Rangoon Small Causes Court Act. That however gets us no further. It is not for this Court to speculate as to what the intention of the Legislature was in effecting the alteration or whether it was deliberate or accidental. Such speculation would only lead us into the Elysian fields of doubtful hypothesis. In a case such as the present, we are of opinion that an application would lie to this Court under s. 32, Karachi Small Causes Court Act, to enable the Court to satisfy itself that the order was "according to law." These last words would preclude a multiplicity of applications on questions of pure fact unless substantial injustice has resulted within the meaning of the ruling in Rupchand v Minhomal (6). We would refer to what was said in Poona City Municipality v. Ramji (7):

"It is undesirable and would be improper for us to attempt when a power is discretionary to define the limits within which such powers should be exercised. That must depend upon the facts of each individual case."

The cardinal principle is that a High Court should only interfere to remedy injustice. We overrule the preliminary objection and will proceed to discuss the application on its merits. We would only add that we are fortified in our conclusion

(5) (1891) A C 107; 60 L J Q B 145; 55 J P 676; 39 W R 657; 64 L T 353.

(6) 27 Ind. Cas. 366; A I R 1914 Sind 98; 8 S L R 164.

(7) 21 B 250.

on the preliminary point by the following observations of Wild, Additional Judicial Commissioner in Khudabux v. Panjo (2):

"The wording of s. 25, Provincial Small Causes Court Act of 1887, is very similar to that of s. 622 of the old Civil Procedure Code, and s. 115 of the present Code. The wording of s. 32, Karachi Small Causes Court Act of 1929 is different and there is nothing in it to prevent the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind (and when the Sind Courts Act of 1926 comes into operation, the Chief Court) from revising under that section any order of the Karachi Small Cause Court even though interlocutory."

The learned Small Causes Court Judge has dismissed the application mainly on the ground that it is barred by res judicata, the similar application filed on April 11, 1932, having been rejected by his predecessor. He also accepted the contentions of opponent No. 1's learned Advocate that the applicants had taken steps in the proceedings before applying to the proper Court for a stay under s. 19, Arbitration Act, that the suit should not be stayed because opponent No. 2 had not applied for stay, and that, as there was an allegation of forgery by one of the parties, it was desirable that the matter should be adjudicated upon by the Court. With regard to the question of res judicata it has been trenchantly argued by Mr. Dipchand on behalf of the applicants that the Small Causes Court Judge rejected the previous application under s. 19 filed on April 11, 1932, on the presumption that he had no jurisdiction to entertain it and that there was in fact no adjudication on the merits. The applicant's contentions in this respect are set forth in paras. 3 and 4 of this revision application and are as follows:

"That the learned Judge has erred in failing to appreciate that the prior application was rejected because according to the prior rulings of this Honourable Court in force at the time, the Small Causes Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the application for stay under s. 19, Arbitration Act, and because the suit was also stayed by order of this Honourable Court passed in its District Court jurisdiction. That the learned Judge has erred in failing to appreciate that since there was no adjudication on merits, the order of rejection on the first application could not operate as res judicata."

We have given the matter our most careful consideration and we are unable to agree that from the order of the learned Small Causes Court Judge "pleader heard rejected" it can be inferred that there was no adjudication on the merits. What transpired before the learned Small Causes Court Judge is a question of fact, for the decision of which, we have only before us the order itself and a portion of the Court diary. There is nothing in these to indicate with any degree of certainty that the application was rejected merely on the ground that the learned Judge considered that he had no jurisdiction to entertain it. It was argued that the use of the term "rejected" in preference to the word "dismissed" implies a refusal to accept the application rather than a decision on the merits. We are, however, unable to accept the contention. Incidentally in any event the former order would appear in the order now sought to be set aside, to have been interpreted by the Small Causes Court Judge as a decision on the merits. Even were we to go to the extent of expressing that, there is doubt as to the circumstances under which the order was passed, a conclusion on this point in Mr. Dipchand's favour must be more or less speculative in the absence of any further material and it is not for us to enter into the realms of speculation.

Mr. Dipchand argued that the suit had in fact been stayed on April 11, 1932. It is clear, however, from the diary of the Small Causes Court that on May 4, 1932, when the application of April 11 was rejected by the Small Causes Court Judge, no stay order had been received by the Small Causes Court from this Court.

In the light of the Full Bench ruling in Banarsidas & Sons v. Murlimal Satramdas (1), the Small Causes Court had at that time jurisdiction to entertain the application of April 11, 1932, under s. 19, Arbitration Act, and any order on such application, however erroneous, cannot be deemed to have been made without jurisdiction, but would be an order by a Court of competent jurisdiction. The order would not consequently be void, but the party aggrieved might in a proper proceeding have invoked the aid of a superior tribunal to have it set aside. Until it has been so vacated, it is operative between the parties and cannot be ignored and challenged collaterally in a different proceeding. Jurisdiction in brief is the power to hear and decide and the power to decide is the power to decide erroneously as well as correctly. In the words of Lord Hobhouse in Malkarjun v. Narhari (8):

"a Court has jurisdiction to decide wrong as well right. If it decides wrong, the wronged party can only take the course prescribed by law for setting matters right; and if that course is not taken, the decision, however wrong, cannot be disturbed."

(8) 25 B 337; 27 I A 216; 7 Sar. 739; 5 C W N 10; 2 Bom. L R 927; 10 M L J 368 (P C).

It is not inconceivable that a revision application to set aside the order of May 4, 1934, would have been successful, it having been decided by this Court and other High Courts that in an application under the Arbitration Act for stay of a suit, it is the prima facie duty of the Court to stay and the onus is on the plaintiff to show why he should not be bound by the agreement to refer: see inter alia Abdullah Haroon v. E. D. Sassoon (9). No steps were, however, taken to impugn the order of May 4, 1934, and so, however erroneous that order might be, it stands and is binding on the Court which passed it. We are, therefore, of the opinion that the learned Judge of the Small Causes Court was correct in dismissing the second application under s. 19 on the ground that it was barred as res judicata.

In view of our decision on this aspect of the case we propose to deal only very briefly with the other points raised. It has now been decided that no appeal lies against an order staying or refusing to stay a suit under s. 19, Arbitration Act, see Menghraj Khialdas v. Langley, Billimoria & Co. (10), s. 19 gives the Court a discretion to stay or refuse to stay proceedings. The language of the section itself is clear and authorities are numerous. I would refer to the following cases Soda Waterwala v Volkart Brothers (11), Kedarnath Babulal v. Sumpatram Doogur (12), Holland Bombay Trading Co. v. Essardas (13), and Dinkarrai Lakshmiprasad v. Yeshvantrai Hariprasad (14). In the last mentioned case Rangnekar, J., observes:

"The authorities show that if a person files an action in breach of an agreement to refer the other party, has a remedy, and that is to apply for stay of the action. But the Court is not bound to stay the action. The Court has a discretion and may well refuse to stay the action. If the Court in the exercise of its discretion stays the action, the plaintiff has no remedy left but to proceed with the arbitration. If the Court refuses to stay the action, the Court has seisin of the disputes and it is by its decision, and its decision alone, that the rights of the parties are settled."

The English authorities are equally definite: see Clough v. County Live Stock Insurance Association, Ltd. (5), and the remarks of Lord Moulton in Bristol Corporation v John Aird & Co. (16), declining to interfere with the discretion exercised by the Court below which had refused to stay a suit. His Lordships said:

" . . . . . On a question of judicial discretion one ought not lightly to allow an appeal from a Court which had not proceeded on wrong judicial lines "

In its High Court Jurisdiction this Court has always declined to interfere in a discretion vested in a lower Court which has not been improperly exercised. With special reference to the Small Causes Courts, it is accepted by this Court that the powers of interference under s. 25, Provincial Small Causes Court Act, are wider than those under s. 115, Civil Procedure Code, and are not limited to correcting errors of law strictly so called. Such powers should however, be exercised only to remedy injustice : see Ruichand v. Minhomal (6). The situation would be the same regarding revision under s. 32, Karachi Small Causes Court Act, except in so far as revision against interlocutory orders are concerned, as mentioned above. We do not consider in view of the particular circumstances of the present case that, in the result, the learned Small Causes Court Judge has not exercised a proper discretion in refusing a stay either on the ground that one of the parties had not applied for stay or on the ground that forgery has been alleged. There was no agreement to refer to arbitration any disputes between opponent No. 1 and opponent No. 2 or between the applicants and opponent No. 2 and the suit as against opponent No. 2 cannot be stayed. The success of opponent No. 1's claim against opponent No. 2 is contingent upon the Court holding in favour of the applicant and the arbitrators finding in favour of the applicants would of course not be binding in the suit against opponent No. 2. Unless, therefore, the arbitrators and the Court arrive at the same conclusion there would be a conflict of decisions and possibly a consequent failure of justice.

The fact that a submission clause does

(9) 56 Ind. Cas. 76; A I R 1920 Sind 61; 13 S L R 201.

(10) 81 Ind. Cas. 759; A I R 1923 Sind 38; 17 S L R 195.

(11) 82 Ind. Cas. 81; A I R 1923 Sind 25.

(12) 60 Ind. Cas. 951; A I R 1920 Cal. 795; 47 C 1020.

(13) 98 Ind. Cas. 151; A I R 1926 Sind 286; 19 S L R 168.

(14) 124 Ind. Cas. 119; A I R 1930 Bom. 98; 54 B 197; 31 Bom. L R 1403; Ind. Rul. (1930) Bom. 247.

(15) (1916) 32 T L R 526; 85 L J K B 1185; 60 S J 642.

(16) (1913) A C 241; 82 L J K B 684; 29 T L R 360; 77 J P 209; 108 L T 434.

not include all the matters which are the subject of legal proceedings may be a sufficient cause for refusing to stay. In Turnock v. Sartoris (17), with reference to arbitration proceedings arising out of disputes regarding a lease, a stay of a suit was refused, it being held that it would not be right to split up the action by referring to arbitration the matters arising under the lease leaving the action to proceed as to the other matters. In Young v. Buckett (18), where partners had agreed to refer to arbitration dispute arising between them with respect to the partnership so that reference had to be made within a certain limited time after such dispute and various disputes had arisen at different times and after the limited time had expired as to most of the disputes, but not as to one, one of the parties required the reference to arbitration of the matters in dispute, Fry, J., in the exercise of his discretion refused to separate the matters in dispute by sending to arbitration the one as to which the limited time had not expired, but the Court dealt with the matter as a whole. I would also refer to the following remarks of Crouch, A. J. C., in Ratanchand Ramkrishendas v. Sahiram Dunichand (19):

"It is not desirable to stay a suit when only some of the matters in litigation can be settled by the award."

On the other hand as held by the Court of Appeal in Ives & Barker v. Williams (20), the fact that a small portion of the relief claimed is not within the scope of the arbitration clause is not in itself a sufficient reason for refusing to stay proceedings when the main subject of the action is within the arbitration clause. Each case must obviously be considered on its own particular facts.

With regard to the question of forgery, when there is charge of fraud or forgery, against one of the parties to a submission clause, a Court has discretion to refuse a stay. Generally speaking where the party charged desires a public inquiry, the Court will generally refuse to send the case to arbitration but where the party making the charge desires that the matter should be dealt with in the Court, the Court will be less inclined to stay the suit: see Maninda Chandra Nandy v. H. V. Low & Co., Ltd. (21). In the present case the learned Small Causes Court Judge having heard both parties came to the conclusion that it was desirable that the matter should be adjudicated in Court relying upon the decision in Majet Subbiah & Co. v. Tetlay & Whitely (22). As already indicated we are not prepared to interfere with the discretion of the learned Small Causes Court Judge which appears from his order to have been judicially exercised. However, with reference to this question we desire to sound a note of warning. To ensure a proper discretion in refusing to stay a suit on an allegation of fraud or forgery, the Court should ascertain that there is some foundation for such a charge; otherwise there will be a tendency to allege fraud in any case in which a party to a submission clause wishes to avoid arbitration.

With reference to the question whether the applicant took any steps in the proceedings within the contemplation of s. 19 of the Act, little need be said. The law upon the point epitomised in Fleming Shaw & Co. v. Haji Yusif Ellias (23), in which it was unequivocally laid down following Sarat Kumar Roy v. Corporation of Calcutta (24) and Bartlett v. Ford's Hotel Co. (25), that an application made to the Court for postponement of the hearing of the suit is a step in the proceedings within the meaning of s. 19, Arbitration Act, irrespective of the intention with which the application is made. Whether the applicant wishes to have further time to file a written statment or to raise as a bar to the suit the agreement to refer to arbitration, in either event, his application is an application to invite the Court to do something which would enable him to establish his defence. It is for the Court to determine whether any particular act or application is a step in the proceeding, irrespective of the fact that a party may not have had any intention of submitting to the Jurisdiction of the Court. I would refer to the observations of Page,

(17) (1889) 43 Ch D 150; 38 W R 340; 62 L T 209.

(18) (1881) 44 L T 206; 30 W R 511; 51 L J Ch. 501.

(19) 52 Ind. Cas 139; A I R 1919 Sind 80; 13 S L R 23.

(20) (1894) 2 Ch D 478; 63 L J Ch. 521; 42 W R 483; 70 L T 674.

(21) 83 Ind. Cas. 934; A I R 1924 Cal. 796; 39 C L J 504.

(22) 75 Ind. Cas. 673; A I R 1923 Mad 693; 32 M L T 380; 45 M L J 39; 18 L W 77; (1923) M W N 445.

(23) 40 Ind. Cas. 81; A I R 1917 Sind 12; 10 S L R 180.

(24) 34 C 443; 11 C W N 306.

(25) (1895) 1 Q B 850; 64 L J Q B 452.

J., Bhowanidas Ramgobind v. Panachand Luchmipat (26), at p. 461*. He says:

"Any act in the nature of an application to the Court which indicates that a party is willing that the suit should proceed, in my opinion, would be a step in the proceedings within s. 19, Arbitration Act. The intention of the party is to be gathered from the nature of the application which is made, and if, having regard to the form of the application, the Court is of opinion that a step has been taken, it will so hold, notwithstanding that the party may in truth and in fact have no such intention, or that the application is coupled with a protest that the party desires that the matters in dispute should be referred to arbitration"

In the light of these remarks there can be little doubt that the applicant took steps in the proceedings on March 17, 1932, in obtaining an adjournment and submitting to an order to file a written statement in 7 days. Similarly on May 4, 1932, after the rejection of the application under s. 19, Arbitration Act, and s. 151, Civil Procedure Code, the applicants clearly took steps by submitting to an order to file written statement within 5 days. On this date no order of stay had been received by the Small Causes Court. There was probably no intention whatsoever of submitting to the jurisdiction of the Court, but in effect the applicants did so and took steps in the proceedings. Mr. Dipchand relies on Khemchand Ramdas v. Udhavdas Varandmal (27). In that case there would appear to have been no submission to the Jurisdiction of the Court, as De Souza, A. J. C., observes:

"in the present case there was merely an intimation by the pleader to the Court that an application for stay will be made in this Court."

and it is significant to note that DeSouza, A. J. C., agreed entirely with the dictum of Pratt, J. C., in Fleming Shaw & Co. v. Haji Yusif Ellias (23). With these remarks we dismiss the application.

We feel constrained to say that it is with regret that we take this step. This Court has always been jealous to safeguard and foster the very salutary and beneficial facilities afforded to the mercantile community by the Arbitration Act. In this particular case the arbitrators had actually proceeded to the stage of making an award when however they differed and desired to refer the difference to an umpire. Moreover, undoubtedly the complications which afterwards occurred with regard to the stay of the suit are attributable to the then existing doubt as to the proper Court in which the application under s. 19, Arbitration Act, should be filed. We make no order as to costs.

D. Application dismissed.

(26) 88 Ind. Cas. 929; A I R 1925 Cal. 801; 52 C 453.

(27) 106 Ind. Cas. 565; A I R 1928 Sind 97; 22 S L R 286.

*Page of 52 Cal.—[Ed.]

PATNA HIGH COURT
Special Bench

Appeal from Appellate Decree
Nos. 1008 to 1021 of 1931
March 6, 1935

MOHAMMAD NOOR, JAMES AND AGARWALA, JJ.

Maharaj Kumar RAM RANBIJAY PRASAD SINGH—APPELLANT

versus

RAMGIRHI RAI AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 30 (a) (b), (c), 32, 105—Enhancement of rent on ground of rise in prices of staple food crops—Matters to be considered—Period to be taken for comparison—'Practicable', meaning of—S. 30 (c), applicability of—Landlord and tenant—Rent not enhanced for hundred years—Presumption of fixity of rent, if arises—Interpretation of Statutes — Plain wording of section to be followed.

The rise contemplated in s. 30 (b) of the Bengal Tenancy Act is the rise over the price which was prevailing at about the time when the current rent was fixed. It is assumed that the rent must have been fixed on the basis of the price prevailing. Section 32 provides the machinery for finding out what enhancement should be allowed in case there is a rise in the prices of these staple food crops. Sub-clause (a) enjoins upon the Court to compare the average prices of the two decennial periods. One of them must be the period immediately preceding the institution of the suit; and the other may be any one which is practicable to take. But at the same time it must be equitable to take that decade in consideration. By practicable, it is to be understood the period for which figures are available or can be obtained without undue inconvenience and trouble. According to the terms of the section the Court can take any period which it thinks equitable to take. The decennium may be one immediately preceding the decennium with which the comparison is to be made or any earlier decennial period. Ordinarily, however, it may be inequitable to go beyond the decennial period just preceding the time when the current rent was fixed, as in that case it will be unjust upon the raiyats to pay enhancement on the basis of rise of price compared with the prices which prevailed many years before the time when the rent was fixed which must have been taken into consideration at the time of the fixing of the current rent. Shorter period can only be substituted for decades if it is in the opinion of the Court impracticable to take the latter into consideration. [p. 903, col. 2; p. 904, col. 1.]

Where the rent under s. 105, Bengal Tenancy Act, must have been settled on the basis of rise in the decennium just preceding the settlement, it will be more equitable to compare the prices of the decennium just before the institution of the suit with the prices which prevailed in the decade just before the settlement of rent Sub-clause (c), of s. 30 has no application and for all practical purposes that sub-clause may now be taken to be obsolete. [p. 904, col. 1.]

The mere fact that the tenant only claimed that rent was not enhanced for hundred years is not enough to prove that the holding was at a fixed rent inasmuch as after the preparation of the Record of Rights the presumption for fixity of rent on account of there being no change for twenty years is no longer available to the tenant. [p. 905, col. 2]

The sections of an Act must be interpreted on the basis of the plain wordings of the sections themselves. The Legislature must be taken to have meant what they have said and not what they contemplated to say but did not say. [p. 904, col 2]

A. from a decision of the District Judge of Shahabad, dated February 11, 1931, reversing that of the Munsif of Buxar, dated February 5, 1930.

Messrs. S. M. Mullick, N. K. Prasad, II, and Ramnandan Prasad, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Parmeshwar Dayal and P. P. Varma, for the Respondents.

Mohammad Noor, J.—These fourteen second appeals arise out of the same number of suits for enhancement of rents of occupancy holdings of the defendants on the ground of rise in prices of staple food crops under s. 30 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The rent of all these holdings except perhaps of the one involved in second appeal No. 1012 was settled under s. 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act in the year 1914. That rent came into operation from 1921 Fasli. These suits for enhancement of rent were instituted just after the completion of fifteen years since the settled rent came into force. The learned Munsif gave the plaintiff decrees for enhancement at the rate of four annas in the rupee. For the purpose of comparison under s. 32 (a) of the Bengal Tenancy Act he took the two decades just preceding the institution of the suits, that is to say, he compared the average prices of the decennial period just before the institution of the suits with the decennial period just preceding it. The suits having been instituted just after fifteen years since the rent was settled under s. 105, it is obvious that three years of the earlier decennium fell into the period which was prior to the settlement of rent. The learned District Judge on appeal has dismissed the plaintiff's suits entirely. He held that the learned Munsif was not empowered to include for comparison any period prior to the settlement of rent under s. 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Presumably on his interpretation of sub-cl. (c) of s. 32, he took into consideration only the period of the currency of rent and divided it into two periods and compared the one with the other; and having found that the rise was only six pies in the rupee, declined to give any enhancement at all. These appeals came up for hearing before a Division Bench of this Court (Macpherson and Varma, JJ.); but considering the importance of the question involved, they suggested that the appeals be heard by a Special Bench and hence these cases have come before this Bench.

The only question of law which arises is whether the learned District Judge was right in taking into consideration two shorter periods of seven years each, i. e., only the period within the currency of the present rent; and whether he was right in holding that any period before the settlement of rent could not be taken into consideration. In order to decide this an examination of the provisions of law for enhancement of rent on the ground of rise in prices of the staple food crops is required. Section 30 of the Bengal Tenancy Act mentions the various grounds on which the money rent of an occupancy holding can be enhanced. We are only concerned with sub-cl. (b) of that section which authorises enhancement of rent on the ground that there has been a rise in the average local prices of staple food crops during the currency of the present rent. It is obvious that the rise contemplated in this sub-clause is the rise over the prices which prevailed just at or about the time when the rent was fixed. The principle is obvious. The rent represents a share of the produce of the land which from ancient times the cultivators of the soil were paying to the Government of the time being and which is now payable to the landlords. The money rent represents the price of the share of the produce which the landlord is entitled to receive from the raiyats. Any rise or fall in the price of staple food crops necessarily disturbs this proportion of the share of the landlord and the raiyat. Therefore, the framers of the Bengal Tenancy Act provided both for enhancement and reduction of rent on the ground of rise and fall of prices of the staple food crops. It is obvious from the principles on which these enhancements and reductions of rent are based that the rise contemplated in s. 30 (b) of the Act is the rise over the price which was prevailing at about the time when the current rent was fixed. It is assumed that the rent must have been fixed on the basis of the price prevailing. Section 32 provides the machinery for finding out what enhancement should be allowed in case there is a rise in the price of these staple food crops. Sub-cl. (a) enjoins upon the Court to compare the average prices of the two decennial periods; one of them must be the period immediately preceding the institution of the suit, and the other may be any one which is practicable to take. But at the same time it must be equitable to take that decade into consideration for consideration. By practicable I understand the period for which figures are available or can be obtained without undue inconvenience and trouble. According to the terms of the section the Court can take any period which it thinks equitable to take the decennium may be one immediately preceding the decennium with which the comparison is to be made or any earlier decennial period. Ordinarily, however, it may be inequitable to go beyond the decennial period just preceding the time when the current rent was fixed, as in that case it will be unjust upon the raiyats to pay enhancement on the basis of rise of price compared with the prices which prevailed many years before the time when the rent was fixed which must have been taken into consideration at the time of the fixing of the current rent. In the present case the rent under s. 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act must have been settled on the basis of rise in the decennium just preceding the settlement. The learned Munsif has in these cases taken the earlier decennial period, the one just before that decennium which was immediately preceding the institution of the suits. There is nothing in this sub-clause which enjoins upon the Court not to go to a period before the date when the rent was last fixed or settled. Rather, in my opinion, it will be more equitable to compare the prices of the decennium just before the institution of the suit with the prices which prevailed in the decade just before the settlement of rent. The learned District Judge seems to have acted upon sub-cl. (c) which in my opinion has no application. Shorter period can only be substituted for decades if it is in the opinion of the Court impracticable to take the latter into consideration. It is to be seen that comparison between two decennial periods is obligatory. Sub-cl. (c) is an exception. When the Bengal Tenancy Act was passed in 1885, the Legislature must have contemplated institution of suits immediately after the passing of the Act. No definite arrangements for the publication of the price lists were prevailing then as it is now. In cl. (c) the Legislature provided for cases where it will be impracticable to get the prices of two decades. 'Practicable' in this clause again I think means the same thing as it does in cl. (a). It is not practicable to compare the prices of two decades when evidence of prices is not available or evidence can only be procured with such an amount of inconvenience and trouble that the Court thinks under the circumstances to be unnecessary. But those considerations do not arise now when we have got a complete price list of the staple food crops commencing from the year 1887. For all practical purposes cl. (c) may now be taken to be obsolete. Therefore, the learned District Judge in my opinion was not right in confining himself to the periods of the currency of the present rent.

The learned Advocate for the respondents has drawn our attention to a passage in the speech of Sir Stuart Bayley given in the Imperial Legislative Council during the passage of the Bengal Tenancy Act. First of all these speeches are of no value in interpreting the meaning of the statute. We must interpret sections of an Act on the basis of the plain wordings of the sections themselves. The Legislature must be taken to have meant what they have said and not what they contemplated to say but did not say. Here I feel no difficulty in interpreting the two clauses of s. 32; but the passage in the speech referred to by the learned Advocate for the respondents does not support him. There Sir Stuart Bayley was comparing the position which was before the passing of the Bengal Tenancy Act with the position which would be after the passing of the Act; and it was pointed out by him that the landlords would be in a better position in securing enhancement because it would no longer be necessary for them to prove the prices prevailing before the time when the rent was fixed, as the section authorises the Court to compare any two decennial periods even between the currency of the rent. The word used in the speech was 'may' and not 'must'.

I think the judgment of the learned District Judge in dismissing the suits cannot stand. Now the question arises—what should be done in this particular case? The learned Munsif has given an enhancement of four annas in the rupee. We cannot ignore the fact that since that judgment, there has been a considerable fall in the prices of staple food crops on account of the general economic depression and as we are finally disposing of the cases now, we must see that no injustice is done to the raiyats on account of the enhancement being at a figure which may be unjust and inequitable. In my opinion four annas in the rupee in the circumstances which have arisen since the order of the learned Munsif will cause undue hardship on the tenants. The question arises whether the suits should be remanded in order to determine what should be the fair enhancement in these cases or whether we should by some rough calculation fix a reasonable amount. I find that in a case which came up on appeal from the judgment of the same learned District Judge (Mr. Davies) and was from the neighbourhood of the village involved in the present suits, the learned District Judge himself gave enhancement at one anna in the rupee. That rate was upheld in this Court by my learned brother James—(Second Appeal Nos. 928 to 953 of 1931). I see no reason why the same amount of enhancement should not be allowed in these cases. The suits in those cases were instituted at about the same time when the present suits were instituted. Therefore, in my opinion, it will serve the ends of justice if instead of remanding the cases for an elaborate enquiry, enhancement be granted in all these cases at one anna in the rupee.

The only question for consideration which seems to have been specially raised is in regard to Second Appeal No. 1012 which corresponds to suit No. 737 of 1929 before the Munsif. It seems that in that case a specific defence was taken that the holding was at a fixed rate and not an occupancy holding. At one place the learned Munsif has said that the rent of all the holdings involved in these suits were settled under s. 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. If so, no question of this holding being at a fixed rate did in fact arise. But later on the learned Munsif seems of have specifically considered the plea of the defendant of that suit about the fixity of the rent and while dealing with this plea, he does not seem o have considered that the rent was nhanced in the year 1914. Assuming, however, that the holding involved in that suit was not the subject-matter of settlement of rent in 1914, the plea of fixity of rent cannot be entertained for a moment. Apart from the reasons given by the learned Munsif for coming to a conclusion against the defendant, it seems that even in the evidence given by the defendant of that suit, he only claimed that rent was not enhanced for hundred years. That is not enough now since the Record of Rights has been prepared and the presumption for fixity of rent on account of there being no change for twenty years is no longer available to the defendant. Therefore, I agree with the learned Munsif in holding that the defendant of that suit has failed to prove that the holding was at a fixed rent.

The appeals are partly allowed. The rent of all the holdings is enhanced at the rate of one anna in the rupee. The appellant will be entitled to half the costs of this Court as well as of the Court of appeal below. The order for costs made by the Munsif will stand.

James, J.—I agree.

Agarwala, J.—I agree.

N. Appeals partly allowed.

OUDH CHIEF COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 28 of 1933

March 22, 1935

KING, C. J. AND THOMAS, J.

Mahant SUKHRAM DASS—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Babu MAHBUB KHAN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 92—Mortgage—Subrogation—Subsequent mortgagee paying off prior mortgage—Presumption as to intention to keep it alive as shield against intermediate mortgagee—Intermediate mortgagee paying nothing towards redemption—Whether can get benefit of redemption of prior mortgages — Agency, doctrine of — Applicability.

The subsequent mortgagee in paying off a prior mortgage must be presumed to have intended what was to his benefit and he ought to be deemed to have intended to keep alive the prior mortgage to be used as a shield against the intermediate mortgages. Kanhaiya Lal v. Gulab Singh (4), applied. [p. 907, col. 1.]

A held a mortgage deed executed by B in respect of a plot of land which was included in the property mortgaged under the deed in suit executed by B and C in favour of the plaintiff. On the strength of his mortgage A claimed priority in respect of his mortgage which was earlier in date. The plaintiff claimed that he had redeemed certain prior incumbrances upon the mortgaged property and that he was thereby subrogated to the rights and interests of those prior mortgagees and thus acquired priority as against the intermediate mortgage held by A. The consideration for the mortgage deed in suit consisted partly of certain sums of money made payable by the mortgagee plaintiff for the redemption of the prior mortgages. It was proved that the plaintiff had in fact paid off the prior incumbrances :

Held, that as a matter of a justice and equity, there was no reason why the intermediate mortgagee should get the benefit of the redemption of the prior mortgages when he has paid nothing towards such redemption and that the plaintiff could claim to be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagees whom he had paid off.

Held also, that the doctrine of agency could not be applied to deprive the claim of the plaintiff to be subrogated.

Even if s. 92 Transfer of Property Act, has no retrospective effect, nevertheless the rule laid down by the legislature in s. 92 would be a safe guide to follow as laying down correctly the rule of justice, equity and good conscience for cases arising before the passing of the amending Act of 1929. Tota Ram v. Ram Lal (6), followed. [p. 908, col. 1.]

A person cannot claim subrogation when he simply performs his own obligation or covenant. Jagmohan Deo v. Jugal Kishore (10), relied on. [ibid.]

F. C. A. against the order of the Additional Sub-Judge, Sultanpur, dated December 22, 1932.

Mr. Harish Chandra, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. N. Roy, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal arises out of a suit for sale on the basis of a simple mortgage, dated January 31, 1927, executed by defendants Nos. 1 and 2 for Rs. 9,000 in favour of the plaintiff.

The suit was defended upon a number of grounds, but for the purposes of this appeal we are only concerned with the pleas raised by defendants Nos. 6 and 9.

The defendant No. 6 holds a mortgage-deed dated October 26, 1926, executed by defendant No. 1 in favour of defendant No. 6 in respect of a certain plot of land in the village of Saresar which is included in the property mortgaged under the mortgage deed in suit. On the strength of this mortgage deed defendant No. 6 claimed priority in respect of his mortgage. The plaintiff's case was that he had redeemed certain prior incumbrances upon the mortgaged property, namely, Ex. 2, dated April 28, 1924, Ex. 3, dated October 1, 1924 and Ex. 5, dated June 16, 1926, and that therefore he was subrogated to the rights and interests of these prior mortgagees and thus acquired priority as against the intermediate mortgage held by defendant No. 6.

The consideration for the mortgage deed in suit consisted partly of certain sums of money made payable by the mortgagee plaintiff for the redemption of the prior mortgages Exs. 2, 3 and 5. In other words those sums of money were left in the hand of the mortgagee for the discharge of the prior incumbrances. It was proved that the plaintiff had in fact paid off the prior incumbrances Exs. 2, 3 and 5. The question is whether by paying off these prior mortgages the plaintiff can claim to be subrogated to the rights and interests of the prior mortgagees redeemed by him and can thus claim priority as against the intermediate mortgagee, defendant No. 6. The trial Court took the view that the prior mortgages were satisfied by the plaintiff from the money of the mortgagors in the capacity of an agent and the payments cannot therefore be held to be an independent act of the mortgagee. The plaintiff therefore could not claim to be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagees whom he had paid off.

It is contended for the appellant that the Court below has taken an erroneous view upon this point.

The learned Subordinate Judge relied mainly upon three rulings, but it is contended that these rulings are distinguishable. In the case of Tufail Fatima v. Bitola (1), a decree for sale had been passed against a mortgagor. The mortgagor then borrowed more money on a mortgage of several villages, including those previously mortgaged, and applied a portion of such money in satisfying the previous decree for sale. The subsequent mortgagee then brought a suit upon her mortgage in which she sought to bring to sale the villages which were the subject of the previous mortgage and decree. It was held that she could do so. It is true that in this case the learned Judges took the view that the plaintiff had discharged the prior mortgage at the request of the mortgagor as the mortgagor's agent. This ruling, however, does not seem to be directly in point because there was no intermediate mortgage and the question did not arise whether the plaintiff by discharging the prior mortgage could claim to be subrogated to the rights of the prior mortgagee as against an intermediate mortgagee. The same observations apply to the case of Shafiq Ullah Khan v. Sami Ullah Khan (2) which has also been relied upon by the Court below. The subsequent mortgagee who paid off a prior mortgage was held to have done so as the agent of the mortgagor and it was held that there was no intention of keeping the prior mortgage alive. This case however is also distinguishable because there was no intermediate mortgage, so there was no question whether the prior mortgage could be kept alive as against the intermediate mortgagee. The case of Said Ahmad v. Narain Singh (3), can be distinguished on the same grounds.

(1) 27 A 400; 2 A L J 13; A W N 1904, 254.

(2) 123 Ind. Cas. 101; 52 A 139; A I R 1929 All. 943; (1930) A L J 57; Ind. Rul. (1930) All. 357.

The appellant relies strongly upon the case of Kanhaiya Lal v. Gulab Singh (4). The trial Court found this case to be distinguishable, but in our opinion it is directly in point. The facts of that case are very similar and it was held that the subsequent mortgagee in paying off a prior mortgage must be presumed to have intended what was to his benefit and he ought to be deemed to have intended to keep alive the prior mortgage to be used as a shield against the intermediate mortgages. This ruling seems to us to be clearly in the appellant's favour.

The doctrine of agency which has been accepted by the Court below seems to be of doubtful authority. The subsequent mortgagee who pays off a prior mortgage does so, not for the benefit of the mortgagor but for his own benefit. Moreover, the money paid by the plaintiff in the present case cannot, we think, be held to be the mortgagor's money which was merely paid by the plaintiff on behalf of the mortgagors. The mortgage deed in suit was indeed worded as a deed to secure a sum of Rs. 9,000 borrowed by the mortgagors, but the mortgagors cannot be held to have received consideration for the sums left in the hands of the mortgagee for the discharge of prior incumbrances unless and until those incumbrances had in fact been discharged by the subsequent mortgagee. It is doubtful whether such sums should be held to be the sums of money belonging to the mortgagor.

The doctrine of agency has been doubted in the case of Raghunandan Prasad v. Ajodhiya Singh (5). In that case certain sums of money were left with the mortgagee for the redemption of prior mortgages but it was held that the subsequent mortgagee in redeeming the prior mortgages did not act as an agent of the mortgagors but acted on his own behalf as a subsequent mortgagee. In the case of Tota Ram v. Ram Lal (6), decided by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court, the doctrine of agency was adversely criticised and it was pointed out that it seemed inconsistent with the Privy Council cases of Dinobandhu Shaw v. Jogmaya (7) and Muhammad Ibrahim Husain Khan v. Ambika Prasad Singh (8). This Full Bench case is indeed an authority directly in the appellant's favour. In that case there were three successive mortgages of the same property. Out of the consideration money for the third mortgage a sum was left with the third mortgagee for paying off the two earlier mortgages. The third mortgagee paid off the first mortgage but not the second. On a suit for sale by the second mortgagee it was held that the third mortgagee having redeemed the first mortgage was to that extent subrogated to the position of the first mortgagee and could claim priority. The learned Judge held that this was the correct view even before the amendment of the Transfer of Property Act in 1929 and was certainly the correct view if the law was governed by the new s. 92 as introduced by the amending Act of 1929. The learned Judges took the view that s. 92 had retrospective effect and that the case was governed by the first paragraph of s. 92. Apparently it was not argued that the third paragraph might be applicable. The third paragraph seems to apply to a person other than one of the persons referred to in s. 91, so it would not apply to a subsequent mortgagee; otherwise there would seem to be some conflict between the first and third paragraphs of that section.

For the respondents reliance has been placed upon the decision of a single Judge of this Court in Jaidevi Kuar v. Sripal Singh (9). In that case it was held that the rule against the subrogation of a mortgagor was extended to an incumbrancer who discharges the prior incum-

(3) 139 Ind. Cas. 64; 9 O W N 253; A I R 1932 Oudh 255; Ind Rul. (1932) Oudh 339.

(4) 138 Ind Cas. 206; 9 O W N 387; Ind Rul. (1932) Oudh 301; A I R 1933 Oudh 9.

(5) 129 Ind. Cas. 378; A I R 1930 All. 869; 14 R D 522; L R 11 A 241 Rev; Ind. Rul. (1931) All. 154; (1931) A L J 214.

(6) 139 Ind. Cas. 107; 54 A 897; (1932) A L J 627; A I R 1932 All. 459; Ind. Rul. (1932) All. 524 (F B).

(7) 29 C 154; 29 I A 9; 4 Bom. L R 238; 12 M L J 73; 6 C W N 209; 8 Sar. 217 (P C).

(8) 14 Ind. Cas. 496; 39 C 527; 9 A L J 332; 39 I A 68; 11 M L T 265; (1912) M W N 357; 14 Bom. L R 280; 16 C W N 505; 15 Cr. L J 411; 22 M L J 468 (P C).

(9) 147 Ind. Cas. 628; 11 O W N 139; 6 R O 281; A I R 1934 Oudh 129.

brance which he is, by contract express or implied, bound to discharge. A person cannot claim subrogation when he simply performs his own obligation or covenant. This view is supported by a ruling of the Privy Council in Jagmohan Das v. Jugal Kishore (10). The ruling of a Bench of this Court in Muhammad Raza v. Bilqis Jahan Begam (11), has also been cited for the respondents, but it does not appear to be in their favour. It was held that where a third mortgagee redeems the first mortgage then he would be subrogated to the position of the first mortgagee as against the second mortgagee. This appears to be directly in the appellant's favour. The case before us seems to be a case of legal subrogation and not conventional subrogation which is dealt with in para. 3 of the new s. 92.

Although there is no doubt some conflict of authority on this point, we think that the weight of authority is in favour of the appellant. We also agree with the view expressed in the Full Bench ruling of the Allahabad High Court mentioned above, Tota Ram v. Ram Lal (6), that even if s. 92 has no retrospective effect, nevertheless the rule laid down by the Legislature in s. 92 would be a safe guide to follow as laying down correctly the rule of justice, equity and good conscience for cases arising before the passing of the amending Act of 1929. As a matter of justice and equity we do not see why the intermediate mortgagee should get the benefit of the redemption of the prior mortgagee when he has paid nothing towards such redemption.

In our opinion, therefore, the appeal must succeed, so far as the defence raised by the defendant No. 6 is concerned.

The plea raised by defendant No. 9 stands on a different footing. Defendant No. 1 sold a certain plot on August 3, 1926, to defendant No. 8, the husband of defendant No. 9. On August 10, 1928, defendant No. 8 made a gift of this plot in favour of defendant No. 9. As the mortgage in suit was executed on January 31, 1927, it is clear that the plot mentioned did not belong to defendant No. 1 at the time when he executed the mortgage and therefore the mortgage in suit transferred no interest in this plot to the plaintiff. The mere fact that the plaintiff has discharged a prior incumbrance upon the plot seems to be immaterial. The plaintiff cannot claim any interest in the plot owned by defendant No. 9 on the basis of the mortgage deed in suit. We think that the view of the trial Court was correct in exempting this plot from the decree for sale.

We accordingly allow the appeal to this extent that we amend the decree by deleting the words : "The sale of Saresar shall be subject to the charge of Rs. 200 in favour of Shubrati Khan, defendant No. 6." In other respects the appeal is dismissed. Parties shall receive and pay costs of this appeal and of the Court below in proportion to success and failure.

N. Appeal allowed.

(10) 137 Ind Cas. 475 3 i C W N 4; A I R 1932 P C 99; 54 C L J 407; Ind. Rul (1932) P C 188; 36 L W 85 (P C).

(11) 149 Ind Cas. 84; 11 O W N 619; 6 R O 508; A I R 1934 Oudh 213.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Criminal Revision Petition No. 63 of 1935
March 6, 1935
JAMES, J.

RAM JANAM SINGH—COMPLAINANT—PETITIONER
versus
MOHAN LALL AHIR—RESPONDENT

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 448—Inhabited house—Delivery of possession — How to be made—Actual possession not delivered to purchaser—Forcible entry by purchaser—Whether amounts to criminal trespass

In order to effect delivery of possession of an inhabited house, it is necessary to eject the former occupier, delivery of possession of the house not being a mere formal act effected by beating a drum and putting up a notice. Where the certificate-debtor makes a forcible entry into the house, possession whereof has not actually be delivered to the purchaser, the former cannot be treated as having committed an act of criminal trespass.

Cr. R. P. from an order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Gaya, dated November 7, 1934, an application against which was rejected by the District Magistrate of Gaya, dated December 7, 1934.

Mr. Rajkishore Prasad, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Sarjoo Prasad, for the Opposite Party.

Judgment.—These proceedings arise out of the sale of a house in execution of a certificate issued under the Public Demands Recovery Act. The purchaser whose servant is the petitioner before the Court, obtained a writ of delivery of possession, which was taken by the Nazir of the Gaya Collectorate to the house on October 9, 1934. The certificate-debtors prayed for time to remove their property from the house; and they began to remove their property but remained in possession. On the following day they moved the Certificate Officer for time to remove their property from the house; and the Certificate Officer granted them three weeks' time for that purpose. On October 11, they filed a petition praying that the sale might be set aside under s. 29 of the Public Demands Recovery Act, which was entertained by the Certificate Officer, who then recalled his writ of delivery of possession. On the evening of the 12th the petitioner attended the Gaya Kotwali Police Station where it was stated that possession had been delivered to the purchaser on October 9, but that very early on the morning of the 12th, the certificate-debtors with a number of other men had forced an entrance to the house. A complaint to the same effect was made before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate on October 31. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate, after examining the complaint and reading the Police report, came to the conclusion that possession has not been actually delivered on October 9, and dismissed the complaint under s. 203 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. On application made to the District Magistrate, he declined to interfere with this order.

It is argued on behalf of the petitioner that possession was actually delivered on October 9, so that the making of a forcible entry on the night of the 12th amounted to criminal trespass, so as to bring the action of the accused persons within the provisions of s. 448 of the Indian Penal Code; but the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate has come to the conclusion that no delivery of possession had actually taken place; and this indeed would appear to be obvious. The Nazir may possibly have thought that delivery of possession of the house was a mere formal act effected by beating a drum and putting up a notice; but actually in order to effect delivery of possession of an inhabited house, it is necessary to eject the former occupier, and it appears to be clear that the accused persons had never taken actual possession of the house. On November 9, the Certificate Officer rejected the debtors' petition under s. 29 of the Public Demands Recovery Act and directed the writ of delivery of possession should reissue but on November 10, the Certificate Officer, noting that the Nazir had delivered possession on October 9, remarked that there was no need to reissue any further writs. Whatever the Nazir may have reported, it should have been obvious that possession had not actually been delivered to the purchaser and the writ which had been recalled should then have been reissued; but it is impossible in this case to treat the certificate-debtors as having committed an act of criminal trespass, and the order of the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate was correct.

This application must be dismissed.

N. Application dismissed.

OUDH CHIEF COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 27 of 1933

March 12, 1935

KING, C. J. AND NANAVUTTY, J.

HIRA LAL AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

Thakurain GAJRAJ KUER AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Deed—Construction—Lease—Taluqdar acknowledging perpetual occupancy rights—Use of expression 'naslan bad naslan'—Provision for payment of malikana dues to lessor and his heirs—Under-proprietary rights, if conferred on tenants.

At the time of the first regular settlement, the plaintiff's ancestors were found to have no under-proprietary rights and they were granted, by the Settlement Commissioner in a suit claiming such rights, merely a decree for tenancy rights for life. At the second regular settlement, the taluqdar granted a fresh lease in which it was mentioned that he acknowledged their "occupancy right, which was for life to be perpetual." The plaintiff's ancestors were to pay Government Revenue and sewai and malikana dues to the taluqdar and his heirs. He ended by saying that he executes a "perpetual lease" in favour of the persons mentioned and stated that "it behoves the lessees to remain in possession and occupation generation after generation 'naslan bad naslan' according to the conditions of this lease and pay rent to the estate and always remain obedient and loyal to the estate:"

Held, that there were no words which would indicate any clear intention for conferring a proprietary interest or a transferable interest, that the expression 'naslan bad naslan' was not conclusive on the point and that the mere fact that the lease was granted to the lessees and their heirs did not go further than showing that heritable rights were conferred:

Held, also that though the word "malikana" is not generally applied to the rent paid by an occupancy tenant but the mere use of this word is not sufficient to show that there was any intention of conferring under-proprietary rights, and that the taluqdar merely wished to grant to the lessees heritable occupancy rights in place of the occupancy rights for life which had previously been conferred upon them by the settlement decree and that there was no indication of any intention of going beyond this and converting their occupancy rights into the rights of under-proprietors. [p. 911, col. 2; p. 912, col. 1.]

[Case-law discussed.]

F. C. A. against the order of the Subordinate Judge of Partabgarh, dated December 12, 1932.

Messrs. H. Husain and P. N. Chaudhri, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Radha Krishna and Parmeshwuri Dayal, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This is a plaintiffs' appeal arising out of a suit for possession of a village named Ailahi. The plaintiffs claimed on the basis of a perpetual lease (Ex. 2) executed in favour of their predecessors by the taluqdar on July, 8. Their claim is that under the terms of that lease they acquired under-proprietary rights in the village. The defendants denied that the lease in question conferred anything more than heritable and non-transferable rights.

It is unnecessary for the purpose of this appeal to set forth the facts in any detail. The only question for our decision is whether the plaintiffs hold the village as under-proprietors or whether they hold it merely as perpetual lessees with heritable but non-transferable rights. The trial Court held against the plaintiffs on that point and that is the only question for our consideration.

The first point to consider is the decree passed in favour of the plaintiffs' ancestors at the time of the first regular settlement. Their ancestors claimed under-proprietary rights in the village. Their claim was opposed by the taluqdar and the Settlement Officer rejected their claim in toto. They appealed to the Settlement Commissioner who agreed that the plaintiffs in that suit had no under-proprietary rights but he modified the decree of the Settlement Officer by granting the plaintiffs a lease of the property for their joint lives at a rent of Rs. 201 per annum. This decree was passed on January 27, 1864.

It is perfectly clear therefore, that at that time the plaintiffs' ancestors were found to have no under-proprietary rights and they were merely granted a decree for tenancy rights for life.

At the second regular settlement the taluqdar granted a fresh lease (Ex. 2) on July 8, 1891, and the decision of the question before us turns upon the interpretation of that lease. The taluqdar starts by reciting the previous history and mentions that a Qabzadari decree for life had been passed in respect of the village of Sital Lal and Bisheshwar Lal by the Settlement Commissioner and that those persons are in possession and occupation under the terms of that decree. He goes on to say that as those persons are old servants and well-wishers of the estates, so now "we acknowledge that occupancy right, which was for life, to be perpetual." He goes on to exempt from the property leased certain specified plots measuring 110 bighas and he fixes the amount of rent which the lessees will have to pay. They have to pay Government Revenue and sewai and have to pay at the rate of 2 annas as malikana dues to the taluqdar himself and his heirs and the lessees and their heirs are permitted to appropriate the remaining six annas. The lessees have to provide for the pay of the chaukidar and the Patwari and for the village expenses. He ends up by saying that he executes a "perpetual lease" in favour of the persons mentioned and states that it behoves the lessees to remain in possession and occupation generation after generation "naslan bad naslan" according to the conditions of this lease and pay rent to the estate and always remain obedient and loyal to the estate.

It will be observed that there is nothing to show clearly any intention of conferring a transferable estate. The language is clearly clear on the point that heritable rights are conferred.

It has been argued by the learned Advocate for the appellants that the use of the expression "naslan bad naslan" connotes a heritable and transferable estate. For this proposition he relies upon the case of Karim Dad Khan v. Bibi Ghafuran (1). The learned Judges observed that the words "naslan bad naslan" have acquired a technical import in Indian conveyances. They refer to a decision of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the case of Thakur Harihar Bakhsh Singh v. Thakur Uma Prasad (2), in which their Lordships laid down that the words "naslan bad naslan" indicate an intention to confer absolute ownership.

The learned Advocate for the respondents seeks to distinguish this case on the ground that in the case cited, the learned Judges did not rely only upon the expression "naslan bad naslan" but also laid great stress upon another provision in the lease to the effect that the lessee should exercise all sorts of proprietary powers. These words were certainly of great importance as showing an intention of conferring a proprietary interest and when such an intention is clear, the words "naslan bad naslan" would unquestionably indicate that the proprietary interest was to be heritable and was not to be an estate for life only. The case of Binda Din Tewari v. Ram Harakh Dubey (3) has been cited in support of the same proposition but in that case it is clear that transferable rights had been given and the only question was whether the interest conferred was a life estate or a heritable estate. The words "naslan bad naslan" were no doubt conclusive on that point.

(1) 66 Ind. Cas. 110; 9 O L J 101 at p. 107; A I R 1922 Oudh 42.

(2) 14 C 296; 14 I A 7; 4 Sar. 766; 11 Ind. Jur. 196 (P C).

(3) 121 Ind. Cas. 95; 6 O W N 722; A I R 1929 Oudh 415; Ind. Rul. (1930) Oudh 47.

In the present case, however, we have no words which would indicate any intention for conferring a proprietary interest or a transferable interest. For the respondents, reliance has been placed upon a ruling of a learned Judge of the Judicial Commissioner's Court in Kalka Singh v. Suraj Bali Lal (4). That case was somewhat similar to the case before us and the language of the document which had to be interpreted in that case was more indicative of proprietary rights than the language of the document under consideration before us. In the ruling cited, the words "naslan bad naslan" were used, and over and above that expression it was provided that the granter was to have mutation made in favour of the grantee by getting his name recorded in the khana milkiat. There were certain other points which were stressed as showing an indication of conferring under-proprietary rights, such as the mention of malikana, but the learned Judge took the view that there was no intention of conferring anything more than the rights of a perpetual lessee and that no under-proprietary rights had been conferred. Another argument advanced for the appellants is that when a heritable estate is given, it should be presumed that the intention was to confer also a transferable estate. For this proposition the case of Sheo Bahadur Singh v. Bishunath Saran Singh (5), has been cited. There is no doubt an observation by one of the learned Judges at p. 42* to the effect that where a man is proved to have hereditary rights, and where there is nothing to show that they are non-transferable, they must be presumed to be transferable. In that case there was nothing to show that they were not transferable. In the case before us we think that there are indications that the estate was not meant to be transferable.

It has also been argued that the lease provides for payment of malikana dues to the lessor and to his heirs and that as the lessor would undoubtedly be entitled to transfer his estate and the transferee would be entitled to claim the malikana dues, therefore, the word "heirs" should be understood as including a transferee. If the word "heirs" includes a transferee in that context it is further argued that when the "heirs" of the lessees are spoken of, that term must also be held to include the transferees of the lessees. The argument is no doubt ingenious but we do not think that it is sound. The lessor as a full proprietor can no doubt transfer his estate and his transferee would be entitled to claim the malikana, but he would make his claim as a transferee under the rights conferred by the ordinary law and he would not base his claim on being an "heir" of the original lessor, within the meaning of the expression used in the deed of lease.

The mere fact that the lease is granted to the lessees and their heirs does not go further than showing that heritable rights are conferred.

It is also pointed out that the word "malikana" is more appropriate to the rent paid by an under-proprietor than to the rent paid by a tenant. It is true that the word "malikana" is not generally applied to the rent paid by an occupancy tenant but the mere use of this word is not sufficient to show that there was any intention of conferring under-proprietary rights. As regards the liability to pay for the chaukidar and the patwari, this was simply a matter of agreement between the lessor and the lessees and does not necessarily indicate that the lessees were to be considered under-proprietors.

The fact that no right of "re-entry" has been expressly reserved to the lessor has also been stressed by the appellants as showing the intention of conferring under-proprietary rights. We do not think that this argument is convincing because if the lessor intended to give only the rights of a perpetual lessee, the power of ejectment would be given by statute and there would be no need to include any special provision for ejectment in the terms of the lease.

For the respondents, it has been strongly argued that the lessor was clearly intending merely to extend the occupancy rights, which had previously been decreed only for the lifetime of the lessees, into heritable occupancy rights, and there was no intention of converting the occupancy rights into under-proprietary rights.

Taking the language of the document as a whole we agree with this view. The lessor referred to the decree passed at the time of the first regular settlement in which the plaintiffs' under-proprietary claims were expressly denied. We think that the taluqdar merely wished to grant to the lessees heritable occupancy rights in place of the occupancy rights for life which had previously been conferred upon them by the settlement decree. We find no indication of any intention of going beyond this and converting their occupancy rights into the rights of under-proprietors.

(4) 45 Ind. Cas. 208; 5 O L J 80.
(5) 99 Ind. Cas. 876; 4 O W N 15; L R 8 A (O) 48; A I R 1927 Oudh 74; 2 Luck. 4.

*Page of 4 O W N.—[Ed.].

In our opinion the Court below has taken the correct view and we dismiss the appeal with costs.

N. Appeal dismissed.

RANGOON HIGH COURT

Civil Miscellaneous Appeal No. 40 of 1934
April 6, 1934
MYA BU AND DUNKLEY, JJ.
MA FATI—APPELLANT
versus
KALIMUTHU AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXII, r. 7; O. XXIII—Petition for leave to compromise—Minor parties—Considerations before Court—Leave granted—Recording of compromise and passing of decree—Necessity of—Petition on behalf of guardian and on behalf of minors, indivisible — Compromise considered bad as regards minors—Effect on guardian—Remand—Point not considered by lower Court—Remand for considering it—Power of High Court to order.

When a petition for leave is filed under O. XXXII, r. 7, Civil Procedure Code, the Judge should consider whether the compromise is in the interests of the minors. If he is satisfied that it is for the benefit of the minors, then he must grant leave. If he is not so satisfied, he should refuse leave. If leave is granted, he has no option but to record the compromise and pass a decree in accordance with it. In deciding whether the petition of compromise is for the benefit of the minors, it will be open to the Court to make such alterations in the terms of the compromise agreed to by the parties, as it deems expedient. Kalavati v. Chedi Lal (1), Manohar Lal v. Jadu Nath Singh (2), Sakinabai v. Shrinibai (3), and Chandulal Kanahayalal v. Nagindas Bapubhai (5), referred to.

When the petition presented by a respondent on his own behalf and on behalf of minor respondents is an indivisible one, if the compromise is held bad in respect of the minors, it must be held to be bad so far as the other respondent also is concerned.

The High Court has ample power to make a remand in order that a point which has not been considered by the lower Court, may be considered by it. Ghuznavi v. Allahabad Bank, Ltd. (6), referred to.

M. C. A. against the order of the District Court of Thaton, dated November 23, 1933, in Civil Regular No. 4 of 1929.

Mr. K. C. Bose, for the Appellant.

Mr. Thein Maung, for the Respondents.

Dunkley, J.—This appeal arises in connection with a suit for administration of the estate of N. A. R. Arunachellam Chettyar, deceased, of Thaton. By a preliminary administration decree of this Court on appeal his estate is to be administered in accordance with the provisions of his will, the provisions of which are in effect that the present appellant, Ma Fati, shall obtain two-thirds of the estate, and his adopted daughter, Ma Fatima, shall obtain the remaining one-third, but this one-third shall be subject to certain specific legacies in favour of the wives of the deceased, Ma Fatima is now dead. The 1st respondent, Kalimuthu, is the husband of Ma Fatima, and the 2nd and 3rd respondents are their minor children, and in the present litigation, the 1st respondent is acting as their guardian ad litem. The other respondents are the persons, or the legal representatives of the persons, who are to obtain the specific legacies.

After the preliminary administration decree had been passed by this Court, the case was remitted to the District Court of Thaton to make the necessary enquiries as to the properties comprised in the estate and to pass a final decree. On November 4, 1933, the appellant and the 1st respondent filed a petition of compromise in the District Court and asked that a final decree should be passed in accordance with the terms of that petition. The 1st respondent, at the same time, by a separate petition asked for leave to compromise the suit on behalf of the 2nd and 3rd respondents. The other respondents were served with notices of this petition and raised no objection to the compromise provided that their rights to their specific legacies were safeguarded, save that the 4th respondent, Ma Pwe, denied that she had received her specific legacy of Rs. 7,000. By his order dated November 17, 1933, the learned District Judge held that he could not pass a decree on this compromise petition for the following reasons, namely, (1) that certain conditions were imposed by the other respondents; (2) that Ma Pwe claimed that her legacy had not yet been paid; (3) that the parties had entirely ignored the question of giving remuneration to the Receiver appointed under the District Court's order of August 23, and (4) and that the parties had made no mention in the petition of the question of paying the additional court-fees that might ultimately be found to be due. He thereupon ordered the parties to file a fresh petition remedying these defects and gave time for this purpose up to November 23, 1933. On November 23, 1933, a fresh petition was not filed and he "dismissed" the petition of November 4. His action was misconceived. This was an agreement between the appellant and the first three respondents for adjustment of the suit so far as they were concerned, that is, for adjustment of the suit in part. It was plainly a lawful compromise, and, consequently, all that the learned District Judge could do was, under the provision of O. XXIII, r. 3, of the Code of Civil Procedure, to record the compromise and pass a decree in accordance therewith; subject to one condition that, so far as the two minor respondents were concerned, the leave of the Court was first obtained by the first respondent to enter into the compromise on their behalf, under the provisions of O. XXXII, r. 7, of the Code of Civil Procedure. A petition for such leave was filed by the first respondent, and on this petition the Court should have considered whether the compromise was or was not in the interests of the minors. See Kalavati v. Chedi Lal (1), Manohar Lal v. Jadu Nath Singh (2) and Sakinabai v. Shrinibai (3). If he was satisfied that the petition of compromise was for the benefit of the minors, then he should have granted leave; if he was not so satisfied, he should have refused leave; and if leave was granted, then he had no option but to record the compromise and to pass a decree in accordance therewith. Such a decree would be binding upon the appellant and the first three respondents, but not upon the other respondents. It would then be for the learned District Judge to settle what should be done in regard to the claims of the other respondents and to pass a further decree in regard to their claim. This appeal has been filed against the order refusing to record this compromise. It has been strenuously opposed on behalf of the first three respondents, who have resiled from their original position as parties to the petition. It has not been opposed by the other respondents.

There are two terms, inter alia, of the compromise petition which have been mainly attacked now, namely, first that the Receiver, who had charge of the estate of the deceased, should be discharged forthwith and, secondly, that two proceedings, which had been initiated by the appellant and were pending in the High Court, should be dismissed without costs.

As regards the term for the discharge of the Receiver, it is contended that all the respondents are interested in the Receiver remaining in charge of the estate, and that this term of the petition, which relates to the discharge of the Receiver, was incapable of being carried into effect without the consent of all the respondents. In our opinion this contention is not correct. The 4th to 7th respondents are not interested in the corpus of the estate. They have to get only a money payment from the first three respondents, and this they can do by the attachment and sale of any part of the properties which may fall to the share of the first three respondents.

In regard to the clause of the petition respecting the pending proceedings in the High Court, it is contended that the principle of election is applicable, and that the appellant having made her election is now precluded from prosecuting the petition of compromise. Reference has been made to the case of Mangal Rai v. Duli Chand (4). It is urged that there were two courses open to the appellant, that is, either to stand by the terms of the agreement of compromise and, therefore, withdraw the pending proceedings in the High Court, or to proceed further with the cases in the High Court, and that in the event of her electing to pursue the latter course, she must be debarred from pursuing the agreement, and because she did continue the proceedings in the High Court after the petition of compromise had been filed in the District Court, it is now urged that she is debarred from pursuing the petition of compromise further. In our opinion, this is not a case of election at all. The appellant could not be called upon to withdraw the proceedings pending in the High Court until a decree on the compromise petition had been passed by the District Court, and no such decree has ever been passed, and consequently, there was no reason why the appellant should not prosecute the pending cases in the High Court. Moreover, in any event, there is no question of the with-

(1) 17 A 531; A W N 1895, 126.
(2) 28 A 585; 33 I A 128; 3 A L J 710; 9 C C 219; 1 C L J 8; 8 Bom. L R 489; 10 C W N 898; 16 M L J 291; 1 M L T 210 (P C).
(3) 55 Ind. Cas. 943; 47 I A 18; A I R 1920 P C 60; 11 L W 486; 38 M L J 431; (1920) M W N 31; 18 A L J 499; 22 Bom. L R 552; 2 U P L R P C 107 (P C).
(4) 147 Ind. Cas. 932; A I R 1933 All. 579; 55 A 735; (1933) A L J 1488; 6 R A 591.

drawal of these cases under the petition of compromise. What the petition states is that the two cases pending in the High Court should be dismissed without costs, and if a decree had been passed by the District Court by consent, then the respondents themselves could at any time obtain the dismissal without costs of the pending proceedings in the High Court merely by taking the course of producing in this Court a copy of the consent decree of the District Court, which would embody this particular term.

The only point, which was really before the learned District Judge on the petition of November 4, was whether the compromise was for the benefit of the minors, and, therefore, whether leave, under r. 7, of O. XXXII of the Code of Civil Procedure, should be given to the 1st respondent, to compromise the suit on their behalf. Obviously the mind of the learned District Judge was never applied to this point, and it is plain, therefore, that the matter must be remanded to the District Court to allow the learned Judge to consider the matter in its true perspective and come to a decision as to whether leave to compromise on behalf of the minors should be granted to the 1st respondent or not. Let us add that in so deciding whether the petition of compromise is for the benefit of the minors, it will be open to the Court to make such alterations in the terms of the compromise, agreed to by the parties, as it deems expedient. See on this point Chandulal Kanhayalal v. Nagindas Bapubhai (5). Although a remand such as we propose to make is not strictly covered by the provisions of O. XLI, r. 23 of the Code of Civil Procedure, yet we consider that we have ample power to make a remand in order that a point, which has not been considered by the learned District Judge, may be considered by him. Ghuznavi v. Allahabad Bank Ltd. (6).

A further point, which has been raised in argument on behalf of the first three respondents, is that, when a guardian ad litem has made an application for leave to compromise the suit on behalf of the minors, he can withdraw such application at any time before the leave has been granted, and on this point the case of Ranga Rao v. Rajagopala Raju (7) is cited. That case is not on all fours with the circumstances of the present case, as in the case no petition asking for the leave of the Court to compromise the suit was ever filed by the guardian ad litem. In our opinion, that makes all the difference to the matter. But, be that as it may, in the present case the 1st respondent had never at any time made an application to the Court for the withdrawal of his petition for leave, and that petition still stands, and no order has yet been passed upon it.

It is further urged on behalf of the respondents that the petition of compromise is joint in regard to the first three respondents and grants to them a joint estate; that the compromise is indivisible so far as they are concerned; and that, therefore, if it is had to be bad so far as the minors are concerned, it must also be held to be bad so far as the 1st respondent, Kalimuthu, is concerned. We consider that this contention is well founded, for it is plain that it would be useless to pass a decree on this compromise petition against the 1st respondent only, he being one of the three legal representatives of the deceased Ma Fatima.

It is also contended that because the petition is silent in regard to the payment of additional court-fees, which may be found to be payable, and in regard to the Receiver's remuneration, and because it states (in para. 2) that the specific legacy of the 4th respondent Ma Pwe, has been paid, whereas Ma Pwe denies this (these being the points which were raised by the learned District Judge in his order of November 17, 1933), the compromise cannot be for the benefit of the minors. It is urged that the fact of the discharge of the obligation to Ma Pwe is an integral part of the petition, and that the circumstances of the petition are entirely altered in the face of Ma Pwe's assertion that her claim has not yet been paid. We must leave these points to the decision of the learned District Judge. It may be that, before granting leave under O. XXXII, r. 7, of the Code of Civil Procedure, he will deem it necessary to enquire whether Ma Pwe's claim has been satisfied or not, and it may be that he will find it necessary to add something to the terms of the compromise in regard to these three points, or it may be that he will hold that these points are fatal to the petition so far as the minors are concerned. These are points, which, amongst others, he will have to consider in deciding whether leave should be granted to compromise the suit on behalf of the 2nd and 3rd respondents.

(5) 119 Ind. Cas. 663; A I R 1929 Bom. 350; 31 Bom. L R 621; Ind. Rul. (1929) Bom. 535.
(6) 41 Ind Cas. 598; A I R 1917 Cal. 44; 44 C 929; 21 C W N 877; 26 Cr. L J 49.
(7) 22 M 378.

In the result, the order of the learned District Judge of November 23, 1933, "dismissing" the petition of the appellant and the first three respondents, dated November 4, 1933, for compromise of the suit so far as they are concerned, is set aside, and the case is remanded to the District Court in order that the learned District Judge may consider whether, under the provisions of O. XXXII, r. 7, of the Code of Civil Procedure, he ought to grant leave to the 1st respondent to enter into a compromise of the suit on the terms as stated in the petition, or on such other terms as he may decide on behalf of the 2nd and 3rd respondents, and if he does so decide to grant leave, to pass a decree in accordance with the terms of the compromise.

The appellant is entitled, as against the first three respondents, to the costs of this appeal, advocate's fee, ten gold mohurs.

Mya Bu, J.—I agree.

N. Petition dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 259 of 1932
August 6, 1934
MITTER, J.

MAHAMMAD MIA PANDIT AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

OSMAN ALI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 104 (2), 96 (3), O. XXIII, r. 3, O. XXXII, r. 7—Second appeal from order recording disputed compromise, whether lies—Decree on compromise is consent decree—Agreement to refer dispute to third party, whether amounts to undertaking not to appeal—Suit pending—Reference made without Court's permission—Award, if a compromise—Next friend entering into compromise without Court's permission—Same next friend representing minor in appeal—Compromise will not be set aside—Arbitration—Decision of third person, on question involving judicial and quasi-judicial work, is an award.

No second appeal lies from an order recording a compromise when the factum or legality of the compromise is questioned. [p. 916, col. 1]

Where there is a compromise, a decree passed thereon, whether the compromise is admitted by both parties or disputed by one of them, is still a consent decree. [p. 916, col. 2.]

Where the parties say that the determination of their disputes by a person is to be final as between them, that is to be regarded as an undertaking not to appeal, and an appeal preferred would be in violation of good faith and ought not to be entertained where the real merits of the case have been withdrawn from the Court. Moonshee Amir Ali v. Maharanee Inderjeet Singh (1), followed. [ibid]

An award made on a reference without the intervention of the Court during the pendency of a suit cannot be recorded as a compromise or adjustment of the suit under O. XXIII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code. [p. 917, col. 2.]

A decision, on a reference by parties of a question involving some judicial or quasi-judicial work, is an award. Khobhari Sah v. Jhaman (11), distinguished. [p. 918, col. 1.]

Obiter.—A compromise effected by the next friend without the Court's permission as required by O. XXXII, r. 7, Civil Procedure Code, will not be set aside in appeal, if the minor happens to be represented in the appeal by the same next friend.

C. A. against the decree of the Sub-Judge, Second Additional Court, Noakhali, dated August 13, 1931.

Messrs. Mohendra Kumar Ghose, Mahendra Nath Mitter and Nakuleswar Som, for the Appellants.

Mr. Bhagirath Chandra Das, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal is on behalf of the plaintiffs and arises out of a suit for possession. There are seven plaintiffs. Of them plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 are adult males, Nos. 3, 4 and 7 are ladies and Nos. 5 and 6 are minors. The minors were represented in the Courts below by plaintiff No. 1, who also represents them in this appeal. At the instance of plaintiffs there was a local investigation by a Pleader Commissioner who submitted a report in their favour. The defendants filed an objection to the said report. At the date of the hearing of the suit, which was August 15, 1930, defendant No. 2 filed an application stating that the parties had agreed to the lands being measured by one Shama Charan and that if it was found by him that the lands in suit were in possession of the defendants, the plaintiffs would get a decree, otherwise the suit would stand dismissed, but the plaintiffs would be entitled to get Rs. 50 from the defendants. The said defendant further alleged that Shama Charan had measured the lands and had found that no part of the lands in suit was in the possession of the defendants. He accordingly prayed for the said adjustment to be recorded under the provisions of O. XXIII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code. The plaintiffs denied the said agreement, but the learned Munsif after taking evidence found that the agreement was alleged by defendant No. 2 and dismissed the suit on the findings of Shama Charan. The attention of the Court does not seem to have been drawn to the fact that some of the plaintiffs were minors. Admittedly no leave of the Court was taken under r. 7, O. XXXII of the Code. O appeal from the decree made by the tria

Court, the point urged by the plaintiff, as the Appellate Court puts it, was

"whether the suit was adjusted between the parties out of Court and whether the compromise should be recorded"

The Court of appeal below, however, only applied its mind to the question of the factum of the agreement but did not consider whether the alleged compromise was lawful or could be recorded under the provisions of O. XXIII, r. 3 of the Code. It did not even advert to the fact that there were minors whose interest it was the duty of the Court to safeguard and protect. The Appellate Court agreed with the first Court and remarked that the "Munsif was justified in recording the compromise under O. XXIII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code."

The appeal was accordingly dismissed hence the second appeal by the plaintiffs. A preliminary objection has been taken to the competency of the appeal. Mr. Dass who appears on behalf of the respondents urges, firstly, that the appeal being really against the order recording the compromise under O. XXIII, r. 3, a second appeal is barred under the provisions of s. 104 (2) of the Code. Secondly, he urges that even if the appeal be regarded as an appeal from the decree, after the findings of the Court of appeal below, the decree must be taken to be a decree passed with consent of parties and s. 96 (3) of the Code, bars the appeal. In the course of the argument I indicated that possibly the preliminary objection was a sound one. On that the Advocate for the appellant asked me to interfere in revision in case I held that no appeal lay. As I considered that the case was a fit one for interference under the revisional jurisdicton I heard the learned Advocates at length who presented their cases from all aspects and I must acknowledge the great assistance I have derived from them in the case which has engaged my anxious consideration. After having heard the learned Advocates I have come to the conclusion, though not without hesitation, that no appeal lies. But I am at the same time quite convinced that I have power to interfere in revision and should so interfere in this case.

My reasons for giving effect to the preliminary objection are as follows: (1) The Code provides for one appeal when the factum of legality of a compromise of adjustment of a suit is questioned. The Court of appeal below has arrived at a finding that there was a compromise as pleaded by defendant No. 2. To allow the same matter to be re-agitated in an appeal from the appellate decree would be to allow two appeals when the Code gives one. (2) A decree passed is still a decree passed by consent, whether the compromise is admitted by both the parties or disputed by one of them and the Court finds that there was one. (3) Where the parties say that the determination of their disputes by a person is to be final as between them, that is to be regarded as an undertaking not to appeal, and an appeal preferred would, as James, L. J., observed in Moonshee Amir Ali v. Maharanee Inderjit Singh (1), be in violation of good faith and ought not to be entertained where the real merits of the case have been withdrawn from the Court. The same principle has been formulated though in different language by Rampini and Pratt, JJ., in Bahir Das v. Nobin Chandra (2) where they observe that parties 'are equitably estopped' from resiling from and impugning the decree which was given by the Court in accordance with the finding on the issue which they agreed to refer to the decision of a third person. In Dwarka Nath Chakrabarti v. Atul Chandra Chakrabarti (3) there is an observation which apparently seems to militate against the view I am taking but an examination of the case leads me to think that the point which I have been called upon to decide did not really arise in that case. The observation is of Roy, J. and occurs at p. 356*. It is as follows:

"Certain preliminary objections were taken by the learned Vakil for the respondents. They are not serious: one was that no appeal lay from a decree which is based on a compromise The contention of the plaintiff is that the whole compromise has been struck out. The dispute is over the nature of the compromise and the plaintiff has the right to show what the compromise was."

I must, first of all, remarkthat the said case came up on first appeal to this Court, but I am not placing much importance on the said fact for distin guishing the said case. From the report it appears that the plaintiff claimed a share in two villages appertaining to Touzi No. 1760/28. The contesting defendants denied the title of the vendor of the plaintiff and the vendor challenged his conveyances to the plaintiff. Issues were framed and the plaintiff was being examined on commission. At that stage a petition of compromise was presented to the

(1) 14 M I A 20?; 9 B L R 460; 2 Suther 479; 2 Sar. 731; 20 W R P C 25.
(2) 29 C 306; 6 C W N 121.
(3) 106 Ind. Cas. 509; A I R 1928 Cal. 108; 46 C L J 353.

*Page of 46 C L J.—[Ed.]

Commissioner. By the compromise the plaintiff gave up his claim on the basis of his purchase; the said two villages were to be partitioned between the plaintiff and his co sharers (not parties to the suit) on the one hand and the defendants on the other according to the shares recorded in the Record of Rights by an arbitrator Sarat Chandra Bhattacharjee and that after the division by him the plaintiff was to withdraw the suit.

No order was obtained from the Court for appointing Sarat Chandra as arbitrator. Sarat Chandra later on refused to act and on the application of the plaintiff the Subordinate Judge appointed another person as arbitrator under the provisions of para. 5, Sch. II, Civil Procedure Code. This person made the division and submitted an award and inspite of the objection of the defendants that there was no reference to arbitration under para. 2 of the said schedule the Subordinate Judge made a decree in conformity with the award. His successor, however, deleted the so-called award from the decree and the final decree that was made was one simply allowing the suit to be withdrawn without liberty to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit. It was pointed out by this Court that the compromise between the parties was not simply that the suit was to be withdrawn but was to be withdrawn on the happening of certain contingencies i. e., th division of the lands by Sarat Chandra. The final decree, therefore, was one that was not passed in accordance with the consent of the parties and hence s. 96 (3) was out of the way. The question raised before me has, however, been considered by the Lahore High Court in Guru Charan Singh v. Shib lev Singh (4). The said Court held in circumstances somewhat similar to the present case that the appeal was incompetent and I agree with the said judgment. But as I have said before, my decision on the preliminary point does not dispose of the case. I am still to see if the Courts below had jurisdiction to pass an order under O. XXIII, r. 3 of the Code.

My view is that the agreement which both the Courts below have found to be established amounts to a reference to arbitration without the intervention of the Court of the subject-matter of a pending suit and the decision of Shama Charan really amounts to an award on such a reference. Mr. Dass who appears for the respondent has contended before me that the decision of Shama Charan does not amount to an award but is to be considered as an adjustment of the suit which the Courts below have rightly recorded under O. XXIII, r. 3 and in support of his contention he has referred me to the cases of Himanchal Singh v. Jatwar Singh (5) and Basdeo Singh v. Ram Raj Singh (6). Before I examine these cases I may observe that so far as our Court is concerned it is now settled law that an award made on a reference without the intervention of the Court during the pendency of a suit cannot be recorded as a compromise or adjustment of the suit under O. XXIII, r. 3. The Bombay, Madras, Patna and Rangoon High Courts have, however, taken a different view. The divergence of opinion is due to the different interpretation put upon the words "any other law for the time being in force" occurring in s. 89 of the Code. [See the cases collected in Rohini Kanta v. Rajani Kanta (7), as also Ramadhar Rai v. Subedar (8), and Laljee Jesang v. Chandra Bhan (9)] I am bound to follow the course of decisions of our Court and if the decision of Shama Charan is an award the Courts below had no jurisdiction to record the decision of Shama Charan as an adjustment of the suit under O. XXIII, r. 3.

This leads to the question whether the said decision is an award. The cases of the Allahabad High Court cited by Mr. Dass are distinguishable. In those cases the parties to the suit agreed to be bound by the statement of a person named by them. The nominee made a certain statement and the question raised was whether the suit could be disposed of in accordance with the statement so made. Suleman and Kanhaiyalal, JJ., base their decision, firstly, on s. 20, Evidence Act, and secondly, on the judgment of the Madras High Court in Chinna v. Venkataswami (10). The Madras case proceeds on the view that an award in a pending case made by an arbitrator appointed without the intervention of the Court can be

(4) 66 Ind. Cas. 258; A I R 1922 Lah. 309; 3 Lah. 175.

(5) 80 Ind. Cas. 16; A I R 1924 All. 570; 46 A 710.

(6) 137 Ind. Cas. 263; A I R 1932 All 166; (1932) A L J 71; Ind. Rul (1932) All. 291.

(7) 151 Ind. Cas. 661; A I R 1934 Cal. 613.

(8) 133 Ind. Cas 82; A I R 1931 Pat. 205; 11 Pat. 237; Ind. Rul (1932) Pat. 173; 13 P L T 431

(9) 134 Ind. Cas. 57; A I R 1931 Rang. 58; 9 R 39; Ind. Rul (1931) Rang. 121.

(10) 51 Ind. Cas. 827; A I R 1920 Mad. 800, 42 M 625; 36 M L J 291; (1919) M W N 221; 25 M L T 397.

recorded under O. XXIII, r. 3, a view which as I have said is against the decisions of our Court, and s. 20, Evidence Act, cannot have any possible application to the case before me. Nor does the case of Khobhari Sah v. Jhaman (11), support the contention of the respondent. There no judicial or quasi-judicial work had to be done by the person nominated who was only to see with his own eyes a certain state of things, e. g., existence of furnace, bellows, etc., in the defendant's house and make a statement in Court. I hold that Shama Charan had to do some work which was in the nature of judicial work and that his determination is an award and that the Courts below had no jurisdiction to pass a decree which is in accordance with the decision of Shama Charan under the colour of exercising the powers under O. XXIII, r. 3. In the view I have taken it is not necessary to consider the other contentions raised by the appellants. If I had held that the case came under O. XXIII, r. 3, I would not have set aside the decree of the Courts below so far as the minors are concerned seeing that they are appearing even in this Court by plaintiff No. 1 as their next friend but would have made the same reservations in their favour as were made by the Acting Chief Justice in Golnur Bibi v. Abdus Samad (12). The result is that the appeal is dismissed, but the decrees of the Courts below are set aside and the learned Munsif is directed to proceed with the suit. I make no order as to costs.

D. Decree set aside.

(11) 34 Ind. Cas 220; A I R 1917 Cal. 327; 23 C L J 482.

(12) 130 Ind. Cas. 209; A I R 1931 Cal. 211; 58 C 628; 52 C L J 298; 35 C W N 238.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 302 of 1932

January 15, 1934

WORT AND FAZL ALI, JJ.

RADHA MOHAN—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat WAHIDAN—RESPONDENT

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 73, 64, O. XXI, r. 55—Assets in s. 73, meaning of—Assets not held by Court—Decree-holder, if entitled to rateable distribution—Two decrees against same judgment-debtor—Attachment of property in execution of first decree—Private sale of property by judgment-debtor—Application for rateable distribution—Purchaser depositing decretal amount with consent of decree-holder—Release of property from attachment—Legality of—Waiver by decree-holder.

A fund or a sum of money cannot be regarded as assets unless it is in some sense the property of the judgment-debtor and can therefore be legitimately applied to the payment of his debt. Any money which belongs to a stranger or any money paid into Court by a third party under a misapprehension cannot be described as assets. When no assets are held by the Court the holder of the second decree is not entitled to rateable distribution. [p. 925, col. 2.]

The decree-holder had two decrees against the same judgment-debtor. In pursuance of execution of first decree, a property of the judgment debtor was attached Before the sale, the judgment-debtor sold the property. In execution of the second decree, the decree-holder applied for rateable distribution of the assets in the first execution proceedings. The purchaser of the property with the consent of the decree-holder deposited the decretal amount and costs in the first execution case and the property was released from attachment. The execution case was struck out on full satisfaction. To this the decree-holder objected contending that the order striking out the execution case was wrong in law and that as he had applied for rateable distribution, the sum deposited should be rateably distributed between the two execution cases in which he was the decree-holder and that the sum if so rateably distributed would be in part satisfaction of the decrees and he was entitled to have the property sold in execution:

Held, that as the decree-holder had consented to the deposit and by his conduct he must be deemed to have waived the benefit of s. 64, Civil Procedure Code, the attachment of the property must be necessarily deemed to have terminated and the private sale by the judgment-debtor must be held to be valid. [p. 926, col. 1]

C. A. from an order of the District Judge, Gaya, dated August 12, 1932.

Appellant in person.

Messrs. K. Husnain and H. R. Kazimi, for the Respondent.

Wort, J.—The matters before us are first a Rule directed against an order of the Munsif allowing the decree-holder, named Radha Mohan, rateable distribution of assets and secondly, an appeal from the order of the District Judge confirming the decision of the Munsif to the effect that a certain attachment was not subsisting and that the execution case should be dismissed on part satisfaction. To understand the matters it is necessary to state the facts.

The decree-holder Radha Mohan, who in this case appears in person and has argued his case in great detail, obtained a decree and took out certain execution proceedings which were known in this case as Execution Case No. 1472 of 1930. Sometime after the execution proceedings, which I have just mentioned, had been started the same Radha Mohan obtained another decree against the same judgment-debtor in the Court of the Munsif of Allahabad. This was on April 15, 1931. Other execution proceedings were taken out known as Execution Case No. 578 of 1931.

In the meantime, on December 17, 1930, in pursuance of Execution Case No. 1472 a house, the property of the judgment-debtor, situate on the Club Road, Gaya, was attached. There were certain proceedings in the Execution Case No. 1472 which I shall hereinafter refer to as the first execution case which it is unnecessary to refer to in detail. The sale of the house attached was fixed for May 16, 1931. In the meantime two important events happened. One was, as early as January 29, 1931, that is, about a little over a month after the house in Gaya had been attached. The same house was sold to Musammat Wahidan, petitioner in the application in revision and respondent in the appeal before us. Again just prior to the date which was fixed for the sale the decree-holder applied for rateable distribution of the assets in Court resulting from the first execution case. This was on May 11, 1931. An order was made on this application of May 11, that the matter would be considered when the assets came into the hands of the Court.

It is to be noted that, first, the sale to the lady of the attached property was subsequent to the attachment and, secondly, the application for rateable distribution was made also subsequent to the attachment, that is to say, some five months afterwards, on May 11, 1931. On May 13, some three days before the date of the sale, the lady by her Advocate petitioned the Court to accept the decretal amount and costs in the first execution case and to have the property released from attachment. She stated that she had purchased the property and for that reason she desired to deposit the sum named. By his Advocate the decree-holder agreed to this course subject to a payment also of certain costs in a miscellaneous case with which we are not concerned. This was agreed to and these costs were to be ascertained. On May 14, in the presence of the decree-holder's Advocate it was discovered that no costs had been incurred. Therefore on May 16, on the date of the sale, again in the presence of the Advocate of the decree-holder the decretal amount with the costs relating thereto were paid into Court and the execution case struck out on full satisfaction and the attachment released. The sum paid into Court was about Rs. 1,957, but nothing turns on that, excepting to emphasise the fact that this was the full amount under the first decree in the first execution case. Now, the substance of the argument of the appellants is that the Judge in making that order striking out the execution case was wrong in law. Indeed he goes so far as to say that it was without jurisdiction. His contention is that as he had applied for rateable distribution, the sum of Rs. 1,957 was the sum which should be rateably distributed between the two execution cases in which he was the decree-holder and that the sum of Rs. 1,957 if so rateably distributed would be in part satisfaction only of the decrees. The Judge was therefore wrong in making the order that the first decree was fully satisfied.

On behalf of the respondent in the appeal, who is the applicant supporting the Rule in the revision case, it is contended in short that whatever may be the rights of the decree-holder, he, having consented to the order of May 16, 1931, is bound by it. The sale to the Musammat was thus confirmed. Consequently the attachment ceased by reason of the operation of O. XXI, r. 55; being the property of a person other than the judgment-debtor it can neither be attached nor sold. The matter raises a number of questions under s. 64, Civil Procedure Code, s. 73 and O. XXI, r. 55. Section 64, Civil Procedure Code provides:

"that any private transfer or delivery of the property attached or of any interest therein and any payment to the judgment-debtor of any debt, dividend, etc, shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment."

The explanation states that included in claims enforceable under an attachment are claims for the rateable distribution of assets. Mr. Radha Mohan contends that the sale to the lady in January 1931, being after the attachment, was void and that when by his Pleader in the execution case he consented to the payment into Court by the purchaser, the lady, he was not waiving his rights under the second order under s. 73 of the Code, entitling him to rateable distribution. Section 73 provides:

"Where assets are held by a Court and more persons than one have, before the receipt of such assets, made application to the Court for the execution of decrees for the payment of money passed against the same judgment-debtor and have not obtained satisfaction thereof, the assets, after deducting the costs of realization, shall be rateably distributed among all such persons."

From the circumstances of the case, on the face of it, it would appear that in his capacity as the judgment-creditor in the second execution case the conditions of s. 73 have been complied with, with one possible exception. It was faintly argued by Mr. Khurshed Husnain on behalf of the respondents in the appeal that the words "and more persons than one" are to be construed strictly; as the decree-holder in the two execution cases in the case before us was the same person, that part of the section is not complied with. There is some authority for this view, but I would hesitate before deciding in favour of this very technical construction of the section. Two authorities have been relied upon in support of the case of the Musammat. One is the case before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council: Mina Kumari Bibi v. Bejoy Singh (1), the other being a Full Bench decision in Madras: Annamalai Chettiar v. Palamalai Pillai (2). Before dealing with these decisions it would be as well to analyse the position in which the decree-holder found himself. It is possible on the authorities to take a contrary view, but it is difficult to understand the argument of the appellant that he was by law forced to accept the proposal of the Musammat, made by her petition of May 13, that she being the purchaser should be allowed to pay the decretal amount into Court. To hold that view would appear to me on the face of it to have the effect of repealing s. 64, Civil Procedure Code, as her only interest was her doubtful title to the property by her purchase of January of the same year. I can hardly take a view other than that in January, on the date of the purchase, it was a transfer contrary to the attachment within the meaning of s. 64, although I am aware of the provision of O. XXI, r. 55, which appears to be sufficiently wide to allow the payment under the order to be made by persons other than the judgment-debtor. But the case, it seems to me, cannot be determined on this point.

In continuation of this part of the argument, however, reference may be made to O. XXI, r. 69. Then again I find difficulty in holding that the decree-holder would not be entitled to call upon the purchaser to pay the full amount of the purchase money into Court (see O. XXI, r. 83), as this was a sale by the judgment-debtor to a private purchaser. On this point I feel quite satisfied that in law the decree-holder was not bound to accept as a payment into Court a part of the consideration for the sale to the Musammat, and not the whole. This seems to me to be the position on May 13 when the lady came forward offering to pay the decretal amount and costs in satisfaction of the decree. There are a number of points of view from which one can approach the point in dispute in this case, but from whatever point of view the matter is approached, the answer, in my judgment, seems to be the same. The question substantially is—what was the effect of the decree-holder consenting to the order which was finally made on May 16, 1931? As I have already stated, Mr. Radha Mohan argues that Rs. 1,957 was an asset which by reason of his application in the latter execution case was distributable between the two decrees, and in furtherance of this argument his contention at one stage of the case was that the expression "charges" in O. XXI, r. 55, was to be construed as meaning any subsequent claim which was enforceable under the attachment, that is to say, in this case the decretal amount which was the subject-matter of the second execution case; and that without payment of this sum by the Musammat the Judge had no jurisdiction to strike out the execution case as fully satisfied.

It will be seen by mentioning this argument that I have already stated that from whatever point of view one approaches the case one comes back to the same point—what was the effect of the decree-holder's agreement to accept the first decretal amount plus the costs in the miscellaneous case? In other words, how can it be said that the larger sum should have been paid into Court when a decree-holder, being the same person in the first execution case as in the application for distribution of assets, agreed that that amount should be paid by the Musammat. The case of Annamalai Chettiar v. Palamalai Pillai (2), it has been argued, concludes the matter, and it would appear from one point of view that the matter decided there was the very same question which we have to determine. The question referred to the Full Bench was:

"whether non-attaching decree-holders who have applied for rateable distribution under a subsisting attachment which has since been raised by the satisfaction of the decree or otherwise, are entitled to question a private alienation made during the continuance of such attachment"

It will be seen, as I have said, that in this question is included the point we have to determine. But again it will be seen that the question submitted to the Full Bench contemplated a non-attaching decree-holder who was a person different from the decree-holder who had attached the property and that of course makes a vast difference and again brings us to the very same point which I have already repeated more than once. If the Full Bench decision is an answer to the question—the answer being that a non-attaching decree-holder cannot question a private alienation—how much more must it be said that a non-attaching decree-holder who has agreed to a private alienation in his capacity of a decree holder in another execution case is bound by his own agreement. The facts in the Madras case were these. The judgment-debtor who was the 29th defendant in the case was indebted and had a large number of decrees against him. The case was concerned with some of these decrees only. He executed a sale-deed, dated June 15, 1910. An application was subsequently made for attachment when the plaintiff who was the purchaser under the private sale objected. Having a decision against him, he commenced the suit.

(1) 40 Ind. Cas. 242; A I R 1916 P C 238; 44 I A 72; 44 C 662; 1 P L W 425; 5 L W 511; 32 M L J 425; 21 C W N 585; 21 M L T 341; 15 A L J 382; 25 C L J 508; 19 Bom. L R 424; (1917) M W N 475 (P C).

(2) 43 Ind Cas. 539; A I R 1918 Mad. 127; 41 M 265; 22 M L T 461; 33 M L J 707; (1917) M W N 852; 7 L W 298 (F B).

Although it was clear that the attachment, the application for which I have mentioned, was not subsisting at the time of the sale there was an argument in the case that a previous attachment was already subsisting. That attachment related to another decree in execution, the attachment having taken place some five or six months before the private sale of June 15, 1910. The application for execution was eventually dismissed in March 1910, that is, three months before the private sale. The contention in the case was that the earlier attachment was still subsisting. But either by reason of the fact that that application had been dismissed or that the subsequent application for attachment had been made to a Court other than the Court which would be entitled to distribute the assets, it was held that neither availed the person questioning the private sale. The contention of Mr. Radha Mohan is that although the question submitted to the Full Bench covers the point in dispute in this case, yet the radical difference is that the decretal amount had not been paid into Court. Therefore the Court not being in possession of the assets a material difference exists between that case and the one before us. In discussing the question submitted to the Court reliance was placed upon a decision in Mina Kumari Bibi v. Bejoy Singh (1), a decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. Before I deal with that case, I may mention one or two observations in the principal judgment delivered by the Full Bench of the Madras High Court. It was pointed out in the first place that s. 276, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, was wider in its terms than s 64 of the present Code. Section 276 provided:

"When an attachment has been made by actual seizure or by order, etc., any private alienation of the property attached, whether by sale, etc., during the continuance of the attachment, shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment"

The present s. 64 makes alienations of property "against the attachment" void. The view expressed by Kumaraswami Sastriyar, J., was that the explanation to s. 64 was merely legislative sanction of the decision in Sorabji Edulji v. Govind Ramji (3), there having been a difference between that case and the case of Manohar Das v. Ram Autar Pande (4), that it did not extend the law excepting to include in claims enforceable under the attachment within the meaning of s. 64 those claims for rateable distribution. The substance of the decision was that not only was a subsequent decree-holder who had applied for rateable distribution not entitled to question the alienation but that the attaching decree-holder himself was not if it was for the purpose of paying off the decretal amount. From one point of view the decision in Mina Kumari Bibi v. Bejoy Singh (1), in Privy Council was of more importance, although perhaps more limited. The case arose out of an action for possession, the facts being that the judgment-debtor had three decrees against him. An application was made by the decree-holder for execution of one of the earliest decrees and an order for attachment was made, also an order under s. 274, Civil Procedure Code of 1882, prohibiting the judgment-debtor from alienating the property. Nothing seems to have been done until some two or three years later when the application for execution was dismissed. Some two years later another application was made for execution of the same decree. A warrant of attachment appears to have been issued a month later. Another application was made for execution of a later decree and in 1907 attachment was effected. This was in August of 1907. Meanwhile, on July 15, 1907, the judgment-debtor had sold the property privately. The question which came before the Courts was—whether the sale to the private purchaser was to be preferred to the purchase in the execution proceedings in which the order for attachment of August 1907, was made. I have left unmentioned a number of facts which perhaps are not necessary to mention.

(3) 16 B 91.
(4) 25 A 431; A W N 1903, 92.

The contention was, in the first place, that the earlier attachment to which I have made reference was subsisting at the time of the private sale, and the further contention was that the private sale of July 15, 1907, was antedated. This latter contention was rejected. The earlier point was not specifically decided. Sir Lawrence Jenkins, in delivering the opinion of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, lays stress on the fact that although the word "attachment" was used several times in s. 276, the only attachment which would in any way assist the purchaser in the execution sale was the particular attachment which was made in the execution sale at which he was the purchaser. To use the words of Sir Lawrence Jenkins:

"it still is the attachment in Execution Case No. 16 of 1907, that is, the only weapon of attack, and it is not made more effective by the earlier attachment in Execution Case No. 8 of 1902."

As the attachment which was "the only weapon of attack," to use the words of Sir Lawrence Jenkins, was made later than the sale to the private purchaser, it was held that it was of no assistance to the purchaser in the execution sale and that the private sale is to be preferred to the execution sale Sir Lawrence Jenkins points out in the course of his opinion that in order to bring s. 295, which is now s. 73, into play, certain conditions are necessary. One of them is that there should be assets held by the Court; and further he went on to say that it was not shown that there were assets. For the reason which I have indicated that although the Full Bench decision of the Madras case raised the very point which we have to deal with, it does not assist us in this case and, for the reason stated by Sir Lawrence Jenkins, the case of Mina Kumari Bibi v. Bejoy Singh (1), does not assist us, the reason being that in the latter case the relevant attachment was not subsisting at the time of the private sale. Sir Lawrence Jenkins points out, as I have said, that in order to make s. 73 apply it is necessary that there should be assets in the hands of the Court. It was, therefore, contended in this case that as there were assets, being the Rs. 1,957, the conditions of the section had been complied with. In this connection reliance was placed upon the case of Bhattoo Singh v. Raghunandan Prasad Singh (5), which held that the payment into Court for the purpose of setting aside a sale under O. XXI, r. 89, was "assets distributable." Therefore payment under O. XXI, r. 55, was "assets distributable."

It is difficult to hold that if payment into Court under O. XXI, r. 89, is an asset a payment into Court under O. XXI, r. 55, is not an asset; but I specifically reserve that question, first, by reason of the fact that I think it is unnecessary to decide it in this case and, secondly, because to hold that the payment under O. XXI, r. 55, was an asset distributable amongst decree-holders would raise difficulties which from one point of view are unsurmountable. The slight consideration will show what these difficulties are. Can it be disputed that a judgment-debtor is entitled to pay the decretal amount into Court with costs and charges under O. XXI, r. 55? There is only one answer to that question. If he pays such sum, which quite clearly he is entitled to irrespective of any other claims against him or against his property the section quite clearly states that the attachment ceases and the execution case can be struck out in full satisfaction. If we were to hold that the sum was "assets distributable" then the payment into Court equivalent to the amount of one decree, which payment is distributable amongst a number of decree-holders, results in the decree, in relation to which the payment is made, being satisfied in part only. Therefore contrary to the order and implication of the rule full satisfaction could not be declared.

I see no answer to this question if reliance is to be placed upon the decision of this Court to which I have just referred. An anomaly appears to exist in this part of the Civil Procedure Code, the only answer to the difficulties appearing to be the decision in Annamalai Chettiar v. Palamalai Pillai (2) and the case in the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, the substance of which is that in spite of the provision that an alienation is void its invalidity is limited in the sense that it is void only as against the attachment and again only in the in sense which the purpose of the attachment is obstructed by the alienation. This discussion brings me back to the point from which I started. Assuming that there are differences between the cases relied upon by the respondent and the case before us, they are immaterial for the purpose of deciding this case. Whether in the circumstances that decree-holders were two different persons—one attaching and the other applying for rateable distribution—the latter could not question a private alienation to which the former had consented, yet in this case where the decree-holders are one and the same person, it is impossible to contend that the private alienation is void in the sense that the decree-holder is not in a position in law to consent to it. The argument of the decree-holder here that he was merely considering his rights in the first execution case irrespective of his rights in the second execution case cannot be supported in the light of the orders which were made by the Munsif. On May 13, he specifically agreed to the payment by the Musammat of the decretal amount plus the costs in the miscellaneous case, she having stated that she had purchased the property in a private sale. As I have pointed out, he could have objected to this. He could have demanded payment of the full consideration which was upwards of Rs. 5,000 and it was in his presence or in the presence of his legal adviser that the two subsequent orders were made, the latter of which was to the effect that the decree was fully satisfied and that the attachment was withdrawn. That in my judgment disposes of the case. The order made by the Munsif against which the Rule in revision is directed was to the effect that the decree-holder is entitled to rateable distribution. In so far as that purports to set aside the order of the Munsif dated May 16, 1931, striking out the execution case, it was without jurisdiction. But the substantial question is one which is raised in the appeal and as Mr. Khurshed Husnain does not press the revisional application I make no order and leave it with the above observation.

(5) 145 Ind. Cas. 390; A I R 1933 Pat. 303; 12 Pat. 772; 14 P L T 357; 6 R P 172.

As regards the appeal in my judgment the learned Judge was right. The attachment cannot be considered to be subsisting. Consequently the property now having passed to the Musammat cannot be sold again in execution. The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

Fazl Ali, J.– Shortly put the appellant's contentions are as follows:

The amount deposited in Court by the respondent Wahidunnissa must be regarded as "assets held by the Court" and, therefore, liable to rateable distribution under s. 73, Civil Procedure Code. That being so, neither the first nor the second decree has been satisfied and under s. 64, Civil Procedure Code, the private sale of the property is invalid as against the claim under both the decrees and the house in question is thus liable to be sold in execution of the decree in execution of which it had been attached. The attachment could not validly terminate under O. XXI, r. 55, as that decree was in fact not satisfied. The expression "amount decreed with costs" as used in O. XXI, r. 55, means not only the amount of the decree in execution of which a certain property has been attached, but also the amounts of such other decrees as may be under execution in the same Court giving rise to claims under s. 73, Civil Procedure Code. These contentions are met on behalf of the respondent on the following four grounds: (i) It is contended that as the second decree was not in existence at the time when the house in question was purchased by the respondent the private sale though void as against the claim in the previous decree cannot be held to be void as against the subsequent decree-holder. This argument is sought to be supported by the following observations made by Mookerjee, A. C. J., in Barendra Nath v. Martin & Co. (6):

"The expression 'claims enforceable under the attachment' taken apart from the explanation unquestionably refers to a claim in existence as such on the date of alienation. The explanation, no doubt, enlarges the scope of the words by the inclusion of claims for the rateable distribution of assets, but clearly such claims must possess the same quality as the claims primarily enforceable under the attachment, that is, actual existence at the time of alienation. In our opinion it would be unreasonable to hold that claims of the latter description include claims that might possibly arise in the future"

(2) It is next contended that the present case is entirely covered by the Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court in Annamalai Chettiar v. Palamalai Pillai (2). In that case the question which was referred to the Full Bench was formulated in these words:

"whether non-attaching decree-holders who had applied for rateable distribution under a subsisting attachment which has since been raised by the satisfaction of the decree or otherwise are entitled to question the private alienation during the continuance of such attachment."

This question was answered in the negative by all the learned Judges of the Madras High Court who composed the Full Bench. One of them, Sir John Wallis, expressed himself as follows:

(6) 62 Ind. Cas. 167; A I R 1921 Cal. 691; 33 C L J 7.

"Section 64 of the present Code affords no greater protection to the attaching decree-holder than s. 276 of the old Code and if he cannot protect himself against an alienation after an attachment unless the attached property is brought to sale in execution of the decree in respect of which the attachment was made, it necessarily follows that other decree-holders who have applied for execution cannot be in any better position. It may even be said that as regards the other decree-holders the language used in the body of s. 64 is, if anything, less favourable than the language of s. 276, because it only renders void as against the claimants specified alienations which are 'contrary to such attachment' and alienations by means of which the decree in execution of which the attachment was made is satisfied can scarcely be regarded as an alienation contrary to the attachment"

Another learned Judge in delivering his opinion made the following observations:

"If the legislature intended the attachment to enure for the benefit of all persons entitled to rateable distribution, it would similarly have declared that the attachment should cease only on all their claims being satisfied or that the cesser of the attachment should be without prejudice to their rights. That the difficulty created by rr. 55 and 57, O. XXI is real will be clear from the fact that the existence of a valid attachment is necessary in order to bring the property to sale and if the attachment ceases when the decree-holder who attaches is paid off, a re-attachment will be necessary which will be of no avail if it is subsequent to the alienation: see Gobind Singh v. Jalim Singh (7) and Mina Kumari Bibi v. Bejoy Singh (1)."

Now, what the respondents contend, relying on the observations of Sir John Wallis, is that only in those cases where the attaching creditor follows up the attachment by bringing the attached property to sale, a question will arise as to whether the title created by the execution sale will or will not prevail as against the title of the private purchaser from the judgment-debtor. If however before the attached property is brought to sale, the attachment for some reason or other comes to an end or is withdrawn, neither the attaching decree-holder nor any other decree-holder who claims rateable distribution under s. 73, Civil Procedure Code, can question the private alienation. It is pointed out that the second decree-holder who claims rateable distribution under s. 73 is under the existing law entirely at the mercy of the first decree-holder or the decree-holder who has already attached the property. For example, if the latter accepts the decretal amount from the private purchaser of the artached property out of Court and then certifies satisfaction in Court or allows the execution to be dismissed for default, the second decree-holder cannot question the private alienation, nor can he claim any rateable distribution of the amount received out of Court by the first decree-holder. Upon the same analogy it is argued that once the attachment terminates by reason of the entire decretal amount due under the first decree being deposited in Court under O. XXI, r. 55, the alienation at once becomes binding on the second decree-holder who has not attached the property, but who has merely claimed rateable distribution under s. 73. It is urged that the decretal amount referred to in O. XXI, r. 55, means the amount of the particular decree which is in execution and in execution of which the property is attached and cannot mean the amount due under all the decrees that may be under execution at the same time in the same Court. It is further contended that on a correct reading of s. 64 it would appear that the attaching creditor is in a far more advantageous position than a creditor who has not attached the property and who claims merely the benefit of s. 73. The former it is said, has a right to proceed to sell the property ignoring the private alienation, but so far as the latter is concerned the alienation must be held to be good as against him so long as his right to the assets in the hand of the Court is not prejudiced provided that such assets do come into the hands of the Court.

(3) The next contention put forward on behalf of the respondent is that if the appellant questions the validity of the sale in favour of Musammat Wahidunnissa, the amount paid by her in Court cannot be regarded as assets and the second decree-holder cannot be entitled to the benefit of s. 73 of the Code.

(4) Lastly, it is pointed out that the appellant by his conduct both on the 13th and on the 16th May, must be deemed to have waived the benefit of s. 64 and, therefore, he cannot question the purchase of the house by the respondent. I will only briefly deal with the first two grounds because in my opinion the last two grounds are sufficient to dispose of this appeal.

The observations made by Mookerjee, J., in Barendra Nath v. Martin & Co. (6), have been dissented from in Siva Pratapa

(7) 6 A 33; A W N 1884, 183.

Bhattadu v. A. E. L. Mission Rajahmundry (8), and do not appear to me to be quite in consonance with the decision in Sorabji Edulji v. Gavind Ramji (3), or with the prior decision of the Calcutta High Court in Kali Kumar v. Kali Prasanna (9). There is much however in the decision of the Privy Council in Mina Kumari Bibi v. Bejoy Singh (1) and Annamalai Chettiar v. Palamalai Pillai (2), which supports the respondent's view. On principle there should be no difference between payment of the decretal amount to the attaching creditor out of Court and its being paid into Court to his credit. I do not see why in the former case the alienation should be held to be binding upon the second decree-holder who claims the benefit of s. 73, Civil Procedure Code, and in the latter case should be held to be void against him. At the same time it appears to me that by extending the principle laid down in Annamalai Chettiar v. Palamalai Pillai (2), we would be drifting further and further away from the object which the legislature had in view in enacting s. 73, Civil Procedure Code. The object clearly was to avoid multiplicity of attachment and execution proceedings and I think that the difficulties which often arise in the interpretation of s. 64 and O. XXI, r. 55, will be avoided if it is provided in clear terms: (1) that no private alienation would bind either the attaching creditor or any other decree-holder who applies for execution of his decree while the attachment still subsists; (2) that the expression "amount decreed" as used in O. XXI, r. 55, shall include the amount of any decree or decrees passed against the same judgment-debtor in respect of which a valid claim for rateable distribution of the assets may have been made under s. 73, Civil Procedure Code. It is however unnecessary to pursue the matter any further because as I have already indicated, this appeal can in my opinion be disposed of on the other two grounds referred to by me.

The plain dictionary meaning of the word "assets" is the entire property of a person or company which may be so liable for his or their debts. In the majority of cases decided under s. 73, Civil Procedure Code, the word "assets" has been used to mean any fund in the hands of a Court which could be applied by the Court for the payment of a judgment-debtor's debt. It follows, therefore, that a fund or a sum of money cannot be regarded as assets unless it is in some sense the property of the judgment-debtor and can therefore be legitimately applied to the payment of his debt. It is clear that any money which belongs to a stranger or any money paid into Court by a third party under a misapprehension cannot be described as assets. The question, therefore, is whether the money deposited by Musammat Wahidunnissa in Court can be regarded as assets held by the Court executing the decree in Execution Case No. 1472 of 1930. If the appellant insists on regarding the sale in favour of Musammat Wahidunnissa as void, I am doubtful whether the money realized by means of a sale which is void in the eye of law can be regarded as the judgment-debtor's assets. It is well settled that when no assets are held by the Court the holder of the second decree is not entitled to rateable distribution. Here however the appellant who is the holder of both the decrees has been contending all along that the sum of money deposited by Musammat Wahidunnissa must be treated as assets and that it should be applied to the satisfaction of the two decrees held by him. As far as I can see, he could possibly take up this position only if he did not question the validity of the sale in favour of the respondent for it seems to me that he cannot both approbate and reprobate it. This at once brings me to the consideration of the conduct of the appellant at the time the respondent offered to deposit the money in satisfaction of the first decree in Court. As will appear on a reading of the order-sheet the Court gave a full opportunity to the appellant to raise any objections that he could raise in law to the respondent depositing the money, and his Pleader was accordingly heard on the subject.

It was open to him to show that the respondent had no locus standi to deposit the money; that the sale was not valid as against him; that he meant thereafter to question the sale; that there being already his application for rateable distribution before the Court in Execution Case No. 578 of 1933, the whole of the first decree could not be satisfied by the amount and so the house in question was still liable to be sold. None of these objections however appear to have been raised on his behalf. On the other hand, his Pleader clearly intimated to the Court that he would have no objection to the money being received by the Court, if certain costs incurred by the decree-holder in a miscellaneous proceeding was also paid by the appellant. It was subsequently ascertained in the presence of the decree-holder's Pleader that no costs had been incurred by the decree-holder and Musammat Wahidunnissa was therefore directed to pay into Court the decretal amount with costs and interest. This amount was paid into the treasury on May 15. The order-sheet shows that on May 16 when the Execution Case No. 1472 was dismissed, the decree-holder raised no objection.

(8) 97 Ind. Cas. 496; A I R 1926 Mad. 307; 49 M 38.
(9) 33 Ind. Cas. 492; A I R 1917 Cal. 561.

It appears to me that in these circumstances the appellant must be deemed by his conduct to have waived the benefit of s. 64, even if he was entitled to any such benefit, and to have agreed to receive the decretal amount due in Execution Case No. 1472 in satisfaction of the decree for which the execution had been taken out. That being so, the attachment must necessarily be deemed to have terminated and the sale in favour of the respondent must be held to be valid. In my opinion therefore the order of the Court below that the house in question cannot be sold in execution of the appellant's decree is correct and this appeal must be dismissed with costs.

N. Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 659 of 1932
August 2, 1934

MUKERJI, AG. C. J. AND S. K. GHOSE, J.

Sm. NURANNESSA KHATOON AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

OSMAN GANI AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), ss. 17 (1), (b), 21—Sale deed—Property mentioned as existing in district where deed is registered not actually existing but introduced as fictitious item—Deed containing clause making it non-testamentary instrument creating vested rights—Document, whether valid—Properties sufficiently identifiable—Document registered—Document, if operative.

There was a clause in a sale-deed executed by the defendants in favour of the plaintiffs, which ran in these words: "Be it known that if in future owing to any dispute about the above mentioned family arrangement and amicable partition it be found or become divulged that we the executants have not the entire 16 annas right in the properties sold, then of the immovable properties left by our father in the District of Dacca and Goalpara and in the Garo hills including the properties given in the schedule below, the total 6 annas 4 gandas 9 kaks 2 tils inherited by us the executants from our father, will be counted as sold to you the recipients of the deed. On the strength of this kobala being owner and possess of our 6 annas 4 gandas 9 kaks 2 tils share in the immovable properties left by our father including the properties given in the schedule below, you either jointly or on partition, will enjoy and possess the same in whatever way you like down to your sons grandsons and other heirs and legal representatives":

Held, that this clause in the document satisfied the requirements of s. 17, sub-s. 1, cl. (b), Registration Act, inasmuch as the document by reason of this clause would be a non-testamentary instrument which purported to create or declare, though in future, a right vested or contingent in favour of the plaintiffs. That being the position the document would be registrable in the District of Dacca even though as a kobala transferring the three items of property mentioned in the document it would not be so registrable [p. 927, col. 2; p. 928, col. 1.]

Held, further that treated as a kobala the document could not be registered in any Registration Office in the District of Dacca in view of the fact that the only property which purported to have been covered by it as lying within the District of Dacca was a tin-shed which had no existence whatever and inasmuch as the introduction of a fictitious item of property in the sale deed for the purpose of getting it registered at a particular place would make the registration of the document invalid. But the document regarded as a non-testamentary instrument falling within cl. (b), sub-s. 1, s. 17 could be registrable at a Registration Office in the District of Dacca and it was not invalid. [p. 928, col. 1.]

Section 21, Registration Act, merely lays down certain particulars which have got to be complied with before a document can be accepted for registration. If the properties are sufficiently identifiable, the document, if registered, would be operative in respect of such properties as would be found to answer the description contained in the document. [ibid]

C. A. from an appellate decree of the Additional District Judge, Dacca, dated July 18, 1931.

Messrs. Radhabinode Pal and Syed Farhat Ali, for the Appellants.

Mr. Ramendra Chandra Roy, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—In this appeal the question which arises for our consideration is whether a sale-deed was invalid by reason of its being registered at a place at which it could not be registered under the law. The facts necessary to be stated are the following. The suit was instituted by the plaintiffs for partition of certain properties, six in number, described in the schedule attached to the plaint. The plaintiffs claimed certain specified properties corresponding to a share which they alleged had belonged to defendants Nos. 8 and 9. Their case was that there was a family arrangement under which the said defendants had got those properties in lieu of their undivided share in all the six properties mentioned in the plaint and that in 1926 there was a deed of sale executed by the said defendants in their favour under which they became entitled to the said specified properties. Their case further was that there was a stipulation in the said document that in case there was any difficulty in obtaining possession of the said plots on account of the fact that the family arrangement was not established then they would be entitled to the shares of their vendors in the whole lot of properties mentioned in the plaint. The trial Court made a preliminary decree for partition in the plaintiffs' favour in respect of all the properties and that decree has been reversed by the lower Appellate Court on the ground that the sale-deed was invalid by reason of the fact that it had been registered at a place at which it could not under the law be registered. The lower Appellate Court in dismissing the suit has observed thus:

"I would, therefore, if the bar of invalid registration did not arise, confirm the lower Court's decree in respect of properties other than property No. 5 only, that property being left to be shared by the legal heirs of Ahmad Ali Shah. But owing to the bar of invalid registration, the appeal succeeds and the suit must fail."

The question which requires consideration in this case is whether a particular item of property described in the sale deed, namely, Item No. 3, can be held to have passed under it. This item concerned a plot of land on which stood a tin-shed, according to the description as given in the document. The other two items of property, mentioned in the sale-deed are properties situate in the province of Assam. So far as the Item No. 3 is concerned it is a property which is situate in the District of Dacca. The document was presented for registration at a Sub-Registry Office in the District of Dacca. The learned Judge has found that the tin-shed mentioned in Item No. 3 had no existence and he has referred to certain evidence in his judgment in support of this finding. This finding has not been challenged before us on behalf of the appellants. The learned Judge has also held that upon a proper reading of the description of Item No. 3 as contained in the document it should be held that there was no intention that any title to the land itself should pass under it; and being of opinion that the only property which was intended to be conveyed by Item No. 3 was the tin-shed which had no existence he held that the document was not registrable at any Registration Office in the District of Dacca.

The appellants' first endeavour before us was to make out that the interpretation which the learned Judge has put upon the description given in the document as regards Item No. 3 was not correct and that on a proper reading of the said description it should be held that intention of the parties was that the land on which the tin-shed stood should also pass under it.

We have considered the arguments that have been put forward in support of this contention, but we are unable to say that the view which the learned Judge has taken is wrong. The learned Judge has referred to the fact that if the description given of Item No. 3 be read in the light of what has been said in connection with the other two items of property there can be no doubt that Item No. 3 which was to pass under the deed was not land but only the tin-shed standing on it. The learned Judge has also relied on certain other evidence for the purpose of showing that the land as described in Item No. 3 would include not merely the share of the vendors but also the share of their co-sharers and that it could never have been the intention of the parties, that the share of persons other than that of the vendors would pass. We are clearly of opinion that the learned Judge was right in the view which he has taken as regards the interpretation to be put on the description contained in the document as regards Item No. 3. The appellants have next drawn our attention to the fact that there is a clause in the sale-deed which runs in these words:

"Be it known that if in future owing to any dispute about the above mentioned family arrangement and amicable partition it be found or become divulged that we the executants have not the entire 16 annas right in the properties sold then of the immovable properties left by our father in the District of Dacca and Goalpara and in the Garo hills including the properties given in the schedule below, the total 6 annas 4 gandas 9 kaks 2 tils inherited by us the executants from our father, will be counted as sold to you the recipients of the deed. On the strength of this kobala being owner and possessed of our 6 annas 4 gandas 9 kaks 2 tils share in the immovable properties left by our father including the properties given in the schedule below, you either jointly or on partition, will enjoy and possess the same in whatever way you like down to your sons, grandsons and other heirs and legal representatives."

Now this clause in the document, it has been pointed out, satisfies the requirements of s. 17, sub-s. 1, cl. (b), Registration Act, inasmuch as the document by reason of this clause would be a non-testamentary instrument which purported to create or declare, though in future, a right vested or contingent in favour of the appellants. It has been argued that that being the position the document would be registrable in the District of Dacca even though as a kobala transferring the three items of property mentioned in the document it would not be so registrable. We are of opinion that this contention is well-founded. It is quite true that treated as a kobala the document could not be registered in any Registration Office in the District of Dacca in view of the fact that the only property which purported to have been covered by it as lying within the district of Dacca was the tinshed which had no existence whatever and inasmuch as the introduction of a fictitious item of property in the sale-deed for the purpose of getting it registered at a particular place would make the registration of the document invalid. But there is yet the other contention of the appellants to which we have just referred and according to which the document regarded as a non-testamentary instrument falling within cl. (b), sub-s. 1, s. 17 would be registrable at a Registration Office in the District of Dacca. There is no question, as far as we can make out that the value of the right such as it was, was over Rs. 100. We are of opinion, therefore, that the learned Judge was not right in holding that the document was invalid. Inasmuch as the other findings of the learned Judge have not been challenged before us and there is no dispute whatsoever as regards the facts, we think we would be right in giving effect to the observations which the learned Judge made and to which we have already referred at the commencement of this judgment. Our attention has been drawn on behalf of the respondents to s. 21, Registration Act, which enjoins that "no non-testamentary document relating to immovable property shall be accepted for registration unless it contains a description of such property sufficient to identify the same."

That section merely lays down certain particulars which have got to be complied with before a document can be accepted for registration. If the properties are sufficiently identifiable there is no reason why the document, if registered, would not be operative in respect of such properties as would be found to answer the description contained in the document. Our order therefore, is that the appeal should be allowed, the decrees of the Courts below should be set aside and a preliminary decree for partition be entered in favour of the appellants in respect of properties other than property No. 5 only and that the other directions contained in the preliminary decree which the Court of first instance had made should form part of the decree of this Court. The appellants will be entitled to their costs in all the Courts, hearing fee in this Court being assessed at two gold mohurs.

D. Appeal allowed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 141 of 1933

March 7, 1935

BAJPAI, J.

NAWAB SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

DALJIT SINGH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT

Fraud—Joint fraud by plaintiff and defendant—Court finding they were acting together to perpetrate fraud and there is no difference in degree of guilt—Court should not assist either party—Relief sought on basis of transaction—Defence of fraudulent nature of transaction—Maxim—In pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis and nemo allegans turpitudinem —Applicability—Transaction entered into by plaintiff's predecessor—Plaintiff, if can enforce transaction—Contract—Consideration—Document found to be without consideration—Enforceability.

Where a plaintiff is relying upon a deed, the defendant is entitled to give evidence of the circumstances under which the document came into existence and when these circumstances include an allegation of a joint fraud by both plaintiff and defendant the particulars of that fraud must be pleaded; and it is then the duty of the Court to look into the matter, and if the Court comes to the conclusion that the parties were acting together with a view to perpetrate a fraud and did in fact perpetrate the fraud, and that there is no difference in the degree of the guilt of the plaintff and that of the defendant, the duty of the Court is not to assist either party. Vilayat Hussain v. Misran (4), applied.

Where the plaintiff is not seeking to avoid a certain transaction but wants relief on the basis of the transaction and alleges that there is a document of transfer in his or his predecessor's favour and possession has not been delivered to him on the basis of the document, possession may so be delivered and if the defendant pleads that the transaction should not be given effect to on the ground that the transaction was brought about in order to perpetrate a fraud on creditors the defendant should not be heard on the maxim nemo allegans turpitudinem, then the principle that is applicable is the principle contained in the maxim in pari delicto. The defendant will be permitted to state that the document is not supported by consideration and the document was executed in order to defraud another person and on proof of the defendant's averments if it is found that the plaintiff and the defendants were in pari delicto the Court shall stay its hand and refuse its support to either confederate letting the estate lie where it falls.

Where the plaintiff is seeking to enforce a transaction which is not supported by consideration and whose object the Court perfectly well knows to have been a fraudulent one, he should not be allowed to do so even if the party to the transaction was not he but his predecessor-in-interest. Nand Lal v.

Jethu Mal (10), relied on. Muckleston v. Brown (8 and Matthew v. Hanbury (9), distinguished.

Where the plaintiff wants to enforce a document which the defendant alleges to be without consideration and the Court which is the final Court of facts has come to the conclusion that there was no consideration for the docnment,the plaintiff who is setting up the document must, necessarily fail.

S. C. A. from the decision of the Subordinate Judge, Farrukhabad, dated November 3, 1932.

Mr. R. C. Ghatak, for the Appellant.
Mr. S. B. Johari, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is a plaintiff's appeal whose suit was decreed by the trial Court but dismissed by the lower Appellate Court. The facts may be stated. On June 28, 1920 one Phul Kunwar sold the plaint property to Daljit Singh defendant to the present suit for Rs. 400. On April 21, 1921, Daljit Singh sold the same property along with certain mortgagee rights to Gajraj Singh for Rs. 800. It has been alleged in the present controversy that the sale in favour of Gajraj was a bogus sale and it was not the intention of the parties that ownership should be transferred to Gajraj, but it was apprehended that the sale by Phul Kunwar might be pre-empted by a co-sharer and, therefore, Daljit and Gajraj adopted the trick of getting a document of transfer executed, Gajraj being an equal co-sharer with the potential pre-emptor. A pre-emption suit was actually filed by one Narain Singh on June 21, 1921, and he impleaded Phul Kunwar, Daljit and Gajraj as defendants. His allegation naturally was that the sale by Daljit to Gajraj was a bogus sale. In this pre-emption suit Daljit and Gajraj both pleaded that the sale of April 21, 1921, was a real and genuine sale by which ownership was transferred from Daljit to Gajraj; Daljit further appeared as a witness and said that he had received the consideration of Rs. 800 mentioned in the sale-deed of April 21, 1921. In the result the pre-emption suit was dismissed.

It appears that Gajraj applied for mutation on September 6, 1923, on the basis of the sale-deed in his favour. This application, however, was dismissed on the ground that the name that stood in the revenue papers as against the property was the name of Phul Kunwar and the name of Daljit even, the vendee from Phul Kunwar, had not been mutated and it was not possible, therefore, to enter the name of Gajraj. Gajraj and his heirs do not seem to have taken any steps after this. On March 16, 1927, Daljit asked for the mutation of his name on the basis of the sale-deed dated June 28, 1920, executed by Phul Kunwar and his name was mutated. Daljit has remained in possession of the property all along.

In January 1931 the present suit was instituted by Nawab Singh alleging himself to be the reversioner of Gajraj Singh for recovery of possession of the property sold to Gajraj Singh by Daljit Singh on April 21, 1921. Daljit Singh disclosed the true nature of the transaction in his written statement and pleaded that the object of the transaction was to defeat a possible pre-emption suit and as a matter of fact no consideration passed upon the document of April 21, 1921. The lower Appellate Court has distinctly held that sale-deed of April 21, 1921 was "fictitious, without consideration and was executed on account of the fear of a pre emption suit". He took into consideration the fact that Gajraj Singh and Daljit Singh were related, that both of them lived in one and the same house and that the mortgage deed which was sold along with the property by the sale-deed of April 21, 1921, also remained all along with the defendant Daljit Singh. The two sale-deeds, namely, one in favour of Daljit and the other in favour of Gajraj were also produced by Daljit Singh. On these considerations the lower Appellate Court came to the conclusion that the sale-deed in question was "fictitious and without consideration" and dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

In second appeal it is argued before me that it was not open to the defendant to plead fraud and to disclose the true nature of the transaction. It is said that a deed cannot be avoided on the ground of fraud by a party to the fraud and reliance is placed upon the case of Sidlingappa v. Hirasa (1). Reference is also made to the cases of Kamayya v. Mamayya (2), and Shiva Narain Ram v. Phuljharia, 52 Ind. Cas. 402 (3). These cases, no doubt, support the contention of the plaintiff appellant but the Bombay case was considered by this Court in the case of

(1) 31 B 405.
(2) 43 Ind. Cas. 352; 32 M L J 484.
(3) 52 Ind. Cas. 402.

Vilayat Husain v. Misran (4), and the Letters Patent Bench came to the conclusion that that case was of doubtful authority. After a review of certain English decisions and following a well considered judgment of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Raghupati Chatterji v. Nrishingha Hari Das, 71 Ind. Cas. 1 (5), it was held "that where a plaintiff is relying upon a deed the defendant is entitled to give evidence of the circumstances under which the document came into existence and when these circumstances include an allegation of a joint fraud by both plaintiff and defendant, the particulars of that fraud must be pleaded; and it is then the duty of the Court to look into the matter, and if the Court comes to the conclusion that the parties were acting together with a view to perpetrate a fraud and did in fact perpetrate the fraud, and that there is no difference in the degree of the guilt of the plaintiff and that of the defendant, the duty of the Court is not to assist either party". Applying this principle I am of the opinion, that it was open to the defendant to plead the circumstances under which the document which is the basis of the present suit came into existence and when those circumstances are scrutinised there cannot be the slightest doubt that Gajraj Singh and Daljit Singh both sat down in order to defraud a possible pre-emptor who was actually defrauded and under these circumstances "the estate should lie where it falls", and the Court should help neither party. This principle was mentioned with approval by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Petherpermal Chetty v. R. Muniandy Servai (6), where a passage from Mayne's Hindu Law, seventh editon, p. 595, para. 446, was quoted in extenso, and it was observed that the priniciple was correctly stated by the learned author. In the Bombay case the conflict between the two legal maxims nemo allegans turpitudinem suam audi endus and in pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis was stated and it was said that authority could be cited for the contention of either party who sought to invoke the aid of the legal maxim that best suited him, but their Lordships of the Bombay High Court preferred to follow the rule laid down in allegans turpitudinem suam. I have already said that the authority of the Bombay case was doubted by this Court in Vilayat Husain's case (4), and by the Calcutta High Court in Raghupati Chatterji's case (5). It was also doubted by the Lahore High Court in Qadir Bakhsh v. Hakam (7), where Tek Chand, J. delivering the judgment of the Full Bench has reviewed the entire case-law on the subject and has pointed out that there is no real conflict between the two maxims and that whereas the one embodies the general rule the other provides an exception.

"A person who has polluted his hands by being a party or privy to a fraudulent transaction shall not be allowed to approach the fountain of justice with his own infamy on his lips and obtain relief on the strength of such a transaction, and the moment he relies on such an agreement he will be told nemo allegans suam turpitudinem audi endus est."

This maxim is applicable where the plaintiff who has become a transferee under a fictitious transaction but who has not actually obtained possession of the property wants to enforce his right against the transferor who is in possssion of the property. I am of the opinion that even if the object of the fictitious transaction was to cheat an innocent person and that innocent person has been cheated, the plaintiff would not be permitted to assume the individuality which was just a mere mask, and the Court in its obvious duty of masterly inaction should not help the plaintiff on the principle that a party cannot be heard to plead his own fraud and succeed on its basis. If the fraud has succeeded there is abundant authority for the proposition that the grantor or transferor who has made a fictitious transfer and has put the transferee in possession will not be allowed to recover possession inasmuch as he has by the transfer cheated a stranger and because the transaction has ceased to be in the words of Mayne "a mere mask and has become a reality" and it may be very proper for a Court to say that it will not allow him to resume the individuality which he has once cast off in order to defraud others.

The position in the present case, however, is slightly different, because the plaintiff is not seeking to avoid a certain transaction but wants relief on the basis of the transaction. He alleges that there is a document of transfer in his or his

(4) 72 Ind. Cas. 92; 21 A L J 303; 45 A 396; A I R 1923 All. 504.

(5) 71 Ind. Cas. 1; 36 C L J 491; A I R 1923 Cal 90.

(6) 5 A L J 290; 35 C 551; 35 I A 98; 10 Bom. L R 590; 12 C W N 562; 7 C L J 528; 18 M L J 277; 4 M L T 12; 4 L B R 266; 14 Bur. L R 108 (P C).

(7) 139 Ind. Cas. 17; A I R 1932 Lah. 503; Ind. Rul. (1932) Lah. 547; 13 Lah. 713; 33 P L R 851 (F B).

predecessor's favour and possession has not been delivered to him on the basis of the document, possession may so be delivered and he says that if the defendant pleads that the transaction should not be given effect to on the ground that the transaction was brought about in order to perpetrate a fraud on creditors the defendant should not be heard on the maxim nemo allegans turpitudinem. It is under these circumstances that there is an exception to the general rule and the principle that is applicable is the principle contained in the maxim in pari delicto. The defendant will be permitted to state that the document is not supported by consideration and the document was executed in order to defraud another person, namely, the pre-emptor in the present case and on proof of the defendant's averments if it is found that the plaintiff and the defendants were in pari delicto the Court shall stay its hand and refuse its support to either confederate letting the estate lie where it falls. There is thus no real conflict between the two maxims, the first maxim stating the general rule and the second maxim providing an exception to the general rule. In the present case, therefore, it is possible to apply the exception i. e., the principle of in pari delicto in order to defeat the plaintiff's suit.

It is, however, said that the plaintiff in the present case is not Gajraj Singh who was a party to the fraud but his heir Nawab Singh and he is neither pleading any fraud nor when the fraud is allowed to be proved, can it be said that he is in pari delicto. The argument is that he is trying to enforce a transaction and the defendant should not be heard because of the application of the general maxim stated by me before. The answer to this is that the defendant is not necessarily setting up any fraud but is putting the plaintiff to strict proof of his title and is alleging that the basis of the plaintiff's title is not supported by consideration. On the finding of the lower Appellate Court that the document is without consideration the defendant's case is that the plaintiff should be non-suited. It is argued on behalf of the plaintiff that in order to state his defence fully the defendant will have to state the circumstances under which the fraud was enacted and he should not be permitted to do so as against the plaintiff who was not his confederate at the time the fraud was perpetrated. Reliance is placed on the case of Muckleston v. Brown (8), and the case of Matthew v. Hanbury (9), and in both these cases it was held that although the testator himself might not be able to obtain relief, there was nothing to prevent the executor from maintaining a suit. The cases to my mind are different. In those cases it was held that where a person has parted with his property in order to defraud strangers or where he has incurred liability under unlawful circumstances he would not be permitted to obtain relief but his heir or executor would be able. This is not a case where Nawab Singh is seeking to obtain relief from the effects of any transaction entered into between his predecessor and the defendant by which a liability has been cast on the plaintiff's estate. The plaintiff is seeking to enforce a transaction which is not supported by consideration and whose object the Court perfectly well knows and I am of the opinion that neither Gajraj Singh nor his heir should be allowed to do so. I am fortified in my opinion by the view taken by the Punjab Chief Court in Nand Lal v. Jethu Mal 33 Ind. Cas. 255 (10).

Reference was also made by Mr. Ghatak to the recent Privy Council case of Ma Ngwe Nang v. Maung Tha Maung (11), and my attention was drawn to a passage in the report at page 254*. Their Lordships found it unnecessary to decide the point on which a forceful argument was advanced but their Lordships held that if certain facts regarding fraud are alleged, it is the duty of the Court adjudicating on the allegation of the grantor to see that he proves by cogent evidence the averment that he makes. This case, however, does not help me in any way in deciding the present appeal.

One simple way in which this case may be looked at is that the plaintiff wants to enforce a document which the defendant alleges to be without consideration and the Court which is the final Court of facts has come to the conclusion that there was no consideration for the (8) (1801) 6 Ves. 52; 31 E R 934; 5 R R 211.

(9) (1790) 2 Vern. 188; 23 E R 723.
(10) 33 Ind. Cas. 255; 21 P R 1916; 197 P W R 1915.
(11) 114 Ind. Cas. 595; 56 M L J 244; A I R 1929 P C 55; 49 C L J 167; 31 Bom. L R 311; (1929) M W N 235; 29 L W 669; 33 C W N 513; 7 R 4 (P C).

* Page of 56 M.L. J.—[Ed.] document. The plaintiff who is setting up the document must, therefore, necessarily fail.

For the reasons given above, I dismiss this appeal with costs, but grant leave to file an appeal by way of Letters Patent.

N. Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Original Civil Jurisdiction Appeal No. 26 of 1934

September 24, 1934

BEAUMONT, C. J. AND RANGNEKAR, J.

KARUMUTHU THIAGARAJAN CHETTIAR—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

THOS. SMITH & Co.—DEFENDANT RESPONDENT

Arbitration—Stay of suit, when granted.

The Court will ordinarily stay a suit, if the parties have agreed to refer their dispute to arbitration, and refer the matters in dispute to arbitration but where difficult questions of law are involved in such dispute, the suit will be allowed to proceed. Cottage Club Estate v. Woodside Estate (1), followed.

O. C. J. A. from Suit No. 732 of 1934.

Messrs. Jamshed Kanga and Y. B. Rege, for the Appellant.

Mr. D. N. Bahadurji, for the Respondent.

Beaumont, C. J.—This is an appeal against an order made by the Judge in Chambers staying the suit and referring the matters in dispute to arbitration. The suit is a suit by the plaintiff against the defendants, who are brokers in Bombay. The plaintiff asks for accounts of the dealings between him and the defendants and for payment of the amount found due and various consequential reliefs. Various contracts were made between the plaintiff and the defendants, and there is a clause in them providing for matters in dispute to be referred to arbitration. The contracts being contracts relating to cotton are governed by the bye-laws of the East India Cotton Association, Ltd. The issues in the suit show that there are various questions of fact and of law to be decided, some of the questions of law possibly involving some difficulty. Although the Court will generally stay a suit and refer the matters in dispute to arbitration when the parties themselves have agreed that matters should be so decided still the fact that there are difficult points of law involved is one reason which always weighs with the Court in deciding whether to stay the suit or not, because experience shows that awards involving points of law almost invariably come before the Court, and the only result of the arbitration in such a case is to add to the expense and delay. But apart from that general consideration, there are two reasons which induce us to think that this suit ought not to be stayed.

The first is that the defendants have entered into an agreement with five persons under which the defendants have agreed to assign by way of mortgage their claims against the plaintiff. Now that assignment or agreement to assign is apparently challenged in a suit (No. 1905 of 1933) filed for the specific performance of the said agreement. In that suit a Receiver has been appointed, and the Receiver was authorised to continue or adopt proceedings in arbitration under the bye-laws of the East India Cotton Association, Ltd., in the name of the defendants. But at the moment undoubtedly that agreement by the defendants charging all their claims against the plaintiff must be treated as subsisting, and it seems to me to present considerable difficulty in relation to any arbitration. The agreement to refer to arbitration is between the plaintiff and the defendants, and not between the plaintiff and the assignees of the defendants or the Receiver appointed by the Court. If the arbitration proceeds as between the plaintiff and the defendants and the arbitrators find that something is due to the defendants, they cannot give effect to that finding and no order can be made for payment to the defendants because on this mortgage it appears that the defendants are not the persons entitled to receive the moneys. Therefore it seems to me that in the event of the defendants succeeding in the arbitration, the award would be in effect a nullity. That view of the matter follows the decision of Wright, J. (as he then was) in Cottage Club Estate v. Woodside Estate Co. (1), and the fact that that difficulty may arise in relation to the arbitration is one good reason for not staying the action and referring the disputes to arbitation.

Then there is another difficulty. One of the arbitrators appointed by the East India Cotton Association is a gentleman named Mowji Bhimji. Now Mr. Mowji Bhimji is a director and a shareholder in a private company which is an assignee of the interest of one of the five persons to whom the defendants have mortgaged their claims against the plaintiff. So that it seems to me to be clear that Mr. Mowji Bhimji is an interested person since he is interested in the award being made in favour of the defendants. Of course it may be that he would not allow his own interest to affect his judgment, but that is not the point, because bye-law No. 40 of the bye-laws of the East India Cotton Association povides that no member of the Association having an interest in the particular matter in dispute shall be competent to sit on any arbitration. The learned Judge in his judgment thinks that the plaintiffs cannot rely on the disqualification of Mr. Mowji Bhimji because he has not pursued his remedy available to him under the bye-laws of the East India Cotton Association. I do not know exactly what remedy the learned Judge refers to—as there does not seem to be any rule or bye-law on that point—but in any case that hardly meets the point. The fact that one of the arbitrators is disqualified from acting affords another good reason for not staying the suit and referring the matter to the arbitrament of that arbitrator. For these reasons it seems to me that no sufficient case is made out here for staying the suit which the plaintiff had commenced before any arbitration proceeding, and we ought therefore to allow the appeal with costs and dismiss the defendant's notice of motion, costs of which will be costs in the case.

(1) (1928) 2 K B 463; 97 L J K B 72; 44 T L R 20; 33 Com. Cas. 97; 139 L T 353.

Rangnekar, J.—I agree.

D. Appeal allowed.

ALAHABAD HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 135 of 1933
April 20, 1934
BENNET AND BAJPAI, JJ.
Lala MADHO RAM AND ANOTHER—EXECUTORS—APPELLANTS
versus
JAI CHAND RAI AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Charitable and Religious Trusts Act (XIV of 1920), s. 7—Trust for public purposes of a religious or charitable nature—Trustee, if can apply to Civil Court for opinion, advice or direction—Probate—Application for sale of property covered by will after obtaining probate—Application not specifically headed as one under Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), s. 307—Duty of Court.

A trustee of an express or constructive trust created or existing for a public purpose of a charitable or a religious nature can apply by petition to the Civil Court, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any substantial part of the subject-matter of the trust is situate, for the opinion, advice or direction of the Court on any question affecting the management or administration of the trust property, and the Court shall give its opinion, advice or direction, as the case may be, thereon.

Where an application for sale of property covered by a will is made by a person who has obtained probate of the will but the application is not specifically headed as being one under s. 307, Succession Act, it is the duty of the Court to find out whether it had jurisdiction in the matter of the application or not under any provision of law.

F. C. A. from an order of the District Judge, Saharanpur, dated April 11, 1933.

Mr. Gopi Nath Kunzru, for the Appellants.

Mr. G. S. Pathak, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This is an appeal from an order of the District Judge, Saharanpur, dated April 11, 1933, by which he purported to dispose of two applications, one dated November 28, 1931, by Jai Chand Rai and others and the other dated February 20, 1933, by Col. D. P. Goyel. The facts of the case are that one Musammat Kasturi executed a will on March 20, 1920, by which she gave certain directions regarding her property. On August 1, 1931, Col. Goyel who had obtained probate of the will of his wife, Musammat Kasturi, applied for the sale of certain immovable property covered by the will. Permission was granted to Col. Goyel on August 17, 1931, and we have been informed that in pursuance of the permission the property was actually sold on October 14, 1931.

On November 28, 1931, Jai Chand Rai and others applied to the learned District Judge that:

"the order dated August 17, 1931, be set aside and proper directions for the due administration of the trust be ordered and the damages resulting from misfeasance of the trust be recovered from the security of the trustees or any other suitable order be passed."

This application was opposed by one Lala Madho Ram who was also mentioned as a trustee in the will of Musammat Kasturi. Later on Col. Goyel made an application on February 20, 1933, by which he prayed for permission to sell certain other properties mentioned in the will of Musammat Kasturi Bai. The learned District Judge considered these two applications on April 11, 1933, and came to the conclusion that the application of Col. Goyel was under s. 307, Succession Act, which section was not at all applicable inasmuch as "permission to transfer is not asked in this case in order to pay debts and legacies." He therefore, refused the application of Col. Goyel dated February 20, 1933, and at the same time set aside the order of August 17, 1931, which he considered to be an ex parte order.

In this appeal it is contended before us that the learned District Judge had erred in holding that he had no jurisdiction to grant the permission sought for. It is true that it has been reiterated before us that s. 307, Succession Act, is applicable to the present case, but as arguments have proceeded before us on the assumption that the learned District Judge has got jurisdiction under other provisions of law to grant the permission sought for, we have got to see whether such jurisdiction exists in the District Judge or not. Our attention has been drawn to s. 7, Charitable and Religious Trusts Act (XIV of 1920) and there cannot be the slightest doubt that a trustee of an express or constructive trust created or existing for a public purpose of a charitable or a religious nature can apply by petition to the Civil Court, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any substantial part of the subject-matter of the trust is situate, for the opinion, advice or direction of the Court on any question affecting the management or administration of the trust property, and the Court shall give its opinion, advice or direction, as the case may be, thereon. The Court below has not considered whether the application of Col. Goyel could be treated under s. 7 of the Act or not. It has confined its attention to a consideration of the applicability of s. 307, Succession Act, and on that consideration alone has failed to exercise jurisdiction. We make it clear that all questions arising under s. 7, Charitable and Religious Trusts Act, are open and Jai Chand Rai and others can agitate the point before the Court below. It must be mentioned that the application of Col. Goyel was not specifically headed as one under s. 307, Succession Act, and it was the duty of the Court to find out whether it had jurisdiction in the matter of the application or not under any provision of law.

It was then contended before us that Mr. Mundle, the District Judge, had no jurisdiction to set aside his previous order of August 7, 1931. It is argued that after having passed the order, the learned District Judge was functus officio and his order could be set aside, if at all, by a superior authority. The contention of the respondents is that every Court has got inherent jurisdiction to recall an order passed without jurisdiction and reliance is placed upon the case of In the matter of Indrani (1). The facts of that case are slightly different. A learned District Judge had passed certain orders giving permission to the trustees to sell certain properties and in pursuance of the permission, properties had been sold and an application was made to the successor of the former District Judge to confirm the sales. The learned District Judge before whom the matter came up was of the opinion that s. 307, Succession Act, was not applicable and he therefore dropped the proceedings and refused to confirm the sale. It was held that :

"where a Judge for the time being discovers that an order has been passed without jurisdiction either by himself or by his predecessor-in-office it is his duty to undo that order so far as it may lie in his power."

It was within the competence of the successor to refuse to confirm the sales which had been sanctioned by his predecessor and to that extent he could, if he thought that the order of his predecessor was without jurisdiction, undo the previous order. In the present case there is no question of undoing any previous order so far as it lies in his power. In the present case he has completely set aside his former order dated August 17, 1931, and as we stated before, in pursuance of this order a certain sale has already taken place. The case relied on by the respondents is therefore clearly distinguishable. At the same time we are not satisfied whether the order of the learned District Judge dated August 17, 1931, was passed under s. 7, Religious and Charitable Trusts Act, or under s. 307, Succession Act. It is also clear that that order was passed without reference to a previous order of Mr. Mundle wherein he had refused permission to sell the self-same property under the self-same circumstances. We are therefore of the opinion that it is desirable that the entire matter should be left open and the learned District Judge be asked to consider the application of August 1, 1931, after notice to all the parties concerned as if that were an application under s. 7, Religious and Charitable Trusts Act. We therefore allow this appeal, set aside the order of Mr. Mundle dated April 11, 1931, and send back the case to him to register it on its original number and dispose of it according to law bearing our observations in view. The matters which the Court below will consider are the applications of

(1) 130 Ind. Cas. 498; A I R 1931 All. 212; 53 All 422; (1931) A L J 36.

Col. Goyel dated August 1, 1931 and February 20, 1933, and the application dated November 28, 1931, of Jai Chand Rai and others. Parties will bear their own costs of this appeal and costs in the Court below will abide the event. The appellant is entitled to a refund of court-fees in this Court.

N. Appeal allowed.

RANGOON HIGH COURT

Letters Patent Appeal No. 3 of 1934

December 3, 1934

PAGE, C. J. AND MYA BU, J.

K. S. A. V. CHETTYAR FIRM—APPELLANT

versus

MAHMOO—RESPONDENT

Promissory note—Usage in Burma and India among Nattukottai Chettiars—Held, on usage, that firm was payee and sole proprietor could sue on it.

A promissory note was executed to K. S. A. V. Ramiah Raja, and the firm was carrying on business under the style of K. S. A. V :

Held, in accordance with usage prevailing in Burma and India among Nattukottai Chettiars by which a Chettyar firm described generally by initials of firm prefixed to name of partner and agent, that the firm was the payee under the note and the appellant who was the sole proprietor of it could sue on it. S R. M. C. T. S. S. P. A. Chettyar Firm v. Manickam Chettyar (8), not followed.

[Case-law considered.]

L. P. A. against the judgment and decree of the High Court, Rangoon, and reported in 152 Ind. Cas. 410.

Mr. Chari, for the Appellant.

Mr. U Thein Maung, for the Respondent.

Page, C. J.—In this case the appellant is the sole proprietor of the K. S. A. V. Chettyar Firm of B. Road, Mandalay, and carries on business under the style or vilasam K. S. A. V.

The suit was brought in the Sub-Divisional Court of Mandalay by the appellant, trading under the vilasam K. S. A. V. to recover Rs. 5,762 as the principal and interest due under a promissory note executed by the defendant in favour of K. S. A. V. Ramaiah Raja. At the trial a decree was passed in favour of the appellant. An appeal to the District Court of Mandalay was allowed and the suit was dismissed. On a further appeal being presented to the High Court Ba U., J., confirmed the decree of the District Court. The appellant then obtained leave under the Letters Patent to file the present appeal.

A number of issues were raised and decided at the trial in favour of the appellant, but the District Court without considering the other grounds of appeal dismissed the suit upon the ground that, regard being had to the form of the promissory note, the appellant could not maintain the suit. The promissory note was in the following terms:—

"Mandalay Rs. 2,000. K. S. A. V. Ramaiah Raja. On First Waning Wagaung 1287 the undersigned Ko Po Hla and Mah Moo of Nyaunghla North village, Yenangyaung township do hereby promise to pay at once in full the sum of Rs. 2,000 (two thousand only) borrowed and taken from Kana Savana Ana Vana Ramiah Raja bearing interest at Rs. 2-8-0 per cent. per mensem jointly or severally on demand made at any time and anywhere by the creditor personally or by their authorized agent. Accordingly this promissory note is signed with consent. Sd. Po Po Hla, Mah Moo".

It is not disputed that the words Kana Savana Ana Vana mean and are equivalent to the words K. S. A. V., and it is common ground that the defendants made themselves liable under the promissory note to K. S. A. V. Ramaiah Raja. In para. (1) of the plaint it was alleged that :

"at Mandalay, on the First Wagaung lazok 1287 B. E. equivalent to August 4, 1925, E. E the defendants abovenamed, by their promissory note hereto attached in original, jointly and severally promised to pay to the plaintiff the sum of Rs. 2,000 bearing interest at Rs. 2-8-0 per cent. per mensem".

The first defendant did not file an appearance or defend the suit. In para. (2) of his written statement the second defendant, who is the present respondent, admitted the allegations in para. (1) of the plaint, but by para. (8) of the written statement the second defendant denied that "the present agent of the plaintiff" was legally empowered, to file the suit". A power of attorney duly authorising Muthuramalingam to file the suit on the plaintiff's behalf was produced at the trial, and the question that falls to be determined in the present appeal is whether the words "K. S. A. V. Ramaiah Raja" in the promissory note disclosed that the K. S. A. V. Firm was the payee under the promissory note with sufficient clearness to indicate to all and sundry into whose hands the instrument might pass that the K. S. A. V. Firm was the party to whom the executants of the promissory note had bound themselves under the instrument: Sadasuk Jankidas v. Kishen Pershad (1), Ramgopal Ghose v.

(1) 50 Ind. Cas. 216; A I R 1918 P C 146; 46 I A 33; 46 C 663; 29 C L J 340; 17 A L J 405; 25 M L J 258; 36 M L J 429; 21 Bom. L R 605; 1 U P L R (P C) 37; (1919) M W N 310; 23 C W N 937; 10 L W 143; 12 Bur. L T 160 (P C).

Dhireada Nath Sen (2) and P. R. M. P. R. Chettyar v. Muniyandi Servai (3).

It was not disputed by the learned Advocate for the respondent—indeed it was common ground and I am satisfied that the words "K. S. A. V. Ramaiah Raja" would in Burma plainly indicate and disclose that the payee was a firm trading under the vilasam of K. S. A. V., the contention on behalf of the respondent being that the proprietor of the firm in whose favour the defendants had executed the promissory note was Ramaiah Raja and not the plaintiff. In my opinion, however, having regard to the pleadings and the admissions of the respondent in his written statement it was not open to the respondent to contend that the proprietor of the K. S. A. V. Firm was not the plaintiff, as he had expressly admitted that the plaintiff was the person to whom the defendants had promised by the promissory note to re-pay the principal and interest due thereupon. In these circumstances, in my opinion, there was no defence to the suit, and the decree of the Sub-Divisional Court ought to be affirmed. In the course of the argument at the hearing of the appeal reference was made to the decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Firm of R. M. K. R. M. v. Firm of M. R. M. V. L., (4), in which case their Lordships held, affirming the view expressed by Barrett-Lennard, J., that in Penang :

"when a local representative of a Chetty firm carries on the business under the vilasam (i. e., the letters) of the firm coupled with his own distinct name, the announcement to the external world in general is that, whether a co-partner with, or a mere agent of, other persons, he is to be looked upon as a principal".

I confess that I am surprised to learn that in Penang Chettyar money lenders do business in the manner described by Barrett-Lennard, J., for it is clear and undoubted both in Burma and in Madras that with regard to Chettyar money lenders :

"who carry on most extensive business by means of agents in different parts of India, Burma, and the farther East, it is well-known that they trade under names made up of a series of initials. Thus defendant No. 1's firms are known as the A. L. V. R. C. T. firms and defendant No. 2's as he N. P. L. S. P. firm, and in firm transactions the initials which are the name of the firm are prefixed to the name of the signatory as may be seen in the correspondence and documents in the present case and this is the ordinary way in which documents are signed on behalf of these firms, and may even be said to be the ordinary way in which these firms sign."

Having regard to the well-known usage which has been proved in this case, and which has been adverted to if not judicially recognized in Muthar Sahib v. Kadir Sahib (5), I am of opinion that in this case the principal was sufficiently disclosed which the hundies were drawn of A. L. V. R. C. T. Chinnaya Chetty, which as I have pointed out is the name of the firm followed by the name of the agent. Having regard to the usage in question it is clear upon the face of the hundies that the drawers intended to contract with the firm and not with the agent. Various English cases have been cited, but they were all cases of construction of the language of the particular bill or note, and in none of them was there a well-established usage as there is here to indicate the meaning of the language used; Munguman Jessa Singh v. A. L. V. R. C. T. T., (6), per Wallis, J. Again, in M. V. MayaNadan & Brothers v. Arunachalam Chettyar (7), Coutts-Trotter, C. J., observed :

"There is no doubt that A. Bonsinalai Chetty entered into partnership with a firm trading under the vilasam of V M. A. C. and Sons,' and that partnership unquestionably traded under the style of V. M. A. C, and Sons and A P.'..... .. There is also no doubt that the partnership gave a power of attorney to Arunachellam to act as agent for the partnership. If therefore he signed the promissory note with the partnership signature and merely added his own name the inference would be irresistible that the operative signature was that of the firm, and that he merely added his own name as agent. It is true that he added no qualificatory words such as 'agent' or 'by' or 'per pro'; but documents in that form are executed by Natukottai agents every day, and are universally understood to be the firm's signature merely vouched as such by the agent who adds his own name."

I should have thought that in Burma as in Madras the legal position of a Chettyar Firm which contracts under a vilasam to which the local agent affixes his name was well settled and thoroughly understood. Nevertheless, a doubt has been cast upon the legal effect of this usage of the Chettyars by reason of certain observations passed by Cunliffe, J., in S. R. M. C. T. S. S. P. A. Chettyar Firm v. Manickam Chettyar (8), in which case that learned Judge thought it

(2) 101 Ind. Cas 573; A I R 1927 Cal. 376; 54 C 380; 31 C W N 397.

(3) 139 Ind. Cas. 460; A I R 1932 Rang. 97; 10 R 257; Ind .Rul. (1932) Rang. 194.

(4) (1926) A C 761.

(5) 28 M 544; 15 M L J 381.

(6) 4 M L T 309.

(7) 97 Ind. Cas, 981; A I R 1926 Mad. 1106; (1926) M W N 671.

(8) 145 Ind. Cas. 573; A I R 1933 Rang. 265; 6 R Rang. 50.

his duty to animadvert upon the judgment of a Divisional Bench of this Court in P. R. M. P. R. Chattyar v. Muniyandi Servai (3). In the case tried by Cunliffe, J., and also in the two Madras cases to which reference has been made it is well to point out that in the body of the instrument the party stated to be liable thereunder is described by the same vilasam as that which appears in the signature of the executant although no doubt the agent whose name is affixed to the vilasam may not be the same: whereas in P. R. M. P. R. Chattyar v. Muniyandi Servai (3), the party undertaking liability to repay the loan is stated in the body of the promissory note to be a specified person who purported to contract in his personal capacity, and not a firm or the agent of a firm delineated by a vilasam or otherwise; the signature of the executant (assuming that it was the signature of a firm) not being that of the person who undertook liability in the body of the instrument. Nevertheless, Cunliffe, J., expressed the opinion that "Muniyandi Servai's case was in many respects very similar to" the case then before him, regardless of the radical difference in the facts upon which the two cases fell to be decided; and upon the footing that the two cases were substantially on all fours passed strictures upon the judgment in P. R. M. P. R. Chettyar v. Muniyandi Servai (3), because it appeared to him to throw doubt upon the legality of the usage whereby Chettyar Firms are wont to contract under a vilasam: P. R. M. P. R. Chettyar v. Muniyandi Servai (3), in my opinion, was a plain case which turned on its own facts, and I adhere to what I said in my judgment in that case, which with all due deference to Cunliffe, J., I see no reason to think was not correctly decided. In Muniyadi Servai's case (3), my learned brother and I did not, and did not purport to discuss or determine whether the well-established usage among Chettyar money lenders of contracting under a vilasam was legal or not, as the question did not arise for consideration; and it is, I think, sufficient to dispel any doubt as to the legality of the usage that may have arisen by reason of the observations of Cunliffe, J., in Civil Regular No. 356 of 1932, and to dispose of the criticism passed by the learned Judge in that case upon the judgment in Muniyandi Servai's case (3), that we should hold, as we feel constrained to hold for the reasons that I have stated, that any misapprehension that may have arisen is due to the fact that Cunliffe, J., (if we may say so with due respect), apparently failed to understand fully the burden and effect of the judgment the correctness of which he challenged.

As the learned District Judge decided the appeal before him upon the sole ground upon which it was also decided by Ba U, J., in the High Court the learned Advocate for the respondent now applies that the proceedings should be remanded to the District Court in order that one other issue in the appeal should be determined, namely, whether the suit was barred by limitation. We are of opinion, however, that the evidence upon the record is sufficient to enable this Court to pronounce judgment upon the issue of limitation, and we propose finally to determine the appeal (O. XLI, r. 24).

This issue of limitation depends upon whether the plaintiff has proved that there was a payment of Rs. 50 by way of interest on the loan on February 27, 1930. If there was, the suit was filed in time; otherwise it must fail. Now in para. (2) of the plaint seven payments of interest are alleged to have been made, the sixth payment having been on February 27, 1930. In para. (2) it is further alleged that the first six of the above payments:

> "have been endorsed on the reverse of the promissory-note and each of such endorsements has been duly signed by both the defendants."

In para. (3) of the written statement the second defendant admitted having signed endorsements on the promissory note which according to the plaintiff's statement to him related to payments of interest made by defendant No. 1.

At the trial the plaintiff's agent Muthuramalingam stated that the payment of Rs. 50 in question was made by both the defendants at the plaintiff's shop, and that the endorsement in Burmese relating to the payment was written by the first defendant and was signed by both the first and second defendants. The second defendant on the other hand in his evidence stated that he signed the endorsements, including that of February 27, 1930, at the Rangoon Race Course, and that when he signed the document, there was no signature thereon by the first defendant and no writing in Burmese. The defendant's evidence was corroborated by Maung Tha Tin, who stated that he was a race horse trainer. The learned trial Judge disbelieved the evidence of the defendant Mah Noo and of Maung Tha Tin on the issue of limitation, and held that there had been a payment of Rs. 50 on February 27, 1930, and that the suit was not barred by limitation. In my opinion not only was there evidence to support the finding of the learned trial Judge upon that issue, but the conclusion at which he arrived was correct: and I am fortified in taking this view because the story told by the second defendant and Maung Tha Tin on this issue is inconsistent with the admission of the second defendant in para. 3 of his written statement, namely, that he had signed the endorsements on the promissory note which the plaintiff told him related to payments made by the first defendant. In my opinion the finding of the learned trial Judge upon the issue of limitation must be affirmed.

The result is that the appeal is allowed, the decrees of the District Court and of Ba U., J., of the High Court are set aside, and the decree passed in favour of the appellant in the Sub-Divisional Court is restored. The appellant is entitled to his costs in all the Courts.

Mya Bu, J.—All the points involved in the case having been, if I may very respectfully say so, fully and cogently discussed in the judgment of my Lord the Chief Justice in which I fully concur, I desire to add only a few remarks with reference to the adverse comments appearing in Civil Regular No. 356 of 1932 of this Court on the decision in P. R. M. P. R. Chettyar v. Muniyandi Servai (3), With all respect to the learned Judge who made the comments I venture to think that such comments are due to lack of proper appreciation of the ratio decidendi in that case. A proper perusal of the judgment in P. R. M. P. R. Chettyar v. Muniyandi Seravi (3), to my mind is sufficient to show that the well-recognized practice in India and in Burma of describing a Chettyar Firm in documents by the initials of the firm prefixed to the name of the partner or agent, the actual person through whom the firm enters into the contract, evidenced by the document is not infringed by anything said in the judgment; but that the fact that in the body of the promissory note in question the maker of the promissory note was not described in the fashion usually employed in denoting the firm of which the maker was either an agent or a partner, constitutes the ground of the dismissal of the suit filed against the firm on the promissory note. If this point is kept in view, in my opinion there is no room for the fear expressed by the learned Judge in Civil Regular No. 356 of 1932 and it will be clearly seen that there was no lack of appreciation of "time honoured custom" among the Chettyar community to which the ruling in P. R. M. P. R. Chettyar v. Muniyandi Servai (3), is considered to have run counter.

The only other observation that I wish to make in this case is that the first defendant not having filed an appearance or put in a written statement to the claim, the decree as against him should on no account have been set aside by the Court of first appeal, and should have been restored by the Court of second appeal. With these remarks I concur in the judgment of my Lord the Chief Justice.

D. Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 871 of 1931
June 12, 1934
DALIP SINGH AND BHIDE, JJ.

DIWAN CHAND AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MANAK CHAND AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFF—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), s. 28 (4)—On death of person property devolving on undischarged insolvent—Property vests in Receiver—Mortgage of such property by insolvent — Receiver not claiming property in insolvency proceedings—Property if revests in mortgagor - Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 3—Co sharers—Mortgage by one, of his undivided share—Partition—Mortgagee can proceed against property falling to mortgagor's share only—Mortgagee, if party to partition—Interpretation of Statutes—Positive enactment—Meaning to be ascertained uninfluenced by previous law or English law.

Where on the death of a person the share of his estate devolves on an insolvent, it forthwith vests in the Receiver, and a mortgage of that share by the insolvent is invalid. Ma Phaw v. Mg. Ba Thaw (5), followed. Cohen v. Mitchell (4), explained and distinguished. Alimahomed Abdul Husain v. Vardilal Devchand (1), Chhote Lal v. Kedar Nath (2) and Dasru Mahar v. Official Receiver (3), not followed. [p. 940, col. 2.]

Although the property vested in the Receiver, if he never claimed it in the insolvency proceedings, in the absence of any order to the contrary, the property in question must be considered to have revested in the mortgagor on his discharge, and the principle laid down in s 43 of the Transfer of Property Act would be applicable and on the revesting of the property in the mortgagor the mortgagee will be entitled to enforce the mortgage. Rup Narain Singh v. Har Gopal Tewari (7), followed.

The property being joint at the time of the execution of the mortgage, one co-sharer can only mortgage his undivided share in the property. Such a right is always subject to the right of the other co-sharers to effect a partition and when such partition is carried out the mortgagee can only enforce his rights against such property as falls to the share of his mortgagor, unless he can show that the partition was fraudulent. It is not necessary that the mortgagee must be a party to the partition proceedings. He has only a charge on the undivided share of the mortgagor and he has no right to prevent the co-sharers from partitioning property. Mohamad Afzal Khan v. Abdul Rehaman (8), followed.

When there is a positive enactment of the Indian Legislature, the proper course is to examine the language of the statute and to ascertain its proper meaning uninfluenced by any considerations derived from the previous state of the law or of the English law on which it may be founded. Ramanandi Kuer v. Kalawati Kuer (6), followed.

F. C. A. from the preliminary decree of the Senior Sub-Judge, Gujranwala, dated February 3, 1931.

Messrs. J. N. Aggarwal and J. L. Kapur for the Appellants.

Messrs. Shamair Chand and Jagan Nath Talwar, for the Respondents.

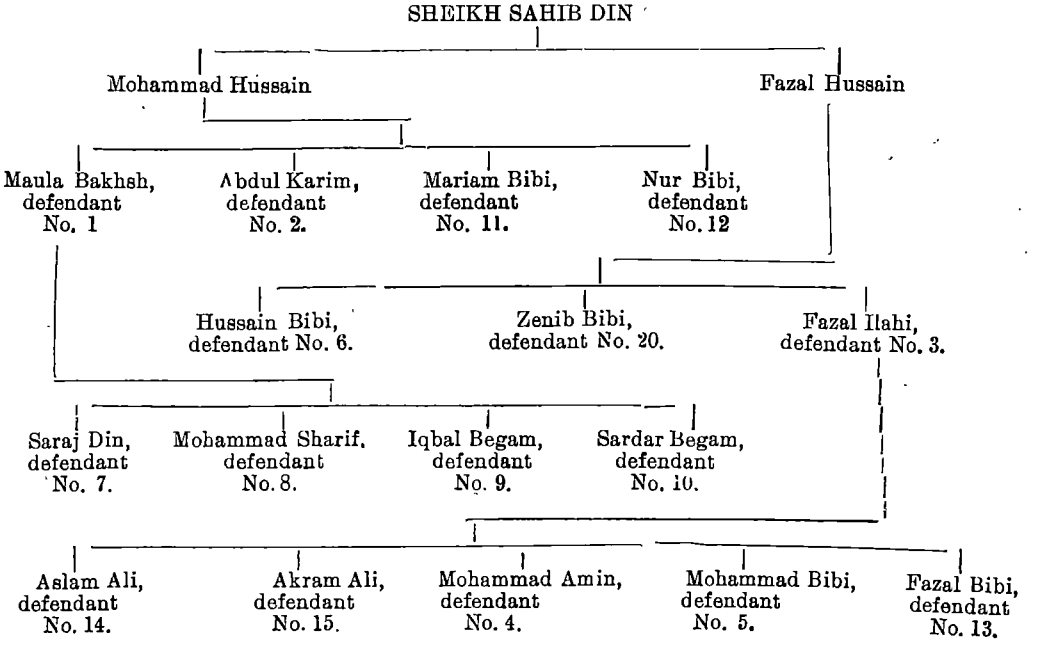
Bhide, J.—This was a suit for recovery of Rs. 10,000 on the foot of a mortgage of certain house property effected by Maula Bakhsh defendant No. 1, in favour of the plaintiff by a deed dated December 27, 1922. Defendants Nos. 2 to 15 and defendant No. 20, are relatives of defendant No. 1, being descended from Sahib Din, the common ancestor, as shown in the pedigree table given below :



It may be pointed out here that the pedigree table given at page 40 of the printed record is not correct and the above table represents the relationship of the parties as admitted before us. The property mortgaged by Maula Bakhsh was a portion of the estate of Sahib Din who died on March 15, 1919.

Defendants Nos. 4, 5, 7, 8, 9 and 10 claim an interest in the property on the basis of a will dated February 27, 1919, left by Sahib Din and a subsequent partition of that property effected by arbitrators who gave their award on May 26, 1921 (vide Ex. D/10 at p. 78 of the printed record). Defendants Nos. 16 to 18 are purchasers of the mortgaged property. Defendant No. 16 claims to have purchased house No. 1 in the mortgage deed from Musammat Hussain Bibi, guardian of defendants No. 7 to 10 (who are minors) to whose share the house had fallen as a result of the partition. The guardian sold his house to defendant No. 16 with the sanction of the Court under the Guardians and Wards Act on February 9, 1926 (vide Exs. D-1 and D-2 pp. 88-91 of the printed record). House No. 3 in the mortgage-deed was sold by Government in 1923 after the death of Sahib Din for recovery of arrears of income tax due from him. It was purchased at an auction sale by one Rattan Chand, who sold it to Dr. Maula Bakhsh (not the mortgagor) and Dr. Maula Bakhsh in his turn sold it to defendant No. 17. Defendant No. 18 similarly claimed to have purchased house No. 2 in the mortgage deed but it is unnecessary to go into the details of his claim as he has not appealed.

Defendants Nos. 16 and 17 who were the principal contesting defendants resisted the plaintiff's claim mainly on the following grounds: (a) The property in dispute belonged to Sahib Din and devolved on his heirs including the mortgagor Maula Bakhsh on Sahib Din's death in 1919. Maula Bakhsh was adjudged insolvent in 1916 and was not discharged till 1927. He was, therefore, an undischarged insolvent in December 1922 when the mortgage in question was executed. According to the provisions of s. 28, sub-s. 4 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, Maula Bakhsh's share in Sahib Din's property, vested forthwith in the Official Receiver and consequently the mortgage effected by Maula Bakhsh in favour of the plaintiff was invalid. (b) Sahib Din had left a will in respect of which letters of administration were granted to Abdul Karim, a nephew of Sahib Din, on the July 26, 1921 (vide Ex. D-3 at p. 71 of the printed record). According to law Abdul Karim was, therefore, the only person entitled to dispose of the property at the time of the execution of the mortgage. (c) Defendants Nos. 16 and 17 were bona fide purchasers for value of a part of the mortgaged property and their title could not be defeated. (d) Maula Bakhsh mortgaged 1-3rd of his share in the property specified in the mortgage deed in favour of the plaintiff; but his share in the property according to Muhammadan Law was much less. He could not in any case mortgage more than his own share.

The plaintiff denied any knowledge of the will left by Sahib Din and pleaded that the alleged partition of the property was a fraudulent transaction which was not binding on him. The learned Subordinate Judge found the material issues in favour of the plaintiff and granted plaintiff a decree under O. XXXIV, r. 4, Civil Procedure Code, for recovery of Rs. 10,000 by the sale of the mortgaged property, with costs and future interest at the stipulated rate of Rs. 2 per cent. per mensem up to realization. The costs were directed to be borne in equal shares by (i) descendants of Maula Bakhsh, (ii) defendant No. 16 and (iii) defendant No. 17. From this decision defendants Nos. 7 to 10, 16 and 17 have appealed. Defendant No. 18 who claimed to be a purchaser of house No. 2 in the mortgage deed has not appealed.

The main points agitated in this appeal were (a), (b), (c) and (d) as given above. As regards (a), it is not disputed that at the time of the execution of the mortgage-deed Maula Bakhsh was an undischarged insolvent and the property in suit was really vested in the Receiver according to s. 28 (4) of the Provincial Insolvency Act. But the learned Judge of the trial Court has held that the mortgage was all the same valid, as the Receiver had not yet intervened and claimed the property. In support of this view he has relied on Alimahomed Abdul Husain v. Vardilal Devchand (1), Chhote Lal v. Kedar Nath (2) and Dasru Mahar v. Official Receiver (3). It was held in these cases on the basis of the rule laid down in Cohen v. Mitchell (4), that the property acquired by an insolvent after adjudication but before his discharge can be transferred by him provided that the transaction is bona fide and for value and is completed before the intervention of the Receiver. The learned Counsel for the appellants has submitted that these decisions cannot be held to lay down the law correctly in view of the clear language of s. 28 (4) of the Provincial Insolvency Act and has cited in support of this contention Mg Phaw v. Ma Ba Thaw (5), in which it was held that the rule laid down in Cohen v. Mitchell (4) could not be applied in a case governed by the provisions of s. 28 (4) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920. Sub-s. (4) of s. 28 of the Provincial Insolvency Act runs as follows:

> All property which is acquired by or devolves on insolvent after the date of an order of adjudication and before his discharge shall forthwith vest in the Court or Receiver, and the provisions of sub-s. (2) shall apply in respect thereof.

According to the plain language of the section it seems clear that on the death of Sahib Din the share of his estate which devolved on Maula Bakhsh forthwith vested in the Receiver, Maula Bakhsh being an undischarged insolvent at the time. The facts in Cohen v. Mitchell (4), are distinguishable as the property had not devolved on the insolvent in that case by inheritance. The rule laid down therein was based on equitable grounds and given

(1) 53 Ind Cas. 197; A I R 1919 Bom. 115; 43 B 890; 21 Bom. L R 849.

(2) 84 Ind Cas. 289; A I R 1924 All. 703; 46 A 565; 22 A L J 455; L R 5 A 329 Civ.

(3) 97 Ind. Cas 980; A I R 1927 Nag. 16.

(4) (1890) 25 Q B D 262; 59 L J Q B 409; 63 L T 206; 28 W R 551; 7 Morrell 207.

(5) 97 Ind. Cas. 221; A I R 1926 Rang. 179; 4 R 125; 5 Bur. L T 98.

effect to in a long series of decisions and eventually received statutory recognition in England in s. 47 of the Bankruptcy Act of 1914. The Provincial Insolvency Act now in force in India was enacted in 1920; but the Legislature has not thought it fit to import therein the provisions of s. 47 of the English Bankruptcy Act, 1914. It was pointed out by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Ramanandi Kuer v. Kalawali Kuer (6), that when there is a positive enactment of the Indian Legislature, the proper course is to examine the language of the Statute and to ascertain its proper meaning uninfluenced by any considerations derived from the previous state of the law or of the English Law on which it may be founded. In view of this dictum of their Lordships and the plain language of s. 28 (4) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, I would adopt the view taken by the Rangoon High Court in Ma Phaw v. Mg. Ba Thaw (5), and hold that the mortgage executed by Maula Bakhsh in favour of the plaintiff in 1922 was invalid as the mortgagor's interest in the property was vested in the Receiver at that time.

It follows from the above that the subsequent partition of the property amongst the descendants of Sahib Din was also not valid so far as Maula Bakhsh's share was concerned inasmuch as the Receiver in whom that share was vested was not a party to that partition.

In view of the above finding it is hardly necessary to discuss point (b) relating to the situation created by the issue of letters of administration to Abdul Karim in 1921. But it may be mentioned that the will with respect to which the letters of administration were granted had been really superseded by another will dated February 27, 1919, and during the arbitration proceedings relating to the partition the former will was treated as cancelled and the later will was accepted as binding on the parties concerned. Abdul Karim the administrator was himself a party to these partition proceedings. The letters of administration cannot therefore affect the validity of the mortgage in question.

The mortgage in favour of the plaintiff must be treated as invalid in its inception owing to the insolvency of Maula Bakhsh as stated above. But the insolvency proceedings having come to an end by the discharge of Maula Bakhsh in 1927, it is necessary to consider the effect thereof on the plaintiff's claim. Although the property which is the subject-matter of the appeal vested in the Receiver, he apparently never claimed it in the insolvency proceedings and even in the course of the present suit he did not care to appear or put forward any claim. In the absence of any order to the contrary, the property in question must therefore be considered to have revested in the mortgagor on his discharge. The question for consideration now is whether in view of this revesting of the property in the mortgagor the plaintiff is entitled to any relief on the basis of the mortgage. It was held in similar circumstances in Rup Narain Singh v. Har Gopal Tiwari (7) that the principle laid down in s. 43 of the Transfer of Property Act would be applicable and on the revesting of the property in the mortgagor the mortgagee will be entitled to enforce the mortgage. Similarly, the partition of 1924 must also be held to be now binding. For although the Receiver was not a party to it, Maula Bakhsh, the mortgagor was, and he is consequently estopped from repudiating that transaction.

Assuming then that the plaintiff can now enforce his mortgage, the next point for consideration is whether he is entitled to enforce it against the specific property mortgaged in spite of the fact that in the course of a subsequent partition it fell to the lot of other co-sharers. The property being joint at the time of the execution of the mortgage, Maula Bakhsh could only mortgage his undivided share in the property. As pointed out by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Mahomed Afzul Khan v. Abdul Rahman (8), such a right is always subject to the right of the other co-sharers to effect a partition and when such partition is carried out, the mortgagee can only enforce his rights against such property as falls to the share of his mortgagor, unless he can show that the partition was fraudulent. In the present instance, it was no doubt alleged by the plaintiff that the partition carried out through the arbitrator was fraudulent; but there seems to be no adequate evidence on the record to establish this allegation. All that the learned Counsel for the plaintiff pointed out in this connection was that Maula Bakhsh got very little in the way of immovable property and that his share consisted mostly of cash or actionable claims, while some of the minor members of the family got considerable immovable property. This circumstance is no doubt suspicious but some of the other co-sharers also appear to have been allotted movable property. The schedules giving full details of the property were not proved, nor was the arbitrator Ghulam Rasul, who was examined as a witness, questioned on the point. In the circumstances I am unable to hold on the evidence as it stands on the record that the partition was fraudulent.

(6) 107 Ind. Cas. 14; A I R 1928 P C 2; 55 I A 18; 7 Pat. 221; 5 O W N 96; I L T 40 Pat. 19; 30 Bom. L B 227; 47 C L J 171; 54 M L J 281; 9 P L T 97; 32 C W N 402; 26 A L J 385; (1928) M W N 282; 27 L W 782 (P C).

(7) 113 Ind. Cas. 836; A I R 1933 All. 449; 55 A 503; (1933) A L J 475; Ind. Rul. (1933) All. 343.

(8) 139 Ind. Cas. 85; A I R 1932 P C 235; 59 I A 405; 13 Lah. 702; Ind. Rul. (1932) P C 285; 9 O W N 829; 36 C W N 1129; 33 L W 456; (1932) M W N 1063; 63 M L J 664; (1932) A L J 909; L R 13 A 350 Cr; 16 R D 522; 56 C L J 324; 35 Bom. L R 1; 34 P L R 631 (P C).

If the partition was valid, it follows that according to the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Mohamed Afzal Khan v. Abdul Rahman (8), the mortgagee can now enforce his rights only against the property which fell to the share of Maula Bakhsh in the course of the partition. It was urged that the mortgagee was not a party to the partition proceedings but no authority has been cited to show that this was essential. The mortgagee was not a co-sharer. He had only a charge on the undivided share of the mortgagor and he had no right to prevent the co-sharers from partitioning the property. In the event of partition he could, therefore, only enforce it against such property as fell to the share of the mortgagor. It may be pointed out that in the case before their Lordships of the Privy Council in Mohamed Afzul Khan v. Abdul Rahman (8) also the mortgagee does not appear to have been a party to the partition proceedings.

The property purchased by defendant No. 16 did not admittedly fall to the share of the mortgagor and his appeal must therefore succeed. The property purchased by defendant No. 17 stands on a different footing. It had already been sold before the partition for realization of the arrears of income-tax due from Sahib Din and this property was therefore not affected by the partition. All that need be considered in the circumstances is whether the incumbrance created by Maula Bakhsh thereon in 1922 was binding on Ratan Chand who purchased it later at the auction sale in 1923 and on the subsequent transferees.

It has been pointed out above that the mortgage in favour of the plaintiff was invalid in its inception as the mortgagor was insolvent at the time of the execution of the mortgage in 1922. Consequently no valid incumbrance was created in favour of the plaintiff at that time. Subsequently the property was sold at an auction sale in 1923 for realization of the arrears of income-tax due from Sahib Din, Maula Bakhsh's share in the property was vested in the Receiver at the time. But the Receiver did not claim it and in fact he could not have raised any objection, as the debts due from Sahib Din formed a first charge on the estate. Ratan Chand consequently acquired an indefeasible title by the auction sale and so did defendant No. 17 who stands in his position now. The learned Counsel for the plaintiff referred to para. 32 of Mulla's Muhammadan Law (edition of 1935), in which it is stated that any heir may even before the distribution of the estate transfer his own share and pass a good title to a bona fide transferee for value notwithstanding any debts due from the deceased; but this cannot help the plaintiff, as he acquired no valid title by the mortgage of 1922 as pointed out above. The appeal of defendant No. 17 also must, therefore, succeed.

On the above findings it seems unnecessary to go into the question as to what share in the estate of Sahib Din Maula Bakhsh was entitled to get according to Muhammadan Law, or the question of future interest which was argued before us. As the appellants have succeeded, there seems to be no good reason why they should not get their costs throughout. The plaintiff took the mortgage long after Maula Bakhsh was adjudged insolvent and he could scarcely have been unaware of his insolvency, especially in view of the evidence given by Banarsi Das, P. W. No. 4.

Sardari Mal, defendant No. 18, who had purchased a portion of the mortgagor's property, and the mortgagor have not appealed. Consequently the decree passed against them must stand. I would, therefore, accept the appeal and modify the decree of the lower Court to the extent of directing that houses Nos. 1 and 3 which were purchased by defendants Nos. 16 and 17 shall not be liable to be sold for satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim. The plaintiff will, however, be entitled to realize the decretal amount from house No. 2 in the mortgage-deed as ordered by the learned Subordinate Judge and shall also be entitled to realize it from such property as fell to the share of Maula Bakhsh by virtue of the partition effected by the award of the arbitrators dated May 26, 1924. The appellants shall get their costs throughout.

Dalip Singh, J.—I agree to the order proposed. I would like only to add that I do not think the rule in Cohen v. Mitchell (4) applies in the circumstances of this case. I should prefer to express no opinion on the question whether it might not apply in another case.

D. Appeal accepted.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT
Full Bench

Second Civil Appeal No. 10 of 1932
February 20, 1935
SULAIMAN, C. J., KENDALL AND BAJPAI, JJ.
LALLU SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus
Lala CHANDER SEN—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT

Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926), s. 225—Interest—Court, if bound to give 12 per cent. interest only up to date of suit—Interest pendente lite and future interest is governed by Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 34

Under the provisions of s. 225, Agra Tenancy Act, a co-sharer is entitled to claim interest at the rate of 1 per cent. per mensem. The Court is, therefore, bound to award him interest at 12 per cent. per annum up to the date of the suit. As regards the interest pendente lite and future, the case is governed by s. 34, Civil Procedure Code, which is applicable to suits in the Revenue Court as well, and under that section, in addition to any interest adjudged on the principal sum for any period prior to the institution of the suit, the Court may order interest at such rate as it deems reasonable to be paid on the principal sum adjudged from the date of the suit to the date of the decree, as well as further interest from the date of the decree till the date of realization. It is, therefore, incumbent on the Court to fix rates for pendente lite and future interest if it decides to award such interests; but it is not obligatory on the Court to award interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, just as it is not obligatory on a Court to award pendente lite and future interest at the contractual rate in case of simple money debts. Mohammad Abdul-Jalil Khan v. Mohamad Abdul Salam Khan (2), explained.

S. C. A. from a decision of the District Judge, Bulandshahr, dated November 16, 1931.

Mr. Shiva Prasad Sinha, for the Appellant.

Mr. A. M. Khwaja, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is a defendant's appeal arising out of a suit for profits under s. 226, Agra Tenancy Act. The facts are fully set forth in the order dated November 22, 1933, which is reported in Lallu Singh v. Chander Sen (1). Before remanding certain issues it was decided by the Full Bench that the plaintiff as assignee of the profits for 1934 F was entitled to maintain the suit against the lambardar and also that such a suit lay in the Revenue Court. It was further held that the defendant can claim adjustment on account of any decree held by him in respect of any payment of Government revenue made during the year 1334 F., but not earlier. It was also laid down that when an ostensible purchaser who is not a bona fide purchaser and has simply lent his name to a debtor to be used as a cloak for the property, brings a suit to enforce the debtor's claim, it is open to a creditor of the debtor to prove the nature of the transfer, and that the suit can be regarded as a suit instituted by the debtor herself through her benamidar. The further question whether if the transfer was not a sham and bogus transaction, but had really passed properly, though it was effected in order to defeat or delay creditors and was therefore fraudulent in that sense, the defendant can still be allowed to defeat the plaintiff's claim on the ground that the transfer is not binding upon him, was not decided. And as the facts had not been clearly found, issues were sent down to the lower Appellate Court for fresh findings.

The lower Appellate Court has now found that Rs. 527-15-0 was the amount of the Government Revenue paid by the lambardar on account of the plaintiff's share in the year 1334 F.; and therefore the defendant is undoubtedly entitled to claim a deduction of this amount from the principal sum of Rs. 696, which was the share of the profits of the assignor of the plaintiff in that year. The learned Advocate for the plaintiff urges before us that that he is entitled to support the decree of the lower Appellate Court on the ground that the amount should not be reduced inasmuch as the plaintiff should be given interest at the rate of 1 per cent. per mensem pendente lite, and not only 6 per cent. per annum which was allowed by the trial Court. No doubt the plaintiff was entitled to support the decree on such a ground if valid. But the trial Court had fixed only 6 per cent. per annnm as the rate of pendente lite and future interest and no objection was taken in the lower Appellate

(1) 147 Ind. Cas. 937; A I R 1934 All. 155; 56 A 624; (1934) A L J 1; 6 R A 586; 18 R D 32; L R 15 A 29 Rev. (F B).

Court to this rate, although the lower Appellate Court actually reduced the amount decreed to the plaintiff. No cross-objections were filed in this High Court in respect of the lower rate of interest.

The learned Advocate for the plaintiff relies on the case of Mohammad Abdul Jalil Khan v. Mohammad Abdul Salam Khan (2), for the proposition that the plaintiff is entitled to get simple interest at the rate of 1 per cent. per annum on his share of the net profits from the date when they became divisible till actual realisation. No doubt in that case, having regard to the circumstances there present, such a rate of interest was allowed instead of allowing to the plaintiff the principal sum with interest at 12 per cent. per annum up to the date of the suit and pendente lite and future interset at 6 per cent. per annum on the consolidated amount. But it was nowhere laid down in that case that the plaintiff co-sharer is entitled as of right to recover interest at 12 per cent. per annum on the principal amount of profits from the date when they accrued till the date of realization. Under the provisions of s. 225 a co-sharer is entitled to claim interest at the rate of 1 per cent. per mensem. The Court is therefore bound to award him interest at 12 per cent. per annum up to the date of the suit. As regards the interest pendente lite and future, the case is governed by s. 34, Civil Procedure Code, which is applicable to suits in the Revenue Court as well, and under that section, in addition to any interest adjudged on the principal sum for any period prior to the institution of the suit, the Court may order interest at such rate as it deems reasonable to be paid on the principal sum adjudged, from the date of the suit to the date of the decree as well as further interest from the date of the decree till the date of realization. It is, therefore, incumbent on the Court to fix rates for pendente lite and future interest if it decides to award such interests but it is not obligatory on the Court to award interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, just as it is not obligatory on a Court to award pendente lite and future interest at the contractual rate in case of simple money debts. In Mohammad Abdul Jalil Khan v. Mohammad Abdul Salam Khan (2), the particular method of calculating interest was chosen because there were altogether 34 appeals between the parties which were conveniently to be disposed of on some common principle. It was not intended to be laid down there that in every case a plaintiff is entitled as of right to claim interest at the rate of 1 per cent. per mensem even after the institution of the suit. In the circumstances of the present case we do not think that we should award to the plaintiff interest at 12 per cent. per annum pendente lite.

The next point whether the defendant can take advantage of the principle underlying s. 53, Transfer of Property Act, against the plaintiff assignee of the profits by showing that the transfer was with intent to defeat and delay her creditors does not arise, because of the clear finding of fact by the lower Appellate Court that in the present case there is absolutely nothing to show that the present plaintiff had colluded with his assignor to defraud the appellant by getting the profits sold to him fictitiously, or even that he had any knowledge that his assignor wanted to defraud any of her creditors by making the transfer to him. We do not think that the lower Appellate Court has placed the burden of proof wrongly on the defendant-appellant. He is not invoking the provisions of s. 53, Transfer of Property Act, in terms, but is seeking the aid of the principles of justice, equity and good conscience which cannot be applied unless the facts are fully established by him.

We would accordingly allow this appeal in part, and modify the decree of the lower Appellate Court in this way, that we order that a sum of Rs. 527-15-0 be first deducted from the principal sum of profits of Rs. 696, leaving a balance of Rs. 168-1-0, and that the plaintiff should have interest at 12 per cent. per annum on this balance from August 1, 1927, till September 17, 1927, and thereafter at 6 per cent. per annum on the consolidated amount till the date of realization or till the date of the deposit in the Court below, if made in this case. Parties will receive and pay costs in proportion to success and failure in all Courts.

D. Appeal allowed

(2) 137 Ind. Cas. 166: A I R 1932 All 178; (1932) A L J 93; L R 13 A 29 Rev; 16 R D 110; Ind. Rul. (1932) All. 278.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Original Civil Jurisdiction Appeal No. 29 of 1934

September 21, 1934.

BEAUMONT, C. J. AND RANGNEKAR, J.

D. N. REGE—APPELLANT

versus

V. C. VIJAYAKAR—RESPONDENT

Solicitor—Bill of costs—Taxation — English Law—Applicability in Bombay—Bombay High Court Rules (Original Side), 1930, r. 559—Bill of costs, if can be amended—Costs — Discretion — Correspondence of Solicitor undignified—Solicitor deprived of his costs —Discretion, if properly used.

The law and practice in England relating to Solicitors and to taxation of bills of costs applies in Bombay Presidency, except where that law or practice is inconsistent with the rules or practice of the High Court. [p. 946, col. 1.]

There is no rule in Bombay restricting the normal right of a Solicitor as a professional man to amend his bill of costs which he has once presented to his client. He is at liberty to present another and revised bill for taxation. It is within the discretion of the Taxing Master to saddle him with costs of taxation if he is of opinion that he has delivered to his client an exorbitant bill of costs. [p. 947, col. 1.]

Judges have a very wide discretion in the matter of costs, but it is a discretion which must be exercised judicially. For a Judge to deprive a Solicitor of costs because the Judge disapproves the style of his correspondence and would be glad to see the controversial methods of Solicitors generally altered, is, to confuse the functions of a Judge with those of a school-master. [p. 947, cols 1 & 2.]

Appeal against the order of Mr. Justice Tyabji, dated September 5, 1934.

Messrs. Jamshed Kanga and N. G. Nadkarni, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. L. Maneksha, for the Respondent.

Mr. K. McI. Kemp, for the Incorporated Law Society.

Beaumont, C. J.—This is an appeal from an order made by Tyabji, J., in Chambers relating to a bill of costs of Solicitors who are the appellants. The appellants had acted as Solicitors for a client who was engaged in certain disputes with his father. There had been a testamentary suit which had terminated, and then there was a partition action. In 1932 there was a proposal to settle the partition action, and in connection with such settlement the son desired to know the amount of the Solicitors' bill. He accordingly asked the Solicitors to send him their bill, and on May 13, the Solicitors sent in what they described as copy of a draft bill of costs. They sent it in with a covering letter saying:

"As we have had not the time to go through the draft bill and examine the same, we make it clear that the bill submitted to you herewith is subject to our revising the same in the event of taxation, in which case we shall, of course, submit to you a copy of our revised bill. As it is, we are prepared to settle our costs with you on the basis of the bill submitted herewith."

So that it is clear that in the first instance the bill was not delivered as a final bill. Subsequent correspondence took place, in which it may be said that the Solicitors treated this draft bill as a bill formally delivered, and I will deal with the case on that basis. Eventually, however, they applied for taxation of a revised bill. In the first instance the Taxing Master agreed to tax the bill. Then an application was made to him to review his taxation, and on that application he came to the conclusion that he must reject the whole bill. In so doing he took the view that the English cases dealing with the law on the subject prevented a Solicitor from delivering a fresh bill after having already delivered a previous bill. Then there was an application to the Chamber Judge to review the order of the Taxing Master, and the learned Judge came to the conclusion that the view of the Taxing Master was right, and from his judgment this appeal is brought.

The question for decision is whether the law on the subject which prevails in England applies to taxations in this Court. Now in England taxation between Solicitor and client is, or was, until recently, dealt with under s. 37, Solicitors Act, 1843. That section provides that a Solicitor shall not be entitled to sue for his fees until one month after the date of the delivery of his bill to the client, and within the month the client can apply for an order for taxation. If the client does apply, the common form order is made which directs the Taxing Master to tax and settle the bill and certify the amount due, and then orders the client to pay what is found to be due, because an application for taxation involves an undertaking on the part of the client to pay what is found to be due. Then the section deals with the costs of the taxation, and provides that the costs of the reference shall be paid according to the event of the taxation, that is, if the bill when taxed be less by a sixth part than the bill delivered, then the Solicitor has to pay the costs, and if the bill when taxed shall not be less by a sixth part than the bill delivered, then the party chargeable has to pay the costs, and the only discretion as to costs which is left in the Taxing Master is that if he thinks there are special circumstances, he may certify the circumstances to the Court, and the Court then may make such order as to the payment of the costs of taxation as it thinks fit. There is no statutory provision in England which prevents a Solicitor from delivering more than one bill, but it has been held in many cases that a Solicitor is bound by the bill once delivered, subject to certain exceptions, which I need not discuss. The reason for the rule is this, that if the Solicitor is at liberty to deliver an exorbitant bill, and then, when he finds that it is going to be taxed, he is entitled to substitute for that exorbitant bill a proper bill, the result will be that he will generally escape having to pay the costs of taxation, because less than a sixth is likely to be taxed off a proper bill whereas more than a sixth would probably have been taxed off the exorbitant bill. The object of the rule is to protect the client from having exorbitant bills delivered, but it is obvious that the protection afforded is partial only; the rule does not prevent the Solicitor delivering an exorbitant bill, nor does it afford any relief to the client who pays the exorbitant bill; at the most it may be said that the rule tends to discourage a Solicitor from delivering an exorbitant bill, because of the fear that he may be left to pay the costs of taxation. The question is whether that rule of English practice ought to be applied in this Presidency. It is, I think, true to say generally that the law and practice in England relating to Solicitors and to taxation of bills of costs applies in this Presidency, except where that law or practice is inconsistent with the rules or practice of this Court. But there is no statute in Bombay dealing with the matter, and it is clear that the English Solicitors Act does not apply. Taxation is dealt with in this Court by rules of the Court commencing at r. 519. That rule provides:

"The Taxing Officer shall tax the bills of costs on every side of the Court (except the Appellate Side) and in the insolvent Court. All other bills of costs of Attorneys shall also be taxed by him when he is directed to do so by a Judge's order."

The bill in this case dealt with matters on the original side of the Court, and therefore, the obligatory portion of the rule applied. It is argued by the appellant that the Taxing Master being ordered to tax bills on the original side, was not at liberty to refuse to tax the bill in the present case. On the other hand, it is contended by the respondent that the obligation on the Taxing Master to tax bills only means proper bills, and I agree that the Taxing Master might refuse to tax a bill which was not in conformity with the rules, or was otherwise improper. It is, however, rather a strong thing to say that when a bill is delivered for taxation the Taxing Master can refuse to tax it because a bill has been previously delivered by the Solicitors, there being no rule of this Court forbidding such an act. Then it is to be noticed that there is no rule which requires delivery of the bill to the client. No doubt, in practice the Taxing Master will see that the client has a proper opportunity as considering a bill before taxation, but there is no rule of this Court which makes delivery of the bill a condition precedent to any suit to recover the fees. Then r. 559 deals with costs, and that rule provides that except when a bill is taxed between party and party, whenever one-sixth part of the bill shall be taken off by taxation, the Attorney shall pay all costs whatever attending the taxation. Now it is to be observed that that rule is much less comprehensive than the English statutory rule. It provides that if more than a sixth is taxed off, the Solicitor shall pay the costs, but it does not provide that if less than a sixth is taxed off the party chargeable shall pay the costs. No doubt in practice that would be the course ordinarily adopted by the Taxing Master, but he is not, as in England, compelled to adopt that course. It seems to me that if the Taxing Master comes to the conclusion that the only reason why less than a sixth has been taxed off a bill is that the Solicitor has substituted a proper bill for a more exorbitant one previously delivered, that would be a very good reason for depriving the Solicitor of any costs of taxation. So that, the protection which the rule in question is designed to afford in England, a modified protection against the delivery of exorbitant bills, is, it seems to me, provided for in this country by the wider discretion given to the Taxing Master in dealing with the costs of his taxation. Having regard to the peremptory terms of r. 519, the absence of any obligation on the Solicitor to deliver a bill one month before suing, and the difference in the rule as to costs, it seems to me that there is no sufficient reason for holding that the English rule that a Solicitor must be bound by a bill once delivered applies to this Court. It must be remembered, as was pointed out by Fletcher Moulton, L. J., in Lumsden v. Shipcote Land Co. (1) that if a Solicitor is not to be at liberty to amend a bill once delivered or to substitute a fresh bill, he is deprived of a right which any other professional man would enjoy, and that deprivation can only be justified either on the ground of some statute, or on the ground of the disciplinary jurisdiction which the Courts exercise over Solicitors. There is no statute applicable in Bombay, and it is difficult to see why the disciplinary jurisdiction should be invoked in a case like the present where it has been held by the learned Judge that the Solicitor's conduct was perfectly fair, and was not intended in any way to overreach the client. The original bill was delivered at the express request of the client because he wanted to know in a hurry what the amount of costs to which he was liable was likely to be. I see no sufficient reason for incorporating in this country this rule which restricts the normal right of a professional man to amend his bill. I am only dealing with the case of a fresh bill delivered before the former one has been lodged for taxation. I do not mean to suggest that after a bill has been lodged for taxation the Solicitor would have any right to withdraw the bill or to alter it without the consent of the Taxing Master. In my opinion, therefore, the decision of the Taxing Master and the learned Chamber Judge was not correct. Before parting with the case I desire to say that I cannot approve of the principle on which the learned Judge dealt with a part of the costs. He said in his judgment:

(1) (1906) 2 K B 433; 75 L J K B 665; 22 T L R 559; 54 W R 461; 95 L T 17.

"I wish to leave no room for misunderstanding the significance of the order as to costs which I am making. My order, that the costs of these proceedings should be borne by the Solicitor in form follows the usual practice that the costs should follow the event but in reality my order makes the Solicitor pay a considerable portion of the costs from which I should have been inclined to relieve him if the correspondence had not been in terms which I highly disapprove and the tendency to adopt which I should like to eradicate. Much correspondence is carried on in Bombay in terms that are offensive to the Court."

Now it appears that after the original bill was delivered, some correspondence took place and the client suggested to the Solicitor that he should take a sum considerably less than the sum claimed to be due, and this seems to have annoyed the Solicitor and it is, I think, a legitimate criticism upon some of the correspondence that it is couched in terms that are unnecessarily acrimonious and in doubtful taste: but it is not suggested that the tone of the correspondence had any influence whatever on the course of events or increased to any extent the costs. Judges have a very wide discretion in the matter of costs, but it is a discretion which must be exercised Judicially. For a Judge to deprive a Solicitor of costs because the Judge disapproves the style of his correspondence and would be glad to see the controversial methods of Solicitors generally altered is, in my opinion, to confuse the functions of a Judge with those of a school-master. In my opinion the appeal must be allowed. The respondent should pay all costs of the appellants throughout except the costs of the order by the learned Chamber Judge on September 5, 1934, on speaking to the minutes, the lower Court's order of costs as to which will stand.

Rangnekar, J.—I agree both on the merits as also with the observations of my Lord the Chief Justice as regards the order for costs in this matter. The learned Judge has given two reasons for his order. The first is that some of the sentences in two letters written by the Solicitor were expressed in objectionable language and second is the desire of the learned Judge to eradicate the tendency which according to him exists among the Solicitors in Bombay to carry on correspondence in offensive language. As to the first, even assuming that the sentences invited criticism it is clear that the style of the correspondence did not in any way increase the costs. As to the latter, speaking for myself a generalisation of this nature must be deprecated and speaking for myself and with respect there is no ground for it. Apart from this, in my opinion, the reasons given can hardly be relied upon as supporting the order.

On the merits the matter is exhaustively dealt with in the judgment just delivered. I only wish to add a few words. It is broadly stated that the law and practice prevailing in England must in every case of such a nature be made applicable in this country. I entirely dissent from this proposition. In my view it is only in case where there is no law of the land or no statutory rules applicable that one can turn to the law and practice in England on the principle of "justice, equity and good conscience." In my view the High Court Rules, and in particular rr. 519 to 529 read with notice in Form No. 140 mentioned therein make it clear (1) that the Taxing Master is bound to tax a bill of costs which is in accordance with the rules; (2) a Solicitor is not bound to deliver his bill to his client; (3) the English rule that a Solicitor is bound by a bill once delivered does not apply. The Advocate-General has drawn our attention to various points of difference as regards procedure relating to taxation under the Solicitors Act in England and our rules. It is not necessary to refer to them except one point which is important. In England the delivery of a bill to a client is a condition precedent to the right to bring an action for costs. Here it is conceded that a solicitor can sue for recovery of his costs without having previously submitted his bill to the client.

As a matter of practice, however, the majority of Solicitors send a copy of a bill of costs to their clients before lodging the same for taxation and the Taxing Master in practice sees that this is done. Assuming, however, that the English practice applied to this case, it is quite clear that in England it is competent to a Solicitor to send a bill of costs to the client at his request subject to a condition. The only question is whether the condition which is imposed by the Solicitor at the time of submitting the bill to the client is a fair condition or not. This is clear from In re Thompson (2). The first para. of the head-note is as follows:

"A Solicitor may, when sending in his bill of costs to his client, reserve to himself the right to withdraw or alter it on condition, provided the condition is fully and clearly stated to the client but if the Solicitor has sent in his bill without any condition or with a condition which he could not fairly impose, he cannot afterwards withdraw it or send in an amended bill."

It is argued that the case only decides that the only condition which a Solicitor can impose on the client when he sends his bill to him must be that he must tell the client that the bill contains charges which cannot be sanctioned on taxation. I am unable to accept the contention. The condition mentioned by Cotton, L. J., in that case was mentioned by him as an illustration or example and it can hardly be urged that the learned Lord Justice intended to lay down that condition for all times and in all circumstances. The learned Lord Justice observed as follows (p. 450*):

"It would I think, be wrong to say that a Solicitor who sends in his bill subject to a fair condition, and one which we ought to hold lawful, is not entitled to do so just as much as anyone else might be entitled to send either moneys or securities on a condition but such a condition as we find here is not one which ought to be allowed nor one which a Solicitor can impose upon his client."

Lindley, L. J , observed (p. 453*):

"..... it appears to me that they have not fulfilled their obligation as Solicitors to their client, in expressing the condition in the language which they did."

A careful perusal of the case shows clearly that the principle laid down was that in imposing a condition upon a client the Solicitor must act in a fair manner and not in a fraudulent or dishonest manner so as to overreach the client in other words, the condition must not be such as would "open a door to fraud." On the facts of this case I find it impossible to hold that a bill as such was finally delivered or intended to be delivered to the client even within the meaning of the English rule and I am not prepared to say that the condition was not fair. I further find from the notes of argument which the Taxing Master has taken down, that on the very first day the Solicitor contended that what he sent to the client was a rough copy of the bill. That contention was accepted by the Taxing Master, and he overruled the objection made by the respondent and he proceeded to tax the bill and it is only on an application for a review brought in that he changed his mind and held that the bill could not be taxed as it was not the original bill submitted by the Solicitor to the client. Now it seems to me extremely doubtful whether the Taxing Master had any jurisdiction to vary the order which he had made. An application for review is made under r. 554; and it states that the party dissatisfied with the allowance or disallowance of any item or items by the Taxing Master may at any time before the allocatur is signed, deliver to the other party interested therein and carry in before the Taxing Master an objection in writing to such allowance or disallowance specifying in a short list the item or items or part or parts thereof objected to and under r. 555 the Taxing Master has to consider the items which are specifically objected to and reconsider his taxation. But that was not the position here.

D. Appeal allowed.

(2) (1885) 30 Ch. D 441.

*Pages of (1885) 30 Ch. D.—[Ed.]

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Civil Revision Petition No. 878 of 1933

October 16, 1934

VENKATASUBBA RAO, J.

DASARI NAGABHUSHANAM—PETITIONER

versus

KUNAMNENI VENKATAPPAYYA—RESPONDENT

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7 (iv-A), Sch. II, Art. 17-A (1)—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 39—Suit for declaration that a registered document is forgery—Prayer for cancelling deed, whether necessary—Proper court-fee—Effect of registration on onus of proof—Prayer for refund of costs in registration enquiry, nature of.

Where the plaintiff brought a suit alleging that a sale deed which purported to have been executed by him and which was directed by the Registrar to be registered was in fact a forgery by the defendant and praying that the instrument may be declared a forgery:

Held, that it was not incumbent on the plaintiff to have it cancelled or set aside and the suit was governed for purposes of court-fee, by Sch. II, Art. 17-A (1) of the Court Fees Act and not by s. 7 (iv-A). Arunachallam Chetty v. Rangaswamy Pillai (1), Venkatasiva Rao v. Venkatanarasimha Satyanarayanamurthy (2), Achathil Balakrishnan Nair v. Vishnu Nambudri (3), Kalliya Pillai v. Ramaswamy Pillai (4) and Ratnamasari v. Akilandammal (5) referred to.

In a suit rightly framed under s. 39, Specific Relief Act, it is the Court's function to order the instrument to be cancelled and to send a copy of its decree to the Registrar. The plaintiff need not pray for it.

The decision of the Registrar that a document is genuine and the registration of the document have not got even the effect of shifting the onus of proof from the party who alleges that the document is genuine. Mohima Chundar Dhur v. Jugul Kishore Bhattacharji (6), referred to.

A prayer in a suit of this nature for refund of the costs incurred in the registration enquiry is not a prayer for a consequential relief but only one for an additional relief.

Petition under s. 115 of Act V of 1908 and s. 107 of the Government of India Act, praying the High Court to revise the order of the Court of the District Munsif of Tenali, dated February 21, 1933 and made in O. S. No. 306 of 1931.

Messrs. V. Subrahmanyan and V. Satyanarayana, for the Petitioner.

The Government Pleader, for the Rospondent.

Judgment.—In my opinion, the view of the court-fee examiner and the decision of the District Munsif supporting that view, are clearly wrong. There is a distinction between the getting rid of a document to which a person is a party and one to which he is not. The plaintiff in the suit complains that the sale deed was forged by the defendant, that in spite of his objection, the Registrar directed its registration and he prays that the instrument may be declared to be a forgery.

When a person impeaches a deed as having been forged, to refer to him as being a party to it, is an obvious mis-use of words. Mr. K. Subba Rao, who supports the lower Court's view, contends that the provision applicable is s. 7 (iv-A) of the Court Fees Act, which runs thus:

"In a suit for cancellation of a decree for money or other property having a money value, or other document securing money or other property having such value, according to the value of the subject-matter of the suit, and such value shall be deemed to be if the whole decree or other document is sought to be cancelled, the amount or the value of the property for which the decree was passed or the other document executed, if a part of the decree or other document is sought to be cancelled, such part of the document or value of the property."

His contention is that for the purposes of the Court Fees Act, it is incumbent upon the plaintiff to have even a forged sale-deed set aside or cancelled; in other words, that the section (in regard to the decrees and instruments of the kind dealt with by it) forbids declaratory suits and enacts that cancellation should always be prayed for. This argument is, in my opinion, utterly untenable. To declare what the substantive rights of the parties are or to prescribe the modes of enforcing those rights, is outside the province of a fiscal enactment, like the Court Fees Act. The question then really is, when a person alleges that a forged instrument has been brought into existence as if he were a party to it, does the law cast upon him a duty to have it cancelled or set aside by suit? There are two statutory provisions which show that a suit for declaration lies: (1) s. 39 of the Specific Relief Act: Illustation (b) to that section contains an express reference to forged instruments and (2) Art. 93 of the Limitation Act refers to suits "to declare the forgery of an instrument issued or registered." While the law thus entitles a person to sue to have the document adjudged a forgery, does it compel him or make it obligatory upon him to get it cancelled or set aside? The cases cited by Mr. Subba Rao refer to instruments or decrees to which the plaintiff was a party. In Arunachalam Chetty v. Rangasamy Pillai (1) the referring Judges clearly point out the distinction between a document to which a person is a party and that to which he is not. When a document is of the former class, they point out that until it is set aside, it cannot be treated as void and that the necessary result of declaring that such a document is not binding on the plaintiff, is to cancel or set aside the deed. The case might be different, they go on to add, where a declaration is sought by a person who is not a party to the document; the suit may in such a case be properly regarded as one for declaration only. In the second case referred to by the learned Counsel, namely, Venkatasiva Rao v. Venkatanarasimha Satyanarayanamurthy (2), this distinction is equally borne in mind. Adverting to Achathil Balakrishnan air v. Vishnu Nambudri (3), Reilly, J. affirms that it was correctly decided, because the plaintiffs there, not having been parties to the decree, could have asked only for a declaration and it would not have been appropriate for them to pray that the decree should be set aside. Throughout his judgment, the learned Judge makes it perfectly clear that he is dealing with decrees obtained by fraud: in such a case, the plaintiff being a party to the decree which, he complains, is vitiated by fraud, there can be no doubt that he must get it set aside. Anantakrishna Ayyar, J. refers to this distinction in even clearer terms. Observes the learned Judge:

(1) 38 Ind. Cas. 79; 38 M 922; 28 M L J 118; (1915) M W N 118; 17 M L T 154.

"In fact not being a party to the document, he cannot have it 'set aside.' All that he can pray for is a declaration that he is not affected in any way by that document."

Dealing with the case of a forged will, I made the following observation in Kalliya Pillai v. Ramaswamy Pillai (4), which, I think, applies with equal force here:

"For instance, if a person, who feels aggrieved by a will, sues for recovery of immoveable property covered by it which happens to be in the possession of a third party, claiming the property on the strength of the will, can it be successfully contended that such a suit is governed not by the ordinary 12 years' period but that the plaintiff is first bound to get the will set aside within the shorter period provided by Art. 91 of the Limitation Act? Such a contention cannot prevail."

In Ratnasari v. Akilandammal (5) there is an observation of Bhashyam Ayyangar, J. which is even more germane to the present discussion, as it deals with forged instruments. The learned Judge treats it as beyond doubt, that when a person seeks to recover immoveable property, the period of limitation is not under Arts. 92 and 93 abridged, because the defendant resists the action by relying upon a forged conveyance (see p. 313)*. In deciding what the proper court-fee payable is, the Court must have regard to the substance of the thing and not to the mere form in which the relief has been prayed for [Kalliya Pillai v. Ramaswamy Pillai (4)]. Where it is, therefore, essential for the plaintiff to pray for cancellation, he cannot, by merely asking for a declaration, evade the provisions of the Court Fees Act. But in the present case I am clearly of the opinion that the only relief that the plaintiff can ask for, is that of declaration and that a prayer for cancellation would be quite inappropriate.

It is next contended that s. 39 of the Specific Relief Act itself shows that the plaintiff is under a duty to pray for cancellation also. In overruling a similar contention, I made the following observations in Kalliya Pillai v. Ramaswamy Pillai (4), already referred to:

"The plaintiff asks that the will may be declared void. That section further enacts that in such a suit the Court may, in its discretion, adjudge the instrument void or voidable and order it to be delivered up and cancelled. In a suit rightly framed under that section, it is the Court's function to order the instrument to be cancelled; it is not a part of the prayer in the plaint Then again the section goes on to say that if the instrument is one that has been registered under the Registration Act, the Court shall send a copy of its decree to the Ragistration Officer, who shall note in his book that the instrument has been so cancelled. This again, is not a relief which it is the duty of the plaintiff to sue for, but is the duty of the Court to grant."

Reilly, J., who was also a party to that judgment, concurred in this view.

As to the effect of registration, I think the judgment in Mohima Chunder Dhur v. Jugul Kishore Bhattacharji (6) may be usefully referred to. As in the present case, the defendant there obtained from the Registrar an order for the registering of the document, and the plaintiff, alleging it to be a forgery, brought the suit to have it declared void. The learned Judges held that the decision of the Registrar, whose proceedings were only those of an execution officer, did not have even the effect of shifting the onus of proof and that it lay upon the defendant to establish that the deed impeached was genuine.

I must mention that Mr. Subba Rao has brought to my notice the decision of Stone, J. in C. R. P. 1597 of 1933. He says that in circumstances somewhat similar, the learned Judge held that the case fell within s. 7 (iv-A). The judgment contains no discussion and merely purports to follow Venkatasiva Rao v. Venkatanarasimha Satyanarayanamurthy (2), which, as I have shown above, does not bear out the learned Counsel's contention

(2) 139 Ind. Cas. 317; 56 M 212; 34 L W 225; Ind. Rul. (1932) Mad. 643; (1932) M W N 992; A I R 1932 Mad. 605; 63 M L J 764.

(3) 132 Ind. Cas. 129; (1930) M W N 509; A I R 1931 Mad. 375; Ind. Rul. (1931) Mad. 625.

(4) 119 Ind. Cas. 35; 56 M L J 394; (1929) M W N 286; 29 L W 584; A I R 1929 Mad. 396; Ind. Rul. (1929) Mad. 867.

(5) 26 M 291.

*Page of 26 M.—[Ed.]

(6) 7 C 736.

Lastly, it is argued that the prayer for the refund of the costs incurred in the registration enquiry must be deemed to be one for consequential relief. I do not think this contention requires serious notice. The relief for the refund is undoubtedly an additional relief but in no sense a consequential relief; it is not a relief consequential upon the declaration.

My decision, therefore, is, that so far as the relief of declaration is concerned, the case falls under Sch. II, Art. 17-A (i) and that the court-fee that the plaintiff has paid, is proper. In regard to the refund claimed, ad valorem fee on the amount should be paid.

I make no order as to costs.

A. Order accordingly.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 1373 of 1933
June 12, 1934
RANGI LAL, J.

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, MULTAN—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus
ABDUL GHAFUR AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Punjab Municipal Act (III of 1911), s. 173—Municipal Committee if can let out one portion of public street for private purposes—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s 115—Estoppel—Infringement of right allowed on previous occasion—Whether bar to asserting it later on.

The Municipal Committee has no right to interfere with the enjoyment of the right of way by the public on a public street by letting out a portion of it to a particular individual for a private purpose. Municipal Committee, Multan v. Tahlia Ram (1), followed.

Plaintiff is not estopped from asserting his legal rights at any time on the ground that he himself permitted its infringement on some previous occasion.

S. C. A. from the decree of the Additional District Judge, Multan, dated May 25, 1933.

Mr. Har Gopal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Muhammad Din Jan for Mr. Muhammad Monir, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—The Municipal Commitee of Multan leased a plot of land which admittedly forms part of a public street and lies in front of the shop of the plaintiff. The lessee erected a structure on the plot after leaving a passage two feet wide in front of the shop. The plaintiff sued the Municipal Committee and the lessee for a permanent injunction restraining the former from leasing the plot and praying that the structure erected by the latter be demolished and the wooden takht-posh placed by him under the structure be removed. The suit having been decreed by the Courts below a second appeal has been filed in this Court. It has been urged that under s. 173, the Municipal Committee has the power to lease a portion of a public street. In the first place, this section was amended after the present suit was filed, and, secondly, even the amended section does not give unrestricted powers to a Municipal Committee to lease out any portion of a public street. The amended section runs as follows :

"The committee may grant permission in writing, on such conditions as it may deem fit for the safety or convenience of persons passing by, or dwelling or working in the neighbourhood and may charge fees for such permission, to any person to place in front of any building any movable encroachment upon the ground level of any public street or over or on any sewer, drain or watercourse or any movable overhanging structure projecting into such public street at a point above the said ground level."

It is clear that the Municipal Committee has to exercise its rights with due regard to the safety or convenience of the persons passing by or dwelling or working in the neighbourhood. Moreover, it is apparently only the owner of a building who can be allowed to place a moveable encroachment in front of his building on the drain or sewer. Under the law as it existed before 1933 the Municipal Committee had no express power to lease a portion of a public street. In the case reported as Municipal Committee, Multan v. Tahila Ram (1) it was held that the Municipal Commitee cannot give any person permission to deposit goods for sale on any public street and cannot lease any portion of a public street. The Municipal Committee cannot use the public street otherwise than as a public street and it has no right to interfere with the enjoyment of the right of way by the public by letting out a portion of it to a particular individual for a private purpose. In the present case it has been held that the Municipal Committee had acted in a wanton and cruel manner and that the plaintiff had suffered special damage from its act in leasing the plot in question. This is a finding of fact and cannot be questioned in second appeal.

The learned Counsel for the appellant urged that previously the plot in question had been let by the Municipal Committee without objection by the plaintiff. It appears that the previous lessee merely placed a platform in front of the plaintiff's shop with the plaintiff's permission and paid him some rent. The present lessee had erected a building in front of the plaintiff's shop. It cannot by any means be said that the plaintiff is estopped from objecting to this building because he allowed the previous lessee to place a moveable wooden board in front of his shop. The decision of the Courts below is, in my opinion, correct and I dismiss the appeal with costs.

(1) 73 Ind. Cas. 292; A I R 1923 Lah. 272; 5 Lah. L J 26.

D. Appeal dismissed.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Criminal Appeal No. 420 of 1934
December 5, 1934
MIR AHMAD, A. J. C.
MIR BAZ—ACCUSED.—APPELLANT
versus
EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 378, 392—Offence under s. 392—Nature of—Removing of property found by chance after quarrel—Held, offence came under s. 378.

Section 392, Penal Code, contemplates that the accused should have, from the very start, the intention to deprive the complainant of the property and should for that purpose either hurt him or place him under wrongful restraint. Where the inception of the struggle was only a quarrel and it was at the end that the accused found a chance of taking the chaplis and the sheet of the complainant in order to ensure the payment of the money due to him:

Held, that the offence was one under s. 378 and not under s. 392, Penal Code.

Cr. A. from an order of the Additional District Magistrate, Peshawar, dated September 22, 1934.

Mr. Ar. Taj Mohd. Khan, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. Raja Singh, for the Crown.

Judgment.—Nazardin foot Constable lodged a report at Badaber Police Station on August 21, 1934 at 2 P. M. He said that he was returning to the thana after taking his meals in the Badaber village, when he met Mirbaz. The latter asked him to get him the javelin. The reporter told him to take the permission of the Sub-Inspector. Mirbaz then caught hold of him, threw him down and took away from him one pair of Kohati chaplis, a sheet and Rs. 4. He mentioned Harisingh, Gulbaz and one mochi as witnesses of the occurrence. Mirbaz was sent up under s. 392, Indian Penal Code. At the trial Nazardin said that there had been a riot in the village on the night between August 17, 18, and a javelin had been left on the spot. It was this javelin which Mirbaz was asking for. In other respects he re-iterated what he had said in the F. I. R. Gulbaz said that he saw Nazardin and Mirbaz at grips and that Mirbaz then went away taking Nazardin's chaplis and sheet. Nazardin said that Mirbaz had taken Rs. 4 also from him. Abdulla, on the other hand, stated that the parties were fighting over money, which Mirbaz was demanding from Nazardin. They had only a quarrel and nothing more happened. He did not see the sheet and the chaplis being taken away. Harisingh supported Nazardin. He admitted that khazanchi, his brother, had litigation with Mirbaz. H. C. Mohan found a sheet and a pair of chaplis in the house of the accused which were identified by Nazardin as his property. The accused denied having taken the chaplis and the sheet. He said that they had quarrelled over money which was due to him from the complainant and produced two witnesses in support of this allegation who are men of straw.

The accused had been previously convicted under s., 392, Indian Penal Code, and sentenced to one month's imprisonment. The Magistrate First Class who had convicted him definitely found that the offence was only technical. The City Magistrate has now convicted Mirbaz under s. 392-75 and sentenced him to five years' rigorous imprisonment and to 30 stripes under s. 4, Whipping Act. He appeals.

The resume of the evidence given above clearly shows that Nazardin and Mirbaz fell out over something, may be, the javelin or the demand of money by the accused from the complainant. They had a quarrel. It is a matter of common knowledge that Pathans discard their sheets and chaplis in fights in order to enable them to be more agile. It appears that the complainant did so and after the fight was over Mirbaz took away the chaplis and the sheet belonging to him. To my mind his taking away of these articles points more to the existence of a debt rather than to a dispute over a javelin. I am not prepared to believe that he deprived him of Rs. 4 which appears to be an exaggeration. It follows, therefore, that the fight did not start with the object of obtaining these things and that the taking away of the articles was only a corrollary to it. On these grounds I am strongly of opinion that s. 303 does not apply. The section contemplates that the accused should have, from the very start, the intention to deprive the complainant of the property and should for that purpose either hurt him or place him under wrongful restraint. In this case it is clear that the inception of the struggle was only a quarrel and it was at the end that the accused found a chance of taking the chaplis and the sheet in order to ensure the payment of the money due to him. I alter the conviction therefore to one under s. 379, Indian Penal Code. As regards the punishment I do not think the previous conviction makes the position serious. It was only due to a technicality that s. 392, Indian Penal Code, was applied in the previous case and the fact remains that the accused was given only one month's imprisonment. The ends of justice would, therefore, be met if the accused is sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment. It is ordered accordingly. The sentence of whipping is unnecessary and is hereby set aside.

D. Order accordingly.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Civil Revision Application No. 8-B of 1934
March 21, 1935
SUBHEDAR, A. J. C.

GOPIKISAN SHEONARAIN—DEFENDANT —APPLICANT
versus
JETHMAL GOVERDHANDAS—PLAINTIFF —NON-APPLICANT

Promissory note—Payment, where to be made—Principle that debtor should make payment where creditor resides—Whether applicable to negotiable instruments—Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 70.

The principle, that in the absence of any specific agreement as to the place where the payment of a debt is to be made, it is the duty of the debtor to make the payment where the creditor resides, or where his place of business is, is not applicable to negotiable instruments. Payment due under a promissory note, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, is ordinarily to be made at the usual place of business of the maker or at his residence.

Application for revision of the order of the Additional Sub-Judge, Second Class, Khamgaon, dated November 29, 1933, in Transfer C. S. No. 156 of 1933, pending for January 15, 1934.

Mr. W. B. Pendharkar, for the Applicant.

Mr. V. K. Rajwade, for the Non-Applicant.

Order.—On January 11, 1932, the defendant executed a promissory note (Exh. P-1) in favour of the plaintiff. On the basis of it the plaintiff filed a suit in the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge, Khamgaon, to recover from the defendant Rs. 1,100 due on it. The plaintiff alleged that he was a resident of Khamgaon having also his place of business there and that the note itself was executed at Khamgaon under an express agreement to pay the amount at Khamgaon. The defendant questioned the jurisdiction of the Court to try the suit on the allegation that the promissory note in suit was executed by him at Nimgaon which is within the jurisdiction of the Malkapur Court, that he resided at Nimgaon and that there was an express agreement to pay the amount a Nimgaon.

The lower Court held that the promissory note in suit was executed at Nimgaon which was the place where the defendant resided and that there was no express agreement to pay the debt either at Khamgaon or at Nimgaon. Nevertheless applying the general principle that a debtor must find out his creditor and make the payment due to him at the latter's place of residence the lower Court held that it had jurisdiction to try the suit. It is against this order that the defendant has come up to this Court in revision.

It is contended on behalf of the defendant applicant that the ordinary principle laid down in Ramchandra v. Mohanlal (1), that in the absence of any specific agreement as to the place where the payment of a debt is to be made, it is the duty of the debtor to make the payment where the creditor resides, or where his place of business is, is not applicable to Negotiable instruments. In my opinion this contention is sound. Under s. 70 of the Negotiable Instruments Act (No. XXVI of 1881) a promissory note or bill of exchange not made payable as mentioned in ss. 68 and 69, must be presented for payment at the place of business (if any), or at the usual residence, of the maker, drawee or acceptor thereof, as the case may be. When the Legislature itself has declared that payment due under a promissory note, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, is ordinarily to be made at the usual place of business of the maker or at his residence, it is clear that on the findings given by the lower Court the plaintiff could not file the present suit to recover the amount due under the promissory note at any place other than the one where the defendant admittedly resides, that is Nimgaon, which is in the jurisdiction of the Malkapur Court. I, therefore, reverse the finding of the lower Court that it has jurisdiction to try the suit and order it to return the plaint to the plaintiff for presentation to the proper Court. There will be no order for costs either in this Court or in the lower Court.

(1) 121 Ind. Cas. 668; 26 Nag L R 300; Ind. Rul. (1930) Nag. 124; A I R 1930 Nag. 207; 13 N L J 4.

N. Order accordingly.

RANGOON HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 149 of 1933
July 19, 1934

MOSLEY AND MACKNEY, JJ.

WAN TAIK YA AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS
versus
M. S. S. CHETTYAR FIRM AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Mortgage—Sale of portion of mortgagee's security alleged to be with consent of mortgagee—Evidence of such consent — Registered mortgage — Mortgagee, if should secure title-deeds — Prior and subsequent mortgagees—Prior mortgagee bringing mortgage suit for sale—Subsequent mortgagee can receive his money from surplus money or redeem prior mortgagee— He cannot sell property if prior mortgagee's claim is satisfied before sale—Separate suit, necessity of—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 82 - Intention of.

Where it is alleged that a portion of the mortgagee's security has been sold with his consent, very definite evidence must be produced that that consent was obtained. [p. 956, col 2]

It is not ordinarily obligatory for a person who takes a registered mortgage to secure the title-deeds of the properties mortgaged and ordinarily his registered mortgage is sufficient protection to him. [p. 957, col. 1.]

As regards a mortgage suit for sale, the rights of the subsequent mortgagee are very limited; he has the right to redeem the prior mortgage or to receive his mortgage money out of the surplus sale proceeds after satisfaction of the prior mortgage, treating the suit as one for his benefit; but he cannot ask for a sale of the property if the prior mortgagee's claim is satisfied before the sale, nor can he ask for sale of some other property included in his own mortgage: and for either of these purposes he must bring a separate suit for sale on his own mortgage. Kalipada Mukherji v. Basantakumar Datta (2), followed. [ibid.]

The intention of s. 82, Transfer of Property Act, is not that the lien of the mortgagee should be divided, but simply to determine the liability of the purchasers of the property inter se. [ibid.]

F. C. A. against the decree of the District Court, Maubin, dated September 6, 1934.

Mr. P. K. Basu, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Hay, Anklesaria and Chari, for the Respondents.

Mackney, J.—It will be necessary to state as briefly as possible the circumstances in which arose the suit from which this appeal arises.

One U Ba Thaw and his wife Ma Sein Khin of Einme Township in the District of Myaungmaya owned a rice mill and several acres of paddy land all situated in Myaungmya District. About April 30, 1926, by a registered deed U Po Mya and his wife Ma Nagwe Yin, (1st and 2nd defendants) of Maubin Town purchased the mill for Rs. 40,000. Apparently on the same date without consulting his wife, U Po Mya entered into an agreement with the vendors to resell the property whenever they should desire for the same amount. (It is true that the sale-deed purports to sell only U Ba Thaw's and Ma Sein Khin's one-half share in the mill, but it is admitted that in effect U Ba Thaw and Ma Sein Khin owned the mill and sold the whole of it to U Po Mya and Ma Ngwe Yin). Again, by a registered sale-deed dated January 10, 1925, Ma Ngwe Yin, the wife of U Po Mya, and their daughter Ma Aye Tin, bought a quantity of paddy land in Myaungmya District from U Ba Thaw. These paddy lands will be referred to as items Nos. 1, 4 and 5 and the rice mill as item No. 6. On May 15, 1926, U Po Mya and Ma Ngwe Yin mortgaged to the O. V. E. Chettyar Firm, (12th defendants), of Maubin item No. 6 together with items Nos. 2 and 3 (paddy fields in the Myaungmya District measuring some 480 odd acres), and item No. 7, a house in Maubin Town. The principal amount was Rs. 30,000. It seems that U Ba Thaw after the sale of the rice mill continued in possession under a lease and in Civil Suit No. 63 of 1927, of the District Court of Myaungmya U Po Mya and Ma Ngwe Yin sued U Ba Thaw and Ma Sein Khin for ejectment from the rice mill. The parties came to a compromise and a decree was made in accordance with the compromise petition. It directed that the defendants, U Ba Thaw and Ma Sein Khin be ejected from the mill premises, but that if they should pay to the plaintiffs, U Po Mya and his wife on or before May 31, 1928, the sum of Rs. 55,000 the properties transferred by the registered deed dated January 10, 1925 (i. e., the paddy lands items Nos. 1, 4 and 5), together with the rice mill, should be reconveyed to them. The defendants were to vacate the rice mill and its premises if they failed to pay the said sum before the said date. U Ba Thaw and his wife were unable to raise the sum of Rs. 55,000, but as U Po Mya and Ma Ngwe Yin were apparently anxious to sell the properties U Ba Thaw found purchasers for them.

By a registered sale-deed dated June 5, 1928, Taik Ya, Ket Sin and Sin Gwa Nat, (3rd, 4th and 5th defendants), together with one Kabin, whose interests were later acquired by the other purchasers, bought the rice mill and its premises for Rs. 35,000. In this deed the vendors are named as U Po Mya and Ma Ngwe Yin, but the agreement to repurchase between U Po Mya and U Ba Thaw is mentioned and it is stated (wrongly that the agreement was to re-transfer the said properties to U Ba Thaw and Ma Sein Khin or their nominees; and a further statement is made that:

"it has now been agreed between the vendors and the said U Ba Thaw and Ma Sein Khin that that the vendors shall retransfer the said mill, etc., to their nominees the said vendees for Rs 35,000."

On the same date by a registered sale-deed U Po Mya, Ma Ngwe Yin and Ma Aye Tin sold for Rs. 25,000 the paddy lands, items Nos. 1, 4 and 5, to Maung Ba Hmaw, Ma Saw Yin, Maung Tha Han and Ma Ngwe Yon, (6th, 7th, 8th and 9th defendants). The deed contains a similar reference to an alleged agreement to resell to U Ba Thaw and Ma Sein Khin or their nominees. On June 7, 1928, U Po Mya repaid to the O. V. E. Chettyar Firm on the mortgage-deed already mentioned Rs. 17,000, principal and Rs. 5,568-12-0 interest. Ultimately on September 3, 1931, the O. V. E. Chettyar Firm assigned to the M. S. S. Chettyar Firm, the plaintiff in the suit, their rights on the mortgage bond for a sum of Rs. 16,750 being the amount alleged to be due on the bond. On October 14, 1929, U Ba Kmaw, Ma Saw Yin, U Tha Han and Ma Ngwe Yon had mortgaged to the A. K. A. C. T. A. L. Chettyar Firm, (11th defendant), items Nos. 1, 4 and 5, together with other properties not included in this suit. These properties they subsequently conveyed outright to that firm. On May 12, 1929, U Po Mya and Ma Ngwe Yin mortgaged to the Sir S. R. M. M. A. Chettyar Firm, items Nos. 2, 3 and 7, together with other properties measuring about 116 acres for Rs. 15,000. On November 4, 1931, this mortgage was transferred to the Bank of Chettinad Limited, Maubin, by a registered deed.

The plaintiff, (1st respondent), the M. S. S. Chettyar Firm in Civil Suit No. 50 of 1932 of the District Court of Maubin, out of which the present appeal arises, sued U Po Mya and Ma Ngwe Yin for recovery of the amount due on their assigned mortgage and included the other defendants mentioned above. Ma Aye Tin was not included as a party to the suit.

It was contended that the O. V. E. Firm had notice of the sale of the mill and had consented thereto; that owing to their gross negligence they were not entitled to have priority to the mortgage which had been transacted in favour of the A. K. A. C. T. A. L. Chettyar Firm and that the 10th defendant, the Bank of Chettinad, Limited, was entitled to have the claim of the plaintiff, if any, apportioned between items Nos. 2, 3 and 7, and the other items. In the end the District Court passed a preliminary mortgage decree directing the sale of the mortgaged properties on failure to redeem on the part of "the defendants" (not specified). The decree further directed that if there were any surplus after the sale, the specified items of the mortgaged properties would be liable, in the proportions set out in the decree, for the mortgage debt due to the plaintiff and the surplus in each case was to be paid over to the parties entitled to them, the 10th defendant being entitled to Rs. 15,000 principal and Rs. 6,105 interest up to July 6, 1932. Against this decree the defendants Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 11, Wan Taik Ya. Kit Sin, Sin Gwa Nat, U Ba Hmaw, Daw Saw Yin, U Tha Han, Daw Ngwe Yon and the A. K. A. C. T. A. L. Chettyar Firm, have appealed making the plaintiff, M S. S. Firm, the 1st respondent, U Po Mya and Daw Ngwe Yin, 2nd and 3rd respondents, the Bank of Chettinad the 4th respondent and the O. V. E. Chettyar Firm, the 5th respondent.

The learned Advocate for the appellants attempted to establish six points : (i) that the sale to his clients was with consent ; (ii) that the transaction on account of the mill between U Ba Thaw and U Po Mya amounted to a mortgage by conditional sale and that this mortgage had been redeemed without notice of the mortgage to the O. V. E. Chettyar Firm ; (iii) that under s. 27, Specific Relief Act, this contract could be enforced by U Ba Thaw against all persons , (iv) that the O. V. E.

Chettyar Firms had shown gross negligence in not making inquiries and that the O. V. E. Chettyar Firm had shown gross negligence in not informing the M. S. S. Chettyar Firm of the sale with their consent of the rice mill; (v) that the apportionment as arranged in the decree of the lower Court should not be allowed, and (vi) that Ma Aye Tin's interest was not affected by the mortgage to the O. V. E. Chettyar Firm.

As regards the first point, it will be noticed that although the mortgage to the O. V. E. Chettyar Firm was made and registered in Maubin, of all the very considerable properties mortgaged only one house was actually situated in the District of Maubin. It is stated in evidence, but not proved beyond doubt, that intimation in due course was sent to the Registration Office at Myaungmya in regard to the properties situated in that District. This limitation was never received and so no entry regarding the mortgage can be found in the Registers of Myaungmya. The O. V. E. Chettyar Firm clearly cannot be penalised for this failure on the part of the Government Departments concerned.

U Po Mya admits that when he made the mortgage the title deeds relating to the paddy lands were not handed over to the O V. E. Chettyar Firm. He states that the title-deeds relating to the mill were handed over and that when he sold the rice mill to Wan Taik Ya and his partners he informed the agent of the O. V. E. Firm, obtained his consent thereto, and received from him the title-deeds of the mill. The learned District Judge has commented adversely on the evidence produced by U Po Mya in support of this allegation and he believed neither U Po Mya nor his two witnesses. The learned District Judge has, in my opinion, given adequate reasons for disbelieving this evidence. It is indeed both vague and incredible.

It is argued that the agent of the O. V. E. Firm would not have received so large a payment on account of the mortgage debt without making inquiries of U Po Mya as to how he could raise this amount. The agent of the firm denies that U Po Mya informed him how he obtained the money. It may be that the agent did inquire, but we have no proof whether U Po Mya did tell him the true story. U Po Mya states that he asked the agent to endorse on the mortgage deed the fact that the rice mill had been sold, but that the agent declined to make such an endorsement. There was no reason why the agent should not make the endorsement, the properties left with him amounting to well over 600 acres of paddy lands, together with a house, were in those days ample security for the balance of the debt. In my opinion, it cannot be concluded inevitably from the fact that so large an amount of money was repaid, and from the fact that the balance of the debt was so amply secured by the rest of the security, that the O. V. E. Chettyar Firm consented to the sale of the rice mill. Where it is alleged that a portion of the mortgagee's security has been sold with his consent, very definite evidence must be produced that that consent was obtained. Such evidence is, in my opinion, not forthcoming in the present case. U Po Mya is not an honest man. He sold these properties to the appellants concealing the fact of this mortgage. He is a man whose word cannot be believed.

As regards the second point, this point has been raised for the first time on appeal. As already remarked, the agreement to resell to U Ba Thaw was made by U Po Mya without the consent of his wife who was a purchaser of the rice mill. The point not having been raised in the lower Court no evidence was taken and it seems to me that, on a mere consideration of the two documents of sale and of the agreement to resell, it cannot be held that the transaction was a mortgage by conditional sale. In any case this contract, if it existed, was terminated by the decree on the compromise which was made in Civil Suit No. 63 of 1927. U Ba Thaw and Ma Sein Khin failed to carry out the terms of that decree and had to vacate the mill premises. In any case, the fact that to oblige U Po Mya he sought out persons who would purchase the properties is immaterial. In the transaction to sell the paddy lands U Po Mya, Ma Ngwe Yin and Ma Aye Tin were the vendors. Their purchasers cannot claim to have stepped into the shoes of U Ba Thaw and Ma Sein Khin.

As regards the third point this also is a point which was not raised in the lower Court. On the findings to which I have come in regard to the first two points, it is not necessary to say anything further in regard to this point. As regards the fourth point, the M. S. S. Firm as assignees take the right, title and interest of the O. V. E. Firm and I cannot see how negligence can be attributed to them. As to the O. V. E. Firm I also fail to see how negligence can be attributed to them because they failed to make searches into the exact position of U Ba Thaw at the time of the mortgage, nor do I see on my findings in regard to the point already discussed, how they can be affected by the position of U Ba Thaw in view of the fact that U Ba Thaw's rights, if any, were never exercised and became of no value. It is not ordinarily obligatory for a person who takes a registered mortgage to secure the title-deeds of the properties mortgaged and ordinarily his registered mortgage is in this country sufficient protection to him.

As regards the fifth point it appears to me that there is much force in the contention of the appellants. The intention of s. 82, Transfer of Property Act, is not that the lien of the mortgagee should be divided but simply to determine the liability of the purchasers of the property inter se. Therefore all the mortgaged properties are liable in satisfaction of the mortgagee's claim: Raghunath Pershad v. Harilal Sadhu (1). (It is true that this section has been amended since the latter case was decided but not in such a way as to affect the truth of this dictum). The proper course to take is to direct that the whole of the mortgaged properties or such amount as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree be sold. If there is a surplus remaining after the sale of items Nos. 2, 3 and 7 (subject to the second mortgage to the Bank of Chettinad, Limited), the Bank of Chettinad, Limited is entitled to receive its mortgage money out of that surplus; see Kalipada Mukherji v. Basantakumar Datta (2), at foot of p. 123*:

"As regards a mortgage suit for sale, the rights of the second mortgagee are very limited; he has the right to redeem the prior mortgage or to receive his mortgage money out of the surplus sale proceeds after satisfaction of the prior mortgage, treating the suit as one for his benefit but he cannot ask for a sale of the property if the prior mortgagee's claim is satisfied before the sale, nor can he ask for sale of some other property included in his own mortgage; and for either of these purposes he must bring a separate suit for sale on his own mortgage."

When the decree has been satisfied it will be for the parties interested in the properties sold in satisfaction thereof to seek their remedies against the persons whom they consider liable to them. It might be simpler for the present owners of the items Nos. 1, 4, 5 and 6, to redeem this mortgage and seek their further remedy against U Po Mya and Ma Ngwe Yin or from whomsoever else they consider they have a claim.

As regards the sixth point it is obvious Ma Aye Tin's interest in items Nos. 1, 4 and 5, cannot be affected by the decree. U Po Mya and Ma Ngwe Yin could mortgage only their own interest in those properties and not Ma Aye Tin's. I am of opinion that the decree of the lower Court should be modified in agreement with these findings, i. e., it should direct that the right, title and interest of U Po Mya and Ma Ngwe Yin existing at the time of the mortgage to the O. V. E. Chettyar Firm in the properties, items Nos. 1 to 7, be sold to the extent necessary and that if items Nos. 2, 3 and 7 be sold the Bank of Chettinad, Limited, are entitled to the surplus of the sale proceeds of the items towards the satisfaction of their mortgage. The appeal having failed on the main issues, the appellants must pay the costs to the M. S. S. Chettyar Firm for one Advocate. The respondents, U. Po Mya and Ma Ngwe Yin were not represented; the respondent the O. V. E. Chettyar Firm was represented but their case was entirely the same as that of the M. S. S. Chettyar Firm and their learned Advocate had nothing to add. The respondent Bank of Chettinad, Limited, supported the decree of the lower Court in regard to the apportionment although objecting to the rate of apportionment. It is not entitled to any costs.

Mosley, J.—I agree.

D. Order accordingly.

(1) 18 C 320.

(2) 138 Ind. Cas. 177; A I R 1932 Cal. 126; 59 C 117; 35 C W N 877; Ind. Rul. (1932) Cal. 427.

*Page of 59 C.—[Ed.]

PATNA HIGH COURT

Civil Revision Application No. 350 of 1933

October 9, 1933

MACPHERSON, J.

AKHAURI HERAMBO NARAIN SINHA —PETITIONER

versus

JAMUNA SONAR—OPPOSITE PARTY

Bihar and Orissa Public Demands Recovery Act (IV of 1914), ss. 21 and 24—Purchaser of property in certificate sale in possession in good faith—Claim under s. 21 by another purchaser in execution of money decree dismissed—No title suit brought within one year by claimant—Subsequent petition under O. XXI, r. 97, Civil Procedure Code—Order dismissing claim is conclusive—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 97, s. 115—Summary view of justice is not safe guide where real obstacle of opposite party is bar of limitation.

In a certificate sale, the entire property of joint family was sold even though the names of the members excepting one was not mentioned in the certificate and the purchaser was in possession of the whole property in good faith. Another person who had obtained a money decree against all the members of the joint family purchased the property in execution of his decree and he put in a claim under s. 21, Public Demands Recovery Act. The claim was dismissed and he did not file any title suit within one year. Subsequently, he filed a petition under O. XXI, r. 97, Civil Procedure Code, as he could not obtain delivery of possession. The Court held that the certificate Court had no jurisdiction to attach and sell or give possession of the share of the other members whose shares were not mentioned and ordered joint possession :

Held, that the order dismissing the claim became conclusive, that the certificate purchaser was in possession in good faith and that the Court had no jurisdiction to go into the question of title.

Where the conditions set out in s. 115, Civil Procedure Code, are present, a summary view of justice is often not a conclusive or even a very safe guide, especially, where the real obstacle in the way of the opposite party is a statutory bar of limitation.

C. R. A. from the order of the 2nd Court Munsif, Buxar, dated June 17, 1933.

Mr. D. N. Varma, for the Petitioner.

Messrs. Parmeshwar Dayal and P. P. Varma, for the Opposite Party.

Judgment.—This is an application by the Liquidator of the Friends Co-operative Society Dumraon, for revision of the order of the Munsif of Buxar allowing an application under O. XXI, r. 97, Civil Procedure Code, in respect of 15-16ths of the property in dispute.

The petitioner filed a certificate under the Bihar and Orissa Public Demands Recovery Act, 1914, against one Thakur Prasad and notice under s. 7 was served on June 30, 1930. One Piari Kuar applied on December 8, 1930, for execution of her money decree against 13 persons, being Thakur Prasad and other members of his joint Mitakshara family. In this execution the petitioner asked that his charge on the property in suit consisting of houses which were to be sold in execution be declared. But the Court did not grant a declaration of the charge but only directed notification of the petitioner's charge under s. 8 at the time of sale and the High Court on revision, while acknowledging the existence of the share, declined to make the declaration as the sale had taken place. On April 8, 1931, the present opposite party purchased the property at the sale in execution of Piari Kuar's decree. The petitioner obtained stay in the High Court which lasted from 8th May till November 24, 1931. When the property was on sale under the Public Demands Recovery Act at the instance of the petitioner the opposite party, on May 25, 1931, filed a claim to it under s. 21 which was dismissed on June 4, 1931, on which date the petitioner purchased the present property in dispute in the certificate sale. He obtained delivery on September 28, 1931. In February 1933 the oposite party applied for delivery of possession of the property purchased by him but could not obtain it as the petitioner was found to be in possession. The opposite party applied under O. XXI, r. 97 with the result already mentioned.

Now at the certificate sale only the right, title and interest of Thakur Prasad, judgment-debtor, passed. The contention of of the present application, however, was that s 25, Public Demands Recovery Act, operated to make the decision of June 4, 1931, conclusive against the opposite party who had not brought within one year of the date a suit to estabtish his title to the property, his petition in respect of which was dismissed under s. 24. The learned Munsif negatived the contention on the ground that as the certificate Court had no jurisdiction to attach and sell or give possession of the share in the family property of the members of Thakur Prasad's family who were not named in the certificate, the claim under s. 21 of the present opposite party and the order under s. 24 could not have related to 15-16ths of the property. He accordingly allowed the opposite party to take out dakhaldehani afresh with regard to 15-16ths of the houses in question and directed him to be put in possession jointly with the opposite party. On behalf of the petitioner it is urged that as the petitioner was clearly in possession on his own behalf in good faith, no other consideration could arise, that (as indeed the Munsif himself conceded in so many words) the question of title could not be gone into and that the order for joint possession is unsound. For the opposite party Mr. Parmeshwar Dayal relies mainly upon the provisions of s. 26 (1) of the Act, which sets out that,

"where property is sold in execution of a certificate there shall vest in the purchaser merely the right, title and interest of the certificate-debtor at the time of the sale, even though the property itself be specified," and urges that the petitioner could not be in possession in good faith. There can be no doubt, however, that the property specified for sale and the property which was sold of which delivery of possession was given included the property now in dispute. There is absolutely no reason to believe that the petitioner was not in possession on his own account. In my judgment the learned Munsif has clearly acted with material irregularity in the exercise of his jurisdiction. One cannot help seeing that he did not consider only the one question which was open to him, namely whether the petitioner was "claiming in good faith to be in possession on his own account," but permitted himself to be influenced by the fact that the remedy of the opposite party by suit had become barred, though if it still existed the opposite party would, on the findings of fact of the Munsif, have been entitled in such suit to all but the 1-16th found to be the share of Thakur Prasad, certificate-debtor. Mr. Parmeshwar Dayal urges that the petitioner was not so in possession in good faith of the whole of this property from the date of delivery of possession to him. I am unable to agree. The definition of the Penal Code under which,

"nothing is said to be done or believed in good faith which is done or believed without due care and attention," is not applicable. In ordinary language good faith is opposed to bad faith and not to negligence and this is the view ordained in the Bihar and Orissa General Clauses Act, which sets out that,

"a thing shall be deemed to be done in good faith where it is in fact done honestly, whether it is done negligently or not."

It is not enough therefore to indicate that the petitioner must have known the provisions of s. 26 (1) and that the certificate-debtor Thakur Prasad was only a member of a joint family so that only the right, title and interest of Thakur Prasad could pass at the sale. Indeed it would be most unreasonable to affect the auction-purchaser with such knowledge. He may well have been mistaken, but he did honestly hold the view that he was really entitled to the possession of the property purchased by him, of which the Court had given him possession. His contention was that the loan which was the basis of the certificate debt had been taken by Thakur Prasad on behalf of himself and the joint family. Mr. Parmeshwar Dayal has further attempted to show that the opposite party's application for release of the property from sale which purports to be under ss. 21 and 22 of the Bihar and Orissa Public Demands Recovery Act, 1914, may be taken to refer only to the share of Thakur Prasad, judgment- debtor, and not to the whole of the property. Therein he fails. The petition sets out that the portion specified below of the property advertised for sale had been purchased by the petitioner on April 8, 1931, and the judgment-debtor ceased to have any titile thereto after that sale and it could not be sold for satisfaction of his debt. The opposing contentions therefore were that the property specified could and that it could not be sold in the certificate sale. Rightly or wrongly the certificate officer held that the whole property on sale could be sold in execution of the certificate. That and not merely 1-16th of it was the property of which the petitioner obtained delivery of possession, and he was certainly in possession of it bona fide on his own account.

The opposite party could only get possession of it or any part of it if in the suit contemplated by s. 25 he established that such property or part thereof was not that of Thakur Prasad liable to sale in execution of his certificate debt. Further, no such suit being brought within limitation the order under s. 24 is conclusive. Mr. Parmeshwar Dayal finally urges that the High Court ought not to interfere in revision inasmuch as the order is just. But in the first place, it is not so clear, as is suggested, on which side on a broad view equity lies, and again where the conditions set out in s. 115 are present, a summary view of justice is frequently not a conclusive or even very safe guide especially where the real obstacle in the way of the opposite party is a statutory bar of limitation. The Rule is made absolute with costs and the application unde. r. 97 is rejected; Pleader's fee, Rs. 16.

D. Rule made absolute.

RANGOON HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 23 of 1934
August 29, 1934
MYA BU, OFFG. C. J., AND BAGULEY, J.
U NYO—APPELLANT
versus
U PO THIT—RESPONDENT

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 22—Decree more than three years old—Application after an year from last order—No notice—No reasons recorded—Objection stated with clarity—Advocate pointing out wrong rule—Objection, if waived.

Where a decree is more than three years old, and the application for execution of the decree is made more than a year after the passing of the final order on the last application for execution and no reason is recorded for not issuing notice as required by O. XXI, r. 22, Civil Procedure Code, the omission to issue notice to the judgment-debtor is not a mere irregularity, but is a defect which goes to the very root of the proceedings and renders them void for want of jurisdiction. Shyam Mandal v. Satinath Banerjee (1), Ramdas v. Kannamal (2), Raghunath Das v. Sunder Das (3) and Bimalanandan Prasad v. United Refineries, Ltd. (4), relied on

If the objection based upon the provisions of O. XXI, r. 22, is stated with substantial clarity in the petition of objection, the fact that the Advocate at the hearing happened to point out an inapposite rule of O. XXI, does not alter the fact that objection under r. 22 was in reality taken, and cannot be regarded as being tantamount to a waiver of that objection.

F. C. A. against an order of the District Judge, Myaungmya, in Civil Execution No. 49 of 1932.

Mr. Ba Mg. for the Appellant.

Mr. R. C. Banerjee, for the Respondent.

Mya Bu, Offg. C. J. -This appeal must be allowed. The appeal is against an order dismissing the objection raised by the appellant, one of the judgment-debtors against whom a decree had been passed in favour of the respondent's assignor, as legal representative of the estate of Daw On, deceased, in Civil Regular No. 63 of 1925. In the execution case from which this appeal has arisen, the respondent applied for execution of the decree by attachment of a piece of paddy land and a piece of garden land alleged to be belonging to the estate of Daw On. No notice of this application was issued, but immediately upon the presentation of this application the Court ordered the issue of a warrant of attachment, in consequence of which attachment was effected. After issue of notice to the appellant for settlement of the terms of the proclamation of sale of the properties under attachment, the appellant filed his objection to the proceeding, stating several grounds upon which the objection was based, one of which runs as follows:

"That this judgment-debtor submits that the attachment is bad in law inasmuch as no notice was issued to him before such attachment, as required by law."

This objection was filed on December 19, 1932, but because the files of the connected proceedings necessary for reference in the consideration of the dispute raised in this proceeding were in the High Court, the hearing of the objection upon the grounds stated above did not take place till October 20, 1933, when the learned District Judge decided inter alia that the want of notice to the judgment-debtor before proceeding with the application of the assignee did not invalidate the proceeding, as no such notice was necessary under O. XXI, r. 16, Civil Procedure Code. In pursuance of that decision the learned District Judge held that the objection was to be tried on the merits. The final decision upon the objection having been given by the District Court on December 8, 1933, the appellant has filed this appeal, raising many grounds, one of which, and the one upon which we think the case may be disposed of, is that the failure by the excuting Court to issue notice to the respondent as required by O. XXI, r. 22 (1) (a), Civil Procedure Code, is fatal to the validity of the proceeding.

In my opinion this contention prevails. The decree was more than three years old, and the application for execution of the decree has been made more than a year after the passing of the final order on the last application for execution. In these circumstances the Court would be justified in omitting to issue notice to the judgment-debtor only if it considered that the issue of such notice "would cause unreasonable delay or would defeat the ends of justice", and recorded reasons for such conclusion under sub-s. 2, O. XXI, r. 22. In the present case no reason whatever was recorded, and therefore the omission to issue notice to the judgment-debtor is not a mere irregularity, but is a defect which goes to the very root of the proceedings and renders them void for want of jurisdiction: Shyam Mandal v. Satinath Banerjee (1); followed in Ramdas v. Kannamal (2). This proposition receives support from the Privy Council case of Raghunath Das v. Sundar Das (3), and also from Bimalanandan Prasad v. The United Refineries, Ltd. (4).

The learned Advocate for the respondent contends that no objection under O. XXI, r. 22 (a) having been taken expressly in the lower Court, the appellant should not be allowed to raise it here, and that in any event the appellant should be regarded as having waived this ground of objection. This contention is based upon the fact that apparently the appellant's Advocate in the lower Court did not place before the Court the provisions of O. XXI, r. 22, but only the provisions of O. XXI, r. 16, and that thereafter the attention of the Court was never drawn to O. XXI, r. 22, but the appellant fought the case upon the merits up to the end.

(1) 38 Ind. Cas. 493; 44 C 954; 24 C L J 523; A I R 1917 Cal. 728; 21 C W N 776.

(2) 117 Ind. Cas. 245; A I R 1929 Rang. 161; 7 R 110.

(3) 24 Ind. Cas. 304; A I R 1914 P C 129; 41 I A 251; 42 C 72; 18 C W N 1058; 1 L W 567; 27 M L J 150; 16 M L T 353; (1914) M W N 747; 16 Bom. L R 814; 20 C L J 555; 13 A L J 154 (P C).

(4) 143 Ind. Cas. 299; A I R 1933 Rang. 52; 11 R 79; Ind. Rul. (1933) Rang. 57.

With reference to this contention it may be pointed out that although the rule and the Order was not specifically stated, the objection based upon the provisions of O. XXI, r. 22, was stated with substantial clarity in the petition of objection, and the fact that the Advocate at the hearing happened to point out an inapposite rule of O. XXI, does not alter the fact that objection under r. 22 was in reality taken, and cannot be regarded as being tantamount to a waiver of that objection. The appellant in this case, by his conduct has gained no improper or undue advantage in the proceedings so that he might justly be precluded from challenging the validity of the proceedings as the appellant in Bimalanandan Prasad v. The United Refineries, Ltd. (4) was. He cannot, therefore, justly be deprived of the advantage of a rule wich operates in favour of his objection, owing to the failure on the part of the Court to issue notice to him.

The proceedings in execution, including the attachment made therein, must, therefore, be held, and are hereby declared, to be null and void. The parties to bear their own costs in both Courts.

Baguley, J.—I agree. The point is a purely technical one, but the appellant is entitled to take advantage of the technicality. I would, however, point out that this kind of concession cannot be repeated: Fakhrul Islam v. Bhubaneshuari Kuer (5).

D. Appeal allwed.

(5) 117 Ind. Cas. 648; A I R 1929 Rang. 79; 7 Pat. 790.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal from Original Decree No. 86 of 1930

December 7, 1934

WORT AND VARMA, JJ.

KAMTA PRASAD AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

DURGA DAT AWASTHI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Partition — Witnesses not present at partition can testify as to the fact of separation—Alienation—Legal necessity—Lender making enquiries—Unsubstantial part of consideration not applied for legal necessity — Legal necessity, if established — High rate of interest—Lender must prove necessity for it.

The mere fact that the witnesses were not present at the time of the partition of the family would not of itself be sufficient to disregard their evidence testifying to the partition entirely. The matter of separation may be and often is a question of reputation or notoriety. [p. 963, col. 1.]

Where it has been established not only that enquiry was made by the lender that the money was actually required and was expended for the legal necessity but that the lender also made enquiries from the members of the family as regards an amount which formed an unsubstantial part of consideration although no enquiry was made from third persons, then under the circumstances legal necessity is established either on the ground that that amount forms an unsubstantial amount of the consideration or on the ground that enquiries were made of the only persons who could give the lender any information with regard to the matter. [p. 963, col. 2.]

It is incumbent on those who support a mortgage made by the manager of a joint Hindu family to show not only that there was necessity to borrow, but that it would not be unreasonable to borrow at some such high rate and upon some such terms, and if it is not shown that there was necessity to borrow at the rate and upon the terms contained in the mortgage, that rate and those terms cannot stand. Nazir Begam v. Rai Raghunath Singh (1) and Ram Bujhawan Prasad Singh v. Nathuram (2), relied on. [p. 964, col. 2.]

Quaere.—Whether in Nazir Begam v. Rai Raghunath Singh (1) and Ram Bujhawan Prasad Singh v. Nathuram (2) their Lordships of the Privy Council intended to modify in any sense the principle enunciated in Hanuman Prasad's case (3). [ibid.]

A. from a decision of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Saran, dated June 25, 1929.

Messrs. Ram Prasad and S. C. Mazumdar, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Parmeshwar Dayal, Jaleshwar Prasad and B. P. Sinha, for the Respondents.

Wort, J.—This is an appeal from the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge of Saran in an action on three mortgage bonds. The plaintiffs appeal from that part of the judgment and decree by which the learned Judge has disallowed interest at the rate of 2 per centum per mensem compound, with yearly rests and has reduced the interest to 12 per centum per annum simple. The defendants appeal from the judgment of the learned Judge except as regards that which relates to interest.

The case of the plaintiffs in the Court below was that after the execution of the mortgage bonds the last of which was in November 1917, the defendants Nos. 1 to 12 who, up till then, were members of the joint family, separated. Their case also was that the bonds were executed for legal necessity. By his judgment the learned Judge had decided both these questions in favour of the plaintiffs and he in the circumstances granted a mortgage decree.

The judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge was supported by the plaintiff appellants in this Court on the two points which I have mentioned, and that, they added the argument that, having regard to the fact that defendants Nos. 1 to 2 (who executed the mortgage bonds) mortgaged only those shares which fell to them on partition and that as partition has now taken place and that as the mortgage decree is sought to be enforced only against those interests, the question of legal necessity is involved, the question of interest cannot be doubted after the decisions of the Privy Council in the case of Nazir Begum v. Rai Raghunath Singh (1) and in the case of Ram Bujhawan Prasad Singh v. Nathuram (2). In the view which I take with regard to the matter of legal necessity, the point to which I refer does not arise.

The mortgage bonds were three in number, the first being of June 12, 1914, for Rs. 1,000 by which defendants Nos. 1 and 2 mortgaged 9 annas 7 pies odd interest in village Tiar and the same interest in village Shankra and the same in village Majhaulia. The second bond was dated November 16, 1914, by which the defendant No. 2 executed a mortgage of 1 anna 7 pies 4 karants in the three villages, the interests whereof were mortgaged in the bond of June 12, 1914. By the third bond the defendant No. 1 on the November 2, 1917, mortgaged his 8 annas interest in the three villages which I have named together with the same interest in village Darhla. As I have stated, the interest reserved under these bonds was 2 per centum per mensem compound with yearly rests.

I propose in the first instance to deal with the question of cross-appeal of the defendants with regard to the two matters decided by the learned Subordinate Judge, namely, whether the parties separated after the execution of the mortgages, and whether the mortgages were for family necessity. The plaintiffs in support of their case called a number of witnesses stating the fact that the members of the family had separated. The learned Judge as I have said has come to the conclusion that the separation did take place but has come to no definite conclusion as regards the date. The witnesses called on behalf of the plaintiffs to prove this fact were Mahadeo Prasad (P. W. No. 4) a neighbour zamindar and money lender who was a witness to some of the bonds executed in the case and had lent money to defendant No. 3 in 1921; Sukhdeo Prasad (P. W. No. 5), also a zamindar who had been lending money to the defendants for a period of fourteen or fifteen years and was a co-sharer with the defendants in another village; Brij Nandan Prasad, again a zamindar who was on visiting terms with the defendants was the scribe of the mortgage bonds in suit and was also a scribe of other bonds executed by defendants and also spoke to the fact of separation. The Judge has discounted the evidence of these witnesses on the ground that none was present at the time when the partition took place. He then proceeds to rely upon a number of documents (mostly mortgage bonds) executed by the defendants from which he draws the inference that a separation did in fact take place. He has stated in his judgment that there was no documentary evidence to prove the fact of partition; and by that we understand him to mean that there was no partition deed. The most important of the documents relied upon was Ex. 1, a mortgage-bond dated May 3, 1922, where defendant No. 3 dealt with his specific shares in the properties. Again in the same month defendant No. 2 executed a bond, one of the purpose of which was to provide money for the Sradh ceremony of the widow of Debi Dat. Debi Dat was the brother of defendants Nos. 2 and 3, uncle of Chandrika (defendant No. 4) and the cousin of Durga Dat Awasthi (defendant No. 1). The other bonds dated April 17, 1919, Ex. 2 and 2-a, were relied upon for the reason that a certain share in the two debts which were incurred by the mortgage related to the widow of Debi Dat and that certain members who had been joined in the mortgage bonds gave an idemnity therefor. Exhibit No. 3 which is not before us but which is another document upon which the learned Judge has relied is dated November 10, 1918, and reliance is placed on this as showing that the widow of Debi Dat was described as his heir, which would certainly have been an inappropriate description had the family been joint. This, however, it is contended by Mr. Parmeshwar Dayal who appears on behalf of the defendants, has no significance having regard to the case which the plaintiffs made out. It is quite clear from the evidence that Debi Dat died about the year 1912 or 1913, and the statement which it is asserted was consistent only with the partition having taken place is obviously inconsistent with the plaintiffs' case that the members of the family were joint up to the date of the last bond which was in November 1917.

(1) 50 Ind. Cas. 434; 46 I A 145; 36 M L J 521; 17 A L J 591; 23 C W N 700; 21 Bom L R 484; 26 M L T 40; 30 C L J 86; (1919) M W N 498; 1 U P L R P C 49; 11 L W 188; 41 A 571 (P C).

(2) 71 Ind. Cas. 933; 50 I A 94; 4 P L T 29; A I R 1923 P C 37; 32 M L T 129; 44 M L J 615; 25 Bom. L R 508; (1923) M W N 382; 2 Pat, 285; 38 C L J 25; 18 L W 767; 1 Pat. L R 445; 28 C W N 446 P C).

Four other documents to which I have already referrd, it is contended, are equally consistent with the case of jointness or a case of separation; they are consistent with the case of jointness, as the idea of the members of a family executing mortgage bonds charging the shares which would fall to them in the event of a partition is by no means uncommon. But in the Court below the deeds were relied upon more for the purpose of showing that the members of the family were by these transactions raising funds to meet their own particular expenses and that there was thus an indication that there was no common fund from which the expenses of the members of the family would be met. As an instance more particularly of this matter are the bonds executed by defendant No. 2 on September 2, 1914, and on October 28, of the same year wherein he mortgaged his 1 anna 7 pies odd share in village to meet his own personal necessities. Again defendant No. 3 by the bond of June 5, 1919, mortgaged his share in the property to meet certain antecedent debts. On August 12, 1921, the same person mortgaged his 1 anna 7 pies odd share for his antecedent debts together with maintenance of his own family. It is true, as Mr. Parmeshwar Dayal argues, that the mere execution by these persons of those bonds charging thereunder their particular shares in the family property is not necessarily inconsistent with the state of jointness. However, the facts proved by those bonds would give some support to the evidence called by the plaintiffs on the question of separation. It would be difficult for this Court to come to a conclusion with regard to the credibility of the witnesses different from that at which the learned Subordinate Judge has arrived but the mere fact that the witnesses were not present would not of itself be sufficient to disregard their evidence entirely. The matter of separation may be and often is a question of reputation or notoriety; and the witnesses called by the plaintiffs certainly were competent to state the facts of which they gave evidence. The reasons which the learned Subordinate Judge has given therefore for coming to the conclusion that separation did take place seem to be supported by the oral evidence also.

The other substantial question that remains is as I have already mentioned. The first bond was for Rs. 1,000. The greater art of the consideration was Rs. 930 which was given by the lender in cash, the balance being Rs. 70 for previous dues. There is no very serious argument as regards the Rs. 930 for the expenses of the marriage. It has been established by the evidence that enquiries were made by the lender and the only comment that can be made with regard to the Rs. 70 is (as I have said) that it went to meet previous dues. It seems to me, however, that this bond can be supported on two grounds. First of all it has been established not only that enquiry was made by the lender that the money was actually required and was expended for the marriage, but that the lender also made enquiries from the members of the family as regards the Rs. 70 although no enquiry was made from third persons. Either on the ground that the Rs. 70 forms an unsubstantial amount of the consideration or on the ground that enquiries were made of the only persons who could give the lender any information with regard to the matter, legal necessity is established.

The second bond was of November 16, 1914, for a consideration of Rs. 599. This was made up of a previous bond of Rs. 105-8-0 and Rs. 493-8-0 for chhatia ceremony. Mr. Parmeshwar Dayal attacks more particularly the larger amount namely, Rs. 493 for chhatia; but it is not seriously disputed that in a family of the standing of the defendants the chhatia ceremony was usual and could not have been described as unnecessary and in the circumstances there is no serious doubt as to the expenditure on this account. So far as the balance of Rs. 105-8 is concerned, the lender satisfied himself as to the existence of the debt.

The third bond was of November 2, 1917, for Rs. 600 which was made up of various items; two hand-notes of Rs. 50 each together with bahi khata account for Rs. 67 together with Rs. 156 interest. The hand-notes were proved. The comment regarding the bahi khata account was that no bahi khata books were produced. With that I shall deal in a moment. The other sums were mortgage bond dated September 5, 1915 for a sum of Rs. 200 a further item of bahi khata account of Rs. 32 making in all with interest Rs. 371 the total being Rs. 600 which includes the amount paid by the lender to defendant No. 2 in cash. There is some controversy with regard to what took place as regards this bahi khata account. There seems to be some misunderstanding with regard to the matter. On September 27, 1929, the plaintiff filed these documents whereupon the Subordinate Judge made an order that the inadmissibility or otherwise would be considered when the documents were tendered in evidence, ultimately on June 6, 1929, they were rejected. The plaintiffs contended that they were wrongly rejected; but it is clear from what took place that the plaintiffs merely filed them on May 27, 1929, but, not during the time when the trial was proceeding, did they ever tender these documents in evidence. The trial appears to have come to an end on June 5, 1929. It is quite obvious, therefore, that the learned Judge was right when he decided that the documents at this stage (that is to say, after the defendants' evidence was closed) were to be rejected. But even so, that does not necessarily dispose of the point. The plaintiffs so far as the sums due on bahi khata account were necessary to be established was concerned, went into Court without the accounts, at their risk, and, if the Judge accepted their evidence unsupported by documents, the mere fact that the documents were not produced is no reason for now holding that their evidence is not to be accepted. That is the only ground upon which that part of the consideration for the bond of November 2, 1917, was attacked. It has been proved that the lender satisfied himself by a bona fide enquiry that the debts existed and therefore of the existence of legal necessity. The judgment, therefore, of the learned Subordinate Judge with regard to legal necessity seems to me to be one which cannot be attacked. The reasons advanced by the learned Advocate on behalf of the respondents do not justify a finding that the learned Judge was erroneous in the conclusion at which he arrived. That disposes of the two main questions in the appeal.

There remains only the question of interest which was the subject-matter of the plaintiffs' appeal. It was contended by the plaintiffs (as I have already stated) that as separation had taken place, only the interests of the persons who actually executed the three bonds with regard to their own shares were charged by the mortgage decree and that neither the question of legal necessity as regards the loan itself nor the question of interest arose. The learned Judge in the Court below was not asked to decide that question. In my judgment it is not necessary to decide the contention in this case for the reason that at the time the mortgage was entered into on their own showing the plaintiffs were members of the joint family; and, as they were contracting with regard to the joint family property, it was necessary to show in order to validate the transaction that the joint family necessity for raising the money at the rate of the bond existed. I have already referred to the decision of the Judicial Committee in Nazir Begum v. Rai Raghunath Singh (1) which establishes clearly the proposition that it was necessary for the lender to prove that it was not unreasonable to borrow money at the rate of interest reserved by the mortgage bond. The passage of Lord Phillimore's opinion is to this effect:

"It is incumbent on those who support a mortgage made by the manager of a joint Hindu family to show not only that there was necessity to borrow, but that it would not be unreasonable to borrow at some such high rate and upon some such terms, and if it is not shown that there was necessity to borrow at the rate and upon the terms contained in the mortgage, that rate and those terms cannot stand".

The same proposition is to be found in the case of Ram Bujhawan Prasad Singh v. Nathuram (2). Whether in these cases their Lordships of the Privy Council intended to modify in any sense the principle enunciated in Hanuman Prasad Panday v. Babooee Munraj Koonwerri (3) seems to be open to doubt. The statement to which I have referred in Nazir Begum's case (1) was

"It is incumbent upon those who support a mortgage made by the manager of a joint Hindu family to show not only that there was necessity to borrow, but that it was not unreasonable to borrow at some such high rate and upon some such terms."

In Hanuman Prasad's case (3) it was stated that the existence of legal necessity was not a condition precedent to the validity of the charge and that a mere bona fide enquiry as regards the matter would be sufficient. Whether their Lordships intended by the later cases to hold that in the case of interest it is necessary for the lender to prove that the necessity existed, that is to say, apart from a bona fide enquiry, is doubtful; but for the reasons which appear the matter does not arise.

In disposing of the matter in this case the learned Judge has dealt with it on two grounds: first of all he has considered the case made by the plaintiffs which was to the effect that the parties agreed to pay the high rate of interest. He characterizes the evidence in this respect as conflicting and appears to come to the conclusion that no such agreement was arrived at but that the lender instructed the scribe who drew up the bonds to state the rate of interest at 21 per cent. per annum. Then the learned Judge finds that there was no proof of necessity. The plaintiffs in order to establish necessity had relied upon several mortgage bonds entered into by the parties. They were bonds dated July 2, 1914, September 12, 1914, October 28, 1914, September 5, 1915 and September 8, 1915. The learned Judge is inaccurate to some extent in saying that these were all of later dates, because it will be seen that the latest of the three bonds in suit was of 1917. The bonds relied upon by the plaintiffs would, however, be some indication at any rate of the rates upon which the defendants were borrowing money, although as the learned Judge points out, not necessarily evidence of the actual necessity to borrow at that rate. In any event the plaintiffs have not been able to establish the necessity of borrowing at the rate reserved in the bonds nor do the appellants very curiously contend that they have. In my judgment, therefore, the plaintiffs' appeal fails as regards the proof of necessity for the members of the family to borrow at this rate.

(3) 6 M I A 393; 18 W R 81 n; 2 Suther 29; 1 Sar 552.

The only question that remains is the rate at which they were entitled to recover under the bonds. The learned Judge using his own experience with regard to the matter has come to the conclusion that the proper rate in the circumstances would be at 12 per cent. per annum simple interest—a view with which this Court concurs.

In my judgment, therefore, both the appeal and the cross-appeal fail and both of which must be dismissed with costs.

Varma, J.—I agree.

D. Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Civil Revision Petition No. 776 of 1933

July 6, 1934

TEK CHAND, J.

Musammat PARBATI—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER

versus

TEK SINGH—DEFENDANT—OPPOSITE PARTY

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), Sch. II, Art. 38—Suit "relating to maintenance"—Proceedings under s. 488, Criminal Procedure Code, by wife against husband—Husband agreeing to provide maintenance to wife—Wife bringing suit in Small Cause Court for arrears of maintenance—Maintainability.

Where the parties are husband and wife, and some years ago the latter took proceedings against the former under s. 488, Criminal Procedure Code, and in the course of that litigation an agreement was entered into between them whereby the defendant agreed to pay to the plaintiff maintenance at certain specified rates and the plaintiff brings a suit for arrears of maintenance alleged to be due under the agreement, the suit is one "relating to maintenance" and is clearly excluded from the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes by Art 38 of the Second Schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. Dhirta v. Nihal Devi (1) and Kadiyam Rayudu v. Kamarsu Veeraju (2), relied on.

C. R. P. from the decree of the Small Cause Court Judge, Kangra, dated August 24, 1933.

Mr. Bhagwat Dayal, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Vishnu Datt for Mr. Achhru Ram, for the Opposite Party.

Order.—This suit was wrongly tried by Lala Rala Ram, Senior Subordinate Judge, Dharamsala, under the Small Cause Courts Act. His judgment and decree therefore, are without jurisdiction and should be set aside. The parties are husband and wife, and some years ago the latter took proceedings against the defendant under s. 488, Criminal Procedure Code. In the course of that litigation an agreement was entered into between them whereby the defendant agreed to pay to the plaintiff maintenance at certain specified rates. The plaintiff has now sued for arrears of maintenance alleged to be due under the agreement. The suit is, therefore, one "relating to maintenance" and is clearly excluded from the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes by Art. 38.

Mr. Vishnu Datt urges that the suit is based on an agreement and not on the personal law of the parties and, therefore, Art. 38 does not apply. There are, however, numerous authorities which lay down that the article applies "to all suits relating to maintenance whether based on contract, bond, award, decree or personal law." See Dhirta v. Nihal Devi (1) and Kadiyam Rayudu v. Kamarsu Veeraju 112 Ind. Cas. 257 (2), and the rulings cited therein. I accept the petition, set aside the judgment and decree of the lower Court and remand the case to the Senior Subordinate Judge for disposal in accordance with the ordinary procedure. He may try the case himself or send it to another Subordinate Judge of competent jurisdiction. Costs shall abide the event.

D. Petition accepted.

(1) 123 P R 1889.
(2) 112 Ind. Cas. 257.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal from Appellate Decree No. 624 of 1932

January 18, 1935

WORT, J.

JANGBAHADUR SINGH—PLAINTIFF —APPELLANT

versus

THITHAR SINGH—DEFENDANT —RESPONDENT

Easement—Profit a pendre—Presumption—Defendant neither tenant nor licensee—Defendant cutting trees - Proprietor's right to price of timber cut—Easements Act (V of 1882)—Applicability in Bihar —Limitation Act (IX of 1908), ss. 2, 26.

What is known as profit in England is included in India in the term 'easement' in s. 2 of the Limitation Act of 1908.

The Easements Act does not apply to Bihar province, but the law relating to easements which is the law of justice, equity and good conscience in this respect excepting in so far as there is any statute applicable.

There cannot be any presumption in the case of an easement that what was the state of facts twenty or thirty years ago has continued since. The law provides that an easement is established only when it is shown that there has been a continuous enjoyment.

The plaintiff was admittedly the proprietor of the land upon which certain bamboo clumps stood. The defendant admittedly was not the tenant nor was there any relationship between him and the plaintiff. The plaintiff came to the Court with a story that there was an agreement under which the defendant would pay the price of the timber cut, and, the defendant denied that he cut any trees during the years in question. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the defendant was in adverse possession for over twenty years :

Held, (1) that such an agreement, if any, naturally would take the nature of a license;

(2) that there could not be any custom strictly so called to appropriate the trees unless the defendant were a tenant. If there had been anything established in the nature of a custom to appropriate the timber, the defendant not being a tenant, it would not be a custom but would be in the nature of what is known in England as a profit a pendre;

(3) that there was an easement, and hence a right to trees was not established by the defendant and the fact that the plaintiff made some sort of admission by saying that he was entitled to take the leaves and branches but not the timber did not assist the defendant.

A. from a decision of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Darbhanga, dated December 14, 1931, against the decision of the Munsif of Samastipur, dated July 11, 1930.

Mr. Gendhari Prasad Singh, for the Appellant.

Mr. Janak Kishore, for the Respondent.

Judgment—This appeal arises out of an action for price of certain bamboos. The learned Judges in the Courts below dismissed the plaintiff's suit, the appellate Court holding that the defendant had been in possession for over twenty year and, therefore, the action was barred The only point that I have to decide in this case, having regard to what has happened, is whether the matter should be remanded to the Courts below for determination of certain questions upon which the case really depends.

It is necessary to state certain facts from which will be seen the point which is at issue. The plaintiff is admittedly the proprietor of the land upon which these bamboo clumps stand. The defendant admittedly is not the tenant nor is there any relationship between him and the plaintiff. He is not tenant as I say and his case quite clearly was that he was not a licensee; at any rate that is what in substance it amounted to. His case depended entirely upon an allegation that there was a custom by which he had exclusive right in the timber. The plaintiff came to the Court with a story that there was an agreement under which the defendant would pay the price of the timber cut and, in this connection I might say that the claim was for the timber cut in the years 1334, 1335 and 1336. The Courts below, as I have said, have held that the defendant had been in adverse possession for more than twenty years, or to use the exact words in the judgment of the Court below,

"and having been in exclusive possession of the clumps since the publication of Record of Rights, the plaintiffs' title is barred by adverse possession".

It is quite obvious from an analysis of the judgments of the Courts below that neither the learned Judges nor the parties addressed themselves to the real point in the case. There was no question of tenancy. Was there any question of license ? Unless indeed the plaintiffs' story was accepted that the defendant had agreed to pay for the trees which had been cut by him, such an agreement naturally would take the nature of a license. But this story has been disbelieved by the Courts below.

There could not be any custom strictly so called to appropriate the trees unless the defendant were a tenant. If there had been anything established in the nature of a custom to appropriate the timber, the defendant not being a tenant, it would not be, as I have said, a custom but would be in the nature of what is known in England as a profit a pendre and in this case, as there was no question of tenancy between the defendant and the plaintiff or a tenancy of any other land, it would be what is known as a profit a pendre in gross. But what is known as profit in England is included in India in the term 'easement' in s. 2 of the Limitation Act of 1908. It would be more accurate for me to state that this particular profit would be included in India in the definition; some of the profits known to the English Law may not be included, but that is a matter which I do not propose to determine. Under s. 2, "Easement includes a right not arising from contract, by which one person is entitled to remove and appropriate for his own profit any part of the soil belonging to another or anything growing in, or attached to, or subsisting upon, the land of another". And this certainly included the right to appropriate the bamboos which by the decision of this Court in Maharaja Sir Rameshwar Singh Bahadur v. Basudev Singh (1) would be properly described as timber. We have, therefore, by reason of the provisions of s 2 of the Limitation Act and in the circumstances of the case, there being no license and there being no relationship of landlord and tenant, to deal with an easement. The Easements Act does not apply to this province, but the law relating to easements which is the law of justice, equity and good conscience in this respect excepting in so far as there is any statute applicable.

In this connection s. 26 of the Limitation Act must be referred to. Section 26 provides that an easement arises when it has been enjoyed as of right without interruption and for twenty years. The explanation to the section should be mentioned although it does not affect the point in dispute:

"Nothing is an interruption within the meaning of this section, unless where there is an actual discontinuance of the possession or enjoyment by reason of an obstruction by the act of some person other than the claimant."

We are not concerned here whether there was a discontinuance, but we are concerned here whether there was a continuance in enjoyment for upwards of twenty years. Now the unfortunate part about the matter is, as I have said, that the parties did not address their minds to the point at issue: indeed the defendant came into the witness-box by his witnesses and expressly denied that he had appropriated any trees for the period in suit. What he did before it does not appear; but the learned Judge in the Court below has relied on the Record of Rights for the determination of this point. Twenty years ago or more, this person was described as being in possession, but this statement by itself was not sufficient. He was in possession and I suppose we must assume that his possession consisted of appropriating either the produce of these trees or the actual trees themselves, exactly what, the Record of Rights does not say.

Two points arise: what was the nature of the defendant's possession 20 years ago, and secondly, what has happened since? The plaintiff's case appears to have been that the defendant was entitled to take the leaves and branches but not the actual timber itself. Whether the possession was of that nature, it does not appear.

Now the second point is that, assuming for the moment against the plaintiff that the defendant's possession was of the nature of actully appropriating the bamboos themselves, what has happened since? Now the only light we have got with regard to the matter is from the defendant's own evidence in which he expressly denied having cut the timber. So we are left in the position of not knowing whether the plaintiff's version of the defendant's right over those trees is correct or whether the defendant is actually in possession. There is no evidence on that point but the bare statement in the Record of Rights in favour of defendant's possession. Again to repeat myself, we do not know whether the possession which was then in existence has continued since. There cannot be, it must be remembered, any presumption, in the case of an easement, that what was the state of facts twenty or thirty years ago has continued since. The law provides that an easement is established only when it is shown that there has been a continuous enjoyment; and when it is necessary, as the law lays down, to prove that fact, no presumption can possibly arise. I say and repeat the defendant did not address his mind to this point; and the fact that the plaintiff made some sort of admission by saying that he was entitled to take the leaves and branches but not the timber does not assist the defendant.

To come back to what I said in the commencement of my observations, the question is, am I to allow this case to go back to be reheard with the directions which are suggested, or am I to dispose of the matter as it stands at present? It is quite clear from the evidence which I have perused that the matter could not be determined on that evidence. Ross, J. in Maharaja Sir Rameshwar Singh Bahadur's case (1) to which I have referred, laid down a principle which in my judgment applies to this case. The fact that the case which I am quoting may have been under the Bengal Tenancy Act makes no difference to the matter, because the principle laid down is the same. There by what is described as the common law the landlord had a right to the timber and Ross, J. remarked in the decision that because the landlord set up a custom which he had failed to prove, therefore, the defendant tenant was entitled to the whole of the trees. Once it is determined that the landlord is entitled to the timber, the custom which he set up is only a partial admission in favour of the tenant-defendant and the tenant, therefore, is entitled to what that admission allows him and by that admission he is entitled to half the trees. There is no such admission in this case. If there is anything in the nature of admission there is the claim that there was a license. Now in my judgment I do not think that I am entitled to allow the parties to go back and to adduce evidence to fill up the gaps in the evidence already adduced. That being so I must dispose of it on the considerations which I have stated. The plaintiff in this case certainly failed to establish the existence of a contract to pay for the trees; but his statement to that effect was not inconsistent, indeed it was in agreement with the proposition that he was entitled to the trees. The defendant for the reasons best known to himself which are reasonably apparent, asserted that he had not cut any timber within the years in suit. Now the onus to establish the existence of an easement and, therefore, a right to these trees was clearly upon the defendant. Not only did he give no evidence of what has happened between the Record of Rights and the years in suit, the evidence adduced as to the exercise of the rights during the years in suit is insufficient. In the circumstances it seems to me that the only decision that I can arrive at is that the plaintiff should have been allowed to succeed; and the appeal in this Court, therefore, must be allowed with costs. As the parties in the Court below agreed that the figures arrived at by the Commissioner appointed in the case were correct ones, there will be a decree in favour of the plaintiff on those figures.

(1) 60 Ind. Cas. 521; 6 P L J 127; 3 P L T 90; A I R 1923 Pat. 95.

The appeal is allowed with costs.

A. Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Civil Miscellaneous Petition No. 459 of 1932

June 22, 1934

ADDISON AND SALE, JJ.

AMAR SINGH—PETITIONER

versus

COMMISSIONER OF INCOME TAX, PUNJAB—OPPOSITE PARTY

Income Tax Act (XI of 1922), ss. 10 (vi) and 66 (3)—Printing press—"Type", whether part of machinery or plant is a question of law.

In the case of a printing press whether "type" is part of the machinery or plant is a question of law. Corporation of Calcutta v. Cossipore Municipality (1), referred to.

C. Mis. P. from the decision of the Income-tax Commissioner.

Mr. Kirpa Ram Bajaj, for the Petitioner.

Messrs. Asa Ram Aggarwal and Jagan Nath Aggarwal, for the Opposite Party.

Order.—Sardar Amar Singh, proprietor of the Model Electric Press, Lahore, has applied under sub-s. (3), s. 66, Income Tax Act, against a refusal of the Commissioner to state a case. The applicant has been assessed for the year 1929-30 in respect of an electric press housed in a "first class building" in Lahore and the point involved in this application is the amount of depreciation permissible to the applicant under cl. (6), sub-s. (2), s. 10, Income Tax Act. The first question raised is whether the assessee is entitled to claim depreciation on the business premises at 5 per cent. instead of two and a half per cent. on the authority of the first remark in the "column of remarks" of the statement prescribed in the rules for the depreciation of buildings. (see r. 8 of the rules made under s. 10 (2) (6) of the Act). We agree with the Income-tax Commissioner that no question of law here arises. The petitioner claims a higher rate of depreciation on the ground of the alleged severe vibration caused by an electric plant of 440 voltage. It seems that the petitioner produced no evidence before the Income-tax Commissioner to prove the effect of the alleged vibration. The Commissioner has come to a finding of fact that the electric press cannot be held to cause any special deterioration of the building. Under these circumstances, no question of law arises for our decision. The applicant will be at liberty to re-open this question before the Commissioner in connection with future assessments and support his case by producing expert evidence on the question of the effect of vibration on the building.

The next point raised in this application is the rate of depreciation to be allowed on the furniture under Item No. 2 of the Schedule in r. 8 made under s. 10 (2) (6) of the Act. It is obvious from the Schedule in question that furniture is subject merely to the general rate of 5 per cent. depreciation since furniture is clearly not a part of the machinery. The special rates allowed in the remarks column attached to Item No. 2 apply only to electric machines. If the applicant wishes to secure the advantage of these special rates, he should apply to be assessed on the electric portion of the machinery separately from the furniture. We agree with the Income-tax Commsssioner that on this point, no question of law arises.

The only other question pressed before us is the question whether "type" forms part of the machinery of the press. Clause (b) (1) (6), s. (2) of the Act allows depreciation for machinery and plant, and it was urged by the applicant before the Income-tax Commissioner that type is part of the machinery. The Commissioner held that in this respect the petitioner was laying claim to something not provided for by law and that no point of law, therefore, arises.

It is argued before us that "type" is an essential part of the machinery because without the type the machinery of the press would be useless. We are informed that the Income-tax Authorities while not allowing depreciation in respect of the type, do make allowances for replacements; but it is contended that the allowance for replacement is far less than the depreciation permitted by the Act if it be held—as is now pleaded—that "type" is included in the articles in respect of which depreciation is allowed by cl. (6), s. 10. The only authority to which our attention has been directed in this connection is Corporation of Calcutta v. Cossipore Municipality (1) a Privy Council ruling in which it was held that a large tank erected by the Cossipore Corporation in connection with the Calcutta water supply and intended to increase the supply during the part of the day when the hourly consumption exceeded the capacity of the reservoir was not "machinery." It is clear that this ruling is not on all fours with the present case. It does, however, appear to us that a substantial point of law does arise in, viz., whether in the case of the printing press in suit "type" is part of the machinery or plant. Clause (6) uses both expressions "machinery" and "plant." It may be open to doubt whether type is a part of the machinery but the expression "plant" has obviously a far wider application than the expression "machinery," and, even though type may be held not to be part of the machinery it does appear arguable that it is part of the "plant."

Accordingly we accept this application to the extent of requiring the Commissioner to state a case and refer to this Court a question of law which we would formulate as follows:

"Is the type in use at the Model Electric Press, Lahore, part of the machinery or plant of Press within the meaning of cl. (vi), sub-s. (2), 10, Income Tax Act?"

The rate of depreciation would be a matter for the Income-tax Authorities to decide. We make no order as to costs of this application.

D. Order accordingly.

(1) 67 Ind. Cas. 926; A I R 1922 P C 27; 48 I A 435; 49 C 190; 15 L W 253; 26 C W N 761 (P C).

PATNA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 91 of 1933
July 25, 1934
MUHAMMAD NOOR AND LUBY, JJ.
F. A. MCNAUGHT—APPELLANT
versus
Musammat SARASWATI THAKURAIN
—RESPONDENT

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXII, rr. 12, 3, 4—Execution proceedings—Whether abate on death of decree-holder—Representative, if can get his name substituted and continue execution—Fresh application, if necessary.

An execution proceeding does not abate on the death of the decree-holder and there is no bar to the execution continuing at the instance of his representative The representatives of a deceased decree-holder can get their names substituted during the pendency of an execution proceeding and proceed with it. No fresh application is necessary for this. Venkatachalam Chetti v. Ramaswamy Servai (2), followed.

C. A. from the order of the Sub-Judge, Purnea, dated February 24, 1933.

Messrs. Mehdi Imam and Asisullah, for the Appellants.

Mr. U. N. Banerjee, for the Respondent.

Muhammad Noor, J.—The simple question involved in this appeal is whether the representatives of a deceased decree-holder can get their names substituted during the pendency of an execution proceeding and proceed with it. It seems that Mr. A. J. Forbes held a decree against the respondent He died, and his estate was administered by his executor, Mr. A. H. Forbes. Mr. A. H. Forbes took out execution of the decree and then died. His executors applied for the substitution of their names in the execution proceedings in place of Mr. A. H. Forbes and wanted to proceed with the execution. There were certain objections raised as to the right of the executors of Mr. A H. Forbes to continue the execution proceedings. That has been decided in favour of the appellants, and there is no cross-objection before us.

The second objection was that there was no provision in the Civil Procedure Code by which a representative of a deceased decree-holder could be substituted in the course of an execution proceeding. This objection prevailed before the learned Subordinate Judge. He relied upon a decision of the Madras High Court in Palaniappa Chettiar v. Valliammal Achi, (1) and held that the representative of a deceased decree-holder should start fresh execution proceedings. The executors of Mr. A. H. Forbes have preferred this appeal.

It appears that the decision relied upon by the learned Subordinate Judge was expressly over-ruled by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in Venkatachalam Chetti v. Ramaswamy Servai (2). The reason for the decision in Palaniappa Chettiar v. Valliammal Achi, (1) was that the Code made no provision for the substitution of the name of the representative of the decree-holder during the course of execution proceedings, and further that O. XXII, r. 12, clearly took out the provision of rr. 3 and 4, O. XXII, Civil Procedure Code, from the execution proceedings. As has been pointed out by the two learned Judges who composed the Full Bench of the Madras High Court, r. 12 by excluding rr. 3 and 4 does not prohibit the substitution of a name in execution proceedings. It is needless to give in detail the reasonings given by them for holding that substitution is permissible. We respectfully agree with the views expressed by them, and the decision must be followed. The learned Advocate on behalf of the respondent has drawn our attention to two cases: one is a Full Bench decision of the Allahabad High Court in Baij Nath v. Ram Bharos (3). The observations relied upon by the learned Advocate are to be found at p. 514* of the report; but those observations, in my opinion, are more or less obiter dicta. What was decided in the case was that an application for substitution was not a fresh application so as to come within the mischief of s. 48, Civil Procedure Code, but it was an application to continue the pending execution. This case helps the appellants. The learned Advocate has further relied upon the case on Mirza Muhammad Sadiq Ali Khan v. Sajjad Mirza (4), but that case also, in my opinion, helps the appellants rather than the respondent. There also there was an application for substitution and the Oudh Chief Court held it to be an application to continue the pending execution proceedings. These two decisions were noticed by the Full Bench of the Madras High Court and the learned Judges used them as well as the two decisions of this Court to which I shall presently refer in support of the view that substitution in the course of the execution proceedings was permissible. A similar view seems to have been taken by a Bench of this Court in Gulab Kuer v. Muhammad Zaffar Hussan Khan, (5) where it was held that where the decree-holder assigned his interest to another, an application by the assignee for substitution of his name in place of that of the assignor was an application under O. XXI, r. 16, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, and not an application under O. XXII, r. 10, and if, at the time of such application, execution proceedings were pending, the application was not a fresh application for execution but merely an application for buringing the assignee on the record and for continuing the pending execution proceedings. This case was followed in Bhagwantia Kuer v. Zamir Ahmad Khan, (6), where an application for substitution

(1) 99 Ind. Cas. 627; A I R 1927 Mad. 184; 50 M L J 745; (1926) M W N 981; 25 L W 354.

(2) 135 Ind. Cas. 561; A I R 1932 Mad. 73; 55 M L J 34; 34 L W 866; (1931) M W N 1209; 62 M L J 1; Ind. Rul. (1932) Mad. 145 (F B).

(3) 101 Ind. Cas. 116; 49 A 509; A I R 1927 All. 165; 25 A L J 248.

(4) 105 Ind Cas. 611; 3 Luck. 126; A I R 1928 Oudh 30; 4 O W N 1025.

(5) 62 Ind. Cas. 30; A I R 1921 Pat. 180; 6 P L J 358; 2 P L T 619.

(6) 78 Ind. Cas. 766; A I R 1924 Pat. 576; 3 Pat. 596; 5 P L T 451; (1924) Pat. 221; 2 P L R 249.

*Page of 49 A—[Ed].

of the name of the representative of a deceased decree-holder filed in the course of the execution proceedings was held to be an application to continue the execution proceedings so as to save the application from becoming barred by limitation.

No doubt, there is no express provision for substitution of the name of a representative of the deceased decree-holder during the pendency of the execution proceedings; but as is apparent from a number of decided cases, such applications are filed and allowed, and the Courts have almost invariably treated such applications to be applications for continuation of the pending execution proceedings. It has been held more than once that the Code is not exhaustive. It is clear from O. XXII, r. 12, read with rr. 3 and 4, that an execution proceeding does not abate on the death of the decree-holder. If so, there is no bar to the execution continuing at the instance of his representative. I see no reason why a fresh application should be necessary. I am therefore of opinion that in view of the decisions of this Court and of the Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court, the view taken by the learned Subordinate Judge is wrong. His order is set aside. He is directed to substitute the names of the appellants, and then proceed to execute the decree according to law. The appeal is allowed with costs.

Luby, J.—I agree.

N. Appeal allowed.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Criminal Revision Application No. 172 of 1934

November 29, 1934

FERRERS, J. C. AND HAVELIWALLA, A. J. C.

ADAM ALI AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY

Public Gambling Act (III of 1867), s. 7—Private room, rented by members of one caste and containing paraphernalia of club, whether prima facie gaming house.

A private room containing all the paraphernalia of a club and rented by members of only one caste is not prima facie a common gaming house within the meaning of the Act. Tayabali Mahomedali v. Emperor (1) and Pabaumi v. Emperor (2), relied on.

Mr. P. S. Shahani, for the Applicants.

Mr. C. M. Lobo, for the Crown.

Judgment.—On March 4, 1934, an informant, Nazir Beg, was placed by the Police before Mr. Punthakey, who is a First Class Magistrate. Nazir Beg made oath and said that on March 2 he had gambled in a certain house and lost five rupees, and that the accused, Adamali had taken "nal." Nazir Beg went to the same house on the following day, and this time he was not allowed to play. The learned Magistrate was satisfied that there were good grounds for suspicion, and he accordingly issued a warrant under s. 6, Bombay Act, IV of 1887. Unsuccessful attempts were made to execute this warrant, but on March 20, a Sub-Inspector acting on the information of Nazir Beg raided the house and found nine of the accused seated in a circle playing cards, while accused No. 10 was lying on a cot nearby. The Sub-Inspector also seized three rupees which were lying on the ground in the centre of the circle.

The learned Magistrate considered that from the above facts a presumption arose under s. 7, Gambling Act, that the house was used as a common gaming house, that it was in the occupation of accused No. 1 and that the accused were there for the purpose of gaming. He has accordingly found Adamali, accused No. 1, guilty of an offence punishable under s. 4 and sentenced him to pay a fine of Rs. 15. He has also found the whole of the accused including Adamali guilty of the offence punishable under s. 5, Gambling Act, and sentenced each of them to pay Rs. 5 or Rs. 10.

The learned Advocate who has argued this revision application before us has dealt with a variety of points, which, for the purposes of this application, it will not be necessary for us to discuss and decide. We proceed upon one ground only: The learned Public Prosecutor does not attempt to uphold this conviction. He concedes that even if it be allowed that the warrant was good and the presumption raised under s. 7 was properly drawn, nevertheless the conviction cannot be sustained. The reason is that the presumption in question is in force only "until the contrary is made to appear."

Now, in our opinion, in the present case, the record does with reasonable certainty make the contrary to appear. The applicants are all of the same caste. They are all Boras, and there is some reason to suppose that the reason why Nazir Beg, when he went to the house, was not allowed to play may have been that he himself is not the member of the same caste. The Magistrate himself visited what he calls the gambling den, and he found that there were in it all the paraphernalia of a club. Against this, there is nothing but the sworn information given by Nazir Beg. But Nazir Beg is himself an avowed gambler, and as such an accomplice. His evidence is, therefore, tainted. We have more than once disposed of cases arising out of the Gambling Act, upon grounds similar to those upon which we think that we should deal with the present case. When a few members of the same caste assemble and meet together in a house containing all the paraphernalia of a club, we shall be in haste to suppose, that even if they indulged in a game of cards, and even if there was a certain amount of money at stake upon the issue of the game, these young men should be convicted of a criminal offence.

We have not attempted to go into any of the questions concerning the validity of the warrant, and the consequent presumption on which the Magistrate has proceeded. We dispose of this case simply upon the ground that a private room containing all the paraphernalia of a club and rented by members of only one caste does not prima facie appear to be a common gaming house within the meaning of the Act. Cases which have been disposed of on the like ground will be found in Tayabali Mahomedali v. Emperor (1), and Pabumal v. Emperor (2). We, therefore, grant this application and order that the conviction of Adamali, Fida Hussain and Tayabali be reversed, and the fine, if paid, be refunded.

D. Application granted.

(1) 3 Ind. Cas. 894; 3 S L R 80; 10 Cr. L J 407.
(2) 142 Ind. Cas 522; A I R 1933 Sind 42; (1933) Cr. Cas. 188; 34 Cr. L J 356. 27 S L R 32; Ind. Rul. (1933) Sind 102; 34 Cr. L J 356.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal from Appellate Decree No. 1490 of 1930

January 4, 1935

AGARWALA AND ROWLAND, JJ.

RAMDHANI SAHU AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Thakur PITAMBAR SINGH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 60, proviso—Mortgage—Subsequent lease by mortgagor to mortgagee—If a clog on the equity of redemption.

A permanent lease by a mortgagor to a mortgagee is not always void as being a clog on the equity of redemption. On the contrary the proviso to s. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act contemplates that the equity of redemption may be extinguished, without limiting the method of extinguishing it by sale of the equity of redemption to the mortgagee. Parashram Yeshwantshet v. Lakshmibai Babaji (1), Ram Narain Pattack v. Surath Nath Bandopadhya (2), Subrao Mangeshaya v Mangappa Chetti (3), Mahomed Musa v Jijibhai Bhagwan (6) and Bhimrao Nagojirao v. Sakharam Sahaji (7), distinguished.

A. from a decision of the Judicial Commissioner of Chota Nagpur, dated May 22, 1930, modifying that of the Subordinate Judge, Ranchi, dated May 18, 1928.

Messrs. B C. De, Syed Mehdi Imam and K. K Banerji, for the Appellant.

Messrs. B. N. Mitter, K. N. Maitra, and P. R. Das, for the Respondent.

Agarwala, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit for redemption in the following circumstances. In 1886, 20 kats of majhias land in village Jamudag were given in usufructuary mortgage by the mother of Thakur Dubraj Singh to Achhaibar for three years, to secure an advance of Rs. 800. On attaining majority, Thakur Dubraj Singh gave a zarpeshgi of the same land, plus 13 kats of land in village Dirsir, to Achhaibar, in April 1889. The zarpeshgi was for a period of five years and the consideration was Rs. 466-3 0 The mortgagor was unable to put the mortgagee in possession of the lands in Dirsir. In the following year, that is to say, in June 1890, Dubraj granted a permanent raiyati lease of the same 20 kats of majhias land of Jamudag and also of 2 kats of don land and 15 kats of tanr land to the sons of Achhaibar in consideration of a salami of Rs. 300. The lessees are the defendants-appellants in the present suit. Two days after the grant of this lease Dubraj Singh executed a zarpeshgi of all the lands covered by the lease in favour of Achhaibar. A manager of the mortgagor's estate was appointed under the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act in 1897. The estate was released in 1923. In the meantime Achhaibar was recorded as mortgagee in the Record of Rights in 1903 and his sons were recorded as raiyats. Dubraj died in 1909 and was succeeded by his son Pitambar, the present plaintiff. In 1917 the manager re-paid all the sum due on the three mortgages of 1886, 1889 and 1890, and thereafter recovered from the defendants the rent due under the lease. In the present suit, which was instituted on February 21, 1927, Pitambar sought to redeem the three mortgages and also prayed for an account. In the plaint it was alleged that the lease of June 1890 was void by reason of its having been obtained by the exercise of undue influence on the part of Achhaibar and his sons. It was further alleged that the lease was never acted upon; that there was no consideration for it and that in any event it was void as being a clog on the equity of redemption. The findings of fact are that the lease was genuine and for consideration and was acted upon; but the Court below has granted the plaintiff a decree on the ground that the lease was a clog on the plaintiff's right to redeem. In view of the findings arrived at by the Court of fact, the only question for determination is whether in the circumstances the lease is void as being a clog on the equity of redemption.

It is contended on behalf of the defendants-appellants that the lease was a transaction entirely separate from the mortgage; and that it was a transaction of which the mortgagor has had the fullest advantage, and that it was in no way unfair to him. On behalf of the plaintiff-respondent reliance has been placed upon the decision of Baker, J. in Parshram Yeshwantshet v. Laxmibai Babaji (1), in which it was held that a permanent lease by a mortgagor to a mortgagee is void. That case went in appeal to a Division Bench which upheld the judgment of Baker, J. apparently on the ground that the lease was void on the ground of failure of consideration and of unfairness. The findings of fact in that case, therefore, differ from the findings in the present case. The Court below has also relied upon a decision of this Court in Ram Narain Pathak v. Surath Nath Bandopadhya (2), in which the question was raised as to whether a lease by the mortgagor in favour of the mortgagee was binding on the former. It was held by Dawson Miller, C. J., that if the lease in question was a lease in futuro it was void altogether, and if it was a lease in presenti it was void as being a clog on the equity of redemption. It is to be observed that in that case the equity of redemption had been sold to a third party; and that in fact rent under the lease had never been paid, so it would appear that the lease was not acted upon. Das, J. a member of the Bench who decided that case, guarded himself against expressing an opinion that a lease by a mortgagor to a mortgagee is necessarily void. He pointed out that although a mortgagee may take a release of the equity of redemption from the mortgagor, he may not take from him an interest such as a long lease at any ordinary fixed rent, by the grant of which the value of the estate is materially lessened, and the mortgagor is hindered from redeeming while at the same time remaining liable to a suit for foreclosure or for recovery of the debt. The latter eventuality does not arise in the present instance for the debt was repaid in 1917. The decision in Ram Narain Pathak v. Surath Nath Pandapadhya (2), follows that in Subrao Mangeshaya v. Manjappa Chetti (3), which was also a case in which rent had never been paid by the lessee. That case was based on two Irish cases Webb v. Rorke (4), and Hickes v. Cooke (5). In both of these cases relief was granted to the mortgagor not on the ground that the lease granted was a clog on the equity of redemption, but on the ground that the transaction was unfair and unconscionable. The decision in Mahomed Musa v. Jijibhai Bhagwan (6), which was cited also in the judgment of the Court below is distinguishable from the present case inasmuch as in that case the lease was contained in the mortgage deed itself. Similarly, in the case of Bhimrao Nagojirao v. Sakharam Sabaji (7), it was held that a lease executed contemporaneously with a mortgage constituted one transaction and, therefore, the lease was a clog on the equity of redemption. In Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume 21, page 144, para. 276, it is stated that a lease by a mortgagor to a mortgagee for a long period at an inadequate rent will not be upheld by the Courts, but an ordinary occupation lease at a fair rent is not objectionable. In the present case the question of the adequacy of the rent was never raised by the plaintiff and, as has already been stated, the manager of the plaintiff's estate realised from the defendants rent at the rate stipulated for in the lease from 1903 until the estate

(1) 115 Ind. Cas. 405; 53 B 300; 31 Bom. L R 229; A I R 1929 Bom. 186.
(2) 57 Ind. Cas. 337; 5 P L J 423; 1 P L T 575; (1920) Pat. 351.
(3) 16 B 705.
(4) (1806) 9 R R 122; 2 Sch. & Lef. 661.
(5) (1816) 16 R R 1; 4 Dow. 16; 3 E R 1074.
(6) 9 B 524.
(7) 64 Ind. Cas. 612; 46 B 409, 23 Bom. L R 126; A I R 1922 Bom. 277.

was released in 1923. Before 1908, of course, the rent was payable to Achhaibar, the mortgagee, and not to the plaintiff's estate. The findings of fact arrived at on the issues raised by the plaintiff negative the suggestion that there was anything unfair or unconscionable in the transactions between the mortgagor and the mortgagee. The authorities cited do not establish that a permanent lease by a mortgagor to a mortgagee is always void as being a clog on the equity of redemption. On the contrary the proviso to s. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act contemplates that the equity of redemption may be extinguished, without limiting the method of extinguishing it by sale of the equity of redemption to the mortgagee. Viewing the transaction between the parties as a whole, it does not appear to me that in the circumstances of the present case the lease and mortgage can be held to form one transaction. At the time of the original mortgage in 1886 it is clear that it was not in contemplation of the parties that the transaction should be followed by a lease. It was only after the mortgagor failed to put the mortgagee in possession of the additional land which was mortgaged in 1889 that he was driven to adopt other means of securing from his creditor an additional advance. It was in consequence of this necessity that the lease of 1890 was executed. It was clearly no part of the original transaction between the parties and, as I have already stated, cannot now, in view of the findings of fact, be challenged on the ground of unfairness or want of consideration. In this view of the matter, it is not necessary to consider the further questions that were raised, namely whether the mortgage had been properly cancelled by the manager under the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act, or whether the defendants have acquired occupancy rights in the land. In the result I would allow the appeal and set aside the decision of the Court below, and dismiss the paintiff's suit with costs throughout.

Rowland, J.—I agree.

D. Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Letters Patent Appeal No. 20 of 1934
January 14, 1935.
MONROE AND CURRIE, JJ.

ACHHRU RAM—ASSIGNEE—DECREE-HOLDER—APPELLANT

versus

FAZAL MOHAMMAD - JUDGMENT-DEBTOR AND ANOTHER—ASSIGNOR—RESPONDENTS

Decree—Assignment of—Validity of assignment at issue—Judgment-debtor having no interest in it—Judgment-debtor, whether bound by it—Execution—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47, O. XXI, r. 16.

Where the issue on the validity of the assignment of a decree decided by the executing Court was an issue solely between the decree-holder and his assignee:

Held, that the decree-holder was bound by the decision and he could not appeal against it.

[Case-law referred to.]

Achhru Ram v. Fazal Mohammad, 154 Ind. Cas. 730, reversed.

L. P. A. from the judgment of Mr. Justice Hilton, dated January 3, 1934, in Civil Appeal No. 531 of 1933 reported as 154 Ind. Cas. 730, affirming that of the District Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated December 21, 1932, who reversed that of the Subordinate Judge, Fourth Class, Hoshiarpur, dated June 23, 1932.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Appellant.

Dr. Shuja-ud-Din, for the Respondents.

Monroe, J.—On April 14, 1925, Umar Din, defendant No. 1, obtained a simple money decree against Fazal Mohammad defendant No. 2, which he sold to the appellant who applied for its execution. Fazal Mohammad objected that the decree had not been assigned in writing in accordance with the provisions of O. XXI, r. 16, and an issue on this point was decided by the Executing Court in favour of Umar Din, Umar Din having appeared and supported the assignment. The document produced by the appellant bore a stamp of one anna only and at the hearing the appellant was required to stamp it as an assignment; the view of the learned trial Judge was that the document was an assignment of the decree. The judgment-debtor appealed to the District Judge who held that there was no written assignment, the document being only a receipt and that the decree could not be executed. On second appeal to this Court, Mr. Justice Hilton, affirmed the decision of the District Judge, but gave leave to appeal under the Letters Patent. Two points were argued before us, the first, whether the document was a receipt or an assignment, the second whether any appeal lay from the judgment of the Executing Court. In my opinion, the reference in the document to an oral sale is decisive of the first question and the document did not operate to transfer the decree: it recorded that a transfer had taken place orally, in order to show why money had been paid and received: it was not, therefore, an assignment in writing.

The second question turns on the interpretation of s. 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which provides in sub-s. (1) that all questions arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed or their representatives and relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, shall be determined by the Court executing the decree, and not by a separate suit, and further in sub-s. (3) that where a question arises whether any person is or is not a representative of a party, such question shall for the purposes of this section be determined by the Court. It is contended that no appeal lay in the present case at the instance of the judgment-debtor; the dispute must, so far as sub-s. (1) is concerned, be between the original decree-holder and the judgment-debtor or between the assignee of the decree and the judgment-debtor and must relate to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. The question now at issue is one under sub-s. (3). Such questions arise between a decree-holder and a person claiming to be assignee or between rival assignees. In the resulting decision, the judgment-debtor has no interest. He is entitled by the decision to get a discharge from the person entitled to the decree: but which of two rival claimants is so entitled does not seem to me to concern the judgment-debtor at all.

This view is supported by the fact that by an alteration in the rule applicable O. XXI, r. 16 (made after the date of the application in this case) the words requiring notice to the judgment-debtor of an application under the rule have been deleted. As the rule now stands, the judgment-debtor does not even get any notice of the application, so that he may have an opportunity of objecting to the transfer: the alteration shows that the rule-making authority took the view that the judgment-debtor was not entitled to raise objections to the validity of the transfer. Counsel for the respondent in urging that an appeal lay to the District Judge and that the judgment in his favour should be upheld has relied on several cases. In Badri Narain v. Jai Kishen Das (1) the transferee of a decree applied for execution and it was held that the execution of the decree was barred: an appeal to a single Judge of the High Court was dismissed by him on the ground that there was no order, by which the transferee had been recognised and against this decision a further appeal under the Letters Patent was taken, and it was decided that the dismissal of the application for execution as barred by limitation was not justified by law or in fact. This decision has no application to the present case. In Krishnama Chariar v. Appasami Mudaliar (2), the dispute was between a trustee who had been plaintiff and obtained a decree in a suit and his successors-in-office as trustee, who applied for execution as transferees: execution was allowed and ex-trustee appealed. The case is entirely different from the present case. In Krishnan Chetty v. Avudayammal, 98 Ind. Cas. 433 (3), a Madras case, Krishnama Chariar v. Appasami Mudaliar (2) was followed without discussion. In Harditta v. Nigahiamal, 79 Ind. Cas 546 (4), a decision of this Court in second appeal, the order under appeal was one dismissing an application for execution; it was held that such an order affected the rights of the decree-holder against the judgment-debtor and was within s. 47 and appealable: the dispute again was between the decree-holder and a transferee and is not in point. In Mohini Mohan Mozumdar v. Surendra Chandra Dev, 32 Ind. Cas. 524 (5), the contest was between the purchaser of a decree who sought execution and a judgment-creditor of the decree-holder who had attached the decree: the appeal was by the assignee of the decree-holder to whom the right to execute had been refused. In Ganga Das Seel v. Yakub Ali Dobeshi (6), the appeal about which the question arose was again at the instance of an assignee to whom execution had been refused.

It will be observed that in none of the cases cited has it been held that an appeal lies at the suit of the judgment-debtor when the issue is one of the validity of an assignment. The only case, which at all bears on the point at issue cited by the learned Counsel for the assignee, was Krishnaswami Naidu v. Karuppan Chettiar, 109 Ind. Cas. 563 (7), in which it was held

(1) 16 A 483; A W N 1894, 184.

(2) 25 M 545; 12 M L J 280.
(3) 98 Ind. Cas. 783; 24 L W 600.
(4) 79 Ind. Cas. 546; 4 Lah. L J 259; A I R 1922 Lah. 396.
(5) 32 Ind. Cas. 524.
(6) 27 C 670.
(7) 109 Ind. Cas. 563; 27 L W 538; A I R 1928 Mad. 478; 54 M L J 663; 51 M 681.

(inter alia) that a decree could be validly assigned without writing and that where there had been an irregularity connected with a latter transfer in writing, which was executed for the purpose of completing the transaction, there was no reason why the judgment-debtor should be allowed to raise an objection. The present case is not governed by the last mentioned authority, the facts in which differ materially: and the value of the decision for the present purposes rests on the point that the learned Judges expressed the opinion that when the validity of an assignment was at issue, the judgment-debtor was not necessarily an interested party. In the present case, the issue on the validity of the assignment decided by the learned trial Judge was an issue solely between the decree-holder and his assignee. It was the duty of the Judge to see that the rules had been observed and being satisfied that they had been to give effect to the transfer: the decree-holder was bound by the decision and the judgment-debtor was entitled to get on payment a good discharge from his liability under the decree.

In my opinion, the learned District Judge ought to have refused to entertain the appeal of the judgment-debtor on the ground that he had no interest in the issue decided, and I would set aside his judgment and that of Mr. Justice Hilton* and restore that of the trial Judge and give the appellant his costs in all the Courts.

Currie, J.– I agree.

D.

*See Achhru Ram v. Fazal Mohammad, 154 Ind. Cas. 730; A I R 1934 Lah. 328 (2).—[Ed.]

PATNA HIGH COURT

Civil Revision Petition No. 479 of 1934

February 12, 1935

COURTNEY-TERRELL, C. J. AND DHAVLE, J.

Raja Bahadur HARIHAR PRASAD NARAIN SINGH—PLAINTIFF AND DECREE-HOLDER—PETITIONER

versus

Maharaj Kumar GOPAL SARAN NARAIN SINGH AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115, O. XXI, r. 2, O. XXIII, r. 3, O. XXXIV, rr. 4, 5—High Court's power of interference—Limits of—"Decree of any kind" in O. XXI, r. 2—Meaning of—Mortgage suit—Compromise—Preliminary decree—Application for making final decree—Proceedings, whether proceedings in suit or execution—Maxim—Expressio unius est exclusio alterius—Applicability of.

Per Courtney-Terrell, C. J.—The High Court will not interfere in revision with a decision on the merits even if the lower Court should err both in law and in fact, provided always that such subordinate Court had jurisdiction to entertain the dispute between the parties. But if the Court had no jurisdiction whatever to entertain the matter, the High Court must listen to the contention and if it finds that the lower Court has made a mistake as to the extent of its jurisdiction, it may then interfere and this is particularly so when the lower Court, in determining the ambit of its own jurisdiction, construes a legislative enactment. Yad Ram v. Sundar Singh (1), commented upon? [p. 978, col. 2]

The words "of any kind" in para. (1) to O XXI, r. 2, Civil Procedure Code, were introduced in the Code of 1908 in order to get over conflicts between various High Courts on the question of whether or not the mere word "decree" as it orignally stood referred only to decrees for the payment of money. The words "decree" of any kind" mean a decree of any kind capable of execution. It does not include a preliminary decree? [p 980, col. 1]

Order XXXIV, Civil Procedure Code has no application to a compromise decree and the application to make a decree absolute is not a proceeding in execution and O. XXI, r. 3, does not prevent the Court from recognizing an uncertified payment or adjustment made out of Court? [p. 981, col. 1.]

[Case-law discussed.]

Per Dhavle, J.—An erroneous decision on a question of law or fact after jurisdiction has been once legally assumed would not be a ground for interference, but if the decision is the very basis and foundation of jurisdiction in its limited sense as distinguished from powers it at once comes within the purview of the s. 115, Civil Procedure Code and the petitioner should be heard as the objections on the ground of another remedy being open to him are not objections in limine? [p. 982, col. 2.]

[Case-law discussed.]

Proceedings for obtaining a final decree are proceedings in the suit and not proceedings in execution? [p 983, col. 1.]

There had been some conflict of judicial opinion before 1908 on the question whether proceedings for obtaining the order absolute for sale were proceedings in the suit or proceedings in execution, and the amendments of 1908 made it clear beyond dispute that they are proceedings in the suit itself. There is thus even less reason now than before for holding that O. XXI, r. 2 (3) bars the recognition of uncertified payments in proceedings for obtaining a final decree under O. XXXIV, r. 5? [p 984, col. 2.]

There is nothing in O. XXIII, r 3 to make it inapplicable to a suit after the preliminary decree and before the final decree Even if the contrary were to be held there is no doubt that in proceeding upon a preliminary decree which is based on a compromise and therefore does not come within O. XXXIV of the Code, the Court will have inherent jurisdiction to take into account payments and satisfaction after that decree before passing the final decree? [p 986, col 1.]

[Case-law discussed.]

The doctrine expressio unius est exclusio alterius does not affect cases in which the express provision appears, upon the true construction of the contract, to have been super-added for the benefit of the mortgagor and to have been inserted for the purpose of adding to, and not qualifying, the provision which the law implies for his benefit. Manga Sahu v. Bhattoo Singh (6), referred to. [p. 986, col. 2.]

Where the decree on the basis of which the petitioner moves the Court for passing a final decree for sale of the mortgaged property is based on a compromise, which expressly calls it a preliminary mortgage decree and provides that it is not to be made final until a specified date, such a decree does not come under O. XXXIV, r. 4, Civil Procedure Code, and therefore O. XXXIV, r. 5 does not apply to the case and the proceedings for obtaining the final decree in the matter are proceedings in the suit and not in execution.

C. R. P. from an order of the Subordinate Judge, First Court, Patna, dated July 24, 1934.

Messrs. P. R. Das, P. C. Manuk, A. T. Sen, G. N. Mukharji, S. N. Roy and L. K. Jha, for the Petitioner.

Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, Sir Sultan Ahmed, and Messrs. Syed Hasan, Syed Ali Khan, H. R. Kazimi, S. N. Bose, D. L. Nandkeolyar, and Shah Rasidullah, for the Opposite Party.

Courtney-Terrell, C. J.—The facts which have given rise to this petition in civil revision are, in so far as they are material to our decision, as follows:—

The Maharajadhiraj of Darbhanga (hereinafter called the Maharajadhiraj) was a creditor of Maharaj Kumar Gopal Saran Narayan Singh of Tikari (hereinafter called Tikari as that form was throughout used in the course of argument) for a sum of money amounting to 34 lakhs of rupees secured by a certain mortgage deed. He brought a mortgage suit No. 25 of 1921 against Tikari as defendant 1st party and a number of other persons whose names it is not necessary to mention as defendants 2nd party, Saiyida Khatun, the wife of Tikari (hereinafter called the Kumar Rani) as defendant No. 13 and others.

A compromise was executed on February 3, 1923. The terms of the compromise were that there should be a preliminary mortgage decree for 34 lakhs of rupees which Tikari might pay off by instalments. If at any time the arrears of instalments due should exceed five lakhs, the Maharajadhiraj might apply for a final decree for sale; but if the provided instalments were maintained, the Maharajadhiraj was not to make an application for a final decree until March 1935. The terms of the compromise contemplated that Tikari might sell the equity of redemption of the mortgage and apply the purchase-money to the payment of the mortgage debt.

On April 12, 1926, Tikari conveyed the equity of redemption in the Jehanabad Circle which was part of the mortgaged property, to the Kumar Rani, defendant No. 13 in the mortgage suit, and the Kumar Rani covenanted to pay 28 lakhs to the Maharajadhiraj so as to discharge the mortgage debt to that etxent. On March 29, 1930, Tikari conveyed the bulk of the estate to the Rani, the wife of the Raja of Amawan. The consideration for this conveyance was that the Rani should pay off certain debts of Tikari amounting in all to 10 lakhs and including 3 lakhs and 63 thousand odd, the balance of the mortgage debt to the Maharajadhiraj. She also covenanted to pay to Tikari an annuity.

As a result of these transactions, Tikari still remained under his liability to Darbhanga but the Kumar Rani and the Rani of Amawan had covenanted with Tikari to discharge his liability to the Maharajadhiraj.

On April 27, 1930, the Kumar Rani surrendered the Jehanabad Circle which had been conveyed to her by Tikari to the Rani of Amawan. It will be remembered that the Kumar Rani was a defendant in the mortgage suit, and the Rani covenanted to indemnify the Kumar Rani in respect of any liability under which the Kumar Rani might lie by reason of the mortgage decree.

In the year 1931, there were transactions between the Maharajadhiraj on the one side and the Raja of Amawan and the Rani of Amawan on the other. They were as follows:—

On June 15, 1931, the money still due to the Maharajadhiraj on the agreement of compromise was Rs. 33,84,936. The Maharajadhiraj assigned the benefit of his rights under the preliminary decree to the Raja of Amawan. As a term of the assignment Amawan paid Rs. 1,54,936 in cash and gave to the Maharajadhiraj a zurpeshgi thika lease of Amawan property for 17 years in order to satisfy the amount of the indebtedness under the compromise out of the profits of the estate during that period. At the same time and by the same deed the mortgage debt was reduced by Rs. 2,30,000.

On August 15, 1931, the Maharajadhiraj entered into an arrangement with the Rani by which he assigned the zurpeshgi thika lease granted to him by Amawan to the Rani and the Rani in exchange gave him a lease of her own property.

In November of 1933, the following steps were taken in the mortgage suit. On the 7th, Amawan applied to have the decree which had been assigned to him made final. On the 8th, that is to say simultaneously, Tikari applied for an order to record full satisfaction of the decree and on December 1, the Kumar Rani made a similar application.

The contention on behalf of Tikari and his wife was that as an assignee of the benefits of the preliminary decree, Amawan was really a mere farzidar for his wife, the Rani, and that by reason of the transactions between Tikari and the Kumar Rani with the Rani of Amawan she had undertaken with them to satisfy the mortgage decree and that she had in fact done so by paying through her husband Amawan the sum of Rs. 1,54,936 and by giving him a thika zurpeshgi of her own properties and that the thika lease which Amawan had granted to the Maharajadhiraj in part satisfaction of the decree subsequently exchanged by the Maharajadhiraj for a thika lease of the Rani of Amawan's properties was a mere subterfuge to cover the substantial transaction which was in fact the lease by the Rani of her own properties in satisfaction of the said preliminary decree, and that the reduction in the amount of the mortgage debt was for the benefit of the Rani. They contend that Amawan merely obtained an assignment of a decree which had already been satisfied, so that nothing remained to be assigned. The Raja of Amawan, on the other hand, contended that the applications by Tikari and his wife to record satisfaction of the preliminary decree were out of time and barred by limitation, and he urged by petition that before the Court should enter into questions of fact, the question of limitation and the question of the maintainability of the applications by Tikari and his wife should be decided as a preliminary point. The Subordinate Judge accordingly heard arguments on these matters. He decided that the applications were not barred by limitation and were maintainable under O. XXIII r. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code, and also decided that at a convenient time he would investigate the allegations of fact. From this decision the Raja of Amawan comes to this Court.

It is conceded on his behalf that if the Subordinate Judge was at liberty under O. XXIII r. 3 to entertain the applications, the allegations of fact by the opposite party must be investigated. But it is contended (a) that the applications cannot be entertained under that Order and (b) that the applications could only be entertained under O. XXI, r. 2, and in that case they are barred by limitation. It is further suggested that in the exercise of our discretion we should interfere to prevent the investigation of fact which it is said will involve an immense inquiry and the evidence of over a thousand witnesses, and that considerations of general convenience should induce us to place the opposite party in the position that they must appeal to the highest tribunal on the property of our decision before such an inquiry should be allowed to proceed.

It is contended on behalf of the opposite party (a) that the Subordinate Judge has decided upon the extent of his jurisdiction by examination of the Orders of the Civil Procedure Code and that, whether his decision upon the extent of that jurisdiction be right or wrong, this Court has no jurisdiction to interfere by way of revision; this is urged as a preliminary point; (b) that the decision of the Subordinate Judge was right upon the merits, that the applications are entertainable by him under O. XXIII, r. 3, that in any case they are not governed by O. XXI, r. 2; and (c) that even if they are governed by XXI, r. 2, the Subordinate Judge is not precluded from hearing them, the prohibition contained in clause (3) of that rule applies only to a Court acting in execution, the applications are not in execution proceedings and are not barred by limitation.

We were given the benefit of a lengthy argument in support of the contention of the opposite party that we had no jurisdiction under s. 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure to entertain the petition of the Raja of Amawan; but in my opinion this must fail. It amounts to a contention that a Subordinate Court is the sole and final Judge of the ambit of its own jurisdiction. It is certainly true that the High Court will not interfere in revision with a decision on the merits even if the lower Court should err both in law and in fact provided always that such subordinate Court had jurisdiction to entertain the dispute between the parties. But if it be contended, as in this case, that the Court had no jurisdiction whatever to entertain the matter, this Court must listen to the contention and if it should find that the lower Court has made a mistake as to the extent of its jurisdiction, it may then interfere and this is particularly so when the lower Court, in determining the ambit of its own jurisdiction, construes a legislative enactment.

We were referred to two cases as showing that the Courts of Allahabad and of Patna have taken differing views upon this matter. An examination of the cases, however, does not, to my mind, disclose any such difference, although it may be the case, as Sir Tej Bahadur has informed us, that in practice applications in revision are less easily pressed in Allahabad than in this Court.

The case of Yad Ram v. Sundar Singh (1), came before a Full Bench and a question arose as to the construction of O. XXI, r. 89 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The Allahabad Court took a view of the construction which differed from that adopted by this Court and by the Court of Madras. It is true that Banerji, J., who presided, seemed to be of opinion that the Subordinate Judge had adopted a certain construction (which in fact was in accordance with prior decisions of the Allahabad High Court) and said that whether or not that decision was right, it could not be interfered with in revision. Piggott, J. however, held that the Subordinate Judge, having taken a view which was in accordance with reported decision of the High Court to which he was subordinate, could not be said to have acted illegally or with material irregularity whether or not the view of the High Court which was followed was right or not. Walsh, J. was of opinion that the earlier decisions of the High Court with regard to the construction of the rule were erroneous and he agreed with the construction adopted by thePatna and Madras Courts. I am of opinion that Banerji, J. went too far in his expression of opinion. Had he confined himself to the view expressed by Piggott, J., I would respectfully have agreed with the decision in so far as it relates to the exercise of power in revision, notwithstanding that I would support the view of the Patna and Madras Courts on the construction of the particular enactment then under discussion. The case is of little, if any, assistance. Save in so far as the expression of opinion by Banerji, J. is concerned, the decision of the Court does not conflict with the opinion expressed by Mullick, J. in Dhanwanti Kuer v. Sheo Shankar Lall (2).

"An erroneous decision on a question of law or fact, after jurisdiction has once been legally assumed, would not be a ground for interference under s. 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure, but if the decision is the very basis and foundation of jurisdiction in its limited sense as distinguished from powers, it at once comes within the purview of the section. The judgment of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Balkrishna Udayar v. Basudeva Ayer (3), is, in my opinion, authority for this view."

Indeed learned Counsel for the opposite party was constrained to admit that if a particular jurisdiction originates in some special law or enactment, the High Court can always interfere in the sense that it can construe the law and in accordance with that construction compel the lower Court to exercise such jurisdiction or to refrain from exercising the jurisdiction if not warranted by the law or enactment in question.

In this case it is contended on behalf of the petitioner that the Subordinate Judge did not possess the jurisdiction which he purported to exercise, and although it is admitted that if the jurisdiction was properly exercised, this Court could not interfere in revision with the decision arrived at, whether right or wrong.

I, therefore, now approach the merits of that contention. The argument of the petitioner may be put thus. It is contended that on the allegation of the opposite party the satisfaction of the Maharajadhiraja's decree could not be entertained in the preparation of the final decree because it had not been recorded as provided by O. XXI, r. 2. Further that considered as an application to record satisfaction of the decree it was out of time under Art. 174 of the Limitation Act. Mr. Das on behalf of the petitioner conceded that if the proceedings were not governed by O. XXI, then O. XXIII, r. 3 would apply as the Subordinate Judge has held and that his petition for revision must fail.

The real merits of this petition are, therefore, reduced to a very simple point which I am of opinion presents no difficulty. Notwithstanding the authority in what is known as Piran Bibi's case [Piran Bibi v. Jitendra Mohan Mukherjee] (4) to which I will refer later, it will be noted that O. XXI deals with "execution of decrees and orders." Rule 2 of O. XXI, is as follows:—

"2. (1) Whether any money payable under a decree of any kind is paid out of Court or the decree is otherwise adjusted in whole or in part to the satisfaction of the decree-holder, the decree-holder shall certify such payment or adjustment to the Court

(1) 74 Ind. Cas. 778; 45 A 425; 21 A L J 313; A I R 1923 All. 392.

(2) 51 Ind. Cas. 873; 4 P L J 340; (1921) Pat. 364.

(3) 40 Ind. Cas. 650; 22 C W N 50; 15 A L J 645; 2 P L W 101; 33 M L J 69; 26 C L J 143; 19 Bom. L R 715; (1917) M W N 628; 40 M 793; 6 L W 501; 11 Bur. L T 48; 44 I A 261 (P C).

(4) 40 Ind. Cas 845; 25 C L J 553; 21 C W N 920.

whose duty it is to execute the decree and the Court shall record the same accordingly.

(2) The judgment-debtor also may inform the Court of such payment or adjustment and apply to the Court to issue a notice to the decree-holder to show cause, on a day to be fixed by the Court, why such payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified; and if, after service of such notice, the decree-holder fails to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified, the Court shall record the same accordingly.

(3) A payment or adjustment which has not been certified or recorded as aforesaid, shall not be recognized by any Court executing the decree."

The words "of any kind" in paragraph (1) were introduced in the amendment Code of 1908 in order to get over conflicts between various High Courts on the question of whether or not the mere word 'decree' as it originally stood referred only to decrees for the payment of money.

It has been argued that the word 'decree' having reference to the definition in s. 2 of the Code includes 'preliminary decrees'. In my opinion, this view is not sound. The Code, in O. XXI, is dealing with execution and the words "decree of any kind" mean, in my opinion, in this connection a decree of any kind capable of execution. This view is supported by the qualifying words "the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree". There can hardly be a duty to execute a decree which is not executable. Furthermore throughout the Order the persons in the earlier stages of the proceedings referred to as plaintiff and defendant (see e. g., O. XXXIV, rr. 4 and 5 and Form 6, Appendix D) are at this stage referred to as decree-holder and judgment-debtor, respectively. It has long been held that proceedings to obtain a final decree are not proceedings in execution. But lastly sub-r. (3) forbids recognition of unrecorded payments by "any Court executing the decree". It is important to notice the history of this sub-rule the Codes of 1859 (s. 206) and 1877 (s. 258) provide that a payment or adjustment made out of Court should not be recognized by any Court "executing the decree" unless it had been certified to that Court. In 1879, the Code of 1877 was amended and the words "executing the decree" were deleted and this was followed in the Code of 1882. The result was that differences arose between the various High Courts upon the question whether a suit would lie to enforce an uncertified agreement of adjustment of a decree against a judgment-debtor.

It was held in Bombay in Haji Abdul Rahiman v. Khaja Khaki Aruth (5), that such a suit would not lie which was a manifest injustice. The judgment of the Chief Justice in that case shows that but for the amendment by which the words were deleted he would have held that the prohibition extended only to the Court acting in execution.

Accordingly in the year 1888 the section was again altered by the restoration of the words "executing the decree" and this re-amendment was followed in the present Code. The prohibition, therefore, extends only to the Court which executes the decree.

We were referred to the case of Piran Bibi v. Jitendra Mohan Mukherjee (4). In that case having obtained a preliminary mortgage decree, the plaintiffs obtained ex parte a subsequent absolute decree, no payment having been made. The defendants then got the decree absolute set aside for non-service of notice and the case was restored. The defendants objected that the plaintiffs had amicably received the decretal amount and had granted a receipt and said that the decree absolute could not be passed. The Court held that as the payment had not been certified under the provisions of O. XXI, r. 2, it could not be recognized. The satisfaction relied upon by the defendants in their objection was that the payment relied on had been made more than three years previously. The learned Judge (Fletcher, J.) said—

'It is said that any Court not being an Executing Court can recognize an uncertified payment made out of Court. I am not prepared to agree with that. It seems to me that the whole of the provisions of the law providing a certification either by the decree-holder or by the judgment-debtor within the period within which the certification is to be made would be rendered nugatory if a defendant in a suit, years after, when the evidence would neither be afresh nor perhaps available, is allowed to come forward and say that he has satisfied this preliminary decree out of Court three years ago by paying the money to the plaintiff. It seems to me that it will be opposed both to the terms of the Civil Procedure Code and also to the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act".

This was a case under O. XXXIV, r. 5, and not as in the case before us of a compromise decree. In any case I venture to disagree with the decision on this point and I am unable to follow it.

An attempt was made on behalf of the petitioner to argue that once a preliminary decree has been obtained, the rights of the parties are finally decided and by reason of O. XXXIV, rr. 4 and 5, the preparation of the final decree is a purely ministerial act which follows automatically and should be considered as a stage of execution. I am unable to agree with this contention and it has no force whatever in the case of a compromise which itself sets forth that a decree absolute is to be made as a preliminary to execution.

(5) 11 B. 6.

Both contentions were dealt with by this Court in Manga Sahu v. Bhattoo Singh (6), in which it was held that O. XXXIV, had no application to a compromise decree. Further the application to make a decree absolute is not a proceeding in execution and O. XXI, r. 3, does not prevent the Court from recognizing an uncertified payment or adjustment made out of Court. It was argued that Jwala Prasad, J. in that case had approved of the decision in Piran Bibi's case (4). I am unable to agree. Such expression of approval as appears on page 677* of the report was of a limited character and did not apply to the proposition in support of which the case was relied upon. The learned Judge said—

"Clause (3) of r. 2, O. XXI, restricts the application of the rule only to the Court executing the decree. Hence payments made out of Court in respect of a mortgage decree can be recognized in a proceeding instituted by the decree-holders for obtaining an order absolute or a final mortgage decree. This is but just and equitable. The decree-holder is not entitled to a final decree for a higher sum than what is actually due to him at the date of making that decree. This necessarily involves an investigation into allegations of payments out of Court on account of the decree".

The agreements between the parties in this case made it clear that the preliminary decree on the compromise should not be executed until a final decree had been obtained. It is true that the agreement provides for payment in various ways but it nowhere specifies that the parties are not at liberty to effect an arrangement by which the decree is to be satisfied in some other manner.

As I have already said, it was conceded by Mr. Das that, if O. XXI, r. 2, has no application, the application is within the jurisdiction of the Subordinate Judge under O. XXIII, r. 3, and in my opinion he was right in making that concession. The word "suit" in that rule is not used in any narrow sense but having regard to the division of the subject-matter in the various Orders and rules the word "suit", if applied to the proceedings from the beginning of the plaint up to the time when an executable decree has been obtained, this sharp division of the proceedings at a point of time is, with different conditions as to proving satisfaction applying to the parties on either side of the dividing line, not only shown by the arrangement of the Code itself but is in accordance with good sense and practical convenience. An executable decree can be sold and passed to other people after a successful plaintiff has left the scene, and it is not unreasonable that the provisions for recording proof of satisfaction should be more severe in the case of a decree than in that stage of the case where the parties are still before the Court.

But there is another aspect of this matter which is, to my mind, most important. The jurisdiction in revision is limited to cases in which there is no appeal or other suitable regular remedy. If the entire case is dealt with by the Subordinate Judge and a decision arrived at after investigating the facts, either party will have an unlimited right of appeal. Moreover, it is the case of the petitioner that a great number of witnesses will have to be called if the question of fact is to be decided. We were informed that the petitioner proposes to call over a thousand of such witnesses. Whether this is his genuine intention, and if so, whether he will be allowed to do so are matters which do not arise at present; but in any case it is surely better that such evidence shall be heard while it is still available. If we were to accede to the petition, the opposite party would be obliged either to submit to execution of the mortgage decree against them or to appeal to His Majesty in Council. In the latter case if our view should be held to be erroneous, the inquiry will have to be conducted some years hence when the many witnesses said to be necessary will either have died or have forgotten the matters in controversy. Considerations of convenience are in any case in favour of holding the inquiry at an early date.

I would, therefore, dismiss this petition with costs. One set of costs only will be paid to opposite parties Nos. 1 and 8 and we fix the hearing fee at a hundred and twenty gold mohurs.

Dhavle, J.—I agree that this application in revision should be dismissed with costs.

A preliminary objection was taken on behalf of the opposite party that as the lower Court is obviously the only Court to which applications relating to the mortgage suit can be made and as, further, the lower Court must have power to deal with the applications made on behalf of the opposite party under O. XXI, r. 2, if not

(6) 57 Ind. Cas. 473; 5 P L J 672; 1 P L T 416.

*Page of 5 P. L. J.—[Ed.]

(as the lower Court has held) under O. XXIII, r. 3, there was no question of jurisdiction involved so as to enable this Court to entertain the present application under s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. But the learned Subordinate Judge has held that he has jurisdiction under O. XXIII, r. 3, to deal with the applications made to him, and this position is still contested by the petitioner in revision. Nor was it conceded below, as has since been done here, that failing O. XXIII, r. 3, the applications would come within O. XXI, r. 2. Assuming, moreover, that the jurisdiction of the lower Court is referable to O. XXI, r. 2, the adjustment and full satisfaction alleged by the opposite party is dated more than 90 days before their applications to the lower Court, and the petitioner before us is prima facie entitled to raise the question whether the lower Court had jurisdiction in the circumstances to entertain those applications. The mere fact that the Subordinate Judge has decided that he has jurisdiction under O. XXIII, r. 3 to do so cannot prevent us from examining the jurisdiction, though there can be no interference in revision with conclusions of law or fact, whether right or wrong, in which the question of jurisdiction is not involved. The meaning of the word 'jurisdiction' in s. 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure, has been the subject of much judicial discussion. Questions of jurisdiction do not arise merely on "propriety of forum", as Rankin, J. put it in C. D. M. Hindley v. Joynarain Marwari (7), for (as the learned Judge further observed in the same case):

"Jurisdiction to try a suit does not mean jurisdiction to do anything whatever by order made in the suit: if it did, an exception for material errors in procedure (strictly so called) will be almost ludicrous."

In Brij Mohan Thakur v. Rai Uma Nath Chowdhury (8), an order passed by a Court of unquestioned jurisdiction to execute a decree was set aside by the High Court under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, and in upholding this decision their Lordships of the Judicial Committee said that the Subordinate Judge had

"declined to exercise a jurisdiction which he had (viz., jurisdiction to confirm the execution sale under s. 312), and exercised one which did not belong to him (viz., jurisdiction to set the sale aside at the instance of the auction-purchaser in circumstances not covered by s. 313), and consequently his judgment was liable to be reviewed by the High Court under the 622nd section of the Code of Civil Procedure"

In Balakrishna Udayar v. Basudeva Aiyar (3), their Lordships of the Judicial Committee upheld the view of the Madras High Court that the District Court had no jurisdiction to pass certain orders under s. 10 of the Religious Endowments Act, 1863; and this was in a case in which there was no question at all about "propriety of forum." This plainly supports the view taken in Dhanwanti Kuer v. Sheo Shankar Lal (2), and followed in Madras, that:

"The Court's decision upon the point whether the applicant has the necessary legal character (to file an application under O. XXI, r. (89) is clearly a question involving jurisdiction. An erroneous decision on a question of law or fact after jurisdiction has been once legally assumed would not be a ground for interference, but if the decision is the very basis and foundation of jurisdiction in its limited sense as distinguished from powers, it at once comes within the purview of the section."

The view of Banerji, J. in the Full Bench case of Yad Ram v. Sundar Singh (1), that in similar circumstances the lower Court had jurisdiction, rightly or wrongly, to decide the question whether a party was entitled to apply under O. XXI, r. 89, and that, therefore, it was not open to the High Court to interfere with it in revision, was not shared by Piggott and Walsh, JJ., who with Banerji, J. decided that case. I am, therefore, unable to see any sufficient reason in that Full Bench decision to doubt the correctness of the view taken in this Court. The preliminary objection must, therefore, be overruled.

It was also urged on behalf of the opposite party that revisional interference is discretionary and is not as a rule exercised where the petitioner has another remedy open to him (such as a regular appeal from the final decree that may be passed in the case), unless irreparable injury is threatened. But these considerations cannot be urged as objections in limine, and prima facie the enquiry that the lower Court has decided to make at the instance of the opposite party would be an intolerable waste of time and money (unless of course it is made with jurisdiction), since they propose, so we are informed, to call no less than 150 witnesses in support of their allegations of farzi and fraud, to say nothing of the fact that the number proposed by the petitioner exceeds 1000.

It is thus plainly necessary that the petitioner should be heard on the question of jurisdiction.

It was contended on behalf of the petitioner that the only provisions under which adjustments of suits and decrees can be dealt with by the Courts are to be found in O. XXIII, r. 3 and O. XXI, r. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that the former of these provisions does not apply to the case, and that the lower Court would have had no authority to deal with the matter under O. XXI, r. 2 either, by reason of the failure of the opposite party to apply within 90 days of the alleged adjustment.

(7) 54 Ind. Cas. 439; 46 C 962; 24 C W N 288.
(8) 20C 8.

Before dealing with these contentions and the cases cited in support, it is desirable to observe that the decree on the basis of which the petitioner moved the lower Court to pass a final decree for sale of the mortgaged property is based on a compromise, which expressly calls it a preliminary mortgage decree and provides that it is not to be made final until a specified date over 12 years later, unless interest (to be paid annually on January 31), and compound interest be in arrear to the extent of 5 lacs or more, in which case the mortgagee is to be entitled to get a final decree for the entire amount of principal, interest and compound interest and to realize it by the sale of the mortgage properties. Payment was to be in sums of not less than Rs. 10,000, at a time. The compromise also gives the mortgagor liberty to sell or grant a permanent mukarrari of any of the mortgaged properties and pay the entire sale proceeds to the decree-holder, subject to certain restrictions as regards the price, and to the further restrictions that in such cases the mortgagee is to have the first refusal. It also provides that all payments of interest or principal will be made by deposit in the Imperial Bank, Patna Branch, or in such other Bank as may be agreed upon by both parties in writing, to the credit of the plaintiff.

The law is clear and there is also no dispute that such a decree does not come under O. XXXIV, r. 4, and that accordingly O. XXXIV, r. 5, is not applicable to the case.

It is also settled law that proceedings for obtaining a final decree are proceedings in the suit and not proceedings in execution.

It has accordingly been held in some cases (such as Durga Dev v. Nand Lal, 136 Ind. Cas. 732 (9), that the provisions of O. XXI, r. 2, have no application to payments and adjustments between the preliminary and the final decrees in mortgage suits, the stage reached in the present case. This is contested on behalf of the petitioner on the wording of the rule. The opening words are: "Where any money payable under a decree of any kind is paid out of Court," and the petitioner points out that money may well be paid in accordance with a preliminary decree, and urges that money so paid is "money payable under a decree."

The rule goes on to provide for certification to "the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree," and it is contended on these words that the Court referred to need not be a Court which is actually engaged in executing the decree, for the expression merely indicates the forum (as given in s. 38) without requiring that the stage of execution should have reached. It seems to me that the contention is not without force. It is true that O. XXI deals with the Execution of Decrees and Orders, but the first two rules are headed "Payment under decree," and the next seven "Courts executing Decrees," before we come to a group of 16 rules under the heading "Application for Execution". The first rule provides three different modes of paying money payable under a decree, and one of these modes is payment "Out of Court to the decree-holder", which may obviously be done by the judgment-debtor before the decree-holder takes out execution and incurs costs only to charge them to the judgment-debtor himself. If such payments are made by the judgment-debtor and certified by the decree-holder under r. 1 or recorded as certified at the instance of the judgment-debtor under r. 2, this would effectively stop execution. It is true that even after a preliminary decree under O. XXXIV, r. 4, the parties are referred to in the next rule as plaintiff and defendant, while O. XXIII, r. 2, speaks of decree-holder and judgment-debtor, but the definitions of these terms in s. 2 of the Code do not restrict them to executable decrees. It may therefore be conceded that the payments dealt with in O. XXI, rr. 1 and 2 need not be due under an executable decree, and that money may be "payable" within the meaning of these rules, even under preliminary decrees in cases where the final decree alone makes execution possible. The petitioner's contention that the expression "the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree" merely indicates the Court to which certification is to be made and does not imply executable decrees is supported by Sambasiva Aiyar v. Thirumalai Ramanujathathachariar 54 Ind. Cas. 137 (10). On the words of O. XXI r. 2, (1) and (2) it may thus well be that the mortgagor is entitled to apply under cl. (2) and get his payments recorded. In the present case it is now too late to make any such application, to say nothing of the fact that the opposite party do not claim to have brought about the adjustment and full statisfaction alleged by any dealings of theirs with the mortgagee. But does it follow that the rule prevents the opposite party from urging the adjustment as a bar to the passing of the final decree? Clause 3 definitely provides that a payment or adjustment, which has not been certified or recorded as provided in the first two clauses shall not be recognized by "any Court executing the decree", an expression definitely implying actual execution. The lower Court which has been asked to pass the final decree is, however, not "a Court executing the decree" and on the wording of the clause it is difficult to see how it can be read as standing in the way of the opposite party when they seek to show that no final decree ought to be passed because the mortgagee has been paid off in fact and his transferee, the petitioner before us, has taken nothing by the assignment of the claim under the preliminary decree. It has, however, been urged that the contrary has been held in several cases, beginning with Piran Bibi v. Jotindra Mohan Mukerjee (4). That was a case in which the mortgagors set up against the passing of the final decree a plea that they had paid the amount awarded by the preliminary decree out of Court to the plaintiffs more than three years previously. The trial Court accepted the plea, but the Court of first appeal held that the payment could not be recognized because it had not been certified under O. XXI, r. 2. This was upheld in second appeal on the ground (as I read the decision) that O. XXXIV, r. 5, which applied to the case, leaves the Court no discretion except to follow the statutory form of the decree when no payment has been made into Court as mentioned in the rule. Fletcher, J., who gave the judgment of the Court, went on to observe that:

(9) 136 Ind. Cas. 732; 33 P L R 138; A I R 1932 Lah. 231; Ind. Rul. (1932) Lah. 268.

(10) 54 Ind. Cas. 137; 37 M L J 356.

"the only other matter that there can be is that the Court may hold that the suit has been adjusted under O. XXI, r. 2" and as to this he declined to accept the mortgagor's contention that it is only by the executing Court that an uncertified payment made out of Court can be recognized. The reason was that the learned Judge regarded the contention as opposed both to the terms of the Civil Procedure Code and also to the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act. It may perhaps be doubted whether he really intended to hold that O. XXI, r. 2 had any application in such cases, or whether he did not merely mean that if the appellants before him were to receive the benefit of payments made otherwise than in strict conformity with the terms of O. XXXIV, r. 5, they could only be permitted to do so by proving compliance with O. XXI, r. 2 as a whole. He refers to reasons given in a judgment of his own in another case, but these are not available to us. The learned Judge makes no reference to the previous decisions of the Calcutta High Court in which it was held even under the law as it stood before the amendments of the Civil Procedure Code and the Transfer of Property Act in 1908 that proceedings for obtaining an order absolute for sale were not proceedings in execution, and that payments in accordance with a decree under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act (often called the decree nisi), though not certified under s. 258 of the Code of Civil Procedure, could be taken into consideration in such proceedings—see the cases referred to in Hatem Ali Khundkar v. Abdul Gafur Khan (11) and also Hiranmoy Biswas v. Musa Khan (12) though in this latter case the point actually decided arose after the order absolute. There had been some conflict of judicial opinion before 1908 on the question whether proceedings for obtaining the order absolute for sale were proceedings in the suit or proceedings in execution, and the amendments of 1908 made it clear beyond dispute that they are proceedings in the suit itself. There is thus even less reason now than before for holding that O. XXI, r. 2 (3) bars the recognition of uncertified payments in proceedings for obtaining a final decree under O. XXXIV, r. 5. This was pointed out in Mangar Sahu v. Bhatoo Singh (6), a case which actually related to a preliminary mortgage decree based on consent allowing instalments and thus not coming under O. XXXIV, r. 5. The point arose rather more directly in Ramji Lal v. Karan Singh (13), where it was held that limitation for applying for a final decree in pursuance of a preliminary mortgage decree awarding instalments runs not under Art. 182 but under Art. 181 of the Limitation Act "from the time when default was made" in the payment of the instalments fixed. This necessarily implies the recognition of instalments previously paid even if they should not be certified under O. XXI, r. 2 (3). The references to Piran Bibi's case (4)

(11) 8 C W N 103.
(12) 7 Ind Cas. 625; 16 C L J 169
(13) 40 Ind. Cas. 424; 39 A 532; 15 A L J 448.

in Singa Raja v. Pethu Raja (14) and Rasan Chettiar v. Rangaya Chettiar, 120 Ind. Cas. 72 (15) support the view that I am inclined to take of that decision; and in any event it is not in point in the present case where we are dealing with a preliminary decree not coming within O. XXXIV, r. 4. Another case cited before us is Ahmad Rahman v. A. L. A. R. Chettiar Firm (16), where the preliminary decree was based on consent. That, however, was a case not of any payments under or satisfaction of the preliminary decree, such as we have in the case before us, but of an agreement to extend the time given by the preliminary decree, which (as the learned Judges pointed out) could not be regarded as an adjustment of the suit within the meaning of O. XXIII, r. 3. It seems to me that even if O. XXXIV, r. 5 had applied to the case before us, O. XXI, r. 2 (3) would have had no application, and that as laid down in Mangar Sahu's case (6) the adjustment and satisfaction alleged by the opposite party must be taken into account before passing the final decree, notwithstanding any expressions in the first two clauses of O. XXI, r. 2, which may not unreasonably be regarded as applicable to such a case. That the preliminary decree does not require payment into Court does not affect the inapplicability of cl. 3 of O. XXI, r. 2 to the present proceedings for a final decree.

An attempt was made in the concluding stages of the arguments to show that the satisfaction of the preliminary decree was a matter for the executing Court only in view of the terms of s. 47 (1) of the Code of Civil Procedure. But once it is conceded that proceedings for obtaining a final decree are not proceedings in execution, the provision referred to becomes irrelevant at the present stage, for it speaks of the Court executing the decree and thus can only be invoked after a decree capable of execution has been passed.

The petitioner's contention that O. XXIII, r. 3 has no application is based on the fact that this provision deals with the compromise (or satisfaction) of a suit, in accordance with which the Court is required to pass a decree. It is urged that in the present case a decree has already been passed and that adjustment or satisfaction of the decree will not constitute a compromise of the suit. But the preliminary decree did not ever purport to end the suit, and though it is possible to imagine adjustments of such a decree which are not adjustments of the suit (such as the agreement for extension of time in the Rangoon case of Ahmed Rahman v. A. L. A. R. Chettiar Firm (16), already referred to), it does not by any means follow that such payments and satisfaction as we have to deal with in the present case do not go to end the suit itself. The decree before us expressly contemplates a final decree for the complete disposal of the suit, and in that respect differs from such decrees as those in Abir Paramanik v. Jahar Mahmud Mandal (17), Hemendra Lal Singh v. Fakir Chandra Datta (18) and Askari Hasan v. Jahanjira Mal (19) which required no final decrees and could be put into execution without any further application in the suit itself. It is not pretended that in the present suit, execution can be taken out for realizing the debt from the mortgaged property before obtaining a final decree; and this shows pretty clearly that the suit was not really terminated by the preliminary decree. It is only the final decree that will completely dispose of the suit, and there is nothing in the language of O. XXIII, r. 3, against a compromise or other satisfaction on which to base a final decree. The amount, if any, be outstanding, for which the final decree is to be passed will obviously depend not merely on the sum fixed by the preliminary decree together with interest and compound interest, but also on such sums (or satisfaction in other ways) as the mortgagee may have received from the mortgagor or other persons liable to pay the mortgage money. Rule 4 in O. XXIII, provides that nothing in the Order shall apply to any proceedings in execution of a decree or order; and it seems to me that this, taken with the heading of O. XXI, "Execution of Decrees and Orders", indicates clearly enough up to what stage O. XXIII, r. 3, will extend in suits in which a preliminary decree has to be followed by a final decree. Even where there is but one decree in a suit, it has been held with reference to O. XXIII, r. 3, that the term 'suit' has not been used in the Code of Civil Procedure in its narrow sense as being terminated by the decree of the (14) 48 Ind. Cas. 196; 42 M 61; (1918) M W N 809; 35 M L J 579; 8 L W 497; 24 M L T 501.

(15) 120 Ind. Cas. 72; 30 L W 551; Ind Rul. (1929) Mad 1032; (1929) M W N 867; A I R 1930 Mad. 105.

(16) 110 Ind. Cas. 873; 6 R 285; A I R 1928 Rang. 194.

(17) 34 C 886.

(18) 74 Ind. Cas. 929; 50 C 650; 27 C W N 621; A I R 1923 Cal 626.

(19) 100 Ind. Cas. 59; 49 A 297; 25 A L J 107; A I R 1927 All. 167.

first Court, and that it will include so late a proceeding as a proceeding for setting aside a sale in execution—Jagadish Missir v. Sureshwar Missir (20), because it is not itself a proceeding in execution. Order XXIII, r. 3, empowers the Court, where the defendant satisfies the plaintiff in respect of the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the suit, to order such satisfaction to be recorded, and to pass a decree in accordance therewith. The final decree to be passed in favour of a mortgagee is merely a consequence of the mortgagor's failure to pay the amount fixed by the preliminary decree; and it is plain that to the extent to which the mortgagee has been paid, he cannot have a final decree. It thus seems clear that there is nothing in O. XXIII, r. 3, to make it inapplicable to a suit after the preliminary decree and before the final decree. Even if the contrary were to be held, I entertain no doubt that in proceeding upon a preliminary decree which is based on a compromise and therefore does not come within O. XXXIV of the Code, the Court will have inherent jurisdiction to take payments and satisfaction after that decree into account before passing the final decree. As a matter of fact, there is a decision of this Court—Jogendra Prasad Narain Singh v. Gouri Shankar Prasad Sahu (21) in which it was held that though O. XXXIV, r. 5, contemplates that all payments upon a preliminary decree should be made into Court, there is nothing in the rule to justify the view that O. XXIII, r. 3, does not apply to adjustments of accounts made between the date of the preliminary decree and the date on which the accounts between the parties are finally settled. The procedure in O. XXXIV, is not exhaustive, and though rr. 4 and 5 involve the deliberate omission of payments out of Court, O. XXIII is not inapplicable to mortgage-suits and r. 3 of this Order is imperative in terms. A different view seems to have been taken in such cases as Singa Raja v. Pethu Raja (14), Rasan Chettiar v. Rangaya Chettiar, 120 Ind. Cas. 72 (15) and Durga Devi v. Nand Lal 136 Ind. Cas. 732 (9) besides Piran Bibi's case (4) already dealt with but the point does not directly arise in this case as the decree here does not fall under O. XXXIV, r. 4. There is, moreover, express authority in Manga Sahu v. Bhatoo Singh (6) which was followed in Sital Singh v. Baijnath Prasad (22) for holding that there is no bar to the judgment-debtors setting up and proving the payments and adjustment or satisfaction alleged by the opposite party. An attempt has been made to distinguish these cases on the ground that the amendments of 1929 in O. XXXIV make it unnecessary before passing a final decree to determine the amount actually outstanding under the preliminary decree. It is, however, difficult to see any substantial difference between the defendant 'paying into Court the amount declared due.....', as r. 5 before the amendment put it, and 'making payment into Court of all amounts due from him.....' as the rule now has it. It has also been urged that the final decree must be determined by the preliminary decree and that, therefore, no payments or adjustment ought to be taken into account unless they are in accordance with the preliminary decree. The compromise upon which one preliminary decree is based specifies certain modes of payment and adjustment, and it was urged that this excludes other modes—Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. But this doctrine does not affect cases in which the express provision appears, upon the true construction of the contract, to have been super-added for the benefit of the mortgagor and to have been inserted for the purpose of adding to, and not qualifying, the provision which the law implies for his benefit: see Broom's Legal Maxims, page 426 and Mangar Sahu's case (6). The compromise, moreover, permits such other modes of payment (than by deposit in the Imperial Bank) as may be agreed upon by the parties in writing, and it is thus open to the opposite party to establish payments coming within this provision, agreements being infeasible from acceptance. It also appears from the order of the lower Court that certain sums of money were deposited by the opposite party in Court (if not also in the Allahabad Branch of the Imperial Bank) and withdrawn by the mortgagee; these must obviously be considered before a final decree can be passed. The adjustment and full satisfaction alleged by the opposite party is not, on the face of it, excluded by the compromise, and even if we were to accede to the contention on behalf of the petitioner that accounts are only required to be taken after the passing of the final decree, that does not absolve the Court from the duty of investigating the allegation of the opposite party that the entire claim of the mortgagee having been paid off, his assignee, the petitioner before us, has taken nothing under the assignment and there is nothing outstanding for which a final decree can be passed.

(20) 62 Ind. Cas. 608; 6 P L J 253; 2 P L T 273.

(21) 40 Ind. Cas. 138; 2 P L J 533.

(22) 75 Ind. Cas. 485; 44 A 668; 20 A L J 602; A I R 1922 All. 383.

It has been urged on behalf of the Rani of Amawan that O. XXIII, r. 3, cannot be taken to contemplate arrangements in satisfaction raising questions of title between third parties and that the opposite party could not be heard under the rule to say that the Maharajadhiraj has been paid off, when the party that now appears in the record as plaintiff is the Raja of Amawan. But these so-called questions of title (farzi and fraud) between third parties can be limited to parties entitled to be on the record and actually found on the record, the Rani of Amawan at her own instance as a defendant and the Raja of Amawan on his own application as transferee from the Maharajadhiraj. It is true that it is not the case of the opposite party that the plaintiff on record has been paid off; but that does not prevent them from being heard to say that he is not entitled to obtain a final decree because there was nothing outstanding from the mortgagee's claim for assignment to the petitioner.

The order of the lower Court is, therefore, not without jurisdiction, and there is no reason why the opposite party should be exposed to the risk of loss of valuable evidence which might arise if we were to stop the investigation.

D. Petition dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 215 of 1932

August 22, 1934

NASIM ALI, J.

KRISHNA CHANDRA DAS—

DEFENDANT – APPELLANT

versus

PURNA CHANDRA DAS AND OTHERS—

RESPONDENTS

Co-sharer—Adverse possession—Entry by co-sharer into possession of share of other co-sharer, not as co-tenant but in denial of such right—Possession, if enures for benefit of other co-sharer—Possession of tenant-in common, if adverse to that of his co-tenant—Principle, if applies to person not recognised as co-tenant—Sole possession by one tenant-in-common continuously for a long period—Ouster—Presumption.

Where a co-sharer enters into possession of the share of the other co-sharer not in his right as a co-tenant but in denial of such right of the co-tenant, it cannot be said that his possession would enure for the benefit of the other co-sharers whom he has excluded from the enjoyment of the property. It is true that the principle of possession between the co-owners is that every co-owner is a tenant-in-common and that the possession of a tenant-in-common is not adverse to that of his co-tenants, but a person cannot be a tenant-in-common with a person whom he never recognized as a co-tenant. Biswa Nath v. Rahija Khatun (1) and Bhavrao v. Rakhmin (2), relied on.

Sole possession by one tenant-in-common continuously for a long period without any claim or demand by any person claiming under the other tenant-in-common is evidence from which an actual ouster of the other tenant-in-common may be presumed. Chandbhai Mahomadbhai Vohra v. Hasanbhai Rahimtolla (4), referred to.

C. A. from the appellate decree of the Sub-Judge, Murshidabad, dated June 4, 1931.

Messrs. Satindra Nath Mukherjee, Jnan Chandra Roy and Hara Krishna Pramanik, for the Appellant.

Mr. Gopendra Nath Das, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal arises out of a suit for joint possession of certain lands after declaration of title. The plaintiffs' case, as stated in the plaint is as follows: The disputed lands comprising a Bastu and a small tank formerely belonged to the two brothers Kailash Nath Adhikari and Bhairab Nath Adhikari in equal shares. Kailash used to possess exclusively the northern half portion of the Bastu land, the southern half portion of the western bank of the tank and the five palm trees on the western bank and another one on the south-western corner. Bhairab used to possess the southern half of Bastu land. the northern half of the western bank of the tank and six palm trees to the south of the tank. The tank was in joint possession of both the brothers. Kailash made a gift of his moiety in favour of defendant No. 2 and his brother Ananda Gopal Das by a deed of gift, dated 9th Saraban 1289 B. S. Ananda left home about 25 years ago relinquishing his interest in favour of defendant No. 2. Defendant No. 2 left the village Singedda in which the disputed lands are situated for Mandunia after the death of his mother entrusting the care of his properties to the sons of Bhairab and was in Ijmali possession by enjoying the usufruct of his share of the property. On 3rd Ashar 1331 B. S. defendant No. 2 sold away his eight annas interest in the disputed lands to plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 and the husband of plaintiff No. 3 by a registered Kobala. Defendant No. 1 claimed to have purchased the entire 16 annas interest of the suit lands and dispossessed the plaintiffs. There was a proceeding under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code, in which defendant No. 1 succeeded. On these allegations the plaintiffs brought the present suit for declaration of their title to and for recovery of joint possession of the eight annas share of the disputed lands with defendant No. 1.

The defence of defendant No. 1 is that the disputed lands originally belonged to Kailash and Bhairab in equal shares, that Kailash died without any issue and after his death Bhairab became entitled to this eight annas share by right of inheritance from Kailash and after his death his sons possessed the entire 16 annas share of the suit lands and that defendant No. 1 subsequently purchased the entire 16 annas interest of the said lands from the sons of Bhairab by registered Kobalas, the last of which was executed on 23rd Kartic 1322 B. S. The defence further was that the title of the plaintiffs' vendor and of the plaintiff, if any, was extinguished by adverse possession of Bhairab and his successors-in-interest for more than 12 years. The trial Court on a consideration of the evidence in the case came to the following findings:

(1) That defendant No. 1 was in exclusive possession of the suit lands for about 18 years; (2) that defendant No. 1 planted various trees on the eastern bank of the tank and converted it into a garden: (3) that defendant No. 1 re-excavated the tank: (4) that neither the plaintiffs nor their vendor had ever any possession in any part of the suit lands within 12 years from the date of the institution of the suit: (5) that the title of the plaintiffs' vendor, if any, was extinguished by adverse possession of Bhairab's sons and of defendant No. 1; (6) that neither the plaintiff nor their vendor were ever recognized as co-sharers by defendant No. 1 or Bhairab's sons; (7) that Bhairab's sons or defendant No. 1 did not know even that the plaintiffs' vendor was a co-sharer. On these findings the learned Munsiff dismissed the plaintiffs' suit holding that the title of the plaintiffs' vendor and of the plaintiffs was extinguished by adverse possession. On appeal by the plaintiffs the learned Subordinate Judge has not reversed the above findings of fact arrived at by the trial Court. He has, however, dismissed the plaintiff's claim so far as the Bastu portion of the plaint land is concerned. As regards the remaining portion of the disputed land, the lower Appellate Court has decreed the plaintiffs' claim. Hence the present appeal by defendant No. 1.

The only point urged in support of the appeal is that on the findings of fact arrived at by the trial Court which have not been reversed by the lower Appellate Court, the lower Appellate Court should have dismissed the plaintiffs' claim in toto. As has been already stated the learned Subordinate Judge who heard the appeal has dismissed the plaintiffs' claim so far as the Bastu portion of the disputed land is concerned, on the ground that the plaintiffs' title to that portion of the disputed land was extinguished by adverse possession. As regards the remaining portion of the disputed land, the learned Judge was of opinion that the plaintiffs' vendor being a co-sharer was in constructive possession through the other co-sharers, namely, defendant No. 1 and his vendors. Now as regards the plaintiffs' claim with regard to the western and southern bank and all the trees on those banks, it is very difficult to understand how the learned Judge could distinguish this part of the plaintiffs claim from the claim as regards the Bastu portion of the disputed land. The plaintiffs' specific case in the plaint was that so far as these banks and all the palm trees are concerned, the plaintiffs' vendor was in exclusive possession and not in joint possession with defendant No. 1 or his vendors. The learned Judge no doubt has observed that this exclusive possession as stated in para. 2 of the plaint with regard to these banks and the palm trees on those banks has not been proved. But the plaintiffs having failed to prove the specific case they made in the plaint, they cannot fall back upon theory of constructive possession. So far as the tank is concerned, the plaintiffs' case was that their vendor was in joint possession with defendant No. 1 and his vendors. But in my opinion the facts which have been found in the present case go to show that there had been ouster of the plaintiff and his vendor more than 12 years ago and that the plaintiffs' title was extinguished by adverse possession for more than 12 years long before the institution of the suit.

It appears that after the death of Kailash, Bhairab entered into possession of the eight annas share of Kailash in his own right as an heir of Kailash. Bhairab never recognized the plaintiff's vendor or the plaintiff as his co-sharers. In fact he asserted his own right to the remaining eight annas share of the property by inheritance to the exclusion of the persons claiming under gift from Kailash. Bhairab's sons after the death of Bhairab never recognized the title of the plaintiffs' vendor, as their co-sharer. In fact, as the learned Judge has pointed out for the last 30 years the plaintiffs' vendor was never in possession of any portion of the suit land or of any share thereof. The learned Subordinate Judge appears to have relied on a decision of this Court in Biswa Nath v. Rabija Khatun (1), for the view which he has taken in this matter. In that case Mukerji, J., observed as follows:

"As a general proposition the entry of one co-tenant in the absence of clear proof to the contrary, enures for the benefit of all. The law makes a presumption that the relation between co-tenants is amicable rather than hostile and regards acts of one co-tenant as being in subordination of the title of all the co-tenants, for by so regarding they may be made to promote the interest of all. This rule prevails not merely on behalf of those who are co-tenants when the entry was made, but, extends to all who afterwards acquire undivided interests in the property."

The learned Judge referring to the case of Bhavrao v. Rakhmin (2), also observed as follows:

"The case of Bhavrao v. Rakhmin (?), has also little bearing upon this question as it was a case where certain members of a joint Hindu family alienated by sale and mortgage specified plot of land, 'out of their share' giving boundaries of the plots and convenanting for title, and what was really decided was that the purchaser entered as owner and not as a co-sharer and being in such possession for over 12 years was able to defeat under Art. 144 the title of the co-parceners of the vendors or mortgagors."

From these observations it is clear that where a co-sharer enters into possession of the share of the other co-sharer not in his right as a co-tenant but in denial of such right of the co-tenant, it cannot be said that his possession would enure for the benefit of the other co-sharers whom he has excluded from the enjoyment of the property. It is true that the principal of possession between the co-owners is that every co-owner is a tenant-in-common and that the possession of a tenant-in-common is not adverse to that of his co-tenants, but a person cannot be a tenant-in-common with a person whom he never recognized as a co-tenant. So far as Bhairab is concerned, it is clear that when he entered into possession of Kailash's share he repudiated the title of the donees from Kailash as he entered into possession of that share by right of inheritance by setting up his own right of inheritance from Kailash. It does not appear also whether Kailash was even aware of this deed of gift in favour of these donees. It was not disputed before me that in the absence of such a gift Bhairab would be the heir of Kailash. It does not appear also that these donees ever possessed any portion of the disputed land at any time on the basis of the deed of gift or that they asserted their right on the basis of the gift. In these circumstances it cannot be said that Bhairab or his heirs were in possession of Kailash's share as co-sharers, because they never recognized the plaintiffs' vendor as a co-sharer. The sons of Bhairab had no knowledge even of the existence of these donees: see the case of Mahendra Nath Biswas v. Charu Chandra Bose (3). In this case another peculiar fact is that defendant No. 1 purchased the 16 annas share of the property from the heirs of Bhairab more than 12 years ago. He is in possession of the entire property on the basis of his purchase for more than the statutory period. He is not the transferee of an undivided share. Bhairab's sons transferred the 16 annas share in the property setting up their exclusive possession to the property more than 12 years ago. Defendant No. 1 cannot, therefore, be said to have entered into the possession of the 16 annas share of the property as a co-sharer but in his own right as 16 annas owner of the property by purchase from the heirs of Bhairab who had already set up an exclusive title to this property.

Again

"sole possession by one tenant-in-common continuously for a long period without any claim or demand by any person claiming under the other tenant-in common is evidence from which an actual ouster of the other tenant-in-common may be presumed: see the case of Chandbhai Mahomadbhai Vohra v. Hasanbhai Rahimtolla (4)."

Under these circumstances I am of opinion that the learned Munsif was justified from the facts found by him and which have not been reversed by the lower Appellate Court, in coming to the conclusion that the title of the plaintiffs or of his vendor was extinguished by adverse possession. The result, therefore, is that this appeal is allowed and the judgment and decree of the lower Appellate Court are set aside and those of the trial Court restored with costs throughout.

D. Appeal allowed.

(1) 117 Ind. Cas. 593; A I R 1929 Cal. 250; 56 C 616; 33 C W N 46.
(2) 23 B 137.
(3) 107 Ind. Cas. 741; A I R 1928 Cal. 396.
(4) 64 Ind. Cas. 205; A I R 1922 Bom. 150; 46 B 213; 23 Bom. L R 1035.

RANGOON HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 113 of 1934
August 27, 1934
MYA BU, OFFG. C. J. AND BAGULEY, J.
MA E THA AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS
versus
MA THEIN KIN—RESPONDENT

Administration—Letters of administration, to whom granted—Burmese Buddhist Law—Desertion of wife for three years without communication—Divorce, if automatic—Burmese Buddhist wife living—Husband embracing Christianity—Divorce, if automatic—Subsequent marriage with another, if valid.

Letters of administration are to be granted to a person who, according to the law of inheritance is entitled to the whole or part of the property of the deceased.

According to Burmese Buddhist Law the desertion of the wife by the husband for three years during which the latter does not communicate with the wife or send means of subsistence to her would automatically bring about a divorce between the husband and wife after the expiration of that period.

Where a Burmese Buddhist husband changes his religion into Christianity, there is no automatic divorce with his wife with whom he had married as a Burmese Buddhist, so that his subsequent marriage with another woman is invalid.

F. A. against an order of the District Court, Amherst, in C. S. No. 11-A of 1934.

Mr. Eunoose, for the Appellants.

Mr. P. B. Sen, for the Respondent.

Mya Bu, Offg. C. J.—The order under appeal as it stands cannot be supported. By this order the Additional District Judge of Amherst granted the application of the respondent, Ma Thein Kin, for letters of administration to the estate of the late U Aung Dun, who died on November 15, 1933. U Aung Dun was a Burman retired Police Officer who, until March 4, 1923, was a Buddhist. On March 4, 1923, he became a convert to Christianity. Before his conversion he had a grown-up family by his Burmese Buddhist wife, Ma E. Tha. At the time of his conversion he had seven children by Ma E Tha, the youngest of whom was 19 years of age at the time of U Aung Dun's death.

The basis of the respondent's claim to letters of administration, as stated in her application, is that she is the widow of U Aung Dun, to whom she was married according to Christian rites in November 1930, she herself being a Christian. The application was opposed by the appellants, Ma E Tha and her children on the ground that they were the only heirs of U Aung Dun, deceased. It was alleged by the respondent that U Aung Dun and Ma E Tha had been divorced, but on the evidence and materials on the record this allegation is very clearly controverted.

The question therefore arose, namely, whether U Aung Dun and Ma E Tha had been divorced and whether the alleged marriage between B Aung Dun and the respondent was valid or not. The learned trial Judge refused to decide these questions, and being of the opinion that prima facie the respondent was the widow of U Aung Dun, proceeded to grant letters of administration to her. It is common ground that this refusal to decide the questions arising in the case is erroneous, because letters of administration are to be granted to a person who, according to the law of inheritance, is entitled to the whole or part of the property of the deceased and in considering whether the respondent was in law entitled to the whole or part of the deceased's property, it is necessary to consider whether there was a subsisting marriage between Ma E Tha and the respondent at the time of the alleged marriage of U Aung Dun and the respondent, because it cannot be disputed that according to Christian Law of marriage a marrige solomnised during the subsistence of a previous marriage cannot be valid.

A certain amount of evidence was led by both parties, and according to such evidence the only possible conclusion that can become to is that U Aung Dun left Ma E Tha in or about December 1929. At that time U Aung Dun had been a Christian for nearly six years, and consequently the Burmese Buddhist Law of divorce could not operate in his favour. According to Burmese Buddhist law the desertion of the wife by the husband for three years during which the latter would not communicate with the wife or send means of subsistance to her would automatically bring about a divorce between the husband and wife after the expiration of that period. In the present case this rule would not operate on account of the religion of U Aung Dun during the period in question. Besides, U Aung Dun's desertion had not lasted three years at the time of the alleged marriage between U Aung Dun and the respondent, and therefore in any event, there was no possibility of a divorce on account of desertion having taken place between U Aung Dun and Ma E Tha at the time of the alleged marriage of U Aung Dun and the respondent.

That the marriage tie between U Aung Dun and Ma E Tha had not been severed was clearly before the parties when they entered into union in November 1930, because U Aung Dun when he first went to seek solemnisation of the marriage, Saya Su, a Pastor of Moulmein, the gentleman very rightly pointed out to U Aung Dun that his proposed marriage with the respondent could not be lawfully solemnised, In spite of this advice, U Aung Dun and the respondent sought the good offices of U Po Sin, a Pastor at Kamawet, a good distance away from Moulmein, to whom U Aung Dun gave the formal notice in which he alleged nine years' separation from his Buddhist wife. Apart from the fact that this statement was not tantamount to an allegation of a divorce having taken place between U Aung Dun and this wife, the Pastor knew at the time that he solemnised the marriage that Saya Su had already refused to solemnise that marriage. In spite of this U Po Sin solemnised the marriage and issued a marriage certificate. Needless to say, U Po Sin's action was improper. He not only conducted the ceremony of marriage between two persons who could not be legally married on account of the impediment on one of them, but, also solemnised a marriage which, owing to the subsistence of a valid prior marriage, was obviously void. This action of U Po Sin was highly objectionable, if not criminal, and is certainly unworthy of member of the Christian clergy.

Upon the materials on the record it is therefore obvious that the marriage between U Aung Dun and the respondent was not valid and that Ma E Tha was U Aung Dun's widow at the time of his death. For these reasons the respondent must be held to be in law not a person entitled to either the whole or part of the property of U Aung Dun, and the grant of letters of administration to the respondent was erroneous and must be set aside.

It is pointed out by the respondent's learned Advocate that the wording of the application of the respondent leaves room for the possibility of there being a document left by U Aung Dun under which certain benefits were granted to her, and that if that document amounts to a will she should be granted letters of administration with the will annexed, upon a proper application being filed. Therefore the present judgment, it must be understood, does not deal with that aspect of the case, and if the respondent can hereafter prove the existence of a will in her favour, her rights to letters of administration with probate of the will annexed may be considered because such rights will not depend upon the validity of the marriage upon which she relies in the present proceedings. This appeal is allowed and the respondent's application for letters of administration is dismissed with costs, Advocate's fee in this Court three gold mohurs.

Baguley, J.—I agree. I might, however, add a quotation from Maung Kyaik v. Ma Gyi (1), at p. 494*

"But it is manifest that a man cannot be suffered to put off his status as he puts off his clothes, and to get rid of the consequences of his actions while holding one status by merely professing his preference for another."

Aung Dun had a wife whom he had married as a Burman Buddhist. By changing his religion into Christianity there was no automatic divorce, and while he still had a lawful wife in that way, the fact that he professed the Christian religion prevented him from taking another wife.

D. Appeal allowed.

(1) (1897-1901) 2 U B R 488.

*Page of 2 U. B. R.—[Ed.]

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 465 of 1932

August 21, 1934

MUKERJI, AG. C. J. AND MITTER, J.

KRISHNA CHANDRA BHOUMICK—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—APPELLANT

versus

PABNA DHANABHANDAR Co., LTD.—DECREE-HOLDER—RESPONDENT

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 19—Set-off—Executing Court, if can entertain claim to set-off—Decree for costs of trial Court vacated by High Court—Dismissal of appeal to Privy Council—Execution of Privy Council decree for costs—Judgment-debtor, if can set-off costs realized by decree-holder in trial Court—Insolvency—Mutual dealings between creditor and insolvent—Account of what is due should be taken—Set-off—Mutual dealings, whether include claim for unliquidated damages.

An executing Court can entertain a claim to set-off and although a case does not come within the strict terms of O. XXI, r. 19, Civil Procedure Code, the Court can, in the exercise of its inherent power, give effect to such a claim.

Where the High Court vacates a decree for costs passed by the trial Court and the appeal to the Privy Council is dismissed with costs, the judgment-debtor is entitled, in execution of the decree for costs of the Privy Council, to set-off the costs realized before three years by the decree-holder in execution of the trial Court's decree.

Where there are mutual dealings between an insolvent and a creditor, an account has to be taken of what is due from the one to the other in respect of such mutual dealings and the balance of the account and no more is to be paid by the one to the other.

The term 'mutual dealing' has been given by the decisions a very extended meaning. It includes not only the case where a person owes a debt to the insolvent but also where there is a claim for un-liquidated damages. Damages for breach of covenant can be set off under the said provisions against a claim for rent.

C. A. from the original order of the Sub-Judge, Pabna, dated September 27, 1932.

Messrs. Atul Chandra Gupta, Dinesh Chandra Roy and Nagendra Nath Bose, for the Appellant.

Mr. Krishna Kamal Maitra, for the Respondents.

Mitter, J.—This appeal is on behalf of the judgment-debtor whose objection under s. 47, Civil Procedure Code, has been rejected by the learned Subordinate Judge of Pabna. The appellant purchased on June 26, 1924, at a revenue sale, a zamindary which belonged to the Pakrasis. The Pabna Dhanabhandar Co., Ltd., which had not then gone into liquidation, had, before the revenue sale, advanced money to the Pakrasis on a mortgage of the said zamindary. At the date of the revenue sale and at all material times the position of the respondent company was that of a mortgagee. The appellant paid the whole of the purchase money which remained in deposit in the Pabna Collectorate.

The respondent Company instituted on July 7, 1925, a suit to set aside the revenue sale. To the said suit the appellant was defendant No. 1 and the Pakrasis defendants Nos. 2 to 11. The learned Subordinate Judge decreed the suit with costs against the appellant, which costs was assessed at Rs. 989-11-0. The appellant before us preferred an appeal to this Court which was dismissed on May 23, 1928, subject to the modification that the decree for costs against the appellant was set aside. An appeal was taken to His Majesty in Council by the appellant but it was dismissed and the appellant was directed to pay to the respondent £247-16*s*.-3*d*. as costs. The net result was that the revenue sale was declared invalid, the decree for costs passed against the appellant by the Subordinate Judge was vacated and the appellant was directed to pay £247-16*s*.-3*d*. as cost incurred by the respondent in England in resisting the appeal to His Majesty in Council. Shortly after obtaining the decree from the Subordinate Judge the respondent Company applied for executing the decree for costs passed by the Subordinate Judge. The appellant moved this Court for stay. The material portion of the order passed on February 18, 1927, by this Court on the said application is in these terms:

"The opposite party will be entitled to execute this decree for costs as against the petitioner before us to be recovered out of the money now in deposit in the Collectorate, which the petitioner paid as purchase money for the sele of the property which has not been set aside, the money being now held to the credits of the petitioner."

The respondent company accordingly withdrew on July 12, 1927, from the said deposit a sum of money sufficient to cover their decree for costs, giving security for the due preformance of the decree that may be passed by this Court. The appellant also paid revenue and cess amounting to Rs. 543-5-6 that fell due from the date of his purchase at the revenue sale. The respondent Company has since gone into liquidation. The said Company represented by the Liquidator applied on May 30, 1932, for execution of the decree for costs awarded by His Majesty in Council. The appellant preferred objections under s. 47 of the Code and of the many objections he preferred, only one is now for consideration before us, namely whether he is entitled to claim a deduction of the sum of money recovered on account of the decree for costs awarded by the Subordinate Judge, which decree was ultimately reversed, and of the sum of money paid by him on account of revenue and cess with interest. The Subordinate Judge overruled this claim assigning two reasons for his decision. He held that the appellant ought to have filed an application for restoration as soon as the High Court set aside the decree for costs passed by the Subordinate Judge and his claim was barred by limitation. He further held that the fact that the respondent Company had gone into liquidation had introduced a complication and to allow the claim of the appellant would be to give him a preference.

The appellant has urged before us that both the grounds mentioned by the Subordinate Judge are erroneous. The Advocate for the respondent, besides supporting the reasons of the Subordinate Judge, has urged before us a further ground, namely that the claim of the appellant is in substance a claim to a set-off which, he says, an executing Court cannot entertain. We consider the last point urged by him to be of no substance. If an order for restoration had been passed the executing Court would have been bound to give the appellant credit for the sum of money recovered by the respondent in execution of the Subordinate Judge's decree under O. XXI, r. 18, of the Code. The Legislature has recognized the principle that an Executing Court can entertain a claim to set-off (O. XXI, r. 19), and although the case before us does not come within the strict terms of O. XXI, r. 19, we are of opinion that on general principles and in the exercise of its inherent power such a Court can give effect to such a claim. We do not also consider that the winding up of the respondent Company has any effect on the claim of the appellant and that if he is otherwise entitled to have credit for the moneys paid by or recovered from him, the fact that the Company has gone into liquidation would not stand in his way.

Long before the making of statutory provisions on the subject it was the practice in bankruptcy where there was debtor and creditor account between the bankrupt and another person to take the account between them and to adjust the balance, provided that the debts were connected with each other: see Young v. Bank of Bengal (1). The statutory provisions on the subject extended the same rule to cases where the debts were unconnected with each other. This statutory extension is that where there are mutual dealings between an insolvent and a creditor an account has to be taken of what is due from the one to other in respect of such mutual dealings and the balance of the account and no more is to be paid by the one to the other. These provisions are based on manifest justice otherwise the Receiver in insolvency would be able to recover the full amount due to the insolvent leaving the other person to take a pro rata dividend only. Section 46, Provincial Insolvency Act, and s. 47, Presidency Towns Insolvency Act deal with this matter in the way indicated above. In In re Daintry Ex parte Mant (2), it was argued that the trustee in bankruptcy could recover 20 shillings in the pound from Messrs. Mant and say that Messrs. Mant must be content with a dividend on the debt due to them from the bankrupt, but Lindley, M. R. repelled the contention as unarguable. The term 'mutual dealings' has been given by the decisions a very extended meaning. It includes not only the case where a person owes a debt to the insolvent but also where there is a claim for unliquidated damages. Damages for breach of covenant can be set-off under the said provisions against a claim for rent and in the law reports diverse other cases can be found: see Mersey Steel & Iron Co., Ltd. v. Naylor Benzon & Co. (3), Tilley v. Bowman, Ltd., (4), and Reference under Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (5). Section 229, Companies Act, makes these principles applicable to a Company in liquidation. The only exception to these rules is the case of a contributory. A share-holder of a Limited Company, who is also a creditor of the same in the event of the Company being wound-up, is not entitled to set-off the debt due to him against the calls, nor set-off against the calls a dividend which may come to him thereafter: In re Overrend Gurney & Co. Grissel's case (6). We are accordingly of opinion that the second ground assigned by the Subordinate Judge for overruling the claim of the appellant cannot be sustained.

The rejection of his claim on the ground of limitation cannot also, in our opinion, be sustained. The ownership of the money in deposit in the Collectorate, from which the respondent withdrew a sum of money to satisfy his decree for costs was not set at rest till the decision of the Judicial Committee. If the sale had been affirmed the surplus would have belonged not to the appellant but to the Pakrasis. If the decree setting aside the sale stood confirmed then and then only the said surplus would have belonged to the appellant and could have been regarded as his money. During the pendency of the appeals or before filing them the appellant could not have withdrawn the same without seriously imperilling his appeals. If after the decree of the High Court he had made the application to get the money back from the respondent, his position would not have been happier. We think that in the circumstances of this case the right to apply accrued to the appellant under Art. 181, Limitation Act, when the Judicial Committee disposed of his appeal. We accordingly hold that the appellant is entitled to set-off against the respondent's claim the sum of Rs. 989-11-0 which the respondent took out of the surplus sale proceeds.

The claim for the sum of money paid by the appellant on account of revenue and cess stands on a different footing. The respondent who was a mortgagee was not under a liability to pay the

(1) 1 M I A 87; 1 Sar. 97; 1 Moo. P C 150.
(2) (1900) 1 Q B 546; 69 L J Q B 207; 7 Manson 107; 82 L T 239.
(3) (1884) 9 A C 434 53 L J Q B 49; 32 W R 989; 51 L T 637.
(4) (1910) 1 K B 745; 79 L J K B 547; 54 S J 342; 17 Manson 97; 102 L T 318.
(5) 28 M 240.
(6) (1866) 1 Ch. A 528; 35 L J Ch. 752; 14 W R 1015; 14 L T 843.

same. The liability is an eventual liability of the Pakrasis. We accordingly modify the order passed by the Subordinate Judge and allow the appellant credit for the aforesaid sum of Rs. 989-11-0 only. The parties to bear their respective costs throughout.

Mukerjee, Ag. C. J.—I entirely agree.

N. Order modified.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Criminal Transfer Application No. 225 of 1934

December 12, 1934

RUPCHAND, A. J. C.

GHULAMALI—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 526—Two complaints—One against, and other by, accused—Parties same—Complaint of accused dismissed—Whether ground for transfer of complaint against him.

Interest or bias is not to be inferred from the opinions formed on evidence judicially recorded, and a Magistrate is not, therefore, disqualified to try the second case, merely because he has expressed his opinion on the first case tried by him. Crown v. Kamil (1), Crown v. Methram Dhanibux (2) and Walidad v. Nizam-ud-din (3), relied on.

Where two complaints were filed before the same Magistrate, one by the accused and the other against him, in both of which the parties were the same and the complaint filed by the accused was dismissed:

Held, that it was no ground for transfer of the case against him.

Mr. Chandiram Thanwerdas, for the Applicant.

Mr. C. M. Lobo, for the Crown.

Order.—The facts giving rise to this application for transfer are somewhat as follows; The applicant Ghulamali filed a complaint in the Court of the Resident Magistrate, Hala, stating that he was a carpenter by profession and belonged to an average respectable family, that the accused, Kaisrichand, who was a money lender, had a decree against the father of the applicant Ghulamali for Rs. 200 payable by instalments of Rs. 10 every month; that as Ghulamali wanted to purchase building materials at Karachi, he asked for a loan from Kaisrichand on a pledge of certain ornaments; that Kaisrichand requested Ghulamali to leave the ornaments with him (Kaisrichand) for a day to enable him to get them valued so as to enable him to advance the money asked for; and that on the following day when Ghulamali went for the money, Kaisrichand refused to advance the money and said that he had appropriated the ornaments towards the debt due by the father of Ghulamali. Ghulamali therefore asked that the accused be dealt with under ss. 406 and 420, Penal Code.

Two days later Kaisrichand filed a complaint against Ghulamali for theft alleging that he had sent for Ghulamali to repair a cup-board that during the temporary absence of Kaisrichand, Ghulamali had stolen some of the contents of the cup-board; and that when this was discovered, Ghulamali and his father had taken time to pay a sum of Rs. 500 which was less than the value of the stolen property; but in the meantime Ghulamali had filed a false complaint against him (Kaisrichand) under ss. 406 and 420, Penal Code. The case of Ghulamali against Kaisrichand was proceeded with first, and the learned Magistrate came to the conclusion that it was a false case. The case of Kaisrichand has not yet been proceeded with. But I am told that a preliminary inquiry had been held by the Police under the direction of the Magistrate and that case is now ripe for hearing. Ghulamali has applied for transfer of the case filed by Kaisrichand against him alleging that as the Magistrate has prejudged the present case in dealing with the case filed by him against Kaisrichand, he should not try it. Ground No. 3 of the grounds of transfer reads as follows:

"That the Resident Magistrate has mentioned the facts of this case in his discharge order in the case filed by the applicant and has expressed an opinion therein prejudicial to the applicant."

In Crown v. Kamil (1), a Bench of this Court has held that interest or bias is not to be inferred from the opinions formed on evidence judicially recorded, and a Magistrate is not therefore disqualified to try the second case, merely because he has expressed his opinion on the first case tried by him. That case was much stronger than the present, because, the two counter-complaints had arisen out of the same transaction, and the Magistrate in dealing with one of the counter-complaints had expressed a decided opinion not on the facts, but as to the credibility of certain witnesses. The above case was referred to with approval in Crown v. Methram Dhanibux (2), although in that case in consequence of certain other irregularities committed by the trying Magistrate, the order of transfer passed by the District Magistrate was not quashed. In Walidad v. Nizam-ud-din (3), a similar view has been taken and it has been held that the mere fact that the complaint of one party is dismissed and that he is apprehensive of a conviction is by itself no good ground for transfer.

(1) 1 S L R 37; 9 Cr. L J 275.
(2) 15 Ind. Cas. 804; 5 S L R 261; 13 Cr. L J 532.

Ghulamali has appeared in person. I have carefully gone through the record to see if there is any sufficient ground for apprehension in the mind of Ghulamali that he would not get justice at the hands of the learned Magistrate. But I can find none. The learned Magistrate has dismissed the complaint of Ghulamali on the merits, holding that his witnesses are false and all that he has said about the present complaint consists of one single line in which the learned Magistrate has said that Ghulamali's complaint is a counter-blast. But that does not mean that the learned Magistrate has prejudged the case of Kaisrichand or that he is not prepared to hold that Kaisrichand's own case is also false. I accordingly dismiss the application for transfer.

D. Application dismissed.

(3) 111 Ind. Cas 854; A I R 1929 Lah 48; 29 Cr. L J 934.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Civil Reference No. 29 of 1932

June 29, 1934

ADDISON AND SALE, JJ.

ASSESSMENT OF INCOME-TAX, L. N. GADODIA & CO., In the matter of

Income Tax Act (XI of 1922), s. 10—Assessee carrying on business in piece-goods—Dacoity—Loss of sum—Held no deduction could be allowed.

An assessee carried on business in piece-goods and for that purpose accepted deposits from various people and paid interest on those deposits, the money being used in the business. No money-lending business was carried on. A sum of Rs. 14,440 was lost in cash as a result of dacoity on the assessee's firm by an employee with the assistance of and in collusion with others. The assessee claimed deduction of this amount not under s. 10 (2), Income Tax Act, but under s. 10 (1):

Held, that the loss was a loss of capital and no allowance could be made for it. Gresham Life Assurance Society v. Styles (1), Ramaswami Chettiar v. Commissioner of Income Tax, Madras (2), referred to.

C. R. from the Commissioner of Income-tax, Punjab, North-West Frontier and Delhi.

Messrs. Kishan Dayal and Asa Ram Aggarwal for Mr. Jagan Nath Aggarwal, for the Commissioner of Income-tax.

Judgment.—On an application under s. 66 (2). Income Tax Act, a reference was made by the Commissioner of Income-tax to this Court on September 5, 1932, for a decision of the following question of law:

"Whether the sum of Rs. 14,440 lost in cash as a result of dacoity on the assessee's firm by an employee with the assistance of and in collusion with others, is a deduction which can be set off in computing the profits of the firm ?"

This case has a long history. The reference was sent back by this Court with a direction to state specifically the facts on which it was made that is to say, the Commissioner was directed to report whether the facts mentioned in para. 2 of the petition and the affidavit of the assessee were correct and in what respect. The following remarks also occur in the order of this Court:

"It appears that the Commissioner, the Assistant Commissioner and the Income-tax Officer have all proceeded on the assumption that the assessee carried on business of import and sale of piece-goods. The learned Commissioner did not deal with the objections of the assessee to the effect that he did money-lending and banking business as well, and the learned Counsel who has appeared for him before us is not prepared to make a statement as to the correctness or otherwise of the facts mentioned by the assessee in question No. 2 which he had asked the Commissioner to refer to this Court. In our opinion the facts stated in this question are vital for a correct answer to the reference and the Commissioner should have dealt with them in more detail."

The Commissioner of Income-tax has again reported the facts which are as follows: Since the year 1923-24 the assessee's sources of income chargeable to income-tax have never been noted to be more than import and sale of piece-goods, commission agency, interest on securities, dividends and property. There is no suggestion whatever on the record that the assessee was at any time engaged in money-lending business as well. When the assessment for the year 1931-32 was under consideration, the assessee claimed a deduction of Rs. 14,440 on account of loss of cash by a dacoity, the circumstances surrounding which were described by the assessee as follows:

"At 9 P. M. on July 6, 1930, certain persons along with Bishambar Dayal, an employee of the assessee, entered the office where the cashier and the munim were counting and totalling the realizations from the business of the day and were engaged in their daily routine work incidental to the business of the assessee. The intruders at the point of their pistols demanded money, currency notes, etc., with the cashier and they were compelled to do so 'From the facts given,' the account continues: 'It is clear that the assessee was deprived of his money as a result of political commotion and the crime was perpetrated by Bishambar Dayal in collusion with and with the assistance of other persons."

The petition of the assessee continues as follows: The above circumstances give rise to the following inferences:

"(a) That the assessee suffered this loss during his usual business hours in business premises. (b) That the employees were engaged in work incidental to the business of the assessee. (c) That the accident occurred on account of some negligence of the cashier and the munim and was done through the agency of Bishambar Dayal. (d) That the loss consisted of realizations of the day for the business transacted."

For these reasons, it was claimed that the loss suffered by the assessee was a loss incidental to the business and should be allowed for in computing the income-tax. In the opening lines of this petition, it was stated that the assessee was a firm carrying on business of piece-goods, banking, financing, etc., at Kucha Natwan., Delhi, and other places. On this the Income-tax Officer had noted: "No banking, financing pertains to assessee's own branches." Having considered this memorandum, the Income-tax Officer disallowed the claim, stating that it was not a case of embezzlement or of loss of stock-in-trade, but it was clearly a loss of capital. There was an appeal to the Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax on the following grounds: (1) That the learned Income-tax Officer should have computed the profits and gains of the assessee in accordance with reasonable business methods. (2) That he should have held that the loss of the sum of Rs. 14,440 was a loss of his stock-in-trade. (3) That he should have held that this loss accrued to the assessee through the agency of Bishamber Dayal and on account of neglect on the part of the munim and the cashier of the assessee. (4) That he was wrong in holding that the loss was a loss of capital.

There was no allegation that the assessee claimed the loss as a money-lender or banker. The Assistant Commissioner dismissed the appeal and said that the stock-in-trade of the assessee was not cash, but piece-goods and various other articles of Indian manufacture. This was a definite finding of fact which apparently was not disputed by the assessee when he put in his application under s. 66 (2), Income Tax Act, asking the Commissioner to state a case on the questions involved for a decision of this Court. The Commissioner has remarked that at no stage of the proceedings before the Income-tax Authorities did the assessee contend that the loss had occurred in connection with his business as money-lender or banker. The same findings were repeated by the Commissioner in the statement of the case to this Court and it was only when the Commissioner sent his draft statement of the case to the assessee that the latter put in an affidavit alleging that he carried on business in money-lending as well. The Commissioner refused to accept this affidavit as it was fresh evidence and had not been produced before the Income-tax Authorities. He informed the assessee to this effect and forwarded the reference to this Court as it stood. This Court, however, sent back the case for further findings as already indicated. These further findings were directed to be as regards the question whether he carried on the business of a money-lender or banker.

On receipt of the direction of this Court, the Commissioner caused further inquiry to be made by the Income-tax Officer who made a report which is Appendix C. This report is based on an examination of the assessee's account and is to the effect that the assessee does not carry on money-lending business and that cash does not form the assessee's stock-in-trade. It has also been found that owing to the prominent social position and prosperous financial condition of the assessee he is entrusted with a lot of money by people to whom the assessee pays interest, the money apparently being employed in the business.

On these facts, it is clear that the allegation of the assessee that he carried on money-lending and banking business is false. The learned Counsel appearing for the assessee admitted that none of the allowance in sub-s. 2, s. 10, Income Tax Act, covered the present case. He relied simply and solely on sub-s. 1, s. 10, which is to the effect that the tax should be payable by the assessee under the head "business" in respect of the profits and gains of any business carried on by him. He admits that had the assessee been carrying the money in his own pocket, he could not have claimed a deduction, but he stated that as it was stolen from the office, it was legitimate deduction for the purpose of calculting the net profit accruing to the firm, at p. 121 of the Konstam's Law of Income-tax, Edn. 5, occurs the following passage:

"There are also specific prohibitions against the deduction, in computing profits of any loss not connected with or arising out of the trade or profession; in order to be deducted the loss must be in the nature of a commercial loss, and, therefore, damages for personal injuries due to the neglience of the traders' servants, and penalties for breaches of the customs laws are not to be deducted, nor is a loss by defalcation or by excessive drawings on the part of a director; such payments are not necessarily incurred, nor do they form a necessary risk, in earning the profits."

It follows that this loss of Rs. 14,440 by armed dacoits cannot be deducted. It was not necessarily incurred nor did it form a necessary risk in earning the profits. It was not a loss in the nature of a commercial loss. In Gresham Life Assurance Society v. Styles, (1), Lord Halsbury said:

"The thing to be taxed is the amount of profits and gains. The word 'profits' I think is to be understood in its natural and proper sense, in a sense which no commercial man would misunderstand."

There is a decision of a Special Bench of the Madras High Court reported in Ramaswami Chettiar v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras, (2). Two of the Judges held that the loss incurred by theft of money due to a money-lending business and in the business premises should not be allowed for in computing the income-tax, where the theft was committed by persons who were not at the time of the offence employed as clerks or servants in the business of the assessee. The third Judge dissented. He apparently held that in a money-lending business cash might be looked upon as the stock-in-trade. At p. 910* of this report is given the following remark of Lord Herschell:

"The profit of a trade or business is the surplus by which the receipts from trade or business exceeded the expenditure necessary for the purpose of earning those receipts"

It cannot be said that this was expenditure necessary for the purpose of earning the receipts of the business carried on by the assessee. This is the case of an assessee who carries on business in piece-goods and for that purpose accepts deposits from various people and pays interest on those deposits, the money being used in the business. No money-lending business is carried on, so that, if there is any force in the contention that money would be the stock-in-trade of such a business, it does not arise in the present case. It is certainly not the stock-in-trade of the business described, nor was it expenditure necessary for carrying on the business or for the purpose of earning the receipts. The loss was clearly a loss of capital and no allowance can be made for it, while it was not claimed that it fell within any of the allowances given in s. 10 (2) of the Act.

For the reasons given, we would answer the question stated in the negative. The assessee will pay the costs of the Commissioner of Income-tax, Counsel's fee Rs. 100.

D. Reference answered.

(1) (1892) A C 309; 62 L J Q B 41; 56 J P 709; 41 W R 270; 67 L T 479.

(2) 127 Ind. Cas, 611; A I R 1930 Mad. 808; 53 M 901; (1930) M W N 759; 59 M L J 403; 32 L W 287; Ind. Rul. (1930) Mad. 995 (F B.)

* Page of 53 M —[Ed.]

RANGOON HIGH COURT

Special Second Civil Appeal No. 192 of 1934

September 6, 1934

DUNKLEY, J.

A. R. P. R. M. MEYAPPA CHETTYAR—APPELLANT

versus

L. V. VENKATACHELLAM CHETTYAR—RESPONDENT

Arbitration—Award—Parties acting on some terms—One of them who received benefit, whether can repudiate it—Part of award found invalid—Party acting on invalid part—Whether estopped from contending that it is invalid—Practice—Appellate Court deciding that decision of trial Court was wrong on legal issue—Suit should be remanded for trial on remaining issues—Decree should not differ from prayer in plaint—Pleadings.

Where both the parties have already acted on some of the terms of the award and one of them has already received some benefit under the award, he cannot be allowed to repudiate it afterward on the ground that the award is illegal.

If part of an award is found to be invalid as being in excess of the arbitrator's powers and is separable from the rest, the remainder of the award being good, can be maintained and acted upon, while the excessive part of the award can be declared to be unenforcible. But if a party has taken advantage of the invalid part of the award he is estopped from setting up that that clause of the award is illegal.

Where an Appellate Court decides that the decision of the trial Court is wrong on a legal issue, it should remand the case for trial on the remaining issue and it should not decide an issue of fact itself in the absence evidence on it.

It is wrong for a Judge to pass a decree which is entirely different from the prayer in the plaint. [p. 999, col. 1.]

S. S. C. A. against the decree of the District Court, Pyapon, dated June 6, 1934.

Mr. E. Hay, for the Appellant.

Mr. F. S. Doctor, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—The plaintiff-respondent, L. V. V. Chettyar, and the defendant-appellant, A. R. P. R. M. M. Chettyar, were concerned on opposite sides, either directly or indirectly, in several civil cases before the Courts of the Pyapon District. They decided to refer their disputes to the arbitration of three other Chettyars, and these Chettyars made an award. Admittedly some of the terms of this award have been acted upon by both parties. One of the terms was that a certain holding of paddy land, which had been attached by L. V. V. Chettyar in a suit in the Sub-Divisional Court of Kyaiklat and had been purchased at a Court auction by a person named Chinnaya, should be purchased outright by L. V. V. Chettyar from Chinnaya and then should be transferred by L. V. V. Chettyar to A. R. P. R. M. M. Chettyar, the latter paying to L. V. V. Chettyar a sum of Rs. 1,500, as consideration for the sale of this land, and it was laid down in the award that interest should be chargeable on this sum of Rs. 1,500 from the date of the award until it was paid. This term of the award was never carried into effect into by the appellant completing the purchase of this land from the respondent, and in consequence the respondent brought a suit in the Sub-Divisional Court of Kyaiklat. The suit was framed as a suit for money. The respondent averred that he had obtained a conveyance of this land from Chinnaya, that the appellant had actually received the rental paddy of the current year therefor, and that in consequence the appellant was due to pay him the sum of Rs. 1,500 plus the accrued interest.

It is clear that the suit as brought was not properly framed, and this matter was put in issue in para. 6 of the written statement of the appellant where it is stated: "The defendant submits that in any case the suit as framed does not lie." The suit was a suit for specfic performance of this clause of the award and was therefore a suit brought under Chap. II read with s. 30, Specific Relief Act. There should have been an averment in the plaint to the effect that the plaintiff-respondent was ready and willing to execute a conveyance of the land in suit in favour of the defendant-appellant on the latter paying to him the price as settled in the award of the arbitrators, and the prayer should have been a prayer for a decree ordering the appellant to pay the amount due on the respondent's executing a proper conveyance of the land in his favour. However the suit in the Sub-Divisional Court was dismissed on the ground that the award was void, and the learned Sub-Divisional Judge did not come to any finding on the issues of fact or on the issue regarding the maintainability of the suit. He held that, as this agreement to refer to arbitration was made in connection with pending litigation and was made without reference to the Court, the agreement to refer to arbitration was illegal under the provisions of Sch. II, Civil Procedure Code. The learned District Judge has however rightly held on appeal that as both the parties have already acted on some of the terms of the award and as the appellant has already received some benefit under the award, he cannot be allowed to repudiate it now on this ground, and this point has not been pressed before me on second appeal. It has, however, been urged before me that the clause of the arbitration award regarding the transfer of this holding of the land for a sum of Rs. 1,500 was outside the scope of the matters referred to the arbitrators for decision, that the arbitrators acted in excess of their authority in including this matter in their award, and that therefore in regard to his matter the award is unenforcible.

It has been urged that although the appellant may have acted upon other clauses of the award, yet it is still open to him to repudiate this particular clause which was in excess of the arbitrators' powers, and in regard to that matter the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Amir Begam v. Badruddin Husain (1), is cited. It is no doubt correct that if part of an award is found to be invalid as being in excess of the arbitrator's powers and is separable from the rest, the remainder of the award being good, can be maintained and acted upon, while the excessive part of the award can be declared to be unenforcible. On behalf of the respondent it is however urged that this clause of the award is not in excess of the powers of the arbitrators, that, moreover, even if it be so in excess, the appellant has taken advantage thereof by accepting the rent of the land for the past agricultural season, and that by so doing he is now estopped from setting up that this clause of the award is invalid. No doubt, if it can be established by evidence that the appellant has received the rent of this land, as is suggested, then he would be estopped from contesting the validity of this clause of the award but on behalf of the appellant it is urged with considerable force that no question of estoppel arose from the pleadings in consequence of the defective nature of the respondent's plaint, and that therefore he has not had an opportunity of meeting the respondent's case on this point.

(1) 23 Ind. Cas. 625; A I R 1914 P C 105; 38 A 336; 17 O C 120; 18 O W N 765; 1 O L J 249; 12 A L J 537; 17 Bom. L R 413; (1914) M W N 472; 16 M L T 35; 27 M L J 181; 19 C L J 494 (P C).

The original suit was dismissed by the learned Sub-Divisional Judge on the first issue, and in accordance with the ordinary practice, when the learned District Judge decided that the decision of the Sub-Divisional Court on this legal issue was wrong, he ought to have remanded the case to the Sub-Divisional Court for trial on the remaining issues, but instead of adopting this correct course, he came to the conclusion that as evidence in regard to the issues of fact had been recorded it was open to him to come to findings thereon, without remand, and he overcame the difficulty regarding the maintainability of the suit by granting a decree for the payment of a sum of Rs. 1,680-1-0 to the respondent conditioned on the respondent at the same time conveying the land in question to the appellant by registered deed. He was plainly wrong in deciding these issues of fact himself as the appellant had not yet led evidence thereon, and he was further wrong in passing a decree which was entirely different to the prayer in the plaint, and which could be made only in a suit properly constituted for that purpose. See Chutterput Singh v. Maharaj Bahadur (2). Learned Counsel for both parties in their argument before me have agreed that the plaint was wrongly framed, and that in the plaint a plea of estoppel ought to have been raised if the plaintiff-respondent relied thereon, and also the plaint ought to have contained an averment that the plaintiff-respondent is ready and willing to convey the land, and that the prayer should have been for payment of the purchase price by the appellant on the execution of a registered conveyance by the respondent. It is clear that the proper order for the learned District Judge to have passed on appeal was an order remanding the suit for hearing after an amended plaint had been filed and the issues re-cast, and granting permission to the plaintiff-respondent to amend his plaint for this purpose. This is the order which I now propose to pass in this second appeal, as it seems to me to be impossible to deal adequately with the questions in dispute between the parties in the suit as brought in the Sub-Divisional Court.

(2) 32 C 198; 32 I A 1; 9 C W N 225; 8 Sar. 713 (P C).

This appeal is therefore allowed, the judgment and decree of the District Court are set aside, and the suit is remanded to the Sub-Divisional Court of Kyaiklat for re-hearing on an amended plaint properly framed as a suit under Chap. II, Specific Relief Act, for the enforcement of this clause of the arbitrators' award. Permission is granted to the plaintiff-respondent to file such an amended plaint. The costs of this appeal shall be borne by the plaintiff-respondent in any event. The costs of the first appeal to the District Court shall follow the final decision in the suit. The appellant in the present appeal, A. R. P. R. M. M. Chettyar is entitled to a refund of the court-fee paid on his memorandum of appeal, and the appellant in the appeal to the District Court, L. V. V. Chettyar, is entitled to a refund of the court-fee paid on this memorandum of appeal to that Court.

D. Appeal allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Rule No. 814 of 1934
August 16, 1934
MITTER AND EDGLEY, JJ.

Sm. SARALA DEBI—PETITIONER
versus
PRESIDENT, CALCUTTA IMPROVEMENT TRIBUNAL—OPPOSITE PARTY

Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), s 32—Compensation—Money invested in securities 20 years before—Re-investment—President's discretion—How used.

It is not incumbent on the President of the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal under s. 32, Land Acquisition Act, to direct a re investment in land, the investment having been made so far back as 20 years in approved Government securities. The matter rests in his discretion but the discretion must be exercised on correct judicial principles. One of the elements which should be taken into account in the exercise of such discretion is, as to whether the parties who are vitally interested in the compensation money, have really asked for a re-investment in land. Kamini Devi v. Pramatha Nath Mookerjee (1), referred to.

C. R. from an order of the President, Calcutta Improvement Tribunal, Calcutta, dated May 10, 1934.

Messrs. Charu Chunder Biswas, Bireswar Bagchi and Gopesh Chandra Chatterji, for the Petitioner.

Mitter, J.—This is an application under s. 115, Civil Procedure Code, as well as under s. 107, Government of India Act, on behalf of one Sarala Debi against an order of the President of the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal dismissing her application by which she objected to the re-investment of certain Government securities which were deposited under the provisions of s. 32, Land Acquisition Act, for the purchase of land. The proceeding originated with a notice which was given by the President on March 22, 1934, to the petitioner to the following effect:

"Whereas a sum of Rs. 33,210-15-6 was remitted to this Court by the Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta, for deposit under s. 31, Land Acquisition Act, and whereas Government Promissory Notes for Rs 48,600 is now held in deposit to your credit in the above case, you are hereby required to show cause on the day of April 5, 1934, why the said sum should not be applied in whole or in part, in the purchase of lands in accordance with the provisions of s. 32 of the said Act. Failing such cause being shown the matter will be disposed of in your absence. Particulars are obtainable at this office of suitable lands for investment belonging to the Calcutta Improvement Trust, and of other lands offered by parties for sale."

On receipt of this notice the petitioner who is a Hindu widow and who has got the Hindu widow's estate in the lands which were acquired and compensation money in respect whereof was not paid to the petitioner but was deposited with the President of the Improvement Tribunal, raised an objection to the re-investment of the securities in the purchase of land. No notice was given to the immediate reversioner who was the petitioner's daughter and to the ultimate reversioners, namely her daughter's sons. The President of the Tribunal by the order which is the subject-matter of this rule refused the objections of the petitioner to the application of the Government securities in the purchase of lands. The learned President was of opinion that having regard to s. 32, Land Acquisition Act, he had no option but to direct a change in the investment. The President says this:

"The language of s. 32 is plain and imperative in directing the Court to invest the compensation money in land and the doing of that act is not made conditional on any action to be taken by any party. I am of opinion, therefore, that as suitable properties are available now, the Court must change the investment and apply the compensation money in the purchase of other land under like title and conditions of ownership as the land in respect of which such money has been deposited."

It seems to us that in issuing the notice dated March 2, 1934, the learned President was assuming jurisdiction under a wrong view of the law. It appears from the plain reading of the statute that it is not incumbent on the learned President of the Tribunal under that section to direct a re-investment in land, the investment having been made so far back as 20 years from now in approved Government securities. It becomes necessary to consider the language of the section for the proper construction which is to be put upon s. 32. Section 32 of the Act runs as follows:

"If any money shall be deposited in Court under sub-s. (2) of the last preceding section and it appears that the land in respect whereof the same was awarded belonged to any person who had no power to alienate the same, the Court shall (a) order the money to be invested in the purchase of other lands to be held under the like title and conditions of ownership as the land in respect of which such money shall have been deposited was held, or (b) if such purchase cannot be effected forthwith; then in such Government or other approved securities as the Court shall think fit: and shall direct the payment of the interest or other proceeds arising from such investment to the person or persons who would for the time being have been entitled to the possession of the said land, and such money shall remain so deposited and invested until the same is applied: (i) in the purchase of such other lands as aforesaid; or (ii) in payment to any person or persons becoming absolutely entitled thereto."

We are concerned in the present case with s. 32 (b) for the purchase could not be effected at the time when the compensation money had been deposited. The former President of the Tribunal directed that the money should be invested in approved securities. The question that arises is as to whether having regard to cl. (1) (b) it can be said that as the President has said that the statute makes it obligatory on him to direct that the money be applied in the purchase of such other lands as aforesaid, that is in the manner provided for in cl. (i). We are of opinion that there is no such obligation, for the next clause which follows cl. (i), that is cl. (ii), runs as follows:

"Or in payment to person or persons becoming absolutely entitled thereto."

It shows that the President of the Tribunal might wait till the reversion falls in or any person or persons becoming absolutely entitled to the money. Two alternative cases are contemplated: the security be applied either (i) in the purchase of such other lands as said in cl. (a) or (ii) in payment to any person or persons becoming absolutely entitled to the money.

These two clauses show that a discretion is vested in the President of the Tribunal either to apply the money in the purchase of such other lands or to wait till the reversion falls in. A proper reading of s. 32 makes it clear that the view of the learned President that there is a statutory obligation for re-investment is wrong. The matter, it is true, rests in his discretion but the discretion must be exercised on correct judicial principle. One of the elements which should be taken into account in the exercise of such discretion is as to whether the parties who are vitally interested in the compensation money have really asked for a re-investment in land. In the present case neither the lady, the applicant before us, nor the next reversioner, the daughter, nor the ultimate reversioners, the daughter's sons, have applied for a re-investment in land. We do not think that in the circumstances, having regard to the fact that it was considered wise by his predecessor-in-office that the money should remain at least for a period of twenty years in Government securities, it could be said that he was exercising proper discretion in directing them to be invested in land. The question as to whether suitable land is available or not is a question between the parties themselves. But as we have already said the learned President had no jurisdiction to issue notice to the petitioner in the way in which it has been done in this particular case. That is sufficient to entitle us to set aside his order and to entitle us to look to the facts of the case and to see if we would be properly exercising our discretion in directing a re-investment.

Having regard to the circumstances mentioned above, we do not think that it would be right to direct a re-investment in lands, and more particularly, having regard to the low state of the market with regard to the value of the land. Lands do not fetch now the same value as they used to do, say five or ten years ago. Mr. Biswas has contended broadly that according to the provisions of s. 32 (b) it would appear that the President of the Tribunal cannot take any action under cl. (i) unless he is moved by the party's interest; and his argument is based on the provisions of the English statute which are said to have been reproduced substantially in s. 32, Land Acquisition Act. We are referred in this connection to a decision of this Court in Kamini Devi v. Pramatha Nath Mookerjee (1) and our attention was drawn to a passage in page 40* of the said report where it is said:

"Now in the case before us, s. 69 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, upon which s. 32, Land Acquisition Act, is modelled, provides (we need only quote so much of the section as is relevant to our present purpose) as follows"

Then begins the quotation:

"Now it is said that when one looks to the language of the clause it would appear that such money may be so applied as aforesaid upon an order of the Court of Chancery made on the petition of the party who would have been entitled to the rents and profits of the lands in respect of which such money shall have been deposited; and until the money can be so applied, it may, upon the like order, be invested by the said Accountants-General in the purchase of three per centum consolidated or three per centum reduced bank annuities, or in Government or real securities, and the interest, dividends, and annual proceeds thereof paid to the party who would for the time being have been entitled to the rents and profits of the lands."

It is contended with reference to the compensation money that such money should be applied to the purchase of lands on the petition of the parties only as in England and it is desirable to look to the intention of the framers of the Land Acquisition Act when enacting s. 32 (a). It is difficult in the absence of an express provision in the statute to accede to this contention. But we are bound to observe that the President of the Tribunal should not exercise discretion unless he is moved by the parties who are vitally interested in the compensation money. The whole object was to preserve the money for the benefit of the eventual reversioners. It is only reasonable to suppose that the President should not ordinarily move unless the person interested come forward and ask for re-investment of the security in land.

We are told by Mr. Biswas that the practice which is followed by the President of the Tribunal is that a list is hung up of a large number of immovable properties belonging to the Improvement Trust and also private owners as being lands suitable for investment and after that the limited owners are asked to show cause why the money should not be re-invested in such lands. To adopt a practice of the kind adopted by the President of the Tribunal would lead to harmful results if the limited owners are not allowed opportunities to closely examine their advantages and disadvantages by the intended re-investment. With these observations this Rule must be made absolute and the order of the learned President dated June 9, 1934, must be set aside. We are of opinion that the moneys should lie where they are invested in Government or approved securities.

Edgley, J.—I agree.

D. Rule made absolute.

(1) 10 Ind. Cas. 491; 39 C 33; 13 C L J 597.

*Page of 39 C—[Ed.]

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Civil Revision Petitions Nos. 372, 408 to 410 of 1934

September 25, 1934

PAKENHAM WALSH, J.

MAHAGANAPATHI, MINOR, AND ANOTHER —PETITIONERS

versus

NATESA IYER AND OTHERS - RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 10- Stay of suit—Conditions—Entire subject-matter in issue in later suit must be in issue in prior suit—Hindu Law —Partition suit—Creditors are proper parties but decree for payment of their debts cannot be passed.

In order that a suit may be stayed under s. 10, Civil Procedure Code, pending the decision of a previously instituted suit in another Court, it is not sufficient that there should be one matter in issue in common in both the suits. The entire matter in issue in the subsequent suit must be in issue in the previous suit. Murugesa Mudaliar v. Balasundarammal (1), Kota Sriramulu v Sreeramulu (2), Koberan Nambudri v. Koman Nair (3), Vel achamy v. Muthiah Chettiar (4) and Bepin Behary Mazumdar v. Jogindra Chandra Ghosh (7), followed, Ramachandram Pillai v. Neelambal Achi (5) and Jinnat Bibi v. Howrah Jute Mill Co. (6), not followed.

Though creditors of a joint family are proper parties to a suit for partition of the joint family properties, there is no provision of law under which a decree could be passed in their favour for payment of their debts Official Assignee of Madras v. Ramachandra Iyer (8), distinguished.

C. R. P. under s. 115 of Act V of 1908 and s. 107 of the Government of India Act, praying the High Court to revise the Orders of the Court of the District Munsif of Mannargudi, dated February 26, 1934, and made in I. A. Nos. 80, 81, 82 and 83 of 1934 in O. S. No. 338 of 1932, 372 of 1932, 11 of 1933 and 181 of 1933, respectively.

Mr. S. Thiagaraja Ayyar, for the Petitioner.

Messrs. A. V. Viswanatha Sastri and S. Ramachandra Iyer, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—These are Revision Petitions against the order of the District Munsif of Mannargudi refusing to stay the suits brought by the creditors of defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3. In those suits the 1st defendant is the father; defendants Nos. 2 and 3 are the sons and the suits are filed to recover sums of money alleged to have been borrowed by the 1st defendant. These suits were filed at various times from December 1932 up to June 1933. In June 1932 the petitioners had filed a partition suit O. S. No. 138 of 1932 on the file of the District Munsif of Mannargudi and the plaintiffs in these money suits have been impleaded as defendants Nos. 4, 5, 6 and 7. For the sake of convenience it was arranged to try the suits together as there was a common issue as to whether the debts incurred by the father were for immoral purposes and not binding on the sons. But on a preliminary point the learned District Munsif held that he had no jurisdiction to try the partition suit as the amount involved was beyond his powers and he returned the same for presentation to the proper Court. Against these the petitioners filed a Civil Miscellaneous Appeal in the District Court, West Tanjore, which is still pending. They then applied to have the money suits filed by the creditors stayed and the Court refused to do so. It is argued before me that the Court is bound to do so under s. 10, Civil Procedure Code. An elaborate argument has been addressed before me to show that the reason given for the refusal by the lower Court to grant the stay is not correct. That reason may be briefly summed up as this that the only point which the District Court had to try was the question of jurisdiction and, therefore, it had no jurisdiction to try the rest of the suit, and the arguments urged before me are directed to show that the Appellate Court was seized of the whole suit. I do not think it is necessary to discuss these arguments because it seems to be perfectly clear that this is not a case where the entire matter in the subsequent suit is in issue in the previous suit. In a recent C. R. P. No. 926 of 1934 [Murugesa Mudaliar v. Balasundrammal (1)], I have fully discussed this matter and have held following the balance of the Madras authorities that it is not sufficient that there should be one matter in issue in common in both the suits. I will merely say here that the Madras cases in favour of this view are Kota Sriramulu v. Sreeramulu (2), Koberen Nambudri v. Koman Nair (3) and Vellachamy v. Muthiah Chettiar (4). The only Madras case quoted against it is Ramachandram Pillai v. Neelambal Achi (5), which is not sufficiently explicit to render it clear whether the case would have answered the test laid down by Venkatasubba Rao, J. in Kota Sriramulu v. Sreeramulu (2). As regards the

(1) 153 Ind. Cas. 769; 40 L W 715; 67 M L J 748; (1934) M W N 1350; A I R 1935 Mad. 24; 7 R M 373.

(2) 70 Ind. Cas. 682; 15 L W 646; A I R 1922 Mad 301; 31 M L T 360.

(3) 88 Ind Cas 421; 48 M L J 251; A I R 1925 Mad. 574.

(4) 103 Ind Cas. 274; A I R 1927 Mad 1132; 26 L W 241.

(5) 70 Ind. Cas. 5; A I R 1923 Mad. 88; 16 L W 607.

Calcutta decision quoted against the Madras view Jinnat Bibi v. Howrah Jute Mills Co. (6), this was the decision of a single Judge who failed to notice the earliar Calcutta decision in Bepin Behary Mozumdar v. Jogindra Chandra Ghosh, 36 Ind. Cas. 641 (7), which was relied on by Venkatasubba Rao, J. in Kota Sriramulu v. Sreeramulu (2), nor did he refer to any other cases on the point.

The only question, therefore, remaining is whether there are any issues in the later suits which are not involved in the earlier partition suit and clearly there are. Neither party has produced a copy of all the issues in all the suits, but I find, for instance, that in O. S. No. 338, there was failure of consideration raised as an issue. Apart from that the main issue in the later cases is whether the plaintiffs are entitled to relief, and if so, what: whereas there is nothing to show that they have asked for any relief in the partition suit. It is to my mind extremely doubtful whether even if they had asked for it, it could be granted. The only authority that has been quoted on this point is an obiter dictum in Official Assignee of Madras v. Ramachandra Iyer (8), by Ramesam, J. and was merely to the effect that the Official Receiver might intervene in a partition suit filed by the sons against the father and ask for a finding as to the nature of the debts and for a decree, provided the nature of the debts is not immoral or illegal. The Official Receiver is in an entirely different position from a creditor in a joint Hindu family because it is the Official Receiver's business to collect the debts due to the estate and he has no option but to do so. On the other hand a creditor is not compelled to collect his debts from a joint family if he does not wish to do so. I have been shown no decision which holds that a decree can be granted to the creditors of a joint family in a partition suit. They are no doubt proper parties but it has been held that even a decree-holder creditor is a proper party. Suppose his debt has been found to be subsisting how can he be given a fresh decree? As for the argument founded on the Civil Rules of Practice, these rules do not anywhere lay down that the Court should pass a decree in favour of the creditors in a partition suit or pay their debts in the suit. Paragraph 7 in Chap. III, relating to Partition Suits in Civil Rules of Practice, Vol. I (p. 213) says:

"If any debts or liabilities other than incumbrances, charges, or out-goings, on or out of immovable property, are outstanding, the same shall, unless the Court otherwise direct, be ascertained, and as far as practicable, discharged or provided for before any order or decree is made for the division or distribution of the joint property."

This does not mean that the Court has got to pay decrees in the creditors' favour or pay their debts as part of the suit, but only to see that they are provided if charged on the family properties, this charge is kept due and that other debts should be allotted to one member or other of the family or in some other way split up amongst them. Whatever may be the case if the family creditors ask in a partition suit, for the relief that their debts shall be paid in that suit (and as I said no such authority has been shown to me), there is certainly no authority to show that if they do not ask for that relief, it must be held that an issue has arisen that they have asked for the same. It is seriously sought to be argued that the commonest of all issues "to what relief is the plaintiff entitled" is not an issue for any "relief claimed" under s. 10. So far is this from being true that, on the other hand, the Court can grant no relief at all to a plaintiff who does not ask for it. It is one of the essential claims in every case even if not expressed in so many words, that the plaintiff is asking relief and if he says he doesn't want any relief, there is no alternative but to dismiss his suit. That being so, the whole matter in issue in the later suits is not in issue in the partition suit. These Revision Petitions, therefore, fail and are dismissed with costs as Rs. 15 (Pleader's fee) in each of these Civil Revision Petitions.

No orders are necessary on the Civil Miscellaneous Petitions.

A. Revision dismissed.

(6) 140 Ind. Cas. 155; A I R 1932 Cal. 751; 36 C W N 667; Ind. Rul. (1932) Cal. 692.

(7) 36 Ind. Cas. 641.

(8) 112 Ind. Cas. 541; 51 M 417; (1928) M W N 294; A I R 1928 Mad. 735; 28 L W 109; 55 M L J 175 (F B).

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Criminal Revision No. 474 of 1934

August 7, 1934

LORT-WILLIAMS AND KHUNDKAR, JJ.

ABDUL HAKIM—COMPLAINANT—PETITIONER

versus

FOZU MIA AND ANOTHER—OPPOSITE PARTIES

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 350 (1), proviso (a)—Applicability—Trial by Bench of two Magistrates—Evidence recorded by one—Dissolution of the Bench—Case proceeded with by Magistrate taking evidence—S. 350 (1), does not apply—Interpretation of Statutes—Marginal note—When can be referred to.

Section 350, Criminal Procedure Code, refers to cases heard by a Magistrate sitting singly, who is succeeded by another Magistrate sitting singly. It contemplates cases in which the second Magistrate is a person other than the first Magistrate and in which the second Magistrate has not had any previous opportunity of hearing the witnesses Where two Magistrates have heard a case and one of them has recorded the depositions and on the dissolution of the Bench, the Magistrate who has recorded the deposition proceeds with the case, s. 350, Criminal Procedure Code, is not applicable and in such a case no re-trial can be claimed. Queen-Empress v. Sri Ahobalamatam Jeer (15), referred to.

Where a marginal note has been inserted by or under the authority of the legislature, it can be referred to for an exposition of the meaning of the section.

[Case-law referred to.]

Cr. R. from the order of the Honorary Magistrate, Alipore.

Mr. Binayak Nath Banerjee, for the Petitioner.

Messrs. Joy Gopal Ghose and Anil Kumar Das Gupta, for the Opposite Parties.

Lort-Williams, J.—In this case, a Rule was issued to show cause why an order made by B. C. Ghosh, Honorary Magistrate of Alipore in the District of 24-Parganas, under s. 350, Criminal Procedure Code, granting a new trial, should not be set aside. The order was upheld on revision by Mr. S. N. Ray, Additional District Magistrate of Alipore. The petitioner filed a complaint under s. 406, Indian Penal Code, before Mr. L. K. Sen, the Police Magistrate of Alipore, who transferred the case for disposal to the file of Messrs. B. Rahman and B. C. Ghose, two Honorary Magistrates constituting a Bench. Witnesses were examined and cross examined on both sides, and charges framed and the trial had reached the stage when a date had been fixed for arguments when the Bench was dissolved and the Magistrates were ordered to sit singly. Mr. Sen withdrew this case to his own file, and transferred it to the file of Mr. B. C. Ghose who had recorded the depositions.

Thereupon at the re-opening of the proceedings before Mr. B.C. Ghose, the accused demanded a new trial, under the provisions of s. 350 (1), proviso (a). The Magistrate held that he was bound to accede to the demand, and had no discretion to refuse to re-summon and re-hear all the witnesses. At the previous trial, the Pleader for the accused had stated verbally that he would not demand a new trial, otherwise it is possible that the case would have been disposed of by the Bench before it was dissolved. Some of the witnesses for the complainant have left Calcutta, and are not now available. The Magistrate observed that, as a result of his order, the complainant would undoubtedly suffer inconvenience, harassment and unnecessary expense, and would probably be prejudiced owing to his inability to produce some of his witnesses for re-examination. On the other hand, it seems reasonably clear that the accused could not have been prejudiced if their demand for a new trial had been refused. Mr. B. C. Ghose had been present throughout the whole trial, and as already stated, had actually recorded all the depositions.

Section 350, Criminal Procedure Code, does not in terms apply to a case like the present. It refers to cases heard by a Magistrate sitting singly, who is succeeded by another Magistrate sitting singly. Obviously, it contemplates cases in which the second Magistrate is a person other than the first Magistrate, and in which the second Magistrate has not had any previous opportunity of hearing the witnesses. The reasons for the provisions contained in the section are not present in a case like the present, especially in view of the fact that Mr. B. C Ghose recorded all the evidence given at the hearing before the Bench which consisted of himself and Mr. Rahaman. The section refers only to cases in which the whole or any part of the evidence has been recorded by the first Magistrate and he is succeeded by another Magistrate. Mr. Rahaman did not record any part of the evidence, the whole of it was recorded by Mr. Ghosh, and so far as he is concerned, he has not been succeeded by another Magistrate but by himself. If it were permitted to refer to the marginal note to assist one to interpret the section, it is clear that such reference would confirm the interpretation which I have put upon it, because the marginal note refers only to cases in which the evidence has been recorded partly by one Magistrate and partly by another. In Balraj Kunwar v. Jagatpal Singh, (1) at p. 436* Lord Macnaghten said that:

"It is well settled that marginal notes to the sections of an Act of Parliament cannot be referred to for the purpose of construing the act. The contrary opinion originated in a mistake and it has been exploded long ago. There seems to be no reason for giving the marginal notes in an Indian Statute any greater authority than the marginal notes in an English act of Parliament."

(1) 26 A 393; 31 I A 132; 8 Sar. 639; 8 C W N 699; 1 A L J 384; 7 O C 248 (P C).

*Page of 26 A.—[Ed].

The English rule as stated by Lord Macnaghten seems to be founded upon the assumption that the eye of Parliament has never rested on the marginal notes which are not always to be found on the parliament Roll. A. G. v. Great Eastern Ry. Co. (2) per Baggallay, L. J., at p. 461*, Sutton v. Sutton, (3), per Jessell, M. R., at p. 513†. But marginal notes have been referred to as part of a statute in the English Courts, when they have been found on the Parliament Roll. R. v. Milverton (Inhabitants) (4) and Re Venour's Settled Estates, Venour v. Sellon (5). Now-a-days, they are printed on the draft bill, so it cannot be said that the eye of Parliament has never rested on them. But the disposition of the English Courts is to disregard them. It appears, however, that in certain local and personal acts marginal notes may perhaps form part of the Act: Re Woking M. C. Basingstoke Canal) Act (6), per Phillimore, L. J., at p. 322‡. In India it has been held that marginal notes do not restrict the application of section, because they are not part of the enactment, Dukhi Mullah v. Halway (7), But the Judges in that case simply followed without discussion Claydon v. Green (8) and the other English cases to which I have referred. In Junardeo Narain Singh v. Ram Sarup Roy (9); Emperor v. Alloomiya Husain (10); Kesava Chetty v. Secretary of State (11) and In re Natesa Mudaliar (12) the Judges again followed these cases, without further discussion. In Narayanasami v. Rangasami, (13) it was decided that though the marginal notes ought not to be held to govern the clear text of a section, yet they can be taken as an indication of what the legislature meant.

The question was very fully discussed in Ramsaran Das v. Bhagwat Prasad (14) and a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court following and adapting the ratio nes decidendi in the case of Claydon v. Green (8) held that the question whether a marginal note can be referred to for an exposition of the meaning of a section depends upon whether the note has been inserted by or under the authority of the Legislature. And King, J., while discussing the practice in the U. P. Legislative Council, asserted that in that Legislative Council at any rate, the marginal notes are treated as being part of the enactment, and are inserted with the assent and authority of the Legislature. With this judgment of King, J. I respectfully agree and in my opinion, Lord Macnaghten's statement was not intended to be an authoritative and final pronouncement upon this question, so far as all Indian statutes are concerned. Some day, the matter will have to be more fully considered, unless Government think fit to settle the point by inserting an appropriate section in the General Clauses Act. This course would remove all uncertainty and would save much time and trouble, and I recommend it for the attention of the Government.

However it is not necessary to have recourse to the marginal note in order to interpret s. 350, Criminal Procedure Code, and in my opinion and for the reasons which I have stated, the section has no application to the facts of this case. The somewhat similar facts in Queen-Emperor v. Sri Ahobalamatam Jeer (15) and the remarks of Sir Arthur Collins, C. J., though not precisely in point, are sufficiently pertinent to be cited in support of the view which I have formed. The result is that the order granting a new trial must be set aside, and the Magistrate is directed to proceed with the trial of the case from the point reached at the time when the Bench was dissolved.

Khundkar, J.—I agree.

D. Order set aside.

(2) (1879) 11 Ch. D 449.
(3) (1882) 22 Ch. D 511.
(4) (1836) 5 A & E 841; 1 N & P 179; 2 H & W 435; 6 L J (N S) M C 73; 44 R R 606.
(5) (1876) 2 Ch. D 522; 45 L J Ch. 409; 24 W R 752.
(6) (1914) 1 Ch. 300; 83 L J Ch. 201; 78 J P 81; 110 L L 49.
(7) 23 C 55.
(8) (1863) 3 C P 511; 37 L J C P 226; 16 WR 1126; 18 L T 607.
(9) 25 C 858; 2 C W N 577.
(10) 28 B 129; 5 Bom. L R 805,
(11) 51 Ind. Cas. 45; A I R 1919 Mad. 514; 42 M 451; 36 M L J 222.
(12) 99 Ind. Cas. 324; A I R 1927 Mad. 156; 28 Cr. L J 116; 50 M 733.
(13) 95 Ind. Cas. 731; A I R 1926 Mad. 749; 49 M 716; 50 M L J 517; 24 L W 235.
(14) 113 Ind. Cas 442; A I R 1929 All. 53; 51 A 411; (1929) A L J 230.
(15) 22 M 47.

*Page of (1879) 11 Ch. D.—[Ed].
†Page of (1882) 22 Ch. D.—[Ed].
‡Page of (1914) 1 Ch.—[Ed]

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

First Civil Appeal No 62-6 of 1934

November 20, 1934

MIDDLETON, J. C. AND MIR AHMAD, A. J. C.

MESSRS. ARJAN SINGH-BHAJAN SINGH —DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

FIRM SURJAN SINGH ACHARAJ SINGH AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFF AND DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 34—Day-book entered after four months—Rough notes not available—Ledger from such day-book — Whether a document kept in regular course of business — Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXX, r. 1—Suit by partners—Partners, if can bring suit for firm's benefit—Their locus standi, if can be questioned by third party—Practice—New plea—Fresh evidence necessary—Whether can be raised in appeal

A day book, which has been entered after four months from the happening of an event and the rough notes of which are not available, is not a document which can be said to have been kept in the regular course of business. These remarks apply a fortiori to the ledger which is prepared from such a day book.

Partners can bring a suit for the benefit of the firm, and although they may be prosecuting the litigation on their own responsibility, the benefit goes to the concern, and it is no business of third parties to question their locus standi. Kapurji Magniram v. Pannaji Devichand (1), relied on. [p. 1009, col. 1.]

Where plea was not taken in the lower Court, nor was it raised in the grounds of appeal, but it had been submitted as an additional ground of appeal :

Held, that the appellants could not raise this new point on appeal for deciding which it was necessary to take evidence.

F. C. A. from an order of the Sub-Judge, First Class, Peshawar, dated November 23, 1933.

Sardar Raja Singh, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Jaggan Nath and Hukam Chand, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—These three appeals arise out a transaction which took place at Peshawar on July 30, 1931, Messrs. Surjan Singh-Acharaj Singh of Peshawar sold 2,040 karakuli skins to a firm known as Mian Ghulam Mahbub-Muhammad Umar for Rs. 30,000. The latter drew a cheque in favour of the vendors on the Imperial Bank of India of the value of Rs. 23,570.

Messrs. Arjan Singh-Bhajan Singh had obtained a decree against Messrs. Ziauddin Zainlabdin for Rs. 24,161-7-3. Messrs. Narain Singh-Harbans Singh had been given a decree for Rs. 4,125-15-3 against firm Ziauddin Nasiruddin, and Messrs. Attar Singh-Ram Singh had in their favour a decree for Rs. 2,595-12-3 against the same firm.

Messrs. Arjan Singh-Bhajan Singh obtained an order from the Court of the Senior Sub-Judge, Peshawar, in which they were executing their decree against Ziauddin Zainulabdin. It was to the effect that the money due from Messrs. Ghulam Habib Muhammad Umar should not be paid by the Bank to Messrs. Surjan Singh-Acharaj Singh ; in other words, the sum was attached in execution of the decree. The allegation of the decree-holders was that the skins sold did not belong to the sellers, but in fact belonged to the firm Ziauddin Zainulabdin. The other two decree-holders applied also to join, alleging that Ziauddin Zainulabdin and Ziauddin Nasiruddin were one and the same concern.

Messrs. Surjan Singh-Acharaj Singh objected to the attachment of the money but the Senior Sub-Judge rejected those objections. As a result, they have brought three suits under O. XXI, r. 63, Civil Procedure Code, against the three decree-holders referred to above and their judgment-debtors for a declaration that the goods sold to Messrs. Ghulam Mahbub-Muhammad Umar belong to them and that they were entitled to receive the purchase money. They were heard by the Judicial E. A. C. (Sub Judge, First Class), Peshawar, who decreed the claim in all three suits. Arjan Singh-Bhajan appealed to this Court. The other two defendants preferred their appeals to the District Court, because they lay to that Court. They were transferred to this Court so that all the three connected cases may be heard and disposed of together. The judgment will deal with all three of them.

The allegation in the plaint was that the firm Surjan Singh-Acharaj Singh, was a partner in the firm Suraj Singh-Sohan Singh working at Kabul. Acharaj Ram and Sant Ram were the other partners in this firm. The plaintiffs alleged that the goods were purchased by the latter firm and sent to Peshawar where they were sold as described above. The plaintiffs claimed the skins to be their own property and repudiated the allegation of the defendants that in fact they belonged to Ziauddin Zainulabdin or Ziauddin Nasiruddin. The defence is very clearly and succinctly summarised in para. 5 of the pleas of Arjan Singh-Bhajan Singh (p. 4 of the Paper Book.) The relevant portion is as follows :

"The skins of which the value was attached belonged to defendant No. 2, the judgment-debtors of defendant No. 1. It is simply wrong to say that plaintiffs were the owners of the said skins They had no concern whatsoever with the value of the said property as against defendant No. 2 or the decree-holder of defendant No. 2. The property belonged to defendant No. 2 and by the mere fact that the skins noted above were sent to Peshawar for sale through the branch of the plaintiffs' firm in Kabul, known as Suraj Singh-Sohan Singh, the plaintiffs cannot become the owners of those skins."

We may make it clear that defendant No. 1 is the replying defendant and defendant No. 2 is the firm Ziauddin Zainulbdin. Now a close examination of this plea clearly shows that the defence did not deny the fact that the goods were sent by the Kabul branch to Peshawar and were sold by the Peshawar firm to Messrs. Ghulam Mahbub-Muhammad Umar. The only point raised was that originally the skins were given to the Kabul branch by the judgment-debtors of defendant No. 1. An issue was framed in the following terms.

"Were the skins the property of plaintiffs and sold to the firm Mian Ghulam Mahbub Muhammad Umar, and therefore not liable to attachment and sale in execution of the decree of defendant No. 1 against defendant No. 2 ?"

The evidence produced by the plaintiffs may be divided into three different groups. They produced two letters and two telegrams which passed between the two firms at Peshawar and Kabul. They led oral evidence in support of the allegation that the goods were bought at Kabul and disposed of at Peshawar as the property of the plaintiffs. They further produced their account books at Kabul and Peshawar to show that the bargains had been incorporated in them. The defendants, on the other hand, adduced the evidence of certain witnesses who alleged that the skins were dealt with by the plaintiffs as the property of Messrs. Ziauddin Zainulabdin that Ziauddin Zainulabdin did exist, as a firm, that their trademark was "ZZ" and that the skins carried this mark. They also filed in Court a letter alleged to have been written by Lutufulla from Makhad to Surjan Singh and Sohan Singh. This letter refers to some skins which had been sent from Andkhoi, and which carried the mark "ZZ." The learned trial Judge believed the oral evidence of the plaintiffs and holding their documentary evidence to be genuine, accepted their case. He rejected the evidence of the defendants on the ground that their witnessses were biassed and that the document was written by Lutufulla, who admittedly had once been their agent.

We now proceed to examine the evidence in more detail in order to decide whether the trial Judge was right in accepting that of the plaintiffs in preference to that of the defendants. The two letters are dated July 24, 1931, and July 27, 1931, respectively. Both of them have been written by Santram from Kabul to the firm at Peshawar. In the first letter it is said that ten bundles of skins will be purchased from Zaman Khan and sent to Peshawar in two days' time, and in the second it is stated that the bundles had arrived, were purchased and would be sent next morning by a lorry. Then comes the telegram dated July 28, 1931, from Santram to Surjan Singh Acharaj Singh intimating the despatch of the ten bundles. On the 29th a telegram is sent from Peshawar to Sohan Singh at Kabul that the ten bundles had been received. We know that the sale took place on July 30, 1931, which is proved by the statement of Haji Abdul Shakur, broker. In support of these documents Mahmud Jan, a resident of Peshawar who has been taking contracts in the British Legation at Kabul, has been produced. He was at Kabul in July 1931, and he has sworn that he was present when the skins were purchased by Surjan Singh Sohan Singh from one Zaman Khan. He gives detail of the purchase and states that some money was also paid in his presence. Acharaj Singh and Sant Ram have also gone into the witness-box and proved the documents referred to above. They have produced the account books of Kabul and also the day-book of Peshawar. As regards the books at Kabul, Sant Ram has admitted that he always used to write the books himself, and whenever he was absent from Kabul, the clerk made rough notes on a copy book and on his return he posted the entries in the day-book. In his statement he alleged that he did not go out of Kabul for more than ten days at a time, but he was directed by the senior Sub-Judge to file copies of his passports. He did so and also showed in a tabular statement the dates of his arrival at Peshawar and departure therefrom in 1931-32. It is clear from a perusal of this document that he did use to stay away from Kabul for more than ten days at a time, and that in one case he stayed for about 4 months when he arrived at Peshawar on October 18, 1931, and left it on February 12, 1932.

We have carefully listened to the argument of the learned Counsel for appellants. So far as the facts are concerned, he has not been able to urge very serious objections against the two documents and the telegram. The letters he classifies as admissions in their own favour by the plaintiffs, and as regards the telegrams, he thinks that it does not necessarily mean that they were sent by the persons by whom they are supposed to have been delivered at the Telegraph Office. He has not been able to offer any serious criticism with respect to Mahmudjan, but he has been able to show from the facts given above that the cash book kept at Kabul has not been posted in the regular course of business.

After giving the matter our very careful consideration, we think that the whole case hinges on the statement of Mahmud Jan. We have already said in the beginning of this judgment that the despatch of the goods from Kabul to Peshawar is not questioned by the defendants. The plaintiffs had only to prove that they had actually purchased the goods for themselves at Kabul and we think that they have been able to prove it by producing this independent witness, Mahmud Jan. The remaining evidence therefore becomes redundant, if we believe that Mahmud Jan is telling the truth. The letters and the telegrams may be used as corroborative pieces of evidence, and there is nothing to show that in fact they are fabrications. The letters were written in the usual course of business and no law has been quoted by the learned Counsel in support of his allegation that they could not be admitted in evidence. One telegram is in reply to the other and when read with the letters, no ambiguity remains with regard to the sender and the recipient of the messages, and it is idle on the part of the learned counsel to argue that these telegrams do not provide a satisfactory link in the chain of plaintiffs' evidence. But with regard to the books, we agree with the learned Counsel and are not prepared to accept them under s. 34, Evidence Act. A day-book, which has been entered after four months in February, 1931, and the rough notes of which are admittedly not available, is not a document which can be held to have been kept in the regular course of business. These remarks apply a fortiori to the ledger which is prepared from such a day-book. We therefore disagree with the lower Court so far as this portion of the plaintiff's evidence is concerned, but we agree with him that the remaining evidence is sufficient, when combined with the possession of the skins, to discharge the burden placed on the plaintiffs and to make out a prima facie case in favour of their ownership of the goods in dispute.

We have next to see whether the defendants have met the case so made out. A glance through the evidence of the witnesses shows that they are all connected with the defendants, and it is interesting to notice that one Hardit Singh claims to have shown the goods to a Jew purchaser a week after their arrival, while we have it definitely proved on the record that they were sold to Mian Ghulam Mahbub Muhammed Umar on July 30, i. e. the day next to their arrival in Peshawar. The letter from Lutufulla has to be ruled out without hesitation. Lutufulla had no occasion to write a letter from Makhad, which is in the Punjab, when he was not doing work for any person. Again, there is no postmark on this envelope although it is supposed to have come through post. An attempt has been made to create some sort of postmark on the envelope. It is so faint that the learned Counsel for the appellants had to suggest that the seal was affixed at the back of the envelope and that the ink came through to the front. The back portion of the envelope is torn and therefore the suggested seal is not there. But on a close scrutiny we find that although the ink is said to have come through from behind, there is no mark of it on the back side of the paper in front of which the seal exists. It is incredible that the seal should have been so forcibly struck that the ink should have gone through the envelope and the letter, and permeating through the paper created an impression on the front, and yet left the letter and the back of the paper quite clean. This is enough to show that it is not a genuine document. We hold on the merits that the plaintiffs have proved that the skins in question belonged to them and that the defendants have not been able to rebut the case.

The learned Counsel took two legal objections on appeal. He urged that the plaintiffs consisted of a joint Hindu family and that they had not brought the suit in the proper form prescribed for suits by members of a co-parcenary. This plea was not taken in the lower Court; nor was it raised in the grounds of appeal. It has been submitted as an additional ground of appeal to this Court. There is nothing on the record to show that the plaintiffs do constitute a joint Hindu family, and we are not prepared to allow the appellants to raise this new point on appeal for deciding which it is necessary to take evidence. The second point taken by the learned Counsel was that the plaintiffs had no locus standi to bring the suit. The goods belonged to the Kabul firm and that firm should have instituted the proceedings. We do not see any substance in this allegation too. The plaintiff firm are partners with Acharaj Ram-Sant Ram in the Kabul firm. It is an admitted principle of law that partners can bring a suit for the benefit of the firm, and although they may be prosecuting the litigation on their own responsibility, the benefit goes to the concern, and it is no business of third parties to question their locus standi. If any authority be needed for this proposition, we quote Kapurji Magniram v. Pannaji Devichand, (1). For the reasons given above, we dismiss the appeals with costs. Pleader's fee at 1½ per cent.

D. Appeals dismissed.

(1) 113 Ind. Cas. 341; A I R 1929 Bom. 177; 53 B 110; 30 Bom. L R 1560.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 586 of 1932

June 14, 1934

ADDISON AND BECKETT, JJ.

PRABH DIYAL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

M. MUHAMMAD NAWAZ SHAH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT

Punjab Court of Wards Act (II of 1903), s. 43—Ward of Court—Disability removed except in respect of joint property of his and another ward—Capacity to enter into fresh contract—Debt incurred during minority, if can be ratified.

Where the effect of a notification was to remove the legal incapacity of a ward of Court except in respect of any property which he owned jointly with another who continued to be under superintendence :

Held, that the former person was not thenceforth a ward of Court and was capable of entering into a fresh contract after the removal of the disability, but that he was not in a position to ratify any debt incurred during his minority.

F. C. A. from a decree of the Senior Sub-Judge, Multan, dated March 17, 1932.

Mr. Badri Das, for the Appellant.

Dr. Shuja-ud-din and Malik Muhammad Amin, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—Prabh Diyal sues Muhammad Niwaz Shah on the strength of an acknowledgment executed by the latter on June 10, 1927. According to this acknowledgment, Muhammad Niwaz Shah had taken a loan of Rs. 3,710 in cash, and had made himself responsible for the payment of Rs. 200 due on a decree outstanding against his maternal uncle and agent Ghulam Ali. Adding interest at the rate of six pies per rupee per mensem, the plaintiff seeks to recover a sum of Rs. 6,290-10-0.

There is a two-fold defence. In the first place, it is contended that the defendant was still a ward within the meaning of s. 3 (d), Punjab Court of Wards Act, 1903, when the acknowledgment was written and that he was accordingly not competent to enter into any contract involving pecuniary liability. In the second place, it is alleged that no money was paid and that the entry was merely made to cover an earlier liability incurred when he was admittedly under the Court of Wards. It is not disputed that such an acknowledgment would be invalid. The trial Court has accepted the defence on both these points, and has dismissed the suit with costs. The plaintiff has appealed.

The defendant's estate had already been placed under the Court of Wards in the lifetime of his father. His father died when he was still a minor and he was then placed under the Court of Wards on account of his minority. Part of the land was held jointly with a cousin named Bakar Shah, who was also under the Court of Wards. On January 15, 1925, the person and property of Muhammad Niwaz Shah were released from the superintendence of the Court of Wards with the exception of the land which he owned jointly with Bakar Shah. The question is whether this exception was sufficient to continue his status as a ward. According to s. 3 (d), Court of Wards Act, a ward means any person in respect of the whole or any part of whose property the Court of Wards has assumed superintendence but does not include a joint proprietor the superintendence of whose property has been assumed under s. 8, provides that the Court of Wards may assume superintendence of the property of a joint proprietor when the other joint proprietor is placed under superintendence. In the present instance the Court of Wards had not assumed superintendence over the joint property of Muhammad Niwaz Shah under this section, although it would appear from the connected correspondence that it was intended that the effect should be the same. From this the lower Court has concluded that Muhammad Niwaz Shah continued to be a ward after his person and separate property had been released. In arriving at this decision, however, the learned Subordinate Judge appears to have overlooked the provisions of s. 46, which seems to be intended to meet such a situation. This provides that the Court of Wards may retain superintendence over joint property when any of the proprietors cease to be under any legal incapacity and that in such cases the proprietor who has ceased to be disqualified shall not be deemed to be a ward for the purposes of the Act. The effect of the notification of 1925 was to remove the legal incapacity of Muhammad Niwaz Shah except in respect of any property which he owned jointly with Bakar Shah, who continued to be under superintendence; and s. 46 makes it clear that this fact alone would not be sufficient to make Muhammad Niwaz Shah a ward.

The defendant was thus capable of entering into a fresh contract in 1925 but it is admitted that he was not in a position to ratify any debt incurred during his minority. On this question we have the evidence of Muhammad Niwaz Shah himself and we agree with the lower Court that it represents what actually occurred. According to the defendant, he borrowed a small sum of money and took some grain at a time when he was still under the influence of his mother and considered that the allowance made to him by the manager of his estate was inadequate. On attaining majority he executed the acknowledgment in question under fear of involving his mother, who had signed the earlier entry along with him.

It is admitted that the plaintiff was in partnership with Ram Chand at the time when the earlier debt is said to have been incurred and the matter could easily have been cleared up if account books of that period had been produced. Ram Chand has appeared as a witness and has given an entirely unconvincing story to explain why the books have not been produced. The defendant has thus been deprived of the only documentary evidence which could be forthcoming in order to test his story. Moreover, there are suspicious circumstances with regard to the later transaction. The sum mentioned in the later entry is a very large sum to have been taken in cash to a place where neither of the parties belong. The defendant was a young man just emerging from minority and his statement is one which we believe to be correct. In these circumstances the only sum which the plaintiff is entitled to recover is the sum of Rs. 200 for which he made himself responsible in respect of the decree against his uncle. We set aside the decree of the lower Court and grant the plaintiff a decree for the recovery of Rs. 200 from the defendant, with interest at 6 per cent. per annum from June 10, 1927, upto the date of realisation. To this extent only the appeal is accepted. The defendant will receive half his costs from the plaintiff in both the Courts.

N Decree modified.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Criminal Transfer Application No. 177 of 1934

December 12, 1934

RUPCHAND, A. J. C.

Musammat SATBHARI—APPLICANT

versus

MUHAMMAD SIDIK—OPPONENT

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 526—Accused and his witnesses residing at considerable distance, whether a ground for transfer—For accused to appear in certain place risky and inconvenient—Held, case should be transferred.

The fact that an accused person and his defence witnesses reside at a considerable distance from where they are being tried is ordinarily no ground for transfer; but where it is highly inconvenient and risky for the applicant to appear either as an accused or as a witness in certain place, the case should be transferred from that place.

Mr. B. P. Samtani, for the Applicant.

Mr. C. M. Lobo, for the Crown.

Order.—This is an application by Musammat Satbhari for transfer of a case pending against her and seven other persons in the Court of the Second Class Magistrate, Shahdad, U. S. F.

The main ground on which I am prepared to transfer the case is that of convenience. Of the eight accused seven are said to be residents of Nawabshah District and their witnesses are residents of Nawabshah. The eighth accused is said by them to be a fictitious person and this may or may not be true. The complaint against them is one under s. 498 read with s. 109, Penal Code, and the woman who is said to have been enticed away is Musammat Satbhari herself. How and why the Magistrate should have issued process against is another matter. There is no application for quashing the proceedings against her and, therefore, I express no opinion upon that point. It will perhaps be easier for the complainant and his witnesses to go to Nawabshah than for the accused to go to Shahdad Kot. Now the fact that an accused person and his defence witnesses reside at a considerable distance from where they are being tried is ordinarily no ground for transfer; the circumstances of this case are peculiar. After the death of Karim Bux who was the husband of Musammat Satbhari, one Esmail claimed to have married her and asked for a Jirga. The prayer of Ismail was refused as per certified copy of the order filed. This is another complaint against her and her relatives by the complainant who claims to have married her subsequently. I do not wish to go into the merits of the allegations made in this complaint or the defence set up but I do think that it will be highly inconvenient and risky for her to appear either as an accused person or as a witness in the Larkana District.

The learned Public Prosecutor does not oppose the transfer. I accordingly direct that this case be transferred to the District Magistrate, Nawabshah, who will either try the case himself or transfer it for trial to some other competent Magistrate under him.

D. Application allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Miscellaneous First Civil Appeal No. 2045 of 1930

March 28, 1934

JAI LAL, J.

PANNA LAL AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—APPELLANTS

versus

BASANTA MAL AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Execution—Restitution in favour of judgment-debtor—Surety failing to pay back certain amount—Suit finally decided in favour of decree-holder—Credit to judgment-debtor to the extent of lost amount.

In execution proceedings the judgment-debtors had paid the full decretal amount to the decree-holder and when restitution thereof was directed owing to the decree having been set aside, they recovered a certain amount by sale of the sarai belonging to one of the sureties of the decree-holder, but he was subsequently deprived of that sarai on the ground that the surety had no interest in it. In the meantime the suit was remanded and finally decided in favour for the decree-holder. In the final execution proceedings, the judgment-debtor claimed credit for this lost amount :

Held, that whatever might be the equities between the surety and the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor, the judgment-debtor having paid the full decretal amount to the decree-holder originally must be deemed to have failed to recover it in the restitution proceedings to the extent of the lost amount. The decree-holder, therefore, must give credit for this amount to the judgment-debtor. Mehr Chand v. Milkhi Ram (1), distinguished.

M. F. C. A. from an order of the Senior Sub-Judge, Kangra, dated August 13, 1930.

Mr. Nawal Kishore, for the Appellants.

Mr. Mehr Chand Mahajan, for the Respondents.

Referring Order

Tek Chand, J.—After Counsel for the appellants had finished his address and Mr. Mehr Chand had commenced his arguments, my attention was drawn to the fact that the question of law involved in this case is the subject of a reference to a Full Bench in Mehr Chand v. Milkhi Ram (1). The hearing must therefore be adjourned till the Full Bench has disposed of the reference. I think it desirable, however, to set out here the facts which are necessary for the disposal of this case, as these are scattered over several records and have been ascertained after spending considerable time. These facts are no longer in dispute and are admitted by both Counsel.

In a suit for dissolution of partnership, a decree was passed in 1919 by the Subordinate Judge, Kulu, in favour of Salig Ram against Tulsi Ram. In execution of this decree the judgment-debtor Tulsi Ram deposited Rs. 18,000 in Court. The decree-holder Salig Ram was allowed to withdraw this amount, on furnishing security by three sureties each binding himself to refund Rs. 6,000 with interest at 6 per cent. per annum, in the event of the appeal, which Tulsi Ram had preferred to this Court against the decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, being accepted. In accordance with this order three persons, Basanta Mal, Laungu Mal and Shiv Dayal executed security bonds for refund of Rs. 6,000 each with interest at the rate above mentioned. The appeal against the original decree remained pending in this Court for some years and was eventually accepted, the decree of the trial Court having been set aside and the case remanded for fresh decision.

Soon after the High Court had accepted the appeal, the judgment-debtor Tulsi Ram applied under s. 144, Civil Procedure Code, to the executing Court for restitution of the sun of Rs. 18,000, which he had paid in execution of the decree together with interest due thereon. In this application he prayed that if the amount could be realised from Salig Ram it should be recovered from the three sureties in terms of the bonds executed by them. This application was granted and the sureties were called upon to pay. Of them Basanta Mal and Laungu Mal made payments in full and were discharged from their bonds. The third surety, Shiv Dayal, failed to pay. The principal sum and interest by him found to be Rs. 9,079 and for this sum execution was taken against him by sale and attachment of his property. In execution proceedings Rs. 6,042-4-0 only was realised, partly in cash and partly by sale of immovable properties which were believed to belong to Shiv Dayal. One of the properties sold by the Court to realise the amount due by Shiv Dayal was a sarai at Kulu which was purchased for Rs. 1,700 by the sons of Tulsi Ram, who had died meanwhile. This sale took place on October 8, 1927, and was duly confirmed by the Court and a sale certificate granted to the auction purchasers on Juue 23, 1928.

(1) 138 Ind. Cas. 47; A I R 1932 Lah. 401; 13 Lah. 618; Ind. Rul. (1932) Lah. 396; 33 P L R 649.

From what has been stated above it will be clear, that out of the amount which Salig Ram and his sureties had to refund to Tulsi Ram under s. 144, a sum of Rs. 3,036-12-0 (Rs. 9,079 minus Rs. 6,042-4-0) remained unpaid, the balance having been adjusted by repayment in cash and sale of properties, one of which was the sarai valued at Rs. 1,700.

In the meantime, the original suit for dissolution of partnership, which was being re-tried by the Senior Subordinate Judge in accordance with the remand order passed by the High Court, was decided on March 22, 1928, when a decree of Rs. 12,463 was passed in favour of Salig Ram against the sons of Tulsi Ram. The decree-holder Salig Ram instead of executing this decree himself assigned Rs. 9,000 out of the decretal amount to his uncle Basanta Mal, authorising him to take out execution for that sum. Shortly afterwards Salig Ram made another assignment for Rs. 1,500 out of the remaining decretal amount, in favour of one Janardhan. On the basis of these assignments Basant Mal and Janardhan applied for execution of the decree against the sons of Tulsi Ram.

In the meantime a suit had been instituted by Basanta Mal against the sons of Tulsi Ram and Shiv Dayal for a declaration that the sarai which had been sold to the sons of Tulsi Ram for Rs. 1,700 in the Court auction held in restitution proceedings against Shiv Dayal, surety for Salig Ram, was wakf property and that Shiv Dayal had no saleable interest in it. This suit was decreed on April 3, 1930, on the finding that the sarai did not belong to Shiv Dayal but had been dedicated to the public, and that the auction sale was invalid. This decree was affirmed by the District Judge on July 17, 1930.

In the execution proceedings which had been started by Basanta Mal and Janardhan, as assignee from the decree-holder Salig Ram, against the judgment-debtors (sons of Tulsi Ram), the aforesaid assignees claimed that the sum due on the decree was Rs. 9,426-4-0 which had been arrived at as follows:

Rs. 12,463-0-0	Decretal amount.
less Rs. 3,036-12-0	The amount which the decree-holder Salig Ram and his surety Shiv Dayal had failed to refund to the judgment-debtor Tulsi Ram in the restitution proceedings.
Rs. 9,426-4-0

The judgment-debtors (sons of Tulsi Ram) claimed a further set off for Rs. 1,700, the price of the sarai which had been sold to them in Court auction held in the restitution proceedings on the assumption that it was the property of Shiv Dayal surety for the decree-holder, but which sale had been set aside in the declaratory suit brought by Basanta Mal, uncle of Shiv Dayal. They accordingly contended that the decree could be executed for Rs. 7,726-4-0 (Rs. 9,426-4-0 minus Rs. 1,700) only. The executing Court has refused to allow this set off and the judgment-debtors have appealed.

For the appellants Mr. Nawal Kishore relied on Asad Ullah Khan v. Karam Chand (2) and Radha Kishun Lal v. Kashi Lal (3). For the respondents Mr. Mehr Chand has urged that the authority of Asad Ullah Khan v. Karam Chand (2) has been considerably shaken, if not altogether destroyed, by the decision in Habib-ud-din v. Hatim Mirza (4). He has also relied on Ram Saroop v. Dalpat Rai (5). As stated already, the question whether Asad Ullah Khan v. Karam Chand (2) is still good law is the subject of a reference to a Full Bench in Civil Appeal No. 2128 of 1930 [Mehar

(2) 76 Ind. Cas. 605; A I R 1924 Lah. 115; 4 Lah 354; 6 Lah. L J 67.

(3) 76 Ind. Cas 927; A I R 1924 Pat. 273; 2 Pat. 829; 1 Pat. L R 358; (1923) Pat. 342; 5 P L T 345

(4) 86 Ind. Cas. 622; A I R 1925 Lah. 467; 6 Lah. 283; 1 Lah. Cas. 552.

(5) 58 Ind. Cas. 105; A I R 1921 All. 377; 43 A 60.

Chand v. Milkhi Ram (1)] and I understand the Full Bench is sitting next week to dispose of the reference. In these circumstances, it is not desirable for me, sitting in Single Bench, to proceed with a decision of the point. The hearing is adjourned. A fresh date, after the opinon of the Full Bench has been pronounced, will be fixed.

Jai Lal, J.—The full facts of this case are mentioned in the order of Tek Chand, J., dated March 10, 1932. The Full Bench of this Court has held that ordinarily an auction purchaser is entitled to recover from the decree-holder the amount paid by him for immovable property purchased at an auction sale held in execution of a decree if he is subsequently deprived of the property on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in it. In the present case, however, the question does not directly arise principally because the person who had the property attached and sold himself was the auction purchaser. It is, therefore, doubtful whether the rule laid down in the Full Bench judgment directly governs the present case. The question, however, can be looked at, and ought to be looked at from another point of view which is that the judgment-debtors, the sons of Tulsi Ram, had paid the full decretal amount to the decree-holder and when restitution thereof was directed owing to the decree have been set aside, they recovered Rs. 1,700 by sale of the sarai belonging to Shiv Dayal, one of the sureties of the decree-holder, but have subsequently been deprived of that sarai on the ground that Shiv Dayal, the surety had no interest in it. The net result is that Shiv Dayal the surety, has been unable to return Rs. 1,700 out of the amount which he had guaranteed to return to the sons of Tulsi Ram. Whatever therefore may be the equities between Shiv Dayal and the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor, the judgment-debtor having paid the full decretal amount to the decree-holder originally must be deemed to have failed to recover it in the restitution proceedings to the extent of Rs. 1,700. The decree-holder therefore must give credit for this amount to the sons of Tulsi Ram. I accordingly accept this appeal with costs and direct that a further set off of Rs. 1,700 be given to the sons of Tulsi Ram.

D. Appeal allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Civil Revision Petition No. 538 of 1933

September 17, 1934

PAKENHAM WALSH, J.

POTTA REDDI—PETITIONER

versus

KARUPPA GOUNDAN AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Execution—Sale—Adjournment of sale on giving up objections to sale proclamation—Estoppel of judgment-debtor against raising those objections again—Revision—Omission to decide question of estoppel—Revision to prevent prolonging of litigation—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115.

Where the properties of a judgment-debtor are proclaimed for sale and he gets an adjournment of the sale by giving up his objections to the sale proclamation, he is estopped from raising those objections again.

The High Court has power to interfere in revision under its general powers of superintendence to prevent an inquiry which would not only prolong the litigation unnecessarily but would also lead to a determination of the rights of the parties upon an improper basis. Where the Court declined to decide a question of estoppel which clearly arose on the pleadings and appointed a Commissioner for local inquiry:

Held, the High Court had power to interfere in revision and set aside the order appointing a Commissioner. Ramji Ram v. Ramasre Rant (2), referred to.

C. R. P. under ss. 115 of Act V of 1908 and 107 of the Government of India Act praying the High Court to revise the order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Coimbatore, dated February 27, 1933, and made in E. A. No. 119 of 1933 in E. A. No. 724 of 1932 in E. P. No. 63 of 1931 in O. S. No. 156 of 1929.

Mr. K. V. Ramachandra Ayyar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. T. V. Ramanathan, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—The decree-holder in the case filed an E. P. No. 63 of 1931 to bring the properties to sale. The sale was posted to December 16, 1931, and by consent of parties adjourned to March 16, 1932. The judgment-debtors in spite of notice took no part in the sale proclamation and came forward objecting to the property being sold in certain lots and other matters of this sort. By a consent order the sale was adjourned to June 29, 1932. The order on the petition runs as follows:—"This is not pressed. Sales adjourned. Objection to sale proclamation given up." This order is dated March 23, 1932. The sale was again adjourned to September 28, 1932, and even afterwards adjourned from day to day. An application for adjournment is put in on October 5, 1932, and refused. The sale was concluded on October 10, 1932. An application to set aside the sale was put in under O. XXI, r. 90, in which the objections to the sale application given up on a former occasion are repeated. There was a prayer to examine witnesses as to the value of the property or in the alternative, to depute a Commissioner. In the reply to the petition it was distinctly urged that the judgment-debtors were estopped by their conduct from raising these objections to the sale proclamation. The learned Subordinate Judge without giving any decision on the question of estoppel or any reasons for his order, simply passed an order as follows:—

"It is desirable to appoint a Commissioner and one will be appointed. Rs. 75, fees by March 3, 1933." Against this order the revision petition has been filed.

I think the order cannot be maintained. In the first place the question of estoppel clearly arose for decision and the lower Court did not decide it, thereby refusing to exercise a jurisdiction which it was bound to exercise. The estoppel is to my mind in this case perfectly clear. The judgment-debtors had got an adjournment from March 23, to June 29, 1932, by expressly giving up their objections to the sale proclamation. It is immaterial, therefore, whether the sale proclamation is an administrative act as held by this Court or a judicial act as held by some other High Courts; because a party can by his conduct towards another party estop himself from rights which he might have otherwise exercised in Court proceedings. In Arunachalam v. Arunachalam (1), (a Privy Council case) at p. 25* their Lordships say:

"It would be very difficult indeed to conduct proceedings in execution of decrees by attachment and sale of property if the judgment-debtor could lie by and afterwards take advantage of any misdescription of the property attached and about to be sold, which he knew well, but of which the execution creditor or decree-holder might be perfectly ignorant that they should take no notice of that, allow the sale to proceed, and then come forward and say the whole proceedings were vitiated. That, in their Lordships' opinion, cannot be allowed."

Here the case is much stronger. The judgment-debtors have got an adjournment of the sale by giving up their objections to the sale proclamation. Therefore, they are estopped from raising those objections again.

As to the power of the Court to interfere in revision in such a matter, Ramji Ram v. Ramasre Rant, 83 Ind. Cas. 124 (2), is an authority and it was also a case where the lower Court had issued a commission. It was there laid down that the High Court shall interfere in revision under its general powers of superintendence to prevent an inquiry which would not only prolong the litigation unnecessarily but would also lead to a determination of the rights of the parties upon an improper basis. As said above the lower Court has refused to exercise its jurisdiction in deciding the preliminary point raised as to whether the judgment-debtors were estopped from questioning the correctness of the proclamation order. That alone is a clear ground for revision. I am also satisfied that the issue of this Commission is, as in Ramji Ram v. Ramasre Rant, 83 Ind. Cas. 124 (2), under the circumstances a waste of public time and money and the order appointing a Commissioner must be set aside. The Court will deal with the petition on its other merits taking into consideration any other ground raised for setting aside the sale. The petitioner will have his costs here and in the lower Court.

A. Order accordingly.

(1) 12 M 19; 15 I A 171; 5 Sar. 265; 12 Ind. Jur. 371 (P C).

(2) 83 Ind. Cas. 124; (1924) Pat. 217; A I R 1924 Pat. 761.

*Page of 12 M.—[Ed.]

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Criminal Revision No. 54 of 1935

March 11, 1935

SUBHEDAR, A. J. C.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

BALLI—ACCUSED

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 307, 326—Essentials for conviction under s. 307—Doctor's testimony that injuries inflicted were not sufficient in the ordinary course to cause death—Conviction under s. 307 is wrong.

To sustain a conviction under s. 307, Penal Code, it is necessary that there must be an act done under such circumstances that death might be caused if the act took effect. The act must be capable of causing death in the natural and ordinary course of things; and if the act complained of is not of that description, the assailant cannot be convicted of an attempt to murder under s. 307, Penal Code. Where the doctor who treated the injured does not say that the injuries inflicted by the accused were sufficient in the ordinary course to cause her death, the principle of deducing intention from the nature of the injuries and their natural and probable consequences is misapplied and a conviction under s. 307 is not sustainable. The conviction must be altered to one under s. 326 and a sentence of 18 months' rigorous imprisonment cannot be considered to be so grossly inadequate as to require enhancement. Jhagru Gond v. Emperor (1), Reg. v. Francis Cassidy (2), Jiwan Das v. Emperor (3), and Emperor v. Martu Vithoba Prabhu (4), relied on. Empress v. Phagya (5), referred to.

Case referred by the Sessions Judge,

Chhindwara, on January 24, 1935, under s. 436, Criminal Procedure Code.

Order.—In Criminal Case No. 240 of 1934 Mr. Vishwanath Prasad, Magistrate of the First Class, exercising powers under s. 30 of the Criminal Procedure Code, convicted Balli, a youth of about 18 years of age, of an offence under s. 307, Indian Penal Code, for attempting to murder his mother-in-law, Musammat Jhela, and sentenced him to 18 months' rigorous imprisonment.

The facts found by the learned Magistrate are shortly these. Musammat Jhela's only daughter, Musammat Chindi, has been married to Balli. Musammat Jhela, however, did not send her daughter to her husband's house with the result that extreme ill-feelings ensued between her and her son-in-law, Balli. Musammat Jhela herself attributes the case of the ill-feelings to her unwillingness to execute a will of her property in favour of Balli as proposed by him. On account of this hostility between Balli and his mother-in-law, the former had attacked her, in 1932, with a knife for which he was convicted of an offence under s. 324, Indian Penal Code, but was released on probation of good conduct under the provisions of s. 562 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

On September 25, 1934, Balli again committed an assault upon his mother-in-law with an axe causing, according to Dr. Dass (P. W. No. 6), the following four injuries:—

"1. One incised wound 5" long, 1" broad in centre, ¼th" broad in upper end and 1-8th" broad in lower and 3-4th" deep with a concavity directed anterior on the right Parotid and temporal region about their middle part. This was probably due to some sharp instrument.

2. One incised wound 3" × 1" × 1" obliquely directed from above downwards from right to left on the left scapular region about its middle part. This was also due to some sharp instrument.

3. One incised wound 1" × ½" × 1-8th" on the middle and upper part of left forearm due to sharp instrument.

4. A fracture of the middle part of left radius under wound No. 3."

The old woman was admitted as an in-door patient in the hospital and in due course of time recovered. Balli's appeal against his conviction was rejected by the Sessions Judge, who has made the present reference under s. 438 of the Criminal Procedure Code, for enhancement of the sentence passed upon Balli from 18 months to 5 years' rigorous imprisonment' as in his opinion, Balli was very leniently dealt with by the trying Magistrate.

In showing cause againt the recommendation of the Sessions Judge, the District Magistrate states that "Balli accused being a lad of 18 years hardly deserves a more severe sentence than 18 months" in view of "the fact that he rightly felt resentment at his mother-in-law's conduct, in not sending away his wife which made him impetuous and furious." Balli was unrepresented at the hearing of the reference but having carefully gone through the record of the case I am definitely of opinion that his conviction under s. 307, Indian Penal Code, was itself wrong and that he ought to have been convicted of an offence under s. 326, Indian Penal Code.

Dr. Dass (P. W. No. 6) does not state in his evidence that the four injuries, which he noticed on Musammat Jhela, were ordinarily capable of causing her death in the natural and ordinary course of events. Towards the end of para. 8 of his judgment the trying Magistrate records the curious finding that Balli's "action amounted to an attempt which was a little short of murder". The learned Sessions Judge is more definite and says, in para. 3 of his judgment, that "from the nature of the injuries there can be no question that Balli's intention was to kill Musammat Jhela; and it is only by mere chance that she has escaped". The best person to describe the exact nature of the injuries and their natural effect was, however, the Medical Officer who examined Musammat Jhela and treated her. When he does not say that the injuries inflicted by Balli upon his mother-in-law were sufficient in the ordinary course to cause her death, the principle of deducing intention from the nature of the injuries and their natural and probable consequences as laid down in Jhagru Gond v. Emperor (1), appear to have been misapplied to the present case and "Balli's intention to kill Musammat Jhela" wrongly inferred. In the absence then of any evidence to show that the intention of Bali in inflicting the injuries was to kill his mother-in-law, his conviction under s. 307, Indian Penal Code, was, in my opinion, not justified.

(1) 1 N L R 134 at p 136.

To sustain a conviction under s. 307, Indian Penal Code, it is necessary that there must be an act done under such circumstances that death might be caused if the act took effect. The act must be capable of causing death in the natural and ordinary course of things; and if the act complained of is not of that description, the assailant cannot be convicted of an attempt to murder under s. 307, Indian Penal Code, Reg v. Francis Cassidy (2), and Jiwan Das v. King-Emperor (3). In Emperor v. Martu Vithoba Prabhu (4), it was held that the only act, which can fall within the purview of s. 307, Indian Penal Code, is an act which by itself must be ordinarily capable of causing death in the natural and ordinary course of events. There a person who struck his wife on her neck with an axe causing an incised would was convicted only under s. 324, Indian Penal Code, the Court observing:—

"Although a hatchet is a dangerous weapon, a blow with it is not, in our opinion, an act ordinarily capable of causing death in the natural and ordinary course of events. On the contrary, we should say that whether a blow with a hatchet is or is not capable of causing such a result must depend upon the particular nature of the blow inflicted. It seems to us, therefore, that this is a case where the accused's criminal liability must be limited to the act which he in fact did, and cannot be extended so as to embrace the consequences of another act which he might have done but did not do".

For the reasons given above, I alter the conviction of the prisoner Bali from one under s. 307 to one under s. 326, Indian Penal Code. Under these circumstances the sentence of 18 months' rigorous imprisonment passed upon him is, in my opinion, not so grossly inadequate as to require enhancement: Empress v. Phagya (5). Let the records be returned.

N. Conviction altered.

(2) 4 B H C R 17 at p 21 Cr.
(3) 30 P R 1904 Cr.
(4) 21 Ind. Cas. 881; 15 Bom, L R 991 at p 993.
(5) 9 C P L R 4 Cr.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Civil Revision Petition No. 837 of 1933
September 28, 1934
PAKENHAM WALSH, J.

GOLLA LAKSHMIAH NAIDU—
PETITIONER
versus
GOLLA KRISHNASWAMI NAIDU AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VI, r. 17 —Amendment of plaint—Suit to declare right to worship for particular year—Expiry of year before trial—Amendment of plaint for declaration of right to worship by turns—Permissibility.

Order VI, r. 17, Civil Procedure Code of 1908 is considerably wider than the corresponding section of the old Code and Court is given very wide power or discretion to allow amendments especially to avoid multiplicity of suits.

The plaintiff filed a suit for a declaration that they were golla mirasidars of a temple and that in pursuance of an agreement they were entitled to enjoy the said office according to turns from July 1, 1931, to June 30, 1932, and for possession of the office. The suit did not come up for trial till March 1933. The plaintiff, therefre, prayed for amending the plaint by adding a prayer for a declaration that they were entitled to get possession during alternate years:

Held, that the case was one in which an amendment ought to be allowed. Ramasaran Mandeav v. Mahabir Saha (1), distinguished. Charan Das v. Amir Khan (2), referred to.

Petition under s. 115 of Act V of 1908 and s. 107, of the Government of India Act, praying the High Court to revise the order of the Court of the District Munsif of Tirupathi, dated June 1, 1933, and made in I. A. No. 199 of 1933 in O. S. No. 402 of 1931.

Mr. B. C. Seshachala Ayyar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. K. Kuppuswami, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—The plaintiffs sued for a declaration that they are Golla Mirasi-holders of the Sri Kothandaramaswami Temple and that by a registered agreement, dated August 22, 1906, between them and the defendant they were entitled to take yearly turns in holding office. They also sued to recover possession of the key of the temple and to fill this office for the year beginning with July 1, 1931.

The suit was filed in November 1931 and did not come up for hearing till March 1933, apparently for no fault of the plaintiffs. By that time the year for which they were entitled to possession had elapsed. The defendant urged that they must be, therefore, non-suited as a mere prayer for declaration without possession could not be granted. The plaintiffs asked to amend their plaint by claiming the relief they were entitled to, viz., to get possession during alternate years. This amendment was allowed by the Court and against the order allowing it the present revision petition is filed.

The argument of the petitioner is that the amendment enlarges the scope of the suit. It may be noted here that it was contended for the plaintiffs even at the time of the amendment that the suit was maintainable even as it stood without amendment; and the lower Court wisely, I think, said it was unnecessary to decide this point. The plaint as it was orginally framed runs:—

"The plaintiffs, therefore, pray for a declaration that they are the Golla Mirasi-holders of Sri Kothandaramaswami Temple, that in pursuance of the agreement dated August 22, 1906, they are entitled to enjoy the said office according to turns from July 1, 1931, to June 30, 1932, and that after establishing their right in a Court of Law they are entitled to have the defendant removed from the Udigam Mirasi office and to get possession of the keys through the process of the Court."

It will be observed that there is a direct prayer for a declaration that they are entitled to enjoy the said office according to turns from July 1, 1931, to June 30, 1932. No doubt it is not stated that the turns are alternate yearly ones but that is the reasonable inference and the whole claim is based on a registered agreement which is filed. It is difficult, therefore, to say positively that a decree given in accordance with this request would not enable them to recover possession of the property in alternate years. In any case it appears to me to be a suit where the amendment ought to be allowed. It has been asked for before the trial and it is impossible to see how the defendant would be prejudiced by it. The only case quoted by the other side in Ramasaran Mandev v. Mahabir Saha (1). There the whole case was sought to be altered at the time of the argument in the Privy Council. Order VI, r. 17, is considerably wider than the corresponding section of the old code and the Court is given very wide power or discretion to allow amendments especially to avoid multiplicity of suits. The only result of refusing the amendment would be to drive the plaintiffs to a fresh suit, while the title remains the same. In Charan Das v. Amir Khan (2), an amendment for the first time granted in Second Appeal was not interfered with by the Lordships of the Privy Council. I do not see sufficient reason to interfere with the discretion exercised by the lower Court in allowing this amendment. The Revision Petition fails and is dismissed. Costs to abide the result of the suit.

A. Petition dismissed.

(1) 100 Ind. Cas. 56; 52 M L J 402; 25 A L J 74; (1927) M W N 69; A I R 1927 P C 18; 8 P L T 98; 38 M L T 74; 31 C W N 409; 25 L W 635; 45 C L J 313; 29 Bom. L R 796; 6 Pat. 323 (P. C.)

(2) 57 Ind. Cas. 606; 48 C 110; 39 M L J 195; 28 M L T 149; 2 U P L R (P C) 124; 18 A L J 1095; 22 Bom. L R 1370; 47 I A 255; 13 L W 49; 25 C W N 289; 3 P W R 1921 (P. C.)

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 2493 of 1931

June 7, 1934

NASIM ALI, J.

HARIMOHAN—APPELLANT

versus

DULU MIYA—RESPONDENT

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 65—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 41—Fraud—Minor—No misrepresentation on part of minor when executing bond—Held, on facts that no fraud was committed and plaintiff was not entitled to return of his money.

Fraud operating to deceive must be found as a fact and whether in any particular case there was such fraud must depend on its own circumstances. It must be shown to the satisfaction of the Court by the party who alleges fraud that he was deceived into action by the fraud. Where it has not been found that, at the time when the minor executed the bond and received the money, he was aware that his minority was extended under the law nor has it been proved that he held himself out as being of age or that the plaintiff was deceived by any misrepresentation on his part, there is no fraud or misrepresentation on the part of the minor and the plaintiff is not entitled to return of his money either under s. 65, Contract Act, or under s. 41, Specific Relief Act:

Held, in the above case that even if it is permissible to maintain that the power to give equitable relief is more extensive in India than in England, in other words, that Courts in British India can give equitable relief apart from cases which do not come either under s. 65, Contract Act, or s. 41, Specific Relief Act, the plaintiff cannot get any relief in view of the findings of fact which have been arrived at

[English and Indian case-law reviewed.]

C. A. from appellate decree of the First Additional Sub-Judge, Noakhali, dated May 23, 1931.

Mr. Atulchandra Gupta and Jitendrakumar Sen Gupta for the Appellant.

Mr. Shyamaprasanna Deb, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff in a suit for recovery of money on a mortgage bond. The substantial defence of the defendant was that he was a minor at the time of the loan and as such plaintiff was not entitled to any relief. The Courts below have found that defendant No. 1 executed the mortgage bond and borrowed the money. It has been further found by the Courts below that defendant No. 1 was a minor at the time when the bond was executed and the money was advanced. The Courts below have also found that there had been no fraudulent misrepresentation on the part of defendant No. 1 about his age at the time when he executed the bond. On these findings the Courts below have dismissed the suit: Hence the present appeal by the plaintiff.

The first point urged on behalf of the appellant is that the finding of the lower Appellate Court, that there had been no fraud by the minor, is wrong inasmuch as it was the duty of the defendant to disclose to the plaintiff at the time of the transaction that his minority was extended by the appointment of a guardian under the Guardians and Wards Act. Reliance was placed on a decision of this Court in Surendra Nath Roy v. Krishna Sakhi Dasi 9 Ind. Cas. 110 (1), in support of this contention in Dhurmo Dass Ghose v. Brahmo Dutt (2), Jenkins, J., held that fraud operating to deceive must be found as a fact and whether in any particular case there was such fraud must depend on its own circumstances. It must be shown to the satisfaction of the Court by the party who alleges fraud that he was deceived into action by this fraud. In the present case, it has not been found that plaintiff was not aware of the minority of the defendant at the time of the transaction. On the other hand the finding of the lower Appellate Court is that from the circumstances of the case it was the duty of the creditor to have inquired about the minor at the time when the money was advanced. It has not been found also that at the time when the minor executed the bond and received the money he was aware that his minority was extended under the law. It has not been proved in this case that the defendant held himself out as being of age or that the plaintiff was deceived by any misrepresentation on the part of defendant No. 1. Under these circumstances the Courts below were right in holding that there had been no fraud or misrepresentation on the part of defendant No. 1. The next point urged in support of the appeal is that on the facts found by the Court below they should have held that the defendant was bound to make restitution to the plaintiff of the benefit received by him. It is argued that, as the minor received the money under the bond which is void, he is bound to return the money which he received from the plaintiff. It is now well-settled that a plaintiff cannot base his claim for restitution under s. 65, Contract Act; see the case of Mohori Bibi v. Dharmodass Ghose (3), Motilal Mansukhram v. Maneklal Dayabhai (4), and Punjabhai v. Bhagwandas Kishandas (5). The plaintiff is not also entitled to get any compensation under s. 41, Specific Relief Act. Section 41 embodies the equitable principle that he who seek equity must do equity:

"But a Court of Equity cannot say that it is equitable to compel a person to pay any moneys in respect of a transaction which as against that person the legislature has declared to be void. Thurstan v. Nottingham Permanent Benefit Building Society (6)"

This law has been affirmed by the House of Lords in Nottingham Permanent Benefit Building Society v. Thurstan (7), and by the Privy Council in Mohori Bibi v. Dharmodass Ghose (3). It was, however, argued on the authority of the latter decision Surendra Nath Roy v. Krishna Sakhi Dasi (1), that in a proper case the Court in the exercise of its discretion might require the minor to return the money advanced to him, under the provisions of s. 41, Specific Relief Act. In that case, however, the minor sought the equity. In the present case the minor does not invoke the aid of the equitable jurisdiction of the Court. Plaintiff, therefore, in my opinion, is not entitled to get any compensation under s. 41, Specific Relief Act. It was however, contended that defendant No. 1 was liable for damages in tort. But there can be no liability in tort in this case as the Courts below have negatived fraud on his part. Further you cannot convert a contract into a tort to enable you to sue an infant. Jennings v. Rundall (8), R Leslie, Limited v. Sheill (9). If the tort

(1) 9 Ind. Cas. 110; 15 C W N 239; 13 C L J 228.

(2) 25 C 616; 2 C W N 330.

(3) 30 C 539; 30 I A 114; 8 Sar. 374; 5 Bom. L R 421; 7 C W N 441 (P C).

(4) 59 Ind Cas. 245; A I R 1921 Bom. 147; 45 B 225; 12 L W 202; (1920) M W N 519; 39 M L J 319; 28 M L T 205.

(5) 117 Ind. Cas 518; A I R 1929 Bom. 89; 53 B 309; 31 Bom L R 83.

(6) (1902) 1 Ch. 1; 71 L J Ch. 83; 50 W R 179; 86 L T 35; 18 T L R 135.

(7) (1903) A C 6; 72 L J Ch 134; 67 J P 129; 51 W R 273.

(8) (1799) 8 Term 335.

(9) (1914) 3 K B 607; 83 L J K B 1145; 30 T L R 460; 58 S J 453; 111 L T 106.

is directly connected with the contract and is the means of effecting it and is a parcel of the same transaction, the minor is not liable in tort: see the case of Khan Gul v. Lakha Singh (10).

It is, however, contended by the appellant, on the authority of the above decision of the Full Bench of the Lahore High Court that the doctrine of restitution is not confined to cases under s. 41. It was contended that there was no warrant either in principle or in equity for the general rule that the relief should never be granted in a case where the infant happened to be a defendant. Shadi Lal, C. J., relied for this proposition on two cases: Stocks v. Wilson (11), and Cowern v. Nield (12). So far as the first case is concerned, it appears that the ground of the decision in that case was the English doctrine of following property. The decision of Shadi Lal, C. J., therefore, goes beyond the English doctrine. So far as the second case is concerned it would appear, from an examination of that case that the decision in that case ultimately rested on the principle that if there had been an independent tort, the action would succeed. Reliance was also placed upon a decision of the Madras High Court in Appaswami Ayyangar v. Narayanaswami Ayyar (13). In that case, however, the minor was the plaintiff. Consequently the provisions of s. 41, Specfic Relief Act, were directly attracted. On the other hand, Lord Sumner in the case of R. Leslie, Limited v. Sheill (9), observed as follows:

"So long ago as Johnson v. Pye (14) it was decided that although an infant may be liable in tort, generally he is not answerable for a tort directly connected with a contract which as an infant he would be entitled to avoid. One cannot make an infant liable for the breach of a contract by changing the form of action to one ex delicto .. . In the case of an infant it was held for a similar reason that he could not be made liable for a fraudulent representation that he was of full age whereby the plaintiff was induced to contract with him.. .. If the action should be maintainable all the pleas of infancy would be taken away for such affirmations are in every contract .....It was thought necessary to safeguard the weakness of infants at large even though here and there a juvenile knave slipped through .... I think that the whole current of decisions down to 1913 apart from dicta which are inconclusive went to show that when an infant obtained an advantage by falsely stating himself to be of full age, equity required him to restore his ill-gotten gains or to release the party deceived from obligations or acts in law induced by the fraud but scrupulously stopped short of enforcing against him a contractual obligation entered into while he was an infant even by means of a fraud. This applies even to In re King Ex parte Unity Joint Stock Mutual Banking Association (15). Restitution stopped where repayment began.....The money was paid over in order to be used as the defendant's own and he has so used it and I suppose spent it. There is no question of tracing it, no possibility of restoring the very thing got by the fraud noting but compulsion through a personal judgment to pay an equivalent sum out of his present or future resources, in a word nothing but a judgment in debt to re-pay the loan. I think this would be nothing but enforcing a void contract. So far as I can find, the Court of Chancery never would have enforced any liability under circumstances like the present any more than a Court of Law would have done so."

The principle of this decision was applied by the Judicial Committee to a case from the Straits Settlement where the minor mortgaged his property; see the case of Muhammad Syedal Ariffin v. Yeoh Ooi Gark (16). There cannot be any doubt, therefore, that defendant No. 1 cannot be compelled to refund the money which he obtained on the basis of the void contract. It may, however, be pointed out that in all these cases it was proved that the minor obtained the money by a fraudulent misrepresentation about his age. So far as the present case is concerned, I have already pointed out that the plaintiff has failed to show that there had been any fraud on the part of defendant No. 1. Reliance is also placed upon another equitable principle, namely, that no man can take advantage of his own fraud and consequently it was argued that the defendant was bound to return the money which he obtained from the plaintiff. In fact that is the principle on which Shadi Lal, C. J., proceeded in Khan Gul v. Lakha Singh (10). The same principle appears to have been applied in Dhurmo Dass Ghose v. Brahmo Dutt (2). Jenkins, J., in that case observed as follows:

"It is unquestionably within the power of the Court administering equitable principles to deprive a fraudulent minor of the benefits flowing from the plea of infancy but one who invokes the aid of that power must come to the Court with clean hands and must further establish to the satisfaction of the Court that a fraud was practised on him by the minor and that he was deceived into action by that fraud."

(10) 111 Ind. Cas. 175; A I R 1928 Lah. 609; 9 Lah. 701; 10 Lah. L J 413; 30 P L R 69 (F B).

(11) (1913) 2 K B 235; 82 L J K B 598; 108 L T 834; 20 Manson 129; 29 T L R 352.

(12) (1912) 2 K B 419; 81 L J K B 865; 106 L T 984; 56 S J 552; 28 T L R 423.

(13) 129 Ind. Cas. 51; A I R 1930 Mad. 945; 54 M L J 12; (1930) M W N 891; 32 L W 963; Ind. Rul. (1931) Mad. 195; 60 M L J 117.

(14) (1676) 1 Sid 258.

(15) (1858) 3 De & J 63; 27 L J B K 3?; 6 W R 640; 4 Jur. (N S) 1257.

(16) 39 Ind. Cas. 401; A I R 1916 P C 242; 43 I A 256; 21 C W N 257; (1917) M W N 162; 19 Bom. L R 157; (1916) 2 A C 575; 86 L J P C 15; 115 L T 564; 32 T L R 678 (P C).

It has been already pointed out that the plaintiff in this case has failed to show that really defendant No. 1 committed any fraud or that he has come to Court with clean hands. Under these circumstances even if it is permissible, in spite of the observation of the Judicial Committee in Muhammad Syedal Ariffin v. Yeoh Ooi (16), to maintain that the power to give equitable relief is more extensive in India than in England as has been held by the Lahore High Court in Khan Gul v Lakha Singh (10), or in other words that Courts in British India can give equitable relief apart from cases which do not come either under s. 65, Contract Act or s. 41, Specific Relief Act, plaintiff in the present case cannot get any relief in view of the findings of fact which have been arrived at by the Courts below. The Courts below, in my opinion, were, therefore, right in dismissing the plaintiff's suit. The appeal is accordingly dismissed. There will be, however, no order for costs.

D. Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 709 of 1931
May 18, 1934

ABDUL RASHID, J.

LAJPAT RAI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus
KARAM CHAND AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFF AND DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS

Custom (Punjab)—Adoption—Onus —Latest riwaj-i-am against adoption—Burden of proof—Riwaj-i-am of two years—Which prevails—Custom in same tribe, if varies according to localities — Adoption amongst Sainis of village Sharif Chak, Pathankot Tahsil in 1928.

Where the entries in the latest riwaj-i-am are against adoption, the onus lies heavily on the adopted son to prove that the custom of adoption existed amongst the Sainis of village Sharif Chak in Tahsil Pathankot in 1928 when he is alleged to have been adopted.

[Case-law referred to.]

Where the adoption takes place in 1928, the entries in the riwaj-i-ams of 1913 must govern the case and not those of the riwaj-i-am of 1865.

It is well established that different customs may prevail in the same tribe in different localities, and that custom cannot be extended by means of analogy.

Held, that it has not been established that the custom of adoption existed amongst the Sainis of village Sharif Chak in the Pathankot Tahsil in 1928 and even if a custom of adoption amongst the Sainis of Pathankot Tahsil be held to have existed, only a person who was below seven years of age or in any case had not yet attained the age of puberty could be validly adopted.

S. C. A. from the decree of the District Judge, Gurdaspur, dated February 14, 1931.

Mr. M. C. Mahajan for the Appellant.

Mr. J. L. Kapur for Mr. J. N. Aggarwal, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal arises out of suit brought by the plaintiff Karam Chand against Rattan Chand, defendant No. 1 and Lajpat Rai, defendant No. 2, for a declaration to the effect that the adoption of defendant No. 2 by defendant No. 1 was void, and that it shall not affect his reversionary rights on the death of defendant No. 1. The parties are Sainis of village Sharif Chak situated in Tahsil Pathankot, district Gurdaspur. The alleged adoption took place on July 12, 1928, when Rattan Chand gave a feast to the entire brotherhood and announced that he had adopted Lajpat Rai. This was followed by the execution of a formal deed of adoption by Rattan Chand on the August 11. Shortly afterwards Rattan Chand repudiated this adoption. Rattan Chand, defendant No. 1, supported the claim of the plaintiff, and stated that he was suffering from an acute attack of fever at the time he made the adoption in question, and that he was not in full possession of his senses when he was prevailed upon to execute the deed dated August 11. Lajpat Raj, the contesting defendant, pleaded, inter alia, that defendant No. 1, had adopted him after performing all the necessary ceremonies, that the custom of adoption existed among the Sainis and that the plaintiff was precluded from challenging the validity of the adoption as he took active part in the ceremonies connected with the adoption. The main contest between the parties centred round two points: (1) whether the adoption in question was valid according to the custom governing the parties, and (2) whether an adoption did in fact take place. The trial Court held that the factum of adoption had been conclusively established, and that though the custom of adoption may be said to be a dying custom among the Sainis as among many other important tribes in the Gurdaspur district, it could not be said that the custom had entirely disappeared at the time when the adoption in question took place. On these findings the suit of the plaintiff was dismissed. The plaintiff preferred an appeal and the learned District Judge held that the adoption did in fact take place and a feast was given by Rattan Chand to the whole brotherhood to give publicity to the adoption. On the question of custom, the lower Appellate Court found that amongst the Sainis of Pathankot Tahsil the custom of adoption did not exist in 1928, and in any case as defendant Nos. 2 was 22 years of age at the time of the adoption, his adoption was opposed to the custom that prevailed even before 1928. The appeal was, therefore, accepted and the plaintiff's claim was decreed. Lajpat Rai, defendant, has now preferred a second appeal to this Court on the strength of the certificate granted to him by the learned District Judge.

The earliest available record of the custom of adoprion in Tahsil Pathankot consists of the entries in the Riwaj-i-am of the district of Gurdaspur compiled at the settlement of 1865. According to the Riwaj-i-am a sonless Saini proprietor in the Pathankot Tahsil could adopt from amongst his collaterals a child of tender age who may not be more than seven years old. So far as the Tahsils of Shakargarh and Batala were concerned, there was no restriction with regard to the age of the person to be adopted. In the Gurdaspur Tahsil a boy could be adopted only if his age at the time of adoption did not exceed five years. It must be remembered that in spite of the fact that the custom of adoption prevailed amongst the Sainis of the tahsils of Batala, Gurdaspur and Shakargarh generally, the custom was different so far as the age of the adoptee was concerned. The entries in the Riwaj-i-am of 1865 were reported in the Riwaj-i-am compiled in 1893. The existence of the custom among the Sainis was not denied, but it was mentioned in the Riwaj-i-am that the adoptee must be an agnate of an age less than five or eight years, and that in any case he must be adopted before he attained the age of puberty. It was further mentioned that the Muhammadan Gujars of Tahsil Gurdaspur and Mughals and Sayyeds of Tahsil Batala stated that there was no custom of adoption amongst them.

Coming to the Riwaj-i-am of 1913, we find that the Sainis of Pathankot stated that the custom of adoption did not exist among them. The same reply was also give by Muhammadan Rajputs, Gujars, Sayyeds, Hindus and Muhammadan jats and Labanas. In the Appendix E at pp. 76 to 79 a large number of instances of adoption were given but not a single instance of adoption from among Saini of Pathankot Tahsil finds a place amongst these numerous instances. In view of these entries in the latest Riwaj-i-am the onus lay heavily on the appellant to prove that the custom of adoption existed amongst the Sainis of village Sharif Chak in Tahsil Pathankot in 1928 when he is alleged to have been adopted by Rattan Chand.

It was contended that the presumption of correctness regarding the question of custom in the circumstances of this case attaches to the Riwaj-i-ams of 1865 and 1893, and the onus of proving that the custom which existed in 1865 and 1893 had been abrogated or given up by the Sainis of the Pathankot Tahsil ought to have been placed in the plaintiff. Reliance was placed in this connection on Pholo v. Nauwardhan (1) and Fazali Husain v. Tafazil Husain (2). The soundness of the view taked in Pholo v. Nauwardhan (1), has been considerably shaken by the observations made in Sardar Shah v. Sardar Begam (3), and Bhag Singh v. Jai Singh (4), Fazali Husain v. Tafazil Husain (2) is distinguishable as in that case succession had opened out before 1910, and it was observed that the entries made in the subsequent Riwaj-i-ams of 1911 and 1912 might have some evidentiary value, but this value would be very low as the custom to be ascertained was that existing in 1910 and not in subsequent years. Reliance was, therefore, placed on the entries in the Riwaj-i-ams of 1865 and 1892. In the present instances the adoption took place in 1928, and obviously the entries in the Riwaj-i ams of 1913 must govern the case.

The learned District Judge has written a very careful and exhaustive judgment, and as I find myself in agreement with his conclusions, it is unnecessary to discuss the evidence in any great detail. The documentary evidence consists of eight instances. Five of these instances relate to the Sainis of Shakargarh Tahsil, while two instances concern the Sainis of Gurdaspur Tahsil. The appellant cannot derive any assistance from those instances as the question for determination is whether the custom of adoption exists amongst the Sainis of Pathankot Tahsil. It was contended by the learned Counsel for the appellant that the evidence produced by the plaintiff shows that the custom regarding adoption in the Gurdaspur district was a

(1) 84 Ind. Cas. 507; A I R 1925 Lah. 206; 5 Lah 409.

(2) 136 Ind. Cas 515; A I R 1932 Lah. 222; 13 Lah. 410; 33 P L R 105; Ind. Rul. (1932) Lah. 225.

(3) 113 Ind. Cas. 44; A I R 1928 Lah. 893; 10 Lah 531.

(4) 116 Ind. Cas. 903; A I R 1929 Lah. 318; 10 Lah 694; 30 P L R 750.

tribal custom and was not a local custom. A large number of witnesses produced by the plaintiff deposed that no custom of adoption prevailed amongst the Sainis of Gurdaspur district and in cross-examination they stated that the same custom prevailed throughout the district. The Learned Counsel urged that in view of the admission made in cross-examination by the witnesses for the plaintiff, if it were found that the custom of adoption existed in Sharkargarh and Gurdaspur Tahsils it must be held that such custom prevailed in Tahsil Pathankot also. I cannot uphold this contention. All the witnesses for the plaintiff deny the existence of the custom in Tahsil Pathankot, and their depositions to the effect that the custom does not prevail in any of the Tahsils of the Gurdaspur district cannot be taken to mean that if the custom prevails in Gurdaspur and Shakargarh Tahsils, it prevails in Pathankot Tahsil also. It is well established that different customs may prevail in that same tribe in different localities, and that custom cannot be extended by means of analogy. The eighth instance (Ex. D 16) relates to Kalesar village, Pathankot Tahsil. The facts with respect to this instance are that one Hira died in 1904 and on his death his widow Musammat Premi succeded to his estate. In 1916 Musammat Premi gifted the land to Behari, alleging that he was the adopted son of her husband. Behari has appeared as a witness and has stated that though his adoptive mother gifted certain land to him in 1916, yet subsequently he gave a portion of it to his brother. This instance is not of any great value because if Hira had adopted Behari then the land ought to have been mutated in the name of Behari in 1904 and the widow would not have been entitled to a life estate till 1916. This exhausts the documentary evidence produced by the appellant and I am of the opinion that by the production of this evidence he has not succeeded in discharging the onus that lay heavily on him. The oral evidence produced by both the parties is far too vague and inconclusive to be of any assistance in the determination of the question of custom involved in this case. I, therefore, hold that it has not been established that the custom of adoption did exist amongst the Sainis of village Sharif Chak in the Pathankot Tahsil in 1928.

In all the instances of adoption proved by the defendant, the adoptees were adopted while they were infants, and there is not a single instance in which a grown-up man may have been adopted. It was observed in Budh Singh v. Mula Singh (5), that restrictions in the Riwaj-i am with respect to the age of the adoptee were of a recommendatory and not of a mandatory nature. In that case, however, the instances produced by the parties did not contain any mention of the age of the adoptees. In the present case there is not a single instance in which the age of the adoptee has not been prominently mentioned. The restrictions regarding the age of the adoption have been repeated in all the three settlements, and I am, therefore, of the opinion that if a custom of adoption amongst the Sainis of Pathankot Tahsil be held to have existed, only a person who was below seven years of age or in any case had not yet attained the age of puberty, could be validly adopted.

The learned District Judge has remarked that the parties are agreed that this is not a case of adoption under Hindu Law. Moreover, it has not been established that all the ingredients of a valid adoption under Hindu Law were fulfilled in the present instance. The appellant Lajpat Rai never resided with his adoptive father either before the adoption or afterwards. The adoption was repudiated by Rattan Chand only two months after it had taken place and there is no evidence that even during those two months Lajpat Rai was treated as an adopted son by Rattan Chand.

For the reasons given above, I affirm the judgment and the decree of the learned District Judge, and dismiss this appeal with costs.

D. Appeal dismissed.

(5) 40 P R 1905; 18 P L R 1905; 46 P W R 1905.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Civil Revision Petition No. 166 of 1934

February 12, 1935

MIDDLETON, J. C. AND MIR AHMAD, A. J. C.

ABDULLAH KHAN—PETITIONER

versus

BAHRAM KHAN—RESPONDENT

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Sch. II; paras. 14, 15, 21, s. 104 (f)—Power of Appellate Court to go into question indicated by para. 14 or para. 15—Decree in terms of award—Whether should bear same date as order filing award — Arbitrator—Private inquiries made but award based on documentary evidence—Award, if vitiated — Interpretation of Statutes—Title and preamble—Enacting part not ambiguous—Whether can be restricted by title and preamble—Transfer of Property Act (Amendment) Supplementary Act (XXI of 1929), s. 10—Whether in force in North-West Frontier Province—Award —Statement in award creating new right in party— Award, if compulsorily registrable—Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 7 (1) (c).

The words of the first part of para. 21, Sch. II, Civil Procedure Code, clearly imply that proof of the existence of any ground such as is mentioned or referred to in para. 14 or para. 15 is a bar which prevents the Court from ordering that the award be filed. Hence it cannot be held that proof in respect of these grounds should be taken after the order for filing. It follows that s. 104 (f) of the Code empowers the Appellate Court not only to go into the question of the existence of the reference and of the award, but also to go into questions such as are indicated by para. 14 or para. 15. There is nothing in the Code which necessitates the decree bearing the same date as the order filing the award, and one effect of these provisions is that it settles the date for the purpose of limitation of appeal; another effect is that if the trial Court disobeys the direction given in cl. (1) of para. 21 and pronounces judgment in excess of or not in accordance with the award, there will be a remedy by an appeal from the decree as distinct from the appeal against the filing. [p. 1024, col. 2.]

Although it is true that an arbitrator cannot import his own knowledge into a case, or base his decision upon information obtained otherwise than from the evidence submitted to him by the parties, unless permitted to do so by the terms of reference, yet when there is a concurrent finding that the private inquiries made by the arbitrator did not affect the award and the award itself shows that the arbitrators were not impressed even by the oral evidence which was given before them on behalf of the parties and based their award purely on documentary evidence and upon two statements made upon oath, it cannot be held, that the private inquries affected the form or substance of the award in any way and in such a case no interference in revision is called for. [p. 1025, col. 1.]

The title and preamble of a statute may be relied upon as aids to the understanding of the meaning thereof, or for determining the general object and intention of the legislature in passing the enactment. They may legitimately be consulted for the purpose of solving any ambiguity, or for fixing the meaning of words which may have more than one meaning, or for keeping the effect of the Act within its real scope, but with the important proviso that this can only be done when the enacting part is open to doubt in any of these respects. When the language, object and the scope of the Act are not open to doubt, the enacting part cannot be restricted, extended or modified by reference either to the title or preamble. There is no authority for the suggestion that the preamble of an Act is exhaustive; it cannot be questioned that there are many Acts wherein a particular mischief or inconvenience is recited in the preamble, but in which the provisions extend far beyond that particular mischief or inconvenience. The evil recited may be the chief motive for the legislation, but the remedy may consistently and wisely be extended beyond the cure of that evil. [p. 1025, col. 2; p. 1026, col. 1.]

The general rule is that an amending Act, unless otherwise stated, is territorially co-extensive with the Act which it amends, and Act XXI of 1929 does not provide any exception to the general rule. As s. 10 of Act XXI of 1929 amends the Registration Act which is in force in North-West Frontier Province, s. 10 of Act XXI of 1929 is also in force in North-West Frontier Province. [p 1026, col. 1.]

A mere statement of fact by a party to an instrument would obviously have no effect upon legal relations, but a similar statement in an award by arbitrators regarding a point in dispute between the parties does affect the legal relationship; in the first case it is a mere admission of an undisputed fact; in the second case, it is a decision and a finding upon a fact which is disputed. Where a clause in an award creates a new right in a party, it is a declaration within the meaning of s. 17 (1) (c), Registration Act and the award is compulsorily registrable. [p. 1026, col. 2.]

C. R. P. of the order and decree of the District Judge, Peshawar, dated January 6, 1931, whereby the order passed on the basis of an award by the Sub-Judge, First Class, Charsadda, dated November 24, 1933.

Sardar Raja Singh, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Saaduddin, K. B. for the Respondent.

Judgment.—In this case an award was made on a reference to arbitration without the intervention of the Court, and the respondent applied for the filing of the award in Court under the provisions of para. 20 of Sch. II, Civil Procedure Code. By a single order under para. 21 the trial Court, after considering objections made by the petitioner, ordered the award to be filed and pronounced judgment in accordance with the award and also passed a decree in accordance therewith. The petitioner appealed unsuccessfully and now comes up in revision.

The petitioner's objections to the order filing the award and granting the decree which have been repeated in arguments before us are :—

(1) That the award was compulsorily registerable, and not having been registered, could not be considered or incorporated in a decree.

(2) That one of the arbitrators was guilty of misconduct vitiating the award in that he made inquiries into the matters at issue between the parties.

A third objection regarding the amount of stamp upon the petition for filing the award, though made in both the lower Courts, has been dropped in revision; another objection entered in the grounds of the revision petition concerning alleged misconduct of the arbitrators, apart from the making of a private inquiry, has not been argued before us.

Before considering these objections, we must deal with a point of preliminary nature, taken on behalf of the respondent, which concerns theconstruction to be placed upon para. 21 of the Schedule. The paragraph is divided into two parts, the first laying down that the trial Court must be satisfied that the matter has been referred to arbitration and that the award has been made, and also that no ground such as is mentioned in para. 14 or para. 15 is proved before the Court should order the award to be filed. This part further directs that once an order filing the award is passed, the Court shall proceed to pronounce judgment according to the award. The second part merely lays down that a decree shall follow and that no appeal shall lie therefrom except in so far as it is in excess of, or not in accordance with, the award. Section 104 (f) Civil Procedure Code, provides for an appeal against an order filing an award in arbitration without the intervention of the Court Counsel argues that the provisions allowing an appeal against the order filing the award disallowing an appeal against the decree, which follows it and is in accordance with it, are inconsistent unless different considerations arise in deciding whether an award should be filed and in deciding whether a decree should be passed in accordance therewith. He suggests that the Court is only empowered to determine whether there has been a reference to arbitration and whether there has been an award before directing it to be filed, and that thereafter the Court should go into any proof which may be preferred in respect of grounds referred to in paras. 14 and 15. According to the view put forward by him, there should be two separate orders, one directing the award to be filed and the second pronouncing judgment, whilst between these two orders there should be consideration of any proof which may be offered regarding alleged invalidity of the award on grounds such as those in paras. 14 and 15.

In our opinion the amalgamation of the order filing the award and pronouncing judgment does not affect this point. The matter came before the Punjab Chief Court in Ramditti v Amar Singh (1) the majority of the Judges held that s. 104 (f) having clearly given a right of appeal, the later provision in para. 21 (2) of Sch. II did not cancel that provision. They held that the two provisions were not antagonistic and that if the order filing the award was set aside on appeal, there would be no award on which judgment and decree could be based. They further held that the absence of any ground such as is mentioned or referred to in para. 14 or para. 15 of Sch. II is a condition precedent to passing an order filing the award. Rattigan, J., however, in dissenting judgment held that the two provisions of the Code were in direct conflicting and that the allowing of an appeal from the order filing the award was tantamount to allowing an appeal from the decree based on the award. We are in agreement with Counsel when he says that interpretation of ambiguous portions of the law should be made where possible so as to avoid inconsistency, but we are firmly of the opinion that his suggested solution in the present case is not tenable ; the words of the first part of para. 21 clearly imply that proof of the existence of any ground such as is mentioned or referred to in para. 14 or para. 15 is a bar which prevents the Court from ordering that the award be filed ; hence it is impossible to hold that proof in respect of these grounds should be taken after the order for filing. It follows then that s. 104(f) of the Code empowers the Appellate Court not only to go into the question of the existence of the reference and of the award, but also to go into questions such as are indicated by para. 14 or para. 15. We do not consider that this interpretation leads to any inconsisteney. There is nothing in the Code which necessitates the decree bearing the same date as the order filing the award, and one effect of the provisions which have been discussed is that it settles the date for the purpose of limitation of appeal ; another effect is that if the trial Court disobeys the direction given in cl. (1) of the para. 91 and pronounces judgment in excess of or not in accordance with the award, there will be a remedy by an appeal from the decree as distinct from the appeal against the filing. We hold then that an appeal was competent in respect of grounds mentioned in para. 14 and para. 15, and in this particular case, an appeal was competent :—

(1) on account of the allegation regarding non-registration which was apparent upon the face of the award and falls under para. 14 (c), and

(2) in respect of the objection regarding misconduct of an arbitrator which falls under para. 15 (a).

(1) 10 Ind. Cas. 512; 172 P L R 1911; 103 P W R 1911; 123 P R 1911.

The second of these points does not need prolonged discussion. Counsel for the petitioner has cited Abdul Hamid v. Muhammad Afzal (2) and Ganga Sahai v. Badleo Singh, 65 Ind. Cas. 779 (3) in support of his contention that private inquiries by one of the arbitrators will vitiate the award. These rulings, however, as well as similar rulings of other High Courts in India really lay down the modified principle that an arbitrator cannot import his own knowledge into a case, or base his decision upon information obtained otherwise than from the evidence submitted to him by the parties, unless permitted to do so by the terms of reference. In the present case there is a concurrent finding of the Courts below that the private inquiries made by the arbitrator did not affect the award. In fact the award itself shows that the arbitrators were not impressed even by the oral evidence which was given before them on behalf of the parties and based their award purely on documentary evidence and upon two statements made upon oath. In these circumstances we are unable to consider that the private inquiries affected the form or substance of the award in any way, and see no reason for interference upon this ground.

We now come to the most important point in the case, namely, whether the award was compulsorily registrable and could, therefore, not be considered or filed by the trial Court. The lower Appellate Court mentioned an amendment in s. 17 (2) (vi) of the Registration Act, but discussed the question as though it were governed by s. 17 (1) (b) without referring to s. 17 (1) (e). Section 17 (1) (e) was added and s. 17 (2) (vi) was amended by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act XXI of 1929 and it is upon s. 17 (1) (e) that Counsel for the petitioner bases his contention. In the first place he is met by the argument that Act XXI of 1929 is not in force in this Province.

The Transfer of Property Act, 1882, has never been applied to this Province; that Act was amended by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act, 1929 (XX of 1929) which received the assent of the Governor-General upon October 1, 1929. Act XXI of 1929 received the assent of the Governor-General on October 4, 1929, and as its title implies, was enacted in connection with the enactment of Act XX of 1929. An examination of its provisions shows that it does not amend either the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, or Act XX of 1929 in any respect; it does, however, amend many other Acts including the Indian Registration Act. It is argued that Act XXI being supplementary to Act XX, which amended an Act not applying to this Province, cannot itself apply to this Province.

Learned Counsel for the respondent urges that all Acts include a preamble and a title, the former giving reasons of the Legislature for the enactment and the latter determining its scope, and adds that in all substantive Acts the extent of the operation is also given. He lays down that a clause defining the extent of operation is never omitted except in Amending Acts in which it is unnecessary, as the extent of operation will be found in the Acts (which are amended thereby). He suggets the word "supplementary" has never been applied to an Act either in Great Britain or India prior to the passage of Act XXI of 1929. He quotes Stout's Judicial Dictionary for the proposition that a deed described as being "supplementary" to another deed takes effect as though it had been endorsed upon that original deed. By analogy he suggests that a "supplementary" Act takes effect as though it were part of the Act which it supplements. By this line of argument he wishes us to conclude that Act XXI of 1929 is territorially limited in the same way as Act XX of 1929 and, therefore, in the same way as the Transfer of Property Act of 1882.

We are in agreement with the general proposition that the title and preamble of a statute may be relied upon as aids to the understanding of the meaning thereof, or for determining the general object and intention of the Legislature in passing the enactment. We do not negative the proposition that the title and preamble may legitimately be consulted for the purpose of solving any ambiguity, or for fixing the meaning of words which may have more than one, or for keeping the effect of the Act within its real scope, but with the important proviso that this can only be done when the enacting part is open to doubt in any of these respects.

We are, however, clear that when the language, object and the scope of the Act are not open to doubt, the enacting part cannot be restricted, extended or modified by reference either to the title or preamble. We can find no authority for the suggestion that the preamble of an Act is exhaustive: it cannot be questioned that there are many Acts wherein a particular mischief or inconvenience is recited in the preamble, but in which the provisions extend far beyond that particular mischief or inconvenience. The evil recited may be the chief motive for the legislation, but the remedy may consistenly and wisely be extended beyond the cure of that evil.

(2) 101 Ind. Cas 153; A I R 1927 Lah. 425; 8 Lah. 329; 9 Lah. L J 218; 28 P L R 425.
(3) 65 Ind. Cas. 779; 20 A L J 117.

In Act XXI of 1929, s. 10 is an enacting section in which we can find no ambiguity and hence in construing that section we do not need to refer either to the title or to the preamble.

Neither are we impressed by the analogy of the use of the word "supplementary" when applied to deeds. We have already pointed out that Act XXI of 1929 does not amend a single provision either of Act XX of 1929, or of the Transfer of Property Act of 1882, which Acts are not in force in this Province, but that on the contrary, it does amend numerous Acts which are in force in this Province. The general rule undoubtedly is that an Amending Act, unless otherwise stated, is territorially coextensive with the Act which it amends. We can find no reason for thinking that Act XXI of 1929 provides any exception to this general rule. Section 10 thereof amends the Indian Registration Act, the Indian Registration Act is in force in this Province, and hence we are satisfied that s. 10 of Act XXI of 1929 is also in force in this Province. Section 10 adds s. 17 (1) (e) to the Registration Act, the relevant portion of which is as follows:—

"Any award which purports or operates to create, declare, assign, limit or extinguish, whether in present or in future, any right, title or interest, whether vested or contingent, of the value of Rs. 100 and upwards to or in immovable property shall be registered."

Learned Counsel for the petitioner has argued that the award in the present case is one both creating and declaring rights and interests of this nature. The dispute referred to the arbitrators concerned the ownership of 16 mianas. The award sets forth that except during the last 2½ years the respondent has always held possession of these mianas and is evidently the owner thereof; it, however, lays down that on account of the disputes which have arisen and in order to satisfy the other party, he should pay Rs. 300 to the petitioner within one year, failing which the petitioner shall be deemed to be the owner of three out of the 16 mianas. Both the Courts below have regarded this as being a mere statement of the fact of previous ownership of the respondent and as involving no change of ownership or possession.

Learned Counsel for the respondent has urged that the word "declare" in s. 17 (1) (e) must be limited in its meaning by the principle of ejusdem generis and must be taken as implying a definite change of legal relation to the property. The doctrine on which he relies is mentioned on page 35 of the second edition of D. F. Mulla's Commentary on the Indian Registration Act.

A mere statement of fact by a party to an instrument would obviously have no effect upon legal relations, but a similar statement in an award by arbitrators regarding a point in dispute between the parties does affect the legal relationship; in the first case, it is a mere admission of an undisputed fact in the second case, it is a decision and a finding upon a fact which is disputed. The statement in the award that the 16 mianas do belong to the respondent may in the future constitute a title deed for the respondent. We need not labour the point further and it must be held to be a "declaration" of the nature referred to in s. 17 (1) (e). There is also the further clause in the award which must be considered, by which unless the respondent pays Rs. 300 to the petitioner, the latter will become owner of three of the mianas. This clause creates a new right in favour of the petitioner which is apparently of the value of Rs. 300, a right in the nature of a mortgage with a limited period for redemption. Learned Counsel for the respondent has sought to evade consideration of this clause by suggesting that it is not the "operative" part of the award, a form of words which we do not find convincing.

We thus come to the findings that the award in this case was one which is compulsorily registerable under s. 17 (1) (e) of the Indian Registration Act which has been applied to this Province by the enactment of Act XXI of 1929. Accordingly we find that the trial Court was debarred by s. 49 of the Indian Registration Act from ordering the award to be filed and thereby causing it to affect the immovable property to which it refers. The Courts below have, therefore, committed a material irregularity. We accept the petition for revision and set aside the order directing the award to be filed in Court, and grant costs in favour of the petitioner-defendant throughout.

N. Petition accepted.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 2131 of 1931
May 31, 1934
NASIM ALI, J.

PURNA CHANDRA CHAUDHURY—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus
SAROJINI CHAUDHURANI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 16—Pardanashin lady—No domination of will—Held, relationship was not unequal—Pardanashin lady intelligent—Relations to assist her—Held, there was independent advice—Plea of unfair transaction must be specifically raised in plaint—Subsequent events should not be considered while considering whether transaction is fair or not—Practice—Duty of Court—Plaintiff's case rejected—Court, if can proceed on equitable grounds to grant relief without considering risk taken by defendant.

Where the relationship of the transferee with the transferor, who is a pardanashin lady was not such as would enable him to dominate the will of the transferor and the pardanashin lady was intelligent and was not difficult for her to understand the transaction and the nature and effect of the transaction upon her interest in the property and further she had her father, brother and intelligent neighbours to assist her in the matter:

Held, that it could not be said that the relation between the parties at the time of the transaction was such as to suggest that they were not on equal terms and it could not also be said that she had no independent advice.

If a transaction is attacked on the ground that the transaction was not a fair transaction at all, the party attacking ought to make a specific case in the plaint and ought to join an issue on the point in order to enable the other party to show that the transaction was not an unfair one.

Whether the transaction is one that should be set aside as inequitable would depend upon the circumstances at the time when it was made and not upon subsequent events. Ganga Bakhsh v. Jagat Bahadur Singh (3), relied on.

The Court is not justified in rejecting practically the whole of the plaintiff's case as made out in the plaint and then proceeding to give her some relief on equitable grounds without taking into consideration the risk which the defendant was taking in this transaction.

O. A. from the appellate decree of the Sub-Judge, Dinajpur, dated April 20, 1931.

Messrs. S. C. Basak and Gopendra Nath Das, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Rajendra Chandra Guha, Nalini Kumar Mukherjee and Mahendra Kumar Ghose, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is an appeal by the defendant in a suit for a declaration that the darpatni patta granted by the plaintiff to the defendant is invalid and inoperative and for a permanent injunction restraining the defendant from taking possession of the property leased out by the darpatni patta. The plaintiff's case briefly stated is as follows: Jadab Chandra Chowdhuri, the plaintiff's husband, died in 1323 B. S. leaving two widows, the plaintiff and Indurekha and a daughter by Indurekha who has been married to one Ghanashyam. Indurekha subsequently died, consequently the plaintiff became the 16 annas malik of the property left by her husband. One of the preperties left by her husband is Jalkar which was acquired by the plaintiff's husband on payment of Rs. 1,000 as Nazar on an annual rental of Rs. 180. After the death of the plaintiff's husband the plaintiff and her co-wife Indurekha were in possession of all the properties left by her husband. Ghanashyam managed these properties after the death of the plaintiff's husband. After the death of Indurekha in 1332 B. S. Ghanashyam went to Gaya to perform her sradh. At that time the plaintiff was in her father's house. During the absence of Ghanashyam the defendant, who is a cousin of her late husband, proposed to the plaintiff that he should be made her Ammukhtear to realize the income from the Jalkar.

The plaintiff at first suggested that the matter should be postponed till the return of Ghanashyam as her father was insane and unfit to advise her in the matter. The defendant, however, told the plaintiff that the matter did not admit of any delay and that there was no harm in giving him an Ammnkhternama as she would thereby get rents without any trouble. The plaintiff being an ignorant, illiterate pardanashin woman ultimately agreed to the proposal. The defendant thereupon brought the plaintiff to Dinajpur on the second Aghrayan and took her to the house of a stranger, produced a document previously prepared and took her thumb impression thereon. The plaintiff did not receive any consideration for the lease. The defendant then took her back to her father's village and left her at her father's house. The plaintiff's son-in-law Ghanashyam, on his return from Gaya, came to see her and the plaintiff related the whole thing to him. Thereupon he became anxious to know the nature of the document and went to the defendant and demanded to see the document. The defendant however refused to shew him the document. Thereafter Ghanashyam came to Dinajpur and took a copy of the document from the Registrar's office. The plaintiff then came to know that the defendant, in order to get the whole of her valuable property, had practised a fraud upon her and had got a darpatni lease fraudulently executed by her.

The plaintiff never agreed to settle the Jalkar in darpatni right with the defendant at an annual rental of Rs. 200 with a salami of Rs. 425. The darpatni patta was never read over and explained to her. The plaintiff had not any opportunity of consulting her well wishers and near relations. She did not receive a single pice as nazar for the darpatni lease. The defendant taking advantage of the ignorance and helpless condition of the plaintiff got fraudulently the darpatni lease registered by undue influence. The recitals in the patta about the plaintiff's ill-feeling with her son-in-law and about her being deprived of the income of her husband's property left by her husband were falsely made in order to secure the darpatni lease of the plaintiff's valuable property at a nominal rent. The darpatni lease is therefore absolutely void and the plaintiff is in possession of the property as before. The plaintiff is therefore entitled to get a declaration from the Court that the darpatni patta is null and void.

The defence of the defendant in substance is that the plaintiff has executed the darpatni of her own free will on receipt of a salami of Rs. 425, that the darpatni lease was for a consideration and was not obtained by fraud, misrepresentation or undue influence, that as a matter of fact the plaintiff on the death of her husband lived for some time in her husband's house and during that time Ghanashyam gradually got hold of her entire property left by her husband, and in 1916 B. S. during the minority of the plaintiff got certain kobalas of certain Jotee executed in favour of his son, that the plaintiff being unable to stay on there on account of the oppressions of Ghanashyam and her mother-in-law Indurekha left her husband's house and came to live at her father's house, that Ghanashyam never gave anything to the plaintiff for her maintenance. It was alleged by the defendant that as the plaintiff was getting no income from her husband's property, and as she was completely dispossessed of her husband's estate, she of her own accord, in consultation with her father and near relations, granted the darpatni lease, and that Ghanashyam finding that the darpatni lease would be binding against his sons, that is the reversionary heirs, had got the suit instituted. The defendant also pleaded that the selami mentioned in the darpatni patta was paid to the plaintiff before the Registrar and that the document was read over and explained to her before execution.

The learned Munsif who tried the suit found that at the time of the lease the plaintiff was not on good terms with Ghanashyam, and that she was really kept out of possession of the property left by her husband, that Bhabananda, the plaintiff's father, was insane, and that the document was never explained to her before execution. The learned Munsif also found that the plaintiff did not know the difference between a darpatni lease and an ammukhternama and that it was doubtful whether the selami money which was brought before the Sub-Registrar and paid to her in the presence of the Sub-Registrar actually remained with her. The learned Munsif further held that even if the consideration had been paid, it was an unfair bargain. He accordingly decreed the suit.

On appeal by the defendant to the lower Appelate Court the learned Judge has found that there was no talk about an ammukhtearnama, that no influence was acquired or abused by the defendant Purna, that no confidence was reposed in or betrayed by him, that the plaintiff contracted to grant the defendant darpatni lease and that she accordingly executed the patta with full knowledge and understanding of what she was about to do and that she had it registered. The learned Judge has further found that she was not living in her husband's house but was living with her father who was maintaining her with great difficulty and that it was natural for the plaintiff and her father to dispose of some property to relieve the plaintiff from the distress to a certain extent to fight Ghanashyam who had usurped the whole inheritance. The learned Judge was also of opinion that though there was no direct evidence that the plaintiff had independent and disinterested advice in the matter, she had her father, brother and intelligent neighbours to assist her and as she was in need of money, she was willing to part with a portion of the property to get some money in cash and something like an annuity. The learned Judge however, was not satisfied that the bargain was fair. He was also of opinion that it was the duty of the defendant to disclose the real income of the property at the time when the terms of the lease were settled. In this view of the matter the learned Judge allowed the appeal in part and passed the following decree:

"That on the plaintiff's paying into the lower Court to the credit of the defendant Rs. 425 within a month from date with interest at 6 per cent. per annum from 2nd Aghrayan 1332 B S to the date of the payment the decree will stand good. In default it will be regarded as reversed and the suit dismissed. As both sides are to blame there will be no costs to either side in any Court"

Hence the present appeal by the defendant. There is, however, no cross-objection by the plaintiff. The learned Advocate for the appellant contends that on the facts found by the lower Appellate Court it should have dismissed the plaintiff's suit. In my judgment this contention must prevail. From what has been stated above it is clear that the allegations in the plaint on which the plaintiff claimed relief had been disbelieved by the lower appellate Court. The effect of the finding of the lower Appellate Court is that the plaintiff understood the transaction and that she had full knowledge of the nature and effect of the document she executed in favour of the defendant. In other words the judgment of the lower appellate Court clearly shows that the disposition made by the plaintiff was substantially understood and that it was really her mental act as the execution of the document was her physical act. It was contended by the learned Advocate for the respondent on the authority of the decision of the Judicial Committee in Tara Kumari v. Chandra Mauleshwar Proshad Singh (1), that it was the duty of the defendant to disclose to the plaintiff the real income of the property at the time when the salami and the rent were settled and if knowledge had been kept from her by the defendant the transaction should not stand as equity and good conscience had always been the pillars of administration of justice in India. The learned Advocate for the respondent drew my attention to the following passage in the above decision:

"If knowledge had been kept from her by the creditor, if there was any ground for suspicion that he was over-reaching her, if she had no independent advice, and the relations between them were such as to suggest that they were not on equal terms, it would be impossible for a Court to affirm with any certainty that had she known the full truth, as she was entitled to know it, she would have completed the transaction. It would only be upon this hypothesis that the lady could be held bound by the mortgages though not by the accounts. It is no doubt impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule for such cases, each must depend upon its own facts and the dividing line may often be difficult to draw There is no doubt, their Lordships think as to the principle to be applied. They are not merely deductions from the law as to undue influence which finds a place in s. 16, Contract Act, as has been suggested by Counsel for the respondent. They are founded upon the wider basis of equity and good conscience which have always been pillars of the administration of justice in India."

The facts of the case which was before their Lordships would go to show that the person who obtained the document (that is the mortgagee) from the pardanashin lady was her creditor, that the accounts upon which the mortgage was based had not been explained to her and that various items were included in the mortgage for which the lady was not at all liable. In this case it was suggested by the plaintiff that the defendant was a relation of the plaintiff and that taking advantage of her relationship, the defendant went to the plaintiff and proposed to save her from the clutches of Ghanashyam, and as the plaintiff had no good feeling towards Ghanashyam, she readily accepted the proposal. The learned Judge, however, has recorded the following finding in this connection;

"In 1314 B. S. or thereabout Jadab and his cousin, Purna, who were joint in property, divided the joint property. Thereafter and before Jadab's death there were disputes among them. Some time before his death Jadab removed from the ancestral home in Bonhara to Balahar where Indurekha's father lived. Sarojini was about 26-27 years of age at the time of the trial. It is her deposition that Purna did not look after her after her husband's death. She was a mere child when Purna and Jadab separated. It does not appear that there was any association between her and Purna and they knew one another by appearance before the proposal about the disputed transaction."

From this finding of the learned Judge it is clear that the relationship of the defendant with the plaintiff was not such as would enable him to dominate the will of the plaintiff. Under such circumstances it cannot be said that the relation between the parties at the time of the transaction was such as to suggest that they were not on equal terms. It was, however contended by the learned Advocate for the respondent that in this case the plaintiff had no independent advice. The learned Judge has however negatived the plaintiff's case on this point. The following observations were made by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Kali Baksh

(1) 134 Ind. Cas. 1076; A I R 1931 P C 303; 58 I A 450; 8 O W N 1053; 34 L W 821; 54 C L J 431; Ind. Rul. (1932) P C 1; (1931) A L J 1143; 35 C W N 165; 62 M L J 60; (1932) M W N 136; 34 Bom. L R 222; 11 Pat. 237; 13 P L T 311 (P C).

Singh v. Ram Gopal Singh (2), in this connection:

"The possession of independent advice, or the absence of it is a fact to be taken into consideration and well weighed on a review of the whole circumstances relevant to the issue of whether the grantor thoroughly comprehended and deliberately and of her own free will carried out the transaction. If she did, the issue is solved and the transaction is upheld; but if upon a review of the facts—which include the nature of the thing done and the training and habit of mind of the grantor, as well as the proximate circumstances affecting the execution if the conclusion is reached that the obtaining of independent advice would not really have made any difference in the result, then the deed ought to stand. Their Lordships, as already mentioned, have fully in view the fact that the lady was a pardanashin lady, but the evidence as to her strength of will and business capacity, and the fact that the deed as granted is not in the circumstances of her life in any way an unnatural disposition of part of her property, go far, taken together with the evidence in this case, to convince them that the deed was granted by her as the expression of her deliberate mind and apart from any undue influence exerted upon it. In short, their Lordships' view is that if independent outside advice which is an essentially different thing from independent outside control had been obtained, the lady would have acted just as she did. Much as their Lordships support and approve of the protection given by law to a pardanashin lady they cannot transmute such a legal protection into a legal disability."

In this case the learned Judge has found that the plaintiff's deposition shows that she is intelligent and it was not difficult for her to understand the transaction and the nature and effect of the transaction upon her interest in the property. Further as has already been pointed out she had her father, brother and intelligent neighbours to assist her in the matter. There is, therefore, no force in this contention of the learned Advocate for the respondent. It was next urged that the learned Judge has found that the bargain was not a fair bargain and consequently on equitable grounds, the transaction should not stand. It appears, however, that this ground was not made a specific ground of attack in the plaint. No specific issue was joined on this point though it appears to have been argued in the Courts below. The learned Judge's finding on this point is as follows:

"I am, however, not satisfied that the bargain was fair. According to the collection papers produced by Ghanashyam the aggregate of the rentals payable in 1332 B. S. by the tenants in the fishery was Rs. 624—the amount realized in 1331 B. S. was Rs. 324—and that in 1332 B S. was Rs. 290. Much reliance cannot be placed upon these papers as no tenant was cited to corroborate them and in his deposition Ghanashyam did not say anything more about them except that those papers were in his hand-writing. But it is in defendant's deposition that according to the enquiry made by him the profits from the fishery amounted to Rs. 300 to Rs. 310 after deducting the overhead rent. Making allowance for the collection charges at 10 per cent the net profit would come up to Rs. 270 to Rs. 315 a year. A sum of Rs. 425 as premium and an annuity of Rs. 20 is a very inadequate consideration for the transfer of such a property even when the transferor is out of possesson."

Now it appears that this property was acquired by the plaintiff's husband on payment of salami of Rs. 1,000. The salami paid for the darpatni was Rs. 425. The capitalised value of the annuity of Rs. 20 would be about Rs. 400. Consequently she was getting about Rs. 825 by this transaction. Further she was a Hindu widow, and the lessee evidently took some risk in taking a permanent lease from her. She was also out of possession. In these circumstances it cannot be said that the bargain was an unconscionable bargain particularly in view of the fact that she was willing to sell this fishery to one Hazi Muhammad and she agreed to an offer of Rs. 300 as price. In fact there is no evidence or suggestion anywhere in this case to show that any other person was willing to offer more favourable terms than what the defendant did. If she really wanted to attack this transaction on the ground that even in the circumstances which then existed the transaction was not a fair transaction at all, she ought to have made a specific case in the plaint and ought to have joined an issue on the point in order to enable the defendant to show that the transaction was not an unfair one. Whether the transaction was one that should be set aside as inequitable would depend upon the circumstances at the time when it was made and not upon subsequent events: see Ganga Bakhsh v. Jagat Bahadur Singh (3). In my judgment the lower Appellate Court was not justified in rejecting practically the whole of the plaintiff's case as made out in the plaint and then in proceeding to give her some relief on equitable grounds without taking into consideration the risk which the defendant was taking in this transaction.

It was also urged by the learned Advocate for the respondent that it was the duty of the respondent to disclose to the plaintiff the real income of the fishery at the time when the darpatni patta was executed. The law does not lay down any statutory duty on the lessee. It was however argued that as the plaintiff was a pardanahin lady it was the duty of the defendant to disclose the facts to her, but it would appear from the deposition of the plaintiff herself that she was fully aware of the income of the property at the time she ageed to grant the darpatni lease. Consequently it cannot be said that the defendant had taken any undue advantage of the position of the plaintiff. In these circumstances there cannot be any doubt that there was no fraud or misrepresentation or undue influence in this case. The learned Judge's own finding would go to show that the defendant had succeeded in showing that the plaintiff was fully aware of the nature of the transaction, that she received the salami for the lease, and that her deposition shows that she had no regard for truth. The learned Judge has further observed :

(2) 21 Ind. Cas. 985; 36 A 81; 41 I A 23; 18 C W N 282; 16 O C 378; (1914) M W N 112; 12 A L J 115; 15 M L T 130; 19 C L J 172; 1 O L J 67; 26 M L J 121; 16 Bom. L R 147 (P C).

(3) 23 C 15; 22 I A 153; 5 Sar. 643 (P C).

"Her going over to Ghanashyam's side within a short time after the completion of the deed is not difficult to understand. Ghanashyam deposed that after his return from Gaya he paid the plaintiff Rs. 100 and gave her some cloth. That was sufficient inducement to her as she has no regard for truth and had nothing to lose, but had something to gain by changing sides Ghanashyam was in urgent need of propitiating the plaintiff, of the patta questioned the legality of the purchases by his sons also."

It appears to me that this is really Ghanashyam who is fighting this case in the name of the plaintiff. In these circumstances this is not a fit case in which it can be said that the transaction is an unconscionable one, or that the defendant has obtained any undue advantage by this transaction over the plaintiff. The result therefore is that this appeal is allowed and the plaintiff's suit is dismissed. In view of the facts and circumstances of the present case, however, the parties will bear their own costs throughout. Leave to appeal under cl. 15, Letters Patent, has been asked for in this case and is refused.

D. Appeal allowed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 1171 of 1931
February 22, 1935
SULAIMAN, C. J. AND BENNET, J.
RAM CHARAN AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus
GAJADHAR AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS

Abadi—Parti land—Ancestor of tenant planting tree—Tenant cutting it down—Custom—Burden of proof—Custom not proved—Right of zemindar to tree.

It is usual that in cases where the tenant cuts down a tree planted by his ancestor on a parti land in abadi, there is evidence of custom and a finding of custom, and it lies on the defendants (tenants) to plead and prove a custom by which they could be entitled to take the wood of this tree. In the absence of any proof of custom, prima facie the presumption is in favour of the zemindar. The zamindar is the owner of the soil of a parti land and presumably the tree which is grown on that parti land and attached to the soil is transferable with a transfer of land and therefore, the tree goes with the land and must be regarded as pertaining to the land. In the absence, therefore, of a pleading and proof that the defendants had a right to cut the tree, it must be held that the defendants had no such right. Jagdip Narain Singh v. Jokhan Ahir (3) and Ram Sarup v. Jagan Nath (4), followed, Gobardhan Pandey v. Debi Bux Kurmi (5), doubted. Ram Nath v. Mata Sahai (1), distinguished.

S. C. A. from a decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Allahabad, dated May 22, 1931, confirming a decree of the Munsif, East Allahabad, dated April 25, 1930.

Messrs. A. K. Khan and K. N. Sinha, for the Appellants.

Messrs. G. P. Bhargava and Deo Narain Singh, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This is a second appeal by the defendants against concurring decrees of the two lower Courts awarding the plaintiffs Rs. 75 damages for the cutting down of a neem tree in parti land in the village site by the defendants. The plaint set out that the tree was owned and possessed by all the zamindars of the village and that the defendants cut it down without any right. The written statement alleged that the tree was planted by the father of the defendant No. 1 close to his house which was now used as a cattle-shed and was still in the possession of the defendants, and that the tree was planted more than 40 years ago, and that the defendants required wood for the construction of their house and therefore got the tree cut down. The written statement did not clearly say that the tree was planted with the permission of the zamindars. Further it did not say that there was any custom in the village by which the defendants-tenants were entitled to the wood of trees planted by them on parti land in the village abadi. The sole issue framed was whether the plaintiff is the owner of the tree in suit and to what sum the plaintiff is entitled. The lower Court found that the plaintiff did not know who planted the trees, that the trees were planted by the ancestor of the defendant in parti land of the abadi, that there was no evidence of the custom that the defendants were mere trespassers, and therefore the suit was decreed. The lower Appellate Court found that there was no permission of the zamindar pleaded nor proved and it upheld the decree regarding the defendants as trespassers.

The defendants have appealed to this Court on the ground that they had a legal right to take the wood of this tree. The defendants rely on the ruling reported in Ram Nath v. Mata Sahai, 72 Ind. Cas. 108 (1), of Mr. Justice Daniels, in which he dealt with other matters and at p. 109* he stated:—

"It is next argued that in the absence of proof of special custom Jagannath though in possession of the trees, had no right to transfer them. The lower Court relies on the ruling in Jaleswar Sahu v. Raj Mangal (2), and I agree with the lower Court that whatever views may formerly have been held, the presumption now is that a tenant has a right to cut and sell trees planted by him."

The judgment shows that the suit related to the possession of certain trees and of a house in the abadi. The reasons given by the learned Judge are vague and the ruling to which he refers relates to the case of trees planted on what had been an occupancy holding. That ruling in Jaleswar Sahu v. Raj Mangal (2) does not apply, in our opinion, to the case of trees planted on parti land in the abadi. On behalf of the plaintiffs reliance is placed on the case of Jagdip Narain Singh v. Jokhan Ahir, 5 Ind. Cas. 256 (3), in which Sir John Stanley and Mr. Justice Piggott held that trees planted in a grove outside the occupancy holding of a tenant could not be sold by the tenant and in the case of Ram Sarup v. Jagan Nath, 25 Ind. Cas. 152 (4) the late Mr. Justice Sunder Lal held that a tenant had no right to sell trees planted on the waste land in a village. We consider that these two latter rulings should be followed. For the plaintiffs reliance was also placed on the case of Gobardhan Pandey v. Debi Bux Kurmi (5). This was the ruling by a learned Single Judge, Mr. Justice Boys and in regard to trees planted on parti land in the abadi, he held that the criterion was where a person who has planted the trees gives or gives up something in return for the permission to plant the trees and that in the absence of other special considerations, the tree becomes the property of the person who plants it but where he gives nothing, the property in the tree becomes as that of a zamindar. We do not think that this is a general criterion which we should follow, as it is not apparent from where the doctrine of consideration is derived but the case does not apply to the present suit, because in the present suit there was no previous permission to plant.

It is usual that in cases like the present there is evidence of custom and a finding of custom, and we consider that it lay on the defendants to plead and prove a custom by which they could be entitled to take the wood of this tree. In the absence of any proof of custom, we consider that prima facie the presumption is in favour of the zamindar. The zamindar is the owner of the soil of a parti land and presumably the tree which is grown on that parti land and attached to the soil is transferable with a transfer of land and presumably therefore the tree goes with the land and must be regarded as pertaining to the land. In the absence therefore of a pleading and proof that the defendants had a right to cut the tree, we hold that the defendants had no such right. We accordingly consider that the decision of the lower Courts is correct and we dismiss this second appeal with costs.

D. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 72 Ind. Cas 108 at p. 109; A I R 1923 All. 417; 9 O & A L R 479; L R 5 A 40 Rev.
(2) 63 Ind. Cas. 437; 43 A 606; 19 A L J 616.
(3) 5 Ind. Cas. 256.
(4) 25 Ind. Cas. 152.
(5) 114 Ind. Cas. 750; A I R 1929 All. 146; 13 R D 60.

*Page of 72 Ind. Cas.—[Ed.]

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Civil Reference No. 230 of 1934
November 19, 1934
NIYOGI, A. J. C.

SUKHLAL MODHI BANIYA—PLAINTIFF
versus
DAMROO GANESH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS

C. P. Debt Conciliation Act (II of 1933), s. 15 (2)—Applicability of—Debtor producing certificate after filing of plaint but before decree—Creditor, if can be subjected to penalty in regard to costs and interest.

Section 15 (2), C. P. Debt Conciliation Act, comes into operation not only when the certificate is granted before the institution of the suit but also when it is granted during the pendency of the suit. Consequently, under s. 15 (2) the plaintiff creditor is liable to be subjected to penalty in regard to costs of the suit and interest on the debt even in case in which the certificate is produced by the debtor after the filing of the plaint but during the pendency of the suit, that is before the decree is passed.

Ref. made by the Small Cause Court Judge of the Khurai Tahsil in the Saugor District, dated March 21, 1934.

Order.—This is a civil reference made by the Judge of the Small Cause Court, Khurai, under s. 46 (1) of the Civil Procedure Code. The question referred for the opinion of this Court is as follows:—

"Whether or not a creditor, who has failed to amicably settle his debts under the C. P. Debts Conciliation Act, by rejecting the reasonable offers of a fair settlement by the Board, is liable to be punished by applying the penal clauses of s. 15 of the Act if he had already entered his plaint for the debt or debts, before his rejecting the offer."

Section 15 (2) of the C. P. Debt Conciliation Act (No. II of 1933) runs as follows:—

"Where any creditor sues in a Civil Court for the recovery of a debt in respect of which a certificate has been granted under sub-s. (1), the Court shall, notwithstanding the provisions of any law for the time being in force, not allow the plaintiff any costs in such suit, or any interest on the debt after the date of such certificate in excess of simple interest at six per cent. per annum on the amount due on the date of such certificate."

The question on which the decision of this Court is sought is as to the meaning of the word "sues" occurring in sub-s. (2) of s. 15. Although at first sight the term "sues" appears to have been used in the sense of instituting a suit by filing a plaint, on a true construction of the word in view of the other relevant parts of the enactment, it would be evident that the word is used in a comprehensive sense so as to include the entire suit until the passing of the decree. If the certificate is granted under s. 15 (1) before the suit is instituted, (that is plaint is filed), there is no difficulty. The doubt arises only when the proceedings before the Debt Conciliation Board are started either at the instance of the debtor or the creditor after the institution of the suit in Civil Court. The power of the Civil Court to entertain a suit in respect of any matter pending before the Debt Conciliation Board is taken away by s. 16 of the Act. That section comes into operation at the time the plaint is filed to recover a certain debt in respect of which proceedings are already initiated before the Board. The contingency of the proceedings before the Debt Conciliation Board being started after the institution of a suit in a Civil Court is provided for in s. 21 of the Act, which runs as follows:—

"When an application has been made to a Board under s 4, any suit or other proceedings then pending before a Civil Court in respect of any debt for the settlement of which application has been made shall be suspended until the Board has dismissed the application or an agreement registered under sub-s (2) of s. 12 has ceased to subsist."

This section withdraws from the Civil Court its jurisdiction to deal with the matter until two events occur, (1) dismissal of the application under s. 4 of the Act, or (2) until the agreement registered under sub-s. (2) of s. 12 has ceased to subsist.

2. Now, s. 4 of the Act gives a right to a debtor or a creditor to apply to the Debt Conciliation Board to effect a settlement between a debtor and his creditor or creditors. This application may result in an amicable settlement in which case it would be reduced to writing in the form of an agreement under sub-s. (1) of s. 12 and be registered under sub-s. (2) with the result that it takes effect as if it were a decree of a Civil Court. This agreement has the effect of a decree and any amount due, under it, is recoverable as an arrear of land revenue by the Deputy Commissioner at the instance of the creditor. When the Deputy Commissioner fails to recover it, he has to certify that it is irrecoverable and thereupon the agreement shall cease to subsist. Although the agreement ceases to subsist, it has still the force of a decree of a Civil Court under sub-s. (3) of s. 12. It is, however, unnecessary to pursue this aspect of the law further as it is not relevant for the purpose in view.

If on the application made under s. 4 of the Act no amicable settlement is arrived at, the Board has to dismiss the application as provided in s. 14 of the Act; but while dismissing the application the Board may, if it is of opinion that the debtor made a fair offer of settlement, grant the debtor a certificate in respect of the debts owed by him to such creditor. (Section 15 (1).)

Referring to s. 21 of the Act, it would be clear that the Civil Courts' power is suspended until the Board has dismissed the application. In other words, the Court's jurisdiction would revive after the dismissal of the application and the Court will have to take into consideration the certificate granted by the Board. The creditor's suit in the Civil Court is resuscitated after the Board has dismissed the application, and since the Board's certificate is already granted before the revival of the suit, the Civil Court is bound by sub-s. (2) of s. 15 to refuse the plaintiff his costs of the suit and any interest after the date of such certificate in excess of simple interest at 6 per cent per annum on the amount due on the date of such certificate.

Section 15 (2), therefore, comes into operation not only when the certificate is granted before the institution of the suit but also when it is granted during the pendency of the suit. This interpretation is quite in consonance with the meaning of a suit which applies to any proceeding in a Court of justice in which the plaintiff pursues the remedy which the law affords him for the redress of an injury or the recovery of a right. When the plaintiff sues for a relief his suit does not terminate with the filing of the plaint but continues until the decree is passed. The suit is a continuous act and the plaintiff would be deemed to be suing until his prayer for relief is granted or refused.

For the foregoing reasons my decision is that under s. 15 (2) the plaintiff-creditor is liable to be subjected to penatly in regard to costs of the suit and interest on the debt even in a case in which the certificate is produced by the debtor after the filing of the plaint but during the pendency of the suit, that is before the decree is passed.

N. Order accordingly.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Miscellaneous Case No. 307 of 1934

January 28, 1935

SULAIMAN, C. J. AND BENNET, J.

In re THE CHARGEABILITY OF STAMP

Stamp Act (II of 1899), Sch. I, Art. 57, Exemption (e) —Supurddar acknowledging receipt of attached property from amin, and agreeing to produce same whenever demanded, or on failure, agreeing to be personally liable—Document, whether liable to duty.

A bond executed by way of security to account for property received by vitue thereof, even though executed by a surety, is a security bond within the meaning of Art. 57, Sch. I, Stamp Act.

The terms of the document executed by supurddar were that the supurddar acknowledged having received the attached property from the amin and agreed to produce the same whenever demanded by the Court or the amin and further agreed that in case of failure, the Court would be at liberty to realise the price thereof from his person and property:

Held, that the bond was security bond within the meaning of Art. 57, Stamp Act, but Exemption (e) under that Article exempted it from the payment of stamp duty.

Mr. Muhammad Ismail (Government Advocate), for the Crown.

Order.—This is a reference by the Munsif of Ghaziabad under O. XLVI, r. 1 of a question of law which arose before him when executing a decree. A simple money decree had been put in execution and certain movable property of the judgment-debtor was ordered to be attached. The amin went to the spot and attached the property and handed over the same tc a supurddar who executed a document which is the subject-matter of consideration. On report to the Court, the Court approved of the arrangement made by the amin.

There is no question before us as to the legal liability of the supurddar to restore the goods placed in his custody. The only question is whether the document executed by him was chargeable with stamp duty.

The terms of the document were that the supurddar acknowledged having received the attached property from the amin and agreed to produce the same whenever demanded by the Court or the amin and further agreed that in case of failure the Court would be at liberty to realise the price thereof from his person and property. The question before us is whether this document is exempt from duty or whether it is chargeable with duty as an agreement or as a security bond.

As the supurddar was not paid any remuneration for his offering to take charge of the property there may be some difficulty in holding that the document amounted to an agreement. But there can be no doubt that the language brings it within the scope of the definition of security bond as given in Sch. I, Art. 57 of the Indian Stamp Act. A bond executed by way of security to account for property received by virtue thereof, even though executed by a surety, is a security bond within the meaning of that Article. But Exemption (e) under that Article exempts from the payment of stamp duty any instrument executed by a surety for an officer of Government to secure the due accounting for property received by virtue thereof. The point for consideration is whether this document comes under this exemption. Under O. XXI, r. 43, where property to be attached is movable property in the possession of the judgment-debtor, attachment is to be made by actual seizure and the attaching Officer is to keep the property in his own custody or in that of one of his subordinates and "shall be responsible for the due custody thereof"; therefore, the legal responsibility for the due custody of the attached property lies on the attaching Officer. Rules 122 and 123 provide for the approval or permission of the Court as to the arrangement made by the attaching Officer, which when approved would exonerate the attaching Officer personally. Nevertheless the supurddar who keeps the property in his own custody on behalf of the amin is really a surety for the amin and undertakes to restore the goods or pay their price if not produced before the Court. The position of the supurddar was therefore that of a surety for the amin undertaking duly to account for the property received from the amin by virtue of the document executed by the supurddar and is covered by Exemption (e).

The learned Advocate for the Secretary of State relies on the Full Bench case of Shakir Husin v. Chandu Lal (1) but that case in no way helps him because it was laid down there that although the amin ceases to be liable after the Court has approved of the arrangement or given him permission to make the arrangement, the supurddar was liable as a surety under s. 145, Civil Procedure Code. It follows that the position of the supurddar as surety for the amin undertaking to produce the goods was accepted by the Bench and his liability as a surety was actually enforced.

We are, therefore, of opinion, that the supurdnama in question was not liable to duty because it was exempted under Exemption (e) to Art. 147. This is our answer to the reference.

D. Reference answered.

(1) 134 Ind. Cas. 836; (1931) A L J 865; A I R 1931 All. 567; Ind. Rul. (1931) All. 852.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 1318 of 1928
June 28, 1934
DALIP SINGH AND BECKETT, JJ.
H. D. HIRAMANACK AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS
versus
BALKISHEN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Tort—Negligence — Injury by faulty structure of building—Responsibility for safe upkeep—Plaintiffs to prove special circumstances making owner liable.

The general rule in cases of injury due to the aulty structure of a building is that the person esponsible to the general public for the safe upkeep of the building is the occupier rather than the owner, when the owner himself is not in possession. It is for the plaintiffs to show that there were some special circumstances which render the owners liable rather than the lessees Bai Menghibai v. Doongersey Lakhmi Das (1), relied on.

To make the owner liable he must have been aware at the time of leasing out of the property that the property was in a condition imminently dangerous to the occupiers of the adjoining property. Todd v. Flight (1), Cavaller v. Pope (3) and Cunard and Wife v. Antifyre Ltd. (4), relied on. [p. 1037, col 1.]

F. C. A. from a decree of the First Class Sub-Judge, Lahore, dated December 17, 1927.

Messrs. Jai Gopal Sethi and M. L. Sethi, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Dev Raj Sawhney and Basant Krishen, for the Respondents.

Beckett, J.—The plaintiffs Mr. and Mrs. Hiramanak, were living in quarters at the top of a building belonging to the defendants, commonly known as the Mul Chand Buildings. The roof of this building is divided into different portions, assigned to the occupants of the quarters below. On the night of May 30, 1925, Mr. and Mrs. Hiramanak were sleeping on their portion of the roof when a dust storm arose. There was a barsati or open shed with a corrugated iron covering on the adjacent portion. This portion was dislodged by the wind and fell upon the plaintiffs, causing injuries. Mr. and Mrs. Hiramanak now sue the defendants for the recovery of damages, assessed principally upon the after effects of these injuries, alleging that the accident was due to the faulty structure of the barsati which had been negligently constructed by the defendants and was not strong enough to withstand an ordinary dust storm. Their suit has been dismissed by the trial Court, with costs, and they have appealed.

Before discussing the evidence produced by the plaintiffs to connect the accident with the negligence of the defendants, it will be as well to discuss the nature of the responsibility which the plaintiffs seek to lay upon the defendants as owners of the Mul Chand Buildings, since this will, to some extent, affect the nature of the evidence which it is necessary to consider. The plaint itself makes little or no attempt to bring out the exact nature of this liability. From the course of arguments before us, however, it would appear that the plaintiffs are putting forward a two fold claim. In the first place, Mr. Hiramanak alleges that he had directly leased his own quarters from the defendants' and on the strength of this contract he seeks to impute to them a contractual responsibility for keeping the adjoining portion of the building in proper order. Secondly, both plaintiffs claim to have a case in tort on the general principle that the owner of a building is bound to see that it is in safe condition before leasing it out and that the defendants can, therefore, be held responsible for any loss caused by structural defects in the portion of the building adjoining that occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Hiramanak.

The former claim need not detain us long since there is no satisfactory evidence that Mr. Hiramanak was a tenant of the defendants at the time of the accident. It is admitted that the Central Bank of India was formerly a tenant of the whole building, which consisted of office premises below and staff quarters above. Mr. Hiramanak came to Lahore as an employee of the Bank at the end of April 1925. According to Mr. Hiramanak's statement, he asked the Agent of the Bank to arrange with the defendants for a lease of the quarters now in question, and this was arranged. The Agent of the Bank, Mr. Thakar, has not been produced as a witness, and no explanation has been given for the failure to produce him. On the other hand, the defendants say that they simply continued to let out the premises to the Bank as staff quarters in the same way as before; and this statement is confirmed by the fact that the Bank accepted and paid a bill sent to it for the period up to the end of May. It is true that the Bank subsequently repudiated this liability, stating that there had been a mistake: but this repudiation did not occur until sometime after the accident when the question of liability for the injuries would have arisen. While it is possible that there may have been some misunderstanding, it is clear that Mr. Hiramanak has completely failed to prove the existence of the alleged contract between himself and the defendants, which is not even put forward in the plaint, and is only mentioned in vague terms in the replication, put in after the defendants had denied that there was any privity of contract between themselves and the plaintiffs.

We are thus left with the case in tort, which seems to be the real foundation of the case as set out in the plaint. The plaintiffs are confronted with the initial legal difficulty. It is admitted that the portion of the building which included the barsati was let out by the defendants to the Central Bank: and the general rule in cases of this nature is that the person responsible to the general public for the safe upkeep of the building is the occupier rather than the owner, when the owner himself is not in possession. The respective liabilities of the owner and occupier have been exhaustively discussed in Bai Menghibai v. Doongersey Lakhmi Das (1), where the following passage occurs:

"The question, then, is whether the lessor or the lessee is liable to the plaintiff. The general rule laid down as deducible from the English case-law is that the owner or the landlord can never be liable for injuries suffered through neglect to keep the demised property in order, except upon the grounds (1) of misfeasance and (2) of breach of contract; that is to say, that unless it can be shown that at the time of the original leasing, or, if the term is short, on the renewal of each of such terms, the building was let in a ruinous or unsafe condition, he can never be liable for the consequences of such condition unless he has undertaken by special contract to repair."

It is thus for the plaintiffs to show that there were some special circumstance in the present case which rendered the defendants liable rather than the lessees, that is, the Central Bank. Here again, the case is twofold. In the first place, an attempt has been made to show that the defendants were under a contractual obligation to keep the building in the proper state of repairs. No evidence has been produced to prove the terms on which the Bank came into the premises. There is thus no direct evidence of any such term in the contract between the defendants and the Bank. It was, however, been suggested that such a term may be inferred from the conduct of the parties. On this point, the only evidence is a letter from the defendants from which it might be gathered that they were prepared to repair a dangerous arch in the portion which Mr. Hiramanak claims to have rented from the Bank direct, and Mr. Hiramanak's own assertion that the Bank used to carry out repairs in the rest of the building. Since Mr. Hiramanak had only come to Lahore about a month before the accident, it is unlikely that he would be in a position to have any direct knowledge on this point, and better evidence could easily have been produced. It is not even clear that the repairs to the arches were ever carried out by the defendants; and it would be impossible to hold on this slender evidence that the defendants had ever made themselves contractually liable for the general upkeep of the building as opposed to the execution of special repairs.

(1) 43 Ind. Cas. 273; A I R 1917 Bom. 46; 19 Bom. L R 887.

The next line of attack is the contention that the defendants were guilty of a definite act of misfeasance in leasing out a potentially dangerous building to the Bank and that it is accordingly they who should be held responsible rather than the Bank itself. The leading case on a landlord's responsibility in this respect is Todd v. Flight (2). In that case, the chimneys of a house fell upon the plaintiffs, and these chimneys were known by the defendant owner to be ruinous and in danger of falling at the time of the demise. It was held that, inasmuch as the chimneys were known to the owner to be ruinous and in danger of falling at the time when he let the house, he was guilty, of the alleged wrongful non-repair that led to the damage; and that the fall which appeared to have been due to the laws of nature, could not be attributed to any default of the lessee. On these facts the owner was held liable.

If the plaintiffs' claim can be justified at all, it could only be justified on this principle. In other words, the defendants must have been aware at the time of leasing out the property that the property was in a condition imminently dangerous to the occupiers of the adjoining property. So far as the danger was merely to persons occupying the demised property the case would fall within the ambit of Cavaller v. Pope (3), and the owner could not be made liable in the absence of a direct contract between the parties. The plaintiffs, however, relied on Cunard and Wife v. Antifyre, Ltd. (4), which deals with premises belonging to the same landlord, but occupied by tenants in separate flats.

The plaintiffs' evidence as to the state of barsati will now be examined in the light of these decisions. According to their witnesses the corrugated roofing of the shed had been joined to the rafters only by nails not by proper bolts, and there was an absence of proper means for securing the wood-work together, with the result that the roofing was liable to fly off in a gale of wind, such as is liable to occur several times a year in Lahore. The evidence on this point is not very strong, since the expert witnesses only examined the shed sometime after the accident, and the evidence to connect its condition at that time with its state before the accident is only given by two witnesses, neither of whom had any reason for examining the structure very closely. One of these witnesses had been previously making use of the barsati, and he admits that he had never thought of complaining that it was dangerous.

Even if we accept this evidence at its face value, however, I am doubtful whether it is sufficient to attract the operation of the rule in Todd v. Flight (2). There is nothing to show that the defendants were aware that the method of fixing the roof of the barsati was not sufficient to withstand the strength of an ordinary dust storm any more than the tenant who occupied it. It appears to have withstood a number of several dust storms for years past and it is in evidence that the roofing of a number of other barsatis blew off on the night in question. Besides this, the barsati was constructed by the father of the defendants, who has since died, so that the actual misfeasance, if any, would appear to be his. There is nothing on the record to show how the defendants can be made liable for this act of their father, and it becomes more unlikely that they were aware of the faulty nature of the structure.

I am of opinion that the plaintiffs have failed to show any obligation on the part of the defendants for the removal of structural defects in the barsati such as would render them liable to an action in tort. This makes it unnecessary to consider whether the defendants can also be held to be responsible for the after-effects which are said to have followed upon the injuries received by the plaintiffs, and I would affirm the decree of the lower Court dismissing their suit. At the same time, the case is one of some complexity, and I would leave the parties to bear their own costs in appeal.

Dalip Singh, J.—I agree.

D. Suit dismissed.

(2) (1861) 9 O B (N S) 377; 30 L J C P 21; 9 W R 145; 7 Jur. (N S) 291; 3 L T 325.

(3) (1905) A C 428; 73 L J K B 609; 22 T L R 648; 95 L T 65.

(4) (1933) 1 K B 551.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 2 of 1934

February 4, 1935

NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

DWARKA PRASAD AND ANOTHER —APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat SUNDER—RESPONDENT

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), ss. 4, 56(3) proviso—Property sold—Receiver claiming it as insolvent's—Delivery of possession to purchaser, when can be given—Decision on question of title—Necessity of.

The house in dispute was claimed by the Receiver as the property of the insolvents. The appellants denied the title of the insolvents and claimed to be the owners of the house in dispute. They preferred an objection in the Insolvency Court putting forward their claim and denying the right of the insolvents. The appellants' objection was dismissed for non-appearance. The Receiver subsequently sold the house to the respondent, who applied to the Insolvency Court for delivery of possession of the house to her. The appellants objected to any delivery of possession being made. In their objection they reiterated their title to the house and repudiated that of the insolvents. The insolvency Judge summarily dismissed the objection on the ground that a similar objection had been previously dismissed :

Held, that before the question of title is decided either by a decree in a separate suit or by an order under s. 4, Insolvency Act, the appellants could not be dispossessed from the property which, to all appearance, they claimed in perfect good faith to be their own and the fact that the appellant had not pressed his objection on a certain occasion did not justify the Insolvency Court in treating the property as belonging to the insolvent.

S. C. A. from an order of the District Judge of Farrukhbad, dated November 4, 1933.

Mr. B. Malik, for the Applicants.

Mr. Babu Ram Avasthi, for the Opposite Party.

Judgment.—This is an appeal from an order passed by the learned District Judge, Farrukhabad, in circumstances which are somewhat peculiar. The order appealed from was passed in appeal from the order of the Subordinate Judge sitting as an Insolvency Judge. Murli and Shahzada were adjudged insolvent by the Insolvency Court at Cawnpore, and a Receiver was appointed to take charge of their assets. The house, which is now in dispute, is situate in Farrukhabad, and was claimed by the Receiver as the property of the insolvents. The appellants in this Court deny the title of the insolvents and claim to be the owners of the house in dispute. They preferred an objection in the Insolvency Court at Cawnpore putting forward their claim and denying the right of the insolvents. The application and the order of the Court thereon could not be traced. The appellants allege that the only order which the Court passed was "File without consideration" The respondent, on the other hand, alleges that the objection was dismissed in default of appearance. The judgment of the lower Appellate Court also assumes this fact. An application filed by the appellants at a certain stage of proceedings likewise mentioned that the objection had been dismissed in default. It is safe to assume, for the purpose of this appeal, that the appellants' objection above referred to was dismissed for non-appearance.

The appellants then instituted a regular suit in the Court of the Munsif, Farrukhabad, within whose jurisdiction the house in dispute lies, for a declaration of their right. The Receiver, among others, was impleaded as a party. The suit did not proceed to trial, as it was withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit. No fresh suit, however, has since been instituted.

The Receiver subsequently sold the house to the respondent, Musammat Sunder, who applied to the Insolvency Court at Cawnpore for delivery of possession of the house to her. That Court sent a rubkar to the Judge of the Insolvency Court at Farrukhabad for delivery of possession, as prayed by the purchaser. The appellants objected to any delivery of possession being made. In their objection they reiterated their title to the house and repudiated that of the insolvents, questioning the Receiver's power to transfer it and the Court's power to award possession in that summary manner. They emphasised that they had all along been in possession and could not be ousted in the manner desired by the purchaser. The Insolvency Judge (Subordinate Judge), Farukhabad summarily dismissed the objection on the ground that a similar objection had been previously dismissed. This refers to the appellants' objection in the Insolvency Court at Cawnpore which, as above-mentioned, was dismissed for non-appearance. From the order of the Insolvency Judge, Farrukhabad, an appeal was preferred to the District Judge, Farrukhabad, who upheld it on grounds which, in my opinion, cannot be sustained. He assumed that the house in dispute was "attached" property, that the objection to attachment was dismissed under O. XXI, r. 58, Civil Procedure Code and that the regular suit instituted by them in the Court of the Munsif, Kanauj, was one under O. XXI, r. 63, Civil Procedure Code. The learned Judge expresses the opinion that the dismissal of objection for non-appearance became final, as it has not so far been set aside by a decree passed in a suit under O. XXI, r. 63, Civil Procedure Code. The consequence according to the learned Judge, is that the appellants must quietly submit to possession being delivered to the purchaser from the Receiver. The learned Judge does not seem to have applied his mind to the further question whether it is open to an Insolvency Court, without coming to a decision under s. 4 of the Act, to deliver possession of property sold by the Receiver, which property is in possession of third persons. The Subordinate Judge and the District Judge of Farrukhabad have treated the case as if it were one of transfer of a decree for execution from a Court at Cawnpore to a Court at Farrukhabad and that they were Courts executing the decree. The learned Advocate for the respondent, who presented his case in such light as was possible, has not been able to draw my attention to any provision in the Insolvency Act which justifies the adoption of this procedure by way of analogy which was quite fanciful.

Section 4, Provincial Insolvency Act, undoubtedly empowers the Insolvency Court to decide all questions of title which may arise in any case of insolvency or which the Court may deem it expedient or necessary to decide. Under s. 28 the property of the insolvent is vested in the Receiver on the order of adjudication being passed; but in relation to third persons a Receiver has no more right than the insolvent himself, nor can the Insolvency Court allow the Receiver to ride roughshod over rights of persons who do not derive any right to the property in dispute from the Receiver but adversely to him. Section 56, which provides for the appointment of Receivers, empowers the Court to remove from possession any person in whose possession or custody the insolvent's property is, but there is an important proviso appended to that section which lays down "that nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise the Court to remove from the possession or custody of property any person whom the insolvent has not a present right so to remove."

In my opinion, the mere fact that the respondent purchased the house in dispute from the Receiver does not entitle him to dispossess the appellants. She cannot have better right than that of the Receiver himself in this respect. The Receiver has no better right than the insolvents, as already stated. The Court has no authority to remove the appellants from possession of the property, as the insolvents have not been shown to have a present right to remove them. It was open to the Insolvency Court to decide the question of title between the Receiver and the appellants under s. 4 of the Insolvency Act and if in those proceedings the title had been found to be with the insolvents, now represented by the Receiver, the proviso to s. 56 might have been applicable and the Court might then have the power to treat it as the property of the insolvents and remove the appellants from possession. The Court has not taken proceedings under s. 4, and the title is in controversy. The appellants are in possession, a fact which has not been disputed. Indeed, it is clear from the order of the Insolvency Court at Cawnpore, which required the Insolvency Court at Farrukhabad to deliver possession to the purchaser by removing the appellants.

The view that the appellants are precluded from asserting their title, because their objection in the Insolvency Court at Cawnpore was dismissed for non-appearance and they did not have it set aside, cannot be sustained. It is based on O. IX, r. 9, Civil Procedure Code, under which if a suit is dismissed in the absence of the plaintiff but in the presence of the defendant, no further suit can lie, the only remedy of the plaintiff being to have the order of dismissal set aside. The lower Courts treat the appellants' objection as a plaint in a suit and the order of dismissal for non-appearance to have the same effect as the dismissal of a suit for non-appearance of the plaintiff. There is no warrant for such a view. The appellants were not bound to object in the Insolvency Court. They could have retained possession of the house and ignored the insolvency proceedings and the action of the Receiver. If they had taken up that attitude, it would have been incumbent on the purchaser from the Receiver to vindicate her right and obtain a decree for possession against the appellants. On the latter taking the initiative in the matter, the Insolvency Court should have taken action under s. 4 and decided the disputed question of title once for all. An opportunity for adopting that procedure occurred when the Insolvency Court was apprised of the fact that a certain house, alleged to belong to the Receiver, is claimed by third persons. It could then have taken proceedings under s. 4, even though the objection was not pressed or was allowed to be dismissed for non-appearance. In the absence of an authoritative adjudication of the rights of the contesting parties, the Insolvency Court was not justified in treating the property as belonging to the insolvents only because the appellants had not pressed their objection on a certain occasion. It may even now be open to the Insolvency Court at Cawnpore, subject to any objection which may be taken by the appellants, to take proceedings under s. 4. But before the question of title is decided either by a decree in a separate suit or by an order under s. 4, Insolvency Act, the appellants cannot be dispossessed from the property which, to all appearance, they claim in perfect good faith to be their own.

In my opinion, the objection of the appellants, made in the Court of the Insolvency Judge (Subordinate Judge), Farrukhabad, protesting against possession being delivered to the respondent and against their own ejectment was unanswerable and should have been allowed. Accordingly I allow this appeal, set aside the order of both the Courts below and allow the appellants' objection with costs. They shall not be disturbed, except in due course of law.

D. Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 436 of 1929
June 12, 1934

BHIDE AND DIN MUHAMMAD, JJ.

GHANAYA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

MEHTAB AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 35—Entry, meaning of—Opinion of public officer from allegations made before him in inquiry under s. 202, Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), or under O. XXVI, Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908)—Admissibility of.

The words "an entry" in s. 35, Evidence Act, are not intended to apply to the opinions of public officers based on or inferences drawn from the allegations made before them in the course of inquiries conducted under s. 202, Criminal Procedure Code or under O. XXVI, Civil Procedure Code, but are confined only to such statements of facts in issue or relevant facts as are made by the public officers concerned, in the course of their official duty and are required to be entered in any book, register or record intended for the purpose. This section is apparently an exception. Such opinions cannot be considered sufficient to prove the truth of the assertions made therein without the test of cross-examination. Jagdat v. Sheopal (1) Baldeo Das v Gobind Das (2), dissented from. Ghulam Rasul Khan v. Secretary of State (3), relied on.

F. C. A. from the decree of the Senior Sub-Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated November 6, 1928.

Mr. Sundar Das and Dewan Gullu Ram, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Shamair Chand and Mehr Chand for the Respondents.

Din Muhammad, J.—In this case the three appellants are members of the proprietary body of village Saloh while the forty-four respondents are some of the tenants residing there. On August 25, 1927, the plaintiff instituted this suit in their representative capacity under O. I, r. 8, Civil Procedure Code, on behalf of the whole proprietary body claiming Rs. 6,000 from the defendants. Their allegations were that out of the total area of 22,857 kanals, 4 marlas of land, which is described in the revenue papers as khad, ban and banjar, they have reserved 12,295 kanals, 11 marlas of land for their personal use and what remained was left as a common pasture land. In 1922, however, the defendants devastated their reserved grass on which a Criminal case under s. 447, Penal Code, was lodged against them. This case was dismissed on the ground that under the terms of the Wajib-ul-arz the tenants and non-proprietors of the village had right to graze their cattle in the whole of the shamilat land. They again filed a suit against some of the occupancy tenants and on June 8, 1927, obtained a decree specifying 2,999 kanals, 16 marlas for pasturage and prohibiting the tenants from trespassing into the remaining area of the shamilat land. On these allegations the plaintiffs assessed the value of the damage done by the defendants at Rs. 2,000, a year and claimed damages for a period of three years only prior to the institution of the suit.

The defendants traversed these pleas and denied that any area was actually reserved by the proprietors for their personal use or could be so reserved by them under conditions of the Wajib-ul-arz. They also refuted the plaintiffs' allegations relating to the devastation of the reserved grass and pleaded that they had been exercising their right in good faith in the whole of the village shamilat. They further added that the plaintiffs have not been able to state which of the tenants did the damage, if any, and in which portion of the land in dispute and how much damage was caused by them individually. The learned Subordinate Judge, after going through the evidence produced by the parties, came to the conclusion that the Wajib-ul-arz conferred on the tenants and non-proprietors of the village unfettered rights to graze their cattle in the whole of the shamilat and that the plaintiffs had failed to prove that any particular area of the village area was reserved by the proprietors of the village for their exclusive use or that any damage had been done by the defendants. On this ground he dismissed the suit and from this decree the plaintiffs have preferred the present appeal.

The learned Counsel for the appellants has, in the first place, relied on the oral testimony of the witnesses produced by the plaintiffs, but a perusal of their statements would show that it does not help them in the least. Soondhi, P. W. No. 1, has stated that tenants and proprietors, in fact all the inhabitants of the village, had destroyed the rakh (reserved grass). Nizum-ud-din, P. W. No. 2, has made a vague statement holding all tenants responsible for this damage Anant Ram Patwari, P. W. No. 3, has admitted that there is no mention of any rakh in the revenue papers. Suraj, P. W. No. 4, who is alleged to have been appointed as a watchman in the rakh has stated that all the tenants in a body destroyed the rakh. Harnam Singh, P. W. No. 5, has merely stated that there used to be a rakh five or six years ago, but it was devastated by the the tenants. Diwan Singh, P. W. No. 6 and Tulsi Ram, P. W. No. 9, have not referred to any devastation at all. Prabhu, P. W. No. 7, has professed ignorance of the existence of any rakh whatsoever. Kanshi, P. W. No. 8, Pirthu, P. W. No. 10 and Lachhman, P. W. No. 11 have proved certain bahi entries relating to the alleged sales of grass in the jungle. Udham Singh Lambardar, P. W. No. 12, himself a proprietor in the village, has stated that the non-proprietors destroyed the rakh. Sohan Singh, P. W. No. 13, is one of the three plaintiffs and has appeared as a witness for himself. He has admitted that there are 500 houses of tenants and non-proprietors in the village and about 300 men belonging to the Gujjar tribe were present at the time the rakh was destroyed and since then the defendants have not allowed them to reserve any grass. On this evidence, I am afraid it cannot at all be urged that the plaintiffs have succeeded in establishing that they had any right to reserve any portion of the shamilat for their exclusive use or that any specified portion had been so reserved or that the forty-four respondents now before us had been responsible for any damages done to the plaintiffs' grass.

The learned Counsel has further relied on two documents one of which is a report dated August 18, 1922, submitted by Mian Amir Singh, Tahsildar, presumably under s. 202, Criminal Procedure Code, to the Court of the Additional District Magistrate in a Criminal case under s. 447, Penal Code, and the other is a report dated May 15, 1924, presented by Lala Gurdial in the capacity of Local Commissioner to the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Hoshiarpur in a civil case between the proprietors and the tenants of this village. These two gentlemen have not been examined as witnesses in the case and only the certified copies of their reports have been placed on the record. It is however contended on the authority of Jagdat v. Sheopal (1) and Baldeo Das v. Gobind Das (2), that these documents, are admissible in evidence under s. 35, Evidence Act. It is no doubt true that in Jagdat v. Sheopal (1), Hasan, J., admitted in evidence a report of a Qanungo made under the orders of a Magistrate acting under s. 202, Criminal Procedure Code, on the ground that it was an entry by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty and in Baldeo Das v. Govind Das (2), a Bench of the Allahabad High Court held that on the question of the ownership of a certain temple the report of a Kotwal who in 1840 had made an inquiry into the ownership of the temple at the instance of the Political Agent was relevant evidence as it was a public record of a public inquiry. But it appears from the report of the judgments cited above that the point was not discussed and these reports were admitted into evidence as a mere matter of course. With all respect, therefore, I hesitate to follow these authorities as, in my humble judgment, the language used in s. 35, Evidence Act, cannot be strained to such an extent as to admit the reports now before us under the provisions of law contained therein. This section runs as follows:

"An entry in any public or other official book, register or record, stating a fact in issue or relevant fact, and made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty, or by any other person in performance of a duty specially enjoined by the law of the country in which such book, register, or record is kept, is itself a relevant fact."

Now, as I read the section the words "an entry" as used here are not intended to apply to the opinions of public officers based on or inferences drawn from the allegations made before them in the course of inquiries conducted under s. 202, Criminal Procedure Code or under O. XXVI, Civil Procedure Code but is confined only to such statements of facts in issue or relevant facts as are made by the public officers concerned in the course of their official duty and are required to be entered in any book, register or record intended for the purpose. This section is apparently an exception to the general rule of evidence and is based on certain principles deduced from the English Law and although the Indian Law has extended the English Law to some extent the extension introduced, in my view, does not make it so wide as to admit mere opinions recorded in this manner. Powell in his Principles and Practice of the Law of Evidence, Edn. 10, describes the English rule of evidence as obtained from the authoritative pronouncements of some of the eminent English Judges in the following terms:

(1) 104 Ind. Cas. 287; A I R 1927 Oudh 323; 1 Luck. Cas. 259.

(2) 23 Ind. Cas. 18; A I R 1914 All. 59; 36 A 161; 12 A L J 179.

"It is important to observe that whenever it is the duty of a public official either at common law or by statute to record certain facts in any book which is intended to be kept as a register to be referred to even after the book is admissible in evidence to prove not only that such official made those entries but also that the facts which he recorded in that book are true .....And this rule extends to every public document whether a register or not which is made for the purpose of the public making use of it and being able to refer to it .. The principle is that it should be a public inquiry, a public document and made by a public officer in the discharge of his public duty. It would be otherwise if the documents were prepared only for a temporary purpose. The mere fact that a document intended for a temporary purpose is found after a long lapse of years in the archives of a Government Office does not constitute it of the authority of a register."

Taylor in his famous commentaries on the Law of Evidence has observed that public documents are entitled to this extraordinary degree of confidence partly because they are required by the law to be kept, partly because their contents are of public interest and notoriety, but principally because they are made under the sanction of an oath of office or at least under that of official duty by accredited agents appointed for that purpose.

In the light of these observations I am of opinion that it will not be possible to hold that either of the two reports intended to be relied on by the learned Counsel fulfils all the conditions laid down above. The Legislature could never have intended to admit as evidence, without their authenticity being confirmed by the usual test of truth, mere conclusions arrived at by the inquiring or investigating officers from the statements made before them during the course of their inquiry or investigation. If once the broad proposition as laid down by the two judgments cited by the learned Counsel were admitted to be good law alarming results are bound to follow. Even in the case of judgments the Legislature has laid down several conditions which should be satisfied before they can be considered relevant in any subsequent case. It would appear most illogical then if mere reports submitted by Local Commissioners or investigating officers during the course of the trial of those suits in which such judgments are delivered will be held admissible under s. 35 and be considered sufficient to prove the truth of the assertions made therein without the test of cross-examination, As observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Ghulam Rasul Khan v. Secretary of State (3):

"statements in public documents are receivable to prove the facts stated on the general grounds that they were made by the authorized agents of the public in the course of official duty and respecting facts which were of public interest or required to be recorded for the benefit of the community."

Unless, therefore, a document is of such a public nature as is contemplated in this observation it will not be admissible under s. 35, Evidence Act. With due deference, therefore, to the learned Judges responsible for the decisions relied on by the appellants I am constrained to hold that the two reports now before us cannot be admitted in evidence. But even if they were, I agree with the learned Subordinate Judge, who has fully discussed them in his judgment, that they do not serve the purpose for which they were intended to be used. I would, therefore, maintain the decree of the Court below and dismiss the appeal with costs throughout.

Bhide, J.—I agree.

D. Appeal dismissed.

(3) 86 Ind. Cas. 654; A I R 1925 P C 170; 52 I A 201; 6 Lah. 269; 23 A L J 639; 2 O W N 646; 22 L W 299; 30 C W N 101; 50 M L J 120 (P C).

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT
Special Bench
Miscellaneous Case No. 65 of 1934
January 21, 1935
THOM, IQBAL AHMAD AND ALLSOP, JJ.
In the matter of AN ADVOCATE, CAWNPORE

Practice—Person appearing before Judge as accused—Whether raises presumption that Judge has hostile feelings towards him—Bar Council—Findings by—High Court, if bound to accept them—Legal practitioner—Counsel's duty towards client and Court—Whether can make serious allegation in written statement against party on advice of client—Pleadings.

Per Thom, J.—Because an accused person appears before a Judge in his Court it is ludicrous to suggest that that Judge should be presumed to entertain towards him any feeling of hostility or that the Judge, impelled by malice, would pursue the party into his private life and use his influence to prejudice the party and undermine his interests or defeat his legitimate intentions. [p. 1044, col. 2.]

Usually the High Court will accept, especially when there is no objection preferred by the Government Advocate, the finding of the Bar Council. The High Court, however, is not bound to accept it. [p. 1047, col 1.]

No Counsel is entitled to frame a serious charge against a party to a litigation unless he is in possession of admissible and relevant evidence upon which, if accepted, Counsel could reasonably ask the Court to hold the allegations true. It may well be that the evidence in support of the allegations is untrue and it is certainly not the duty of a Counsel in the ordinary course to test the truth of the witnesses whom he intends to put into the witness-box but at the conclusion of the evidence which he has led he should be in a position to submit as a reasonable proposition to the Court that the evidence which he has led, if accepted, establishes the allegations for which he had made himself responsible. If he is not in possession of such evidence to support them he is not entitled to make grave and serious allegations. [ibid.]

Per Iqbal Ahmad, J.—It is imperative in the interest of administration of justice that too rigid a test of the conduct of an Advocate in the matter of drafting pleadings should not be emphasized and that the test should be such as not to deter a Counsel from fearlessly placing before the Court such allegations as their clients instruct them to make, so long as those allegations do not appear manifestly reckless and unfounded. It is no doubt the duty of Counsel to use their own judgment, experience and discretion and not to make irrelevant or unduly insulting allegations in the pleadings but it is equally their duty to embody the case of their clients in the pleadings fearlessly provided the instructions received from clients justify the case embodied in the pleadings. While on the one hand a Counsel is expected to be careful and not reckless in drafting the pleadings he cannot, on the other hand, assume the role of a Judge and refuse to embody allegations that his client instructs him to make unless and until he has examined the evidence on the subject. A Counsel is in one sense the mouthpiece of his client, but he does not guarantee or pledge himself for his client's veracity. [p. 1050, col. 2; p. 1051, col. 1.]

Per Allsop, J.—On the one hand Counsel must look to the interests of his client and not be deterred by fear or favour from making any allegations which in those interests it is necessary for him to make. On the other hand, he cannot take shelter behind his client and claim to be an entirely irresponsible instrument in his client's hands. There remains in him a duty and an obligation to his fellow citizens and he is certainly not entitled to make scandalous and serious allegations against those fellow citizens unless he has some basis upon which the allegations can be grounded.

Held, that no action was to be taken against the Advocate, in the circumstances. [p. 1051, col. 1.]

Mr. B. S. Darbari, for the Applicant.

Mr. Muhammad Ismail, for the Crown.

Thom, J.—On January 24, 1934, notice was ordered by this Court to go to Mr. C. to show cause why he should not be proceeded against for professional misconduct.

For some reasons or other notice did not go to Mr. C. but the matter of the conduct was referred for enquiry to the Bar Council. The Hon'ble the Chief Justice appointed a Committee consisting of Mr. P. L. Banerji, Dr. N. C. Vaish and Mr. Murli Manohar, to enquire into Mr. C's conduct. Mr. C's conduct in connection with a certain case had been adversely commented on by the learned Judge who directed that notice should go to him on January 24, 1934.

The facts may be briefly stated. They are fully set out in the report of the Bar Council Committee. Mr. W. C. de Noronha, a citizen of Cawnpore died upon November 23, 1932. After his death an application for letters of administration with a copy of the will of the deceased, dated November 20, 1932, was made on May 2, 1933, in the High Court by Mr. W. C. de Noronha, a son of the deceased. One Mrs. Peters, who, it appears, had nursed Mr. Noronha through the long illness that preceded his death entered a caveat upon July 17, 1933. Mrs. Peters opposed the grant of letters of administration to the applicant, filed a written statement in support of her allegations against the grant of letters of administration. It is unnecessary at this stage to go into the history of this written statement. The learned Judge before whom the application was made did not consider that the written statement complied with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure and he directed that a proper written statement be filed by Counsel for Mrs. Peters. In compliance with the direction of the learned Judge a written statement was filed upon November 24, 1933. In this statement there are certain charges made against the sons and son-in-law of the late Mr. Noronha and against Mr. Lyde who was then Joint Magistrate in Cawnpore and Mr. Bhasin, an Advocate practising in Cawnpore. These allegations have been grouped under four heads: (1) Conspiracy, (2) Forgery, (3) Undue influence, and (4) Murder. In their report the Bar Council Committee stated

"There can be no doubt that allegations of conspiracy, forgery, and murder were made against the sons and son-in-law of the late Mr. Noronha and that further undue influence was alleged against Mr. L. G. Lyde, Joint Magistrate of Cawnpore, and forgery against Mr. Bhasin, an Advocate of Cawnpore."

I do not consider it necessary to deal with the evidence upon which the charges of undue influence against the sons and sons-in-law of the late Mr. Noronha were based. In my opinion Mr. C, who was Mrs. Peter's legal adviser, and who accepts now full responsibility for the charges made in the written statement, had undoubtedly in his possession sufficient materials to entitle him to make allegations of undue influence against the sons and sons-in-law of the late Mr. Noronha. This Court is not asked at this stage to decide whether that evidence is sufficient to establish the allegation of undue influence, but, to my mind, there is no doubt whatever that Mr. C. was in possession of information which entitled him to make an allegation of undue influence against the sons and sons-in-law of Mr. Noronha. The charge of undue influence against the Joint Magistrate and the charge of murder against the sons and sons-in-law of the late Mr. Noronha and the charge of forgery against Mr. Bhasin stand, however, in my judgment, in a different position.

It is not disputed that on November 20, 1932, the Joint Magistrate went to the house of the late Mr. Noronha, that he remained in the house for a number of hours and that, before he left, it was announced that Mr. Noronha had executed a will. Mr. C maintains that he was entitled to make the charge of undue influence against the Joint Magistrate on the following facts, viz: firstly, Mr. Noronha had been an accused person shortly before the execution of the will on November 20, in the Joint Magistrate's Court; secondly, he was on terms of friendship with Mr. Noronha's sons; thirdly, he remained for a long time in the house of the late Mr. Noronha on the date upon which the will is alleged to have been executed; fourthly, subsequent to the execution of the will, he returned to the sons of Mr. Noronha the keys, the Bible and the despatch case, which he had taken from Mr. Noronha's house on November 20, 1932, and which he had upon that date or upon the following day deposited with the Chartered Bank in Cawnpore. These facts, which are not in dispute, constituted in Mr. C's view sufficient grounds upon which to prefer a charge of undue influence upon a judicial officer. Having given this matter my fullest consideration I am unable to agree. It has been assumed that there was some hostility on the part of Mr. Lyde towards Mr. Noronha because Mr. Noronha had been an accused person in his Court. I refuse to give judicial approval to the theory that a Judge must be presumed to entertain feelings of hostility to persons who appear before him either as civil litigants or accused in his Court. If that theory had any support in fact, then His Majesty's Judges would probably constitute the most hostile section of the human race. Because an accused person appears before a Judge in his Court, it is ludicrous to suggest that that Judge should be presumed to entertain towards him any feeling of hostility or that the Judge, impelled by malice, would pursue the party into his private life and use his influence to prejudice the party and undermine his interests or defeat his legitimate intentions.

It is true that Mr. Lyde remained for some considerable time in the house of the late Mr. Noronha on November 20, 1932, during which period the will was executed. There does not appear, however, to have been any attempt on the part of the Joint Magistrate to conceal what he was doing whilst in Mr. Noronha's house. According to the evidence which was in the possession of Mr. C. the Joint Magistrate sent for the Civil Surgeon in order that it might be ascertained whether Mr. Noronha was in a fit state to execute a will. According to the evidence of Mr. C's own witnesses, two of them at least, if their statements be true, were actually in the room when the Joint Magistrate and Mr. Bhasin were endeavouring to take down at Mr. Noronha's dictation, the will which is alleged to have been executed on that date. It is a matter of admission that Mr. Noronha was then in a very weak state. His death occurred three days later and it is well-known to those who have experience in the framing of wills, that to take the instructions from a man who is upon the point of death, who is in a very weak condition and who has a large amount of property, is a task which cannot be completed within a short period, Mr. C himself knew that when Mr. Noronha's earlier will was executed in Simla on September 30, 1930, when Mr. Noronha was in full possession of his senses and faculties and when he was suffering from no incapacity, it took him four or five hours to convey the instructions in regard to the execution of the will.

It is a matter of admission that after the alleged execution of the will the Joint Magistrate removed from the house the keys, the Bible and the despatch box already referred to. If he had been acting in concert with the sons, he would not have removed these articles. Not only does he remove them but he deposits them at the Chartered Bank and he does it with the knowledge of the District Judge. According to Mr. C the despatch box was supposed to contain the will and the trust deed, which were executed on September 30, 1930, under which the sons of Mr. Noronha took no part of Mr. Noronha's estate. It is true that upon a subsequent date the keys and the despatch box and the Bible were returned to Mr. Noronha's sons. The Joint Magistrate, however, did not act in this matter ex proprio motu; he acted under the direction of the District Judge. The District Judge held that he had no jurisdiction in the matter and suggested that these articles should be returned to those who were Mr. Noronha's legal representatives and who took his estate under the will which was executed on November 20, 1932

Now upon these facts I find it impossible to hold that any responsible Counsel was entitled solemnly to asseverate in a written statement that this judicial officer had been guilty of the offence of bringing undue influence to bear upon a weak and feeble old man who was on the point of death. Undoubtedly Mr. Lyde's conduct throughout quite legitmately could have been made the ground of cross-examination. If he had been cross-examined upon his conduct on November 2 , 1932, I have not the slightest doubt that he would have been able to give a satisfactory explanation of the facts. Counsel would have been entitled to cross-examine, but I am clearly of the view that Counsel was not entitled to frame against him so grave and so serious a charge upon the information which was in his possession.

With regard to the charge of murder, the position of Mr. C is weaker still. It is quite clear from the information which has been laid before us during the hearing of this matter that Mr. C himself entertained grave doubts as to the propriety of framing a charge of murder. So far as I am able to judge from the information before us, the only two persons who ever stated that Dr. Noronha and Dr. D'Silva murdered the late Mr. Noronha are Mrs. Peters and Mr. C himself. Mrs. Peters obviously could not speak of her own knowledge of what took place on the night before Mr. Noronha died. Her suggestion is that under the guise of an operation Dr. Noronha and Dr. D'Silva murdered the late Mr. Noronha. She was not present at the house at the time. Neither was Mr. C and when they make allegations of murder therefore they make them upon the evidence of witnesses who were able to speak of their own knowledge as to what took place upon November 22—the day before Mr. Noronha died. Only two witnesses give first-hand information upon this matter, firstly Mr. Bhagwan Din Misra, and, secondly, a nurse Miss Sarah Thomas. In his statement to Mr. C., Bhagwan Din Misra does not in terms state that he was present when any operation was performed. It is a fair inference from the expression which he does use, however, that he was present. The matter is, however, not free from doubt. He does say that an operation was performed and that shortly afterwards Mr. Noronha became unconscious and that he never recovered consciousness. Miss Sarah Thomas states that she was nurse in attendance upon Mr. Noronha and that Dr. Noronha and Dr. D'Silva performed an operation upon the late Mr. Noronha the night before he died. In her statement to Mr. C, she does not suggest that these two doctors murdered Mr. Noronha.

There are two significant facts which tell very heavily against Mr. C. One is that he did not ask either Mr. Bhagwan Din Misra or Miss Sarah Thomas if they were present when the alleged operation is said to have been performed. The second is that he did not ask either of these witnesses what was the nature of the operation which was performed. From Mr. C's statement to us it appears clear that he had entertained the suspicion, having taken the statements of these two witnesses that murder had been committed. Eventually he did make a charge of murder in the written statement. Before making it he did not consider it worth while to elucidate the matters to which I have refefred. Before he framed the most serious charge which can be brought against any citizen, he did not think it worth while to send for these witnesses and ask them if they were present when the operation was performed and what was the nature of the operation. Mr. C explains that it was in the interests of the sons of Mr. Noronha that Mr. Noronha should die before he revoked the will which he is alleged to have executed on November 20, and he further states that according to the information which he had, Mr. Noronha was likely to revoke the deed which he had executed upon that date. That may well be so, but upon so slender a foundation he is not entitled to prefer a charge of murder, and I must frankly say that I am amazed that any responsible Counsel could have, upon this flimsy evidence, framed so serious a charge.

Allegations of forgery were made in the written statement. These allegations were made against the sons and sons-in-law of Mr. Noronha and against Mr. Bhasin, who was present when the will was alleged to have been executed. There is no doubt now that a document, which purported to be a will, was executed on November 20, 1932. It is further within our knowledge that upon that date Mr. Noronha was in such a weak state that he was unable to affix his usual signature to the will and that instead of his signature his thumb mark appears thereon. The only evidence or information upon which the charge of forgery was framed appears to have been a story that shortly after Mr. Noronha died his thumbs were found to be black, and further, that one of Mr. Noronha's sons was seen to have two foolscap pages which were blank but had thumb marks affixed to them shortly before Mr. Noronha died. Upon that evidence I am clearly of the view that Mr. C was not entitled to prefer a charge of forgery against a brother practitioner or indeed against any one. In the course of their report the Bar Council Committee referred to a decision of a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in In re Dwarka Prasad (1) and the Committee appear to have accepted the statement of the law in that case. The passage referred to by the Committee is as follows:

"Members of the legal profession are under no duty to their clients to make grave and scandalous charges either against Judges or the opposite parties on the mere wish of their clients. They are not puppets compelled to obey the dictates of their clients where matters of good faith and honourable conduct are concerned. They are responsible to the Court for the fair and honest conduct of a case. They are not mere agents of the man who pays them, but are acting in the administration of justice, and in matters of this kind they are bound to exercise an independent judgment and to conduct themselves with a sense of personal responsibility. If they fail to act with reasonable care and caution, they are unfit to enjoy the privileges conferred upon them by law and serious breaches must be visited with punishment."

So far as it goes, with respect, this appears to me to be a statement of the law which is unchallengable. It is an axiom which no one will challenge that in the conduct of a case a Counsel ought to act with caution and with circumspection. Mr. C, however, in support of his position referred to another Full Bench decision of this Court reported in In the matter of Vakil (2) and relied especially upon a passage in the judgment of the learned Chief Justice which is as follows:

"A Counsel is entitled to accept the instructions of the client subject to this, that as a matter of prudence and for one's own reputation, it is not well to associate oneself with reckless charges of fraud and criminality or to indulge in abuse; and Counsel should explain to clients that these charges, if unproved, gravely injure the case, and prejudice the Judge. Counsel is not supposed to go hunting here, there and everywhere to test by extraneous circumstances the veracity of his client. It cannot be done nor is it the practice to do it."

In my judgment this statement of the law in no way conflicts with the earlier statement contained in the decision in the case reported in In re Dwarka Prasad (1). Most assuredly a Counsel is not expected to conduct an inquiry into the statements made by his client. But when the client makes a statement upon facts which cannot possibly be within his own knowledge, then it is undoubtedly the duty of Counsel before he makes an allegation based on the information supplied by the client in a written statement to discover if there is evidence in support of this allegation. He is entitled to accept his client's statement of facts so far as these facts may be within the knowledge of the client. But if his client desires him to frame serious and grave charges in a written statement then undoubtedly it is the duty of the Counsel before he does so to satisfy himself that there is reasonable evidence forthcoming in support of these allegations. It is somewhat difficult to lay down a general rule which will operate fairly in every case, but I think this at least may be stated: no Counsel is entitled to frame a serious charge against a party to a litigation unless he is in possession of admissible and relevant evidence upon which, if accepted, Counsel could reasonably ask the Court to hold the allegations true. It may well be that the evidence in support of the allegations is untrue and it is certainly not the duty of a Counsel in the ordinary course to test the truth of the witnesses whom he intends to put into the witness box but at the conclusion of the evidence which he has led, he should be in a position to submit as a reasonable proposition to the Court that the evidence which he has led, if accepted, establishes the allegations for which he had made himself responsible. If he is not in possession of such evidence to support them, he is not entitled to make grave and serious allegations, such as are contained in the written statement which was filed by Mr. C on behalf of Mrs. Peters. The Bar Council Committee upon a consideration of the information which was in Mr. C's possession when he framed the charges already referred to concluded by stating:

(1) 81 Ind. Cas. 177; A I R 1924 All. 253; 25 Cr. L J 889; 46 A 121; 21 A L J 893 (F B).

(2) 88 Ind. Cas 179; A I R 1925 All. 641; 47 A 729; 23 A L J 469; L R 6 A 403; 26 Cr. L J 1091 (F B).

"We are of opinion that Mr. C did not act recklessly and without sufficient care. On the contrary we are of opinion that having regard to the circumstances of the case and the instructions of his client he was justified in approving the written statement and that he could not consistently with his duty to his client and in her interests do otherwise."

So far as the charges of undue influence against the Joint Magistrate, forgery against Mr. Bhasin and murder against the sons and sons-in-law of the late Mr. Noronha are concerned, I am unable to agree with the conclusion of the Committee. Without reservation, and without qualification I must say that in my judgment the finding of the Bar Council Committee upon these charges is not justified. I am aware that usually this Court will accept, especially when there is no objection preferred by the learned Government Advocate, the finding of the Bar Council. This Court, however, is not bound by and in my view, in this case the Court ought not to accept the finding of the Bar Council so far as that finding relates to the three charges mentioned above. Having given the matter my fullest consideration I am of opinion that as Counsel for Mrs. Peters in her opposition to the application to the letters of administration upon the will of the late Mr. Noronha, Mr. C did not act with that caution, circumspection and propriety with which he should have acted, especially having in view the very serious charges which were contained in the written statement which he filed. In my judgment Mr. C has not acted in this matter consistently with his duty to the Court and in consonance with the high traditions of the legal profession.

The Bar Council Committee hold that Mr. C has not been guilty of professional misconduct. I do not agree with that finding. I understand that my learned brothers are in agreement that in any event no punitive order should be passed. On this question I do not propose to dissent and having stated my view on the matter, I do not suggest in the circumstances that this Court should take any action against Mr. C.

Iqbal Ahmad, J.—I regret I am unable to agree with the observations made by my learned brother who is presiding over this Bench as, after giving the matter my best consideration, I have come to the conclusion that the finding recorded by the Bar Tribunal "that Mr. C did not act recklessly and without sufficient care" is perfectly correct. Indeed having regard to the circumstances of the case, to which reference shall presently be made, I have no hesitation in holding that Mr. C was justified in drafting the written statements on behalf of his client in the terms that he did, and that consistently with his duty to his client he could not do otherwise. The charge against Mr. C was that in the written statement drafted by him in testamentary suit No. 2 of 1933, on behalf of the objector Mrs. Peters, he made accusations of conspiracy, forgery and murder against the petitioner and certain others and the charge of undue influence against Mr. Lyde, the City Magistrate of Cawnpore, and the charge of forgery against Mr. Bhasin, an Advocate of Cawnpore, without satisfying himself that there was any evidence to support the charges, and he was thereby guilty of professional misconduct.

In order to appreciate the finding recorded by the Bar Tribunal that the charge was not brought home to Mr. C, it is necessary to state the facts in some detail. One Mr. W. C. de Noronha, a prominent citizen of Cawnpore, died on November 23, 1932, leaving properties worth about Rs. 10 lakhs. Mr. Noronha was at the time of his death an old man of over 70 years of age and was suffering from diabetes and it appears from the statement of Major Clyde, the then Civil Surgeon of Cawnpore that he had two carbuncles and his condition was grave more than two weeks before his death. It is common ground that the relations of Mr. Noronha with his sons were very bad since 1924 and the sons were living separately from the father. In this connection it may be pointed out that in the family Bible there are entries about the four surviving sons to the effect that they were disowned by Mr. Noronha "as most unfaithful and ungrateful". Mrs. Peters on whose instructions the written statements, the subject of charge, were prepared by Mr. C is proved to have been on terms of great intimacy with the late Mr. Noronha for several years, and she used to visit Mr. Noronha during his last illness till November 14, 1932, and was looking after and nursing him in his illness. It is admitted that the sons came to live in the house of Mr. Noronha on November 14, 1932, and continued to live in the house till the date of his death. The sons prevented Mrs. Peters from entering the house since they came to live there. We also find that on November 19, 1932, the sons or the sons-in-law of Mr. Noronha took possession of his keys and when Mr. Noronha came to know of this fact, he was upset, and desired that the Collector should come to his house. The parties in the testamentary case were at variance as to the reasons why Mr. Noronha desired to see the Collector but, for the purposes of the present case, it is immaterial to deal with the merits of the respective contentions of the parties on the point.

It is admitted on all hands that on November 20, 1932, Mr. Lyde came to the house of Mr. Noronha at about 12 noon and stayed there till about 7 P. M. and it is alleged that during this interval a will was prepared by Mr. Bhasin, Advocate, on instructions received from the late Mr. Noronha and was faired out and signed by Mr. Noronha and attested by witnesses. The genuineness and validity of this will was challenged by Mrs. Peters in the testamentary suit referred to above. Mr. Lyde took with him the attache case and the Bible from the house of Mr. Noronha and deposited the same in some bank. There is no evidence before us as regards the events that took place on November 21. On November 22, one Major Tee who was a friend of Mr. Noronha visited him and it appears from his statement, that has been exhibited in the case, that during the course of the conversation that he had with Mr. Noronha the latter told Major Tee that he had never executed any will on the date on which he was alleged to have done so. One of the sons of the late Mr. Noronha filed an application for letters of administration with a copy of the will of the deceased dated November 20, on May 2, 1933, in this Court. A caveat was entered by Mrs. Peters and on August 17, 1933, a written statement was filed on her behalf. The written statement is very brief and is divided into 8 paragraphs. We are not concerned with paras. 1 to 7 of the written statement. It is stated in para. 8 that:

"the affidavit dated July 31, 1933, contains all true facts in controversy and it may be treated as a part of my written statement."

The affidavit referred to in this paragraph is the affidavit of Mrs. Peters and in that affidavit the charges of conspiracy, forgery, murder and undue influence are set forth in great detail. The learned Judge who heard the testamentary case was of the opinion that the written statement and the affidavit were "hopeless for the purposes for which they are filed."

The learned Judge accordingly granted leave to Counsel for Mrs. Peters to amend the written statement or to entirely re-draft it if he so wished. Several amended and additional written statements were thereafter filed on behalf of Mrs. Peters, and Mr. C takes full responsibility with respect to having drafted the same.

The question that we have to consider is whether Mr. C did act recklessly and without sufficient care in drafting the written statements mentioned above and whether he was guilty of professional misconduct in having drafted the written statements in accordance with the instructions given to him by his client. It is not disputed that the written statements were completely in accordance with the instructions given to Mr. C by Mrs. Peters. The question therefore remains whether Mr. C did recklessly and without taking sufficient care embody the allegations of conspiracy, etc., in the written statements and was thereby guilty of professional misconduct. After having considered the facts of the case, I have no hesitation in answering the question in the negative.

It is abundantly proved from the materials, to which detailed reference has been made by the Bar Tribunal in its finding, that Mr. Noronha had got a will prepared at Simla in 1930 by Mr. Bevan Petman, a Barrister of Lahore, and that he had by that will devised the major portion of his properties for charities and had bequeathed two houses and a sum of Rs. 50,000 and a further allowance of Rs. 100 for life to Mrs. Peters. In the course of his submissions Mr. C suggested that that will was probably in the attache case and was removed by the sons, and I am not prepared to say that the suggestion is without force. There is also some evidence to show that along with the will Mr. Noronha executed a deed of trust for putting into immediate operation the clauses of the will as regards the bequest in favour of charity, so as to set at rest all objections to the validity of the will because of its non-registration. It is worthy of note that no portion of the property was devised by this will in favour of the sons. The disputed will of November 20, 1932, no doubt, also purported to devise properties of considerable value for charities, but the suggestion on behalf of Mrs. Peters in the testamentary suit was—and there was considerable force in the suggestion—that the provision as to that charitable gift was illusory and designed to leave the entire estate of the deceased to the sons as the provision to charity was void.

It is also in evidence that the late Mr. Noronha was an accused in a case under s. 679, Penal Code, that was pending in the Court of Mr. Lyde till November 17, 1932. That case was compromised on that date. We further find from the affidavit filed by Mrs. Peters in this Court in the testamentary suit that one of the sons and a son-in law of Mr. Noronha performed an operation on Mr. Noronha on November 22, and Mr. Noronha died the next morning. The following undisputed facts were therefore before Mr. C before he drafted the written statements: (1) Mr. Noronha was displeased with his sons and had turned them out of his house and disowned them so far back as in the year 1924. (2) In the year 1930 he had executed a will with all due publicity bequeathing the major portion of his property for charity and had also by the same will devised two houses and a sum of Rs. 50,000 to Mrs. Peters and had totally disinherited the sons. (3) There is absolutely no suggestion and much less any evidence of any reconciliation between the father and the sons prior to November 14, 1932. (4) The sons either effected an entry in the house of Mr. Noronha contrary to his wishes or came to live in the house with his consent on November 14, 1932. (5) From the time that the sons came to live in the house of Mr. Noronha, Mrs. Peters was not allowed to enter the house. (6) There is no evidence to show what led to Mr. Noronha to change his mind between November 14 and November 20 - the date on which the will is alleged to have been executed. (7) The will is alleged to have been executed at a time when a Magistrate of Cawnpore, before whom only three days before the alleged execution of the will, the testator figured as an accused in a case under s. 379, Penal Code, was present. (8) There is no explanation as to why Mr. Lyde had to remain in the house of Mr. Noronha for about 7 or 8 hours. (9) No attempt was made to deposit the will in the office of the District Judge, Cawnpore, during the lifetime of Mr. Noronha. (10) Even the ordinary precaution, that is usually taken when the testator is in such a weak state of health as Mr. Noronha was, of getting the will registered, was not taken. (11) A respectable man like Major Tee had given a statement in writing to Mr. C that the testator denied having executed a will in favour of the sons. (12) One day before the death of Mr. Noronha an operation was performed by one of the sons who was one of the legatees under the will and the testator did not survive the operation for more than 12 hours. (13) The operation was performed on a patient who was suffering from chronic diabetes without taking the Civil Surgeon into confidence, who, it is admitted, was treating the patient during his last illness. (14) After the death of Mr. Noronha his thumb was found besmeared with ink.

The facts noted above speak for themselves and comment is superfluous. Apart from these facts Mr. C had the statements in writing of Bhagwan Din Misra, the record-keeper, in Mr. Noronha's firm, and of Ghani, a personal servant of Mr. Noronha, and of Miss Thomas who was a nurse in attendance on Mr. Noronha during the relevant period, and these statements did support the charges of conspiracy, etc., embodied in the affidavits of Mrs. Peters. Over and above these statements there were the affidavits of Mrs. Peters clearly formulating the charges of conspiracy, etc., mentioned above. In view of the facts and materials noted above, Mr. C was, in my judgment, not only justified, but clearly in duty bound to make the allegations that are embodied in the written statements. The measure of the responsibility of a Counsel in drafting pleadings is set out in the Full Bench decision reported in In the matter of Vakil (2). It was observed in that case that:

"A client who consults a Counsel and who requires a plaint or written statement to be drafted, instructs the Counsel as to the facts of the desired document. It unfortunately does not always happen that those facts are true, but from the Counsel's point of view that is not a material matter, and indeed if one looks at pleadings in cases generally, it is obvious that a plaint and the written statement cannot both be true because an issue or issues arise out of the denials of the truth of the averments on one side or the other and that enables the case to be fought upon clear lines A Counsel is entitled to accept the instructions of the client subject to this, that, as a matter of prudence and for one's own reputation, it is not well to associate oneself with reckless charges of fraud and criminality or to indulge in abuse; and Counsel should explain to clients that these charges, if unproved, gravely injure the case, and prejudice the Judge. Counsel is not supposed to go hunting here, there and everywhere to test by extraneous circumstances the veracity of his client. It cannot be done, nor is it the practice to do it. Counsel have to depend upon the statement that the client makes, the penalty being that, if the client is not telling the truth, he may probably lose the case. In those circumstances the rule is that the client is entitled to have the particular document drafted according to the instructions given."

In the case before us Mr. C went beyond the standard laid down by their Lordships in the case quoted above. He insisted on the statements of the personal attendants and of certain subordinates of Mr. Noronha being supplied to him before he consented to draw up the written statements. He took the trouble of going to Calcutta for the purpose of recording the statement of Major Tee. Mr. C read out all those statements to us and coupled with the facts stated above, those statements supplemented by the affidavits of Mrs. Peters did, in my judgment, afford complete justification for the charges of conspiracy, forgery, undue influence and murder "in law" embodied in the written statements. The fact that the will of November 20, 1932, was not executed till about 3 days before the death of the testator and was in favour of the sons who had been disowned by the testator as "ungrateful" itself laid that document open to grave suspicions. The testator was at the time of the execution of the will admittedly extremely weak and almost at the point of death. He must have been, because of the carbuncle, in great physical and mental distress. The City Magistrate of Cawnpore before whom only three days before the testator was an accused in a theft case was present all through the time that the will is alleged to have been drafted, faired out and executed. In view of these facts Mrs. Peters insisted that the charge of undue influence should be embodied in the written statement, and I am not prepared to hold that Mr. C could, as a responsible Counsel, refuse to comply with the instructions of his client in the matter.

Similarly there were materials that did justify the charge of forgery. The fact of the non-registration of the will coupled with the assertion that the thumb of Mr. Noronha was found besmeared with ink at the time of his death did constitute ample material for the charge of forgery. Again the charge of murder "in law" could not be characterized as reckless in the circumstances of the present case. It may be that there was no such evidence before Mr. C as could bring the charge of murder home to the sons of Mr. Noronha if they were prosecuted in a Criminal Court on that charge. But I cannot overlook the fact that the written statement was being filed in a probate case and it may be that the allegation about murder "in law" did not amount to more than this that the sons by performing an operation did precipitate the death of the testator and, as such, could not take benefit under the will. In this connection reference may be made to the decision in Hall, In re; Hall v. Knight (3).

In my judgment the Full Bench decision in In re Dwarka Prasad (1), has no application to the case before us. That was not a case in which this Court was concerned with pleadings drafted by a Counsel. In that case a Junior Counsel made "disgraceful charge of unfairness against the Magistrate," who was trying the case. The charge against the Magistrate appears to have been made by the Counsel concerned on his own responsibility. The observations of their Lordships who decided that Full Bench case must, therefore, be taken with reference to the facts of the case before their Lordships and cannot govern the case before us.

I consider it imperative in the interest of administration of justice that too rigid a test of the conduct of an Advocate in the matter of drafting pleadings should not be emphasized and that the test should be such as not to deter a Counsel from fearlessly placing before the Court such allegations as their clients instruct them to make, so long as those allegations do not appear manifestly reckless and unfounded. It is no doubt the duty of Counsel to use their own judgment, experience and discretion and not to make irrelevant or unduly insulting allegations in the pleadings but it is equally their duty to embody the case of their clients in the pleadings fearlessly, provided the instructions received from clients justify the case embodied in the pleadings. While on the one hand a Counsel is expected to be careful and not reckless in drafting the pleadings, he cannot, on the other hand, assume the role of a Judge and refuse to embody allegations that his client instructs him to make unless and until he has examined the evidence on the subject. A Counsel is in one sense the mouthpiece of his client, but he does not guarantee or pledge himself for his client's veracity. When I apply these tests to the present case, I cannot but accept the finding recorded by the Bar Tribunal without any reservation.

(3) (1914) P 1; 83 L J P 1; 109 L T 587; 58 S J 30; 30 T L R 1.

Before parting with this case I may note that as a matter of practice, this Court attaches greatest weight to the findings on questions of fact recorded by the Bar Tribunal and that in this case even the Government Advocate did not take objections to the findings of the Tribunal.

Allsop, J.—My learned brothers are agreed that no further action need be taken against Mr. C. The only question, therefore, which remains to be considered is whether his action in this matter as Counsel for Mrs. Peters can be unreservedly approved. There seems to be no doubt at all about the law upon this question. On the one hand, Counsel must look to the interests of his client and not be deterred by fear or favour from making any allegations which in those interests it is necessary for him to make. On the other hand, he cannot take shelter behind his client and claim to be an entirely irresponsible instrument in his client's hands. There remains in him a duty and an obligation to his fellow citizens and he is certainly not entitled to make scandalous and serious allegations against those fellow citizens unless he has some basis upon which the allegations can be grounded.

In the present case I understand that the question at issue about the validity of the will is still the subject of an appeal in this Court and I should, therefore, prefer to say nothing which may have a bearing upon the issue to be decided when the appeal is heard. I think it is sufficient for me to consider the allegation of murder which was made in the written statement which was put in by Mr. C on behalf of his client. I am not quite sure even now, after hearing the arguments, that Mr. C is really fully aware of the seriousness of the allegation that he made. It is surely no light matter to accuse a son of having hastened the death of his own father with the motive that that father should not be in a position to vary or repudiate a will which he had made. I have to consider in this case what ground or basis Mr. C had for his terrible charge which he made against Mr. Noronha's son and against a son-in-law. There was before him the evidence of two witnesses, one a nurse and the other a personal servant. The statements made by these persons were merely these that Mr. Noronha's son and son-in-law, who were both medical practitioners, had performed an operation upon Mr. Noronha and that next morning Mr. Noronha was dead.

The only other matter which might give rise to an inference was that it was possible that it was to the interests of these two persons that the will which was alleged to have been made should not be repudiated or in any manner varied. It is not even quite certain, as far as I can see, that it was to the interests of the son or the sons-in-law that the will should not be varied or repudiated. There has been a mention of a previous will and an alleged deed of trust but I do not think that there is any evidence anywhere that either of these documents was properly executed. In so far as the previous will related to a charitable bequest, there can be no doubt whatsoever that it had no validity. If the will had been executed and was a valid will, it might have resulted in the passing of a sum of Rs. 50,000 to Mrs. Peters but the remainder of the property which consists of several lakhs would have passed in any case to the sons and possibly to any daughters who might be living.

In the will which was sought to be proved there was also a charitable bequest and although that bequest apparently had no validity, it cannot be said that there was any very much greater benefit to the sons under the latter will than under the former one. At any rate, there was not so much difference that one could reasonably conclude that two respectable medical practitioners, namely, the son and the son-in-law of Mr. Noronha would commit a murder in order that the prior will should not have effect or that Mr. Noronha might make another will in more or less the same terms. It seems to me that there was no justification at all for the conclusion that so serious a crime had been committed and I must note that no attempt was made to call in the Police to establish that a criminal offence had been committed.

In considering the terms of the allegation I must mention that the charge was that a legal murder had been committed. I am prepared to consider that perhaps Mr. C, when he made the allegations, really meant to say that there had been some action which morally might amount to a murder and that he did not really intend to assert that a criminal offence had been committed. But taking the matter at its best it cannot be doubted that there was at least a hint and more probably an allegation that these two persons had deliberately hastened the death of Mr. Noronha with the object of material gain to themselves.

Mr. C in my opinion was under an obligation before he made a charge of this kind to be satisfied that there was some real basis for it. The mere fact that an operation had been performed and that Mr. Noronha died the next morning could not possibly give rise to any collusion that the operation was an improper one performed with the purpose of causing death.

There is no real evidence whatsoever in support of this charge. Mr. C did not even take the trouble to enquire from the witnesses whose statements were before him what the nature of the operation was. He knew also that Mr. Noronha had been under the treatment of the Civil Surgeon, a respectable medical officer who could have no interest one way or the other in disputes between Mr. Noronha's sons and Mrs. Peters. It does not appear that he ever enquired from the Civil Surgeon whether any operation had been performed or what its nature was or whether it was an operation which hastened the death of the patient.

I do not propose, as I have already said, to consider the charges of undue influence against the Joint Magistrate Mr. Lyde and of forgery against an Advocate Mr. Bhasin. I may only say that prima facie it appears to me that there was very little basis for any charges of this kind. In my opinion, Mr. C was extremely reckless in framing the charges which he did. I give this opinion because I hope that he will not be set up in the light in which appears in this case as a pattern and an exemplar by the Advocates practising in this Court and in the District Courts of this Province.

D. Order accordingly.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Rule No. 493 of 1934

August 20, 1934

MITTER, J.

MANNILAL ANANDJI—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER

versus

B. N. RY., LTD.—DEFENDANTS—OPPOSITE PARTIES

Railways Act (IX of 1890), s. 72 (1) (2)—Liability of Railway Administration—Whether as bailee or insurer or carrier—Misconduct—Rain water entering wagon by great force of wind—Whether amounts to misconduct—Railway Company does not insure against negligence of consignor.

In India the liability of a Railway Administration is not that of a common carrier. It is not an insurer. Its liability is that of a bailee as defined in the Contract Act. If there is no negligence there is no liability. Whatever the term 'misconduct' may imply, the word implies something more than negligence. If rain water enters a wagon by the great force of wind the omission of the Railway Company to provide absolutely water-tight doors, such as would not permit even a drop of water to enter, would not amount to misconduct. To insist on such a high standard would be to make an Indian Railway Administration virtually an insurer and not a bailee Jamunadas v. E. I. Ry. Co (5), explained and doubted.

[Case-law referred to.]

A Railway Company does not insure against the negligence of the consignor. It is the duty of the consignor to have his goods properly packed, such as would be damaged unless properly packed! This is even so where the responsibility of a carrier is much more than that of a Railway Administration. London and North Western Ry Co. v. Richard Hudson & Sons, Ltd. (6), referred to.

C. R. from judgment of Small Cause Court Judge, Sealdah, dated December 22, 1933.

Messrs. J. D. Lewis and Mahendra Kumar Ghose, for the Petitioner.

Messrs. S. C. Brahmachari and Sudhir Kumar Khastgir, for the Opposite Parties.

Order.—This Rule is on behalf of the plaintiff whose claim for damages against the B. N. Ry. Co. has been dismissed by the learned Small Cause Court Judge of Sealdah. The plaintiff is a dealer in biri. His agent booked consignments of biri leaves from Amgaon to Shalimar under invoice No. 16, dated September 17, 1930, and from Gondia to the same station under invoice No. 47 dated October 28, 1930. On arrival of the goods at Shalimar it was found that 8 bags of the first and 6 bags of the second consignment had been damaged by wettage. The Railway Officers estimated without prejudice the damage at 20 per cent. and the plaintiff took delivery. The plaintiff has now claimed damages. For both the consignments the plaintiff's agent executed risk notes in Form B approved by the Governor-General in Council which would make the Railway Administration liable for "loss, destruction, deterioration or damage" only if the plaintiff proved misconduct on the part of the Railway Administration's servants. For the consignment booked from Amgaon the plaintiff's agent also executed a risk note in From A, the goods being not packed according to the requirements of the defendant, namely they were not packed in double gunny bags of the required quality.

In the plaint the plaintiff made specific allegations that the goods had been damaged by the undue delay in transit and by the carriage in non-waterproof wagons with wooden roofs. In one paragraph of the plaint however there is a general statement that the Railway Company's servants had been guilty of negligence and misconduct, no particulars being given. The defendant Company ought to have asked for particulars about the misconduct pleaded which they neglected to do. The learned Small Cause Court Judge has recorded findings to the effect that there was no undue delay in transit and that it was not proved that the wagons which according to the admission of the defendant Company had corrugated iron roofs, were defective. He also held that the plaintiff had failed to prove wilful neglect on the part of the Railway Company's servants. How the last finding is material I fail to see. The form of risk note B was amended in 1924, when the word misconduct was substituted for the words wilful neglect. He did not record an express finding on the question as to whether there was any misconduct on the part of the Railway Company's servants. He, however, found that the Railway Company had proved satisfactorily that its servants had taken due care and precaution in respect of the consignments and that damages that occurred cannot be attributed to any neglect on their part.

One would have thought that after the said findings it was a bold step for the plaintiff to move further in the matter. Realising that he could not further hope to succeed on the specific allegations made in the plaint, the plaintiff turns round and presents his case on a new line altogether, which has only been rendered possible by the Railway Company neglecting to ask for particulars about the misconduct pleaded. He says now that the servants of the Railway Administration had been guilty of breach of standing orders and points out two of them to be found in Ex. 4. The first is that during the monsoon (which according to the instructions of the Railway Company is to be taken to last from June to December) goods liable to damage are not to be loaded against the sides of flap doors of wagons but well away and the second is that wagons with corrugated iron roof should not be loaded with damageable commodities and urges that breach of standing orders by itself is misconduct. As I have stated that on the plaint this case the defendant opposite party was not called upon to meet, but I would not rest my judgment on the said ground. Assuming that mere breach of standing orders would amount to misconduct for which there is some authority, see Secretary of State for India v. Dhokalmal (1) and Bengal Nagpar Ry. Co. v. Moolji Sicka & Co. (2), the findings of the learned Small Cause Court Judge exclude the case of misconduct. It is not necessary for me in this case to define the word misconduct or to decide if there is a distinction between "misconduct" as used in Risk Note B in currency in India and the word "wilful misconduct" used in England in such cases. On this point there is a divergence of opinion: see Bengal Nagpur Railway Company v. Moolji Sicka and Company (3) and M. & S. M. Railway Co., Ltd. v. Sunderjee Kalidas (4).

In India the liability of a Railway Administration is not that of a common carrier. It is not an insurer. Its liability is that of a bailee as defined in the Contract Act. If there is no negligence there is

(1) 134 Ind. Cas. 940; A I R 1931 Cal. 734; 54 C L J 154; 35 C W N 1250; Ind. Rul. (1931) Cal. 910.

(2) 134 Ind. Cas. 1268; A I R 1932 Cal. 70; 54 C L J 314; Ind. Rul. (1932) Cal. 52.

(3) 129 Ind. Cas. 769; A I R 1930 Cal. 815; 52 C L J 235; 35 C W N 133; 58 C 586; Ind. Rul. (1931) Cal 241.

(4) 147 Ind. Cas. 752; A I R 1933 Cal. 742; 57 C L J 281; 60 C 996; 6 R C 356.

no liability. Whatever the term misconduct may imply, it is quite apparent from a comparison of cl. (1) with cl. (2) of s. 72, Railways Act, that the word implies something more than negligence. The risk notes approved by the Governor-General in Council as their terms show are intended to reduce and limit the responsibility which Railway Administrations would otherwise have under sub-s. (1) of s. 72. The finding that there was no negligence on the part of the opposite party necessarily excludes the case of misconduct. There is documentary evidence that in respect of at least the consignment booked at Gondia the agent of the plaintiff admitted that the wagon was in good condition (Ex. G). There is no evidence that the goods had been loaded against the sides or flap doors as all the evidence that has been placed before me is inconclusive. That evidence is that when the wagons were opened at Shalimar some bags fell out. The bags of biri leaves are huge and comparatively light. It may as well be that some of them had slided to the sides by reason of the jerks and other causes due to motion. Exhibits Q and Q-2, the only documents on which the learned Advocate of the petitioners could lay his hands on, show that the opinion of some of the Railway servants was that rain had "beaten in". If rain water enters a wagon by the great force of winds I do not see how the omission of the Railway Company to provide absolutely water-tight doors, such as would not permit even a drop of water to enter would amount to misconduct. If that is the proposition intended to be laid down in Jamnadas v. E. I. Ry. Co. (5) I must respectfully dissent from it. To insist on such a high standard would be to make an Indian Railway Administration virtually an insurer and not a bailee, whose responsibility is defined in ss. 151 and 152, Contract Act.

With regard to the consignment booked at Amgaon there is a further difficulty that bars the success of the plaintiff. His agent admitted that the consignment had not proper and adequate covering and on that footing executed a risk note in Form A. A Railway Company does not insure against the negligence of the consignor. It is the duty of the consignor to have his goods properly packed, such as would be damaged unless properly packed. This is even so where the responsibility of a carrier is much more than that of an Railway Administration; see Lord Dunedin in London and North Western Ry. Co. v. Richard Hudson & Sons, Ltd. (6), at 335* Disney's Carriage by Railway, Edition 7, p. 64. For these reasons I would discharge the Rule with costs one gold mohur.

D. Rule discharged.

(5) 148 Ind. Cas. 396; A I R 1933 Pat. 630; 6 R P 454.

(6) (1920) A C 324; 122 L T 530; 89 L J K B 323

*Page of (1920) A. C.—[Ed.]

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT
Special Bench

Civil Miscellaneous Case No. 451 of 1934.

October 29, 1934

THOM, BENNET AND IQBAL AHMAD, JJ.

In the matter of AN ADVOCATE, HIGH COURT, ALLAHABAD

Practice—Bar Council—Findings by—Importance given by High Court.

The High Court usually attaches great weight to the finding of fact of a Committee of the Bar Tribunal.

Order.—Several charges in which Mr. R., Advocate, was charged with professional misconduct were remitted by the High Court to the Bar Council for investigation. The Bar Council held an enquiry and have now reported that in their opinion upon the evidence led before them the charges have been unsubstantiated. This is a finding of fact and to findings of fact of a committee of the Bar Tribunal the High Court usually attaches great weight. One of us is not satisfied that the findings of fact of the Bar Council in the present case are absolutely correct, but we are in agreement that there being no objections to the findings those findings should be accepted by this Court.

In the result we accept the findings of the Bar Council. Let the papers be filed.

D. Order accordingly.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 1707 of 1932

August 24, 1934

MUKERJI, ACTG. C. J. AND S. K. GHOSE, J.

HEM CHANDRA DAS CHAUDHURY AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

SECRETARY OF STATE AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Bengal Cess Act (IX of 1880), s. 4—Kabuliyat—Ijardar entitled to exclude anybody else from dealing with land in manner he himself is entitled to do—Ijardar, whether in use and occupation—What he pays under kabuliyat is rent.

Where under the terms of the kabuliyats the ijardars are entitled to exclude anybody else from dealing with the lands in the particular manner in which he himself is entitled to do under his kabuliyat, in that sense, a limited sense though it be, the ijardar is in use and occupation, being allowed by his kabuliyat to let in or exclude anybody he likes for sale of the particular commodities to which his kabuliyat referred, collecting such tolls as his kabuliyat permitted and using perhaps such portion of the land covered by the boundaries on which those particular commodities used to be sold. What the ijardar has to pay under his kabuliyat is "rent" within the meaning of s. 4 of the Cess Act. Secretary of State v Sati Prosad Garga (2), applied.

A. from appellate decree of the Additional District Judge, Noakhali, dated April 1, 1932.

Messrs. Atul Chandra Gupta and Nagendra Nath Bose, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Sarat Chandra Basak, Rupendra Kumar Mitter and Bijan Kumar Murkherji, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal arises out of a suit which was instituted by the plaintiffs for a declaration that the assessment of cess by the Cess Revaluation Officer on the income from the stalls of a certain market or hat of which the plaintiffs are tenure-holders was illegal and ultra vires, and also for refund of the amount of cess which they had paid under protest. The Courts below have dismissed the suit.

The plaintiffs are tenure-holders in respect of the lands on which the market or hat holds its sittings. The exact particulars are not available, but, as far as may be gathered, there are some stalls and also some open space on which the dealers come and sit and do their work. The hat meets two days in the week. The plaintiffs have taken kabuliyats from several ijardars who under the terms thereof collect tolls from the stall-keepers and dealers of various descriptions and out of the sums so collected pay certain sums as jamas per year to the plaintiffs. The jamas just mentioned have been treated as "rent" and the annual value being found on the basis thereof the re-assessment has been made. We are told that prior to the re-assessment cesses had to be paid on the annual value calculated on the basis of the rents of such tenants as were actually on the land and also on the average of such raiyati rents as might be held to be realisable from the portion of the land which was untenanted. The market or hat was also in existence at the time.

Reading s. 4, Cess Act (Bengal Act IX of 1880) it is found that the annual value means the total rent which is payable, or if no rent is actually payable, would on a reasonable assessment be payable during the year by cultivaing raiyats or by other persons in actual use and occupation. There are several difficulties in interpreting this definition, but they need not concern us here because the point in controversy is a limited one. It has been formulated by the Subordinate Judge in these words:

"Whether the ijardars in the present case are in use and occupation of the lands and whether the amounts paid by them can be treated as rent within the meaning of s. 4, Cess Act."

It is not urged on either side that this enunciation of the proposition, which is for our consideration, is not correct. In para. 4 of the plaint the plaintiffs have averred that the lands are non-agricultural and non-leasable and are in the khas possession of the plaintiffs, that in the hat which is held every Thursday and Sunday various commodities are sold, that there is no permanently allotted space for the sale of the same, that temporary stalls are made and dealers do their business, that tolls are collected by the ijardars who in accordance with their agreements pay some moneys to the plaintiffs, and that under the agreements the profits and losses belong to the ijardars. Under each of the kabuliyats which are all for a period of a year, the right to collect tolls for some particular commodities only is granted, and it is stipulated that besides those commodities, tolls on no others would be realisable by the grantee, and a lump sum being fixed, it is made payable in five kists. The kabuliyat is described as of a temporary ijardari settlement. The lands concerned in all the kabuliyats are the same, the boundaries in each kabuliyat covering the entire land on which the market or hat stands.

To the above should be added certain facts which have been found by the Court of Appeal below. In the settlement the lands are recorded as being in the khas possession of the plaintiffs and no interest as of the ijardars has been recorded; there are no fixed plots or places for the several commodities which form the subject-matter of any particular kabuliyat, though certain lands are set apart for the sale of each kind of article; there are different mahals in the hat corresponding to the different commodities, specified commodities being sold in defined places set apart for the purpose and any particular commodity being sold in a particular place for a long period irrespective of the persons who might be ijardars or stall-keepers. On the pleadings and facts found as above, the question that has to be determined is whether the ijardars can be said to be in use and occupation of the lands and whether the amounts payable by them under kabuliyats can be treated as rents within the meaning of s. 4 of the Act. The question will have to be decided not merely by reference to the words and expressions used in the kabuliyats but on an appreciation of a right, if any, created thereby.

The authority strongly relied on behalf of the plaintiffs, as appellants, is the Full Bench decision of this Court in Secretary of State v. Karuna Kanta Chowdhury (1). On a careful perusal of the decisions in that case it seems to us that there are certain points of difference between that case and the present one. These points are notably two: First that in that case the assessment was made on the basis of the profits which the ijardar, in whom the right to hold a mela was vested, made from the stall-keepers, whereas in the present case the assessment has been made on the basis of the amount which the ijardars pay to the plaintiffs: and second that in that case the lands were already in the occupation of occupancy-raiyats and so the ijardars, who under a kabuliyat obtained the right to hold the mela for a certain time were not, in fact in use and occupation of the lands and could not in fact be put in use and occupation thereof by the landlords, whereas in the present case that element is entirely absent. It was held in that case what the profits which the ijardars realized from the stall keepers were not profits paid by the tenant to the landlord, nor profits paid for use and occupation. In the present case under the terms of the kabuliyats the ijardars are entitled to exclude anybody else from dealing with the lands in the particular manner in which he himself is entitled to do under his kabuliyat. In that sense a limited sense though it be, the ijardar was in use and occupation being allowed by his kabuliyat to let in or exclude anybody he liked for sale of the particular commodities to which his kabuliyat referred collecting such tolls as his kabuliyat permitted and using perhaps such portion of the land covered by the boundaries on which those particular commodities used to be sold. In our judgment, therefore, what the ijardar has to pay under his kabuliyat is "rent" within the meaning of s. 4 of the Act.

We think the Courts below were right in applying to this case the view taken in Secretary of State v. Sati Prosad Garga (2), the effect of the kabuliyat in that case being what we consider to be the effect of the kabuliyats in the present case. The appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs.

D. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 35 C 82; 6 Cr. L J 342.

(2) 115 Ind. Cas. 165; A I R 1929 Cal. 197; 55 C 1328.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 593 of 1932
January 15, 1935
HARRIES, J.

TIKA RAM JOSHI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus
Lala RAM LAL SAH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS

Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 18—Right of privacy—Whether a question of fact—Customary right of privacy — Infringement of — What plaintiff must show—Premises already overlooked—Opening of further apertures overlooking premises—Whether can be said to be not actionable.

Whether such a custom as a right of privacy exists and the nature and limits of such a custom, if it does exist, are questions of fact and the findings of the lower Appellate Court, if based on admissible and relevant evidence are conclusive.

To succeed in an action to restrain any interference with a right of privacy, a plaintiff must shew not only that such a right of privacy exists by custom in the district in which the premises are situated but also that he has in fact enjoyed such a right and that it has been substantially or materially affected by the acts of the defendant. Gokal Prasad v. Radho (1), relied on.

It cannot be laid down as a rule that where premises are already overlooked, the opening of further apertures overlooking such premises cannot be actionable. Each case depends on its own peculiar facts.

S. C, A. from the decision of the District Judge of Kumaun, dated February 12, 1932.

Dr. K. N. Katju, Messrs. B. L. Dave and R. K. Dave, for the Appellant.

Mr. Panna Lal, for the Opposite Parties.

Judgment.—In this case the plaintiffs claimed an injunction to compel the defendant to close up certain apertures which he had opened in a side wall of his premises over-looking a house owned and occupied by them and to restrain him from opening any such apertures in the future. The learned Munsif who tried the case decreed the claim, but on appeal the decree was modified. The learned District Judge refused to grant any injunction but ordered that certain windows should be rendered in such a condition as to make it impossible for anyone in the defendant's premises to see through them into the plaintiffs' premises. Against this decision the defendant has appealed to this Court contending that the opening of the apertures in question does not amount to an infringement of the plaintiffs' rights. The plaintiffs being also dissatisfied with this decision have filed a cross-objection claiming that the decree of the learned Munsif should be restored.

The facts of the case are simple and are not in dispute. The respondents, the plaintiffs in the suit, are the owners in possession of a dwelling house bearing the Municipal number 12 in Lala Bazar in the town of Almora. This house has been occupied by the family of the plaintiffs for many years and the ladies of the household have been in the past and are at present pardanishin ladies. Shortly before action was brought, the defendant-appellant purchased a house —Municipal No. 10—which is situate near the respondents' dwelling house and proceeded to demolish part of it and re-build the same. During this reconstruction the appellant without the respondents' consent opened windows and a doorway which, it is alleged, overlooked the respondents' dwelling house and the latter contended that the opening of such apertures amounted to an infringement of or interference with their right of privacy. It has been found that the doorway referred to can in no way be objectionable and the contest in the lower Appellate Court was confined solely to the windows. That Court has found that a view of a part of the plaintiffs' premises known as the "pakholia" can be obtained from three of these windows, whilst no objection can be taken to the fourth window. It must be conceded that the findings are binding on this Court in second appeal, but it has been strenuously argued that in spite of such findings the lower Appellate Court was wrong in law in granting to the respondents any relief. The respondents, on the other hand, have argued that having regard to these findings the lower Appellate Court should have ordered the three windows in question to be bricked or walled up and granted an injunction restraining the appellant from making any such aperture in the future.

The 'pakholia" which is overlooked by these three windows is used by the ladies of the respondents' household for the performance of their household duties and personal ablutions. It is not a yard or courtyard in the centre of the respondents' house but is situated at the back of it. The side walls of this yard are the walls of the adjoining houses and it is separated from the fields at the rear of the premises by a wall which is described as shoulder or neck high. Having regard to the use made of this "pakholia" by the ladies of the household, the presence of these windows is obviously objectionable, but the appellant is entitled to make such windows unless the making of them infringes or interferes with the respondents' legal rights. On the other hand, if the respondents have a right of privacy, such a right must be protected by appropriate and suitable relief.

It is first contended before me that the respondents have no right of privacy. That such a right can exist is beyond dispute. Such right is a customary easement and may be acquired in virtue of a local custom: see s. 18, Indian Easements Act, 1882. It is conceded that by local custom a right of privacy does exist in the cities and plains of these Provinces, but it is argued that no such custom exists in the towns and villages situated in the hills. Whether such a custom exists and the nature and limits of such a custom, if it does exist, are questions of fact and the findings of the lower Appellate Court, if based on admissible and relevant evidence, are conclusive. In the judgment of the lower Appellate Court the findings as to the existence of such a custom and its nature and limits were vague and far from clear. I, therefore, framed certain issues with a view to obtaining certain and definite findings on these points and such findings have now been returned to this Court. In my judgment these findings conclude the matter and entitle the respondents to a considerable measure of protection.

The learned District Judge has found that in Almora there does exist a customary right of privacy of a limited nature. He has found as a fact that occupiers of houses in Almora are entitled by custom to claim that their women-folk should not come under full observation from windows of neighbouring houses when engaged in their household duties and personal ablutions. The "pakholia" which is overlooked by the windows in question is a place where the ladies of the respondents' household do perform such tasks and, therefore, the respondents are prima facie entitled by custom to claim that such part of their premises shall not be observed from windows of adjoining premises. There was abundant evidence before the lower Appellate Court of the existence of such a custom and consequently the finding cannot be challenged on second appeal.

It was contended, however, by the appellant that even if such a custom existed, the respondents had in fact never enjoyed any privacy and that in any event the opening of the windows in question did not amount to a substantial or material interference with such rights as they possessed.

To succeed in an action to restrain any interference with a right of privacy, a plaintiff must shew not only that such a right of privacy exists by custom in the district in which the premises are situated, but also that he has in fact enjoyed such a right and that it has been substantially or materially affected by the acts of the defendant. See Gokal Prasad v. Radho (1), and per Edge, C. J. at p. 386*.

In the present case the appellant denies that the respondents have ever enjoyed or do enjoy such rights of privacy as are customary in Almora by reason of the fact that the "pakholia" in question has been and is overlooked from the roofs of adjoining or neighbouring houses. It is, however, found as a fact by the lower Appellate Court that the respondents do in fact enjoy the rights of privacy customary in Almora. It is impossible for me to say that there is no evidence to support this finding. A large number of witnesses were called and the premises viewed by the learned District Judge who heard the appeal in the first instance and by his successor to whom the issues previously referred to were forwarded. That being so, the finding is conclusive and cannot be challenged in this Court.

It is further contended, however, that even assuming that the respondents have in fact enjoyed and do enjoy the rights of privacy customary in the district, the opening of the windows in question cannot give rise to a cause of action.

(1) 10 A 358 at p 387; A W N 1888, 135.

*Page of 10 A.—[Ed.].

To give rise to a right of action for infringement of a right of privacy, the act complained of must amount to a substantial or material interference with such a right [see Gokal Prasad v. Radho (1)], and it is argued that where a house is already overlooked the opening of further apertures overlooking such premises cannot amount to a substantial or material interference with the right of privacy of the occupier of such premises.

The lower Appellate Court has found as a fact that the opening of the windows in question does amount to such an interference with the respondents' rights, but it is urged that there is no evidence to support such a finding and that authority binding upon the lower Appellate Court and this Court makes such a finding impossible and that effect cannot be given to it.

The appellant has strenuously contended that I am bound by the decision of a Bench of this Court in the unreported case of Bhagwan Das v. Abdul Rahman, decided on January 17, 1908.

In that case the plaintiffs sought an injunction to restrain the defendants from making certain apertures in a wall overlooking their premises and to compel them to remove a certain door frame which had already been erected. It was established to the satisfaction of the lower Appellate Court that the plaintiffs' premises were already overlooked from adjoining houses and it was held that the opening of the apertures complained of did not amount to a substantial or material interference with the plaintiffs' rights. In fact the Court held that what had been done and what was proposed to be done would virtually increase and not diminish the privacy enjoyed by the plaintiffs.

On second appeal Knox, J., however, in Abdul Rahman v. Bhagwan Das (2), held that the opening of the apertures in question did amount to a substantial or material interference with the plaintiffs' rights and granted an injunction. In his judgment he pointed out that windows were far more objectionable than roofs as ladies could see persons on a roof and withdraw, whereas they might be observed unknown to themselves by a person looking through a window. Observers on a roof would themselves be inevitably observed, whereas the existence of an observer at a window might well be unknown to those observed.

On appeal to a Bench of this Court this decision was reversed, the Court holding that the learned Judge was bound by the findings of fact of the lower Appellate Court. It is contended before me that the effect of this decision is that the opening of windows overlooking other premises cannot be restrained if such other premises are already overlooked from any parts of adjoining or neighbouring premises such as roofs. In my judgment this contention is not sound and is in direct conflict with the judgment of Edge, C. J. in Gokal Prasad v. Radho (1). It is pointed out in this latter case that each case must be decided on its particular facts and in my judgment the unreported case of Bhagwan Das v. Abdul Rahman, is a decision which must be confined to the facts of that particular case which were exceptional and peculiar. In my view, that case does not lay down a rule that where premises are already overlooked, the opening of further apertures overlooking such premises cannot be actionable. In that case what was complained of actually increased rather than diminished the plaintiffs' rights and that being so, it was impossible to say that there had been any substantial or material interference with such rights.

29 A 582; 4 A L J 445; A W N 1907, 183.

For the above reasons it cannot be said that the lower Appellate Court could not in the present case find that there had been a substantial interference with the respondents' rights, and that being so, such a finding is binding upon me.

The respondents have, therefore, succeeded in establishing a right of privacy and an actionable infringement of such a right and consequently they are entitled to some degree of protection. The lower Appellate Court set aside the injunctions granted by the trial Court but ordered that the two windows on the fourth floor should be screwed up and always have opaque glass and be maintained in that condition and one window on the third floor should be so altered as to prevent the respondents' "pakholia" being visible from it. In my judgment this order amply protects the respondents and gives them all that they can justly claim. Their right of privacy must be protected and safe-guarded, but if this can be done without undue harshness to the appellant, such a course should be adopted. To order the windows in question to be bricked up would not give the respondents any greater privacy and by depriving the appellant of light would involve unnecessary hardship on him. In my view the decree of the lower Appellate Court is adequate and I, therefore, dismiss the appeal and cross-objection and affirm that decree. The appellant must pay the costs of this appeal, but all costs occasioned to either the appellant or respondents by reason of the cross-objection must be borne by the respondents.

Leave to appeal under Letters Patent is granted.

D. Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Appeal Against Order No. 26 of 1933

September 7, 1934

CURGENVEN AND PANDRANG ROW, JJ.

CHIDAMBARAM CHETTIAR —APPELLANT

versus

AYYAPPA CHETTIAR—RESPONDENT

Arbitration—Reference to decide disputes, after going through the accounts—Accounts found unreliable—Power of arbitrators to proceed on other available materials—Non-production of accounts—Presumption—Assets not revealed—Power to direct payment of a share of value of assets—Arbitrators selected for personal knowledge—Use of personal knowledge not illegal—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Sch. II, r. 20.

Disputes between two brothers relating to the division of their family properties were referred to arbitrators and the arbitrators were requested to make a division after looking into the accounts and taking the statements of the parties. The arbitrators found that the accounts were not reliable, made an estimate of the assets of the family from other available sources, and directed the defendant who was in possession of the assets and who maintained the accounts to pay half value of the estimated assets to the plaintiff. It was contended that the procedure adopted was illegal:

Held, that the arbitrators did not become powerless to decide the matter when they found the accounts to be unreliable. Their powers to make use of such material as was available in order to reach a conclusion so long as what they did was not in breach of the terms of the reference, were not less than the powers which a Court would possess in similar circumstances, and the procedure adopted by them was not illegal.

Where a party to a partition suit suppresses his accounts or has falsified them, the Court will make unfavourable presumptions against him. Gray v. Haif (1), and Kodali Kristnayya v. Kodali Guravayya (2), referred to.

Where the defendant has suppressed his accounts and the arbitrators have no means of ascertaining the exact nature of the oustandings, they will be justified in directing the defendant to pay the plaintiff's share of the estimated value of the outstandings without dividing the assets between them.

Where an arbitrator has been selected because of his personal knowledge of the matter in dispute, it would not be misconduct on his part to use his personal knowledge in coming to a certain decision, although in such cases it is desirable that he should tell the parties what his personal knowledge is and give them an opportunity to prove that his view is wrong. Daulat Singh Bapusingh Raul v.

Ratna Anand Singh (3), Mahomed Nawaz Khan v. Alam Khan (4), referred to.

Where the parties have not been prejudiced by use of the arbitrators' personal knowledge, the Court will not interfere with their award. Mercer v. Reid (5), referred to.

A. against the order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Devakottah dated December 6, 1932, and made in O. S. No. 109 of 1929.

Mr. V. Ramaswami Ayyar, for the Appellant.

Messrs. S. Srinivasa Ayyangar, V. Rajagopala Ayyar and T. V. Ramaih, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is an appeal by the defendant against the order of the Subordinate Judge of Devakotta directing the filing of an award on a matter referred to arbitration without the intervention of the Court under r. 20 of sch. II of the Civil Procedure Code. The plaintiff and the defendant are brothers and belong to the Nattukottai Chetti community. In 1903 their father divided from his other brothers, receiving certain sums of money and some immovable and movable property. In 1917 the father died. Up to the time of his death he was managing the business, which consisted in money lending and the property together with the younger son, the defendant. After his death it was managed by the defendant. In 1922, the brothers attempted to make a division by means of an arbitration which is said to have awarded the plaintiff Rs. 12,000 but this fell through. On December 31, 1928, the brothers executed the muchilaka Ex. I to three arbitrators, requesting them to make a division of the family property, particularised as cash, headquarter's account, Virudapatti shop account Moulmein shop account, jewels, house, immovable and movable properties, "after looking into the accounts and taking the statements of parties." The arbitrators' award is dated April 3, 1929. After summarising the family history it deals with the three branches for which separate accounts purport to have been kept, Moulmein, Virudupatti and the headquarters or the Vur kadai at Kandamur. The finding in each case is that the accounts of his management produced by the defendant are not correct and that no fair conclusions can be derived from them. Except, therefore, for certain limited purpose, the arbitrators felt themselves compelled to proceed upon a footing independent of the accounts. Briefly they have ascertained what funds the family possessed in 1903 and they have then made an estimate of what it may be supposed to have possessed at the time of the arbitration after allowing for drawings, losses and other charges. We will revert later on in more detail to the method adopted in making this calculation. The result was that they found the family had started in 1903 with about half a lakh of rupees and that the assets might be estimated at 1½ lakhs in 1929. The share awarded to the plaintiff was, therefore, Rs. 75,000 the defendant being declared sole possessor of all outstandings. This related only to the business assets and not to the immovable property or jewels of which no actual division was made, the arbitrators merely declaring each party entitled to a half share.

At the trial the defendant attacked the award on a variety of grounds. Some of these have now been given up, as for instance, that the reference was procured by undue influence and that the award was passed after notice of revocation was given by the defendant. Before us the grounds of attack may be summarised as follows:

1. The arbitrators exceeded their powers (a) by ignoring the accounts and by adopting an unauthorised and inappropriate method of computation;

(b) by making use of their personal knowledge and information;

(2) they made a mistake regarding to certain calculation of interest which vitiates the award;

(3) they exhibited partially for the plaintiff and prejudice against the defendant; and

(4) they omitted to make a complete division of the assets.

The last of these criticisms would relate to para. (a) of r. 14 of Sch. II, Civil Procedure Code, the remainder, it is said, amount to misconduct on the part of the arbitrators.

The arbitrators deal with the three series of accouuts in paras. 2 and 3 of their award. The defendant was in control of the Moulmein shop from 1906 to 1911, when it was closed. After examining the accounts the arbitrators found that they had not been kept properly according to the practice of the Chetties, that the defendant failed to give them a satisfactory explanation and that they were unable to rely upon them. Nevertheless, they accepted the defendant's statement that this business closed with a loss of Rs. 9,258 over and above the loss of the share capital of Rs. 7,000 and they made allowance for this loss, together with 9 per cent. compound interest, in a sum of Rs. 97,778. The Virudupatti shop was opened in 1911 and had not been closed at the time of the arbitration. It was conducted throughout by the defendant. Here, too, the accounts appeared to be incorrect and defective and the defendant was unable to produce a proper balance sheet. It also appeared that he was appropriating the partnership funds to his own purposes. Similar remarks are made about the third set of accounts, those kept at Kandanur. They do not appear to have been written properly for a very long time and when the defendant produced a balance sheet it was found not to tally with them. The arbitrators concluded that the accounts had been falsified in order to defraud the plaintiff. Thus the general result is that the arbitrators found the accounts throughout untrustworthy and useless as a basis for a fair division of the assets. It is not of course for us to say that they were wrong in rejecting these accounts. It has been argued that they should have relied on the accounts so far as they go, supplementing them by information obtained from the parties. Without ourselves undertaking an inquiry into the merits of these accounts, it is impossible for us to say that even to this extent they deserve attention or that merely by examining the plaintiff and the defendant the defects in them could have been rectified. We must take it accordingly that the arbitrators were justified in rejecting the accounts in toto, except in so far as the award says that they were used, as for instance, in allowing for the family drawings. What course were they then to pursue? It has been suggested that they should have professed their inability to comply with the terms of the reference and done nothing more. We do not think that they were so reduced to impotence. Their powers to make use of such material as well was available, in order to reach a conclusion, so long as what they did was not in breach of the terms of the reference, were not less than the powers which a Court would possess in similar circumstances. If a defendant either suppresses his accounts or has falsified them, the Court will presume everything most unfavourable to him consistent with the established facts (vide Gray v. Haif (1). A case of this Court in which such a presumption was made is Kodali Kristnayya v. Kodali Guravayya (2). The 1st defendant in that case was the manager of a Hindu family and it lay upon him to prove the assets available at the date of partition. It was found that he was suppressing evidence of the extent of the joint family money-lending business, and on the principle that any reasonable presumption might be drawn against him a computation was made of the profits which he had been in a position to make. The arbitrators in this case have adopted a very similar course, and short of throwing up their commission it appears to have been the only course open to them. As we have already said, they have taken the assests as they stood in 1903 and have enhanced them by adding compound interest at the rate of 9 per cent per annum. This rate has been adopted not because it is the prevailing rate at which Nattukotai Chetties lend money. It is in fact very much below the normal rates, which rise as high as 24 per cent. But allowance had to be made for bad debts and for other losses, for money lying idle, and for ordinary living expenses. On the other hand the losses sustained in the Moulmein business, drawing by the two brothers and by the common vilasam, and some other specific expenses have been deducted from the amounts so found. The net result as we have said, is that the amount available for division is estimated at $1\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs. If there is anything in this finding of an arbitrary or speculative character, the defendant has only himself to thank for this failure to maintain and produce proper accounts. We do not think that the sum awarded to the plaintiff is an unreasonable amount, even if it lay upon us to criticise the merits of the award. In twenty-five years the assets may well have increased to this amount. The further objection made before us that the arbitrators were wrong in awarding the plaintiff a sum of money and that they should have restricted themselves to dividing the outstandings loses sight of the fact that there were no means of ascertaining what the outstandings were and what they actually amounted to.

The next criticism is that the arbitrators exceeded their powers by making use of their personal knowledge and information. The charge is based upon a passage in the award which runs as follow:

(1) (1856) 52 E R 567.

(2) 70 Ind. Cas. 146; 14 L W 668; 41 M L J 503; (1921) M W N 742.

"To our knowledge and on information we do not find that both these parties and the common families incurred any heavy loss in any foreign places, and that any heavy expenses were incurred in the family. This is a big family."

The muchilika, it will be remembered, requires the arbitrators to pass their award after looking into the accounts and taking the statements of parties. There is no doubt that if the arbitrators used knowledge or information derived from other sources than those, if they failed to communicate to the parties what they so knew and if the party making objection was prejudiced, the award would be invalidated. These principles must of course be applied within reason. The three arbitrators were of the same village and community as the parties and must necessarily have been well acquainted not only with Nattukottai Chetty customs and procedure but also with the family circumstances and antecedents of the two brothers. They could not have been expected to bring to the enquiry minds as devoid of particular information as is required of a Court. We agree in the view taken by a Bench of the Bombay High Court, based, as it is on English authorities, that where an arbitrator has been selected because of his personal knowledge of the matter in dispute, it would not be misconduct on his part to use his personal knowledge in coming to a certain decision although in such cases it is desirable that he should tell the parties what his personal knowledge is and give an opportunity to them to adduce evidence sufficient to vary his views. (See Daulat Singh Bapu Singh Raul v. Ratna Anand Singh (3). In Muhammad Nawaz Khan v. Alam Khan (4) the Privy Council referred to the fact that the arbitrator was selected by reason of his knowledge of the circumstances of the family, so that a decision based upon that knowledge would not amount to misconduct. Considerations such as these will not of course justify the arbitrators in passing their award on such facts as that no loss had been incurred in foreign businesses or that family expenses had not been exceptionally high (the only two instances in which they confess to have acted upon their own information) if the facts were really in dispute and the parties were not apprised of their intention to use the information. As to this latter point the only arbitrator available for examination in Court, P. W. No. 2, has stated that they did not tell the parties what they knew about their family affairs, and though he has made a contrary statement in re-examination, we cannot agree with the lower Court in accepting it in preference to the earlier one. Further, however, the information used must relate to matter which were really open to question. Now as regards the losses incurred in foreign businesses, the only such business was that at Moulmein and as we have stated, the defendant's version as to the losses incurred there has been accepted. Then as regards heavy family expenses, such special expenses as the defendant claimed and as are shown in the accounts appear to have been allowed for. It was open to him to put in a claim about others, and the fact that he did not do so is in itself sufficient to show that there was nothing more to claim in respect of the two particular pieces of information referred to in the award. Both of these it may also be noted are of a negative character. Our finding, therefore, must be that the arbitrators had no need to rely upon any knowledge they might have possessed upon these matters because they would have been led to the same conclusion without it; and where a party is not prejudiced by such an error on the part of an arbitrator, the Court will not interfere Mercer v. Reid (5). We do not think that the award has been substantially affected by any knowledge or information possessed or obtained by the arbitrators and not communicated to the parties and we disallow the objection.

The alleged mistake with the regard to the calculation of interest has reference to a sum of Rs. 29,575-8 0 allowed in the defendant's favour for salary of the 2nd party, expenses for the mother's ceremony and on account of difference in the rate of interest. It has been suggested that the arbitrators intended to add interest at 9 per cent. to the plaintiff's drawings instead of $6\frac{3}{4}$ per cent shown in the accounts to make it correspond with the rate charged on the assets that this item would in itself amount to as much as Rs. 85,000 and that the error involved is so great as to amount to legal misconduct. Now in the first place the single arbitrator examined, who was in fact the arbitrator nominated by the defendant, was not put any question upon this point which perhaps he was in a position to explain satisfactorily. We cannot, therefore, accept the suggestion that a gross error has been committed by men of a class which is certainly adept in dealing with account matters, unless no other view is possible. It is clear that there is no reason in the nature of the case why the two rates should be equal. The 9 per cent. allowed is not the actual but a hypothetical figure, adopted as roughly representing the presumed rate of increase in the assets. Whether therefore the panchayatdars ever intended to allow for the whole difference is doubtful. They may have meant only to make some allowance for the lower rate of interest charged on the drawings. Whatever be the correct explanation, it has not be shown either that the arbitrators unintentionally committed an error or they intentionally falsified the figure. No question of the consequences of such conduct therefore arises.

(3) 97 Ind. Cas. 673; A I R 1926 Bom. 527.
(4) 18 C 414.
(5) 47 T L R 574.

The charge of partiality preferred against the arbitrators is based mainly in the circumstances in which the award was drawn up. It is suggested that the documents were not written on April 3, which is the date they bear, but on the 4th at the earliest and that the arbitratiors deliberately evaded the receipt of registered notices from the defendant revoking the reference. What appears to have happened is that on the 3rd they orally announced what their award was going to be and as it involved payment by the defendant of a substantial sum, they may have had reason to suppose that he would resist it. They naturally did not want their labours to be fruitless and accordingly they got the award completed before his registered letters could reach them. They may even have found it advisable to remain out of the way of such objections after completing the award. In all this we can find no ground whatever for imputing bias against the defendant nor is there any other evidence worth the name to prove such bias.

The last objection relates to the omission of the arbitrators to divide the properties other than the outstandings Their award merely states that these other properties will be enjoyed by the two parties in equal shares. As regards this, the defendant made no objection to the award before the trial Court and in fact he has stated on more than one occasion that the jewels had already been divided. The plaintiff says that the defendant has all the jewels, while the house and the other immovable property possessed by the family seem in fact to be already separately enjoyed. The truth seems to be that the parties did not press before the arbitrators for the actual division of these items. In any case the division of the outstandings was a matter separable from the division of the other assets; so that under r. 14 of Sch. II it was open to the Court to file the award as a decree and not remit it for further action. There is no substance in this objection.

The result is that we think that the learned Subordinate Judge was right in directing that the award should be filed. We dismiss the appeal with costs.

A. Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 376 of 1933
March 13, 1935
ALLSOP, J.

Hakim MUHAMMAD MUSA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Syed QASIM HUSAIN AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Estoppel—Estoppel by representation—What constitutes—Held, no estoppel arose—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115.

For an estoppel by representation to come into operation, there must be a deception which has led the person claiming the estoppel to entertain a false belief about a question of fact and which has also led him on the faith of that belief to change his legal position Where the parties in the suit were also parties to the deed of sale and it has been held as a fact that the deed of sale was evidence of a transaction by which the parties intended to transfer certain other property but not the property in suit as the respondent was a party to that transaction, it cannot be said that he had been deceived about its true nature by the subsequent conduct of the other party.

S. C. A. from the decision of the First Subordinate Judge of Saharanpur, dated December 9, 1932.

Mr. K. Masud Hasan, for the Appellant.

Mr. Akhtar Husain Khan, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This second appeal arises out of a suit for possession over certain property. It appears that the appellant executed a deed of sale on January 9, 1920, in favour of the defendants-respondents. It has been found as a fact by the learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court that that deed of sale was intended to transfer and did transfer only certain property. It so happened that the vendor also mentioned in the deed of sale that he was the owner of certain other property and it is in respect of that other property that the suit which has given rise to this appeal was instituted. The vendees applied for mutation of the register not only about the property which is found to have been sold but also about this other disputed property which is the subject of the present appeal. Thereafter the appellant instituted the suit in order to recover possession over this property. One of the defences was that the property in dispute had been included in the deed of sale and had been transferred by it. This defence was negatived by the lower Appellate Court and the appeal before me has been argued on the assumption that this finding was right.

Another defence was that the appellant was estopped from alleging that the disputed property had not been sold. It appears that a sum of Rs. 90, part of the consideration for the sale was not paid at the time when the sale, took place. It was subsequently paid on February 17, 1921, and at that time the appellant executed what he describes as a receipt and what the other side claimed to be an agreement. In this document he admitted that the disputed property was sold by the deed of January 9, 1920. There was also an application made by the vendees, i. e., the respondents for the partition of the property which they had purchased and when the question of their ownership arose in the partition proceedings the appellant did not raise any objection. It is argued that the appellant's admission in his receipt or agreement of February 17, 1921, and his failure to contest the claim of the respondents in the mutation proceedings when they obtained mutation without any protest on his part and in the partiton proceedings, all amount to estoppels by way of acquiescence. Reliance has been placed on the case of Ram Sarup v. Ram Sarn 96 Ind. Cas. 915 (1). That case was decided by the Lahore High Court and the decision depended in some measure upon the customary law of alienation of ancestral land in that province. The decision was based, it appears, on the provisions of s. 115 of the Indian Evidence Act, i. e., the Court apparently intended to hold that there was an estoppel by judgment. The decision is no authority for the proposition which has been acted upon by the lower Appellate Court in the present case. It has not been suggested that the decision in the mutation case could operate as res judicata. It is obvious that the decision could have no such effect. What the learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court has held is that there has been an estoppel by representation. For such an estoppel to come into operation there must be a deception which has led the person claiming the estoppel to entertain a false belief about a question of fact and which has also led him on the faith of that belief to change his legal position. In the present case the parties were also parties to the deed of sale. It has been held as a fact which is not now contested that the deed of sale was evidence of a transaction by which the parties intended to transfer certain other property but not the property in suit. As the respondent was a party to that transaction, it is difficult to see how he could have been deceived about its true nature by the subsequent conduct of the other party. In the first place it cannot be said that he was deceived and in the second place it is not even alleged that he in any way changed his legal position at any time acting on the belief that he was the owner of the property. In these circumstances no estoppel can come into operation against the appellant.

A further argument has been raised that the partition proceedings prevent the Civil Courts from taking any action in this matter under the provisions of s. 233-K of the Land Revenue Act. The learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court has, however, pointed out that although an application for partition was made, the proceedings were afterwards quashed and no partition took place. The provisions of s. 233-K of the Land Revenue Act can, therefore, not come into operation. As it has been held that the property was not transferred by the deed of sale and as I consider that no estoppel and that the suit is not barred by s. 233-K of the Land Revenue Act, the plaintiff is entitled to a decree for possession. A decree will, therefore, be prepared in terms of the relief claimed and the respondents will pay the appellant's costs in all Courts.

D. Order accordingly.

(1) 96 Ind. Cas 915; A I R 1926 Lah. 650.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 2580 of 1928

June 1, 1934

BHIDE AND DIN MUHAMMAD, JJ.

KARTAR SINGH AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat MEHR NISHAN AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), ss. 17, 49—Agreement executed in 1879—Proof that the property was worth more than Rs 99—Unregistered document, if can be used for proving nature of possession—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 41—Transferee raking ou khasra paimash or police records of levy of punitive tax—Obligation under s. 41, if discharged—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 90—Document written by licensed stamp-vendor 55 years ago—Benefit of s. 90.

In the absence of reliable evidence on the record to show that the value of the property covered by an agreement executed in 1879 was more than Rs. 99, it is very difficult to hold that, in those days when the value of the property was very small, the property covered by the agreement was worth more than Rs. 99

Unregistered documents can be used for determining the nature of the claimant's possession. Qadar Bakhsh v. Mangha Mal (3) and Ata Mohamad v. Shankar Das (4), relied on.

The khasra paimash is not a record of title but a mere record of survey and carries with it no presumption of correctness so far as the question of ownership is concerned. A Municipality is generally interested more in the assessment of tax than in the determination of ownership, and for its purposes an occupier is as good as an owner. Moreover, in the preparation of documents like khasra paimash a Municipality is concerned more with the measurements of the buildings with a view to safeguard its own interest against any encroachment on the public streets than in the ascertainment of the title of persons owning such buildings. In the same way the Police department when taking a census of the houses for the purposes of levying the punitive tax is merely interested in recording the names of the occupants from whom they could levy the contribution. The transferees cannot be said to have discharged their obligation under s. 41 by merely raking out of old records of the Municipality or that of the Police department. Mohammad Suleman v. Sakina Bibi (5), relied on.

Where a document itself is written 55 years ago by a licensed stamp-vendor and comes out from proper custody, the benefit of s. 90, Evidence Act, can be claimed.

F. C. A. from the decree of the Senior Sub-Judge, Rawalpindi, dated October 10, 1928.

Messrs. S. N. Bali and Gobind Ram Khanna, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Muhammad Din Jan and Balkishen, for the Respondents.

Din Muhammad, J.—One Mehr Bakhsh Darzi of Rawalpindi jointly owned with his three brothers some agricultural land and two small houses situated in the town of Rawalpindi. In 1879 he executed an ante nuptial agreement in favour of Mehr Nishan whom he later married and settled on her his whole share of the above-mentioned property in case she remained faithful to his bed. He died sometime after 1900 and before 1911, leaving him surviving his widow Mehr Nishan and his two sons, Karam Ilahi and Fazal Ilahi. It appears that Mehr Bakhsh had been occupying exclusively one of the two houses mentioned above and it remained in the possession of his family even after his death. In 1911 Sher, one of the surviving brothers of Mehr Bakhsh, brought a suit for possession by partition of two-thirds share of this house against the sons of Mehr Bakhsh on the ground that their fourth brother had died issueless and he had purchased the share of the third brother also. Fazal Ilahi and Karam Ilahi contested the suit and pleaded that the whole house was owned by their mother Mehr Nishan since 1879, and that she should be impleaded as a defendant as they had no title to the house. A similar application was put in by Mehr Nishan herself and consequently she was impleaded as a defendant in the case, along with her two sons. The matter was referred to arbitration and by mutual agreement before the arbitrators, it was decided that Sher may be given his two-thirds share by partition. An award followed on these terms in April 1912, leaving Mehr Nishan in the occupation of one-third of the house.

On September 6, 1924, Fazal Ilahi executed a mortgage without possession of the land as well as of the house left by Mehr Bakhsh in favour of Asa Singh, defendant No. 1, for a sum of Rs. 1,000. The default having been made by Fazal Ilahi in the payment of the mortgage money. Asa Singh brought a suit for the realization of his mortgage debt and obtained a decree against Fazal Ilahi on May 11, 1927. In execution of this decree he brought the house to sale on October 7, 1927, which was purchased by Kartar Singh, defendant No. 3. On December 20, 1927, Mehr Nishan brought the present suit against Asa Singh, Fazal Ilahi and Kartar Singh, on the allegation that she had been in exclusive possession of the house as owner since 1879 and as Fazal Ilahi had never lived with her since 1912 and had no transferable interest in the property, both the original mortgage and the subsequent sale did not affect her interest. She prayed for a declaration to the effect that she was the exclusive owner of the house. Both Asa Singh and Kartar Singh denied her allegations and further pleaded s. 41, Transfer of Property Act, as a bar to her suit. The learned Senior Subordinate Judge has dismissed her suit so far as the agricultural lands are concerned, but has granted her a decree in respect of the house. Both Asa Singh and Kartar Singh have preferred this appeal against that decree.

Mr. Bali, who has argued the appeal before us on behalf of the appellants, has contended that the document relied on by Mehr Nishan in support of her claim is a forgery, that Mehr Bakhsh was shown as an owner of the house in the khasra paimash prepared by the Municipal Committee, Rawalpindi, in 1900, that in a register relating to the levy of punitive tax prepared in 1911, Fazal Ilahi is shown as the sole occupant of the house and that as Mehr Nishan has suffered Fazal Ilahi to deal with property as his own she cannot now defeat the claims of the transferees for value. He has further urged that the document in question is inadmissible in evidence for want of registration.

I will take up the last ground first. It is urged that, as the alleged agreement of 1879 purports to dispose of property of the value of Rs. 100 or more, it is compulsorily registrable. Now there is no reliable evidence on the record to show that the value of the property covered by this agreement was more than Rs. 99 in 1879 and, in the absence of any such clear proof, it will be very difficult to hold that, in those days when the value of the property was very small, the property covered by this agreement was worth more than Rs. 99. The learned Counsel for the plaintiff-respondent has contended that the document as it stands does not require registration as it does not create any such right as is contemplated by s. 17 (b), Registration Act, and has relied on Sansar Singh v. Tiloka (1) and Bhan Singh v. Thakar Das (2) in support of his contention. I do not however consider that it is necessary to determine whether those authorities lay down a rule of law which is applicable to the facts of the present case as, in my opinion, besides what I have indicated above, even if it were held that the document was compulsorily registrable, there is ample authority for the proposition that such unregistered documents can be used for determining the nature of the claimant's possession. Reference may be made among others to Qadar Bakhsh v. Mangha Mal (3) and Ata Muhammad v. Shankar Das (4).

Similarly, s. 41, Transfer of Property Act, is no bar to the plaintiffs' claim. Even if the principles of the Transfer of Property Act were applicable to the Punjab, there is no proof on the record that Fazal Ilahi had ever been made an ostensible owner of the house with the express or implied consent of Mehr Nishan or that the mortgagee or the auction-purchaser had, after taking reasonable care to ascertain that Fazal Ilahi had the power to make the transfer, acted in good faith. The learned Counsel for the appellants contends that the transferees consulted the Municipal records and the Police records and this was enough for the purposes of s. 41, Transfer of Property Act. The learned Senior Subordinate Judge has disbelieved this part of the story but, even if it were true, in my view the enquiry made will not amount to "reasonable care" and "good faith" within the meaning of s. 41, Transfer of Property Act. The khasra paimash is not a record of title but a mere record of survey and carries with it no presumption of correctness so far as the question of ownership is concerned. A Municipality is generally interested more in the assessment of tax than in the determination of ownership, and for its purposes an occupier is as good as an owner. Moreover, in the preparation of documents like khasra paimash a Municipality is concerned more with the measurements of the buildings with a view to safeguard its own interests against any encroachment on the public streets than in the ascertainment of the title of persons owning such buildings. In the same way the Police department when taking a census of the houses for the purposes of levying the punitive tax is merely interested in recording the names of the occupants from whom they could levy the contribution. It will further be seen that this entry relates to the year 1911 and it is significant that it was in this year that both Fazal Ilahi and Karam Ilahi had disclaimed any connection with the house and unequivocally admitted Mehr Nishan's title thereto in the partition suit brought by their uncle Sher. It cannot be reasonably argued, therefore, that the transferees discharged their obligation under s. 41, Transfer of Property Act, by merely raking out the old records of the Municipality relating to the year 1900 or that of the Police department of the year 1911. I am fortified in my conclusions by a judgment of the Allahabad High Court in Muhammad Suleman v. Sakina Bibi (5). In this case the learned Judges made the following remarks:

"Badullah was only the manager of the property,

(1) 51 P R 1898

(2) 89 P R 1908; 145 P W R 1908.

(3) 73 Ind. Cas. 889; A I R 1923 Lah. 495; 4 Lah. 249; 5 Lah. L J 175.

(4) 88 Ind. Cas. 872; A I R 1925 Lah. 491; 6 Lah. 319; 7 Lah. L J 594.

(5) 69 Ind. Cas. 701; A I R 1922 All. 392; 44 A 674; 20 A L J 654.

and, as pointed out in the case of Jamna Das v. Uma Shankar (6), the possession of a manager cannot be treated as sufficient evidence of ostensible ownership with the consent, express or implied, of the real proprietor, within the meaning of s 41, Transfer of Property Act. The entry of the name of Badullah in the house-tax register was only made for the purpose of assessment and collection of house tax and was not intended for registering title, and as their Lordships of the Privy Council say in Merwanji Muncherji v. Secretary of State (7), such an entry is not always enough to induce a person to think that the person whose name was entered was the proprietor and had a right to sell the property which was entered in his name."

In Azima Bibi v. Shamalanand (8) their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows:

"The appellants were pardahnashin ladies, and naturally left the management of the property in the hands of the males. There was nothing to show that the appellants had misled the respondent, either by word or by conduct to the belief that they had no proprietary interest in the property, and he made no inquiries in the matter from them as he might have done if he had any doubt in the matter."

Under the circumstances I feel no hesitation in holding that s. 41, Transfer of Property Act, does not help the appellants at all.

The argument that the document in question is a forgery is also devoid of force. It would appear from the document itself that it was written 55 years ago by a licensed stamp-vendor and as it came out from proper custody, it could claim the benefit of s. 90, Evidence Act. Moreover, in the previous suit, as already remarked, precisely the same allegations were made as are being made now on the strength of this document. It cannot therefore, be believed that this old lady fabricated the document in question merely for the purpose of the present suit. I would, therefore, maintain the decree of the Court below and dismiss this appeal with costs.

Bhide, J.—I agree.

N. Appeal dismissed.

(6) 25 Ind. Cas. 158; A I R 1914 All. 232; 36 A 303; 12 A L J 411.

(7) 30 Ind. Cas. 539; A I R 1915 P C 118; 42 I A 185; 39 B 664; 19 C W N 1056; (1915) M W N 535; 2 L W 701; 2) M L J 299; 13 A L J 1026 (P C.)

(8) 17 Ind. Cas. 758; 40 C 378; 17 C W N 121; 13 M L T 159; (1913) M W N 125; 11 A L J 169; 47 C L J 303; 15 Bom. L R 423; 25 M L J 55 (P C).

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 429 of 1933

March 27, 1935

GANGA NATH, J.

Musammat SHAH JAHAN BEGAM — DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Hafiz GHULAM RABBANI—PLAINTIFF — RESPONDENT

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 104 (2), 99, O. XLIII (m)—Order under O. XLIII (m) on appeal—Second appeal, if lies—Decree passed on compromise—Compromise not recorded—Decree, validity of.

No appeal lies from any order passed in appeal under O. XLIII (m), Civil Procedure Code.

The omission to record the compromise before passing the decree is not fatal to the validity of the decree. The defect is cured by s. 99, Civil Procedure Code.

S. C. A. from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Agra, dated December 19, 1932.

Mr. M.H. Faruqi, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. L. Chaturvedi, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is a defendant's appeal and arises out of a suit brought against her by the plaintiff. The parties entered into a compromise on which a decree was passed. The trial Court's order was:

"The parties have come to terms. Suit is decreed in the terms of the compromise which shall be reproduced in the decree. Costs on parties."

Against this decree an appeal was filed under O. XLIII (m), Civil Procedure Code, by the defendant. The chief grounds taken by her in the memorandum of appeal were:

"(1) Because the learned Munsif was wrong in not recording the so-called compromise and in not enquiring whether the compromise was acceptable to the appellant and (2) because the so-called compromise was effected without consent of the appellant and was not binding on her".

The learned Subordinate Judge of Agra found that the trial Court had omitted to order the recording of the compromise but the compromise was made with the consent of the appellant. The learned Subordinate Judge was of the opinion that there was no reason to interfere with the decree of the trial Court. The compromise, as a matter of fact, was verified by the appellant's Counsel who had full authority to compromise the suit. The parties had taken one day's time for the compromise and the compromise was filed the next day. The appellant's son, who was living with the appellant, was looking after the case in the trial Court. The learned Subordinate Judge has observed:—

"From the evidence on the record it is clear that the appellant's case in the trial Court was managed by her own son. The son and his mother (the appellant) live together in Agra. One whole day was taken by the parties to consider the compromise, before it was filed on the following day".

The learned Subordinate Judge was of the opinion that the technicality did not vitiate the compromise. The learned Subordinate Judge recorded a finding:—"I find, as a matter of fact that she entered into a compromise".

A preliminary objection has been taken by the learned Counsel for the respondent that no second appeal lies. As already stated, the appeal in the lower Court was under O. XLIII (m), Civil Procedure Code. The heading of the memorandum of appeal also shows that the appeal was filed under O. XLIII (m), Civil Procedure Code. Section 104 (2) Civil Procedure Code lays down that no appeal shall lie from any order passed in appeal under this section. It is, therefore, evident that no second appeal lies.

The learned Counsel for the appellant states that the matter may be considered on the revisional side. The question is whether the omission to record the compromise is fatal to the validity of the decree. The defect is cured by s. 99, Civil Procedure Code which lays down:—

'No decree shall be reversed or substantially varied nor shall any case be remanded in appeal on account of any misjoinder of parties or causes of action or any error, defect or irregularity in any proceedings in the suit, not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court".

As already stated, it has been found by the lower Appellate Court that the compromise was entered into by the appellant. The omission to record the compromise does not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. The defect, therefore, is cured by s. 99, Civil Procedure Code, and consequently, there is no reason for interference even on the revisional side. It is, therefore, ordered that the appeal be dismissed with costs and the decree of the lower Court be confirmed.

Permission to file a Letters Patent Appeal is rejected.

D. Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 1259 of 1927
June 19, 1934
ABDUL RASHID, J.

DHANI RAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus
LEGHA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS

Hindu Law—Gift—Possession, delivery of—Necessity of—Property capable of possession—Repudiation by donor soon after—Effect—Non-delivery, if makes gift invalid—Custom (Punjab)—Gift.

Where the donor has done everything in his power to complete a gift, then the non-delivery of actual possession does not necessarily invalidate the gift, but where the property is capable of physical possession and the donor has repudiated the gift soon after the execution of the deed of gift, the non-delivery of actual possession makes the gift invalid Lila Kishen v. Hoaram (1), relied on, Kali Das v. Kanhaya Lall (2), Bhagwan Singh v. Kirpa Ram (3) and Sarwan Das v. Mansa Ram (4), distinguished.

Under Hindu Law a gift is not valid unless it is accompanied by delivery of possession of the subject of the gift from donor to the donee. Mere registration of a deed of gift is not equivalent to delivery of possession. It is not, therefore, sufficient to pass the title of the property from the donor to the donee. In cases where physical possession cannot be delivered owing to the nature of the property, it is enough to validate a gift if the donor has done all he could do to complete the gift so as to entitle the donee to obtain possession.

S. C. A. from a decree of the District Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated February 7, 1927.

Mr. M. C. Mahajan, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Salig Ram, Ramki Das and Daulat Ram, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—On January 16, 1924, Legha, plaintiff, made a gift of 166 kanals 3 marlas of land and four houses in favour of Dhani Ram, defendant, by means of a registered deed. On January 21, the plaintiff made a report at the thana and also submitted an application to the revenue authorities to the effect that he had been induced to make a gift by means of undue influence, that the gift was in fact invalid, and that possession had not been transferred to the donee. On June 16, the plaintiff instituted the present suit for a declaration that he was in proprietary possession of 166 kanals 3 marlas of land together with four houses standing thereon, and that the deed of gift dated January 16, 1924, was null and void and ineffective as he had been made to excute the deed by means of fraud, misrepresentation and undue influence. It was also alleged in the plaint that the plaintiff had never parted with the possession of the property in dispute.

The defendant pleaded, inter alia, that he had been in possession of the property in suit since Rabi 1924, that the gift had been validly made in his favour in lieu of past and future services, and that the plaintiff was bound by the deed of gift dated January 16, 1924. The trial Court held that the gift had in fact been made, but that within four or five days of the execution of the deed of gift the plaintiff had changed his mind and had repudiated the gift. It also held that possession of the gifted property had never been transferred to the defendant, and that therefore the gift remained incomplete. On these findings the plaintiff's suit was decreed with costs. The defendant preferred an appeal to the learned District Judge who held that the deed of gift was executed by the plaintiff under inducement which had the effect of undue influence upon the mind of the old man (plaintiff), that the gift was not completed by delivery of possession, that within a week of the execution the deed was effectively repudiated by the plaintiff, and that the defendant had taken forcible possession of the property in dispute after the institution of the present suit. In consequence the appeal of the defendant was dismissed. The defendant has preferred a second appeal to this Court.

The parties are agriculturists and it is common ground that they are governed by the Customary Law. It is laid down in para. 60 of Rattigan's Digest of Customary Law that a gift to be valid must ordinarily be followed by possession and must be free from undue influence. It was held in Lila Kishen v. Hoaram (1) that the primary rule of decision in a case of gift in the Punjab is custom and possession is ordinarily necessary to complete it, and that even under Hindu Law a gift which the donor repudiated immediately after and in which he did not do all in his power to perfect it and under which he did not give actual possession of the gifted property was not valid. Reliance was placed in this case on a ruling of their Lordships of the Privy Council reported as Kali Das v. Kanhaya Lall (2). In Kali Das v. Kanhaya Lall (2), the dispute as to the validity of the gift was not between the donee and the donor. On the contrary the person who disputed the gift claimed adversely to both of them. It was observed by their Lordships that the donor had done all that she could to complete the gift and that she was a party to the suit and admitted the gift to be complete. The true rule, therefore, as regards the necessity of possession according to the Privy Council ruling is that if the donor has done all he could do to perfect his contemplated gift, he cannot be compelled to do more. In the present case the donor was in a position to give the possession of the land to the donee, but it has been held by the learned District Judge that he refused to part with possession.

It appears that under Hindu Law also a gift is not valid unless it is accompanied by delivery or possession of the subject of the gift from the donor to the donee. Mere registration of a deed of gift is not equivalent to delivery of possession. It is not therefore sufficient to pass the title of the property from the donor to the donee. In cases, however, where physical possession cannot be delivered owing to the nature of the property it is enough to validate a gift if the donor has done all he could do to complete the gift so as to entitle the donee to obtain possession (Mulla's Hindu Law, para. 358). It was contended on behalf of the appellant that the delivery of possession is not essential where the gift is made by means of a registered deed and that the provisions of the Customary Law and the Hindu Law with respect to the delivery of possession have been abrogated by s. 123, Transfer of Property Act. Reliance was placed in this connection on Bhagwan Singh v. Kirpa Ram (3) and Sarwan Das v. Mansa Ram (4). These rulings, however, appear to me to be clearly distinguishable. It was observed in Bhagwan Singh v. Kirpa Ram (3), that under the Hindu law the delivery of possession was not necessary in order to validate a gift provided that there was acceptance on the part of the donee. The dispute as to the validity of the gift in the reported case was not between the donor and the donee and the donor never repudiated the gift.

The gifted land was situate in another district than the one in which the donor and the donee lived and it was therefore held that the fact that no mutation had been made with respect to the gift in dispute was of no consequence. The property in that case was in possession of tenants at the time of the gift In Sarwan Das v. Mansa Ram (4), the donee was a minor and was living with the donor in the same house which formed the subject-matter of the gift. These two cases therefore are of no assistance to the appellant. The ratio decidendi of all the cases appears to be that where the donor has done everything in his power to complete a gift, then the non-delivery of actual possession does not necessarily invalidate the gift, but where the property

(1) 45 P R 1901; 64 P L R 1901.
(2) 11Q 121; 11 I A 218; 4 Sar. 578; 8 Ind. Jur. 638 (P C).
(3) 89 Ind. Cas. 326; A I R 1925 Lah. 648; 1 Lah. Cas. 71.
(4) 119 Ind Cas. 271; A I R 1930 Lah. 145; Ind. Rul. (1929) Lah. 863; 11 Lah. L J 497.

is capable of physical posssesion and the donor has repudiated the gift soon after the execution of the deed of gift, the non-delivery of actual possession makes the gift invalid. In these circumstances it is unnecessary to deal with the question of undue influence. I need only remark that I agree with the finding of the learned District Judge in this respect.

For the reasons given above, I hold that the case has been correctly decided by the learned District Judge and dismiss this appeal with costs.

N. Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Criminal Revision Applicaton No. 70 of 1935
April 3, 1935
KENDALL, J.
BHAGWAN DAS—APPLICANT
versus
EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 182, 211, 202 (1) proviso—Complainant not examined on oath—Magistrate, if can sanction prosecution under ss. 182, 211—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 202.

It is not permissible for the Magistrate to order an enquiry and to sanction the prosecution of the applicant under ss. 182 and 211 of the Penal Code where he has not examined him on oath. In re Ningappa Rayappa Ghotadki (1) and Ram Sarup v. Emperor (2), distinguished.

Cr. R. App. from an order of the Sessions Judge, Meerut, dated January 21, 1935.

Mr. A. Sanyal, for the Applicant.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

Judgment.—This application for revision arises out of the following circumstances. The applicant filed a complaint under s. 448, Indian Penal Code, against Lala Budh Prakash, an Honorary Magistrate, on October 29, 1934. The Magistrate in whose Court it was filed did not examine the complainant on oath, but ordered an enquiry by the Police, and on November 5, a report was received that the complaint was false and that proceedings ought to be taken to file a complaint under s. 182 of the Indian Penal Code. The Magistrate, therefore, issued notice to the complainant for his appearance to show cause against such a complaint on November 30. Without going into details, it may be said that the record shows that this notice was not served on the present applicant. The Magistrate, however, took up the case on November 30, and in the absence of the applicant, passed an order in which he directed a complaint to be made against the applicant under ss. 182 and 211 of the Indian Penal Code.

An appeal was filed by the applicant in the Court of the Sessions Judge, and several arguments were advanced against the legality of the Magistrate's order of complaint. The learned Judge dealt with the matter at some length, but he held that there was no legal defect in passing the order without a notice being served on the applicant, and he further held that the proceedings of the Magistrate were not vitiated by his omission to record the statement of the applicant on oath. The learned Judge remarked:

"Here again under the law, as it now stands, no such recording of the statement of the complainant is necessary. In a case like this what has happened is that the Magistrate has refused to take cognizance. It is only when he actually does take cognizance that the Magistrate is bound to take down the statement of the complainant on oath."

It will be seen that the Magistrate decided to take action against the applicant on the basis of a Police report, but it is clear from the wording of the present proviso to sub-s. (1) of s. 202 of the Criminal Procedure Code that he had no jurisdiction to direct an investigation by the Police until he had examined the complainant on oath. His omission to take this necessary step, therefore, vitiated the whole of the proceeding.

I have been referred on behalf of the applicant to a decision of a Bench of the Bombay High Court in the case of In re Ningappa Rayappa Ghotadki (1) in which it was held that it was not permissible for the Magistrate to sanction the prosecution of the applicant under ss. 182 and 211 of the Indian Penal Code, where he had not examined him on oath, and the same view was taken in 1901, by the Judicial Commissioner's Court in Oudh in the case of Ram Sarup v. Emperor (2). Both these decisions, it will be noted, are prior to the amendment to s. 202 of the Criminal Procedure Code, by which the proviso referred to above was introduced. I have no doubt, therefore, that the Magistrate's proceedings in directing a complaint to be made were without jurisdiction. I, therefore, allow the application, and set aside the order of the

(1) 81 Ind. Cas. 608; 48 B 360; A I R 1924 Bom. 321; 26 Bom. L R 183; 25 Cr. L J 960
(2) 4 O C 127.

Magistrate in which he directed that a complaint be made against the applicant.

D. Application allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 18 of 1934

July 20, 1934

COSTELLO AND LORT-WILLIAMS, JJ.

LAL BEHARY DHUR AND ANOTHER — APPELLANTS

versus

ADMINISTRATOR-GENERAL, BENGAL AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Hindu Law—Religious Endowment—Succession to shebaitship—Laying down rule different from line of Hindu inheritance is invalid—Will—Construction — Benign construction should be used—Intention of testator should be given effect to.

Rules laid down by the founder of a Hindu debutter for succession to the office of shebait are invalid, if they provide for the office to be held by some one among the heirs of the founder to the exclusion of others, in a succession differing from the line of Hindu inheritance.

A will contained, "I appoint my sons K and R to be the shebaits of the Thacoors and I direct that upon the death, retirement or refusal to act of any of them or any of the future shebaits, the then next eldest male lineal descendant of K or R shall act as a shebait in place of the deceased or retiring shebait or shebait refusing to act as such—it being my intention that the eldest for the time being in the male line of my said sons shall always remain as joint shebait, and in the event of the death or refusal to act of any shebait, the then next male member of the branch to which the shebait dying or refusing belonged shall act as a shebait in his place and stead :"

Held, that the testater wished to provide that K and R should be the first shebaits, and that upon the death, retirement or refusal to act of either of them or of any of the future shebaits, the then next eldest male lineal descendants of K and of R should be the joint shebaits representing K and R's branches of the family respectively—and that there should be only two shebaits at any time.

Held, also that the provision in the will for the succession of the eldest in the male line was invalid, because it excluded some of the founder's heirs according to Hindu Law. Further, the testator did not intend to give to either K and R an estate of inheritance or an absolute estate, but at most only a life-interest, because he provided for the succession on their death, retirement or refusal, of persons who were not their heirs according to Hindu Law.

[Case-law referred to].

The attitude to be adopted in construing a Hindu will is that a benignant construction is to be used, and that if the real meaning of the document can be reasonably ascertained from the language used though that language be ungrammatical or untechnical, or mistaken as to name or description or in any other manner incorrect, provided it sufficiently indicates what was meant, that meaning shall be enforced to the extent and in the form which the law allows, but effect should be given to the intention of the testator.

Messrs. W. W. K. Page and S. N. Banerjee (Jr.), for the Appellants.

Messrs. A. K. Roy and S. B. Shinha, for the Administrator-General.

Mr. N. C. Chatterjee, for the Respondents.

Lort-Williams, J.—This is an appeal from a decision of Panckridge, J., upon an originating summons concerning the validity of certain dispositions in the will of Luckey Narain Dhur dated November 18, 1923. The testator died on March 26, 1927, leaving three sons, Ram Chunder, Kartick and Ganesh. Ram died on October 17, 1928, and Kartick on May 2, 1927.

Ram left four sons, Lal Behary, Bon Behary, Rash Behary and Banku Behary, and Kartick left one son Netye. All these are alive, and Ganesh has one son, Madan. On April 25, 1929, letters of administration de bonis non were granted to the Administrator-General, Bengal, who wishes to know who are the persons now entitled to act as shebaits of a religious endowment created by cls. 9 and 10 of the will. Clause 11 providss as follows:

"I appoint my sons Kartick Chunder Dhur and Ram Chunder Dhur to be the shebaits of the Thacoors and I direct that upon the death, retirement or refusal to act of any of them or any of the future shebaits, the then next eldest male lineal descendant of Kartick Chunder Dhur or Ram Chunder Dhur shall act as a shebait in place of the deceased or retiring shebait or shebait refusing to act as such—it being my intention that the eldest for the time being in the male line of my said sons Kartick Chunder Dhur and Ram Chunder Dhur shall always remain as joint shebaits, and in the event of the death or refusal to act of any shebait, the then naxt male member of the branch to which the shebait dying or refusing belonged shall act as a shebait in his place and stead."

The intentions of the testator are reasonably clear. He wished to provide that Kartick and Ram should be the first shebaits, and that upon the death, retirement or refusal to act of either of them, or of any of the future shebaits, the then next eldest male lineal descendants of Kartick and of Ram should be the joint shebaits representing Kartick's and Ram's branches of the family respectively—and that there should be only two shebaits at any time.

But it has been decided by a Full Bench of this Court in Monohar Mukherjee v. Bhupendra Nath Mukerjee (1), that shebaitship is a kind of property in the eye of Hindu Law and not merely a right to an office. That a person succeeding to the shebaitship is a grantee or donee of property, and his right to succeed to the office is subject to the rule of law laid down by the

(1) 141 Ind. Cas. 544; A I R 1932 Cal. 791; 37 C W N 29; 56 C L J 468; Ind. Rul. (1933) Cal. 115; 60 C 452.

Privy Council in Jatindra Mohan Tagore v. Ganendra Mohan Tagore (2), that all estates of inheritance created by gift or will, so far as they are inconsistent with the general Hindu Law of inheritance are void as such.

According to Hindu Law no person can succeed under a gift or will as heir to estates described in the terms which in English Law would designate estates tail, and it follows that rules laid down by the founder of a Hindu debutter for succession to the office of shebait are invalid, if they provide for the office to be held by some one among the heirs of the founder to the exclusion of others, in a succession differing from the line of Hindu inheritance. The result is that the provision in this will for the succession of the eldest in the male line is invalid, because it excludes some of the founder's heirs according to Hindu Law. Further it is clear that the testator did not intend to give to either Kartick or Ram an estate of inheritance or an absolute state, but at most only a life interest, because he provided for the succession on their death, retirement or refusal, of persons who were not their heirs according to Hindu Law: Jatindra Mohan Tagore v. Ganendra Mohan Tagore (2), at pp. 66 and 76-78*: see also Sreemutty Kristoromoney Dossee v. Maharajah Norendro Krishna Bahadoor (3).

This disposses of the contention raised on behalf of Bon Behary, Rash Behary and Banku Behary, that they ought to succeed along with Lal Behary and Netye, as the immediate heirs of Ram and Kartick. The old rule of Hindu Law that a bequest cannot be made to an unborn person is not relevant to the present case, firstly because all persons claiming under the will were born during the life of the testator, and secondly because, in any case, the Hindu Disposition of Property Act, 1916, would have applied. There remains to be decided the questions whether the whole of the provisions of the clause fail, after the life interests given to Ram and Kartick, in which case Ganesh would succeed along with the heirs of Ram and Kartick, as joint heirs of the testator: or whether the clause can be construed as providing for independent gifts of life interests to Lal Behary and Netye, who happen to be the eldest male lineal descendants of Ram and Kartick. That is to say, whether the words 'eldest male lineal descendant can be construed so far as they affect Lal Behary and Netye, as words of description only, and not of inheritance. This question was discussed but not decided in Jatindra Mohan Tagore v. Ganendra Mohan Tagore (2), where their Lordships said:

"It remains, however, to be considered whether the persons described as heirs in tail or heirs of inheritance not recognised by law are sufficiently designed to take successively by way of gift that which the will incorrectly assumes to give them as heirs, so that they may be regarded as a succession of donees for life, having the power and subject to the restrictions sought to be imposed by the will upon the successive heirs in tail."

In that case the bequests were (1) to Juttendro Mohun Tagore for life, then (2) to his eldest son born in the testator's lifetime for life, then (3) in strict settlement on his heirs in tail male, then (4) similar limitations for life and in tail male on the other sons of Juttendro Mohun Tagore, born in the testator's lifetime, then (5) limitation in tail male on the sons of Juttendro Mohun Tagore born after the testator's death, then (6) "after the failure or determination of the uses and estates hereinbefore limited" to Shooshendro Mohun Tagore for life, (7) like limitations for his sons and their sons, and (8) like limitations for the sons of Lullit Mohun Tagore, who was deceased at the date of the will, and their sons in tail male. Juttendro Mohun Tagore had no son born in the testator's lifetime, and in any case the subsequent limitations of inheritance were invalid because they offended against the rule of the Hindu Law of succession, to which I have already referred. The gift to Sourendro Mohun Tagore for life was invalid because the testator only intended it to be operative after the failure or determination of the prior estate created, and this must be construed as failure in fact, and not by reason of invalidity in law, On p. 78* their Lordships observed that:

"There is, however, another point of view in which the estates in tail male may be regarded, namely, as intended, at all events, to confer an estate for "life upon the first taker in existence when the will took effect. The intention of the testator to give at least a life estate to the first taker is clear, and if an estate in tail male stood first in the will, effect might perhaps be given to that intention. There was, however, no person in existence to take an estate in tail male at the "testator's death except Suttendro Mohun Tagore, (who was the grandson of Lullit Mohun Tagore) and the validity of his claim to a life interest in succession stands upon the same ground as that of Sourendra Mohun Tagore."

Their Lordships decided that a life in-

(2) (1872) I A Sup. Vol. 47; 9 B L R 377; 18 W R 359; 2 Suth. 692; 3 Sar. 82 (P C).

(3) 16 C 383; 16 I A 29; 5 Sar. 285; 13 Ind. Jur. 90 P C).

*Pages of I A Sup. Vol.—[Ed].

*Page I A. Sup. Vol.—[Ed.]

terest was created in Juttendro Mohun Tagore, and that the estates of inheritance and subsequent estates or interest attempted to be created by the will failed. It will be observed that the facts in Jatindra Mohan Tagore v. Ganendra Mohan Tagore (2) which made it unnecessary for their Lordships to decide the question now in issue, are not to be found in the present case, which must therefore be distinguished. It becomes necessary therefore to attempt to apply to the facts of this case the observation of their Lordships to which I have referred, and to construe this will in such a way as to give effect so far as is legally possible, to the wishes and intention of the testator. The attitude to be adopted in construing a Hindu will is set out at pp. 64-70* of Jatindra Mohan Tagore v. Ganendra Mohan Tagore (2) and one general principle is "that a benignant construction is to be used, and that if the real meaning of the document can be reasonably ascertained from the language used, though that language be ungrammatical or untechnical or mistaken as to name or description or in any other manner incorrect, provided it sufficiently indicate what was meant, that meaning shall be enforced to the extent and in the form which the law allows."

Moreover, s. 87, Succession Act, provides that "the intention of the testator shall not be set aside because it cannot take effect to the full extent, but effect is to be given to it as far as possible".

The decided cases are not of much assistance, In Madhavrao Ganpatrao v. Balabhay Raghunath (4), the bequest was of the income of certain property to K,

"and after her death in trust for the male heirs of the said K, share and share alike."

It was decided that this was an absolute gift of the property to K's sons which took effect after the determination of her life interest. The words "male heirs" did not connote a descendible quality of estate. In an Indian settlement they are not to be construed primarily as words of inheritance, denoting the character of an estate. K's sons took not by way of inheritance from her, but by virtue of a wholly independent gift to such persons as answered the description of male heirs at the date of her death. They took an absolute estate because there was nothing to suggest that such estate was limited to their life, and no descent was marked out after their death. In the present case, on the one hand the words

"it being my intention that the eldest for the time being in the male line of my said sons Kartick Chunder Dhur and Ram Chunder Dhur shall always remain as joint shebaits" seems to indicate that the testator intended to create an estate of inheritance in tail male, but on the other hand the words

"I appoint my sons Kartick Chander Dhur and Ram Chunder Dhur to be the shebaits of the said Thaccors and I direct that upon the death, retirement or refusal to act of any of them or any of the future shebaits then then eldest male lineal descendant of Kartick Chunder Dhur of Ram Chunder Dhur shall act as a shabait in place of the deceased or retiring shebait or shebait refusing to act as such"

are not altogether appropriate to the creation of such an estate, and are capable of being construed as an intention to make an independent gift of the office for life to such person as happened to answer the description of 'eldest male lineal descendant" at the date of the death retirement, or refusal to act of Kartick or Ram. In Kandarpa Mohan Gossain v. Akhoy Chandra Bose (5), the words of bequest were:

"In default of such appointment by the said Sm. Surabala Dassi her spiritual guide Mahendra Nath Chatterji or in case of his death his eldest male heir, and in like default by the said Sarajubala, her spiritual guide Hari Mhan Gossain, or in case of his death his eldest male heir, jointly with the survivor of the said settlors, and after the death of both of the said settlors and in default of such appointment as aforesaid the said two spiritual guides or their or his eldest male heir shall act as joint shebaits of the said deities, and thenceforth the future shebait shall consist of the eldest male descendant of the said Mahendra Nath Chatterji and the said Hari Mohan Gossain, provided always that every shebait of the said deity shall have like power to nominate and appoint by deed or will his successor in office."

This was construed as providing for gifts to Mahendra Nath Chatterjee and Hari Mohan Gossain or alternatively, should they happen to be dead at the time when the gifts took effect, then to such persons as happened to be their eldest male heirs, by way of gift, and not by way of inheritance, and that if either Mahendra Nath Chatterji or Hari Mohan Gossain or their eldest male heirs has taken thus by way of gift, then subsequently the eldest male descendant of any of them could take only by way of inheritance,

This decision turned upon the particular words of the settlement in question, and is distinguishable from the present case. The gift to the eldest male heir was made dependent upon the question whether his predecessor happened to be dead at the time when the gift took effect. If was a gift to the predecessor and his eldest male heir in the alternative only, and not gift to each of them in succession. In Sreemutty Kristoromoney Dossee v. Maharajh Norendro Krishna Bahadoor (3) the words of bequest ran as follows:

(4) 107 Ind. Cas. 119; A I R 1928 P C 33; 55 I A 74; 52 B 176; 30 Bom. L R 282; 47 C L J 198; 54 M L J 245; 27 L W 400; 1 L T 40 Bom. 86; 26 A L J 560; 32 C W N 925 (P C).

(5) 150 Ind. Cas. 179; A I R 1934 Cal. 379; 58 C L J 445; 38 C W N 156; 6 R C 785; 61 C 106.

* Page of I. A. Sup. V. R.—[Ed.]

"I give, devise and bequest the residue of my real and personal estate both joint and self-acquired unto my executors, in trust to pay the rents, profits and income thereof unto my said daughter during her lifetime, and after her death in trust to pay, assign and convey the residue of my estate real and personal to my half-brothers Rajas Nreependro Krishna Bahadur and Norendro Krishna Bahadur in equal moieties and to the heir or heirs male of their or either of their body, in failure of which in trust to give the same to the son or sons of my said daughter."

Their Lordships decided that these words could not mean that an absolute gift was intended to be made to the half-brothers, because "heirs male" obviously negatived an intention to give an estate descendible to heirs generally:

"The words must mean either that the estate of inheritance given to the brothers is a qualified one, or that the heirs male are to take somehow by way of direct gift from the testator."

Their Lordships further decided that the first of these two alternative constructions was the only possible one, because the plain and obvious sense of the words used indicated an intention to confer on them an estate of inheritance resembling an English estate in tail male. They rejected the first alternative because the words were "and" and not "or" heirs male. But they observed at p. 41* that if words of limitation had been attached to the words "heirs male", they would have tended to show that the "heirs" were objects of direct gift, because it would have been inappropriate to attach such words of limitation to the words "heirs male", if these were to be regarded themselves as words of limitation. On the whole I have come to the conclusion that cl. 11 can be construed as providing inter alia for independent gifts for life to Lal Behary and Netye as the persons who happened to answer the description of eldest male lineal descendants of Ram and Kartick at the times of their respective deaths, and they are the persons at present entitled to act as shebaits. Therefore the appeal is allowed and the cross-objections are dismissed. Costs of all parties will come out of the estate. The costs of the Administrator-General will be as between attorney and client.

Costello, J.—I agree.

D. Appeal allowed.

*Page of A I R 1928 P. C.—[Ed.]

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 653 of 1928

June 1, 1931

BHIDE AND DIN MOHAMMAD, JJ.

NIHALU RAM CHELA RAM—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

RADHU RAM HUKMI RAM—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 19- Acknowledgment containing words "dewne kite"—Whether promise to pay within Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 25—Extrinsic evidence to explain acknowledgment—Admissibility of—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 96—Practice—Evidence - Plaintiff wanting to explain certain acknowledgment after defendant's evidence—Court, if can refuse evidence material to decision.

The words "1,019-11-6 lekhe baki dewne kite" in an acknowledgment can be reasonably construed as a promise to pay, within the meaning of s. 25, Contract Act. Fateh Chand v. Ganga Singh (2), and Kanshi Ram Bansi Ram v. Arjan Das (3), relied on.

According to Explanation I to s. 19, Limitation Act, it is not necessary that the writing itself should specify the exact nature of the property or right in respect of which liability is acknowledged and there is to be no bar to extrinsic evidence being admitted for the purpose. Beti Maharani v. Collector of Etawah (8), Narayana Iyer v. Venkata Ramana Iyer (9), relied on.

Where in a suit the question is whether certain letters written by the defendant are acknowledgments, the defendant admitting that they were written by him but professing ignorance as to whether they referred to the amount in dispute, and the plaintiff wants to give evidence to explain these letters, the Court should not refuse to record any evidence and then draw any adverse inference if it thinks fit to do so from the circumstances in which that evidence is given and in refusing to record evidence which is material for the decision of the case, the Court acts illegally.

S. C. A. from the decree of the District Judge, Dera Ghazi Khan, dated December 12, 1927.

Messrs. J. N. Aggarwal and J. L. Kapur, for the Appellant

Mr. Nawal Kishore, for the Respondent.

Bhide, J.—This second appeal arises out of a suit for recovey of Rs. 2,596 based on an account between the parties commencing from July 13, 1906. The suit has been dismissed by the Courts below as time-barred and from this decision plaintiff has appealed. The suit was instituted on April 12, 1926, and was prima facie barred by time, but the plaintiff relied on certain acknowledgments to bring the suit within time under s. 19, Limitation Act. The acknowledgments thus relied on in their chronological order were as follows:

Ex. P-4, dated 3rd Kattak, 1971	= (October 19, 1914).
Ex. P-5, dated 15th Kattak, 1972	= (October 31, 1915).
Ex. P-1 dated 26th Poh, 1975	= (January 9, 1919).
Ex. P-3, dated 29th Asuj, 1978	= (October 14, 1921).

Ex. P-2, dated 3rd Baisakh, 1980 —(April 15, 1923).

The first acknowledgment is alleged to have been made on October 19, 1914, i. e., more than 8 years after the dealings commenced and it is conceded that this would not serve as a valid acknowledgment for the purposes of s. 19 except as regards two items of Rs. 600 and Rs. 1,000, which are said to have been advanced within six years of that date, i. e, on Maghar 20, 1965 (December 4, 1908) and Jeth 18, 1969 (May, 20, 1912) respectively. It is however urged that this acknowledgment of 1914 (Ex. P-4) in itself constituted a promise to pay within the meaning of s. 25, Contract Act, and could therefore furnish a fresh cause of action. The learned District Judge has refused to accept this contention on the authority of Pala Mal v. Tulla Ram (1), but that ruling has been lately dissented from in Fateh Chand v. Ganga Singh (2). In Kanshi Ram Bansi Ram v. Arjan Das (3), it was held by a Division Bench of this Court that the words "3,000 rapaya babat nuqsan deyne" expressed a definite promise to pay. The wording of Ex. P-4 is as follows:

"4,019-11-6 lekhi baki dewne kite miti Katak 3 Sambat 1971 agat war karoni Akhar Lekhu Chode likhe Rupaya 4,69-11-6."

The words "dewne kite" in the above acknowledgment appear to be equally strong if not stronger and in my opinion these words can be reasonably construed as a promise to pay. I therefore hold that the entry of 1914 (Ex. P-4) can form the basis of a fresh cause of action.

However even if Ex. P-4 can support a fresh cause of action, the plaintiff cannot get over the bar of limitation unless the subsequent acknowledgments which have been relied on, by the plaintiff, viz., Exs. P-1 to P-3 and P-5, can serve the purpose. Now Ex. P-5 is an acknowledgment of the same balance as in Ex. P-4 with same interest. This acknowledgment was held inadmissible by the trial Court for want of proper stamp duty. This, however, would not matter for the other three documents (Exs. P-1 to P-3), will suffice to bring the suit within time, if they amount to valid acknowledgments within the meaning of s. 19, Limitation Act. These documents are letters alleged to have been addressed by the defendants to the plaintiffs. But Piara Ram, P. W. No. 6, partner of the defendant firm when questioned about them professed ignorance as to whether these letters referred to the accounts now in dispute. Chandar Bhan partner of the plaintiff firm wanted to go into the witness-box after Piara Ram's evidence was over (apparently to explain these letters) but the trial Court refused to allow him to do so, with the result that there is nothing on the record to show to which accounts the letters Exs. P-1 to P-3, relate, and whether they were in fact acknowledgments of any subsisting liability with respect to the amount now claimed. The plaintiffs urged in the grounds of appeal before the learned District Judge that the trial Court had erred in law in refusing to record the statement of Chandar Bhan but the learned District Judge did not apparently consider it necessary to go into this question as Exs. P-1 to P-3, do not themselves show that they are acknowledgments of any subsisting liability in respect of the account now in dispute and he was of opinion that no evidence aliunda was admissible to explain the letters.

The main points which now require decision in this appeal therefore are whether: (i) extrinsic evidence is admissible to prove that the letters Exs. P-1 to P-3, were acknowledgments of a subsisting liability in respect of the amount now claimed by the plaintiff, and (ii) if so, whether the learned Judge of the trial Court was right in refusing to allow Chandar Bhan to go into the witness-box. As regards the first point the learned District Judge has referred to Venkata v. Parthasardhi (4), Kuthiravattat Nair v. Nanu Saski (5) and Achuthan v. Kunnambrath Alidei (6), but all that these authorities show is that the writing relied on should itself amount to an acknowledgment of liability. The learned Counsel for the appellant strongly relied on Mani Ram v. Rup Chand (7), in which their Lordships of the Privy Council held that even an admission that there was a mutual open and current account at a particular time, amounted to a conditional acknowledgment of liability and implied a promise to pay in case the balance on that account was found to be in favour of the other party. In the present instance Ex. P-1 contains a statement as follows:

"We have come to know of the amount due to you with reference to the letter received by post. You

(1) 119 P R 1904.

(2) 115 Ind. Cas. 853; A I R 1929 Lah. 264; 10 L 748; 30 P L R 226.

(3) 137 Ind. Cas. 840; A I R 1932 Lah. 470; Ind. Rul. (1932) Lah. 369.

(4) 16 M 220; 3 M L J. 35.

(5) 26 M 34; 12 M L J 101.

(6) 91 Ind. Cas. 833; A I R 1925 Mad. 675; 21 L W 593 (1925) M W N 361.

(7) 33 C 1047; 33 I A 165; 4 C L J 94; 8 Bom. L. R 501; 10 C W N 874; 16 M L J 300; 1 M L T 199; 3 A L J 525; 2 N L R 130 (P. C.).

have charged interest therein. We have been now shown the amount to your account."

Exhibit P-2, says: "We have understood the account tendered by you. It is correct." Ex. P-3. says: "Your item was found to be correct."

If the plaintiff can produce satisfactory evidence to show that the accounts which were sent to the defendants with regard to which the above statements were made referred to the amount now in dispute, these documents would amount to valid acknowledgments under s. 19, Limitation Act. According to Explanation I to s. 19 it is not necessary that the writing itself should specify the exact nature of the property or right in respect of which liability is acknowledged and there seems to be no bar to extrinsic evidence being admitted for the purpose: cf. Beti Maharani v. Collector of Etawah (8), and Narayana Iyer v. Venkata Ramana Iyer (9), also s. 96, Evidence Act.

As regards the next point for decision, viz., whether the learned Judge of the trial Court was right in refusing to allow the plaintiff to go into the witness-box, the only ground on which the refusal was based was apparently the fact, that the plaintiff first put the defendants into the witness-box and then wanted to go into the witness-box himself. The learned Judge thought that he was only trying to fill up the gaps in the evidence and he therefore refused to record his evidence. Though, it would have been undoubtedly more satisfactory if the plaintiff Chandar Bhan, had first gone into the witness-box and put forward his case in a straightfoward manner, I do not think the learned Judge of the trial Court was justified in law in refusing to record the evidence of Chandar Bhan. The learned Counsel for the respondents has not been able to cite any authority in support of the procedure adopted by the learned Judge and the order passed by him cannot I think be sustained. In my opinion, the learned Judge should have recorded the evidence and then drawn any adverse inference, if he thought fit to do so from the circumstances in which the evidence was given.

As the trial Court has illegally refused to record evidence which seems to be material for the decision of this appeal, there is no option, but to remand the case for this evidence being now recorded. I would accordingly remand the case under O. XLI, r. 27, Civil Procedure Code, (read with O. XLII, Civil Procedure Code), for the evidence of Chandar Bhan being recorded with roference to the documents Exs. P 1, P-2 and P-3. The defendants will also be entitled to produce evidence in rebuttal. The parties should appear before the trial Court on the June 18, for a date being fixed for recording the evidence and the defendants should file their lists of witnesses (if any) on that date. The report should be submitted to this Court before the August 31, and the case should be put up for hearing early in October.

Din Mohammad, J.—I agree.

D. Case remanded.

(8) 17 A 198; 22 I A 31; 6 Sar P C J 551 (P. C.).
(9) 25 M 220 (F. B.).

OUDH CHIEF COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 95 of 1933
April 26, 1935

SRIVASTAVA AND ZIA-UL-HASAN, JJ.

MOHAMMAD YAKUB KHAN AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat AZIZ-UN-NISA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Oudh Estates Act (IV of 1925), s. 109—Scope of—Construction—Interpretation of Statutes—Language of Statute should not be departed from—Claim found against defendant No. 1, but dismissed due to finding on question of estoppel and s. 41, Transfer of Property Act, raised by defendants Nos. 2, 3—Issues not raised by defendant No. 7—Held, claim against defendant No. 1 could not be dismissed.

All that s. 109, Oudh Estates Act, provides is that the bequest shall take effect as if the death of the legatee had happened immediately after the death of the testator. In other words, in order to prevent a lapse it must be assumed that the legatee survived the testator. The section does not contain any provision that on such assumption being made the bequest is to take effect only in favour of the lineal descendants. To hold that in such a case the bequest is to take effect only in favour of certain heirs and not in favour of others will be putting a construction on the section for which no warrant can be found in the plain and clear language of it. [p. 1078, col. 1.]

It is not permissible to depart from the language of a Statute unless there are strong and adequate grounds for it. The functions of a Court of law are merely to interpret the Statute and not to legislate.

The operative part of an order said that the plaintiffs' claim failed by reason of the findings on issues Nos. 5 and 6. These issues dealt with the question of estoppel and s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act. They were framed on the pleas raised by defendants Nos. 2 and 3. No plea of estoppel was raised by defendant No. 1 and there was nothing on the record to substantiate such a plea on her behalf. There was nothing to show that the defendant No. 1 has in any way changed her position to her detriment on account of any conduct or acquiescence on the part of the plaitiffs :

Held, that the plaintiffs' claim against defendant No. 1 could not be dismissed by reason of findings on issues Nos. 5 and 6.

F. C. A. against an order of the Sub-Judge of Rai Bareli, dated July 31, 1933.

Mr. Naim Ullah, for the Appellants.

Mr. Radha Krishna, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This is an appeal by the plaintiffs against the judgment and decree, dated July 31, 1933, of the learned Subordinate Judge of Rae Bareli dismissing their claim for a declaration that they were the owners of a moiety share in the four annas share of Moti Bibi in the villages in suit and that the transfers made by defendant No. 1 did not affect their share.

One Abdul Hakim Khan was the taluqdar of Amawan estate in the Rae Bareli District. His name was entered in the Lists I and III prepared under s. 8 of the Oudh Estates Act. He executed a will, (Ex. 1), on February 21, 1873, by means of which he bequeathed a four annas share in the villages mentioned in the list attached to the plaint to his daughter Moti Bibi. Moti Bibi died on April 25, 1873, in the life-time of her father. On the death of Abdul Hakim which took place on February 23, 1878, disputes arose regarding succession to his estate and ultimately on August 30, 1890, it was decided by the late Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh that Musammat Aziz-un-nissa who is defendant No. 1 in the present suit was entitled to the four annas share which had been bequeathed to her mother Moti Bibi.

The plaintiffs, who are the step-brothers of Musammat Aziz-un-nissa defendant No. 1 being the sons of her father by a different mother, instituted this suit on the allegation that the four annas share which had been bequeathed by Abdul Hakim to Moti Bibi devolved in equal shares on Moti Bibi's daughter Aziz-un-nissa and her husband Mohammad Yusuf and that they have succeeded to the two annas share of Mohammad Yusuf on the latter's death in February 1910. They also alleged that their father Mohammad Yusuf and after him the plaintiffs have been in joint possession with Aziz-un-nissa of the entire share and are still in such possession. They complained that Aziz-un-nissa has made certain transfers in respect of the entire share of Moti Bibi in some of the villages in suit in favour of defendants Nos. 2 and 3 and has also made a wakf in respect of the entire share of Moti Bibi in two of the villages in suit and thus cast a cloud on the title of the plaintiffs and has made it necessary for them to bring the present suit for declaration of their rights.

Aziz-un-nissa defendant No. 1 pleaded in her written statement that she succeeded to the entire share of Moti Bibi, that mutation of names was effected in her favour in respect of the entire four annas share in the estate and that she had been in exclusive possession of it though the collections were made on her behalf by the plaintiffs and their father. But the suit was contested mainly by the transferees defendants Nos. 2 and 3 who pleaded that the entire share bequeathed to Moti Bibi was inherited by defendant No. 1 alone and that the plaintiffs were, by their conduct, estopped from questioning the transfers made by defendant No. 1 in their favour. They also sought the protection of s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act.

The learned Subordinate Judge held that the four annas share of Moti Bibi devolved on her personal heirs according to Muhammadan Law and that the plaintiffs were, therefore, entitled to $5\frac{1}{4}$ pies share only in the four annas share which had been bequeathed to Moti Bibi. He further found that the plaintiffs father and the plaintiffs had been in joint possession with defendant No. 1. As regards the transfers, he held that both defendants Nos. 2 and 3 were protected under s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act and that the plaintiffs were also estopped by their conduct from questioning the transfers in favour of defendant No. 3. At the end he dismissed the plaintiffs' suit in toto.

The plaintiffs appealed against the entire decree and impleaded all the three defendants as respondents. Defendant No. 3 died during the pendency of the appeal. No steps having been taken to bring her legal representatives on the record within the prescribed time, the appeal has abated against her under this Court's order dated May 9, 1934. The learned Counsel for the plaintiffs-appellants has, therefore, confined his arguments in the appeal to his claim against defendants Nos. 1 and 2. Defendant No. 1 has not appeared to contest the appeal and it has been heard ex parte against her.

The first question arising for decision is as regards the succession to the property which had been bequeathed by Abdul Hakim to Moti Bibi. Admittedly Abdul Hakim was a taluqdar who was subject to the provisions of the Oudh Estates Act. Section 19 of the Oudh Estates Act makes certain sections of the Indian Succession Act applicable to wills made by a taluqdar.' One of these sections is s. 96 of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865) which corresponds to s. 109 of Act XXXIX of 1925. This section runs as follows:—

"Where a bequest has been made to any child or other lineal descendant of the testator, and the legatee dies in the life-time of the testator, but any lineal descendant of his survives the testator, the bequest shall not lapse, but shall take effect as if the death of the legatee had happened immediately after the death of the testator, unless a contrary intention appears by the will."

It was conceded in the lower Court and is admitted before us that the provisions of this section govern the bequest made by Abdul Hakim in favour of Moti Bibi. The result, therefore, is that the bequest in favour of Moti Bibi did not lapse by reason of her predeceasing her father but it must be given effect to as if the legatee had died immediately after the death of the testator. It has been argued on behalf of the defendant-respondent that this provision is intended for the benefit of the lineal descendants of the legatee and, therefore, it must be held that the bequest devolved only on the lineal descendants and not on any other heirs of the legatee. We regret we are unable to accede to this argument. All that the section provides is that in such a case the bequest shall take effect as if the death of the legatee had happened immediately after the death of the testator. In other words, in order to prevent a lapse it must be assumed that the legatee survived the testator. The section does not contain any provision that on such assumption being made the bequest is to take effect only in favour of the lineal descendants. It is not permissible to depart from the language of the Statute unless there are strong and adequate grounds for it. The functions of a Court of law are merely to interpret the Statute and not to legislate. If we were to hold that in such a case the bequest is to take effect only in favour of certain heirs and not in favour of others, we will be putting a construction on the section for which no warrant can be found in the plain and clear language of it. We have, therefore, no hesitation in agreeing with the learned Subordinate Judge that according to the correct interpretation of s. 109 the bequest must be held to take effect in favour of all the heirs of Moti Bibi. The Counsel for the parties are agreed before us that Moti Bibi was not a person belonging to any of the classes specified in s. 14 of the Oudh Estates Act and, therefore, under s. 15 of that Act the devolution of the share bequeathed to Moti Bibi must be according to Muhammadan Law. The learned Counsel for the plaintiffs-appellants has not, therefore, contested the lower Court's finding that the plaintiffs are not entitled to anything more than 5¼ pies share in the four annas share of Moti Bibi. He has, however, contended that the learned Subordinate Judge has acted wrongly in not giving a decree to the plaintiffs in respect of this share against defendant No. 1. This contention in our opinion must succeed. The learned Subordinate Judge has given no reasons for dismissing the claim against defendant No. 1. His order dismissing the claim in its entirety seems to be due to a mere oversight. In the operative part of his order he says that the plaintiffs' claim fails by reason of his findings on Issues Nos. 5 and 6. These issues deal with the question of estoppel and s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act. They were framed on the pleas raised by defendants Nos. 2 and 3. No plea of estoppel was raised by defendant No. 1 and there is nothing on the record to substantiate such a plea on her behalf. There is nothing to show that the defendant No. 1 has in any way changed her position to her detriment on account of any conduct or acquiescence on the part of the plaintiffs. We are, therefore, of opinion that the appeal must succeed as against defendant No. 1 and the plaintiffs should be given a declaration that they are entitled to 5¼ pies share in the four annas share bequeathed to Moti Bibi in villages entered at Nos. 3, 7, 9, 11, 12, 14 and 16 of the list attached to the plaint and that the plaintiffs' 5¼ pies share in villages Dasauti and Rukunpur (Items Nos. 7 and 9 of the list) is not affected by the deed of wakf executed by defendant No. 1.

The next line of attack of the learned Counsel for the appellants was directed against the finding of the lower Court that the defendant No. 2 was protected under s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act. The defendant No. 2 holds a simple mortgage which was executed in favour of her ancestor Ganga Bakhsh Singh by the defendant No. 1 on February 18, 1913. There can be no doubt and it is not seriously disputed that defendant No. 1 was an ostensible owner of the property transferred by her within the meaning of s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act with the consent, express or implied, of the plaintiffs and their father. As already stated, she had obtained a decree from the Judicial Commissioner's Court as far back as August 30, 1890, in which she had been held entitled to the whole of the four annas share which had been bequeathed to Moti Bibi. Mutation of names was effected in her favour on the basis of this decree and her name continued to be recorded in the khewat as owner of the whole share during the last two settlements. The plaintiffs' father and after him the plaintiffs managed the property on her behalf but never before the institution of the present suit questioned her title or took any steps to have the khewat entries corrected. The plaintiffs' father jointly with defendant No. 1 made an application (Ex. B-11) for partition of Rasulpur, one of the villages which had been bequeathed to Moti Bibi in the Revenue Courts. In this application defendant No. 1 was described as having a four annas share. On the death of the plaintiffs' father the plaintiffs were substituted in his place and the partition was continued at their instance. These facts are in our opinion more than ample to show that defendant No. 1 was an ostensible owner with the express or implied consent of the plaintiffs.

The main contention of the appellants is that the mortgagee, ancestor of defendant No. 2, did not make proper inquiries into the title of defendant No. 1 before taking the mortgage. The evidence of D. W. No. 2, Mata Prasad, a servant of the defendants shows that Ganga Bakhsh before taking the mortgage consulted his legal adviser Mir Fida Husain deceased Vakil of Rae Bareli. Mir Fida Husain deputed the witness to make inquiries about the extent of the defendant's share in the villages proposed to be mortgaged. In pursuance of this the witness examined the khewats of all the villages. The witness has been believed by the trial Judge and there is no reason for us to disbelieve him. The story about Mir Fida Husain having been consulted seems very probable in view of the fact that the mortgage-deed (Ex. B-9) is scribed by his clerk. The decree of the trial Court (Ex. B-4) in the suit above referred to which was finally decided by the Judicial Commissioner's Court shows that the same Mir Fida Husain was a Counsel in that suit. He was therefore presumably aware about the title of defendant No. 1 to the entire four annas share having been upheld in that litigation. Under the circumstances we are inclined to agree with the lower Court that the evidence of inquiry given by the defendants must be accepted as sufficient. The quantum of inquiry must depend upon the circumstances of each case. In Baidya Nath Dutt v. Alef Jan Bibi, (A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 210) (1) it was held by a Bench of the Calcutta High Court that it is not enough to assert generally that inquiries should be made or that a prudent man should make inquiries; some specific circumstance should be pointed out as the starting point of an inquiry which might be expected to lead to some result. In the present case the khewat entries which had been examined by the mortgagee showed that mutation had been effected on the basis of the Civil Court decree. As already mentioned, presumably the lawyer who was consulted was fully cognizant of that litigation. Even if the mortgagee or his agent had pursued the inquiry further he would only have found that the highest Court in the Province had upheld the title of defendant No. 1 in respect of the entire share. There is no suggestion that the mortgagee did not act in good faith. We must, therefore, uphold the lower Court's finding that the defendant No 2 is entitled to the protection of s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act.

The result, therefore, is that we allow the appeal against defendant No. 1 and modify the decree of the lower Court by granting the plaintiffs a declaration against her to the effect stated above. The appeal against defendant No. 2 is dismissed. The plaintiffs-appellants will pay the costs of defendant No. 2 in this Court and bear their own costs.

D. Appeal allowed.

(1) 70 Ind. Cas. 194; A I R 1923 Cal 240; 36 C L J 9.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 1776 of 1929
March 7, 1935

TEK CHAND AND SKEMP, JJ.

NOT RAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat KISHAN DEVI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT

Custom (Punjab)— Succession—Guar Brahmins of Kharkhauda, District Rohtak—Non-ancestral property —Daughter is preferential heir to collaterals of eighth degree.

Among Gaur Brahmins of Kharkhauda, District Rohtak, a daughter is a preferential heir to the non-ancestral property of her father as against collaterals of the eighth degree.

S. C. A, from the decree of the District Judge, Karnal, dated April 22, 1929, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Rohtak, dated December 11, 1928.

Mr. Anant Ram Khosla, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Shamair Chand and Qabul Chand, for the Respondent.

Tek Chand, J.—The dispute in this case relates to succession to the property of one Ramji Lal, a Guar Brahmin of Kharkhauda, District Rohtak. Ramji Lal died on February 23, 1925. He had a son Harphul who had pre-deceased him. On Ramji Lal's death mutation was sanctioned in favour of one Basdeo who claimed to be a son of Harphul. The present defendants, who are collaterals of Ramji Lal in the 8th degree instituted a suit for a declaration that Basdeo was not the son of Harphul and had no right to succeed to Ramji Lal's property. This suit was decreed on May 25, 1926, whereupon the Revenue Authorities cancelled the previous mutation in favour of Basdeo and entered the land in the names of the present defendants. In May 1927 Musammat Kishen Devi and certain other persons, with whom we are no longer concerned instituted the present suit against the defendants for possession of Ramji Lal's land. Musammat Kishen Devi is admittedly the daughter of Ramji Lal. In the plaint she alleged that the land in dispute was not ancestral of Ramji Lal and the defendants and that in any case as remote collaterals related in the 8th degree, they had no right to succeed in her presence. Musammat Kishen Devi based her claim both on Hindu Law and custom.

The defendants pleaded that the land was ancestral qua them. They denied that the parties were governed by Hindu Law and alleged that according to the custom prevailing in the tribe, a daughter did not include collaterals, howsoever remote, in succession to immovable property of a sonless proprietor whether ancestral or not.

The learned trial Judge found that the land had not been proved to be ancestral, that the parties were governed by custom and not Hindu Law and that the plaintiff on whom the onus lay, had succeeded in proving that she was a preferential heir to the non-ancestral property of her father. On these findings he decreed the suit. The defendants' appeal has been dismissed by the District Judge. He has, however, granted a certificate under s. 41 of the Punjab Courts Act for a Second Appeal to this Court on the question of custom involved.

The finding that the land is non-ancestrial qua the plaintiffs was not challenged before us as indeed it could not be, in view of the documentary evidence on the record.

Before us Counsel for the plaintiff-respondent re-agitated the question that the parties were governed by Hindu Law and not by custom, but after hearing him, I am of opinion that there is no force in his contention. The question was no doubt raised in the plaint and put in issue, but as already observed it was decided by the trial Judge against the plaintiffs. It does not appear to have been raised before the learned District Judge who decided the case in favour of the plaintiff on the ground that under custom she had a superior right to succeed. I hold that the plaintiff is not entitled to re-open this question on second appeal.

The sole question for determination is whether the decision of the lower Court on the question of custom is correct. In view of the Answers to Questions Nos. 56 and 57, as recorded in Joseph's Customary Law of the Rohtak District, there is no doubt that the onus was rightly placed on the plaintiff to prove that the daughters had a preferential right to succeed to the non-ancestral property of their father as against collaterals of the 8th degree. An examination of the documentary evidence on the record shows, that there are five clear and well proved instances of exclusion by daughters of collaterals of varying degrees. Three of these are supported by mutations one by a judicial decision, and one by remarks in a settlement pedigree-table. These instances are as follows:

(1). Exhibit P 4 is a mutation sanctioned in 1889 in respect of the property of one Trikha a Gaur Brahmin of the neighbouring village Hassangarh in favour of his daughter Musammat Sundar in preference to his collaterals of the fourth degree. No suit appears to have been brought by the collaterals in the Civil Court to contest this mutation.

(2) Exhibit P. 5. The property of Sham Lal, a Gaur Brahmin of Hassangarh was mutated on the death of his widow in the name of his daughter Musammat Dharmon to the exclusion of the collaterals of the 5th degree. This mutation was sanctioned in 1909 after summary inquiry by the Revenue Officer and it does not appear that the matter was taken to the Civil Court.

(3) Exhibit P. 6. The property of Bul Chand a Gaur Brahmin of Mauza Garhi Brahminan, was inherited by his daughters Musammat Bhagwan Devi and Masammat Bhagwati to the exclusion of his brother.

(4) Exhibit P. 1, is a copy of the judgment in a civil suit in re Shib Dayal v. Shib Devi, decided by the Munsif of Rohtak on November 7, 1905. The dispute related to the property of one Badri, a Gaur Brahmin of Mauza Bhatgaon in the Sonepat Tahsil of Rohtak District, the claimants being the daughter of Badri and his collaterals in the 8th degree. The case appears to have been hotly contested by the parties who produced considerable oral and documentary evidence. The Munsif in an exhaustive judgment found in favour of the daughter, and in support of his conclusion relied on a previously decided case from the same village, the parties to which were Gaur Brahmins and where the daughter was held to have a preferential right to succeed to the property of her sonless father as against collaterals in the 3rd dergee. The Munsif also referred to a number of other instances where daughters have succeeded. It appears that an appeal was filed by the collaterals against the decree of the Munsif, but was dismissed by the Divisional Judge.

(5) Exhibit D 2. This is an extract from the pedigree table of the proprietors of Mauza Kharkhauda which shows that one Bindra, a Gaur Brahmin being sonless, got his entire estate mutated in favour of his son-in-law Ram Chand whose descendants were in possession. This document is of importance as Bindra was a member of the family of Ramji Lal, whose property is in dispute in the case before us.

In addition to this, the witnesses produced by the plaintiff-respondents have deposed to six other instances in which daughters excluded collaterals in succession to non-ancestral property. There is no documentary evidence in support of these instances but the witnesses were not cross-examined at all in regard to their statements relating to this matter, and in at least two cases evidence was given by persons whose mothers had taken the property to the exclusion of their maternal grandfathers' collaterals.

The learned District Judge had also relied upon Ex. P 7, a judgment of Sheikh Abdul Haq, Subordinate Judge, Delhi, in Badlu v. Umrao Kaur, the parties to which were Gaur Brahmins of Mauza Haroli in the Delhi Province and the contest was between daughters and collaterals of the 9th and 10th degree. In that case the Subordinate Judge had decided in favour of the collaterals and his judgment was relied upon by the present plaintiff as an instance in support of their case. This judgment, however has since been reversed on appeal by a Division Bench of this Court, published as Badlu v. Umrao Kuer (1), Mr. Anant Ram Khosla for the defendant-appellants has strongly relied upon this case as an instance in his favour but it is important to note that the land in that case was ancestral qua the collaterals of the deceased. This case, therefore, helps neither party and must be left out of consideration.

As against this, all that the collaterals relied upon in the Court below, was the judgment of Bhai Umrao Singh, Subordinate Judge, dated October 31, 1907, in Brahmin Datta v. Lachhmi (Ex. D. 8). The degree in which the collaterals were related to the last male owner in that case is not stated in the judgment but it is clear that the land was ancestral. I do not think, therefore, that this instance is in point.

Counsel referred us to a decision of Rattigan J., in Mukandi v. Bakhtawar Singh, 19 Ind. Cas. 215 (2), the parties to which were Gaur Brahmins of Kharkhauda. The dispute there was between the daughters and collaterals of the 3rd degree and the property in dispute was ancestral. The main question argued before the learned Judge was whether the Gaur Brahmins of Kharkhauda were governed by custom or by Hindu Law and it was found that they were governed by custom. He consequently decided the case in favour of the collaterals who according to the general custom had a preferential right to succeed to ancestral property as against the daughter of the last male holder. It will thus be seen that there is not a single proved instance of exclusion of a daughter from non-ancestral property of her sonless father.

(1) 142 Ind. Cas. 281; A I R 1933 Lah. 473; Ind. Rul. (1933) Lah. 184; 34 P L R 351.

(2) 19 Ind. Cas. 215.

It may be mentioned that the oral evidence of witnesses produced by both parties showed that Ramji Lal followed priestly functions and that he did not cultivate land with his own hands. It is also admitted that none of the plaintiff's lives in Kharkhauda. Some of them belong to Halalpur and others to Nahra. Both these villages are situate in Tahsil Sonepat, while Kharkhauda is in Tahsil Rohtak. It is clear, therefore, that the plaintiffs and the deceased were not members of a compact village community nor are they cultivators by profession.

In my opinion the Judges of the Courts below have correctly found that the plaintiff-respondent had succeeded in discharging the onus which lay on her to prove that a daughter was a preferential heir to the non-ancestral property of her father as against collaterals of the 8th degree. I would accordingly dismiss this appeal with costs.

Skemp, J.—I agree.

N. Appeal dismissed.

OUDH CHIEF COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 3 of 1934
April 17, 1935
KING, C. J. AND NANAVUTTY, J.

THAKUR BAKHSH SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS
versus
Subedar ABHAIDAT SINGH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), ss. 108 cl (10), 135—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 100—Application under O. XXI, r. 100—Alternative remedy provided by s. 108, cl. (10), Oudh Rent Act—Application under Civil Procedure Code to Revenue Court, if barred—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 52—Lis pendens—Lease of land while proceedings under O. XXI, r. 100 pending—Lessees bound by results.

Even though the plaintiffs have an alternative remedy by a suit under s. 108, cl. (10), Oudh Rent Act, their right of making an application under O. XXI, r. 100, Civil Procedure Code, to the Revenue Court is not barred on that account. There is nothing inconsistent with the provisions of the Oudh Rent Act in utilising the alternative remedy by an application under O. XXI, r. 100, Civil Procedure Code.

Where a lease in favour of defendant No 2 is executed of lands in dispute during the pendency of the proceedings in the Revenue Court by defendant No. 1 consequent on the application made by the plaintiffs under O. XXI, r. 100, Civil Procedure Code, for restoration of possession, the doctrine of lis pendens is applicable and the defendant No. 2 is bound by the results of the proceeding and where on defendant No. 1's failure to bring any suit against the plaintiffs to establish the right which he claimed to the possession of the property the order of the Revenue Court, directing that the plaintiffs be put into possession of the property, becomes conclusive under O. XXI, r. 103, as against defendant No. 1 the landlord, and also becames conclusive as against defendant No. 2, the lessee.

S. C. A. against the order of Mr. Justice Rachhpal Singh, dated February 13, 1934.

Messrs. Radha Krishna and Ganesh Prasad, for the Appellants.

Mr. Bhagwati Nath Srivastava, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This is a plaintiffs' appeal arising out of a suit for possession of certain plots of agricultural land. The plaintiffs' case is that they are entitled to possession of the plots as tenants, that they were wrongfully dispossessed by defendant No. 1, the landlord, in execution of a decree against one Suraj Bakhsh Singh and that they were restored to possession by an order of the Revenue Court passed under O. XXI, r. 101, of the Code of Civil Procedure and possession was delivered to them on March 17, 1929, but in the month of June, 1929, they were again dispossessed by defendant No. 2 who claims to be a lesses holding under a lease executed on behalf of defendant No. 1.

The trial Court decreed the plaintiffs' suit but the lower Appellate Court took a contrary view and dismissed the suit and the decree of the lower Appellate Court was upheld on appeal by a learned Single Judge of this Court.

The land in suit formed part of the tenancy holding of one Pirthipal Singh. The plaintiffs' case was that the land was divided between Pirthipal Singh, and his brothers or nephews, who were the ancestors of the plaintiffs, and that the plots in suit were allotted to their ancestors and that this partition of the holding was recognised by the landlord. After the death of Pirthipal Singh, the whole of the holding was entered in the name of Suraj Bakhsh Singh, one of his descendants, and the landlord (defendant No. 1) brought a suit to eject Suraj Bakhsh Singh on October, 24, 1927. This suit was decreed and possession of the whole holding was delivered to defendant No. 1 in May 1928, resulting in the dispossession of the plaintiffs from the plots in suit. On May 23, 1928, the plaintiffs made an application to the Revenue Court under O. XXI, r. 100, claiming that they were in possession of the plots on their own account and that they had been wrongfully dispossessed by the defendant No. 1, in execution of the decree against Suraj Bakhsh Singh. The Court was satisfied that the plaintiffs were in possession of the plots as tenants on their own account and accordingly directed that they should be restored to possession. Possession was delivered to the plaintiffs on March 17, 1929. During the pendency of the proceedings under O. XXI, r. 100, that on May 31, 1928, defendant No. 1, gave a lease of the plots in suit to defendant No. 2 and, according to the finding of the Court below, defendant No. 2, was not actually dispossessed in spite of the formal delivery of possession to the plaintiffs. He never allowed the plaintiffs to obtain actual possession.

The main question for consideration is what was the effect of the order passed by the Revenue Court on September 5, 1928, allowing the plaintiffs' application made under O. XXI, r. 100, and directing that the plaintiffs should be put into possession of the property. Defendant No. 1 did not bring any suit against the plaintiffs to establish the right which he claimed to the possession of the property and, therefore, under O. XXI, r. 103, the order of the Revenue Court, directing that the plaintiffs be put into possession of the property, became conclusive as against defendant No. 1, the landlord. The question is whether this order was binding upon defendant No. 2, the lessee. The learned single Judge took the view that the order could not be binding upon defendant No. 2 for the simple reason that he was not a party to the proceeding. The learned Single Judge, however, seems to have overlooked the fact that the transfer made by defendant No. 1 in favour of defendant No. 2, was made on May 31, 1928, and, therefore, was made during the pendency of the proceedings under O. XXI, r. 100. It appears from the language of his judgment that the learned Judge was under the impression that the plaintiffs filed their application under O. XXI, r. 100, after the lease had been executed in favour of defendant No. 2. For this reason the learned Judge did not even consider whether the doctrine of lis pendens was applicable to the lease executed in favour of defendant No. 2. From the facts stated above it is clear that the lease in favour of defendant No. 2 was executed during the pendency of the proceedings in the Revenue Court consequent on the application made by the plaintiffs under O. XXI, r. 100, for restoration of possession. In our opinion, therefore, the doctrine of lis pendens is applicable. At the time when the lease was executed by defendant No. 1 in favour of defendant No. 2, a proceeding was pending in a Court of competent jurisdiction which was not a collusive proceeding and in which the right to possession of the plots in suit was directly and specifically in question between the plaintiffs and defendant No. 1. The defendant No. 1, therefore, was precluded by the provisions of s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act from leasing the property in suit so as to affect the rights of the plaintiffs which they obtained under the order made by the Revenue Court under O. XXI, r. 101. While the right to possession of the property was under litigation, no party to the proceedings could transfer the property so as to affect the opposite party. This means that defendent No. 2, being a transferee pendente lite, was bound by the order passed by the Revenue Court against his transferor although defendant No. 2 was no party to the proceedings.

It has been argued that the provisions of O. XXI, r. 100, are not applicable to Revenue Courts in Oudh and that the Revenue Court had no jurisdiction to pass any order under r. 101, O. XXI, of the Code of Civil Procedure. This was the view taken by the learned Single Judge against whose decree this appeal has been instituted. In our view this proposition is not correct. Section 135 of the Oudh Rent Act enacts that:

> "The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, shall so far as they are not inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, apply to all suits and other proceedings under this Act."

The provisions in question, therefore, are applicable unless it can be shown that they are inconsistent with the provisions of the Oudh Rent Act. It has been argued that the provisions of rr. 100 to 103, of O. XXI, Civil Procedure Code, are inconsistent with the provisions of the Oudh Rent Act because that Act contains a specific provision in s. 108, cl. (10), for a suit by a tenant for the recovery of the occupancy of any land from which the tenant has been illegally ejected by the landlord. It is contended that the plaintiffs, when they were dispossessed in execution of the decree for ejectment against Suraj Bakhsh Singh, might have brought a suit against the landlord under

s. 108, cl. (10) and, therefore, the provisions of O. XXI, r. 100, Civil Procedure Code, are not applicable. We are not prepared to accept this contention. It may be conceded that the plaintiffs had an alternative remedy by a suit under s. 108, cl. (10) but we do not think that their right of making an application under O. XXI, r. 100, is barred on that account. Under r. 100 the plaintiffs had a remedy by way of an application, a short and summary remedy, and we do not think that this remedy should be held to be barred merely because an alternative remedy was open to the plaintiffs by the institution of a regular suit under s. 108, cl. (10). In our opinion there is nothing inconsistent with the provisions of the Oudh Rent Act in utilising the alternative remedy by an application under O. XXI, r. 100.

It is also argued that as the possession of defendant No. 2 was not disturbed, there was no necessity for him to file any suit for establishing his right to the possession of the property in accordance with r. 103 of O. XXI. We agree that there was no need for defendant No. 2 to institute any such suit, as he was no party to the proceedings which resulted in the order that the plaintiffs be restored to possession of the property. This does not mean that he was not affected by that order as in our opinion he was bound by that order under the rule of lis pendens. If his landlord and transferor allowed the order to become conclusive as against himself, then it also became conclusive as against defendant No. 2. As defendant No. 2 took the lease during the pendency of the proceedings under O. XXI, r. 100, he was bound by the result of those proceedings although he was not a party. The plaintiffs do not rely upon the rule of res judicata but they rely upon the rule of lis pendens as binding both the lessor and the lessee by the order passed restoring the plaintiffs to possession, and we hold that their contention is well founded.

The respondent has sought to uphold the decree of the learned Single Judge on the ground that the present suit was barred by limitation. This is a new plea which was not taken previously in any of the Courts. The argument is that the period of limitation is governed by the Oudh Rent Act because the suit is not of a civil nature. We see no force in this argument. It is conceded that the suit was rightly instituted in the Civil Court in accordance with the decision in Mindai v. Sajid Ali 6 O. W. N. 1094 (1). The rules regarding limitation of suits enacted in Chap. IX of the Oudh Rent Act, apply only to suits under that Act. This suit is clearly not a suit under the Oudh Rent Act because it is admittedly cognizable by the Civil Court. No authority is cited for the proposition that the period of limitation for suits instituted in the Civil Court can in any circumstances be governed by the rules of limitation enacted in the Oudh Rent Act.

In our opinion the trial Court has taken the correct view and the plaintiffs' suit should be decreed.

We accordingly set aside the decree of the learned Single Judge, dated February 13, 1934, and the decree of the lower Appellate Court and restore the decree of the the trial Court with costs throughout.

D. Appeal allowed.

(1) 124 Ind Cas. 366; 9 O W N 1094: 13 R D 865; A I R 1930 Oudh 69; Ind. Rul (1931) Oudh 222.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 1063 of 1929
June 21, 1934

TEK CHAND AND ABDUL RASHID, JJ.

FIRM MELA MAL-SHIB DYAL—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

THAKAR DAS SUD AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), s. 55, proviso —Mortgage during pendency of insolvency proceedings against mortgagor —Mortgagee having notice of same —Transaction, if protected — Execution of mortgage when old Act III of 1907 in force—Mortgagee taking mortgage in his favour with knowledge of insolvency proceedings pending against mortgagor—Mortgagee, if protected under Act III of 1907, s 38.

Under s. 55, Provincial Insolvency Act, a transferee under a transaction made before the order of adjudication is protected only if the transfer is for valuable consideration and the transferee had no notice of the presentation of the insolvency petition. In order to bring his case under the proviso to that section, the plaintiff must show that both these conditions co-exist, but where it is found that he had notice of the fact that the petition of insolvency was pending at the time when the mortgage in his favour was executed, he cannot avail himself of the protection given by the proviso to s. 55.

It is a well settled rule of interpretation of Statutes that in the absence of a provision to the contrary a new law ought not to be construed so as to interfere with vested rights. Where therefore the mortgage had been effected six months before the new Act V of 1920 came into force and according to the law then in force the mortgage was valid, notwithstanding the fact that it had been made at a time when a petition for the adjudication of the mortgagor was pending, for it was effected for valuable consideration and was protected by the proviso to s. 38 of Act III of 1907 and the mortgagee therefore, had acquired a valuable right and this right could not be lost by the subsequent change in the law made by the enactment of Act V of 1920 and repeal of Act III of 1907.

S. C. A. from the decree of the District Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated February 4, 1929.

Messrs. Badri Das and Tek Chand Dhand, for the Appellants.

Messrs. J. N. Aggarwal and J. L. Kapur, for the Respondents.

Tek Chand, J.—The facts of the case, which has given rise to this second appeal are as follows: One Bogar Mal of Hoshiarpur, owned considerable immovable property at Hoshiarpur, and had his business in the Punjab and at Karachi. On March 13, 1918, an application was filed for adjudication of Dogar Mal as an insolvent in the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, Sind, at Karchi, under Act III of 1907, which was in force at the time. The application remained pending for more than two years, and it was on November 15, 1920, that an order was passed adjudicating Dogar Mal as insolvent. In the meantime, on March 2, 1920, Dogar Mal executed a mortgage-deed in respect of two shops situate at Hoshiarpur in favour of Thakar Das plaintiff-respondent for Rs. 4,000. The amount raised by the mortgage was paid to one Bhagat Ram who had obtained a decree for Rs. 3,966-14-9, against Dogar Mal and had taken out warrants for his arrest. This Bhagat Ram is admittedly a near relation of the proprietors of the defendant firm Meal Mal-Shib, Dayal.

About eight months after the mortgage, Dogar Mal was, as already stated, adjudicated insolvent by the Court at Karachi and his property vested in the Official Assignee. On June 2, 1925, the Official Assignee sold the shops to Mela Mal-Shib Dayal, defendants-appellants, and delivered possession to them. In the sale-deed, no reference was made to the prior mortgage by Dogar Mal in favour of Thakar Das. Shortly, afterwards, as a result of a compromise between the insolvent and the creditors, Shiv Kishen (defendant No. 3), was appointed a trustee to administer the estate, and the order of adjudication was annulled on May 19, 1926. In the meantime, on November 17, 1925, Thakar Das had brought the present suit to recover the amount due to him on foot of the mortgage, which had been executed in his favour by Dogar Mal on March 2, 1920, inpleading the vendees, Mela Mal-Shiv Dayal, and the trustee, Shri Kishen, as defendants. The suit was resisted by Mela Mal-Shib Dayal only, who pleaded that the mortgage in favour of Thakar Das was without consideration and fictitious, and had been effected in order to defeat and delay his creditors. They also urged that the mortgage was void as having been made at a time when the application for adjudication of Dogar Mal as insolvent was pending, of which fact the mortgagee was fully aware. The learned District Judge has held that the plaintiff's mortgage was for valuable consideration and, though effected by Dogar Mal during the pendency of the insolvency petition, was protected by the proviso to s. 55 of Act V of 1920.

The defendants Mela Mal-Shib Dayal have preferred a second appeal to this Court, and it has been contended on their behalf by Mr. Badri Das that the learned Judges of the Courts below have misapplied s. 55 to the facts of the present case. He has pointed out that the trial Judge had found as a fact that at the time of the execution of the mortgage in suit, the mortgagee, Thakar Das, had notice of the fact that the petition for insolvency was pending against Dogar Mal in the Karachi Court, and that though the learned District Judge has not recorded a clear finding on this point, there seems to be no doubt that he was really in agreement with the trial Judge and that this being so, the proviso to s. 55 of Act V of 1920, could not protect the plaintiff. As the District Judge had not expressly held that the plaintiff had notice of the insolvency petition, and as this was one of the crucial points in the case, we allowed Mr. Jagan Nath Aggarwal to address us on the evidence bearing thereon. After hearing him at length we have no hesitation in holding that Thakar Das had notice of the petition of insolvency at the time when he entered into the mortgage transaction in question with Dogar Mal. This being so, there can be no doubt, that if the case is governed by Act V of 1920, the decision of the learned District Judge cannot be sustained. Under s. 55 a transferee under a transaction made before the order of adjudication is protected only if the transfer is for valuable consideration and the transferee had no notice of the presentation of the insolvency petition. In order to bring his case under the proviso to that section, the plaintiff must show that both these conditions co-exist, but here it has been found that Thakar Das had notice of the fact that the petition of insolvency was pending at the time. He cannot, therefore avail himself of the protection given by the proviso to s. 55.

The question, however, arises whether the case is governed by Act V of 1920, as appears to have been assumed by the parties and the Courts below, or by Act III of 1907 which was in force on March 13, 1918, when the application for adjudicating Dogar Mal an insolvent was made and March 2, 1920, when he effected the mortgage in favour of Tharkar Das. It is common ground that Act V of 1920, which repealed Act III of 1907, received the assent of the Governor-General on February 25, 1920, and became operative from that date. Sub-s. (2), s. 1 of Act V of 1920, however, expressly provided that its operation extended to the whole of British India except the Scheduled Districts, and "Scheduled Districts" as defined in Act XIV of 1874 include the province of Sind. The Act therefore did not come into force at Karachi on February 25, 1920, when it received the assent of the Governor-General. Subsequently, on September 30, 1920, the Governor of Bombay in Council, acting with the previous sanction of the Governor-General-in-Council, in exercise of the powers conferred on him by s. 5. "Scheduled Districts Act" XIV of 1874, extended the Provincial Insolvency Act, V of 1920 to the province of Sind with effect from October 15, 1920 (Notification No. 9080, dated, September 28, 1920). As already stated the mortgage in favour of the plaintiff had been executed on March 2, 1920. It is thus clear that Act III of 1907 was in force both on the date on which the application for insolvency was made, and when the mortgage in favour of Thakar Das was effected, but Act V of 1920, had come into force when the order of adjudication was passed on November 15, 1920.

A comparison of the provisions of s. 55 of Act V of 1920 and those of s. 38 of Act III of 1907, which it repealed, will show that they are materially different. Under s. 38 of the old Act the only condition necessary to protect a transfer made before the date of the order of adjudication was that it had been effected for valuable consideration. In s. 55 of the new Act, however, another condition was added, namely, that beside proving that the transaction was for valuable consideration it must also be shown that the transferee had no notice that an application for insolvency of the transferor was pending at the time. As already stated, in this case it has been found that Thakar Das had notice of the application for insolvency, but that the mortgage in his favour was for consideration. It follows accordingly that on these findings the plaintiff's mortgage would be valid if the old Act applied, but it would be invalid if the new Act governed the case. It is therefore of vital importance to determine which of the two Acts is applicable.

It is a well settled rule of interpretation of Statutes that in the absence of a provision to the contrary a new law ought not to be construed so as to interfere with vested rights. It is laid down in s. 6, General Clauses Act, X of 1897 that when an Act repeals any enactment then, unless a different intention appears, the repeal shall not affect any right, privilege, obligation or liability acquired, accrued or incurred under the repealed enactment. Now, in the case before us, the mortgage had been effected six months before the new Act came into force. According to the law then in force the mortgage was valid, notwithstanding the fact that it had been made at a time when a petition for the adjudication of the mortgagor was pending, for it was effected for valuable consideration and was protected by the proviso to s. 38 of Act III of 1907. It is conceded that under that Act the result of the petition would not have affected its validity in any way. The mortgagee therefore had acquired a valuable right on March 2, 1920, and the right could not be lost by the subsequent change in the law made by the enactment of Act V of 1920, and the repeal of Act III of 1907. There is nothing in the new Act to show that it was the intention of the Legislature that rights acquired under the old Act would be adversely affected by its repeal. I accordingly hold that s. 55 of Act V of 1920 is inapplicable to the case, and that the mortgage in favour of the plaintiff Thakar Das, was valid and binding on the Official Assignee and therefore on Mela Mal-Shib Dayal who have purchased the property from him.

The defendants-appellants thus purchased the property subject to the plaintiff-respondent's mortgage, and obviously there are no equities in their favour. It is beyond question that they were aware of the existence of the plaintiff's mortgage at the time of their purchase and it has been found that the amount raised by Dogar Mal from Thakar Das on foot of the mortgage was applied in satisfying a decree, which had been obtained against him by Daulat Ram, who was a near relation of the appellants. For the foregoing reasons, I hold that the plaintiff's suit has been rightly decreed. I would accordingly dismiss the appeal, but as the question of law was not free from difficulty, I would leave the parties to bear their own costs throughout.

Abdul Rashid, J.—I agree.

D. Appeal dismissed.

OUDH CHIEF COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 133 of 1933

March 22, 1935

NANAVUTTY AND ZIA-UL-HASAN, JJ.

SHER BAHADUR SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Babu Sri MADHO PRASAD SINGH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT

Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869), s. 8—Widow holding life estate—Confiscation of estate, and first settlement with her—Her name in list—Widow, as trustee for remainderman—Gift of property—Suit for declaration of under-proprietary rights—Decree against widow, whether binding on remainderman—Trust—Presumption—Person held under-proprietor—Presumption as to possession—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 13—Judgment not inter partes but evidencing possession—Relevancy—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 11, 100—Held, no res judicata—Rejection of evidence on finding of fact—Finding of fact, whether can be interfered with.

Where notwithstanding the confiscation of the land by the proclamation of Lord Canning, its restoration by affirming the absolute title of the grantees of summary settlements, and the granting a sanad with the full power of alienation, in her and her name being entered in the list prepared under s. 8, Oudh Estates Act, a widow holding a life-estate constitutes herself a trustee for the remainderman but makes a gift of the property and afterwards contests a suit for declaration of under-proprietary rights which is ultimately decreed, the gift is not binding on the remainderman after her death, but the remainderman is bound by the decree obtained against her. Just as a trustee cannot set up any title adverse to that of the cestui que trust, so also the beneficiary cannot repudiate the bona fide acts of the trustee entered upon for the benefit of the beneficiary or the cestui que trust.

[Case-law referred to.]

Where a person is held to be an under-proprietor, possession as under-proprietor must also be presumed in his favour.

Where a judgment is not inter partes it may be used under s. 13, Evidence Act, as instances when the possession of a party is challenged and found to be correct.

Since the lessee does not occupy a representative capacity and the lessor cannot be said to be a person claiming through his lessee, a previous decision in a suit by a lessee against a third person cannot operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit by the lessor against the same person. Shri Padbhat Anantbhat Jodhi v. Rama Bahaji Lathi (4), followed.

In deciding a question of fact the lower Appellate Court had rejected certain evidence on a legal presumption:

Held, that the finding of the Court on the question of fact could not be interfered with in second appeal.

S. C. A. against the order of the Sub. Judge, Fyzabad, dated January 31, 1933.

Mr. R. B. Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. N. Roy, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is a defendants' appeal from an appellate judgment and decree of the Court of the learned Subordinate Judge of Fyzabad upholding the judgment and decree of the Munsif of Haveli decreeing the plaintiff's suit with costs.

The plaintiff Babu Sri Madho Prasad Singh, the adopted son of Anant Bahadur Singh, has brought this suit against Sher Bahadur Singh and others for a declaration that the defendants had got no under-proprietary rights in the plots in suit as also for a decree for possession of the plots in suit in case the plaintiff is not found to be in possession of them.

Upon the pleas raised by the defendants, the learned Munsif framed the following issues:—

1. Is the plaintiff the superior proprietor of village Mahulara?
2. Are the decisions in the previous suits between the defendants and the lessee, (Babu Bipin Chander Chatterji), binding on the plaintiff, and is he estopped from denying the defendants' under-proprietary title to the plots in suit?
3. Are the defendants under-proprietors of the plots in suit?
4. Have the defendants in any case acquired title to the plots in dispute by adverse possession?
5. To what relief, if any, is the plaintiff entitled?

The finding of the learned Munsif on Issue No. 1, is that the plaintiff is the superior proprietor of the plots in suit. His finding on the second issue is the negative, and he held that the plaintiff is not estopped from denying the defendants' under-proprietary title to the plots in dispute. His finding on the 3rd issue is that the defendants' ancestors did obtain a decree for under-proprietary rights in the plots in suit, but that decree is not binding on the plaintiff, because Thakurain Raghunath Kuar, the proprietor of the estate had previously parted with her rights by executing a deed of gift in favour of her nephew Bisheshwar Bakhsh Singh. His finding on the 4th Issue was that the defendants had not acquired title to the plots in suit by adverse possession. He accordingly decreed the plaintiff's suit for possession with costs.

In appeal the learned Subordinate Judge of Fyzabad upheld the findings of the trial Court and dismissed the appeal of the defendants. Dissatisfied with the judgment and decree of the lower Appellate Court, the defendants have filed this second appeal.

We have heard the learned Counsel of both parties at great length, and have given them every opportunity of presenting their respective contentions before us. For the correct understanding of this case, it is necessary to give a short history of the Sihipur estate. One Nihal Singh was the owner of the Taluqa of Sihipur. He had married five wives. He had no issue. He made a will giving his estate to his wives in succession one after the other in the order of their seniority. The will of Nihal Singh also laid down that after the death of his five widows, Sheo Ambar Singh, the grandson of Harpal Singh, the brother of Nihal Singh, should become the full owner of the estate. The third wife of Nihal Singh was Thakurain Raghunath Kuar. After the death of the first two wives of Nihal Singh, Thakurain Raghunath Kuar came into possession of the estate. The second summary settlement was made with her in the year 1858 by the British Government, and a sanad was granted to her and she became the taluqdarya of the estate. She executed a deed of gift in favour of her nephew Bisheshwar Bakhsh Singh on February 27, 1877, and thereupon Thakurain Ramanand Kuar, the fourth wife of Nihal Singh, brought a suit against her and her donee Bisheshar Bakhsh Singh, for a declaration that she was the reversioner and was entitled to succeed to the estate of Sihipur after the death to Thakurain Raghunath Kuar, who held only a life-estate and was only trustee, notwithstanding anything contained in Act I of 1869. The contention on behalf of Thakurain Raghunath Kuar in that suit was that, by virtue of the summary settlement made with her on December 2, 1858, and in virtue of the grant of a sanad on March 15, 1861, followed by the entry of her name in the 1st and 3rd of the lists prepared by the Chief Commissioner of Oudh under s. 8 of the Oudh Estates Act, I of 1869, she had been conferred an absolute estate and she had power to alienate the estate to whom she chose. On the other hand, the contention on behalf of Thakurain Ramanand Kuar was that, even if it be accepted that the legal title was thus conferred upon Thakurain Raghunath Kuar, she had so conducted herself that she must be deemed in equity to be bound to hold the estate in trust for the purpose of carrying into effect the provision of her husband's will. The suit filed by Thakurain Ramanand Kar was ultimately decided by the Privy Council, and their judgment is reported in Thakurain Ramanand Kuar v. Thakurain Raghunath Kuar 9 I. A. 41 (1). The question for determination there was whether or not Thakurain Raghunath Kuar had so conducted herself that she must be deemed in equity to hold the estate in trust for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of her husband's will.

Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that:

"The doctrine that, nothwithstanding the confiscation of the land in Oudh by the proclamation of Lord Canning, its restoration by his circular letter of October 10, 1859, affirming the absolute title of the grantees of summary settlements, and the granting a sanad with the full power of alienation, confirmed by the Oudh Estates Act of 1869, the legal owner may, either by express agreement or by his conduct, constitute himself in equity a trustee for others as to the whole or part of the beneficial interest, has been affirmed by many decisions of this Board."

The Privy Council, therefore, allowed the appeal of Thakurain Ramanand Kuar, and held that she was entitled to the relief she prayed for, namely, that it may be declared that she was entitled to succeed to the estate after the death of the first defendant (Raghunath Kuar), and they further held that the deed of gift to the second defendant (Bisheshar Bakhsh Singh) conferred no more than the life-interest of the first defendant Thakurain Raghunath Kuar.

Anant Bahadar Singh, the grandson of Sheo Amar Singh, who, under the will of Nihal Singh, was given the rights of remainderman after the life-estates of the five widows of Nihal Singh, brought a suit against Thakurain Raghunath Kuar, and the question for determination in his case was whether Thakurain Raghunath Kuar was to be declared quo ad Anant Bahadur Singh to hold the estate in trust for carrying into effect the provisions of the will of Nihal Singh, and their Lordships of the Privy Council held that Anant Bahadur Singh was entitled to the declaration he sought: Thakurain Ramanand Koer v. Thakurain Raghunath Kuar (1).

These two decisions of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee make the legal position of Thakurain Raghunath Kuar quite clear. Though she was held to have an absolute title to the Sihipur estate under the sanad followed by the entry of her name in the 1st and 3rd lists prepared under s. 8 of Act I of 1869, the Privy Council nevertheless held that, by her acts and declarations, she constituted herself a trustee for the purpose of carrying into effect the will of her husband, and that, therefore, Thakurain Ramanand Kuar, her co-widow, and Anant Bahadur Singh, the grandson of Sheo Ambar Singh, the remainderman, were each entitled to the declaration they sought against her. Anand Bahadur Singh, the grandson of Sheo Amar Singh, who had been given a vested remainder in the Sihipur estate predeceased Thakurain Raghunath Kuar, and so, on the death of Thakurain Raghunath Kuar on November 10, 1911, Thakurain Sri Ram Kuar, the widow of Anant Bahadur Singh, became entitled to the Sihipur estate. The Court of Wards, on behalf of Thakurain Sri Ram Kuar, sued Thakur Bisheshar Bakhsh Singh, the donee of Raghunath Kuar, and won the case.

(1) 9 I A 41; 8 C 769; 11 C L R 149; 4 Sar. 316; 6 Ind. Jur. 328 (P C).

Thakurain Sri Ram Kuar executed a deed of gift on February 28, 1911, in favour of her brother Kampta Shiroman Prasad Singh, and she executed a sale-deed in favour of the same brother on May 2, 1911. Babu Kampta Shiroman Prasad Singh gifted the taluqa of Sihipur on June 12, 1926, to the present plaintiff Sri Madho Prasad Singh, who styles himself in the plaint as the adopted son of Anant Bahadur Singh. Thus, the plaintiff in the present suit derives his title from Sheo Ambar Singh who had a vested remainder in the Sihipur estate under the will of Nihal Singh.

It has been found by the lower Courts and is admitted before us that Hanuman Singh and Ram Singh were the ancestors of the present defendants-appellants, and they obtained a decree for under-proprietary rights in the plots in suit in the present case against Thakurain Raghunath Kuar. Both the lower Courts have, however, held that this decree of the Settlement Court Ex. A-20, is not binding on the present plaintiff because Hanuman Singh and Ram Singh filed their suit in the Settlement Court on April 27, 1877, whereas two months before that, on February 27, 1877, Thakurain Raghunath Kuar had executed a deed of gift in favour of her nephew Bisheshwar Bakhsh Singh, and so had parted with all her rights in the Sihipur estate, and, therefore, the decree obtained by Hanuman Singh and Ram Singh was not binding on the plaintiff, because Thakurain Raghunath Kuar did not represent the Sihipur estate at the time that she was being sued by Hanuman Singh and Ram Singh. In our opinion the reasoning of the lower Courts on this point is not sound. Thakurain Raghunath Kuar had no doubt parted with her life-estate by executing the deed of gift in favour of her nephew Bisheshar Bakhsh Singh, but it has been held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that she nevertheless constituted herself a trustee both on behalf of the remainderman Sheo Ambar Singh and his grandson Anant Bahadur Singh as well as on behalf of her co-widow Thakurain Ramanand Kuar, for the purpose of carrying into effect the terms of her husband's will. It is, therefore, clear that in spite of her executing the deed of gift in favour of her nephew, she still represented the Sihipur estate held by her as a trustee on behalf of the remainderman and her co-widow. Indeed, it seems to us that if Hanuman Singh and Ram Singh had only brought a declaratory suit against Bisheshar Bakhsh Singh, the donee of Thakurain Raghunath Kuar, the under-proprietary decree that they might have obtained against him would have bound only Bisheshar Bakhsh Singh and nobody else, and certainly would not have been binding on the estate. It is also to be noted that the decree obtained by Hanuman Singh and Ram Singh against Thakurain Raghunath Kuar for under-proprietary rights was obtained by them after contest. We have examined the Settlement Court file sent for at the instance of the plaintiff-respondent, and we find from it that the suit of Hanuman Singh and Ram Singh for a declaration that they had under-proprietary rights was hotly contested by Thakurain Raghunath Kuar; and her mukhtar Thakur Prasad, who defended the case on behalf of Raghunath Kuar stated before the Settlement Officer that the groves and jungles land in dispute, and the disputed sayar income, had never been in the enjoyment of the plaintiffs within limitation, and that in 1262 and 1263, Fasli, the village in dispute was in the possession of the defendant Thakurain who had been collecting the sayar income, and that the plaintiffs of that suit, Hanuman Singh and Ram Singh, were not in possession and had got no rights. Upon the pleas raised by Thakurain Raghunath Kuar, the Settlement Court framed an issue as follows:—

"During the time that defendant was in possession of the village in question, were the plaintiffs as under-proprietors in possession of the sayar income in question in subordination to the rights of the defendant within limitation or not?"

The judgment of the Settlement Court, Ex. A-20, shows that this issue was decided in favour of the plaintiffs and they were held to have under-proprietary rights in respect of the land in suit. The words of the decree are as follows:—

"Decree is takraryia mahtati baqat mansuba mirisan mudayanwa maq buza mudayan hasab tafsil zail wa makanat mazkuna khas mudayan ander abadi wa pani wa dhaki wa rasdi talab wa jungal muhtadavia se, wake mauza Mahulera pargana Pachimrat ba haq mudayan ke bo, wa baqi dawa mudayan dismiss ho."

This decree for under-proprietary rights which had been obtained by the predecessors-in-interest of the defendants-appellants from the Settlement Court after contest with Thakurain Raghunath Kuar is, in our opinion, binding on the Sihipur estate, because Thakurain Raghunath Kuar, as a trustee on behalf of all the beneficiaries under the will of her husband Nihal Singh, represented in this litigation the interests of the remainderman Sheo Ambar Singh and his grandson Anant Bahadur Singh. Just as a trustee cannot set up any title adverse to that of the cestui que trust, so also the beneficiary cannot repudiate the bona fide acts of the trustee entered upon for the benefit of the beneficiary or the cestui que trust.

The learned Counsel for the plaintiff-respondent had relied most strongly upon a judgment of a Bench of this Court in First Civil Appeal No. 22 of 1929, Dhani Singh v. Shri Mahdo Prasad Singh decided on November 25, 1929. This decision is not between the parties to the present suit and is not binding on the appellants and, although it is entitled to the greatest respect from us, we are not bound to follow it, as, in our opinion, the true legal position of Thakurain Raghunath Kuar was not explained by the Counsel for the appellant in that case to the learned Judges who decided that case and were never asked to consider the position of Thakurain Raghunath Kuar as a trustee of the Sihipur estate on behalf of the remainderman Sheo Ambar Singh and his grandson Anant Bahadur Singh. What was argued in that case was that Thakurain Raghunath Kuar had parted with all interest and all title to the estate when she executed the deed of gift in favour of her nephew Bisheshar Bakhsh Singh, and that therefore she could not represent the Sihipur estate in any sense and that, therefore, the decree for under-proprietary rights obtained by the appellant in that case did not bind the Sihipur estate, and the appellant there could not obtain any decree for under-proprietary rights as claimed by him. The position taken up by the learned Judges in the case above referred to is not in conformity with the judgment of their Lordships of the Privy Council reported in Thakurain Ramanand Kuar v. Thakurain Raghunath Kuar (1), wherein their Lordships held that the deed of gift executed by Thakurain Raghunath Kuar in favour of her nephew Bisheshar Bakhsh Singh only conferred upon Bisheshar Bakhsh Singh the life estate of Thakurain Raghunath Kuar, and that in spite of the execution of this deed of gift Raghunath Kuar still continued to represent the estate of Sihipur and constituted herself a trustee for the purpose of carrying into effect the will of her husband and that, therefore, Thakurain Ramanand Kuar and Anant Bahadur Singh the grandson of Sheo Ambar Singh, the remainderman under the will of Nihal Singh, were each entitled to the declaration they sought. The legal position ascribed to Thakurain Raghunath Kuar by their Lordships of the Privy Council is analogous to the position which they ascribed to Rani Sadah Bibi in the Mahona Case, which was originally tried by one of us, and which went up in appeal to their Lordships of the Privy Council, and is found reported in Raja Mohan v. Nisar Ahmad Khan 60 I. A. 103 (2) which was decided in 1933. In that case Lord Wright in delivering the judgment of the Board observed as follows:—

"The title conferred under the Act, (Act I of 1869) did indeed give the registered taluqadar, (Rani Sadah Bibi), the absolute legal title as against the estate and adverse claimants to the taluqa, but it did not relieve the taluqdar of any equitable obligations to which, with a view to the completion of the Settlement, he might have subjected himself by his own valid agreement."

Similarly, in this case, Thakurain Raghunath Kuar had recognised the rights of her co-widow and of the remainderman and had constituted herself in equity a trustee for these persons as to the whole or part of the beneficial interest vested in them. That being the legal position of Thakurain Raghunath Kuar, a suit brought against her by Hanuman Singh and Ram Singh for a declaration that they held under-proprietary rights in the plots in suit cannot be held to be a suit filed against a stranger who had no interest in the taluqa of Sihipur. In our opinion Anant Bahadur Singh was in law the beneficiary of the trust created by Thakurain Raghunath Kuar by her acts and admissions, and as such, he is legally bound by the decree obtained after contest fairly and squarely by Hanuman Singh and Ram Singh against Raghunath Kuar; and if Anant Bahadur Singh was bound by that decree of 1878, the present plaintiff, who derives his title from the widow of Anant Bahadur Singh, is equally bound.

(2) 143 Ind. Cas. 395; 60 I A 103; A I R 1933 P C 95; 64 M L J 455; (1933) M W N 303; Ind. Rul. (1933) P C 156; 8 Luck 65; 10 O W N 601 (P C).

We therefore hold that the defendants-appellants are under-proprietors of the plots in suit in the present case and that plaintiff is bound to recognise their under-proprietary rights in these plots.

In Muhammad Rashid-ud-din Ashraf v. Ram Sukh & Sons 24 O. C. 342 (3), it was held by a learned Judge of the late Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh that the letters of the Government of India, dated October 10 and 19, 1859, which formed the First Schedule to the Oudh Estates Act, I of 1869, have not by themselves the effect of restoring all under-proprietary rights which existed before the annexation of Oudh, and that before such a right can be relied on, it must be shown that it had been recognised by the Government after the date of Lord Canning's Proclamation, either by entry in the Settlement Records or by a settlement decree or in some other way.

In the present case the defendants-appellants have proved their under-proprietary rights to the plots in suit by obtaining a decree from the Settlement Court after a contest with the superior proprietor or whose name was entered in Lists Nos. 1 and 3 of the Lists prepared under s. 8 of the Oudh Estates Act. By s. 10 of the Oudh Estates Act it is laid down that the Court shall take judicial notice of the said lists, and regard them as conclusive evidence that the persons named therein are such taluqdars or grantees.

We, therefore, reverse the finding of the lower Courts on Issue No. 3 and hold that the defendants-appellants have proved themselves to be under-proprietors of the plots in suit. The next point for determination is whether the decisions in the previous suit between the defendants and the lessee of the Sihipur Estate, Babu Bipin Chander Chatterji, are binding on the present plaintiff, and whether the plaintiff is estopped from denying the defendants' under-proprietary title to the plots in dispute. In our opinion, the decision obtained by the defendants against Babu Bipin Chander Chatterjee is not binding on the present plaintiff. It has been held in Shripadbhat Anantbhat Joshi v. Rama Babaji Lathi A. I. R. 1927 Bom. 270) (4), that a previous decision in a suit by the lessee against a third person cannot operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit by the lessor against the same person as the lessee does not occupy a representative capacity and the lessor cannot be said to be a person claiming through his lessee. We decide Issue No. 2 against the defendants and in favour of the plaintiff-respondent.

As regards the question of possession, the plaintiff himself prayed that a decree for possession be granted to him along with a decree for a declaration that the defendants are not under-proprietors of the plots in suit. This itself shows that the plaintiff had serious doubts as to his being in possession of the plots in dispute. The lower Courts have held that the possession of the plaintiff as proprietor should be presumed. No doubt the juidicial possession of the plaintiff as superior proprietor of the estate must be presumed in his favour, but, if the defendants are held to be under-proprietors, as we have held them to be, possession as under-proprietors of the plots in suit must also be presumed in their favour. As early as 1878, the Settlement Court after due enquiry and after contest by the Taluqdarya of Sihipur, held that Hanuman Singh and Ram Singh were in actual possession of the plots in suit as under-proprietors. That position was re-affirmed in 1927 and 1928 by the judgments of the Court of the District Judge of Fyzabad and of this Court, Ext. A-4 and Ex. A-6. Even though these judgments are not binding on the plaintiff, still they may be used under s. 13 of the Indian Evidence Act as instances when the possession of the defendants over the plots in suit was challenged and found to be proved. The Settlement Court decree as well as the judgments of this Court and of the Court of the District Judge of Fyzabad lend support to the oral evidence adduced by the defendants, and prove that they have been in possession ever since they obtained a decree for under-proprietary rights. It is true that the Indian Evidence Act does not make a finding of fact arrived at on the evidence before the Court in one case evidence of that fact in another case where the parties are not the same, but it seems to us that the lower Courts have rejected the oral evidence of possession adduced by the defendants on the legal presumption that possession must rest with the superior proprietor regardless of the fact that for the last 50 years and more the defendants have been openly asserting their title to the plots in suit as under-proprietors, and have in 1878 obtained a decree for under-proprietary rights in their favour in respect of these plots, and although the decrees Ex. A-4 and A-6, are not binding upon the plaintiff of the present suit, still the title of the defendants as under-proprietors having been established as against the present plaintiff, possession of the plots in suit as under-proprietors must also be deemed to rest with them, and the oral evidence adduced by the defendants on the question of possession should have been believed. See Kumar Gopika Raman Roy v. Atal Singh A. I. R. 1929 P. C. 99 (5).

(3) 65 Ind. Cas. 514; 24 O C 342.

(4) 101 Ind. Cas. 340; A.I.R 1927 Bom. 270.

It is true as laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Secretary of State for India v. Rameshwaram Devasthanam A. I. R. 1934 P. C. 112 (6), that under s. 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure the High Court has no jurisdiction to reverse the findings of fact arrived at by the lower Appellate Court unless they are vitiated by some error of law. In the present case, we think that the finding of the lower Appellate Court on the question of possession has been vitiated by the error of law that the evidence of the defendants has been rejected solely on the legal presumption that the superior proprietor must be deemed to be in possession, and the question of possession has not been decided as a pure question of fact but only upon a legal presumption. Had the lower Courts found that the defendants had proved themselves to be under-proprietors, and that the decree of the Settlement Court was binding upon the present plaintiff, they would never have arrived at the conclusion that the possession of the defendants as under-proprietors had not been proved.

For the reasons given above, we hold on the the evidence on the record that the defendants have proved themselves to be in possession of the plots in suit since the decree of 1878 in their favour.

The result is that we allow this appeal with costs, set aside the judgment and decree of the lower Appellate Court and dismiss the plaintiff's suit with costs of both Courts.

D. Appeal allowed.

(5) 114 Ind. Cas. 561; A I R 1929 P C 99; 33 C W N 463; 29 L W 674; 49 C L J 327; 10 P L T 391; 31 Bom. L R 734; (1929) A L J 246; 56 M L J 562 (P C).

(6) 148 Ind. Cas. 778; A I R 1934 P C 112; 6 R P C 134; (1934) M W N 433; 66 M L J 595; 39 L W 613; 11 O W N 775; 38 C W N 533; 59 C L J 262; 36 I L R 93; 36 Bom. L R 539; 57 M 652; 16 P L T 7; 61 A 163 (P C).

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 193 of 1933
March 14, 1935
ALLSOP, J.

ABDUL SHAKUR KHAN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
Babu RAJENDRA KISHORE SARAN SINGH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 97, 115, s. 14—Promise to execute lease—Consideration paid on October 26, 1926, and January 1, 1927—Breach of promise—Suit for return of consideration filed in Small Cause Court on October 26, 1929—Small Cause Court holding it has no jurisdiction and ordering presentation in proper Court, on May 21, 1930—Suit presented on June 11, 1930—Cause of action, when arises—Suit, whether in time.

The plaintiff instituted a suit to recover two sums of Rs. 15 paid by him to the other party on October 26, 1926, and January 1, 1927. His case was that he made these payments by way of premium or nazrana because the defendant had promised to execute in his favour a lease of a certain holding. He claimed that the sums should be returned on the ground that the defendant had resiled from his promise and refused to execute the lease. The suit was originally instituted in the Court of Small Causes on October 26, 1929. That Court decided that it had no jurisdiction and returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court on May 21, 1930. It was presented on June 11, 1930;

Held, that this was clearly a claim which was governed either by Art. 97 of the Limitation Act or by Art. 115, that is, it was either a claim for money paid upon an existing consideration which afterwards failed in that the payments were made in consideration of the promise to execute the lease and the promise was afterwards repudiated or it was claim for compensation for the breach of any contract, express or implied, not in writing registered and not specially provided for.

Held, further that as the second payment was made on January 1, 1927, it was obvious that the breach of the promise occurred after that date, and the cause of action arose from the breach. As the plaintiff was entitled to the benefit of the provisions of s. 14 of the Limitation Act his claim for both the sums was clearly within time.

S. C. A. from the decision of the Second Additional Subordinate Judge of Allahabad, dated October 27, 1932.

Mr. Basudeva Mukerji, for the Appellant.

Mr. Banke Behari, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This second appeal gives rise to a question of limitation. The plaintiff instituted a suit to recover two sums of Rs. 75 paid by him to the other party on October 26, 1926 and January 1, 1927. His case was that he made these payments by way of premium or nazrana because the defendant-respondent had promised to execute in his favour a lease of a certain holding. He claimed that the sums should be returned on the ground that the defendant-respondent had resiled from his promise and refused to execute the lease. The defendant-respondent did not allege that he was prepared to execute the lease. His defence was that there had been a subsequent arrangement by which the claims of the parties had been adjusted and that for that reason the amounts were no longer due. This defence was disbelieved by the Courts below. I am left, therefore, with these facts that the plaintiff advanced these two sums on the faith of a promise made by the other party that he would execute the lease in the plaintiff's favour and that subsequently the defendant refused to execute the lease.

The suit was originally instituted in the Court of Small Causes on October 26, 1929. That Court ultimately decided that it had no jurisdiction and returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court on May 21, 1930. It was presented on June 11, 1930. The learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court came to the conclusion, and rightly so, that the plaintiff was entitled to the benefit of the provisions of s. 14 of the Limitation Act for the period from October 26, 1929 to May 21, 1930, that is for a period of very nearly seven months. He decided that the plaintiff's claim in respect of the payment made on January 1, 1927 was, therefore, within limitation on June 11, 1930, but he held that the claim for the other payment made on October 26, 1926, was barred by time, because it was outside limitation by the period extending from May 21, 1930 to June 11, 1930.

The plaintiff has only himself to blame for the decision which was reached. In his plaint he asserted that his cause of action arose on October 26, 1926 and January 1, 1927. On the consideration of the facts alleged it is clear enough that his cause of action did not arise on those dates. This was clearly a claim which was governed either by Art. 97 of the Limitation Act or by Art. 115, that is, it was either a claim for money paid upon an existing consideration which afterwards failed in that the payments were made in consideration of the promise to excuse the lease and the promise was afterwards repudiated or it was a claim for compensation for the breach of any contract express or implied not in writing registered and not specially provided for. It is immaterial which of these articles is applied to the facts of the case. It has been suggested on behalf of the respondent that the plaintiff rightly said that his cause of action arose on October 26, 1926 and January 1, 1927, but it is obvious that this is not a good argument because it is inconceivable that the plaintiff could have instituted a suit for the recovery of the money advanced on October 26, if he had wished to institute it on the next day, October 27. He would clearly then have had no claim for the refund of the money. In one sense of course a part of the cause of action did arise on the dates mentioned because there would have been no cause of action if no money had been advanced, but it is also evident that these were not the complete causes of action because the plaintiff could not claim his money until there was a breach of the promise to excuse the lease. As the second payment was made on January 1, 1927 it is obvious that the breach of the promise occurred after that date, and the cause of action really arose from the breach. As the plaintiff was entitled to the benefit of the provisions of s. 14 of the Limitation Act, his claim for both the sums was clearly within time.

The only question is whether the plaintiff should not be alleged to enforce his claim because in his plaint he wrongly stated that the cause of action occurred in respect of the first payment on October 26, 1926 and omitted to mention the other date when the breach took place. I do not think that meticulous accuracy in drafting of plaints can be demanded in this country. It does not appear that the inaccuracy in the plaint could have given rise to any difficulty on the part of the defendant or could have affected the defences which he could have taken. I hold that the whole claim was within limitation and that the mere inaccuracy in the plaint is not sufficient to justify the dismissal of the claim. I, therefore, allow the appeal, set aside the order of the Court below and restore the order of the learned Munsif. The appellant will get his costs in the lower Appellate Court, but the parties will bear their costs in this Court. Leave to file an appeal under the Letters Patent is refused.

D. Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal from Appellate Decree No. 762 of 1931

January 25, 1935

FAZL ALI AND ROWLAND, JJ.

NANDO KAHAR AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Sri BHUP NARAIN SINGH AND ANOTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 28, Sch. I, Art. 47—Scope of—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 145—Proceedings under, decided in favour of defendant No. 2—Defendant No. 1 bringing suit for possession three years after—Suit decreed—Plaintiff resisting possession—Resistance ineffectual—Suit by plaintiff for declaration of title and recovery of possession—Suit, whether barred—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 100.

Section 28 of the Limitation Act provides that after the expiry of the period prescribed for instituting a suit for possession of any property, the person who should have instituted such suit but has failed to do so, shall cease to have any right to the property. There cannot be a revival of title of which there has been a statutory extinguishment. [p. 1095, col. 2]

Section 145 (6) of the Code of Criminal Procedure provides that if the Magistrate decided that one of the parties was or should be treated as being in possession of the land in dispute he shall issue an order declaring such party to be entitled to possession thereof until evicted therefrom in due course of law. Thus if the successful party is evicted by means of a suit by a person other than the parties to the proceeding within the period of three years, the order of the Magistrate being rendered ineffectual, the shorter period of limitation ceases to run against the unsuccessful party, and there can be no room left for the application of Art. 47, Limitation Act, and s. 28, Limitation Act, will not become operative until the expiry of the limitation period laid down in the ordinary law. [p. 1096, col. 2.]

A proceeding under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code, in respect of certain land between the plaintiff and defendant No. 2 was decided in favour of the latter and more than three years after this the defendant No. 1 brought a suit against defendant No. 2 and got possession in spite of plaintiff's application under O. XXI, r. 100, Civil Procedure Code. Thereupon the plaintiff brought a suit for declaration of title and recovery of possession. The plaintiffs main contention was that Art. 47, Limitation Act, applies only as between original parties to a proceeding under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code, or those claiming under them and that it could not, therefore, be availed of by defendant No. 1 who was neither a party to the proceeding nor was a person claiming under one of the parties:

Held, (1) that s. 28, Limitation Act, was a complete answer to the plaintiff's contention; [p 1095, col 1.]

(2) that since it was not disputed that defendant No. 2 in whose favour the proceeding under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code was decided was in possession of the disputed land for more than three years and as no step was taken by the plaintiffs to question the order under s. 145 and to evict defendant No. 2 in due course of law within a period of three years which was the period of limitation as provided by Art 47, Limitation Act, whatever title (if any) the plaintiffs had to the property, was completely extinguished; [ibid]

(3) that in the circumstances it was not at all necessary for defendant No. 1 to implead the plaintiffs in the suit which they subsequently brought against defendant No. 2 and the plaintiffs not having taken any steps to evict defendant No. 2, could not now question the title of defendant No. 1. Ganga Gobind Mundul v. The Collector of the Twenty-four Parganas (1), Bhagwan Ramanuj v. Ram Krishan Bose (2) and Jogendra Kishore Roy Chowdhury v. Brojendra Kishore Roy Chowdhury (4), referred to, Aukhil Chandra Chowdhury v Mirza Delawar Hussain (3) and Pakki Adinarayana v. Nambura Suramma (5), dissented from. [ibid]

C. A. from the decision of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Ranchi, dated January 13, 1931, reversing that of the Munsif of Hazaribagh, dated July 29, 1929.

Messrs. Phulan Prasad Varma and Harinandan Singh, for the Appellants.

Messrs. S. M. Mullick and S. C. Mazumdar, for the Respondents.

Fazl Ali, J.—The question to be decided in this appeal is whether the plaintiffs' suit is barred under the provisions of Art. 47 read with s. 28 of the Indian Limitation Act of 1908. The trial Court held that the suit was not barred but the lower Appellate Court came to the opposite conclusion and dismissed the suit. Thereupon the plaintiffs filed this Second Appeal which has been referred to us by Macpherson, J., of this Court before whom it originally came up for hearing.

The plaintiffs have sued for a declaration of their title to and recovery of possession of certain lands, two-thirds of which were settled by one Mahanth Dayal Das with them in 1898 and the remaining one-third was purchased by them in 1901 under a registered sale deed. The plaintiffs were duly entered in the Record of Rights as raiyats of these lands but in 1921 one Mahanth Sarup Narain Das (defendant No. 2) who had meanwhile succeeded Mahanth Dayal Das claimed possession of the lands on the ground that the plaintiffs were benamidars of Mahanth Dayal Das and in a proceeding under

s. 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure which followed, an order was passed declaring Mahanth Sarup Narain Das to be entitled to possession and forbidding any disturbance of his possession till he was evicted from the property in due course of law. More than three years after this order the first defendant Bhup Narain Singh as landlord of the village instituted a suit against Mahanth Sarup Narain Das (defendant No. 2) for declaration of his title to and recovery of possession of the holding and ultimately a decree was passed in his favour and he duly obtained possession under the decree in spite of an application made by the plaintiff under O. XXI, r. 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The plaintiffs thereupon brought the suit out of which this appeal has arisen.

The plaintiffs' main contention is that Art. 47 applies only as between original parties to a proceeding under s. 145 or those claiming under them and that it cannot, therefore, be availed of by defendant No. 1 who was neither a party to the proceeding nor is a party claiming under one of the parties. It appears to me, however, that s. 28, is a complete answer to their contention and I have no doubt that the suit has been rightly dismissed by the lower Appellate Court. Section 28 of the Indian Limitation Act runs thus:—

"At the determination of the period hereby limited to any person for instituting a suit for possession of any property, his right to such property shall be extinguished."

It is not disputed that Mahanth Sarup Narain Das (defendant No. 2) in whose favour the proceeding under s. 145 was decided was in possession of the disputed land for more than three years and as no step was taken by the plaintiffs to question the order under s. 145 and to evict defendant No. 2 in due course of law within a period of three years which is the period of limitation as provided by Art. 47, it is clear that whatever title (if any) the plaintiffs had to the property was completely extinguished. In the circumstances it was not at all necessary for defendant No. 1 to implead the plaintiffs in the suit which they subsequently brought against Mahanth Sarup Narain Das, and the plaintiffs not having taken any steps to evict Mahanth Sarup Naran Das cannot now question the title of defendant No. 1. It is to be noted that s. 28 of the Limitation Act provides in clear terms that after the expiry of the period prescribed for instituting a suit for possession of any property, the person who should have instituted such suit but has failed to do so, shall cease to have any right to the property. As Macpherson, J., has pointed out, there cannot be a revival of title of which there has been a statutory extinguishment. That this is so will be clear on merely reading the section but the matter is also covered by very high authority. In Ganga Gobind Mundul v. The Collector of the Twenty-four Parganas (1), the Judicial Committee has clearly pointed out that after the expiry of the period of limitation the law declares not simply that the remedy is barred but that the title is extinct in favour of the possessor. In Bhagwan Ramanuj v. Ramkrishan Bose 74 Ind. Cas. 561 (2), Fletcher, J., dealing with s. 28 of the Limitation Act, observed:—

"The learned Judge, however, has considered that in a case of this nature, when the suit is barred, the title still remains vested in the plaintiff That obviously is not so; under s. 28 of the Indian Limitation Act, it is expressly provided that at the expiration of the period prescribed by the Act for limitation of suits, not only is the remedy barred but the right is gone. That is quite clear. That being so, the statute has operated to revoke the estate that was originally vested in the plaintiff, and to confer a statutory estate upon the defendants."

It appears that this case subsequently went up to the Judicial Committee and the decision of Fletcher, J., and the other learned Judge who had concurred in it, was upheld.

I may refer to two cases which have been greatly relied on by the plaintiff-appellant and which induced Macpherson, J. to refer the appeal to a Division Bench. The first case is that of Aukhil Chunder Choudhary v. Mirza Delawar Hossain (3) which was decided by the Calcutta High Court in 1877 and the facts of which were briefly these:—

In a proceeding under s. 318 of the old Code of Criminal Procedure (to which s. 145 of the present Code corresponds) the Magistrate in January 1871 had directed possession to be given to certain person who may be described as the Roy defendants of the lands which were the subject-matter of the proceeding. So in 1872 the defendants who were appellants in the High Court, instituted a suit against the Roy defendants to set aside the Magistrate's

(1) 11 M I A 345; 7 W R 21; 1 Suther 676; 2 Sar 284.

(2) 74 Ind. Cas. 561; A I R 1922 P C 184; 26 C W N 722 (P C).

(3) 6 C L R 93.

order and in 1873 they obtained a decree for possession in respect of the disputed land. More than three years after the Magistrate's order the plaintiff-respondents instituted two suits in March 1874 and January 1875, respectively, one with respect to ten annas and the other with respect to the remaining six annas of the disputed land and they impleaded the defendant-appellants as parties to these suits in 1875. A question arose as to whether the suit was barred under Art. 46 of the Limitation Act of 1877 (to which Art. 47 of the present Act corresponds) and the learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court held that it was not barred and observed :—

"We think, that Art. 46 can only apply between the parties whose possession was confirmed by the Magistrate and each one of the parties to that proceeding who was claiming possession against them, and that it does not apply in favour of one of those parties who subsequently succeed by a regular suit in ousting them."

In a subsequent case, however, Jogendra Kishore Roy Chaudhary v. Brojendra Kishore Roy Chaudhary (4) Hill and Rampini, JJ., felt great hesitation in following this decision and in referring the matter to the Full Bench observed:—

"Now we must say we fell great hesitation in following the above cited ruling. It is certainly not warranted by the terms of Art. 47 into which it virtually read the words 'provided the suit is between the parties to the proceeding under the Criminal Procedure Code, in which the order respecting the possession of the property was passed' which are not to be found there. It is, therefore, in reality a piece of legislation, and it gives no reason for the view it expresses. Reason might perhaps be found for the ruling in the argument that it is hard on a person bound by an order under s. 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, that he should be bound, as it has been said, for all time, though the possession of the property may have passed from his opponent to some third party. On the other hand, it may be the policy of the law, and perhaps a sound one, that, when proprietors of land, dispute respecting the possession of land in such a way as to cause a likelihood of a breach of the peace, the party found to be out of possession should have only three years instead of (not "all time" but) twelve years to bring his suit for recovery of possession in whosesoever hands the lands may be".

The Full Bench, however, found it unnecessary to decide whether the case in question had been correctly decided or not and in my opinion it is not necessary for us also to decide that point, because the facts as we find them in that case were entirely different from those of the present, the principal distinguishing feature being that in that case before the expiry of the period of three years prescribed by the Limitation Act, a suit had been brought by the defendant-appellants and the Roy defendants who were the successful party in the proceedings under s. 145 had been evicted from the possesssion of the property. That this was an important feature of the case is clear from the fact that the learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court laid some stress upon it observing as follows:—

"So far as the Magistrate's order is concerned, the present plaintiffs were only bound to respect the possession of the Roy defendants, or those claiming under them, unless they instituted a suit within three years. That possession having been got rid of, and the defendants having obtained possession adversely to the Roy defendants, we do not think that Art. 46 prevents the present plaintiffs from suing the present defendant in a regular suit for declaration of title".

Section 145 (6) of the Code of Criminal Procedure provides that if the Magistrate decided that one of the parties was or should be treated as being in possession of the land in dispute, he shall issue an order declaring such party to be entitled to possession thereof until evicted therefrom in due course of law. Thus if the successful party is evicted by means of a suit by a person other than the parties to the proceeding, within the period of three years, the order of the Magistrate being rendered ineffectual, the shorter period of limitation ceases to run againt the unsuccessful party, and there can be no room left for the application of Art. 47 and s. 28 will not become operative until the expiry of the limitation period laid down in the ordinary law.

The second case relied upon by the appellant is that of Pakki Adinarayana v. Namburu Suramma (5), in which it was held (i) that Art. 47 of the Limitation Act is not confined in its operation to orders under s. 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure but also applies to an order passed under s. 522 of the Criminal Procedure Code restoring possession to a person who is dispossessed by a trespasser when a charge of criminal trespass is substantiated against the latter, and (2) that when a person against whom possession is claimed was not a party to the order in the criminal proceedings and did not claim under the party successful in such criminal proceedings and that order did not uphold his possession, the order is not binding on him and Art. 47 is no bar to a suit against such a person. The facts of this case are not clearly set out in the reported decision, but as far as they can be gathered, they appear to be that one of the items of

(4) 23 C 731.

(5) 86 Ind. Cas. 744; 48 M L J 372.

the disputed property which is referred to in the report as item No. 2 was the subject-matter of a charge of criminal trespass brought by the predecessors-in-title of defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 5 against the vendors of the plaintiffs and the latter being found guilty, possession was restored to the former. Subsequently defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 5 who claimed at one time to be the tenants of the Maharaja of Vizianagram (defendants No. 4) disclaimed all interest in the land and in certain survey proceedings the Maharaja's title was found against and the third defendant in the suit being found to be in possession; in Maharaja as well as defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 5 acquiesced in the decision of the survey authorities. The plaintiff thereupon brought the suit against the third defendant whose contention that Art. 47 was a bar to the suit was negatived and the suit was remanded to the Subordinate Court who had dismissed it on the preliminary ground of limitation without trial on the merits. Now, it does not appear from the report whether the survey proceedings which resulted in favour of defendent No. 3 took place within three years of the order under s. 522 of the Code of Criminal Procedure or more than three after that order. If it took place within three years of the order then in this case also the order under s. 522 having been practically nullified by the survey proceedings, the facts of this case would bear close resemblance to those of the case of Aukhil Chunder Choudhary v. Mirza Delawar Hossain (3), decided by the Calcutta High Court. However that may be, if the learned Judges of the Madras High Court in Pakki Adinarayana v. Nambura Suramma (5) or the learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court in Aukhil Chunder's case (3) (ante) intended to lay down that in no case can a suit be instituted by a party who was unsuccessful in a criminal proceeding under s. 145 or 522 of the Code of the Criminal Procedure against one who was not a party to such a proceeding be barred by s. 47, even though it may have been instituted more than three years from the order of the Criminal Court, I am unable to agree to such a wide proposition and would respectfully dissent from it.

In my opinion the plaintiff's suit was rightly dismissed by the lower Appellate Court and the appeal should be dismissed with costs.

Rowland, J.—I agree.

D. Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 134 of 1933

March 26, 1935

GANGA NATH, J.

KALP NATH CHAND AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

SAMAR DHUJ CHAND—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT

U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 42—Scope of—Held, upon facts, that the decision of Revenue Court did not bar the civil suit—Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926), s 121.

Section 42 of the Land Revenve Act applies where the tenancy is admitted and the dispute relates to the class or tenure of the tenant Ramjas Singh v. Ram Harakh Panday (1), relied on.

The scope of s. 42, U. P. Land Revenue Act, is very limited and is limited to the case of a dispute relating to class and tenure. Where the question is, who is the tenant, s. 42 has no relation to such a dispute. It is a mistake to read into s. 42 all the provisions of s. 121 of the Agra Tenancy Act. Kashi Prasad v. Ambika Prasad (2), relied on.

In an application for the correction of jamabandi, under s. 42 of the Land Revenue Act, 1901, the relief sought by the applicants was that their names might be entered as "tenant-grove-holders" against the land in dispute. The case in the Revenue Court was fought on the basis of possession. The applicant-defendant stated that he had been in possession over the land in dispute for about 16 years. The application was contested by the plaintiff. He stated in his written statement that he had been in possession over the land in dispute. The Revenue Court framed the following issues: "(1) Whether the defendant No. 2 (plaintiff) holds the grove in suit as proprietor? (2) Whether the applicant is in possession as a grove-holder?" The first issue was decided against the defendant (plaintiff in this case) and the second issue was decided in favour of the defendants-applicants (the appellants). No declaration was made by the Revenue Court as to whether the defendants were the tenants of the plaintiff. The only order passed by the Revenue Court was:—"The area shall be recorded as "grove" inside the abadi and the applicant as the grove-holder." There was nothing in the whole of the order to show who was the land-holder;

Held, that though the application was described as one under s. 42 of the Land Revanue Act, yet it could not have been made under it, because the applicants did not state that they were the tenants of the opposite parties. The dispute between the parties was regarding the entries in the annual register. Even if the order of the Revenue Court be regarded as one made under s. 42 of the Land Revenue Act, it cannot operate as res judicata. Hence the suit by the plaintiff in Civil Court for declaration that he (the plaintiff) was the owner in possession of the plots of land and the tress thereon is not barred.

S. C. A. from the decision of the Additional Sub-Judge, Gorakhpur, dated November 26, 1932.

Mr. Shiva Prasad Sinha, for the Appellants.

Mr. Haribans Sahai, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is a defendants' appeal and arises out of a suit brought against them by the plaintiff-respondent for a declaration that he (the plaintiff) was the owner in possession of the plots of land described in the plaint and the trees thereon situated in Mauza Narainpur, Tappa Shahpur and that the defendants had nothing to do with them. The plaintiff's case was that his predecessors-in-title were co-sharers in the village and the land in dispute was allotted to the plaintiff's predecessors in partition. The defendants have got their names entered in the revenue papers against the trees on the land in dispute.

According to the plaintiff's case, the plaintiff's grandfather and his brother had a share in the village. The plaintiff's grandfather's brother sold his share to Murli Manohar from whom it descended to his widow Musammat Param Jot Kuari. After the sale the village was partitioned and the disputed plots were allotted to the share of Musammat Param Jot Kuari. As the plots in dispute were behind the plaintiff's house, the plaintiff remained in their possession and planted trees on them. On June 6, 1929, the plaintiff obtained the plots in dispute by a deed of exchange executed by Musammat Param Jot Kuari. Thereafter the defendants applied to the Revenue Court for the entry of their names as grove-holders and the Revenue Court allowed their application. The plaintiff brought this suit for declaration of his proprietary title after the order of the Revenue Court.

The defendants contended that they were the owners of the land and the trees in dispute. They stated in cl. (d) of their additional statements:

"The plaintiff or his ancestors and the zemindars have nothing to do therewith; nor have they been ever in possession and enjoyment thereof. All the allegations made by the plaintiff to the contrary are evidently wrong and not correct. The contesting defendants are the owners in possession of the land in dispute and the trees standing thereon as baghdars. The plaintiff has no right to take objection or bring a suit."

The trial Court found in favour of the plaintiff and decreed the suit. On appeal, the learned District Judge, Gorakhpur, agreed with the findings of the trial Court and, confirming the decree of the trial Court, dismissed the appeal.

Both the Courts have found concurrently in favour of the plaintiff. The trial Court found that the plaintiff was the owner of the land and the trees and this finding was confirmed by the lower Appellate Court.

The learned Counsel for the appellants has urged that the order of the Revenue Court about the entry of the defendants' names in the revenue papers bars the present suit. As will appear from the application made by the defendants, it was an application for the correction of jamabandi, under s. 42 of the Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), as was stated in the application. The relief sought by the applicants was that their names might be entered as "tenant-grove-holders" against the land in dispute. The case in the Revenue Court was fought on the basis of possession. In para. 2 of their application the defendant Kalp Nath Chand stated that he had been in possession over the land in dispute for about 16 years. The application was contested by the plaintiff-respondent. He stated in his written statement that he had been in possession over the land in dispute. The Revenue Court framed the following issues:—

"(1) Whether the defendant No. 2 (Samar Dhuj Chand) holds the grove in suit as proprietor?"

(2) Whether the plaintiff is in possession as a grove-holder?"

The first issue was decided against the defendant, Samar Dhuj Chand, and the second issue was decided in favour of the defendants-applicants (the appellants). No declaration was made by the Revenue Court as to whether the defendants were the tenants of the plaintiff. The only order passed by the Revenue Court was:—"The area shall be recorded as "grove" inside the abadi and the applicant as the grove-holder." There is nothing in the whole of the order to show who was the landholder. The case in the Revenue Court cannot be regarded be any stretch of imagination as one for a declaration under s. 121 of the Tenancy Act. On the other hand, the application itself shows that it was made under s. 42 of the Land Revenue Act. Though the application was described as one under s. 42 of the Land Revenue Act, yet it could not have been made under it, because the applicants did not state that they were the tenants of the opposite parties. Section 42 of the Land Revenue Act applies where the tenancy is admitted and the dispute relates to the class or tenure of the tenant. As held in Ramjas Singh v. Ram Harakh Panday (1), a clear distinction exists between the case where the tenancy itself is disputed and the case where the tenancy is admitted but its class or tenure is in dispute. In the revenue case, the applicants wanted themselves to be entered as grove-holders. The dispute between the parties in the revenue case was regarding the entries in the annual register. Section 40 of the Land Revenue Act lays down that all disputes regarding entries in the annual register shall be decided on the basis of possession. Both the parties, as already stated, fought the case and it was actually decided on the basis of possession.

(1) 120 Ind. Cas. 200, A I R 1930 All. 305; (1929) A L J 1257; Ind. Rul. (1930) All. 24; 14 R D 28.

Even if the order of the Revenue Court be regarded as one made under s. 42 of the Land Revenue Act, it cannot operate as res judicata. In Kashi Prasad v. Ambika Prasad (2), it was laid down that the scope of s. 42 was very limited and was limited to the case of a dispute relating to class and tenure. Where the question was, who was the tenant, s. 42 had no relation to such a dispute. It was a mistake to read into s. 42, all the provisions of s. 95 of the Tenancy Act of 1901 (s. 121, of the present Tenancy Act). It was also held that assuming that the Assistant Collector's judgment was given under s. 42 of the Land Revenue Act, his decision could not operate as res judicata.

As already stated, the defendants do not themselves admit to be the tenants of the plaintiff nor have they so far got it declared. The dispute between the parties, as already stated, is about the proprietary title of the land and the trees. Both the parties allege themselves to be the proprietors. The matter of proprietary title does not relate to the annual register mentioned in cl. (e) of s. 32 of the Land Revenue Act. It relates to the register mentioned in cl. (a). Whether the order of the Revenue Court be regarded as passed under s. 40 or 42 of the Land Revenue Act, the order of the Revenue Court would not bar a suit in the Civil Court in view of the provisions of cl. (3) of s. 40 or s. 44. I, therefore, agree with the finding of the lower Court that the suit is not barred by the order of the Revenue Court passed in the case of the correction of jamabandi. In the face of the findings of fact of the lower Courts, there is no force in the appeal. It is, therefore, ordered that the appeal be dismissed with costs and the decree of the lower Court be confirmed.

Permission to file a Letters Patent Appeal is granted.

D. Appeal dismissed.

(2) 125 Ind. Cas. 23; (1930) A L J 736; Ind. Rul. (1930) All. 647; A I R 1930 All. 611; 14 R D 450.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 162 of 1931

September 27, 1934

MOHAMMAD NOOR AND LUBY, JJ.

SOURENDRA MOHAN SINHA AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

SECRETARY OF STATE—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Bengal Cess Act (IX of 1880), ss. 6, 106—Collections by zemindar from traders resorting to hat for selling goods, whether assessable—Revenue Board cannot add to or subtract from Cess Act—Income not assessable under Act cannot be made assessable—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 80—Notice under, whether should be copy of plaint—Notice showing that assessment of cess on income from hat was ultra vires—Relief asked being relief from such assessment—All forms of reliefs need not be given in detail—Relief not covered in notice added in plaint—Entire suit should not be dismissed—Interpretation of Statutes—Interpretation by Courts conflicting—Amendment of statute.

Whether a particular sum of money collected from persons who use a zemindar's land is or is not rent is a mixed question of law and fact. Where traders come and sell their commodities on the land and pay something to the zemindar and the same set of traders do not necessarily come on every hat day and no land is settled with them for any period of time, the money thus realized is not ground rent and is not assessable to cess. Umed Rasul Shaha v. Anath Bandhu (1), Munindra Chandra Nundi v. Secretary of State (2), Secretary of State v. Karuna Kanta (3), Secretary of State v. Ramasray Singh (4) and Kundan Lal v. Nafisuddin (5), relied on. [p. 1100, col. 2.]

Section 106, Bengal Cess Act, does not authorize the Board of Revenue to make that income assessable to cess which is not assessable under the Act itself. The Board have no power to add to the Act or subtract anything from it. The rules must be rules for the purposes of carrying out the Act. If any income is not assessable, it cannot be made assessable by any order of the Board of Revenue. [p. 1102, col 1.]

What s. 80, Civil Procedure Code, requires is that the notice should contain the cause of action, etc., and the relief claimed. If the fact that a particular rule was ultra vires is mentioned in the notice and omitted from the plaint, the notice does not become invalid on that ground. From the plain meaning of s. 80, Civil Procedure Code, the notice need not be practically a copy of the plaint. The notice should be such as to give substantial information to the Government, the basis of the claim and the relief which the plaintiffs seek. Where it is obvious from the notice taken as a whole that the plaintiffs wanted to have it declared by the Court that the assessment of cess on their zemindari on the income of the hat was ultra vires and that the relief which they wanted to seek was that they should be relieved of that assessment, it is not incumbent upon the plaintiffs to give in detail all the forms in which they would seek the relief. [p. 1102, col. 2.]

The addition in the plaint, of a relief which was not covered by the notice does not entail the dismissal of the entire suit. It is open to the plaintiffs to amend their plaint at any stage and proceed with the suit without a prayer for that relief [p. 1103, col. 1.]

The legislature must be taken to be aware of the interpretation of the statute enacted by them by the Courts; and if they find that the interpretations by Courts of Justice are not in conformity with their intention, they should amend it to bring it in conformity with their intention. [p. 110], cols. 1 & 2.]

S. C. A. from appellate decree of the Additional District Judge, Bhagalpur, dated November 3, 1930.

Messrs. P. R. Das and J. C. Sinha, for the Appellants.

The Government Pleader, for the Respondents.

Muhammad Noor, J.—This is an appeal against a decree of the District Judge of Bhagalpur confirming that of the Munsif of that place whereby the appellants' suit for a declaration that a certain assessment of local cess was illegal and ultra vires and for other incidental reliefs was dismissed.

The facts are these. The plaintiffs are the sixteen annas propietors of Lakhiraj Punsia bearing Tauzi Nos. 1183-C and 1044-B, in thana Amarpur. It appears that a hat is held twice a week on their land, and, as is usual, collections are made on their behalf from traders who resort to the hat for selling goods. The Revenue Authorities have included the income so derived in assessing the cess on the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs instituted the suit for a declaration that under the law the assessment was ultra vires as no local cess could be assessed on that income and asked for a refund of Rs. 9-15-0, which they had paid by way of local cess and also for an injunction against the defendant not to realise the assessed amount in future. Both the Courts below have dismissed the suit on two grounds: first, that the notice served upon the defendant under s. 80, Civil Procedure Code, was at variance with the plaint and therefore insufficient; and, secondly, that the assessment was not ultra vires. The plaintiffs have appealed. The learned Government Pleader has supported the decrees of the Courts below on these grounds.

I take up the second point first. The learned Government Pleader has contended that there is a finding of fact that the assessment was on the ground rent and not on the profit from the hat. I however do not think that there is any finding of fact that the assessment was really on the ground rent or that any ground rent was being realized by the plaintiffs from the traders who resorted to the hat. Had there been any such finding, it would have been vitiated on account of the fact that there is not an iota of evidence on the record to support that finding. The only evidence on the record is that of the plaintiffs' Circle Officer who has described the nature of the collection made and this shows that it is not rent. People go to the hat, some of them spread their merchandise on the ground and sell it; others roam about in the hat and hawk the articles which they have for sale. Both classes of traders pay some money to the plaintiffs for carrying on their business on their land. The Courts below have used the expression "ground rent" simply because the Revenue Authorities have done so. In fact, the plaintiffs themselves, both in the notice and in the plaint, admitted that the land was assessable to ground rent. Whether a particular sum of money collected from persons who use a zamindar's land is or is not rent, is a mixed question of law and fact. It is not disputed and the evidence is one-sided that traders come and sell their commodities on the land and pay something to the plaintiffs and that the same set of traders do not necessarily come on every hat day and there is not even a suggestion that any land is settled with them for any period of time. The question, therefore, is whether such a payment is rent. If it is not rent under the law, it will not become so because the Revenue Authorities have treated it as such. Even the defendant in his written statement did not claim that the assessment was on ground rent. He simply raised a question of law that hat income was profit from immovable property, and as such, assessable.

The question whether collections from a hat are assessable to cess has been the subject-matter of judicial decisions in the Calcutta High Court as well as in this Court. First of all I refer to Umed Rasul Shaha v. Anath Bandhu, (1). There the appellant had obtained from the plaintiff and pro forma defendants a right to hold a fair on certain land once a year when there was no crop upon it. The Collector assessed his profit to cess and realized this from the plaintiff. The plaintiff in his turn sued the appellant to recover the amount from the appellant. The question raised was whether the income derived from a Mela was assessable to cess. It was held that it was not. The plaintiff of that suit relied upon r. 33 of the Bengal Board of Revenue. It ran thus:

"The benefit, which a zamindar receives from a fair or hat in the shape of payments for the occupation of land by dealers or traders is assessable to cess. When a fair or hat is held on land appertain-

(1) 28 C 637; 6 C W N 128.

ing to an estate, it is to be valued under Chap. 2, Bengal Act IX of 1880, as part of the estate to which it belongs. But when, as in some cases in the Darjeeling District, a fair or hat is held on land reserved solely for such purposes, and which does not form part of an estate, it should be valued under Chap. 5 of the Act under s. 79; the annual valuation of such lands is not necessary.

Note.—Profits derived from the rent of shops and other miscellaneous revenue derived by zamindars from hats and fairs should not be excluded from the cess valuation of the land on which they are situated; valuation should not, however, be made on trade profits or on benefits derived by traders (Board's cess proceeding of November 12, 1898, No. 2, collection 10, file 96 of 1897)."

Their Lordships held the rule to be ultra vires. It is to be noticed that this Bengal rule corresponds to Bihar and Orissa rule No. 56 (r. 51 in the paper book is a mistake). There is, however, some difference, the most important being that instead of the use of the words "benefit which the zamindar receives" in the Bengal rule, the words "Rent on Revenue" are used in the Bihar and Orissa rule. But it is obvious that by the change of name the nature of the thing is not altered. The decision was, however, based on the proposition that as the Mela income was assessable to income-tax, it was not assessable to cess. This view was not accepted in a later case in connecion with mines in Munindra Chandra Nundi v. Secretary of State (2), where it was held that both cess and income-tax can be levied on royalties from mines and was disapproved by a Full Bench in Secretary of State v. Karuna Kanta (3). The Full Bench case was of cess on income from Mela and it was held there that the profits of Mela were not paid by tenant to landlord, nor for the use and occupation of land, and, consequently were not rent, and did not fall within the definition of "annual value of land" in s. 4, Cess Act; and that an assessment of cesses made by the Collector on the basis of such profits was illegal and ultra vires. It was also held that cattle sellers and stall-keepers who resorted to the fair were not tenants, but licensees.

It is to be noted that since these decisions of the Calcutta High Court under which this province was up to the year 1911, the Cess Act has been amended for several purposes and an extensive amendment was made by the Bihar and Orissa Council in 1916 (Act I of 1916). It is a well settled principle of law that the Legislature must be taken to be aware of the interpretation of the statute enacted by them by the Courts; and if they find that the interpretations by Courts of Justice are not in conformity with their intention, they should amend in to bring it in conformity with their intention. The Full Bench decision of the Calcutta High Court has been mentioned in the note under s. 4: see p. 4 of Bihar and Orissa Cess Manual. Government must be taken to be aware of that decision. They have taken no step to amend the Act. The question has come up before this Court also in Secretary of State v. Ramasray Singh, (4). In that case the Revenue Authorities assessed certain raiyats who made collections from those who resorted to Sonepur. Fair for carrying out trade upon their land. The question whether such collections were rent, or not, was specifically raised and the Bench, to which one of us was a member, decided that the persons who hold the hat and keep the cattle on the land were not lessees. They were mere licensees who had been granted license to come upon the land and to sell their cattle, etc. The difference between a lessee and a licensee has been pointed out in the case of Kundan Lal v. Nafisuddin, (5), and the Full Bench decision of the Calcutta High Court in Secretary of State v. Karuna Kanta (3), was followed. Kulwant Sahay, J., who was one of the members of the Bench in Secretary of State v. Ramasray Singh, (4), held that what was realized on account of sale of goods in a hat is not rent and therefore could not be taken into account in determining the amount of assessment under ss. 7, 2 and 3, Bengal Tenancy Act. It is obvious therefore from the statement of the plaintiff that he was not realising anything by way of rent. The Court below had absolutely no basis to find, if they have found that it was ground rent, on which assessment had been made. Now, apart from the question of decided cases, in my opinion the law itself is very clear. Section 6, Cess Act of 1880, provides:

"The local cess shall be assessed on the annual value of lands and on the annual net profits from mines, quarries, tramways, railways and other immovable property, ascertained respectively as in this Act prescribed; and the rate at which such cess shall be levied for each year shall be determined for such year in the manner in this Act prescribed;"

"Annual value has been defined in s. 4 which says:

"Annual value of any land, estate or tenure" means the total rent which is payable, or if no rent is actually payable, would on a reasonable assessment be payable during the year by all the cultivating

(2) 34 C 257; 5 C L J 148.
(3) 35 C 82; 6 C L J 342; 11 C W N 1053 (F B).
(4) 145 Ind. Cas. 808; A I R 1933 Pat. 430; 12 Pat. 701; 14 P L T 231; 6 R P 208.
(5) 142 Ind. Cas. 43; A I R 1933 Pat. 36; 13 P L T 648; Ind. Rul. (1933) Pat. 101.

raiyats of such land, estate, or tenure, or by other persons in the actual use and occupation thereof:"

The collections made from the persons who come to carry on business on land are not rent nor money paid for use and occupation of the land. They do not hold land under the landlord. Therefore the money does not come within the meaning of "annual value of the land" and is not assessable under s. 6, Cess Act. The Courts below have doubted whether the decision in Secretary of State v. Karuna Kanta (3), is of any force in this province in view of the Board's Rule No. 51. The Board has been given power of making rules under s. 106, Cess Act. This section does not authorize the Board of Revenue to make that income assessable to cess which is not assessable under the Act itself. The Board have no power to add to the Act or subtract anything from it. The rules must be rules for the purposes of carrying out the Act. The simple question is whether such income, which the plaintiffs are getting admittedly from the hat, is assessable to cess under the Act itself. If it is so, the matter ends there. If it is not, it cannot be made aasessable by any order of the Board of Revenue. The utmost that can be said is this: that the Board of Revenue have interpreted the Act to mean that such incomes are assessable. But those interpretations, however binding they may be on the Revenue Authorities, are not binding on the Courts.

The next question for our consideration is whether the notice given is sufficient. The defect found is that the relief, as mentioned in the notice, does not tally with the relief claimed in the suit. The main reliefs for which the notice was given were:

"1. That it be declared that the assessment of cess upon the profits of the hat in Lakhiraj Punsia is ultra vires. 2. That the cess valuation be rectified upon assessment of the land on the basis of a reasonable rent to be fetched. 3. That the order of the Board of Revenue as well as the Subordinate Courts be set aside so far as the assessment is concerned."

It is clearly indicated that the plaintiffs wanted to be relieved from the assessment. The learned Munsif held the notice to be invalid on two grounds; first, that Kanti Chandra Roy who gave notice was not authorized to give that notice. That point has been decided by the learned Additional District Judge in favour of the plaintiffs. The second ground was the one I have stated, namely, that the plaint did not tally with the notice. Two of such differences have been mentioned. One is that relief No. 3 of the notice is not mentioned in the plaint. Relief No. 3 of the notice is:

"That it be declared that r. 51, Cess Act, is not applicable and if it be held to be applicable, it is ultra vires."

The learned Munsif says that this does not find place in the plaint. It is obvious that this was absolutely superfluous in the notice. What s. 80 requires is that the notice should contain the cause of action, etc., and the relief claimed. The notice fulfils the requirements of law, and if the fact that a particular rule was ultra vires was mentioned in the notice and omitted from the plaint, the notice does not become invalid on that ground.

The next objection of the learned Munsif is that the relief (c) of the plaint which seeks to recover Rs. 9-15-0 and asks for an injunction is not covered by the notice. It has been held and it is obvious from the plain meaning of s. 80, Civil Procedure Code, that the notice need not be practically a copy of the plaint. The notice should be such as to give substantial information to the Government, the basis of the claim and the relief which the plaintiffs seek. It is obvious from the notice taken as a whole that the plaintiffs wanted to have it declared by the Court that the assessment of cess on their zamindari on the income of the hat was ultra vires and that the relief which they wanted to seek was that they should be relieved of that assessment. It was not incumbent upon the plaintiffs to give in detail all the forms in which they would seek the relief. Two paragraphs of this notice, in my opinion, were sufficient to give the defendant all the information which s. 80 requires a plaintiff to give, namely, reliefs Nos. (1) and (5), as given in the notice. In the suit the plaintiffs want, apart from the declaration of the illegality of the assessment, an injunction against the defendant, not to realise that cess and this is incidental to the declaration. In my opinion the plaint is substantially the same as the notice. It was perhaps realised by the plaintiffs that the Civil Court could not set aside the order of the Revenue Authorities, but could only stop the defendant from realizing the cess. Instead of seeking the relief exactly in the form in which it was mentioned in the notice, the plaintiffs have sought it in the form in which it can be given by a Civil Court.

There is, however, one matter which can be said to be not covered by the notice, namely, the prayer for refund of Rs. 9-15-0,

I find no authority that for this addition in the plaint which was not covered by the notice, the entire suit of the plaintiffs should be dismissed. It was open to the plaintiffs to amend their plaint at any stage and proceed with the suit without a prayer for refund. As a matter of fact, we are asked to strike out from the prayer portion so much of it as relates to the refund of Rs. 9-15-0. I would direct that this be done. The result is that the appeal is partly allowed, and the plaintiffs' suit is decreed. They will get all the reliefs which they have claimed, except the relief which I have ordered to be struck out. The defendant will bear the costs of the suit throughout.

Luby, J.—I agree.

Suit decreed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 545 of 1933
March 22, 1935
ALLSOP, J.
ASHFAQ ALI KHAN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
INAYAT BEG—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT

U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 34—Suit by assignee of profit from co-sharer for profits for certain period—Held, that no report under s. 34 was required—Held, also that assignee was entitled to bring such suit in Revenue Court.

The suit was in respect of the profits for the years 1333 to 1335 Fasli. These profits were transferred to the plaintiff after they had accrued. It is obvious that the plaintiff could make no report under s. 34 of the Land Revenue Act. He had obtained no right either in the mahal or in any share of it or in the profits of it in respect of the year in which the transfer was made or in respect of any subsequent year. There was no right subsisting in him which could be entered in the register. What was transferred in this case was not a right to the profits in a mahal at any time after the transfer but it was a transfer of a sum of money or a debt or any actionable claim which had already accrued to the transferor. There could be no entry in any register of proprietors in respect of this amount and consequently no report could be required and the right to sue could not be based on the making of any such report. In these circumstances an assignee of the right to recover, in a Court of Law, profits which had already accrued to the assignor is entitled to bring a suit in the Revenue Court. Lallu Singh v. Chander Sen (1), relied on.

S. C. A. from the decision of the District Judge of Agra, dated January 9, 1933.

Messrs. N. P. Asthana and B. N. Sahai, for the Appellant.

Messrs. G. Agarwala and K. N. Agarwala, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is a second appeal arising out of a suit for profits by an assignee from the co-sharer. The suit was decreed by the trial Court but was dismissed by the lower Appellate Court. The only point argued in the lower Appellate Court was that the plaintiff was not entitled to institute a suit until he had made a report under s. 34 of the Land Revenue Act asking for mutation of the register. Other grounds of appeal were mentioned in the memorandum to the Court below but they were not argued. This may have been due to the fact that the Court below made it clear that it was with the appellant on the point on which the appellant succeeded.

The first question is whether the learned District Judge was right in holding that the plaintiff had no right to sue until he had made the report required under s. 34. I have no doubt that the learned Judge was not right. The suit was in respect of the profits for the years 1333 to 1335 Fasli. These profits were transferred to the plaintiff after they had accrued. It is quite obvious to my mind that the plaintiff could make no report under s. 34 of the Land Revenue Act. He had obtained no right either in the mahal or in any share of it or in the profits of it in respect of the year in which the transfer was made or in respect of any subsequent year. There was no right subsisting in him which could be entered in the register. The fallacy in the argument addressed to the Court below arises out of a misunderstanding of the meaning of the word "profits" as used in s. 34. What was transferred in this case was not a right to the profits in a mahal at any time after the transfer but it was a transfer of a sum of money or a debt or any actionable claim which had already accrued to the transferor. There could certainly be no entry in any register of proprietors in respect of this amount and consequently no report could be required and the right to sue could not be based on the making of any such report. The only question which might possibly have arisen was whether an assignee of the right to recover, in a Court of Law, profits which had already accrued to the assignor was entitled to bring a suit in the Revenue Court. This question has been set at rest by the decision in Lallu Singh v. Chander Sen (1), where it was held that a suit in these circumstances was one which would lie in the Revenue Court.

(1) 147 Ind. Cas. 937; (1934) A L J 1; 6 R A 586; A I R 1934 All. 155; L R 15 A 29 Rev.; 18 R D 32; 56 A 624.

The appeal must succeed. It has been urged that the respondent might have argued other points in the Court below on the basis of the memorandum in that Court if he had not succeeded on the preliminary point. It seems to me that there is force in this argument. The case must be remanded. I allow the appeal and set aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court. That Court will dispose of the appeal upon its merits. The costs in this Court will abide the result. This amounts to a remand under O. XLI, r. 23.

D. Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Civil Apdeal No, 2435 of 1929
May 29, 1934

ADDISON AND ABDUL RASHID, JJ.

MOHAMMAD ALI KHAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

ANWAR HUSSAIN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Punjab Limitation (Custom) Act (I of 1920), Art. 1 (c)—Alienation, if includes testamentary disposition—No mutation on its basis—Time, when begins to run—Suit attacking wills—Plaint cleverly worded to avoid limitation—Limitation, if can thus be avoided.

Under the Punjab Limitation (Custom) Act, "Alienation" includes any testamentary disposition of property. When alienation is not made by means of a registered deed, and no mutation on the basis of the will is entered in the register of mutation, the time begins to run from the date on which the alienation came to the knowledge of the plaintiffs. Where, therefore, the plaintiffs came to know of the existence of the wills on February 17, 1916, a suit instituted in 1926, is barred by time.

Where the suit in substance is a suit attacking the will, it is not open to the plaintiffs by cleverly wording their plaint to avoid the proper limitation for the suit. Kirpa Ram-Lachhman Das v. Sawan Mal-Gopi Chand (1) and Gurbakhsh Singh v. Gurdial Singh (2), referred to.

S. C. A. from the decree of the District Judge, Jullundur, dated July 8, 1929.

Mr. Achhru Ram, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Badri Das and Zafrulla Khan, for the Respondents.

Abdul Rashid, J.—One Muzaffar Hussain, petition, writer was the owner of a considerable amount of landed property and some residential houses situated at Rahon in the Jullundur District. On December 14, 1915, he wrote a will in his own hand whereby he bequeathed half of his entire property to Anwar Hussain, his sister's son and gave away the remaining half to his collaterals according to their ancestral shares. On the December 18, he wrote out another will which confirmed the contents of the original will, and contained a detailed description of the land and other immovable property which constituted his estate. He died on December 20, 1915, leaving a widow Musammat Shero.

On January 5, 1916, mutation of the entire estate of the deceased was sanctioned in favour of his widow Musammat Shero in her absence. On February 17, 1916, the widow brought to the notice of the reversioners and the Revenue Authorities that her husband had left a will whereby he had bequeathed half of the property to Anwar Hussain and the other half to the reversioners. She prayed that the estate of the deceased be mutated in accordance with the terms of the will. The application of the widow was, however, rejected by the Revenue Authorities on the March 5. On the March 13, she again presented a similar application and this was rejected on the May 9, as the reversioners, including the plaintiffs objected to the mutation of one-half of the estate of Muzaffar Hussain in the name of Anwar Hussain. A third attempt was made by the widow in 1918 to enforce the provisions of the will, but the mutation was finally rejected on November 21, 1918, by the Deputy Commissioner. Having failed to get the mutation recorded in the name of Anwar Hussain, the widow adopted another method of carrying out the wishes of her husband, i. e., she made a gift of one-half of the property to Anwar Hussain and the mutation with respect to this gift in favour of Anwar Hussain was sanctioned on June 13, 1925.

On November 2, 1926, the plaintiffs, Mohammad Ali Khan, Mohammad Latif Khan and Mohammad Sharif instituted the present suit for a declaration to the effect that the oral gift made by Musammat Shero, defendant No. 1, in favour of Anwar Hussain, defendant No. 2, of half of the estate of the deceased Muzaffar Hussain, shall not affect their reversionary rights after the death of Musammat Shero. The other reversioners of Muzaffar Hussain did not join the plaintiffs and were made pro forma defendants. The real contesting defendant, Anwar Hussain pleaded, inter alia, that the widow of Muzaffar Hussain did not succeed her husband and that he himself entered into possession of half of the estate left by the deceased in accordance with the terms of the wills executed on December 14 and 18, 1915, in his favour; that he had been in possession of the property in dispute since December 20, 1915, and that the present claim was barred by limitation. In their replication the plaintiffs challenged the genuineness and validity of the wills, and averred that the property in dispute having been mutated in favour of Musammat Shero on the death of her husband in 1915, they were entitled to challenge the gift made by her in favour of the defendant Anwar Hussain within six years of the date of mutation in his favour. The trial Court framed ten issues, five out of which refer to the wills in dispute. The trial Court decreed the claim of the plaintiffs, but the learned District Judge reversed this decision on appeal on the ground that both the wills on which the defendant relied were genuine and were duly executed by the testator, and that the suit of the plaintiffs was really one challeging the validity of these wills, and as such, was barred by limitation. The plaintiffs have preferred a second appeal to this Court.

It was contended by the learned Counsel for the appellants that the plaintiffs had not brought any suit for the possession of the property in dispute and that their suit was merely one for a declaration that the gift made by Musammat Shero shall not affect their reversionary rights after her death. It was urged that in these circumstances the lower Court ought not to have given any findings regarding the genuiness and the validity of the will and that the plaintiffs ought to have been granted a declaration to the effect that the gift made by Musammat Shero in favour of Anwar Hussain was invalid. The position taken up by the learned Counsel was that after the death of Musammat Shero the plaintiffs would, undoubtedly bring a suit to recover possession of the property and that it would be open to the Court in that suit to determine whether any will had been executed by the deceased and, if so, whether he had any power to do so. It was also argued that the mutation dated June 13, 1925, with respect to the gift by Musammat Shero to Anwar Hussain must be regarded as a fresh transfer by the widow and that such transfer gave the plaintiffs a cause of action to institute the present suit. In the alternative it was suggested that, even if the mutation of June 13, 1925, be regarded as giving effect to the will of Mazaffar Hussain made in 1915, the suit would still be within time under cl. (a), Act I, Punjab Limitation Act, 1920, as it was instituted within six years of the date of the mutation. In my opinion these contentions are without any force.

The facts summarized above show that the plaintiffs came to know on February 17, 1916, that the deceased Muzaffar Hussain had bequeathed half of his property to the defendant by means of the will dated December 14, and 18, 1915. If they wanted to challenge the validity of the wills, it was incumbent on them to institute a suit within six years of the date on which the alienation came to their knowledge. The widow made several attempts to get the land mutated in the name of Anwar Hussain in accordance with the provisions of the wills, but she failed to achieve her object merely because the collaterals opposed her applications before the Revenue Officers on each occasion. She, therefore, carried out the wishes of her husband by making a gift of half of the estate in favour of the legatee. Under the Punjab Limitation (Custom) Act, "Alienation," includes any testamentary disposition of property. This alienation was not made by means of a registered deed, and no mutation on the basis of the wills was entered in the register of mutation. In these circumstances it must be held that under cl. (c), Art. 1, Punjab Limitation (Customs) Act, the time began to run from the date on which the alienation came to the knowledge of the plaintiffs. It is beyond dispute that the plaintiffs came to know of the existence of the wills on February 17, 1916. The present suit having been instituted in 1926, is, therefore, clearly barred by time.

Throughout the present litigation the real contest centred round the issues which deal with the genuineness and the validity of the wills, and the first five issues framed by the trial Court deal with the wills and contain no reference to the gift in dispute, I, therefore, hold that the suit in substance was a suit attacking the wills, and that it was not open to the plaintiffs by cleverly wording their plaint to avoid the proper limitation for this suit. Reference may be made in this connection to Kirpa Ram-Lachaman Das v. Sawan Mal-Gopi Chand (1) and

(1) 106 Ind. Cas. 40; A I R 1927 Lah. 826; 9 Lah. L J 493; 29 P L R 61.

Gurbakhsh Singh v. Gurdial Singh (2).

The learned District Judge has held that the defendant Anwar Hussain is in possession of the property in dispute. It is also clear that he never claimed any rights under the gift. From the very start he repudiated the gift, and stated in his written statement that the widow of Muzaffar Hussain did not succeed her husband, but, on the contrary, he himself entered into possession of the landed estate left by the deceased Muzaffar Hussain in accordance with the terms of the wills dated December 14 and 18, 1915, bequeathing half of the estate to him. If the suit, therefore, is to be regarded as one attacking the gift, it must be held that the plaintiffs have no cause of action to bring the suit as the defendant, who is in possession, does not claim any rights under the gift nor does he recognize that any gift was in fact made by the widow in his favour.

For the reasons given above, I would hold that the decision of the learned District Judge is correct and would dismiss the appeal.

Addison, J.—I agree.

D. Appeal dismissed.

(2) 105 Ind. Cas. 220; A I R 1927 P C 230; 46 C L J 272; 53 M L J 392; 29 Bom. L R 1392; (1927) M W N 778; 4 O W N 935; 28 P L R 567; 32 C W N 119 (P C).

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 1165 of 1933

March 22, 1935

THOM AND IQBAL AHMAD, JJ.

GOVIND PRASAD AND ANOTHER —DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

SHANTI SWARUP—PLAINTIFF AND OTHERS—Pro forma DEFENDANTS —RESPONDENTS

Hindu Law—Joint family—Self-acquired property —Burden of proving that it is thrown in common stock—Intention—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXII, rr. 3, 4—Provisions of, are mandatory—"Proper" person to be guardian ad litem—Decree against minor, when nugatory.

The burden of proving that a member of a joint Hindu family threw his self-acquired property into the common stock lies on the person making the assertion, and this burden can only be discharged by proof of the fact that the owner of the property clearly expressed an intention to abandon his separate and exclusive rights in the property in favour of the members of the joint family. The intention may be expressed by words, or may be inferred by the manner in which the profits of the property were dealt with.

The provisions of O. XXXII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code, that where the defendant is a minor, the Court, on being satisfied of the fact of his minority, shall appoint a proper person to be guardian for the suit for such minor, are mandatory, and a decree passed against a minor without the appointment of a guardian ad litem is a nullity. But if a guardian has been appointed for a minor defendant, mere irregularities in the appointment of the guardian or the mere fact that a proper person was not appointed guardian, does not render the decree nugatory against the minor unless and until it is proved that the minor was not effectively represented in the suit and was prejudiced by the omission of the guardian to take the pleas that could validly be raised on his behalf. The law insists that the minor should be represented by a proper person whose interests are not adverse to the interests of the minor, so that the minor's interest may not in any way be neglected or prejudiced. But if it is apparent that the minor's interests in the suit in which he was a defendant were not in any way prejudiced, it becomes wholly unnecessary to inquire into the question as to whether or not the guardian appointed was a "proper person" within the meaning of O. XXXII, r 4, Civil Procedure Code for the simple reason that the purpose for which a guardian is appointed are achieved. Consequently, in cases where a gaurdian ad litem for a minor defendant has been appointed and a decree is passed against the minor the minor is not entitled to avoid the decree without proof of the fact that he was not effectively represented in the suit, and that he was prejudiced by the omission of the guardian to raise proper pleas on his behalf. Champi v. Tara Chand (1), Walian v. Banke Behari Pershad Singh (2), Baijnath Rai v. Dharam Deo Tiwari (3), Murli Dhar v. Pitambar Lal (4) and Raja Babu v. Balmukund (5), relied on.

S. C. A. from the decision of the Third Additional District Judge of Cawnpore, dated September 20, 1933.

Messrs. P. L. Banerjee and S. N. Seth, for the Appellants.

Mr. M. L. Chaturvedi, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—The suit giving rise to the present appeal was brought by Shanti Swarup, respondent, for a declaration that the preliminary and the final decrees for foreclosure passed in Suit No. 92 of 1930 of the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Cawnpore in favour of the contesting defendants are a nullity and not binding on him. The said decrees were for the foreclosure of a mortgage-deed dated June 22, 1928, executed by Chhadammi Lal, the grandfather and Jagannath Prasad the father of Shanti Swarup plaintiff-respondent. The mortgage was for a sum of Rs. 7,000 and was in favour of the contesting defendants.

Chhadammi Lal, Jagannath and Shanti Swarup were impleaded as defendants in the foreclosure suit. Shanti Swarup was a minor, and his father Jagannath Prasad was appointed as his guardian for the suit.

The plaintiff-respondent assailed the validity of the decrees mentioned above on the ground that Jagannath being himself one of the executants of the mortgage-deed was not in a position to raise appropriate pleas on his behalf in bar of the claim for foreclosure of the mortgage and, as such, was not a proper person to be appointed as his guardian ad litem. The plaint gave no indication of the pleas that according to the plaintiff could be successfully raised on his behalf in the foreclosure suit. At the trial, however, it was suggested on behalf of the plaintiff-respondent that Jagannath omitted to plead that the mortgage was not for legal necessity and that the rate of interest stipulated in the mortgage-deed was excessive, and lastly, that the Court should in any case instead of passing a decree for foreclosure pass a decree for sale in favour of the mortgagees, and the omission of Jagannath to raise these pleas was due to the fact that he himself was one of the mortgagors and resulted in serious prejudice to the plaintiff.

The defendants contested the suit. They denied the allegation of the plaintiff that Jagannath was not a proper person to be appointed as the guardian ad litem of the plaintiff in the foreclosure suit, or that he omitted to take such pleas as could validly be raised in bar of the claim for foreclosure. They alleged that the property mortgaged by the deed of 1928 was the self-acquired property of Chhadammi Lal and the plaintiff had no interest in the same, and accordingly contended that even if Jagannath was not a proper person to be appointed as the plaintiff's guardian, the plaintiff was in no way prejudiced, as he had no interest in the mortgaged property. The defendants, therefore, challenged the right of the plaintiff to the relief claimed by him.

There was abundant evidence in the case to justify the assertion of the defendants that the mortgaged property was the self-acquired property of Chhadammi Lal, and, both the Courts below have recorded a finding to that effect. But the case put forward by the plaintiff in the Courts below was that Chhadammi Lal had thrown the property into the common stock and, as such, the property became the property of the joint family consisting of Chhadammi Lal, Jagannath and the plaintiff.

The trial Court overruled the contention of the plaintiff that the property was thrown into the common stock and held that the omission of Jaggannath to take the pleas mentioned above could in no case be prejudicial to the interests of the plaintiff for the simple reason that the plaintiff had no interest in the mortgaged property. The trial Court also considered the question whether or not the debt secured by the mortgage was raised for legal necessity, and answered the question in the affirmative. It, therefore, held that Jagannath could not successfully raise the plea of want of legal necessity on behalf of the plaintiff-respondent in the foreclosure suit. It further observed that Jagannath had actually pleaded in the foreclosure suit that the rate of interest was excessive, and, the Court had given effect to that plea by reducing the rate of interest. In view of these findings the trial Court dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

On appeal by the plaintiff the lower Appellate Court reversed the decree of the trial Court and decreed the suit. It held that Chhadammi Lal had thrown the property into the common stock, and, the plaintiff had an interest in the same. It did not record any finding on the question whether or not the debt secured by the mortgage was for family necessity, as it was of the opinion, that Jagannath being one of the executants of the mortgage-deed was not in a position to resist the foreclosure suit on behalf of the plaintiff either on the ground that the debt was not for legal necessity or was tainted with immorality, or to raise the plea that the Court should in any case, in lieu of a decree for foreclosure, pass a decree for sale of the mortgaged property. It accordingly held that Jagannath was not a proper person to be appointed as the guardian ad litem of the plaintiff, and that this fact by itself rendered the foreclosure decree nugatory so far as the plaintiff was concerened.

The contesting defendants have come up in second appeal to this Court, and they assail the decree of the lower Appellate Court on two grounds. Firstly, it is contended that the finding of the lower Appellate Court that Chhadammi Lal had thrown the mortgaged property into the common stock is erroneous. It is accordingly urged that the plaintiff had no interest in the property with respect to which the foreclosure decrees was passed, and, is, therefore, not entitled to challenge the validity of that decree. Secondly, it is contended that in the absence of a finding to the effect that the plaintiff was not effectively and adequately represented in the foreclosure suit, and, that he was prejudiced because of the non-appointment of a proper person as his guardian ad litem, the suit should not have been decreed.

As we consider that the second contention advanced on behalf of the defendants is well-founded, we are relieved from the necessity of expressing an opinion as regards the first contention advanced on behalf of the defendant-appellants. We may, however, observe that we are by no means satisfied that the finding of the lower Appellate Court as regards the property being thrown into the common stock by Chhadammi Lal is based on legal evidence. The burden of proving that a member of a joint Hindu family threw his self-acquired property into the common stock lies on the person making the assertion, and this burden can only be discharged by proof of the fact that the owner of the property clearly expressed an intention to abandon his separate and exclusive rights in the property in favour of the members of the joint family. The intention may be expressed by words, or may be inferred by the manner in which the profits of the property were dealt with. The finding of the lower Appellate Court on the point is based on the fact that Chhadammi Lal associated Jagannath and the present plaintiff with himself while executing two mortgage-deeds with respect to the property. The first mortgage was executed in the year 1925 by Chhadammi Lal and Jagannath Prasad for himself, and on behalf of the plaintiff who was a minor. The second mortgage-deed was the mortgage-deed on the basis of which the foreclosure decree was passed and, this mortgage was executed both by Chhadammi Lal and Jagannath. The lower Appellate Court observed that as Chhadammi Lal joined Jagannath and the plaintiff in the execution of the mortgage-deeds, it must be presumed that he threw his self-acquired property into the common stock. It may very well be that Chhadammi Lal associated Jagannath and the plaintiff with himself while mortgaging the property simply on the insistence and for the satisfaction of the mortgagee. Be that as it may, we are far from holding that the fact that the son and grandson of Chhadammi Lal joined in the execution of the mortgage deeds was by itself sufficient to justify the inference that Chhadammi Lal abandoned his exclusive rights to the property in favour of the joint family consisting of himself, his son and grandson.

We are, however, clearly of the opinion, that the plaintiff was adequately and effectively represented in the foreclosure suit and that all the pleas that could validly be taken on his behalf were raised by Jagannath, and, accordingly the decrees for foreclosure are binding on him.

The provisions of O. XXXII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code that where the defendant is a minor, the Court, on being satisfied of the fact of his minority, shall appoint a proper person to be guardian for the suit for such minor, are mandatory, and it is well settled that a decree passed against a minor without the appointment of a guardian ad litem is a nullity, vide, Champi v. Tara Chand (1). But it is equally well-settled that if a guardian has been appointed for a minor defendant, mere irregularities in the appointment of the guardian or the mere fact that a proper person was not appointed the guardian does not render the decree nugatory against the minor unless and until it is proved that the minor was not effectively represented in the suit and was prejudiced by the omission of the guardian to take the pleas that could validly be raised on his behalf, vide, Walian v. Banke Behari Pershad Singh (2), Baijnath Rai v. Dharam Das Tiwari (3) Murlidhar v. Pitambar Lal (4) and Raja Babu v. Balmukand (5). The reason for this rule of law is not far to seek. The law insists that the minor should be represented by a proper person whose interests are not adverse to the interests of the minor, so that the minor's interest may not in any way be neglected or prejudiced. But if it is apparent that the minor's interests in the suit in which he was a defendant were not in any way prejudiced, it becomes wholly unnecessary to inquire into the question as to whether or not the guardian appointed was a "proper person" within the meaning of O. XXII, r. 4, Civil Procedure Code for the simple reason that the purpose for which a guardian is appointed are achieved.

It follows, therefore, that in cases where a guardian ad litem for a minor defendant has been appointed and a decree is pass-

(1) 82 Ind. Cas. 516; 46 A 744; A I R 1924 All. 892; 22 A L J 665; L R 5 A 502 Civ.
(2) 30 C 1021; 30 I A 182; 7 C W N 774; 5 Bom L R 822; 8 Sar. P C J 512 (P C).
(3) 35 Ind. Cas. 707; 38 A 315; 14 A L J 353.
(4) 66 Ind. Cas. 372; 44 A 525; 20 A L J 329: A I R 1922 All. 91; 4 U P L R (A.) 170.
(5) 83 Ind. Cas. 323; A I R 1925 All. 214; L R 5 A 692 Civ.

ed against the minor, the minor is not entitled to avoid the decree without proof of the fact that he was not effectively represented in the suit, and that he was prejudiced by the omission of the guardian to raise proper pleas on his behalf.

In the case before us, we find that all the pleas that could be raised with any hope of success on behalf of the present plaintiff in the foreclosure suit were raised by Jagannath. No exception can be taken to the finding of the trial Court that the debt secured by the mortgage was for legal necessity. Out of the sum of Rs. 7,000 secured by the mortgage-deed, a sum of Rs. 6,530 was for the payment of antecedent debts. To that extent the mortgage was clearly for legal necessity. The balance of the sum Rs. 470 was paid by the mortgagee at the time of the execution of the mortgage-deed. One of the contesting defendants stated on oath that the sum of Rs. 470 was paid for the expenses of the execution and registration of the mortgage-deed, and this statement was not challenged in the course of cross-examination, and was, therefore, rightly accepted by the trial Court. It follows that the entire debt secured by the mortgage-deed was for legal necessity and it would have been idle for Jagannath to plead that the mortgage was not for legal necessity.

There was no suggestion on behalf of the plaintiff in the trial Court that the mortgage-deed was tainted with immorality. The lower Appellate Court was, therefore, wrong in proceeding on the assumption that if some person other than Jagannath had been appointed guardian ad litem of the plaintiff, he could have pleaded that the debt was raised for an immoral purpose.

Jagannath did plead that the rate of interest was excessive, and this plea was given effect to in the foreclosure suit. We further find that the plea that the Court should, instead of a decree for foreclosure, pass a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property, was embodied in the written statement in the foreclosure suit. There is, however, nothing in the judgment of that case to show that this plea was pressed at the time of hearing. The plea was without substance, as a Court is bound to pass a decree for foreclosure when the suit is based on the basis of a mortgage by conditional sale. It is only when the suit is on the basis of an anomalous mortgage that discretion is given to the Court to pass a decree for sale in lieu of decree for foreclosure.

It was not suggested in the Courts below, and it is not suggested in this Court, that any other pleas could be successfully raised on behalf of the present plaintiff in the foreclosure suit, nor is it suggested that Jagannath was not in a position to raise such pleas because of the fact that he was one of the executants of the mortgage-deed. There is, therefore, no escape from the conclusion that the plaintiff failed to prove that he was not effectively represented in the foreclosure suit, or that he was prejudiced in any way by the omission of Jagannath to raise appropriate pleas on his behalf. It follows that the plaintiff was not entitled to the decree granted to him by the lower Appellate Court.

We accordingly allow this appeal, set aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court and restore the decree of the trial Court with costs in all Courts.

D. Appeal allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Rules Nos. 768, 769, 892 and 893 of 1934

July 20, 1934

NASIM ALI AND KHUNDKAR, JJ.

INDU BALA DASSI AND ANOTHER

PLAINT

LAKS

OTHE

Hi

Man nam

—A bus

not not sue

sam

cedu

—St

inte

The

the ma

ness e names, through family an stated in t

taken as se family;

Held, that simple suit

notes only also. Sad

relied on. Abdul Majid Khan v. Saraswatibai (2), referred to.

Where there is a loan independently of the note the creditor is not debarred from suing on the original cause of action by the fact that the cause of action arose out of the same transaction in the course which the promissory note was 'executed.' Abdul Rabbani v. Shyamlal (3), relied on.

Clause (c) of s. 115, Civil Procedure Code, has been advisedly left in indefinite language in order to empower the High Court to interfere and correct gross and palpable errors of Subordinate Courts for the ends of justice. Mathura Nath Sarkar v. Umesh Chandra (8), Raghu Nath Gujrati v. Rai Chatraput Singh (9), and Jagunnessa Bibi v Satish Chandra (10) referred to.

So far as the Calcutta High Court is concerned, it can be said to be now fairly established that the High Court will not interfere with interlocutory orders unless an irreparable injury will be done and a miscarriage will inevitably issue if it holds its hand. If however irreparable injury would be caused to one of the litigants if the matter was not set right, the High Court ought to intervene in the current litigation and disturb the normal progress of a case by revising an interlocutory order that has been passed by a Subordinate Court. Salam Chand v. Bhagwan Das (12), relied on

Ordinarily the discretion of a judicial officer will not be reviewed by the High Court in revision. But it is impossible to lay down a hard and fast rule, that in no instances will the discretion exercised by the judicial officer be reviewed either under s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code or s. 107, Government of India Act, or under the combined operation of the two sections. Under s. 107, Government of India Act (s. 15 of the Charter), the High Court can interfere where irreparable injury will be done to one of the litigants or where there will be a failure of justice if the matter is not set right. Loke Nath Mukherjee v. Abani Nath Mukherjee (13), Gobind Mohan Das v. Kunja Behary Dass (14), Amjad Ali v. Ali Hossain Johar (15), and Charn Chunder Dutt v. Sarat Chunder [illegible] (16), referred to.

[illegible] of the Sub-Judge,

[illegible]avarti,
[illegible] Bose,
[illegible]resh
[illegible]asu
[illegible]ar to [illegible]du in of [illegible]ount
[illegible]otes.
1933, [illegible]gainst of ancertain [illegible]wo suits that both [illegible]y 29, 1933.
by the [illegible]3. Certain issues were settled by the Court on those pleadings on August 30, 1933. The issues which are relevant for the purposes of the present rules are as follows :

"Issue No. 7. Is the business an ancestral joint Hindu family business? Was it inherited by the sons of Ananda Ganguly? If so, did the business go by the name of Ganguly Brothers ?"

'Issue No. 8. Did the father of defendants Nos. 7 to 14 inherit along with the brothers the karbar of Ananda Ganguly ? Did they and thereafter the present defendants form a joint Hindu family Was their karbar a joint family karbar and carried on in the name of Ganguly Brothers ?" and

"Issue No. 9. Did Ganeah and Rakhal and on Ganesh's death Lakshmi Narayan and Rakhal and Rakhal's death Lakshmi Narayan act jointly and severally as the karta of the joint family and of the joint family karbar ? Did they raise the loans for carrying on the joint family business or for the benefit of the joint family?"

The hearing of the suit commenced on May 7, 1934. On May 10, 1934, the plaintiff wanted to adduce evidence on these issues. The learned Judge by his order dated May 31, 1934, refused to take evidence on these issues on the objections of the defendants to the reception of this evidence. On the same day the plaintiffs in the two suits filed applications for amendment of the plaints. On June 7, 1934, the learned Judge rejected the plaintiffs' applications for amendment. The Rules Nos. 768 and 769 are directed against the orders of the Subordidate Judge, dated May 31, 1934, in the two suits, and Rules Nos. 192 and 193 are for the revision of the orders of the Subordinate Judge dated June 7, 1934 in the two suits.

The learned Subordinate Judge refused to allow the plaintiffs to adduce evidence on the aforesaid issues on the ground that the suits were based on the hand notes only on the allegation that the makers thereof were the kartas of a joint Hindu family and manager of a joint family business and that the loans were taken by the hand notes executed personally in their names for the purpose of their joint family and joint business and that the plaintiffs in their plaints did not make an alternative case for recovery of money lent on the basis of an agreement independently of the promissory notes. It may be stated here that the promissory note dated December 24, 1930, which is included in Sch. (kha) of the plaint in Suit No. 86 of 1933 is not admissible in evidence as it is not properly stamped and that the promissory notes which are mentioned in Sch. (ka) of the plaint in Suit No. 8 and the promissory notes mentioned in the plaint in Suit No. 85 of 1933 were executed by Rakhal Das Ganguli, the predecessor of opposite parties Nos. 7-14 and Lakshmi Narayan Ganguli opposite party No. 1 in their own names and not as kartas of a joint Hindu family or as manager of a joint family business. We are concerned with these promissory notes only in the present rules. The plaints in the two suits have been placed before us by the learned Advocates appearing for the petitioner in this case. It seems to us that the plaintiffs' case in substance is that though the managers of the joint family and the joint business executed the promissory notes in their own names, the loans were taken by the joint family through their managers for the purposes of the joint family and joint family business. It is no doubt true that it is not specifically stated in the plaint that the promissory notes were taken as securities for the loans advanced to the joint family.

From the allegations in the plaint it cannot be said that by the execution of the promissory notes the debt was entirely extinguished. Taking the plaint in each suit as a whole we are not in a position to say that the suits were simple suits for recovery of money on promissory notes only. If that were so, the allegations about the joint family, family necessity for the purposes of business would be meaningless. The impleading of the members of the family other than the executants of the promissory notes or their heirs would be also meaningless. The statement in para. 10 of the plaint, namely, that the defendants being members of a joint Hindu family and the debts having been incurred to meet the necessity of the said joint family karbar and the joint Hindu family, the defendants are liable for the said debts, would be meaningless. We are therefore of opinion that the suits are not simple suits on the promissory notes alone. On the other hand we are inclined to hold that the plaintiffs' suits must be taken as suits on the promissory notes as well as on the original consideration, that is, the debts which are alleged to have been incurred by the managers of the joint family for the purposes of joint family and joint business. In our opinion such a course is open to the plaintiffs. This view is supported by he decision of Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the case of Sadasuk Janki Das v. Sir Kishan Pershad (1). The promissory notes in question were no doubt signed by the kartas of the joint family in their own names and not as kartas of the joint family or as manager of joint family business. But the promissory notes being signed by the kartas in their own names is equally consistent either with a borrowing by the kartas for their own individual purpose or a borrowing for the purposes of the joint family and the joint family business: see Abdul Majid Khan v. Saraswatibai (2). This view of ours is further confirmed by the fact that the defendants did not raise any objection when the issues mentioned above were framed by the Court. The issues show the real nature of controversy between the parties, as indicated in the pleadings. It is not disputed that those issues relate to the plaintiffs' alternative claim on the original consideration, i. e., the debts for which the promissory notes are alleged to have been taken. It cannot therefore be said that when the plaintiff wanted to adduce evidence relating to those issues, the defendants were taken by surprise. It is not disputed before us that the evidence which the plaintiff wanted to adduce and which the learned Judge has rejected is relevant to the said issues. We are therefore of opinion that the learned Subordinate Judge was not justified in rejecting the evidence which was offered by the plaintiffs. We are further of opinion that in this case the learned Judge was not justified in rejecting the applications for amendment of the plaints: (1) The reasons given by the learned Judge in support of his order are:

(a) that

"the plaints are nothing but on the foot of the pronotes and the suits are only for recovery of money borrowed by executing those pro-notes."

(b) that

"the descriptions of the makers of the handnotes as kartas and the recitals or the purpose of the loan are immaterial and cannnot make the suits other than suits, on hand-notes."

(c) That there is no allegation of any obligation in the plaint apart from the obligation created by the hand-note"

Under O. VI, r. 17, Civil Procedure Code,

(1) 50-Ind. Cas. 216; A I R 1918 P C 146; 46 I A 33; 46 C 663; 29 C L J 340; 17 A L J 405; 25 M L T 258; 36 M L J 429; 21 Bom. L R 605; 1 U P L R (P. C.) 37; (1919) M W N 310; 23 C W N 937; 10 L W 143; 12 Bur. L T 160 (P. C.).

(2) 147 Ind. Cas. 1; A I R 1934 P C 4; 61 I A 90; 30 N L R 60; 10 O W N 1281; 6 R P C 48; 66 M L J 65; 39 L W 72; 58 C L J 548; (1934) A L J 79; 15 P L T 99; 35 P L R 10; 30 N L R 60; (1934) M W N 4; 15 N L J 1 (P. C.).

the Court may at any stage of the proceedings allow either party to amend his pleadings in such a manner and on such terms as may be just and all such amendments shall be made as may be necessary for the purposes of determining the real question in controversy between the parties. The learned Judge has observed that the issues mentioned above "were wrongly framed for want of discussion of the whole law on the subject." Therefore it is clear that plaintiffs' claim on the original consideration, i. e., debts for which the promissory notes were taken was already put into issue. Plaintiffs are therefore justified in thinking that the original plaints contained the alternative claim on the original consideration. When objection was taken by the defendants to the trial of those issues at the hearing the plaintiffs applied for amendment of the plaint in order that there might not be any dispute in future as regards the real nature of plaintiffs' claim in the suits, i. e., as regards the real nature of controversy between the parties. If the learned Judge's view of the matter, namely that the suits are only suits on the promissory notes be correct, then this is a fit case, in which the learned Subordiate Judge should have given leave to the plaintiff's to amend the plaints as prayed for by them.

It was, however, contended by the learned Counsel for the opposite parties that the implied promise to pay the original debts was merged in the express promise to pay as contained in the promissory notes and consequently the alterantive claim, namely, the claim on the original debt alleged to have been contracted by the kartas of the joint family for the purposes of joint family and joint business, is not sustainable in law. In the present proceeding it is not necessary to determine whether this contention is valid or not. It is enough to point out at the stage that

"where there is a loan independently of the note, the creditor is not debarred from suing on the original cause of action by the fact that the cause of action arose out of the same transaction in the course of which the promissory note was "executed" see Abdul Rabbani v. Shyamlal, 128 Ind. Cas. 194 (3)."

We are at the present stage of the case concerned only with the question whether the application for amendment should be allowed or not. It has been already pointed out that it is open to the plaintiffs to sue on the promissory notes and alternatively upon the consideration Sadasuk Janki Das v. Sir Kishan Rershad (1), and that the promissory notes being signed by the kartas in their own names is not inconsistent with borrowing for the purposes of the joint family and the joint family business Abdul Majid Khan v. Saraswatibai (2). Whether the plaintiffs will ultimately succeed on the amended plaint or not is entirely a different matter and the learned Subordinate Judge will have to come to a decision on the matter after taking the evidence which the parties may think proper to adduce before him. For the purposes of the present Rule it is enough to say that the entire controversy between the parties regarding plaintiffs' claim on the transactions in question should be adjudicated upon in the present litigation. It is also urged by the learned Counsel for the opposite parties that if the amendment be allowed, the opposite parties will be deprived of a valuable right which they have acquired by virtue of the operation of the law of limitation. If we are right in our view that the alternative claim on the original debt, that is, the original consideration, was already included in the plaints the question of limitation does not arise. If however by the amendment a new claim is being added, the amendment in this case should be allowed in view of the exceptional circumstances of this case, which we have already mentioned. It is however contended by the learned Counsel for the opposite parties that even if the learned Subordinate Judge is wrong, this Court has no power to revise his orders under s. 115, Civil Procedure Code. There has been a good deal of controversy as to the exact meaning of the words "acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity" as used in s. 115, cl. (c) of the Code. In the case of Rajah Amir Hossain Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (4), their Lordships of the Judicial Committee have observed as follows:

"It appears that they (i. e., the Judges of the lower Courts) had perfect jurisdiction to decide the question which was before them and they did decide it. Whether they decided it rightly or wrongly, they had jurisdiction to decide the case; and even if they decided wrongly, they did not exercise their jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity."

Again in the case of Balkrishan Udayar v. Vasudeva Aiyar (5), their Lordships of the Judicial Committee have observed that:

"Section 115 applies to jurisdiction alone, the irregular exercise or non-exercise of it, or the illegal

(3) 128 Ind. Cas. 194; 34 C W N 554.

(4) 11 C 6; 11 I A 237; 4 Sar. 559 (P. C.).

(5) 40 Ind. Cas. 650; A I R 1917 P. C. 71; 44 I A 261; 40 M 793; 15 A L J 645; 2 P L W 101; 33 M L J 69; 26 C L J 143; 19 Bom. L R 715; (1917) M W N 628; 6 L W 501; 22 C W N 50; 11 Bur. L T 48 (P. C.).

assumption of it. The section is not directed against conclusion of law or fact in which the question of jurisdiction is not involved."

In the case of Umed Mal v. Chand Mal (6), the Judicial Committee has however held that if a Court decide a case in the absence of a necessary party, that is material irregularity within the meaning of s. 115, Civil Procedure Code. Now if the third clause of s. 115, of the Code is not intended to have a meaning distinct from that of the other two clauses, it would not have been added to s. 622 of the Code of 1877 by the Amending Act of 1879. Raja Amir Hossain Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (4), simply decided what "illegally" or "material irregularity" is not. From Balkrishna Udayar v. Vasudeva Aiyar (5) it is not also easy to deduce any clear rule of construction of the third clause of s. 115 except the negative one that wrong conclusions of law or fact in which the question of jurisdiction is not involved are not included in it:

"All cases of 'acting illegally' are cases of error of law, though the converse is far from true. Any error in law which amounts to a usurpation of authority in the act done by the Court comes within cl. (c) if it is not already within cl. (a). In the broad sense of the word no Court has ever jurisdiction to make an order what in fact in law is wrong: see Hindley v. Joy Narayan (7), Umed Mal v. Chand Mal (6)."

seems to imply that cl. (c) may be applied when failure of justice is due to one or other defects of procedure. But does the said clause refer only to defects of procedure? Is it confined to error in the method or manner of trial only?

"Jurisdiction to try a suit does not mean jurisdiction to do anything whatever by order made in that suit; if it did an exception for material error in procedure strictly so-called would be almost ludicrous: Hindley v. Joy Narayan (7)."

Again the words "illegally and "material irregularity" cannot have the same meaning. If the words "acted with material irregularity" refer to irregularity in procedure what meaning is to be attached to the words "acted illegally"? In view of these difficulties it has been laid down in some cases by this Court that cl. (c) has been advisedly left in indefinite language in order to empower this Court to interfere and correct gross and palpable errors of Subordinate Courts for the ends of justice: see Mathura Nath Sarkar v. Umesh Chandra (8), Raghu Nath Gujrati v. Rai Chatraputt Singh (9), Jogunnessa Bibi v. Satish Chandra (10). Another branch of the argument of the learned Counsel for the opposite party in this connection is that even if this Court has power under s. 115 to revise the orders of the Subordinate Judge, the orders under discussion in these Rules are merely interlocutory orders and consequently they cannot be revised by this Court at this stage. It is argued that s. 115 of the Code is confined to a case which has been decided; in other words to a case where the rights of the parties have been determined. It is contended by the learned Counsel that as the rights of the parties have not yet been determined, this Court cannot interfere at this stage. Reliance was placed in support of this contention on the observations of Woodroffe, J., in the case of Chandi v. Kripal, 10 Ind. Cas. 308 (11). So far as this Court is concerned, it can be said to be now fairly established that this Court will not interfere with interlocutory orders unless an irreparable injury will be done and a miscarriage will inevitably issue if this Court holds its hand. If however irreparable injury would be caused to one of the litigants if the matter was not set right,

"this Court ought to intervene in the current litigation and disturb the normal progress of a case by revising an interlocutory order that has been passed by a Subordinate Court, see Salam Chand v. Bhagwan Das (12)."

It was, however, contended on behalf of the opposite parties that as these orders can be challenged in the appeal from the decree which may be passed in that suit, this Court should not interfere at this stage. Reliance was placed for this contention also on the decision of this Court in the case of Chandi v. Kirpal 10 Ind. Cas. 308 (11) cited above. It is true that in that case Woodroffe, J., observed that interlocutory orders did not come within the scope of s. 115 but the learned Judges who decided that case were of opinion that this Court would have power under s. 15, Charter Act, to interfere and to set aside the order of the Subordinate Courts. It is however argued that O. VI, r. 17 of the Code gives a discretion to the Court either to allow or reject the prayer for amendment and that

(6) 99 Ind Cas. 749; A I R 1926 P. C. 142; 53 I A 271; 3 O W N 989; 25 L W 90; 25 A L J 61; (1927) M W N 84; 38 M L T 43; 28 P L R 113; 31 C W N 413; 52 M L J 368; 45 C L J 274; 8 P L T 251; 29 Bom L R 755; 54 C 338 (P. C.).

(7) 54 Ind. Cas. 439; A I R 1920 Cal. 505; 46 C 962; 24 C W N 288.

(8) 1 C W N 626.

(9) 1 C W N 633.

(10) 83 Ind. Cas. 438; A I R 1924 Cal. 633; 51 C 690; 28 C W N 559; 39 C L J 434.

(11) 10 Ind. Cas. 308; 15 C W N 682

(12) 98 Ind. Cas. 615; A I R 1926 Cal 1149; 53 C 767; 30 C W N 907.

the Court is not bound to allow the amendment. But it has been pointed out by this Court in the case of Loke Nath Mukherjee v. Abani Nath Mukherjee (13) that "ordinarily the discretion of a judicial officer will not be reviewed by this Court in revision. But it is impossible to lay down a hard and fast rule. That in no instances will the discretion exercised by the judicial officer be reviewed either under s. 115 of the Code or s. 107, Government of India Act, or under the combined operation of the two sections."

Again there is a respectable body of authority at any rate in this Court in support of the view that under s. 107, Government of India Act (s. 15 of the Charter), this Court can interfere where irreparable injury will be done to one of the litigants or where there will be a failure of justice if the matter is not set right: Gobind Mohun Doss v. Kunja Behary Doss, 4 Ind. Cas. 380 (14), Amjad Ali v. Ali Hossain Johar, 6 Ind. Cas. 574 (15), Charu Chunder Dutt v. Sarat Chunder Singh, 8 Ind. Cas. 87 (16), Loke Nath Mukherjee v. Abani Nath Mukherjee (13).

The point for determination therefore is whether in this particular case any irreparable loss will be caused to the plaintiff if we do not interfere at this stage. It appears from para. 22 of the petition of the plaintiffs to this Court that one Pran Krishna Mallik, who is aged about 70 and who was the principal officer of the defendants and is therefore in a position to prove the account books which have now been produced in Court in spite of the objection of the opposite parties, has recovered recently from a serious attack of double pneumonia and that if his evidence be not taken now, it may be that, if the Court of appeal ultimately be of opinion that the plaintiffs were entitled to proceed with their claim on the original consideration in this litigation, the plaintiffs may not then get the benefit of the evidence of this witness having regard to his old age and the precarious condition of his health. In the counter-affidavit, which was filed by the opposite party, the statement that the said witness is aged about 70 was not denied and the answer to the plaintiffs' allegation that the witness had recently suffered from double pneumonia and was in a precarious condition of health is only evasive. In these circumstances we are of opinion that if this evidence be not taken now and if the witness dies in the meantime, the plaintiff will suffer irreparable loss. Further if the order of the learned Subordinate Judge be now allowed to stand and if the Court of appeal ultimately comes to the conclusion that the orders of the learned Judge are wrong, the suits will have to be remanded again to the trial Court for evidence and litigation will be protracted. If, on the other hand, this evidence be taken now and the Court of appeal ultimately holds that the evidence is irrelevant, the appeal Court would reject that evidence and proceed to hear the cases on the remaining portion of the evidence. It is, therefore, in our opinion desirable in the interest of the parties that this evidence should be taken at this stage so that there may not be any risk of a remand in future by the Appellate Court. We are therefore of opinion that in view of the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case we should interfere in this matter.

We accordingly make the Rule absolute, and set aside the orders of the learned Subordinate Judge against which these rules were directed. The learned Subordinate Judge is directed to amend the plaints as prayed for by the petitioners, to treat the suits not only as suits for recovery of money on promissory notes but also as suits for recovery of money on the original consideration and then to proceed to take evidence and decide the suits on that footing. The defendants will have an opportunity of filing additional written statement and raising additional issues, if they so like. Costs in these rules will abide the result, hearing fee being assessed at ten gold mohurs.

D. Rule made absolute.

(13) 149 Ind Cas. 923; A I R 1934 Cal. 102; 37 C W N 1093; 6 R C 662.
(14) 4 Ind. Cas. 380; 10 C L J 414; 14 C W N 153.
(15) 6 Ind. Cas. 574; 12 C L J 519; 15 C W N 353.
(16) 8 Ind. Cas. 87; 12 C L J 537.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Criminal Acquittal Appeal No. 281/4 of 1934
December 11, 1934
RUPCHAND AND C. MEHTA, A. J. Cs.
EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR
versus DULO—ACCUSED.

Criminal trial—Crown not calling prosecution witness examined by it in Committing Magistrate's Court, in Sessions—Sessions Judge thinking him to be material witness—Court's duty—Whether it can compel Crown to examine him as Crown witness or to tender him for cross-examination.

'Where the Crown has not examined a witness in the Sessions Court but had examined him in the Committing Magistrate's Court and the Sessions Judge thinks that he is a material witness, it is open to him either to draw an adverse inference against the Crown in not calling the witness or to examine him as a Court-witness. But he cannot compel the Crown either to examine him as a Crown witness or to tender him for cross-examination.

Mr. C. M. Lobo, for the Crown.

Mr. Hatim B. Tyebji, for the Accused.

Judgment.—This appeal has been filed by Government against the order passed by the First Additional Sessions Judge of Hyderabad, acquitting the accused of an offence under s. 304, Penal Code.

The prosecution story is somewhat as follows: On January 31, 1934, at mid-day, the deceased Umer found the buffaloes of the accused trespassing into Survey No. 357, which was being cultivated by him. He wanted to take the buffaloes to the pound, but they bolted. He followed them and after the buffaloes had passed by the village where both he and the accused lived, he shouted for help when two of his relatives, Saffar and Maluk, heard the shouts and went to his help. At the same time, the accused also went up in order to prevent the deceased from taking the buffaloes to the pound. The accused was armed with a hatchet. The accused and the deceased exchanged abuses, and then the accused gave a blow to the deceased with the hatchet on his head. Saffar and Maluk who were at a distance of about 50 paces saw this, but did not go near as the accused threatened them. The accused then left with the buffaloes. Other witnesses came up a little later. The deceased was conscious and he told them what had happened, and one of the witnesses was sent to make a report to the Police. The deceased lived the whole of that day and night and died the next morning before the arrival of the Police.

The evidence consists of: (a) direct evidence of Saffar and Maluk, and (b) the dying declaration said to have been made to them and to two other witnesses Muso and Loung before Umer breathed his last. There is no evidence of identification of footprints to connect the accused with the offence, and it is said that the ground was unimpressionable except at the place where the buffaloes had caused damage to the cultivation in Survey No. 357, and at that place the buffaloes were unattended. The case, therefore, depends solely upon the evidence of these four witnesses. They are closely related to the deceased. Saffar and Maluk are brothers. Their sister is the wife of one Dodo, brother of the deceased, and Photo who is the son of their sister has married the niece of the deceased. At the time of this incident Photo was living in the house of the deceased. Loung is the nephew of Umer. Muso is a cousin of the deceased and also a co-tenant with him in Survey No. 357. The defence set up by the accused was somewhat as follows: That the deceased was struck by some unknown person when no one was nearby. But as there was enmity between him and the deceased over some woman, he was suspected of the offence and was, therefore, implicated. The learned Additional Sessions Judge has accepted the defence and has held that the prosecution evidence is altogether false. Now, although we are not prepared to go to the length to which the learned Judge has gone, we think that the investigation in this case has been faulty and the evidence is not so convincing and free from doubt as to enable us to convict the accused. (After examining the evidence, His Lordship concluded). We think that, on the whole, this is not a case in which we should interfere with the order of acquittal, more so when two out of the three assessors and the leared Judge who saw the witnesses have not placed reliance on them. We accordingly dismiss this appeal.

Before we part with these papers, it is necessary to refer to an irregularity to which our attention has been invited. We find that one of the prosecution witnesses in the Committing Magistrate's Court was one Khan Muhammad. He was a partner with the deceased in the survey number trespassed upon. He was also the Patel of the village. He produced the accused before the Police and was, therefore, cited as a Crown witness. In the Committing Magistrate's Court, he gave certain evidence in favour of the accused with reference to an alleged enmity between the accused and the deceased. The Crown thought that he was not telling the truth on that point, and accordingly the learned Assistant Public Prosecutor did not consider it advisable to examine him as a witness in the Sessions Court. An application was made on behalf of the accused to the learned Additional Sessions Judge requesting him to compel the Crown to call Khan Muhammad as a Crown witness, and, in any case, to order that he be tendered for cross-examination, and the learned Judge acceded to this request. The result was that Khan Muhammad was examined as a Crown witness and his evidence has been made use of by the learned Judge in disbelieving the rest of the prosecution evidence.

We are afraid that the learned Judge's order was clearly erroneous. If the Crown had not called Khan Muhammad as a Crown witness, and if the learned Judge thought that he was a material witness, it was open to him either to draw an adverse inference against the Crown in not calling the witness or to examine him as a court witness. But he could not compel the Crown either to examine Khan Muhammad as a Crown witness or to tender him for cross-examination.

D. Order accordingly.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 1307 of 1933
May 8, 1934,
ABDUL RASHID, J.
PHUL CHAND—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
SHUGAN CHAND—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Mortgage—Subsequent mortgagee having notice of previous mortgage—Whether can challenge terms of previous mortgage.

In the case of mortgages, the subsequent mortgagee does not become the absolute owner and he is the representative-in-interest of the mortgagor only to this extent that he is entitled to redeem the previous mortgage. If the previous mortgage is not invalid or void, he cannot challenge the terms thereof on the ground that interest is excessive or penal as he entered into the subsequent mortgage with his eyes open. The mortgagor in such cases may be entitled to certain reliefs on equitable considerations but no such considerations prevail in favour of the subsequent mortgagees Man Kaur v Ishar Das (6) and Izzatunnissa Begam v. Pertap Singh (7), distnguished.

S. C. A. from the decree of the Senior Sub-Judge, Karnal, Dated March 18, 1933.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Appellant.

Mr. Ajit Ram, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—The facts bearing on the question of law involved in this appeal may be shortly stated. On February 4, 1925, Man Chand, mortgaged a house to Phul Chand plaintiff-appellant for Rs. 400. On December 15, 1925, he executed another mortgage-deed in favour of Phul Chand on the security of the same house. On June 29, 1926, Mam Chand, executed a mortgaged-deed in favour of Shugan, Chand defendant-respondent, for Rs. 500, and it was mentioned in this mortgage-deed that the mortgage in question would be subject to the rights of the prior mortgagee. Phul Chand. On July 9, 1928, Shugan Chand instituted a suit against Phul Chand for recovery of Rs. 670 on the basis of the mortgage-deed, dated June 29, 1926, and impleaded Mam Chand as well as Phul Chand as defendants. He admitted the prior mortgages in favour of Phul Chand, and stated that the money due to him should be paid after the principal and interest on the mortgages in favour of Phul Chand had been paid off. On September 26, 1930, the house in dispute was sold for Rs. 2,025 in execution of the decree in favour of Shugan Chand. The Executing Court paid Rs. 1,510-14-6 to the plaintiff, Phul Chand, and the balance amounting to Rs. 1,412-13-6 was paid to Shugan Chand. The objection of Phul Chand and his appeal to the District Judge regarding the method of distribution were dismissed. Thereupon, Phul Chand brought the present suit for recovery of Rs. 299-11-0 against Shugan Chand, the subsequent mortgagee. The defendant pleaded, inter alia, that stipulations in the previous mortgages regarding the enhanced rate of interest and compound interest were penal in their nature, and that the plaintiff was, therefore, not entitled to any decree. The plaintiff in reply pleaded that the defendant was estopped from questioning the validity of the stipulation regarding rate of interest in the previous mortgages as a subsequent mortgagee was not entitled to raise such pleas after purchasing mortgagee rights with full knowledge of the prior mortgages. The trial Court and the lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit of the plaintiff who has come up in second appeal to this Court.

It was strenuously urged on behalf of the appellant that a mortgagor is entitled to raise equitable pleas regarding the rate of interest, but that the subsequent mortgagee cannot take advantage of such pleas. It was maintained that the subsequent mortgagee is not the succassor-in-interest of the mortgagor for all purposes, that he may be able to plead that the previous mortgage was absolutely void, but he cannot be allowed to urge that the rate of interest was excessive or that the stipulation regarding interest amounted to a stipulation by way of penalty. It was held in Chiranji

Lal v. Dost Mohamod (1), that it would not be open to the plaintiff to plead that a mortgage contract is bad for undue influence where he is only a donee from the mortgagor's widow. He is not entitled to the equities which existed in favour of the mortgagor. In a case reported as Rahmat Ali v. Shadi Ram (2), it was observed that subsequent mortgagees with notice of the previous mortgage in favour of the plaintiff were not entitled to resist the suit upon the ground that the conditions entered in the plaintiff's mortgage operated as a clog. The following observations from a Division Bench ruling of this Court reported as Aziz Khan v. Duni Chand, 20 Ind. Cas. 812 (3), may be quoted in extenso:

"Moreover, it must not be forgotten that the plaintiffs are not the original mortgagors but speculators who have bought on the chance of getting redemption on easy terms It is exceedingly doubtful whether, after acquiring a mortgage which on the face of it, and as it stood at the time of their purchase, contained terms which might make redemption practically valueless to them, they can be permitted to set up, as their vendor might have done, a claim that the bargain was brought about by the exercise of undue influence. No authority has been cited in support of such a position."

Similar observations occur in Milkhi v. Fattu (4), and Ral'a v. Amin Chand (5). On behalf of the respondent it was urged that under O. XXXIV, r.13, when mortgaged property has been sold the proceeds shall be applied in payment of whatever is due to the prior mortgagee on account of the prior mortgage and of costs properly incurred in connection therewith. It was contended that the words "whatever is due to the prior mortgagee" mean whatever is validly and legally due, and that as in the present case both the lower Court had held that the stipulations with regard to the payment of enhanced interest were in the nature of a penalty, the amount due on account of interest cannot be said to be validly due to the prior mortgagee. It was also contended that under s. 91, Transfer of Property Act, the subsequent mortgagee was entitled to redeem the land from the prior mortgagee, and therefore he was the representative-in-interest of the mortgagor for all purposes. Reliance was placed on Man Kaur v. Ishar Das (6), and Izzatunnissa Begam v. Pertap Singh (7), in this connection. These rulings are, however, clearly distinguishable from the present case: Man Kaur v. Ishar Das (6), merely laid down that a purchaser at a Court sale buys the property with all risks and with all defects in the judgment-debtor's title except where it is found that the latter had no saleable interest at all. In connection, therefore, with the sale of immovable property subject to an incumbrance the auction-purchaser is entitled to contest the factum and the validity of the incumbrance.

There is no rule of estoppel which can prevent him from impeaching the charge on the property. Similar observations occur in the Privy Council ruling referred to above. It must, however, be remembered that the purchaser in an auction-sale becames the absolute owner of the property as soon as the sale in his favour in confirmed, and the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder there after cannot claim any title in the property sold. In the case of mortgages, the subsequent mortgagee does not become the absolute owner and he is the representative-in-interest of the mortgagor only to this extent that he is entitled to redeem the previous mortgage. If the previous mortgage is not invalid or void, he cannot challenge the terms thereof on the ground that interest is excessive or penal as he entered into the subsequent mortgage with his eyes open. The mortgagor in such cases may be entitled to certain reliefs on equitable considerations but, no such considerations prevail in favour of the subsequent mortgagee. The facts of the present case establish beyond doubt that the respondent had notice of the mortgages in favour of the appellant. It was open to him to make due inquiry into the terms of these mortgages, and to decline to enter into a subsequent mortgage if he considered the terms of the prior mortgages onerous or penal.

For the foregoing reasons I accept the appeal and decree the plaintiff's claim. Taking all the circumstances into account I leave the parties to bear their own costs throughout.

N. Appeal accepted.

(1) 79 Ind. Cas 955; A I R 1923 Lah. 634.
(2) 75 Ind. Cas. 877; A I R 1925 Lah. 45.
(3) 20 Ind. Cas. 812.
(4) 40 P L R 1903.
(5) 126 P L R 1908.
(6) 120 Ind. Cas. 162; 11 Lah. 90; A I R 1930 Lah 40; Ind. Rul. (1930) Lah. 2; 31 P L R 358.
(7) 3 Ind. Cas. 793; 31 A 583; 36 I A 203; 13 C W N 1143; 10 C L J 313; 6 A L J 817; 11 Bom. L R 1220; 6 M L T 277; 19 M L J 682 (P C).

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Civil Revision Application No. 105 of 1934

March 28, 1935

NIAMAT-ULLAH AND RACHHPAL SINGH, JJ.

Musammat EHATISHAMMUNNISA AND ANOTHER—APPLICANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MIR HADI ALI AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTY—RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 141, O. XXXIII, r. 1, Explanation—Application to file an application for succession certificate as pauper—Civil Procedure Code, whether applicable—Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), s. 379.

The applicants cannot be declared paupers, unless the requirements of the Explanation to r 1, O. XXXIII, are strictly fulfilled. The deposit under s. 379, Succession Act, of a sum equal to the fee payable on a succession certificate cannot be considered to be court-fee payable on the application for a succession certificate (which corresponds to a plaint in a suit). This deposit is made necessary to ensure payment of court-fee when the succession certificate is to be issued. As a matter of fact, the court-fee on such certificate is payable under the Court Fees Act, Sch. I Art. 12, and is paid when the certificate is issued, i e., after the termination of proceedings under the Succession Act. The test of pauperism, laid down by the explanation to r. 1, O. XXXIII, Civil Procedure Code, therefore, is not that the applicants have no means of paying the sum required to be deposited under s. 379, Succession Act, but that they have no means of paying the court-fee on the application for a succession certificate, that is, a trifling amount of eight annas.

[Case-law considered.]

Quaers:—Whether in view of legistative changes embodying the provisions for grant of succession certificates in the Succession Act, the general provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure applies by virtue of s. 141 of the Code to a Court sitting as a Court administering the Succession Certificate Act.

C. R. App. from the decision of the District Judge of Budaun, dated January 19, 1934.

Mr. G. S. Pathak, for the Applicant:

Mr. Shiva Prasad Sinha, for the Opposite Parties.

Niamatullah, J.—This revision raises a question of a somewhat unusual character. The applicants applied in the Court of the District Judge, Budaun, for a succession certificate in respect of debts due to their deceased mother, Mehdi Begum. It was stated in the application that the petitioners were paupers and had no funds to pay the fee prescribed for the grant of a certificate for collection of the debts of the deceased. In effect, the applicants prayed that they be exempted from the rule contained in s. 379, Indian Succession Act, which requires the deposit of a sum equal to the fee payable under the Court Fees Act in respect of the certificate on an application being made therefor. The learned District Judge dismissed the application holding that the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, relating to suits and appeals in forma pauperis do not apply to proceedings for grant of a succession certificate under the Indian Succession Act. The order of the learned District Judge is challenged in revision.

It is argued, on the authority of s. 141, Civil Procedure Code, that the procedure prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure for suits is applicable to all proceedings in any Court of civil jurisdiction and that therefore, O. XXXIII, which provides for pauper suits, is applicable to applications for grant of succession certificates. Assuming that s. 141, Civil Procedure Code, makes every part of the Code applicable to proceedings in a Court of civil jurisdiction, it seems to me that there is an insurmountable difficulty in acceding to the prayer of the applicants Order XXXIII, r. 1, provides that, subject to certain provisions, any suit may be instituted by a pauper. The explanation appended to that rule defines a pauper as a person who > "is not possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the fee prescribed by law for the plaint in such suit, or where no such fee is prescribed, when he is not entitled to property worth Rs. 100 other than his necessary apparels and the subject-matter of the suit."

Assuming that proceedings for grant of a succession certificate can be taken to be a suit under O. XXXIII read with s. 141, the application for a succession certificate is the plaint. The applicants can be considered to be paupers only if they are not possessed of sufficient means to enable them to pay the fee prescribed by law for the application for succession certificate. In other words, unless they can show that they were not possessed of even 8 annas, they cannot be considered to be "paupers" as defined in the Explanation. This is not a case in which no court-fee is payable on the plaint (in this case the application for the certificate) so that they may be treated as paupers because they are not possessed of property worth Rs. 100. It was pointed out that under s. 379, Indian Succession Act,

> "every application for a certificate . . . . . shall be accompanied by a deposit of a sum equal to the fee payable under the Court Fees Act, 1870, in respect of the certificate . . . . ."

and an attempt was made to argue tha if the applicants for a succession certificat are not possessed of sufficient means t enable them to deposit the sum equal to the prescribed court-fee, they should be treated as "pauper" in terms of the explanation above referred to. Reference was also made to O. XXXIII, r. 8, which provides that, if the application for permission to sue as a pauper is granted, the plaintiff is not liable to pay any court-fee (other than fee payable for service of process) in respect of any petition, appointment of a pleader or other proceedings connected with the suit. According to Sch. I of the Court Fees Act, ad valorem fees are payable on a number of documents, including succession certificates. It is said that once the applicants are declared paupers, they will be exempt from payment of court-fee on the succession certificate. This contention may be correct; but the initial difficulty is that the applicants cannot be declared paupers, unless the requirements of the Explanation to r. 1, O. XXXIII, are strictly fulfilled. The deposit under s. 379, Indian Succession Act, of a sum equal to the fee payable on a succession certificate cannot be considered to be court-fee payable on the application for a succession certificate (which corresponds to a plaint in a suit). This deposit is made necessary to ensure payment of court-fee when the succession certificate is to be issued. As a matter of fact, the court-fee on such certificate is payable under the Court Fees Act, Sch. I, Art. 12, and is paid when the certificate is issued, i. e., after the termination of proceedings under the Indian Succession Act. The test of pauperism, laid down by the Explanation to r. 1, O. XXXIII, Civil Procedure Code, is, therefore, not that the applicants have no means of paying the sum required to be deposited under s. 379, Indian Succession Act, but that they have no means of paying the court-fee on the application for a succession certificate, that is, a trifling amount of eight annas.

The applicants claim as heirs of the deceased lady; and assuming that, for the purposes of succession certificate, their position as heirs alone has to be considered and their own means have to be disregarded, they must show that, as heirs of the deceased, they have no means of paying even eight annas. As a matter of fact, the application for grant of a succession certificate was stamped, as required by the Court Fees Act. It is certainly conceivable that the legal representatives of a deceased person may not be in possession of assets equal to the value of the stamp payable on a mere application. In an ordinary case, however, it will be difficult for an applicant for succession certificate claiming as an heir to satisfy the Court that, as person representing the estate of the deceased, he has no means of paying even that amount.

In the matter of the will of Dawubai (1) was strongly relied upon by learned Advocate for the applicants. That was a case in which a probate had been applied for in forma pauperis. Sterling, J., reluctantly admitted the application and was greatly influenced by the equities of the case. He observed as follows:—

"I had, on a previous occasion, refused to accept such a petition, as no precedent was in existence for such a course being pursued, but in the present instance the matter was pressed upon me as one of great hardship, as the deceased had during her lifetime filed a suit to recover the property in question, and as she was a Christian, that suit must now be dismissed unless the applicant could obtain probate of her will. I therefore allowed the petition to be interpreted and affirmed gratis, so that the matter might be set down as a pauper petition and the points at issue be fully discussed."

The learned Judge then proceeded to discuss the question whether a person who has been allowed to apply for a probate in forma pauperis is exempt from payment of the court-fee prescribed for a probate, and answered it in the affirmative. He referred to s. 647, Civil Procedure Code, (141 of the present Code), and applied Chap. XXVI (O. XXXIII) of the present Code. He then referred to s. 410 (XXXIII r. 8), Civil Procedure Code, which exempts a person alowed to sue in forma pauperis from payment of all court-fees, except those payable for service of process. The essential distinction between that case and the one before us lies in the fact that Sterling, J. accepted the application for probate as one made by pauper, which implied that permission to prosecute it as a pauper had already been granted. The reasoning which followed on that assumption clearly flows from s. 647 (now s. 141) and s. 410 (now O. XXXIII, r. 8), which were held to be applicable. In the present case, the learned District Judge had to consider at the threshold of the case whether the applicant could be permitted to apply in forma pauperis. Though he has not referred to the Explanation to O. XXXIII, r. 1, and has thrown out the application on the ground that the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, relating to pauper suits do not apply to such applications, the operative part of his order can be supported on the grounds herein stated. It cannot be said that he failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in him by law.

(1) 18 B 237.

I have so far assumed that by virtue of s. 141, Civil Procedure Code, all the provisions of that Code apply to proceedings for grant of succession certificates. There is some authority against that general assumption. A Division Bench of this Court held in Kanhaiya v. Kanhaiya Lal (2), that, except in so far as is expressly provided by the Act itself, the general provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure cannot be deemed to be applicable by virtue of s. 141 of the Code to a Court sitting as a Court administering the Succession Certificate Act. Accordingly it was held that no Receiver could be appointed in proceedings taken for the grant of succession certificates. Some legislative changes have taken place since this decision. The provisions for grant of succession certificates are now embodied in the Indian Succession Act: and it may be that a different view is now permissible. I express no decisive opinion on this point and prefer to rest my decision on the assumption that the entire Civil Procedure Code is applicable, as is contended for by the applicants. As already held, that assumption does not enable the applicants to get over the difficulty created by the definition of "pauper" given in Explanation to O. XXXIII, r. 1, Civil Procedure Code.

The result is that I would dismiss this application with costs.

Rachhpal Singh, J.—I agree.

By the Court.—The application is dismissed with costs.

D. Application dismissed.

(2) 79 Ind. Cas. 363; 46 A 372; A I R 1924 All. 376; 22 A L J 345; L R 5 A 238 Civ.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Criminal Revision Petition No. 1185 of 1934

February 7, 1935

S. K. GHOSE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

BIRENDRA NATH BAKSHI—ACCUSED—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 514—Bail bond—Denial of execution of bond—Forfeiture, when can be ordered—Evidence of execution—Necessity of.

Where a person denies the execution of a bail bond and the Magistrate without taking any evidence passes orders forfeiting the bond, the orders cannot be supported as it is necessary that there should be some evidence to prove that the bond was executed by him.

Mr. Benode Lal Ghose, for the Petitioner.

Henderson, J.—This is an application against an order of the learned Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate forfeiting a bail bond which is said to have been executed by the petitioner. The petitioner himself denied that he had ever executed the bond. The Magistrate had an inquiry made by the Police, which did not really carry the matter very far. As a result the Magistrate passed an order forfeiting the bond without giving any reasons. In his explanation he says that the petitioner was picked out in a test indentification held by the inquiring Police Officer. The Magistrate's order cannot possibly be supported. Since the petitioner denied the execution of the bond it was obviously necessary that there should be some evidence to prove that he did. The Magistrate took no evidence at all, with the result that he based his order on nothing. The Rule must, therefore, be made absolute. The Magistrate's order is set aside and anything paid in compliance with it will be refunded to the petitioner.

S. K. Ghose, J.—I agree.

N. Rule made absolute.

END OF VOLUME 155.

GENERAL INDEX

VOLUME 155—1935.

REPORTS SECTION.

Abadi. See Custom (Punjab) 342

——— Forfeiture by reason of disclaimer—Whether operates.

Forfeiture by reason of disclaimer is an incident that attaches to tenancy but it cannot be extended to the non-proprietors' tenure of house in the "abadi" merely by analogy. GANGA BISHAN-KUNJ BIHARI LAL v. M. FAZAL KARIM Lah. 342 ——— Parti land—Ancestor of tenant planting tree—Tenant cutting it down—Custom—Burden of proof—Custom not proved—Right of zemindar to tree.

It is usual that in cases where the tenant cuts down a tree planted by his ancestor on a parti land in abadi, there is evidence of custom and a finding of custom, and it lies on the defendants (tenants) to plead and prove a custom by which they could be entitled to take the wood of this tree. In the absence of any proof of custom, prima facie the presumption is in favour of the zemindar The zamindar is the owner of the soil of a parti land and presumably the tree which is grown on that parti land and attached to the soil is transferable with a transfer of land and therefore, the tree goes with the land and must be regarded as pertaining to the land. In the absence, therefore, of a pleading and proof that the defendants had a right to cut the tree, it must be held that the defendants had no such right. RAM CHARAN v. GAJADHAR All. 1031 ——— -Person not owner of village site—Whether shows he is tenant.

It does not follow from the fact that a person is not owner of the village site in the abadi that he is a tenant. GANGA BISHAN-KUNJ BIHARI LAL v. M. FAZAL KARIM Lah. 342

Abatement—Appellant minor—Next friend parda nashin lady—Respondent dying in different district—Abatement, if should be set aside.

Where the appellant is a minor residing in another district and his next friend is a pardanashin woman and the death of the respondent takes place in a different district, there is sufficient cause to set aside the abatement. ABDUL RAFI KHAN v. LAKSHMI CHAND Lah 875

Accounts—Day book—Lump sum debited after several months—If a day book—Value to be attached.

The very object of accounts being kept, especially of day books, is the value that is to be attached to the entries made as each event happened. It is on the likelihood of such entries being made that the value of accounts depends But if an argument is advanced that though a drawing is made from the partnership account, it is not debited in the day-book at the time when it is drawn but only a lump sum is debited several months afterwards, it is not a proper day book; it ceases to be such an account book to which Courts are accustomed to attach value. SIVAGNANATHAMMAL v. NALLAPERUMAL PILLAI Mad. 783

——— Non-production of accounts — Presumption—Assets not revealed—Power to direct payment of a share of value of assets.

Where a party to a partition suit suppresses his accounts or has falsified them, the Court will make unfavourable presumptions against him.

Where the defendant has suppressed his accounts and the arbitrators have no means of ascertaining the exact nature of the oustandings, they will be justified in directing the defendant to pay the plaintiff's share of the estimated value of the outstandings without dividing the assets between them. CHIDAMBARAM CHETTIAR v. AYYAPPA CHETTIAR Mad. 1059

——— Suit for breach of trust against trustee—Nature of account to be taken See Trusts Act, 1882, ss. 19, 23, 57, 62 359

——— Uncertain and indefinite accounts—Value of.

The party who relies upon uncertain and indefinite accounts and accounts which on the face of the argument do not represent the actual transaction that took place must fail. SIVAGNANATHAMMAL v. NALLAPERUMAL PILLAI Mad. 783

Acts—General.

Act 1855—XIII. See FATAL ACCIDENTS ACT.
—— 1857—VI. See PUBLIC PURPOSES LAND ACQUISITION ACT.
—— 1860—XLV. See PENAL CODE.
—— 1861—V. See POLICE ACT.
—— 1863—XXII. See WORKS OF PUBLIC UTILITY COMPANIES ACT.
—— 1867—III See PUBLIC GAMBLING ACT.
—— 1867—XXV. See PRESS AND REGISTRATION OF BOOKS ACT.
—— 1870—VII See COURT FEES ACT.
—— 1872—I. See EVIDENCE ACT.
—— 1872—IX. See CONTRACT ACT.
—— 1877—I See SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT.
—— 1879—XVIII. See LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT.
—— 1881—XXVI. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS ACT.
—— 1882—II See TRUSTS ACT.
—— 1882—IV. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT.
—— 1882—V. See EASEMENTS ACT.
—— 1887—VII. See SUITS VALUATION ACT.
—— 1887—IX. See PROVINCIAL SMALL CAUSE COURTS ACT.
—— 1890—VIII. See GUARDIANS AND WARDS ACT.
—— 1890—IX. See RAILWAYS ACT.
—— 1893—IV. See PARTITION ACT.
—— 1894—I. See LAND ACQUISITION ACT.
—— 1897—X. See GENERAL CLAUSES ACT.
—— 1898—V. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE.
—— 1899—II. See STAMP ACT.
—— 1899—IX. See ARBITRATION ACT.
—— 1903—XV. See EXTRADITION ACT.
—— 1908—V. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE.
—— 1908—IX. See LIMITATION ACT.

Acts—General—contd.

Act 1908—XVI. See Registration Act.
—— 1910—IX. See Electricity Act.
—— 1911—II. See Patents and Designs Act.
—— 1911—VIII. See Army Act.
—— 1913—VI. See Mussalman Wakf Validating Act
—— 1913—VII. See Companies Act.
—— 1920—IV. See Charitable and Religious Trusts Act.
—— 1920—V. See Provincial Insolvency Act.
—— 1922— See Indian States (Protection Against Disaffection) Act.
—— 1922—XI See Income Tax Act.
—— 1924—II. See Cantonments Act.
—— 1925—XIX. See Provident Funds Act.
—— 1925—XXXIX. See Succession Act.
—— 1929—II. See Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act.
—— 1929—XXI See Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act.
—— 1930—II. See Dangerous Drugs Act.
—— 1933—II. See C. P. Debt Conciliation Act.

Acts—Bengal.

Act 1880—IX. See Bengal Cess Act.
—— 1885—VIII. See Bengal Tenancy Act.
—— 1887—XII. See Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Act.
—— 1911—V. See Calcutta Improvement Act.
—— 1913—III See Bengal Public Demands Recovery Act.
—— 1932—V. See Bengal Motor Vehicles Act.

Acts—Bihar and Orissa.

Act 1914—IV. See Bihar and Orissa Public Demands Recovery Act.

Acts—Bombay.

Act 1874—III. See Bombay Hereditory Offices Act.
—— 1922—XIV. See Bombay Cotton Contracts Act.
—— 1929—IV. See Karachi Small Causes Courts Act.

Act—Burma.

Act 1898—III. See Burma Municipal Act.

Act—C. P.

—— 1917—II. See C. P. Land Revenue Act.
—— 1920—I. See C. P. Tenancy Act.

Acts—Madras.

Act 1888—I. See Madras Abkari Act.
—— 1900—I. See Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act.
—— 1920—XIV. See Madras Local Boards Act.
—— 1930—III. See Madras Gaming Act.

Acts—Punjab.

Act 1887—XVI. See Punjab Tenancy Act.
—— 1887—XVII. See Punjab Land Revenue Act.
—— 1900—XIII. See Punjab Alienation of Land Act.
—— 1903—II. See Punjab Court of Wards Act.
—— 1911—III. See Punjab Municipal Act.
—— 1913—I. See Punjab Pre-emption Act.
—— 1918—VI. See Punjab Courts Act.
—— 1920—I. See Punjab Limitation (Custom) Act.
—— 1925—VIII. See Sikh Gurdwaras Act.

Acts U. P.

Act 1869—I. See Oudh Estates Act.
—— 1886—XXII. See Oudh Rent Act.
—— 1896—II. See U. P. Honorary Munsifs Act.

Acts U. P.—contd.

Act 1901—III. See U. P. Land Revenue Act.
—— 1910—IV. See U. P. Excise Act.
—— 1914—I. See U. P. Local Rates Act.
—— 1916—II. See U. P. Municipalities Act.
—— 1919—VIII See U. P. Town Improvement Act.
—— 1922—X. See U. P. District Boards Act.
—— 1925—IV. See Oudh Courts Act.
—— 1926—III. See Agra Tenancy Act.

Ordinance.

Ordi 1932—X. See Special Powers Ordinance.

Regulations.

Regu 1806—XVII. See Bengal Land (Redemption and Foreclosure) Regulation.
—— 1819—VIII. See Bengal Patni Taluqs Regulation.

Statutes.

Stat. 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. V, Ch. 46). See Copyright Act.
—— 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. V, c 61). See Government of India Act.

Administration—Letters of administration, to whom granted. Ma E Tha v. Ma Thein Kin Rang. 990

Adverse possession. See Co-sharer 987

——— Actual possession, necessity of, to sustain claim to land by limitation—Land under water and unfit for occupation—Effect—Survey of land—Presumption of occupation by Government at one point of time—Whether arises. Krishna Kuar v. Secretary of State for India in Council Pat. 122

——— One co-owner, when can claim adverse possession against another. Rajana v. Musaheb Ali Oudh 23

——— Plea of—Whether mixed question of law and fact—Plea not advanced specifically in trial Court—Whether can be entertained in appellate stage—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 100.

In order to sustain a claim to land by limitation under the Indian Act, there must be actual possession of a person claiming as of right by himself or by persons deriving title from him. In a suit for recovery of possession it is for the defendant to show that he had at sometime been in adverse possession of the land in suit continuously for a period of 12 years.

A certain land was under water and unfit for occupation from 1911 to 1916 and there was no evidence as to possession before 1911. The most that could be said was that the disputed land having been surveyed as a part of a village in 1898 a presumption arose that in that year the lands were capable of occupation and were in fact occupied by or on behalf of the Secretary of State :

Held, that from that evidence regarding the state of things at one point of time, it could not be presumed that the Secretary of State (defendant) had adverse possession for a period of 12 years and hence the plaintiff should succeed in the suit on proof of his title.

There can be no adverse possession by one co-owner against another until there is an ouster or something equivalent to an ouster of the latter.

The plea of adverse possession is a mixed question of law and fact and where a person wants to base his title on it, he should specifically advance the plea in the trial Court and an issue framed and finding given. Unless it is done, the plea is Adverse possession.—concld.

untenable and cannot be entertained. RAJANA v. MUSAHEB ALI Oudh 23 Agency, doctrine of—Applicability. SEE Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s. 92 905
Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926), ss. 99, 230, 267—Bench sitting in exercise of special jurisdiction conferred by s 267—Conflicting opinions expressed by single Judge of High Court sitting in appeal from Civil Court order, and by Revenue Court—Doubt as to jurisdiction—Reference under s. 267—Competency of—Previous opinion of single Judge—Whether operates as bar.
A single Judge of the High Court sitting in appeal or revision from the order of a subordinate Civil Court is a Civil Court within the meaning of s. 267, Agra Tenancy Act For the purposes of s. 267, Agra Tenancy Act, it does not matter that doubt as to jurisdiction arises from conflicting opinions expressed by a Court of Appeal in the exercise of its jurisdiction as a Civil Court, and by the Revenue Court. Once there is a doubt created by conflicting orders of Civil and Revenue Courts the special jurisdiction of the High Court conferred by s. 237 of the Agra Tenancy Act can be invoked and can be exercised with the result stated in sub-s. (5), s. 267. Where a Bench is sitting in the exercise of a special jurisdiction conferred by s. 267, a reference to that Court is competent and the previous order of a single Judge of the High Court on the question of jurisdiction will not be a bar to the exercise of the special jurisdiction by the Bench when the doubt as to jurisdiction has arisen from conflicting opinions expressed by the Single Judge sitting in appeal from the order of a Subordinate Civil Court, and by a Revenue Court. QUDSIA JAN v. ZAHID HUSAIN All. 38
——— s. 121. SEE U. P. Land Revenue Act, 1901, s 42 1097
——— ss. 138, 139—Rent payable by division of produce—Suit for arrears of rent—Parties failing to take steps under ss. 138 and 139 for division—Maintainability of suit.
There is nothing in the provisions of ss. 138 and 139, Agra Tenancy Act, which may bar a suit for recovery of arrears of rent even if either of the parties fail to take necessary steps under ss. 138 and 139 for the division of the produce where the rent is taken by division or for estimate or appraisement of the standing crops. JADU DUBE v. DASRATH RAI All. 230 ——— ss. 196, 197 (a) (b)—Planting of grove—Whether changes nature of occupancy holding—Grove, if rendered capable of being mortgaged—Sale in execution of mortgage decree—Legality of.
The planting of a grove may change the nature of the occupancy holding and render the grove capable of being mortgaged and of being sold in execution sale on a mortgage decree. Where trees have been standing for a very long time on a holding, when the zemindar gives implied permission that the tenant should plant a grove on a particular number of his occupancy holding, the zemindar must have consented to the alteration of the tenure of that number from an occupancy tenure to a grove tenure and that number becomes capable of mortgage and can be sold in execution of a mortgage decree RAM CHANDRA v. HUB LAL All. 358
——— s 225—Interest—Court, if bound to give 12 per cent. interest only up to date of suit—Interest pendente lite and future interest is governed by Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 34.
Under the provisions of s. 225, Agra Tenancy Act a co-sharer is entitled to claim interest at the rate of 1 per cent. per mensem. The Court is, therefore, bound to award him interest at 12 per cent. per annum up to the date of the suit. As regards the interest pendente lite and future, the case is governed by s. 34, Civil Procedure Code, which is applicable to suits in the Revenue Court as well, and under that section, in addition to any interest adjudged on the principal sum for any period prior to the institution of the suit, the Court may order interest at such rate as it deems reasonable to be paid on the principal sum adjudged from the date of the suit to the date of the decree, as well as further interest from the date of the decree till the date of realization. It is, therefore, incumbent on the Court to fix rates for pendente lite and future interest if it decides to award such interests; but it is not obligatory on the Court to award interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, just as it is not obligatory on a Court to award pendente lite and future interest at the contractual rate in case of simple money debts. LALLU SINGH v. CHANDER SEN All. 943 F. B.
——— s. 226 (2). SEE Agra Tenancy Act, 1926, s. 227 653
——— ss. 227, 226 (2)—Co-sharer—Whether can be held accountable for profits not collected by him—Collecting co-sharer—Liability of.
There is no provision in s. 227, Agra Tenancy Act, for a co-sharer being held accountable for profits that he has not collected, and that applies in s. 226 (2) only in the case of a lambardar, the reason being that a co-sharer has no duty to collect for other co-sharers. Section 227 is not intended to convey the meaning that the collecting co-sharer is liable to share arrears rateably with co-sharers who do not collect. CHATAR SEN v. MITTER SEN All. 653
——— s. 230. SEE Agra Tenancy Act, 1926, s. 99 38
——— s. 238. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 9 37
——— s. 267. SEE Agra Tenancy Act, 1926, s. 99 38
Allahabad High Court Rules, Chap. XIX, r. 27. SEE Insolvency 661
Appeal—Credibility of witness depending on his demeanour—Appellate Court, when can come to different conclusion from that of trial Court.
When a Court has got to deal with a pure question of credibility of witnesses, great weight ought necessarily to be given to the judgment of the Judge, who saw the witnesses. But there may be other circumstances and facts, quite apart from manner and demeanour, which may show whether a statement can be believed or not. These circumstances and facts may justify the Appellate Court in differing from the trial Court even on a question of fact, turning on the question of credibility of witnesses whom the Appellate Court has not seen. GOLAM MUSTAPHA v HANUMANDAS MUNDRA Cal. 321 ———Findings of trial Court should not be disturbed unless manifestly incorrect.
An appeal is not in the nature of a re-hearing. Where the Judge has heard the evidence and come to his own conclusion, that finding should not be disturbed in appeal unless it is manifestly incorrect. RAJBALLABH MISIR v. BISHUN PRASAD SINGH Pat. 81 ——— High Court whether can base its decision upon ground different from that given by trial Court.
It is open to the High Court in appeal to base its decision upon a ground different from that given by the trial Court, provided there is sufficient evidence on the record from which a finding could be arrived at. YESHVANT v. GOVIND Bom. 50

Appeal—concld.

——— One of defendants-respondents dying pending appeal—Suit if instituted without him would have been proper—Legal representative not brought on record in appeal—Appeal if competent.

Where the suit would have been quite all right even if it had been instituted by the plaintiffs against the contesting defendants without impleading the deceased defendant-respondent as a defendant and there is no apprehension of there being any inconsistent decree if the appeal were to be allowed, the appeal does not become incompetent by not bringing on record the legal representative of the deceased on his death pending the appeal. SUNDAR ALI v. NUR MAMUD Cal. 733 ——— Privy Council—Practice—Defence raised in trial but not taken in High Court—Whether can be raised before Privy Council.

When an application is made to raise a defence not raised in the High Court though taken in the trial Court, it cannot be said that in no case could such leave be granted. The Board, acting under the Prerogative, must never abrogate their duty to tender to His Majesty in such a matter any advice which the nature of the case seems, in justice, to be called for. But the circumstances in which such an application will be entertained are necessarily exceptional. Apart from special circumstances there is no distinction in principle between the position of an appellant who abandons in the High Court a ground of appeal of which he had given notice and the position of a respondent in the High Court who does not raise a point in his favour which was open to him without notice It is quite true that it would be open to the Board on proper terms to refer to the High Court the question for their consideration. But even that the Board would not do except under special circumstances. FANNY SKINNER v. BANK OF UPPER INDIA, LTD. P. C. 743

——— Second appeal—Judgment of lower Appellate Court based on inadmissible evidence—Finding if can be reversed in second appeal.

Per Mohammad Noor, J.—If the High Court finds in second appeal that the lower Appellate Court has based its judgment partially upon a piece of evidence which was not admissible, it cannot by that reason alone, reverse that finding or remand the case if it can come to the conclusion that there was sufficient evidence on the record to justify the finding. How the High Court is to satisfy itself about the sufficiency of evidence is a matter which must depend upon the facts of each case. SONEY LALL JHA v DARBDEO NARAIN SINGH Pat. 470 F. B.

Approver—Corroboration, necessity of—Nature of corroboration required, in conspiracy cases—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 114, illus. (b)—Discrepancy between evidence of approver and of witnesses—Value of evidence.

The evidence of an approver has to be corroborated by some independent evidence. This rule is particularly necessary in cases of conspiracy to commit crimes where the crime of criminal conspiracy is established the moment an agreement between the accused persons to commit such crimes is proved. Evidence of a mere agreement can easily be concocted or manufactured, hence the need of independent testimony by way of corroboration is manifestly essential. To amount to corroboration the evidence must implicate the accused, i. e., it must confirm in some material particular not only the accomplice or approver's evidence that the crime has been committed, but also that the accused committed it. The corroborative evidence need not shew positively that the accused committed the crime; it is sufficient if it is merely circumstantial connecting him with the crime It must be evidence which shews or tends to shew that the approver's evidence implicating the accused is true; it must be independent testimony on a material particular or material particulars demonstrating to the Court the truth of the approver's evidence implicating the accused. Evidence to amount to corroboration must be independent testimony and therefore the evidence of one approver cannot amount to corroboration of the evidence of another.

Approver—concld.

Where there is a serious discrepancy between the evidence of the approver and that of witnesses, it makes it impossible for the Court to act upon such evidence either by itself or as corroboration of the approver's testimony. BACHCHA BABU v. EMPEROR All. 369

Arbitration—Agreement to refer dispute to third party, whether amounts to undertaking not to appeal.

Where the parties say that the determination of their disputes by a person is to be final as between them, that is to be regarded as an undertaking not to appeal, and an appeal preferred would be in violation of good faith and ought not to be entertained where the real merits of the case have been withdrawn from the Court. MAHAMMAD MIA PANDIT v. OSMAN ALI Cal. 915 ——— Arbitrators to act together—Every stage of proceeding must be in presence of all.

Where there are several arbitrators, all must act together and each must act in the making of the award. Every stage of the proceedings must be in the presence of all, and every judicial act to be done by two or more must be completed in the presence of all who do it. Consequently where the composition of board of directors had changed from time to time since the appeal went before the board and the award was given by some of them only and some of those who were present at the earlier meetings were not present later and did not form part of the Board which made the award:

Held, that the award was not legal and must be set aside. FAZALALLY JIVAJI RAJA v. KHIMJI POONJI & Co. Bom. 801 ——— Award—Parties acting on some terms—One of them who received benefit, whether can repudiate it.

Where both the parties have already acted on some of the terms of the award and one of them has already received some benefit under the award, he cannot be allowed to repudiate it afterward on the ground that the award is illegal. A. R. P. R. M. MEYAPPA CHETTYAR v. L. V. VENKATACHELLAM CHETTYAR Rang. 907 ——— Decision of third person, on question involving judicial and quasi-judicial work, is an award.

A decision, on a reference by parties of a question involving some judicial or quasi-judicial work, is an award. MAHAMMAD MIA PANDIT v. OSMAN ALI Cal. 915

——— Misconduct—Arbitrator dictating part of award to junior—Contents of award leaking out before pronouncement—Defendant not taken into confidence—Judicial misconduct, if made out.

The writing of a part of the award by the junior of the arbitrator at the latter's dictation is an act of a ministerial character which can be delegated to a third person and does not constitute judicial misconduct.

Arbitration—concld.

In the absence of any evidence showing that the arbitrator in any way took the defendant into his confidence, no misconduct can be attributed to him by reason of the contents of the award having leaked out before it was pronounced. Any help given by the defendant in the preparation of the copy of the award sent to the plaintiff cannot also affect the award itself. These circumstances, though raising some suspicion against the arbitrator, are not sufficient to establish a charge of misconduct. NIHAL CHAND v. SHANTI LAL Oudh 522

———Partition suit—Suppression of accounts—Power to direct payment of share of value of assets. SEE Accounts 1059

———Reference to decide disputes, after going through the accounts—Accounts found unreliable—Power of arbitrators to proceed on other available materials.

Disputes between two brothers relating to the division of their family properties were referred to arbitrators and the arbitrators were requested to make a division after looking into the accounts and taking the statements of the parties. The arbitrators found that the accounts were not reliable, made an estimate of the assets of the family from other available sources, and directed the defendant who was in possession of the assets and who maintained the accounts to pay half value of the estimated assets to the plaintiff. It was contended that the procedure adopted was illegal:

Held, that the arbitrators did not become powerless to decide the matter when they found the accounts to be unreliable. Their powers to make use of such material as was available in order to reach a conclusion so long as what they did was not in breach of the terms of the reference, were not less than the powers which a Court would possess in similar circumstances, and the procedure adopted by them was not illegal. CHIDAMBARAM CHETTIAR v. AYYAPPA CHETTIAR Mad. 1059

———Stay of suit, when granted.

The Court will ordinarily stay a suit, if the parties have agreed to refer their dispute to arbitration, and refer the matters in dispute to arbitration but where difficult questions of law are involved in such dispute, the suit will be allowed to proceed. KARUMUTHU THIAGARAJAN CHETTIAR v. THOS SMITH & Co Bom. 932

Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), s. 6—Submission, mode of—Intention of parties is sole guide.

The intention of the parties must be the sole guide for determining the mode of working out the submission and reaching a final decision. The law of arbitration is based upon the principle of withdrawing the dispute from the ordinary Courts and enabling the parties to substitute a domestic tribunal. Once that tribunal reaches a final decision as contemplated or agreed upon by the parties, then the Arbitration Act steps in to help the parties to enforce the said decision. FAZALALLY JIVAJI RAJA v. KHIMJI POONJI & Co. Bom. 801

———s. 11—S. 11, scope of—Award by association on appeal by board of directors from awards of umpire under bye-law held can be filed under s. 11 and is final decision.

Section 11, Arbitration Act, in terms does not apply to an award made on appeal by the Board of directors, but if the decision of the Board which is called an award under the bye-law, which is filed under the Arbitration Act, is the final decision under the submission in accordance with the Act, then it would be an award made by the arbitrators under the submission between the parties. FAZALALLY JIVAJI RAJA v. KHIMJI POONJI & Co. Bom. 801

Arbitration Act—concld.

———s. 19—Application for postponement of hearing of suit, whether a step in proceeding irrespective of intention of applicant.

An application made to the Court for postponement of the hearing of the suit is a step in the proceedings within the meaning of s. 19, Arbitration Act, irrespective of the intention with which the application is made. Whether the applicant wishes to have further time to file a written statement or to raise as a bar to the suit the agreement to refer to arbitration, in either event, his application is an application to invite the Court to do something which would enable him to establish his defence. It is for the Court to determine whether any particular act or application is a step in the proceeding, irrespective of the fact that a party may not have had any intention of submitting to the jurisdiction of the Court. FIRM OF MURLIMAL SANTRAM v. BANARSIDAS & SONS Sind 895

———s. 19—Application for stay—Court's duty.

In an application for stay of a suit under the Arbitration Act, it is the prima facie duty of the Court to stay and the onus lies on the plaintiff to show why he should not be bound by the agreement to refer. FIRM OF MURLIMAL SANTRAM v. BANARSIDAS & SONS Sind 895

———s. 19—Sufficient cause in refusing application for stay—Charge of fraud or forgery—Court's jurisdiction to refuse stay.

What is a sufficient cause for refusing to stay on an application for stay under s. 19, Arbitration Act, depends on the particular facts of each case. The fact that a submission clause does not include all the matters which are the subject of legal proceedings may be a sufficient cause for refusing to stay. When there is charge of fraud or forgery, against one of the parties to a submission clause, a Court has discretion to refuse a stay. Generally speaking, where the party charged desires a public inquiry, the Court will generally refuse to send the case to arbitration but where the party making the charge desires that the matter should be dealt with in Court, the Court will be less inclined to stay the suit. But to ensure a proper discretion in refusing to stay a suit on an allegation of fraud or forgery, the Court should ascertain that there is some foundation for such a charge; otherwise there will be a tendency to allege fraud in any case in which a party to a submission clause wishes to avoid arbitration. FIRM OF MURLIMAL SANTRAM v. BANARSIDAS & SONS Sind 895

Arbitrator—Arbitrators selected for personal knowledge—Use of personal knowledge not illegal—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Sch. II, r. 20.

Where an arbitrator has been selected because of his personal knowledge of the matter in dispute, it would not be misconduct on his part to use his personal knowledge in coming to a certain decision, although in such cases it is desirable that he should tell the parties what his personal knowledge is and give them an opportunity to prove that his view is wrong.

Where the parties have not been prejudiced by use of the arbitrators' personal knowledge the Court will not interfere with their award. CHIDAMBARAM CHETTIAR v. AYYAPPA CHETTIAR Mad. 1059

Arbitrator—concld.

———Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Sch. II, para 15, cl. 1—Relationship of arbitrator with one defendant—Arbitrator having monetary dealings with another defendant—Non-disclosure of facts to plaintiff at time of agreement—Fraudulent concealment, if constituted—Plaintiff not conscious of right to revoke submission—Consequent failure to lodge protest—Whether constitutes waiver.

Where the arbitrator is related to one of the defendants and has monetary dealings with the other, both of which facts ought to have been disclosed but were not disclosed to the plaintiff when he entered into the agreement, the concealment of the relationship must be considered fraudulent and the award should be set aside. As there can be no question of waiver without full knowledge of one's legal rights, where the plaintiff thought that he had no right to revoke the submission, his failure to lodge an unequivocal protest against the arbitrator acting as such, will not operate as a waiver. NIHAL CHAND v. SHANTI LAL Oudh 522

———Private inquiries made but award based on documentary evidence—Award, if vitiated.

Although it is true that an arbitrator cannot import his own knowledge into a case, or base his decision upon information obtained otherwise than from the evidence submitted to him by the parties, unless permitted to do so by the terms of reference, yet when there is a concurrent finding that the private inquiries made by the arbitrator did not affect the award and the award itself shows that the arbitrators were not impressed even by the oral evidence which was given before them on behalf of the parties and based their award purely on documentary evidence and upon two statements made upon oath, it cannot be held, that the private inquiries affected the form or substance of the award in any way and in such a case no interference in revision is called for. ABDULLAH KHAN v. BAHRAM KHAN Pesh. 1022

Army Act (VIII of 1911), s. 87 (1)—Soldier, if can be retained for trial—Retention order must be from competent Military Authority.

Section 87 (1), Army Act gives a power to retaine soldier in order to have the benefit of his services as soldier and has no bearing on his retention for the purposes of his trial by Court Martial. Before the section can operate, it is necessary to have an order of the competent Military Authority in which the period of retention must be specified. CONDUCTOR ALFRED BEEDHAM, QUETTA, In the matter of. Lah. 444 (b)

———s. 90 (1)—S. 90 (1), if applies to soldiers who have served for 21 years—'Convenient', meaning of—Soldier under arrest—Pay, if a subsistence allowance.

Section 90 (1) does not apply to a soldier who has served the full period of 21 years. The word "convenient" refers only to the speed with which the discharge is effected and the section does not entitle the superior Military Authority deliberately to hold up a soldier's discharge if he has become legally entitled to it.

The subsistence allowance provided to enable a soldier to live is not his pay; the allotment and other payments not paid at his request is the unilateral act of the Military Authorities, and cannot affect his legal position. CONDUCTOR ALFRED BEEDHAM QUETTA, In the matter of Lah. 444 (b)

——— s. 158 (1)—Person, no more subject to military law—He can be arrested and tried within three months, else he cannot be tried by Court Martial.

Section 158 gives powers of arrest and trial of a person who has ceased to be subject to Military Law and his trial must commence within three months of his ceasing to be so subject: and after the expiration of this period of three months the person charged with an offence ceases to be liable to arrest or trial by Court Martial. CONDUCTOR ALFRED BEEDHAM QUETTA In the mutter of Lah. 444 (b)

Army Act—concld.

Assets in s. 73, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, meaning of. SEE Civil Procodure Code, 1908, s 73 918

Assignment—Mortgagee Bank going into liquidation—Agreement between Bank and purchasing Trust—Agreement not completed—Non-registration—Suit on mortgage by Bank—Maintainability.

The defendant mortgagor executed a deed of simple mortgage in favour of a Bank, the deed containing a covenant on the mortgagor's part for payment of the mortgage-debt with compound interest. In default of payment, the mortgagee Bank had the ordinary right of proceeding by Court sale to realise its security. The Bank went into liquidation and in 1923 the Liquidator filed a suit on the mortgage In 1917, an agreement was entered into between the Bank and a concern known as the Trust of India, the purpose of the agreement being to make it possible to come to an arrangement with the other creditors of the Bank so that by the appropriation and realisation of certain assets for their benefit, with the consent of the trustees for the debenture stock, all claims against the Bank would be got rid of, and subsequently in due course the Bank would be dissolved. The mortgage-debt was included in such assets, but the agreement was not registered under the Transfer of Property, nor was the transfer completed. It was contended that all interest had passed into the Trust and the Bank had no right to sue:

Held, that the transfer of this mortgage-debt was effective as between the transferor and the transferees; but as there was no completion of the agreement and the transfer of the agreement was of no effect by reason of non-registration, any proceedings to recover the debt brought against the mortgagor must be, not in the name of the transferee, but in that of the transferor. Consequently, the Bank rightly sued to recover the mortgage-debt. The transaction as between the transferor (the Bank) and the transferee may be taken to be complete although there was no completion and no legal assignment or transfer of the assets included in the agreement and not legally transferred by virtue of the agreement itself:

Held, also as the mortgagor had not raised in the High Court the defence as to her disability on the ground of her being a pardahnashin lady, a defence which she raised in the trial Court, leave could not be granted to re-open that question before the Privy Council. FANNY SKINNER v. BANK OF UPPER INDIA, LTD P. C. 743

Award—All members of Board of Directors not signing award—Irregularity can be rectified.

The award ought to be signed by all the members of the Board who joined in the making of it. But the omission to do so is a mere irregularity capable of being rectified. FAZALALLY JIVAJI RAJA v. KHIMJI POONJI & Co. Bom. 801

———Part of award found invalid—Party acting on invalid part—Whether estopped from contending that it is invalid.

If part of an award is found to be invalid as being in excess of the arbitrator's powers and is separable from the rest, the remainder of the award being Award—concld.

good, can be maintained and acted upon, while the excessive part of the award can be declared to be unenforcible. But if a party has taken advantage of the invalid part of the award he is estopped from setting up that that clause of the award is illegal. MEYAPPA CHETTYAR v VENKATACHELLAM CHETTYAR Rang. 997

———Reference without intervention of Court during pendency of suit—Award if can be recorded as compromise. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXIII, r. 3 915

———Statement in award creating new right in party—Award, if compulsorily registrable—Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 7 (1) (c).

A mere statement of fact by a party to an instrument would obviously have no effect upon legal relations, but a similar statement in an award by arbitrators regarding a point in dispute between the parties does affect the legal relationship; in the first case it is a mere admission of an undisputed fact; in the second case, it is a decision and a finding upon a fact which is disputed. Where a clause in an award creates a new right in a party, it is a declaration with in the meaning of s. 17 (1) (c), Registration Act and the award is compulsorily registrable. ABDULLAH KHAN v. BAHRAM KHAN Pesh. 1022

Bar Council—Findings by—High Court, if bound to accept them.

Usually the High Court will accept, especially when there is no objection preferred by the Government Advocate, the finding of the Bar Council. The High Court, however, is not bound to accept it. AN ADVOCATE, CAWNPORE, In the matter of All. 1043 (S. B.)

Benami. SEE Mortgage 234

Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act (XII of 1887), s. 3. SEE Jurisdiction 769

Bengal Cess Act (IX of 1880), s 4—Kabuliyat—Ijardar entitled to exclude anybody else from dealing with land in manner he himself is entitled to do—Ijardar, whether in use and occupation—What he pays under kabuliyat is rent.

Where under the terms of the kabuliyats the ijardars are entitled to exclude anybody else from dealing with the lands in the particular manner in which he himself is entitled to do under his kabuliyat, in that sense, a limited sense though it be, the ijardar is in use and occupation, being allowed by his kabuliyat to let in or exclude anybody he likes for sale of the particular commodities to which his kabuliyat referred, collecting such tolls as his kabuliyat permitted and using perhaps such portion of the land covered by the boundaries on which those particular commodities used to be sold. What the ijardar has to pay under his kabuliyat is "rent" within the meaning of s. 4 of the Cess Act. HEM CHANDRA DAS v. SECRETARY OF STATE Cal. 1055

———s. 6 — Collections by zemindar from traders resorting to hat for selling goods, whether assessable.

Whether a particular sum of money collected from persons who use a zemindar's land is or is not rent is a mixed question of law and fact. Where traders come and sell their commodities on the land and pay something to the zemindar and the same set of traders do not necessarily come on every hat day and no land is settled with them for any period of time, the money thus realized is not ground rent and is not assessable to cess. SOURENDRA MOHAN SINHA v. SECRETARY OF STATE Pat. 1099

———ss. 6, 106—Revenue Board cannot add to or subtract from Cess Act—Income not assessable under Act cannot be made assessable.

Section 106, Bengal Cess Act, does not authorize the Board of Revenue to make that income assessable to cess which is not assessable under the Act itself. The Board have no power to add to the Act or subtract anything from it. The rules must be rules for the purposes of carrying out the Act. If any income is not assessable, it cannot be made assessable by any order of the Board of Revenue SOURENDRA MOHAN SINHA v. SECRETARY OF STATE Pat 1099

Bengal Cess Act.—concld.

———s 47—S. 47, if applies to rent-free tenures.

The addition of s. 64-A to the Act makes it clear that s. 47 has no application to rent-free tenures. BHUNESHWARI KUER v DEVKI KUER Pat. 869 (a) ———ss. 52, 54, 56—Absence of special contract—Tenant, if liable to pay anything except under s. 56.

In the absence of a special contract nothing is lawfully payable by the tenant defendant except under s. 56 which requires as an indispensable preliminary that notices should be served under ss. 52 and 54 of the Cess Act. BHUNESHWARI KUER v. DEVKI KUER Pat 869 (a) ———ss. 56, 52, 54—Cesses, if become payable only after publication of notices under ss. 52 and 54.

Under s. 56, Bengal Cess Act, cesses only become payable after publication of the notices required by ss 52 and 54; and this would contradict s. 62 if the latter section were construed to mean that such cesses can be realised before publication of the notices. BHUNESHWARI KUER v DEVKI KUER Pat. 869 (a)

Bengal Land (Redemption and Foreclosure) Regulation (XVII of 1806), ss. 7, 8—Notice unaer s. 8—Requirements of.

If a notice under s. 8 of the Bengal Land (Redemption and Foreclosure) Regulation contains a reference to s. 7 of the Regulation, or enumerates the various methods described in it for avoiding foreclosure, the notice will be valid. The unnecessary adoption of an incomplete description of the mode of redemption allowed by s. 7 cannot affect that validity of the notice. DHUM CHAND v. KISHAN CHAND Lah. 279

Bengal Motor Vehicle Tax Act (V of 1932)—Rules 10, 12, 13 under the Act, whether ultra vires of Local Government.

There is nothing contained in rr. 10, 12 and 13 of the Rules under Bengal Motor Vehicles Tax Act which is ultra vires of the Local Government, having regard to ss. 9 and 12, Bengal Motor Vehicles Tax Act, 1932, by which it is clearly intended that delivery of the token has to be obtained, and the token exhibited on the car, in the manner provided by the Rules. R. C. CURTIES v. EMPEROR Cal. 710

———ss. 9, 12—Person paying tax must obtain delivery of token—Non-exhibition of token in cars by such person whether an offence.

It is for the person paying the tax to obtain delivery of the token at the time when the tax was paid to the Taxing Officer under the Bengal Motor Vehicles Tax Act, 1932. So far as the Taxing Officer is concerned, the requirements of the law are fulfilled if he does anything which has the effect of putting the token in the possession of the person paying the tax or of any person authorised by him. It is not intended by the provisions of the Statute and the Rules framed under the statute, which are not in any way ultra vires, that the Taxing Officer is to send the token to the person paying the tex. Consequenly, the failure on the part of a person toe xhibit the token on the car resulting from his not obtaining delivery of the same from the Taxing Officer after tax had been paid, is an offence under the law. R. O CURTIES v. EMPEROR Cal. 710

Bengal Patni Taluqs Regulation (VIII of 1819), s. 8—Proceeding for realization of arrears of rent, whether against defaulters personally—Notice published and sale held—Defaulter dead at the time of sale—Sale, validity of.

The proceedings taken under the Patni Regulation for realization of arrears of patni rent are not taken against the defaulter personally at all but are taken against the tenures. Consequently, where the necessary notice as required by the Regulation has been duly published, the sale is not invalid merely because at the time when the sale was held the defaulter was dead. There is no procedure in the Patni Regulation which enables the Collector to bring on the record the heirs of the defaulting patnidar, if he has died in the meantime, nor is there any provision in the statute which makes it incumbent on the zemindar to seek out such heirs and to apply to the Collector that the sale should be held after bringing the heirs of the deceased patnidar on the record. ABDUL JALIL v. ASRAF ALI Cal. 201

Bengal Public Demands Recovery Act (III of 1913), s. 20—Liability to pay cess—Nature of—Whether attaches to estate of proprietor—Hindu widow's estate sold under the Act—Reversion, if passes to purchaser.

The liability to pay cess is a mere personal liability which does not attach to the estate of the proprietor who has to pay it. Consequently, the sale of a Hindu widow's estate under the Bengal Public Demands Recovery Act conveys only the widow's estate to the purchaser and not the reversion RAMJHARI KUER v. SHEONARAIN SINGH Pat. 750

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885)—Amendment of 1907, if retrospective. SEE Occupancy holding 834

——— s. 25. SEE Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, s 87 321

——— ss. 30 (a) (b), (c), 32, 105—Enhancement of rent on ground of rise in prices of staple food crops—Matters to be considered—Period to be taken for comparison—'Practicable', meaning of—S. 30 (c) applicability of.

The rise contemplated in s. 30 (b) of the Bengal Tenancy Act is the rise over the price which was prevailing at about the time when the current rent was fixed. It is assumed that the rent must have been fixed on the basis of the price prevailing. Section 32 provides the machinery for finding out what enhancement should be allowed in case there is a rise in the prices of these staple food crops Sub-clause (a) enjoins upon the Court to compare the average prices of the two decennial periods. One of them must be the period immediately preceding the institution of the suit; and the other may be any one which is practicable to take. But at the same time it must be equitable to take that decade in consideration. By practicable, it is to be understood the period for which figures are available or can be obtained without undue inconvenience and trouble. According to the terms of the section the Court can take any period which it thinks equitable to take. The decennium may be one immediately preceding the decennium with which the comparison is to be made or any earlier decennial period. Ordinarily, however, it may be inequitable to go beyond the decennial period just preceding the time when the current rent was fixed, as in that case it will be unjust upon the raiyats to pay enhancement on the basis of rise of price compared with the prices which prevailed many years before the time when the rent was fixed which must have been taken into consideration at the time of the fixing of the currentrent. Shorter period can only be substituted for decades if it is in the opinion of the Court impracticable to take the latter into consideration

Where the rent under s. 105, Bengal Tenancy Act, must have been settled on the basis of rise in the decennium just preceding the settlement, it will be more equitable to compare the prices of the decennium just before the institution of the suit with the prices which prevailed in the decade just before the settlement of rent Sub-clause (c), of s 30 has no application and for all practical purposes that sub-clause may now be taken to be obsolete. RAM RANBIJAY PRASAD SINGH v. RAMGRIHI RAI Pat 902 S. B.

——— s 51. SEE Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s 116 367

——— ss. 65, 167—Subrogation—Mortgagee advancing money to mortgagor for paying off rent decree—Whether subrogated to position of landlord—Incumbrance created by tenant of transferable holding—Whether void as regards third parties.

Where money is advanced to a mortgagor to pay off a mortgage debt and the person advancing the money gets a mortgage in security of that advance he becomes entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee But where the landlord obtains a decree for rent, the charge created by the decree is a right to which the landlord alone is entitled and the person advancing money to the tenant to pay off the rents does not get the right of subrogation, as the charge obtained by the landlord is not on the same footing as that of a mortgagee.

So far as the other parties are concerned, the incumbrances which were created by the tenant in a non-transferable holding are not incumbrances which are void but which may be treated as void only as between the tenant and the landlord. RAMNANDAN PRASAD SINGH v. RAM DAS Pat. 663

——— s. 85. SEE Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, s. 160 (d) 720

——— s. 87, if exhaustive—Breach of implied condition—Whether a ground for ejecting occupancy raiyat.

Section 87, Bengal Tenancy Act, is not exhaustive and there might be abandonment apart from the provisions of that section. Even if there be no abandonment within the meaning of s. 87, an inference of abandonment apart from the provisions of that section would be legitimate, if it is proved that the entire holding has been transferred and that the transferees have been put in possession of the whole holding

It is, however, open to doubt whether, in view of the express provisions laid down in s 25, Bengal Tenancy Act, the breach of an implied condition would be a ground for ejecting an occupancy raiyat. GOLAM MUSTAPHA v. HANUMANDAS MUNDRA Cal. 321

——— ss. 87, 25—Abandonment, question of—If one of fact—Inference from facts as to existence of abandonment, whether a question of law.

The question, as to whether there has been abandonment of the land by the raiyat, is largely and principally a question of fact depending upon a number of circumstances to be proved in each case. But the inference from the facts found, as to whether there was abandonment or not is a question of law. GOLAM MUSTAPHA v. HANUMANDAS MUNDRA Cal. 321

——— ss. 88, 105, 109—Landlord in s. 88, if means entire body of landlords—Absence of effective

Agra Tenancy Act—1926—concld.

splitting of holding — Plaintiffs becoming sole landlords on partition—Holding, if to be treated as sub-divided—Division of holding—What constitutes —Application for settlement of rent—Withdrawal of application—Subsequent application for enhancement on ground of rise in price—Whether barred by s. 109.

A 'landlord' in s. 88, Bengal Tenancy Act, means the entire body of landlords. Where there has been no effective splitting up of the holding as required by s. 88, Bengal Tenancy Act before the partition so as to be binding upon the entire body of landlords, they are not bound to treat the holdings as sub-divided after the partition, merely because they became the sole landlords as a result of the partition.

Section 88, speaks of a division of a tenure or holding. A mere undivided parcel or parcels of land is not a holding within the meaning of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Consequently so far as the division of the holding is concerned, what is contemplated by s. 88 is the actual division of the holding into two or more definite units and not a mere notional division of the shares held by the tenants in the holding.

Where the plaintiff applied for settlement of rent under s. 105, Bengal Tenancy Act, in a certain year before the Settlement Officer but the application was withdrawn and he subsequently applied for enhancement on the ground of rise of the average local price of local staple food crops:

Held, that the application for enhancement was not barred under s. 109, Bengal Tenancy Act. SRINANDAN PRASAD SINGH v. MITHAN MAHTON Pat 28

——s. 105. See Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, s. 30 (a) (b) 902

——s. 115 (c). See Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, s. 180-A, cl. (15) 812

——ss. 160 (d), 85—Under-raiyati created in contravention of s. 85—Occupancy right by custom, if protected interest under s. 160 (d).

A right of occupancy existing by custom is not a "protected interest" within the meaning of s. 160 (d), Bengal Tenancy Act, when the under-raiyati is created in contravention of the provisions of s. 85. MATI LAL DAS v. ADITYA CHANDRA DAS Cal. 720

——s. 167. See Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, s. 65 663

——ss. 180-A, cl. (15), 115 (c)—No dispute about status of tenant or enhancibility of rent or area—Held, dispute was only about amount of rent and no second appeal lay—In settling fair rent, Court can consider rate payable if portion of holding is kept fallow under panchan system.

Where in a case there is no dispute about the status of the tenants or about the enhancibility or otherwise of the rent and also as regards the area for which the rent is to be assessed, the decision is only about the amount of rent settled and no second appeal lies.

In settling the amount of fair rent, the Court is entitled to take into consideration the rate which is payable by tenants, if a portion of their holding is kept fallow under the panchan system. SRISH CHANDRA PAL v. RAJANI KANTA BISWAS Cal. 812

Berar Land Revenue Code, 1896, s. 41 (1). See EVIDENCE ACT, 1872, s. 110. 264

Bihar and Orissa Public Demands Recovery Act (IV of 1914), ss. 7, 8—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 100, 60—Effect—Secretary of State, if becomes simple mortgagee of property charged with payment of cess—Suit by prior mortgagee— Secretary of State not impleaded—

Bihar and Orissa Public Demands Recovery Act.—concld.

Whether bound by proceedings—Right of redemption if lost.

The effect of s. 8, Public Demands Recovery Act, and s. 100, Transfer of Property Act, is that for all practical purposes the Secretary of State becomes a simple mortgagee of those properties which are charged with payment of cess money under ss. 7 and 8 of the Public Demands Recovery Act. Therefore, he must be impleaded in a mortgage suit by the prior mortgagee, and when he is not so impleaded, the Secretary of State and the purchaser of the property in enforcement of that mortgage are not bound by the proceedings which take place in the prior mortgagee's suit. Nor is the sale of the property in any way binding upon them and their right of redemption remains absolutely intact. BHEKDHARI MAHTON v. RADHIKA KOER Pat. 635 ——ss. 21 and 24—Purchaser of property in certificate sale in possession in good faith—Claim under s. 21 by another purchaser in execution of money decree dismissed—No title suit brought within one year by claimant—Subsequent petition under O. XXI, r. 97, Civil Procedure Code—Order dismissing claim is conclusive.

In a certificate sale, the entire property of a joint family was sold even though the names of all the members excepting one was not mentioned in the certificate and the purchaser was in possession of the whole property in good faith. Another person who had obtained a money decree against all the members of the joint family purchased the property in execution of his decree and he put in a claim under s. 21, Public Demands Recovery Act. The claim was dismissed and he did not file any title suit within one year. Subsequently, he filed a petition under O. XXI, r. 97, Civil Procedure Code, as he could not obtain delivery of possession. The Court held that the certificate Court had no jurisdiction to attach and sell or give possession of the share of the other members whose shares were not mentioned and ordered joint possession;

Held, that the order dismissing the claim became conclusive, that the certificate purchaser was in possession in good faith and that the Court had no jurisdiction to go into the question of title. AKHAURI HERAMBO NARAIN SINHA v. JAMUNA SONAR Pat. 957

Bombay Cotton Contracts Act (XIV of 1922)—Bye-laws under—Forward delivery contracts—Parties not members of East India Cotton Association—Contract, if governed by the Act.

The Bombay Cotton Contract Act, and the bye-laws made thereunder do not apply to any contract in cotton of forward delivery entered into in Bombay between parties who are not members of the East India Cotton Association, either expressly or impliedly, and consequently such contracts, even though entered by word of mouth, are valid. HEMRAJ SHIVLAL v. FIRM JOHARMAL RAMKARAN Bom. 312

Bombay Hereditary Offices Act (III of 1874), s. 15—Sanad to inamdar by which holder agreed to pay fixed annual judi in lieu of service—Judi arrived at after deducting assessment on shet-sanadis lands—Discontinuance of service of shet-sanadis and full assessment imposed—Held, grant to shet-sanadis was kadim—Inamdar, if estopped from contending that it was not kadim—Estoppel.

In 1902 a sanad was granted to the inamdar under s. 15, Bombay Hereditary Offices Act (III of 1874), by which the holders agreed to pay to Government a fixed annual judi in lieu of service. There were certain lands granted as inam in the village for shet-sanadi service. The judi was arrived at after deducting the assessment of certain lands including the shet-sanadi lands, which were held in inam by village servants. In 1920 Government ordered a discontinuance of the service of shet-sanadis and imposed full assessments on the lands. The respondent contended that the sanadi inam lands had been given by his ancestors to the sanadis for the performance of Police duties, that they were jadid inams, and that he, and not the Government, was entitled to receive the full assessment which had been imposed on the lands after the discontinuance of service. Government contended that the sanadi lands were kadim inams and not jadid and that the inamdar was not entitled to the full assessment levied on the lands:

Bombay Hereditary Offices Act.—concld.

Held, the agreement between the parties evidenced by the sanad was based upon the assumption that the sanadi inam lands were kadim inam and the assessment of judi was made on that assumption, and that the respondent was not entitled to the assessment. The respondent inamdar had by his conduct led Government to believe that he accepted this assumption. By giving Government this impression and allowing them to act upon it, he obtained the benefit of a lower judi in perpetuity. The fact which he led Government to believe and act upon was that he agreed to the sanadi inam lands being treated as kadim inam and hence he could not now be allowed to contend that they are not kadim.

SECRETARY OF STATE v KAJARAM PARASHRAM Bom. 763

Bombay High Court Rules (Original Side, 1930, r. 559—Bill of costs, if can be amended.

There is no rule in Bombay restricting the normal right of a Solicitor as a professional man to amend his bill of costs which he has once presented to his client. He is at liberty to present another and revised bill for taxation. It is within the discretion of the Taxing Master to saddle him with costs of taxation if he is of opinion that he has delivered to his client an exorbitant bill of costs. D. N. REGE v. V. C. VIJAYAKAR Bom. 945

Boundaries—Boundaries stated in deed between third parties—Whether necessarily against proprietary interest of person making it.

Per Wort, J.—As a general question, it cannot be said that boundaries stated in a deed between third parties are necessarily and prima facie against the proprietary interest of the person making it. SONEY LALL JHA v. DARBDEO NARAIN SINGH Pat. 470 F. B.

Burden of proof—Effect of registration on onus of proof—Prayer for refund of costs in registration enquiry, nature of.

The decision of the Registrar that a document is genuine and the registration of the document have not got even the effect of shifting the onus of proof from the party who alleges that the document is genuine.

A prayer in a suit of this nature for refund of the costs incurred in the registration enquiry is not a prayer for a consequential relief but only one for an additional relief. DASARI NAGABHUSHANAM v. KUNAMNENI VENKATAPPAYYA Mad. 948 ——Execution of entry proved—Burden of proving want of consideration lies on executant.

Where, by the evidence of finger-print expert the execution of an entry is proved, the burden of proving want of consideration is on the executant. GANGA SAHAI BHAGMAL v. MOLAR Lah. 799

Burma Municipal Act (III of 1898), s. 148—Pawn-broker—Who is—Isolated transaction does not make person pawn-broker.

A "pawn-broker" is a person who "carries on the business of pawn-broking." It implies one who systematically lends money upon the security of pawns, and "carrying on business" implies, "a series or repetition of acts." It is a question of fact in each case whether a "business" is being carried on, and each case must be determined by its own special circumstances unless there can be found some systematic course of lending upon pawns or such repetition as to amount to a reasonable inference that it forms part of the particular Chettyar's money-lending business to lend on pawns. His status as a pawn-broker within the Burma Municipal Act, 1898, and the rules thereunder cannot be held to be established.

Bombay Municipal Act.—concld.

A Chettyar whose business is to lend money on promissory notes and upon security of land cannot be said to be a pawn-broker where he advances an isolated loan to another on security of a chattel. V. A. S. M. CHETTYAR FIRM v. EMPEROR Rang. 889

Burmese Buddhist Law—Divorce—Desertion of wife for three years without communication—Divorce, if automatic.

According to Burmese Buddhist Law the desertion of the wife by the husband for three years during which the latter does not communicate with the wife or send means of subsistence to her would automatically bring about a divorce between the husband and wife after the expiration of that period. MA E THA v. MA THEIN KIN Rang. 990

——Divorce—Burmese Buddhist wife living—Husband embracing Christianity—Divorce, if automatic—Subsequent marriage with another, if valid.

Where a Burmese Buddhist husband changes his religion into Christianity, there is no automatic divorce with his wife with whom he had married as a Burmese Buddhist, so that his subsequent marriage with another woman is invalid. MA E THA v. MA THEIN KIN Rang. 990

——Inheritance. SEE Lunatic 115

Calcutta High Court Rules and Orders (Original Side), Chap. X, r. 36. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. IX, r. 9 158

Calcutta Improvement Act (V of 1911), s. 77 (1) (b)—Property sold by widow acquired compulsorily—Claim to compensation by reversioners and purchaser—President of Tribunal deciding under s. 77 (1) (b)—Appeal, whether appeal against order relating to compensation—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), ss. 8, 7 (iv) (c).

Where a property which had been sold by a widow was compulsorily acquired and the reversioners and the purchaser claimed to take compensation of money and the President of Calcutta Improvement Tribunal decided under s. 77 (1) (b) of the Calcutta Improvement Act:

Held, that the appeal from his order was not an appeal against an order relating to compensation and s. 8, Court Fees Act, was not applicable. The claimants were really asking for a declaration and some consequential relief, namely that the money should be invested instead of being handed over to the purchaser and the case fell under ss. 8, 7 (iv) (c), Court Fees Act. RASH BEHARI SANYAL v. GOSTO BEHARI GOSWAMI Cal. 817

Cantonments Act (II of 1921), s. 187—Officer ordinarily authorized to communicate sanction, writing to applicant and conveying sanction—Applicant is entitled to act on it.

Where the petitioner makes an application to the Cantonment Authority for sanction and a person ordinarily authorized to communicate the sanction writes and conveys sanction on an official form of the Cantonment Board, the petitioner is entitled to act on such sanction, it being not his business to enquire if the sanction conveyed by him had been granted by the Board. GOPI CHAND v. EMPEROR Lah. 273

Cantonments Act—concld.

C. P. Debt Conciliation Act (II of 1933), s. 15 (2) —Applicability of — Debtor producing certificate after filing of plaint but before decree—Creditor, if can be subjected to penalty in regard to costs and interest.

Section 15 (2), C. P. Debt Conciliation Act comes into operation not only when the certificate is granted before the institution of the suit but also when it is granted during the pendency of the suit. Consequently under s. 15 (2) the plaintiff creditor is liable to be subjected to penalty in regard to costs of the suit and interest on the debt even in case in which the certificate is produced by the debtor after the filing of the plaint but during the pendency of the suit, that is before the decree is passed. SUKHLAL MODHI BANIYA v. DAMROO GANESH Nag. 1032

C. P. Land Revenue Act (II of 1917), s. 201— Proceedings under, by Revenue Court—Affidavit in evidence accepted—Legality—Applicability of Civil Procedure Code to Revenue proceedings—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Pre-amble, O. XLI, O. XIX, r. 2.

Revenue Courts are Courts of civil judicature in matters arising under the Land Revenue Act.

Any application made under s. 201 of the C. P. Land Revenue Act is an original proceeding which must be governed by the procedure laid down in the Civil Procedure Code. Similarly the provisions of O XLI, of the Civil Procedure Code apply to the proceedings in appeal before any Revenue Court. Under O XIX, r. 2, it is permissible for any party to give evidence upon any application by affidavit, although the Court may at the instance of either party, order the attendance for cross-examination of the deponent. Thus as the Revenue Court is a Court of civil judicature it is authorised to receive affidavits in evidence. BADE v. EMPEROR Nag. 557

C. P. Tenancy Act (I of 1920), Sch. II, Art. 1— Whether applies to a claim for joint possession in holding.

Article 1, Sch. II, C. P. Tenancy Act, relating to possession or dispossession of or from a holding does not include a question of a claim for joint possession or resistance of such a claim in that holding.

A person who is in joint possession cannot be said to have been dispossessed or excluded from possession of the holding by his co-tenant since his right of possession extends over the entire holding. Consequently, Art. 1, Sch II of the C. P. Tenancy Act has no application to such a case and the ordinary rules of the Limitation Act must apply.

Special enactments which derogate from the ordinary law must be strictly construed. ABDUL RAHIMAN v. ABDUL WAHAB Nag. 813

Cess—Liability to pay cess — When can be contracted out—Absence of contract—Cess so far paid included in rent—No mention that further cess assessed would not be payable by tenure-holder —Liability to pay additional cess imposed on tenure

Although the liability to pay cess under the Cess Act can be contracted out, but in order to make the legal provisions for the responsibility to pay cess ineffective, the contract must be clear and expressive. Where there is no such contract and the plain meaning of the lease is that the cess so far paid has been included in the rent, and there is no mention that further cess assessed upon the tenure would not be payable by the tenure-holder by whom it must be paid under the provisions of law, increased cess for the period after the re-assessment should be allowed. GOUR CHANDRA CHOUDHRI v. SARAT KUMARI DEBI Pat 96

C. P. Tenancy Act—concld.

Charge. SEE Deed 288

Charitable and Religious Trusts Act (XIV of 1920)—Trust—Validity of trust under the Act—Tests—Trust deed executed by Central Council of a Cult—Guru regarded as spiritual head—Gifts made to Guru in accordance with mandates of religion—Donors, if can be supposed to have intended to create trust—Deed — Construction—Held, deed could not be treated as title deed.

In order that a trust of a religious and charitable nature may be valid and enforceable according to law, certain material matters must be ascertainable. In the first place it is material to ascertain the author or authors of the alleged trust. Next the intention to create a trust must be indicated by words or acts with reasonable certainty. The purpose of the trust, the trust property, and the beneficiaries must be indicated in such a way that the trust could be administered by the Court if the occasion arose.

A trust deed was executed by certain members of the Central Council Radha Swami Satsang and the objects of the trust were that "the trustees named above or those that may be appointed hereafter to succeed them, all of whom will hereafter be called 'trustees,' shall collect, preserve, administer, and if necessary, alienate the properties, movable or immovable, that have been or may hereafter be dedicated to the Supreme Being, Radha Swami Dayal, or that may be acquired for or presented to the Radha Swami Satsang and its branches, in accordance with such directions as may, from time to time, be issued in this behalf by the said Council or the Sant Sat Guru for the time being, if any who is recognised as the representative of the Supreme Being Radha Swami Dayal, and as such is the sole master of all movable and immovable properties of the aforesaid Satsang, provided that samadhs and places of public worship of the Radha Swami Satsang shall at no time be alienated."

Held, (i) that the deed could not be treated as a title deed creating a legal trust.

(ii) that according to the tenets of the Radha Swami religion, and in consideration of the position and authority of the Sant Sat Guru, the complete and absolute submission of his followers to him and the teachings and doctrines, the followers of the true faith when making their gifts to the "Sant Sat Guru," whom they regarded as their spiritual head (whether he was the incarnation of the Supreme Being or only his representative) in accordance with the mandates of their religion, could not be supposed to have intended to create any trust and it could not be said that the donors of the gifts were the authors of the alleged public trust;

(iii) that the provisions in the deed were wholly inconsistent with any intention on the part of the "Sant Sat Guru" for the time being, to alter his position as "Sant Sat Guru" or to divest himself of the control of the property and to create a trust for a public purpose of a charitable or religious nature, such as is contemplated by the Act XIV of 1920, but on the other hand, the regulations relating to the Central Council and the provisions of the so-called "trust" deed were in consistent with a desire on the part of the Sant Sat Guru to obtain the assistance of some of his followers in the management of the property, which was increasing as the years passed;

Charitable and Religious Trusts Act—concld.

(iv) that in view of the essential and unalterable doctrines of the faith with respect to the "Sant Sat Guru," his supremacy and his control over the offerings, by which the properties were acquired, it would be difficult to arrive at the conclusion that it was ever intended that such a trust as is contemplated by Act XIV of 1920, should be created

[Doctrines, principles and tenets of the Radha Swami religion discussed.] PATEL CHHOTABHAI v. JNAN CHANDRA BASAK P. C. 409

——— s. 3—Members of general public worshipping at religious institution, whether persons interested. Members of the general public who worship at religious institution are persons interested in the Public Trust for the purposes of Act XIV of 1920. NIHAL CHAND v. NARAIN DAS Lah. 620

——— s. 7—Trust for public purposes of a religious or charitable nature — Trustee, if can apply to Civil Court for opinion, advice or direction.

A trustee of an express or constructive trust created or existing for a public purpose of a charitable or a religious nature can apply by petition to the Civil Court, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any substantial part of the subject-matter of the trust is situate, for the opinion, advice or direction of the Court on any question affecting the management or administration of the trust property, and the Court shall give its opinion, advice or direction, as the case may be, thereon. MADHO RAM v. JAI CHAND RAI All. 933

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Preamble, O. XLI. SEE C. P. Land Revenue Act, 1917, s. 201 557

——— s. 9—Claim for profits by one co sharer of an occupancy holding against another—Whether a suit of a civil nature—Co-sharers—Possession of one is possession of all—Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926), s. 233.

Where one of several co-sharers in an occupancy holding or other tenure is solely in possession, he cannot be considered to be in wrongful possession; nor can the co-sharers suing for profits be said to have been wrongfully dispossessed from the holding or tenure. Possession of one co-sharer is possession of all who should be deemed to be in constructive possession through the co-sharer who is in actual possession by cultivating the land or by receipt of rents from sub-tenants. A claim for profits by one co-sharer of an occupancy holding against another is a suit of a civil nature and hence under s. 9, Civil Procedure Code, the suit lies in the Civil Court. JUMNA DAS v. MISRI LAL All. 37

——— s. 10—Stay of suit — Conditions—Entire subject-matter in issue in later suit must be in issue in prior suit.

In order that a suit may be stayed under s. 10, Civil Procedure Code, pending the decision of a previously instituted suit in another Court, it is not sufficient that there should be one matter in issue in common in both the suits. The entire matter in issue in the subsequent suit must be in issue in the previous suit. MAHAGANAPATHI v. NATESA IYER Mad. 1002

——— s. 11.

SEE Oudh Estates Act, 1869, s 8 1087

SEE Res judicata 249 (b)

——— s. 11—A bringing suit for possession of his share against some members—B and C made co-defendants—B and C supporting A's claim—A's claim dismissed as time-barred—Subsequent suit by B and C against same members for partition of same property—Held, res judicata applied.

A suit was brought by A in 1913 against his three step-brothers for a share in a house which was in their possession. A's two nephews, B and C were made co-defendants. The plaint averred that there was a separation of the joint family by virtue of an agreement in 1878, though not by metes and bounds and since then the step-brothers were in exclusive possession of the property. A's case was supported by B and C who also asked the Court to ascertain their respective shares in the house. The High Court, on appeal, against the dismissal of the claim by the trial Court on the ground that it was time-barred and that the step-brothers were in adverse possession, found on evidence that there was a separation of the family members in 1878, and dismissed the claim as time-barred. In 1925 B and C brought a suit against their step-uncles for a share by partition in the same house alleging that it was joint ancestral property:

Held, that B and C were bound by the decision in the former suit and consequently the second suit was barred by res judicata. YESHVANT RAMCHANDRA BHIDE v. GOVIND CHINTAMAN BHIDE Bom. 50

——— s. 11—Ex parte finding that execution application is not time-barred—Notice to judgment-debtor—Both parties absent—Application dismissed—Another execution application—Judgment-debtor, if estopped from raising objection that first application is not within time—Execution—Estoppel

An execution application was prima facie time-barred but on the evidence of the decree-holder an ex parte finding that it was not time-barred was recorded. After this, notice was sent to the judgment-debtor to show cause why the execution should not be proceeded with against him, and both parties being absent on the fixed, date the execution application was dismissed. The decree-holder filed a second application whereupon the question of limitation of the first application was taken by the judgment-debtor:

Held, that the ex parte order which had been recorded against the judgment-debtor and which was to the effect that the application for execution was prima facie within time could not be taken to operate as res judicata or by way of estoppel or on any principle analogous to it. RAFATULLA FARAZI v. KUNDARMAL AGARWALLA Cal. 723

——— s. 11—First suit dismissed for multifariousness—Suit between landlord and tenant—Second suit on title—Res judicata if applies. SEE Hindu Law 7

——— s. 11—Res judicata—Principles of—Applicability of, to execution proceedings—Constructive res judicata.

Although s. 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not in terms apply to execution proceedings, yet the general principles underlying the rules of res judicata are applicable to execution proceedings. The applicability of the rule is not limited to matters, which were directly and substantially in issue and were heard and expressly decided in former execution proceedings, but the principle of "constructive res judicata", as embodied in Expl. IV to s. 11, also applies to such proceedings. PRABHU DAYAL v. DEWAT RAM Lah. 286

——— s. 13—Foreign judgment—Court dealing with it, if can inquire, whether decision is right or wrong.

It is not open to the Court trying a suit on a foreign judgment to decide whether the decision of the foreign Court on the materials put before it was right or not. The duty of the Court is merely to see that the foreign Court had applied its mind to the facts and the law on the point. POPAT VIRJI v. DAMODAR JAIRAM Bom. 711

———s. 16. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 21 677

———s. 21—Objection as to jurisdiction—Whether can be raised in appeal. SEE Jurisdiction 677

———ss. 21, 16—General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 3 (vii)—Question of jurisdiction depending upon public documents, if one of law—Quetta, if a part of British India.

Where a preliminary point, that Quetta not being in British India, the lower Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit, was raised for the first time at the final hearing of the appeal;

Held, (i) that the question of jurisdiction at issue was one of law depending upon public documents which required no proof and were presumed under s. 81, Evidence Act, to be genuine and this question could, therefore, be raised at a late stage.

(ii) Quetta did not form part of British India as defined in s. 3, General Clauses Act.

(iii) the point of jurisdiction involving the question whether a matter in dispute is within the jurisdiction of British Indian Court at all, could be raised, notwithstanding s. 21, Civil Procedure Code. DEV SAMAJ COUNCIL, LAHORE v. AMRITLAL MOTILAL Sind 677

——— s. 24. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 102 95

———s. 34. SEE Agra Tenancy Act, 1926, s. 225 943 F. B.

——— ss. 35, 141—Creditor's application for liquidation [of company not bona fide—Costs—Company.

Where it is clear that the action of the petitioning creditor in making the application for the winding up and in insisting upon further proceedings in liquidation is not bona fide, the entire costs of the liquidation should be paid by him. In the absence of a clear provision in the Companies Act dealing with a case of this kind, the matter is governed by s. 35, Civil Procedure Code. Under that section the High Court can pass proper orders in this behalf. In the matter of BOMBAY HOUSE, LTD. Lah. 852

———s. 47.

SEE Decree 974
SEE Mortgage 848
SEE Receiver 848

———s. 47—Suit for possession of village covered by lease—Second suit for ejectment—Third suit—Prayer for demolition of bhandar in village—Relief, if to be obtained in executing Court—Separate suit, if maintainable—Same cause of action—Son of defendant joined in suit—Whether makes separate suit maintainable—Point not taken in second suit—Res judicata, if operates.

The plaintiff brought a suit in 1920 for possession of a village which was the subject-matter of a thica lease and a judgment was obtained by the plaintiff and the decree for delivery of possession was put into execution. Again a suit was brought by the plaintiff of the former action for ejectment of some of the defendants from the bakasht land and a decree was again obtained. A third suit was filed by the plaintiff in respect of a plot of land in the same village on which a bhandar stood claiming that in spite of the delivery of possession through the Court he had not obtained actual possession of the land or part of the land which was the subject-matter of the lease;

Held, that it being not denied that the building was erected during the course of the lease, if the plaintiff had any right to have the building demolished before he got possession of the land at the hands of the defendant, then quite clearly he could make that claim in the former suit and that it was a cause of action or part of a cause of action which the plaintiff might have included in the first suit, and not having included it, he could not bring a separate suit with regard to it. As he had got a decree for possession of the property, any grievance he might have with regard to that matter must be made in the executing Court and not by way of a separate suit.

Held, also that the fact that another person had been joined to the third suit, a person who was not a party to the former actions, would not justify the suit unless it could be shown that the plaintiff had a separate cause of action against that person in which case the other defendant should not have been joined in the subsequent action. The fact of joining the son of the original trespasser alleging no particular cause of action against him is no answer to the point that any grievance that the plaintiff may have must be ventilated in the executing Court and not by way of a separate action.

Held, further that the mere fact that the point was not taken in the second suit did not give license to the plaintiff to continue to bring actions one after the other with regard to the property which was clearly a part of the property for which he got delivery of possession in the first suit. BHAGWAT SINGH v. KUMAR KAMAKHAYA NARAIN SINGH Pat. 268

——— ss. 47, 145—Surety for performance of decree, if a party—Order against him in respect of execution of decree if appealable.

A person who is liable as a surety for the performance of the decree shall, under s. 145, Civil Procedure Code, be deemed to be a party within the meaning of s. 47, Civil Procedure Code. An appeal would lie from an order against him in regard to the execution of the decree by the sale of his property. DAW MIN BAW v. CHETTYAR FIRM Rang. 511

———s 48—Application for execution—When should be treated as continuation of previous application—Previous application not proceeded with—Bar removed—Fresh application, if one to revive proceedings which had to be stopped.

An application for execution must be treated as a continuation of the previous application where the previous application could not be proceeded with on account of a bar having been placed by the allowance of the claim; and once the bar was removed that execution can proceed and the fresh application is nothing more than an application to revive the proceeding which had to be stopped BANARSI PRASAD v. KIRTYANAND SINGH Pat. 831

——— s 48, O. XXI, r. 17—Impleading true representative after 12 years from decree—Limitation—Effect of amendment.

An amendment to an execution petition made under sub-cl. (1) of O. XXI, r. 17, Civil Procedure Code, with the sanction of the Court relates back to the original presentation of the petition.

Where an application for execution was made against a wrong legal representative within 12 years of the decree but it was amended after the expiry of 12 years from the date of the decree, by bringing the name of the true legal representative on record:

Held, that the amendment recalled to the original presentation and the application was not barred under s. 48, Civil Procedure Code. SUBRA MANIA DESIKA v. RANGASWAMI CHETTIAR Mad. 327

———s. 52. SEE Practice 285

———s. 60 (1) (g)—Ala jagirs in Ambala District —Whether political pensions—Exemption from attachment.

Jagirs known as "ala jagirs" in the Ambala District, should be treated as political pensions and so exempt from attachment in execution of decrees within the meaning of s. 60 (1), Civil Procedure Code. SHIV NARAIN SINGH v. MUNI LAL Lah. 540 (b)

———s. 64. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 73 918

———s. 73—Application for rateable distribution —Court, if can inquire as to whether decree is proper or bona fide one—Remedy of aggrieved judgment-creditor.

The Execution Court is only concerned with those matters which are set out as being the conditions for participation, and so long as a decree is put forward by the holder of that decree, and the holder of the decree satisfies the Court that the money due under that decree has not been paid, then that decree-holder is entitled to come in and claim a proportionate share in the assets of the judgment-debtor. If any part of those assets is paid out to a decree-holder who has obtained a decree by fraud or collusion or by any other improper means, then a remedy is open to the judgment-creditor who has suffered from those circumstances, as provided for in sub-s. (2), s. 73 of the Civil Procedure Code. The dominating factor with regard to this point is this: that the Court concerned with the distribution of the assets is doing something in connection with execution proceedings. The distribution of assets is only one of the acts in the execution proceedings, and the Court is functioning in an administrative and not in a judicial capacity, and no procedure is provided under the provisions of s. 73 of the Act of 1908, and no machinery exists for the holding of an enquiry of the kind involved in the ascertainment as to whether or not the decree is not a bona fide or proper decree. BISWAMBAR BISWAS v. APARNA CHARAN MOHARY Cal. 480 F B.

———s. 73, 64, O. XXI, r 55—Assets in s. 73, meaning of—Assets not held by Court—Decree-holder, if entitled to rateable distribution—Two decrees against same judgment debtor — Attachment of property in execution of first decree—Private sale of property by judgment-debtor—Application for rateable distribution—Purchaser depositing decretal amount with consent of decree-holder—Release of property from attachment—Legality of—Waiver by decree-holder.

A fund or a sum of money cannot be regarded as assets unless it is in some sense the property of the judgment-debtor and can therefore be legitimately applied to the payment of his debt. Any money which belongs to a stranger or any money paid into Court by a third party under a misapprehension cannot be described as assets. When no assets are held by the Court the holder of the second decree is not entitled to rateable distribution.

The decree-holder had two decrees against the same judgment-debtor. In pursuance of execution of first decree, a property of the judgment debtor was attached. Before the sale, the judgment-debtor sold the property. In execution of the second decree, the decree-holder applied for rateable distribution of the assets in the first execution proceedings. The purchaser of the property with the consent of the decree-holder deposited the decretal amount and costs in the first execution case and the property was released from attachment. The execution case was struck out on full satisfaction. To this the decree-holder objected contending that the order striking out the execution case was wrong in law and that as he had applied for rateable distribution, the sum deposited should be rateably distributed between the two execution cases in which he was the decree-holder and that the sum if so rateably distributed would be in part satisfaction of the decrees and he was entitled to have the property sold in execution:

Held, that as the decree-holder had consented to the deposit and by his conduct he must be deemed to have waived the benefit of s. 64, Civil Procedure Code, the attachment of the property must be necessarily deemed to have terminated and the private sale by the judgment-debtor must be held to be valid. RADHA MOHAN v. WAHIDAN Pat. 918

———s. 80—Notice under, whether should be copy of plaint—Notice showing that assessment of cess on income from hat was ultra vires—Relief asked being relief from such assessment—All forms of reliefs need not be given in detail—Relief not covered in notice added in plaint—Entire suit should not be dismissed.

What s. 80, Civil Procedure Code, requires is that the notice should contain the cause of action, etc., and the relief claimed. If the fact that a particular rule was ultra vires is mentioned in the notice and omitted from the plaint, the notice does not become invalid on that ground. From the plain meaning of s. 80, Civil Procedure Code, the notice need not be practically a copy of the plaint. The notice should be such as to give substantial information to the Government, the basis of the claim and the relief which the plaintiffs seek. Where it is obvious from the notice taken as a whole that the plaintiffs wanted to have it declared by the Court that the assessment of cess on their zemindari on the income of the hat was ultra vires and that the relief which they wanted to seek was that they should be relieved of that assessment, it is not incumbent upon the plaintiffs to give in detail all the forms in which they would seek the relief.

The addition in the plaint, of a relief which was not covered by the notice does not entail the dismissal of the entire suit. It is open to the plaintiffs to amend their plaint at any stage and proceed with the suit without a prayer for that relief SOURENDRA MOHAN SINHA v. SECRETARY OF STATE Pat. 1099

———s. 99. SEE Compromise 1067

———s. 100. SEE Adverse possession, plea of 23

———s. 100—Discretion as to costs exercised by lower Court—No legal principle involved—Second appeal, competency of.

Where the Courts below have exercised their discretion and no legal point or matter of principle is involved, the High Court will not interfere in second appeal. FATEH SINGH v. MAUJ RAI Lah. 558

———s. 100—Finding as to who broke the contract, if can be challenged in second appeal.

In a contract to sell and to buy, a finding by the lower Appellate Court as to who broke the contract is a finding of fact which cannot be challenged in second appeal. MOHANLAL MARWADI v. GYANIRAM Nag. 778

———s. 100—Finding based on admissible evidence—Finding of fact.

Where evidence which is admissible is admitted and a finding arrived at by the lower Appellate Court, the finding is one of fact and cannot be questioned in second appeal. BANAPHAL SINGH v. NOOR MOHAMMAD All. 634

———s. 100—New plea involving question of jurisdiction—Whether can be raised for first time in second appeal.

The Court of second appeal can, in the interests of justice allow to be raised for the first time a plea involving a question of jurisdiction. KHUD MUKHTAR BANK, UTRAWAN v. BHAGWAN DIN Oudh 92

——— s. 100—Question, whether sanadi inam lands are kadim or jadid is one of law—Inam.

The question whether the sanadi inam lands were kadim inam or jadid inam is one, the determination of which depends on the legal effect of certain facts which have been proved by the evidence in the case. Consequently, it is a question of law, into which the High Court is entitled to go, in second appeal. SECRETARY OF STATE v. RAJARAM PARASHRAM Bom. 763

——— s. 100—Rejection of evidence on finding of fact—Finding of fact, whether can be interfered with.

In deciding a question of fact the lower Appellate Court had rejected certain evidence on a legal presumption:

Held, that the finding of the Court on the question of fact could not be interfered with in second appeal. SHER BAHADUR SINGH v. MADHO PRASAD SINGH Oudh 1087

——— s. 100—Second appeal — Finding of fact arrived at in complete disregard of legal questions involved — Whether can be interfered with in second appeal.

Where the finding of the lower Appellate Court is so worded as to amount to a finding of fact but it has been arrived at in complete disregard of the legal propositions involved in the consideration of the question, the finding is vitiated by errors of law and can be interfered with in second appeal. BABOO SINGH v. RAM MANOHAR All. 824 ——— ss. 100, 115—Mixed question of law and fact—Erroneous decision—Interference in revision —Legality of.

Where the question is a mixed one of fact and law, and from one point of view, the lower Court has decided erroneously, this fact does not give the High Court jurisdiction to interfere in revision. MRS. M. D'SILVA v. MRS. MINNIE LAL Pat. 419

——— s. 102—Suit of nature cognizable by Small Cause Court—Defence, nature of, if makes any difference as to nature of suit—Suit for damages for cutting of and appropriation of fruit of trees —Defence that land on which trees stood did not belong to plaintiffs—S. 102, if applies—Second appeal, if lies.

Section 102 of the Code of Civil Procedure contemplates a suit of the nature cognizable by Courts of Small Causes irrespective of what defence is put up in the case.

A suit for damages in regard to the cutting of two seeshum trees and appropriation of the fruit of mango trees is of a nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. The defence that the land on which the trees stood did not belong to the plaintiffs makes no difference so far as the nature of the suit is concerned. Section 102, Civil Procedure Code, applies to it and no second appeal is competent. NARPAT SINGH v. JAGOO SINGH Oudh 240

——— ss. 102, 24—U. P. Honorary Munsifs Act (II of 1896), ss. 7, cl. (4), 9—Suit of value below Rs. 500—Institution of suit in Honorary Munsif's Court — Transfer by District Judge to Munsif's Court —Trial by Munsif— Second appeal from decision of Munsif to High Court—Competency of.

Where a suit for a sum of money below Rs. 500 was rightly filed in the Honorary Munsif's Court but on the Honorary Munsif writing to the District Judge that as he was related to one of the parties, he would not like to try the suit, the District Judge under s. 24, Civil Procedure Code transferred the suit from the Court of the Honorary Munsif to another Court which was not a Court of Small Causes, and the suit was heard by that Munsif:

Held, that it was not obligatory on the District Judge to transfer it to the Court of Small Causes but as the suit was of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court and was heard by a Munsif against whose decision an appeal did lie, the decision of the lower Appellate Court was not appealable by way of a second appeal to the High Court under s. 102, Civil Procedure Code. SULAIMAN HUSAIN KHAN v. SITA All. 95

——— ss. 104 (2), 96 (3)—Second appeal from order recording disputed compromise whether lies.

No second appeal lies from an order recording a compromise when the factum or legality of the compromise is questioned. MAHAMMAD MIA PANDIT v. OSMAN ALI Cal. 915

——— s. 104 (2), O. XLIII (m)—Order under O. XLIII (m) on appeal—Second appeal, if lies.

No appeal lies from any order passed in appeal under O. XLIII (m), Civil Procedure Code. SHAH JAHAN BEGAM v GHULAM RABBANI All. 1067

——— s. 104 (f). SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, Sch II, para 14 1022

——— s. 107—Remand—Pleadings and issues clear —Parties not producing evidence—Case, if to be remanded for re-hearing.

Where the pleadings and issues are clear and the parties cannot have failed to appreciate what the real issues were that fell for determination in the suit, but plaintiff has not produced evidence, the case should not be remanded to the trial Court for re-hearing. A. P. L. PALANIAPPA CHETTIAR v. A. K. R. M. S. FIRM Rang. 10

——— ss. 109, 110, 112—Proceedings for contempt for publication of article in newspaper by Advocate — Whether in the exercise of inherent jurisdiction of Court and of a criminal nature—Leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council—Whether can be granted.

Where the High Court took cognizance of contempt committed by the publication of an article in a newspaper by an Advocate and ordered notice to be issued to the writer, editor and printer and publisher to show cause why they should not be convicted and punished for contempt, the proceedings are in the exercise of the inherent jurisdiction of the High Court and of a criminal nature. A mere misdescription in the notice issued by the office will not make the proceeding one of a civil nature. Nor can it be said that merely because the Advocate was an officer of this Court, the proceeding against him was of an administrative character. The conviction and the fine imposed are themselves sufficient to show at least that the proceeding was not of a civil nature. The matter is of an exclusive jurisdiction and the order is final.

Section 110, Civil Procedure Code has no application to such a case. Nor is s. 109 applicable and s. 112, sub-s. (2) expressly makes the Code inapplicable to matters of criminal jurisdiction. Further as the question for consideration being not so much of jurisdiction as of an interpretation of the passage objected to, the case cannot be certified as being otherwise a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council. KAPILDEVA MALVIYA v. HON'BLE THE CHIEF JUSTICE AND THE HON'BLE JUDGES OF THE HIGH COURT AT ALLAHABAD All. 188

——— s. 110—Decision on question of impartibility of estate—Whether one affecting whole estate.

A decision on the question of the impartibility of an estate raised as a bar to the suit for partition is one which possibly affects the estate and if the value of the estate is above Rs. 10,000, appeal to His Majesty in Council is competent. KARUNAKAR TIKAIT v. PURNA CHANDRA Pat. 633

——— s. 110—Lower Court's decree modified by High Court—Liability of appellant reduced as a result—High Court decree, if one of affirmance.

Where as a result of the High Court decree which modifies the decree of the lower Court, the liability of the appellant under the decree is reduced to a certain extent, the decree of the High Court is not one of affirmance. B. N. RY. CO., LTD. v. RUTTANJI RAMJI Cal. 727

——— s. 110—Question, whether in partition suit valuation for purposes of appeal to Privy Council should be of entire property—Whether of sufficient importance to allow appeal to Privy Council.

The question whether for the purpose of s. 110 of the Civil Procedure Code in the right to appeal to His Majesty in Council the valuation for the purpose of that section is to be taken of the entire property which it was sought to partition or whether it is the value of the share claimed by the plaintiff itself is one of sufficient importance for allowing leave to appeal to the Privy Council. KARUNAKAR TIKAIT SAMANTA v. PURNA CHANDRA BIDYADHAR MAHAPATRA Pat. 633

——— s. 110, O. XLI, r. 35—Two cross-appeals separately disposed of—One allowed but the other dismissed—Effect—Decision in latter, if not one of affirmance—Appeal to Privy Council—Leave, if can be granted.

When two cross-appeals are separately disposed of, the matters in controversy in the two appeals are distinct and separate and, therefore, the adjudications of such matters are also distinct and separate. The dismissal of the plaintiff's appeal is, therefore, an affirmance of the adjudication made by the first Court so far as the matter in controversy in the plaintiff's appeal is concerned. Whereas the allowing of the defendants appeal is a variation of the adjudication of the first Court so far as the matter in controversy in that appeal is concerned. From the mere fact that a cross-appeal has been allowed and the adjudication varied so far as the matter in controversy in that appeal is concerned, it does not follow that the decision in the other appeal which is dismissed is not one of affirmance. Consequently where there are cross-appeals filed in the High Court on behalf of the plaintiff and the defendant and the defendants' appeal is decreed and the decree of the Court below varied, but the plaintiff's appeal is dismissed, the plaintiff cannot be allowed to appeal against the judgment of the High Court reversing the first Court's decree. BENARES BANK, LTD., AGRA v. RAJNATH KUNZUR All. 487 F. B

——— s. 112. See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 109 188

——— s. 115.

See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 100 419
See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. IX, r. 13 837
See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXI, r. 97 957

——— s. 115—Decree on award—Revision, whether lies.

It cannot be laid down as a general rule that the High Court cannot interfere in revision under s. 115, Civil Procedure Code, with a decree passed in accordance with an award. Revision is permissible if the arbitrators or the Court have exceeded their jurisdiction or acted with material irregularity in exercising their jurisdiction. SAVARALA VENKATASUBBIAH v. KUMARA RAMIAH Mad. 381

Civil Procedure Code—contd.

——— s. 115—Error of law not raising any question of jurisdiction—If a good ground for revision—Punjab Courts Act (VI of 1918), s 44,

A mere error of law which does not raise any question affecting jurisdiction is no good ground for interference in revision. KRISHNA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE LTD., v FIRM L. PREM SINGH KISHEN CHAND Lah. 533

——— s. 115—High Court's power of interference—Limits of.

Per Courtney-Terrell, C. J.—The High Court will not interfere in revision with a decision on the merits even if the lower Court should err both in law and in fact, provided always that such subordinate Court had jurisdiction to entertain the dispute between the parties. But if the Court had no jurisdiction whatever to entertain the matter, the High Court must listen to the contention and if it finds that the lower Court has made a mistake as to the extent of its jurisdiction, it may then interfere and this is particularly so when the lower Court, in determining the ambit of its own jurisdiction, construes a legislative enactment.

Per Dhavle, J.—An erroneous decision on a question of law or fact after jurisdiction has been once legally assumed would not be a ground for interference, but if the decision is the very basis and foundation of jurisdiction in its limited sense as distinguished from powers it at once comes within the purview of the s. 115, Civil Procedure Code and the petitioner should be heard as the objections on the ground of another remedy being open to him are not objections in limine? HARIHAR PRASAD v. GOPAL SARAN Pat. 976

——— s. 115—Revision—Omission to decide question of estoppel—Revision to prevent prolonging of litigation.

The High Court has power to interfere in revision under its general powers of superintendence to prevent an inquiry which would not only prolong the litigation unnecessarily but would also lead to a determination of the rights of the parties upon an improper basis. Where the Court declined to decide a question of estoppel which clearly arose on the pleadings and appointed a Commissioner for local inquiry:

Held, the High Court had power to interfere in revision and set aside the order appointing a Commissioner. POTTA REDDI v KARUPPA GOUNDAN Mad. 1013

——— s. 115, O. VII, r. 11—Interlocutory order—Powers of interference of High Court—Interlocutory order on question of court-fee—Revision, if competent.

Although ordinarily the High Court will not interfere in revision with an interlocutory order when there is another course open to him, yet when there is no right of appeal and the order complained against is calculated to cause irreparable damage to the petitioner, the High Court may interfere with an interlocutory order. An interlocutory order deciding the question of court-fee will not be interfered with in revision as another remedy by way of appeal is open to the injured party. RAMKINKAR SINGH v. JOGENDRA NATH SINGH Pat. 617

——— s. 115, O. IX, rr. 9, 13—Suit on behalf of minor plaintiff—Dismissal for default—Duty to restore even if no cause for non-appearance of guardian is shown—Restoration of suit—Necessity of adjournment for final hearing—Ex parte decree on same day—Small Cause suit—Application for revision against ex parte decree—Maintainability.

Civil Procedure Code—contd.

Where a suit instituted on behalf of a minor is dismissed for default owing to the non-appearance of the guardian on the date of hearing and the minor applies for the restoration of the suit to the file, the suit should be restored, whether the guardian had sufficient reasons for non-appearance or not.

If a suit dismissed for default is restored, the Court should, in view of the provisions of O. IX, r. 13, Civil Procedure Code, appoint a day for proceeding with the suit. It is illegal for the Court to proceed with the suit on the same day on which the suit is restored.

Where the Court restored a small cause suit which had been dismissed for default and on the same day passed an ex parte decree against the defendants and the latter applied to the High Court to revise the decree:

Held, that it was not incumbent on the defendants to apply for setting aside the decree under s. 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act and the High Court had power to set aside the decree in revision. SANNIDHI CHINNASUBBARAYULU v. GODASI VEERASWAMI Mad. 575

——s. 115, O. XXV, r. 1—Security for costs—Order on application for security—Revision, whether lies—Order for security against pauper plaintiff—Permissibility.

Where a defendant put in a petition for security for costs at the earliest possible opportunity but the Court, instead of disposing of the petition at once, adjourned the petition along with the case and finally dismissed the petition on the ground that as the suit itself was ready for trial and the defendant had already incurred the costs, no useful purpose could be served by directing the plaintiff to furnish security for costs:

Held, that the procedure adopted was calculated to defeat the entire object of petitions of this nature and as the Court acted with material irregularity in exercising its jurisdiction, the High Court had power to interfere and set aside the order of the lower Court.

There is no absolute rule of law that a pauper plaintiff cannot be asked to furnish security under O. XXV, r. 1, (3). If it is shown that a pauper plaintiff is a puppet in the hands of persons able to find security, it would not be improper to make an order for furnishing security for costs.

Though an order requiring security for costs is entirely a matter of discretion with which the High Court would not interfere in revision, the High Court can interfere where the lower Court has acted with material irregularity in exercising its jurisdiction. S. RAMASWAMI PILLAI v. KRISHNAMAL Mad. 317

——s. 115 (c), O. VI, r. 17—Scope of cl. (c) of s. 115—High Court, when will interfere with interlocutory orders—Calcutta High Court—Practice.

Clause (c) of s. 115, Civil Procedure Code, has been advisedly left in indefinite language in order to empower the High Court to interfere and correct gross and palpable errors of Subordinate Courts for the ends of justice.

So far as the Calcutta High Court is concerned, it can be said to be now fairly established that the High Court will not interfere with interlocutory orders unless an irreparable injury will be done and a miscarriage will inevitably issue if it holds its hand. If, however, irreparable injury would be caused to one of the litigants if the matter was not set right, the High Court ought to intervene in the current litigation and disturb the normal progress of a case by revising an interlocutory order that has been passed by a Subordinate Court.

Ordinarily the discretion of a judicial officer will not be reviewed by the High Court in revision. But it is impossible to lay down a hard and fast rule, that in no instances will the discretion exercised by the judicial officer be reviewed either under s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code or s. 107, Government of India Act, or under the combined operation of the two sections. Under s. 107, Government of India Act (s. 15 of the Charter), the High Court can interfere where irreparable injury will be done to one of the litigants or where there will be a failure of justice if the matter is not set right. INDU BALA DASSI v. LAKSHMI NARAYAN GANGULY Cal. 109 ——ss. 115, 151, 145—Execution application dismissed for default—Restoration application also dismissed—Revision from former order, if lies.

Where an execution petition is dismissed in default of a decree-holder and an application to restore it is also dismissed, revision from the order of dismissal of execution petition does not lie. KASHMIRI LAL v. CHUNI LAL Lah. 503

——s. 141. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 35 852

——s. 141, O. XXXXIII, r. 1, Explanation—Application to file an application for succession certificate as pauper—Civil Procedure Code, whether applicable—Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), s. 379.

The applicants cannot be declared paupers, unless the requirements of the Explanation to r. 1, O. XXXIII, are strictly fulfilled. The deposit under s. 379, Succession Act, of a sum equal to the fee payable on a succession certificate cannot be considered to be court-fee payable on the application for a succession certificate (which corresponds to a plaint in a suit). This deposit is made necessary to ensure payment of court-fee when the succession certificate is to be issued. As a matter of fact, the court-fee on such certificate is payable under the Court Fees Act, Sch. I Art. 12, and is paid when the certificate is issued, i. e., after the termination of proceedings under the Succession Act. The test of pauperism, laid down by the explanation to r. 1, O. XXXIII, Civil Procedure Code, therefore, is not that the applicants have no means of paying the sum required to be deposited under s. 379, Succession Act, but that they have no means of paying the court-fee on the application for a succession certificate, that is, a trifling amount of eight annas.

Quære:—Whether in view of legistative changes embodying the provisions for grant of succession certificates in the Succession Act, the general provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure applies by virtue of s. 141 of the Code to a Court sitting as a Court administering the Succession Certificate Act. EHATISHAMMUNNISA v. MIR HADI ALI All. 118

——ss. 144, 154—Restitution—Power of Court to grant, apart from s. 144—Inherent powers.

The power of the Executing Court to grant restitution is not confined to the cases governed by s. 144. A Court has inherent power to grant restitution apart from the power bestowed by that section. MAM CHAND v. ALI MUHAMMAD Lah. 500

——s. 145.

SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 47 511

SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 115 503

——s. 148. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXI, r. 89. 603

Civil Procedure Code—contd.

——— s. 151.
See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 115 503
See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 144 500

——— s. 151—Objection to execution — Objection upheld—Order for delivery of possession not passed —Restoration of possession under s. 151—Necessity of.

A tenant R sold part of his lands to B and later on a part to K. Both the sales were accepted by the landlord. He then filed a suit for arrears of rent against R, B and K including also rent for a period prior to the sale. An ex parte decree was passed but not against any definite portion of the land. In execution he brought to sale lands sold to B and K as well and was given possession. B and K objected and the Court held that their interest was not affected by the sale but as they were said to be in possession, no orders were passed:

Held, that the Court should have, under s. 151, Civil Procedure Code, restored possession to the objectors and directed that the possession should be re-delivered of their respective portions to the objectors as s. 151 emphasises the fact that nothing in the Code prevents the Court from passing such order as may be necessary to meet the ends of justice or to prevent the abuse of the processes of the Court. Kabutri v. Ram Prashad Sahu Pat. 225

——— s. 151—Order under s. 151, if appealable.

No appeal from the order passed in the exercise of inherent jurisdiction under s. 151, Civil Procedure Code, is competent. Kashmiri Lal v. Chuni Lal Lah. 503 ——— ss. 151, 152, O. XXIII, r. 1—Suit for possession—Proceedings in Criminal Court pending — Plaintiff given possession of some land—Appeal granting possession of the rest—Criminal Court's order upset—Application for amendment of decree of Civil Court—Maintainability—Declaratory suit —Evidence closed—No formal defect—Application to withdraw with liberty to bring fresh suit— Whether should be granted.

P brought a suit under s. 9, Specific Relief Act, for possession of land against K and others. K brought a suit against P for a declaration of his title to the same land and both the suits were tried simultaneously. Criminal proceedings between the parties were also pending about the same time and possession of a part of the land in suit was restored to P by the Criminal Court. Counsel for the plaintiff, made a statement in Court that his client had received possession of a part of the land in dispute. Counsel for K and others stated that an appeal had been preferred against the award of possession to P. The suit proceeded and finally the Judge granted a decree to P for possession of the land in suit excluding that portion in respect of which a statement had been made by his Counsel that possession had been given to him by the Criminal Court. Subsequent to the judgment and the decree that followed it, an application was made on behalf of P, purporting to be under ss. 151 and 152, Civil Procedure Code, alleging that at the date of the judgment and the decree the order of the Criminal Court awarding possession of a part of the disputed land to P had been set aside by the Appellate Court and P had been dispossessed of that land. A prayer was therefore made that the judgment and decree be amended under the sections mentioned above so as to include that land also in the decree. In the suit brought by K against P it was alleged on behalf of K that a third person, not party to the suit, had taken possession of the disputed property and, therefore a decree, if passed in K's favour, would become infructuous. An application was, therefore, made to withdraw the suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit. This application was granted by the Court:

Held, that this was not a case in which action under s. 152, Civil Procedure Code, could be taken because on the material on the record the judgment and decree were correct. But if the facts alleged by the petitioner were true, the trial Court should have, in the peculiar circumstances of the case, proceeded under s. 151 to make the necessary amendments in its judgment and decree because during the pendency of the suit there had been a change in the circumstances of the case which had restored the parties to the position in which they were on the date of the institution of the suit.

Held, also, that as regards the case by K against P the circumstances did not satisfy the requirements of O. XXIII, r. 1 according to which permission to withdraw the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit can be awarded only if the suit is likely to fail on account of some formal defect. There was no formal defect in this case. The evidence of the parties had been closed and the only question involved was whether K or P had title to the property and that question could be decided irrespective of the consideration whether a third person had or had not taken illegal possession of the property; presumably according to both the parties the third party's possession was illegal and hence the suit should not be allowed to be withdrawn. Pyare Lal v. Kale Khan Lah. 186

——— ss. 151, 152, 153, O. I, r. 8—Powers under —Discretion—Suit in representative capacity by one creditor—Other creditors brought on record as plaintiffs by officer of Court mistaking order of Court—Dismissal of suit with costs—Amendment of decree and plaint for removal of names of other creditors from array of plaintiffs — Whether should be allowed.

The language of ss. 152 and 153, Civil Procedure Code, is wide enough to cover the correction of mistakes and errors in any proceeding in a suit. Extensive powers may be exercised under the provisions of ss. 151, 152 and 153 of the Code, and the question whether these extensive powers ought to be exercised in any given case is a matter purely within the discretion of the Court with reference to the facts of each particular case.

The plaintiff in a suit applied for permission to sue on behalf of all creditors of the defendant. All that was required of the Court under O. I, r. 8, Civil Procedure Code, was to have a notice of the institution of the suit sent at the expense of the plaintiff to all such persons whom the plaintiff wanted to implead either by personal service or where from the number of persons or any other cause such service was not reasonably possible, by public advertisement as the Court in each case might direct. But although no order was passed by the Court making them plaintiffs, the peshkar of the Court amended the plaint by bringing them on record. The suit was ultimately dismissed with costs and the defendants applied in execution for recovery of their costs not only from the plaintiff but also from the other creditors who had been wrongly impleaded as plaintiffs:

Held, that Court neither intended nor had the jurisdiction to saddle the other creditors with the costs of the suit and that this was a fit case in which the High Court should exercise the powers vested in them under ss. 151, 152 and 153, Civil Procedure Code and their names should be removed from the array of the plaintiffs in the plaint and the decree. MUSADDI LAL v. DAL CHAND Oudh 236

Civil Procedure Code—contd.

———s. 152. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 151 186

———s. 152—Order under—Applicability—Judge purporting to act under s. 152 but wrongly passing fresh decree—Appeal, if lies.

Although no appeal lies from an order under s. 152, Civil Procedure Code, yet where the Judge purporting to act under s. 152, wrongly passes a fresh decree, the mere fact that the new decree was wrongly passed does not take away the plaintiff's right to appeal. SHEOGA v. DHANNA Lah. 587

———ss. 152, 153. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 151 236

———O. I, r. 3. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXXIV, r. 1 156

———O. I, r. 8. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 151 236

———O. I, r. 13—Non-joinder of parties—Objection as to—When should be raised.

If the objection as to non-joinder is not made in time the defendant cannot take it afterwards either before or after judgment.

A suit was brought by A who described himself in the plaint as proprietor of the firm A-B. B was then dead and had left a widow but she was not made a party to the suit. The defendants raised no objection as to non-joinder and the issues between the parties were settled on March 12, 1932. The case was fixed for evidence on May 25, 1932. On that date the defendants raised an objection to the effect that A was not competent to sue alone without impleading the widow of B as a party. A thereupon, made a statement to the effect that on the death of B he became the sole owner of the firm A-B. It was held that the interest of B's widow had not passed to A at the time of the institution of the suit and that he was, therefore, not competent to sue in his own name. The suit was, therefore, dismissed. On appeal the District Judge held that the objection as to non-joinder not having been raised before the issues were settled, it should be deemed to have been waived and should not have been allowed to be taken subsequently. The Judge also expressed the opinion that the suit was in substance on behalf of the firm A-B and that the heading of the plaint could be treated merely as a misdescription. The appeal was, therefore, accepted and the case was remanded for a decision on the merits.

Held, that the case fell within the purview of O. I, r. 13, Civil Procedure Code and that the objection which was not raised before the settlement of issues should not have been allowed to be raised subsequently. TRIKHA RAM v. DURGA PARSHAD Lah. 314

———O. I, r. 13—Suit not brought in firm's name—All partners should be impleaded.

If a suit is not brought in the name of a firm all the partners should be impleaded. TRIKHA RAM v. DURGA PARSHAD Lah. 314

———O. III, r. 2—Appeal, if proceeding in suit—Power-of-attorney authorising agent to prosecute claim—Authority to file appeal, if implied.

An appeal is a proceeding in a suit and the prosecution of a suit includes the prosecution of all the proceedings till a final decree is passed. Where a power-of-attorney authorises the agent to prosecute the claim (pervi dawa), it confers an implied authority on him to file an appeal. BALQIS BEGAM v. MUHAMMAD HAMDAM Lah. 479

Civil Procedure Code—contd.

———O. V, r. 15 (as amended by Allahabad High Court). SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XLI, r. 21 676

———O. VI, r. 4. SEE Fraud 890

———O. VI, r. 17. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 115 (c) 1109

———O. VI, r. 17—Amendment of plaint—Suit to declare right to worship for particular year—Expiry of year before trial—Amendment of plaint for declaration of right to worship by turns—Permissibility.

Order VI, r. 17, Civil Procedure Code of 1908 is considerably wider than the corresponding section of the old Code and Court is given very wide power or discretion to allow amendments especially to avoid multiplicity of suits.

The plaintiff filed a suit for a declaration that they were golla mirasidars of a temple and that in pursuance of an agreement they were entitled to enjoy the said office according to turns from July 1, 1931, to June 30, 1932, and for possession of the office. The suit did not come up for trial till March 1933. The plaintiff, therefre, prayed for amending the plaint by adding a prayer for a declaration that they were entitled to get possession during alternate years :

Held, that the case was one in which an amendment ought to be allowed. GOLLA LAKSHMIAH NAIDU v. GOLLA KRISHNASWAMI NAIDU Mad. 1016

———O. VI, r. 17—Plaint, amendment of—If can be allowed at the stage of hearing of appeal. SEE Specific Relief Act, 1877, s. 42 209

———O. VII, r. 6—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 19—Plea of limitation resting on certain acknowledgment taken for first time at time of argument—Whether can be allowed.

When a plaintiff deliberately takes up a definite position as to when the cause of action arose, he cannot be allowed to shift his ground later on, when he finds that position untenable. Thus the plaintiff cannot be allowed to take up a new plea of limitation resting on certain acknowledgment at the stage of arguments, when he finds his original position untenable. To adopt such a course is unfair, as the defendant has no notice either of the plea or of the statements in certain documents on which reliance is sought to be placed and he cannot, therefore, be reasonably expected to meet the plea. SECRETARY OF STATE v. AKBAR SHAH Lah. 819

———O. VII, r. 11. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 115 617

———O. VIII, rr. 8, 9, O. IX, r. 3—Clerk of Court fixing date in absence of presiding Judge—Failure to appear on such date—Whether justifies dismissal in default.

In the absence of the presiding Judge, the clerk of the Court has no power to fix a date. Failure to appear on the date so fixed does not justify dismissal in default. HUKAM CHAND v. MANI SHIBRAT DASS Lah. 514 (a) ———O. IX, r. 9.

SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 11 882

SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 115 575

———O. IX, r. 9—Calcutta High Court Rules and Orders (Original Side), Chap. X, r. 36—Res judicata—Suit dismissed under Chap. X, r. 36—Plaintiff, if debarred from bringing fresh suit.

On general principles there is nothing to prevent a plaintiff, whose suit has been dismissed for want of prosecution, from instituting forthwith a suit against the same defendant upon the same cause of action and, in the absence of any rule made by the Court to deal with such a state of affairs, where the suit is dismissed under the provisions of Chap. X, r. 36, Calcutta High Court Rules and Orders (Original Side), the plaintiff is at liberty to bring a fresh suit if he be so minded. SHAILABALA DASEE v. GOBARDHANDAS LADSARIA Cal. 158

——— O. IX, r. 9—Suit dismissed for want of prosecution under O. IX, r. 9—No issues tried—Res judicata.

The question of res judicata does not arise where a suit is dismissed for want of prosecution, under O. IX, r. 9, Civil Procedure Code, and the issues which are raised or might have been raised are never tried out and there is no judicial determination of any of them. SAMARENDRANATH MITRA v. PYAREEHARAN LAHA Cal. 882

——— O. IX, r. 13. See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 115 575

——— O. IX, r. 13, s. 115—Held, decree was indivisible and could not be dismissed against one and allowed to proceed against the other—Revision.

Held, that the decree against father and son was one and indivisible and it could not be allowed to stand against father alone, and where such a result comes from the lower Court's decision, the High Court can interfere in revision. NANAK CHAND v. HAZARI MAL Lah. 837

——— O. IX, r. 13, O. XVII, r. 2—Finding as to sufficient cause—Necessity of, under O. IX, r. 13—Case fixed for final hearing—Pleader applying for adjournment and then stating 'no instructions'—Dismissal—Application by way of restoration under O. XVII, r. 2—Whether lies—Remedy of defendant.

Under O. IX, r. 13, Civil Procedure Code, it is necessary that the Court should find that defendants were prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing.

Where on the date fixed for final hearing of a suit, the pleader for defendants asked for an adjournment which was refused and he then stated he had no instructions and the case was heard and decided:

Held, that as the pleader was engaged in making an application it must be held that the defendants did appear on the date in question and hence no application by way of restoration under O. XVII, r. 2 lay and that the only remedy which defendants had against the decree was by way of appeal. RAM SARAN DAS v. MALLU All. 249 (a)

——— O. XIX, r. 2. See C. P. Land Revenue Act, 1917, s. 201 557

——— O. XIX, r. 3—Affidavit not stating grounds of belief—Necessity of.

Where the deponent in his affidavit does not say which part is based on information and which on belief, nor the grounds of his belief, the affidavit is defective. DURGADAS DAS v. NALIN CHANDRA NANDAN Cal. 354 (b) ——— O. XXI, r. 2—"Decree of any kind" in O. XXI, r. 2—Meaning of.

The words "of any kind" in para. (1) to O. XXI, r. 2, Civil Procedure Code, were introduced in the Code of 1908 in order to get over conflicts between various High Courts on the question of whether or not the mere word "decree" as it originally stood referred only to decrees for the payment of money. The words "decree of any kind" mean a decree of any kind capable of execution. It does not include a preliminary decree. HARIHAR PRASAD v. GOPAL SARAN Pat. 976

——— O. XXI, r. 2, if applies to payment made before final decree for sale.

Order XXI, r. 2, Civil Procedure Code, does not apply to a payment made before the final decree for sale. SEWA RAM v. PARBHU DAYAL Oudh 231

——— O. XXI, r. 2, O. XXIII, r. 3, O. XXXIV, r. 5—Suits on mortgages—Whether excluded from operation of O. XXIII, r. 3—Payment made out of Court before final decree—Payment admitted by plaintiff—Payment, if to be ignored for not being made as required by O. XXXIV, r. 5—Procedure—Inquiry as to whether payment has in fact been made—Necessity of.

The provisions of O. XXI, r. 2, and O. XXIII, r. 3, are complimentary of each other. There is nothing in the terms of O. XXIII, r. 3 to exclude suits based on mortgages from the operation of this rule. While on the one hand O XXXIV, r. 5 contemplates a payment into Court, on the other hand under O. XXIII, r. 3, the payment has to be recognised even though it has been made out of Court. If before a final decree is passed a payment is made out of Court and the payment is admitted by the plaintiff, it would be in the highest degree unreasonable to ignore that payment because of its not being made in Court as required by O. XXXIV, r. 5. In such cases if the payment is admitted by both parties, the satisfaction based on such payment ought to be recorded under O. XXIII, r. 3 in spite of its not being made into Court. On the other hand, if the alleged payment out of Court is disputed, the payment having been made in clear disregard of the mandatory provisions of O. XXXIV, r. 5, the Court is not bound to embark upon any inquiry into the question whether the alleged payment was in fact made or not. SEWA RAM v. PARBHU DAYAL Oudh 231

——— O. XXI, r. 16. See Decree 974

——— O. XXI, r. 19—Set-off—Executing Court, if can entertain claim to set-off.

An executing Court can entertain a claim to set-off and although a case does not come within the strict terms of O. XXI, r. 19, Civil Procedure Code, the Court can, in the exercise of its inherent power, give effect to such a claim. KRISHNA CHANDRA BHOUMIK v. PABNA DHANABHANDAR CO., LTD. Cal. 991

——— O. XXI, r. 22—Decree more than three years old—Application after an year from last order—No notice—No reasons recorded.

Where a decree is more than three years old, and the application for execution of the decree is made more than a year after the passing of the final order on the last application for execution and no reason is recorded for not issuing notice as required by O. XXI, r. 22, Civil Procedure Code, the omission to issue notice to the judgment-debtor is not a mere irregularity, but is a defect which goes to the very root of the proceedings and renders them void for want of jurisdiction. U NYO v. U PO THIT Rang. 959

——— O. XXI, r. 22—Objection stated with clarity—Advocate pointing out wrong rule—Objection, if waived.

If the objection based upon the provisions of O. XXI, r. 22, is stated with substantial clarity in the petition of objection, the fact that the Advocate at the hearing happened to point out an inapposite rule of O. XXI, does not alter the fact that objection under r. 22 was in reality taken, and cannot be regarded as being tantamount to a waiver of that objection U NYO v. U PO THIT Rang. 959

——— O. XXI, r. 37. See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXI, r. 40 (3) 168

——— O. XXI, rr. 40 (3), 37—Judgment-debtor not arrested but pleading poverty to notice under r. 37—Surety undertaking to pay—Court, if can demand such bond.

Civil Procedure Code—contd.

Where the judgment-debtor has never been arrested, there cannot be an order directing his release. Consequently, the Court has no jurisdiction to demand a bond for the payment of decretal amount under O. XXI, r. 40 (3), Civil Procedure Code, when judgment-debtor pleads poverty to notice under r. 37 of O. XXI, Civil Procedure Code. AHMAD BAKHSH v. MUSLIM BANK OF INDIA, LTD. Lah. 168

——O. XXI, r. 49—Money decree against one partner—Sale of partnership property—Whether operative against the other.

Order XLI, r. 49, Civil Procedure Code, is an imperative provision of the statute and renders the sale of partnership property in execution of the decree in a money suit against one partner, invalid and inoperative as against the other partners. RATI LAL NANJI v. UTTAM LAL SARCAR Cal. 842 (b) ——O. XXI, rr. 53 (1), (b)—Scope of—Attachment of decree obtained by judgment-debtor—Attachment, when ceases.

Order XXI, r. 53 (1) (b) (ii), Civil Procedure Code does not mean that when the holder of the decree sought to be executed makes such an application, the attached decree ceases to be an attached decree; it only means that a period is provided by the rule up to which a stay of execution is to be arranged by the Court to which notice is sent to enable the holder of the decree sought to be executed to make application for execution of the attached decree. The rule relates not to the date of cessation of the attachment but only to the manner in which the attachment is to be effected.

W obtained a decree against S. A had a decree against W and in execution of that decree he got attached W's decree against S. The application of A to execute this attached decree was dismissed for default. W assigned his decree to B. S paid a sum of money out of Court to A on account of the decree which W had obtained against S and which A had attached. B the assignee applied to execute that decree against S who pleaded payment out of Court and satisfaction:

Held, that the attachment of the decree of W against S did not cease when proceedings in execution of that attached decree were dismissed for default in the Court which had received notice under O. XXI, r. 53, from the Court which had passed the decree in favour of A against W. FIRM SUNDAR DAS VIR BHAN v. FIRM UMA DATT HANSRAJ Lah. 315

——O. XXI, r. 55. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 73 918

——O. XXI, r. 57—Default, meaning of—Failure to go on with application and proceed with sale—Whether constitutes default—Attachment, cessation of—Fresh application for execution—Competency of.

The word "default" used in O. XXI, r. 57, Civil Procedure Code, is not restricted to default of appearance, but means a failure to do what the decree-holder was bound to do, that is, to go on with his application and have the property sold and if a default took place, the attachment previous to that had come to an end on the decree-holder's application being struck off. In such cases any intermediate order passed by the Court becomes a nullity and the decree-holder can file a fresh application for execution. DATAR SINGH v. KHAN CHAND. Lah. 332

——O. XXI, r. 58—Possession with a person—Court, if precluded from entering into question of whether possession was of judgment-debtor.

Although it is true that when once a person is found to be in possession under O. XXI, r. 58 the Court has no jurisdiction to go behind that possession and enter into a question of title yet it cannot be said that the Court is precluded from entering into the question of whether the possession of the person actually found in possession was the possession of the judgment-debtor or not. When the Court finds that some person other than the judgment-debtor is in possession, it becomes necessary to determine whether that person is in possession for the judgment-debtor and in many cases it is often necessary to go into the question if that possession was the result of a purchase and whether the purchase was a benami purchase or not. MRS M. D'SILVA v. MRS. MINNIE LAL ... Pat. 419

——O. XXI, r. 63—Auction-purchaser, if a necessary party to suit under O. XXI, r. 63.

The auction-purchaser is a necessary party to a suit under O. XXI, r. 63, Civil Procedure Code, and if there is no suit in which he was a party until more than a year after the dismissal of objection to attachment, the order dismissing the objection is conclusive in favour of the auction-purchaser. GHULAM HAIDAR v. SAID AHMAD ALI ... Pesh. 272

——O. XXI, r. 63—Dismissal of claim after investigation—Onus.

In a suit under O. XXI, r. 63, Civil Procedure Code, by an unsuccessful claimant where the claim petition is dismissed after investigation, the onus is on the plaintiff. SUPPAN ASARI v. ALIMA BIBI. Mad. 17

——O. XXI, r. 63—Suit by claimant—Judgment-debtor if a necessary party.

A judgment-debtor is not a necessary party in a suit by the claimant under O. XXI, r. 63, Civil Procedure Code. SUPPAN ASARI v. ALIMA BIBI. Mad. 17

——O. XXI, rr. 89, 92—Purchase of property at something under its value—Whether evidence of fraud—Scope of O. XXI, in setting aside sales.

In order to set aside an auction sale it is necessary to bring the matter within O. XXI of the Code of Civil Procedure. The mere fact that the purchaser purchased the property at something under its value is not by any means evidence of fraud and would not justify the setting aside of the sale. Once the property has been knocked down at the auction, there is an end of the matter unless the sale can be set aside under the provisions of O. XXI. HAZARI LAL LABH v. ABDUS SAMAD ... Pat. 288

——O. XXI, rr. 89, 92 (3), s. 148—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 166—Deposit of amount for setting aside sale—Deposit not made due to act of Court—Effect of—'Actus curiae neminem gravabit'—Applicability of.

It may be taken as settled law that under O. XXI, r. 89, Civil Procedure Code, read with r. 92, (3) and Art. 166 of the Limitation Act, it is necessary that not only the application but also the deposit must be made within thirty days of the date of the sale. Section 148 has no application to such cases and the period of thirty days cannot be extended by the Courts. But at the same time a party litigant ought not to be penalized when he found it impossible to comply with the requirements of the statute, not because of any fault of his own, but by reason of the action or inaction of the Court. On the happening of such a contingency, the maxim "actus curiae neminem gravabit" (an act of Court prejudices no man) applies. Consequently, when a deposit is not made in time due to the Court's action, the person depositing will be deemed to have deposited at the time he was ready to deposit. BUTI RAM v. SARDAR SINGH Lah. 603

Civil Procedure Code—contd.

———O. XXI, r. 92. See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXI, r. 89 228

———O. XXI, r. 92. O. XLIII, r. 1 (j)—Order refusing to set aside sale—Appeal—Auction-purchaser, if a necessary party.

In an appeal from an order passed under O. XXI, r. 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, rejecting an application to set aside a sale in execution of a decree, the auction purchaser is a necessary party and the appeal cannot proceed in his absence. Qamaruddin v. Dhanpal Singh Lah. 354 (a)

———O XXI, r. 92 (3). See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXI, r. 89 603

———O. XXI, r. 97.

See Bihar and Orissa Public Demands Recovery Act, 1914, ss. 21 and 24 957

See Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, Art. 11-A 702

———O. XXI, r. 97, s. 115—Summary view of justice is not safe guide where real obstacle of opposite party is bar of limitation.

Where the conditions set out in s. 115, Civil Procedure Code, are present, a summary view of justice is often not a conclusive or even a very safe guide, especially, where the real obstacle in the way of the opposite party is a statutory bar of limitation. Akhauri Herambo Narain Sinha v Jamuna Sonar Pat. 957

———O. XXI, rr. 98, 99. See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXI, r. 103 249 (b)

———O. XXI, r. 100.

See Limitation Act, 1908, Sch I, Art 47 1094

See Oudh Rent Act, 1886, s. 108, cl. (10) 1082

See Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s. 52 1082

———O. XXI, r. 100—Decree against father—Sons, if can be said to be persons other than the judgment-debtors.

Where a decree has been made against the father of the petitioners the petitioners will prima facie be bound by the decree and cannot therefore be said to be persons other than the judgment-debtors within the meaning of O. XXI, r. 100. Daroga Prasad Sahu v. Bhagwati Prasad Singh Pat. 93

———O. XXI, rr. 100, 101—Person not dispossessed—Whether can, apply under r. 100.

It is only when the person is dispossessed that he can apply under O. XXI, r. 100, Civil Procedure Code. Where no possession has been given to the decree-holders, an order under O. XXI, r. 101, cannot be passed as the Court has no jurisdiction to determine the matter in the form of an anticipatory application. Daroga Prasad Sahu v Bhagwati Prasad Singh Pat. 93

———O. XXI, r. 101. See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O XXI, r. 100 93

———O. XXI, rr. 103, 98, 99, 101—Suit under—O. XXI, r. 103—Scope of

The scope of a suit under O. XXI, r. 103 of the Civil Procedure Code, filed to contest an order made under either r. 98, or r. 99 or r. 101, is not the determination of the mere question of possession of the parties concerned but the establishment of the right or title by which the plaintiff claims the present possession of the property. Krishnarao Raghunath Yardi v. Ghamon Ghama Bom. 249 (b) ———O. XXII, r. 3—Suit for possession of land and demolition of constructions against several defendants—Decree—Appeal—Death of one defendant during pendency of appeal—Legal representatives not brought on record—Dismissal of suit by lower Appellate Court—Procedure, if proper.

The plaintiff's suit for recovery of possession of a plot of land and for demolition of certain constructions made by the defendants thereon, was decreed by the trial Court. The defendants, eight in number, filed an appeal in the lower Appellate Court, during the pendency of which one of the defendants died and his legal representatives were not brought on the record. The appeal was accepted and the plaintiff's suit dismissed in toto:

Held, on second appeal, that any one of the defendants could have resisted the plaintiff's claim to possession and to demolition of the constructions made by the defendants. As anyone of them could have impugned the entire decree and the lower Appellate Court did set aside the entire decree at their instance and dismissed the plaintiff's suit in toto, no fault could be found with the procedure of that Court and its decree was not open to challenge. Badloo v. Nanu All. 602

——— O. XXII, rr. 3, 4

See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXII, r. 11 359

See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXII, r. 12 969

———O. XXII, rr. 3, 11—Suit for specific performance of contract by two plaintiffs—Plaintiffs' shares not specified—Share in consideration not known—Appeal by them against lower Court's decision—Death of one of them—Legal representative not brought on record within time—Held, appeal abated as whole—Held also that ignorance of death was not sufficient cause to extend limitation—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 5—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 45.

A contract was entered into by defendant No. 1 in favour of two persons named P and K who were the plaintiffs in a suit for specific performance of the contract to sell certain land and both of them had preferred the appeal jointly. During the pendency of the appeal P died and no application was made within the prescribed period to bring his legal representatives on the record. It was, however, made after the prescribed period, but it merely stated that the delay was due to ignorance on the part of the applicants:

Held, (i) that the reason for delay could not be considered to be an adequate ground for extension of time under s. 5 of the Limitation Act.

(ii) that the right of appeal on the death of P vested in the legal representative of P and not in K and the appeal abated according to the provisions of rr. 3 and 11 of O. XXII, Civil Procedure Code, at least so far as P was concerned.

(iii) that since the agreement between the parties did not specify any shares and it was impossible to say in what shares the consideration was to be paid by, or the land to be divided between the two plaintiffs, the right to enforce the contract vested on the death of P in his legal representatives along with K and not in K alone. Therefore, no relief could be given to K when the legal representatives of P had not been brought on the record and his share could be ascertained. Consequently, the whole appeal abated. Pir Bakhsh v. Kidar Nath Lah. 610

———O. XXII, r. 4—Tort-feasors—Death of one—Non-impleading of legal representatives—Suit, if abates as against the other.

Where one of two tort-feasors dies and his legal representatives are not brought on record, the suit or appeal does not abate as against the other. Roda Mal v. Nighania Lah. 869 (b)

———O. XXII, r. 11. See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXII, r. 3 610

———O. XXII, rr. 11, 3, 4—Party impleaded both in appeal and memorandum of objections—Two separate applications, if necessary for bringing his legal representative on record.

Civil Procedure Code—contd.

Where a party is already impleaded both in the appeal and the memorandum of objections, there is no necessity of two separate applications to bring his legal representatives on the record. TIRUNARAYANA PILLAI v. P. R. Y. MANIOKAVACHAGAM CHETTIAR Mad. 359

——O. XXII, rr. 12, 3, 4—Execution proceedings —Whether abate on death of decree-holder—Representative, if can get his name substituted and continue execution—Fresh application, if necessary.

An execution proceeding does not abate on the death of the decree-holder and there is no bar to the execution continuing at the instance of his representative. The representatives of a deceased decree-holder can get their names substituted during the pendency of an execution proceeding and proceed with it. No fresh application is necessary for this MONAUGHT v. SARASWATI THAKURAIN Pat. 969

——O. XXIII. See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXXII, r. 7 912

——O. XXIII, r. 1. See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 151 186

——O. XXIII, r. 1—Cl. (b) of sub-r. (2), if to be read ejusdem generis to cl. (a).

Clause (b) of sub-r. 2 of O. XXIII, r. 1, Civil Procedure Code, although disjunctive, must be read ejusdem generis to cl. (a). SUKHUMAR GUPTA v. CHAIRMAN, DISTRICT BOARD, GAYA Pat. 210

——O. XXIII, r. 1 (2) (a) (b)—Suit not found to fail by reason of formal defect—Grounds for allowing plaintiff to file fresh suit not stated—Order allowing plaintiff to withdraw suit and file fresh suit—Whether Court has jurisdiction to pass

Unless the Court brings the case within cl. (a) of sub-r. 2 of O XXIII, r. 1, Civil Procedure Code, or set out grounds why the plaintiff should be allowed to bring a fresh suit, the Court has no jurisdiction to pass an order allowing the plaintiff to withdraw a suit and to bring a fresh suit. SUKUMAR GUPTA v. CHAIRMAN, DISTRICT BOARD, GAYA Pat. 210

——O. XXIII, r. 3. See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXXIV, rr. 4, 5 976

——O. XXIII r. 3—Suit pending—Reference made without Court's permission—Award, if a compromise.

An award made on a reference without the intervention of the Court during the pendency of a suit cannot be recorded as a compromise or adjustment of the suit under O. XXIII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code. MOHAMMAD MIA PANDIT v. OSMAN ALI Cal. 915

——O. XXV, r. 1. See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 115 317

——O. XXVI. See Evidence Act, 1872, s. 35 1040

——O. XXX, r. 1—Suit by partners—Partners, if can bring suit for firm's benefit—Their locus standi, if can be questioned by third party.

Partners can bring a suit for the benefit of the firm, and although they may be prosecuting the litigation on their own responsibility, the benefit goes to the concern, and it is no business of third parties to question their locus standi. ARJAN SINGH BHAJJAN SINGH v. FIRM SURJAN SINGH ACHAREJ SINGH Pesh. 1006

——O. XXXII, r. 3—Guardian appointed—Procedure not followed—Effect. See Minor 711

——O. XXXII, r. 3—Guardian ad litem appointed by Court—Decree against minor—Onus of proof that he was not properly represented.

Where the defendant is a minor, it is the duty of the Court not only to appoint a guardian, but to satisfy itself that the proposed guardian was a fit and proper person to represent the minor in the suit, to put in a proper defence, and generally to act in the interest of the minor and if the Court gives judgment against the minor, the onus is on the minor to prove that he was not properly represented in the former suit. POPAT VIRJI v DAMODAR JAIRAM Bom. 711

——O. XXXII, rr. 3, 4—Provisions of, are mandatory—"Proper" person to be guardian ad litem —Decree against minor, when nugatory.

The provisions of O. XXXII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code, that where the defendant is a minor, the Court, on being satisfied of the fact of his minority, shall appoint a proper person to be guardian for the suit for such minor, are mandatory, and a decree passed against a minor without the appointment of a guardian ad litem is a nullity. But if a guardian has been appointed for a minor defendant, mere irregularities in the appointment of the guardian or the mere fact that a proper person was not appointed guardian, does not render the decree nugatory against the minor unless and until it is proved that the minor was not effectively represented in the suit and was prejudiced by the omission of the guardian to take the pleas that could validly be raised on his behalf. The law insists that the minor should be represented by a proper person whose interests are not adverse to the interests of the minor, so that the minor's interest may not in any way be neglected or prejudiced. But if it is apparent that the minor's interests in the suit in which he was a defendant were not in any way prejudiced, it becomes wholly unnecessary to inquire into the question as to whether or not the guardian appointed was a "proper person" within the meaning of O. XXXII, r. 4, Civil Procedure Code, for the simple reason that the purpose for which a guardian is appointed are achieved. Consequently, in cases where a gaurdian ad litem for a minor defendant has been appointed and a decree is passed against the minor the minor is not entitled to avoid the decree without proof of the fact that he was not effectively represented in the suit, and that he was prejudiced by the omission of the guardian to raise proper pleas on his behalf. GOVIND PRASAD v. SHANTI SWARUP All. 1106

——O. XXXII, rr. 4, 11—Certificated guardian appointed guardian ad litem—Such person ceasing to be certificated guardian—Whether ceases to be guardian ad litem, ipso facto.

Normally if a minor wishes to institute a suit and he has a certificated guardian then that certificated guardian is the right person to act as the next friend of the minor. If, on the other hand, a suit is brought against a minor who already has a certificated guardian then he is the person who must be appointed guardian for the suit unless the Court otherwise decides. There is no inherent disqualification in all persons other than certificated guardians to be a guardian ad litem. Where a person appointed guardian ad litem at the time when the suit was started is in fact the certificated guardian, the appointment is strictly in conformity with the provisions of sub-r. (2), O. XXXIV, Civil Procedure Code. The mere fact that he subsequently ceased to be the certificated guardian, and somebody else was appointed in his stead, does not of itself impose such an absolute and fundamental disqualification that he automatically vacates his office and becomes functus officio. The only way of getting rid of a guardian ad litem who has once been properly appointed, is under the provisions of r. 11, subject perhaps to the implications of sub-r. (1), r. 4. SAMARENDRANATH MITRA v. PYAREECHARAN LAHA Cal. 882

Civil Procedure Code—contd.

——O. XXXII, r. 7—Next friend entering into compromise without Court's permission—Same next friend representing minor in appeal—Compromise will not be set aside.

Obiter.—A compromise effected by the next friend without the Court's permission as required by O. XXXII, r. 7, Civil Procedure Code, will not be set aside in appeal, if the minor happens to be represented in the appeal by the same next friend. MAHAMMAD MIA PANDIT v. OSMAN ALI Cal. 915

——O. XXXII, r. 7, O. XXIII—Petition for leave to compromise—Minor parties—Considerations before Court—Leave granted—Recording of compromise and passing of decree—Necessity of.

When a petition for leave is filed under O. XXXII, r. 7, Civil Procedure Code, the Judge should consider whether the compromise is in the interests of the minors. If he is satisfied that it is for the benefit of the minors, then he must grant leave. If he is not so satisfied, he should refuse leave. If leave is granted, he has no option but to record the compromise and pass a decree in accordance with it. In deciding whether the petition of compromise is for the benefit of the minors, it will be open to the Court to make such alterations in the terms of the compromise agreed to by the parties, as it deems expedient. MA FATI v. KALIMUTHU Rang. 912

——O. XXXII, r. 15—Applicability—Inquiry as to unsoundness of mind—Nature of—Decree in favour of plaintiff who brings suit on behalf of person alleged to be of unsound mind—No inquiry as to unsoundness of mind—Lower Appellate Court directing inquiry by trial Court—Held, that such inquiry should be held by lower Appellate Court.

In order that O. XXXII, r. 15, Civil Procedure Code, should be applicable in the case of a person who has not been adjudged to be of unsound mind the words of the rule require something more than a finding after an inquiry that a person is of unsound mind it should be found on enquiry that by reason of unsoundness of mind or mental infirmity, the person is incapable of protecting his rights as a plaintiff or as a defendant.

Plaintiff brought a suit on behalf of a person alleged to be of a unsound mind. The trial Court, without inquiring as to the unsoundness of mind as required by O. XXXII, r. 15, Civil Procedure Code, passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff. On appeal by the defendant, the lower Appellate Court passed an order directing the trial Court to hold an inquiry:

Held, that the enquiry under r. 15, O. XXXII, should have been held by the Appellate Court itself because the enquiry was not likely to be a lengthy or a protracted one. On the result of such enquiry if such unsoundness of mind as is required by the rule has been made out, the Court would hold that the trial that was held in the Court of first instance, was in order, and it would be necessary for the lower Appellate Court to dispose of the appeal on merits. If, on the other hand, it came to the conclusion that such unsoundness of mind as is contemplated by the rule has not been made out, it will have to be held that the plaint that was presented was not in order and as a necessary consequence of such a finding it would have to be held further that the proceedings that followed were not proceedings taken in accordance with law and consequently the decree that was passed in the suit would have to be held a nullity. NIRENDRA LALL v. BEPIN CHANDRA Cal. 696

——O. XXXIII, r. 1, Explanation. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 141 1118

——O. XXXIV, r. 1, O. I, r. 3—Mortgage suit—Person claiming ownership in derogation of title of mortgagor—Whether necessary party to suit—Determination of such title to be avoided in suit.

A person who claims the right of ownership in a mortgaged property in denial and derogation of the mortgagor, is not a necessary party in the mortgage suit. As the determination of his title in the suit is bound to lead to confusion, it should be avoided. RASOOLAN BIBI v RAM KUAR All. 156

——O. XXXIV, r. 4—Preliminary decree—Dismissal of appeal with costs—Application for amendment of final decree to include costs—Order allowing application—Construction.

Where the decree-holder after obtaining a preliminary decree for mortgage under O. XXXIV, r. 4, Civil Procedure Code which was confirmed in appeal, applied that the final decree previously prepared be amended so as to include the costs awarded by the Appellate Court, and the trial Court allowed the amendment as prayed:

Held, that the decree-holder's application asking for amendment and the order of the Court making use of the same word amounted, in substance, respectively to an application and an order for preparation of a fresh final decree, that the order was conclusive, and the final decree passed in pursuance of it was equally so and that that was the only decree capable of execution. BAHAL SINGH v. CHAMELI All. 495

——O. XXXIV, rr. 4, 5, O. XXIII, r. 3—Mortgage suit—Compromise—Preliminary decree—Application for making final decree—Proceedings, whether proceedings in suit or execution.

Order XXXIV, Civil Procedure Code has no application to a compromise decree and the application to make a decree absolute is not a proceeding in execution and O. XXI, r. 3, does not prevent the Court from recognizing an uncertified payment or adjustment made out of Court?

Proceedings for obtaining a final decree are proceedings in the suit and not proceedings in execution?

There had been some conflict of judicial opinion before 1908 on the question whether proceedings for obtaining the order absolute for sale were proceedings in the suit or proceedings in execution, and the amendments of 1908 made it clear beyond dispute that they are proceedings in the suit itself. There is thus even less reason now than before for holding that O. XXI, r. 2 (3) bars the recognition of uncertified payments in proceedings for obtaining a final decree under O. XXXIV, r. 5?

There is nothing in O. XXIII, r 3 to make it inapplicable to a suit after the preliminary decree and before the final decree. Even if the contrary were to be held there is no doubt that in proceeding upon a preliminary decree which is based on a compromise and therefore does not come within O. XXXIV of the Code, the Court will have inherent jurisdiction to take into account payments and satisfaction after that decree before passing the final decree?

Where the decree on the basis of which the petitioner moves the Court for passing a final decree for sale of the mortgaged property is based on a compromise, which expressly calls it a preliminary mortgage decree and provides that it is not to be made final until a specified date, such a decree does not come under O. XXXIV, r. 4, Civil Procedure Code, and therefore O. XXXIV, r. 5 does not apply to the case and the proceedings for obtaining the final decree in the matter are proceedings in the suit and not in execution. HARIHAR PRASAD v. GOPAL SARAN Pat. 976

———O. XXXVIII, r. 5—Present intention of obstruction or delaying execution of decree must be proved.

Where there is nothing in documents filed by way of objections by the defendants to an application under O. XXXVIII, r. 5, Civil Procedure Code, to show that the defendants ever had any intention of obstructing or delaying the execution of any decree which might be passed against them or with such intent were about to dispose of their property, it cannot be said that the Court could be satisfied "otherwise" within the meaning of r. 5 (b) of O. XXXVIII, Civil Procedure Code, and the mere fact that a defendant has in the past mortgaged or disposed of his property is not a sufficient ground for levying attachment. There must be a present intention. DURGADAS DAS v. NALIN CHANDRA NANDAN Cal 354 (b)

———O. XXXVIII, r 5, O. XXXIX, r. 1—Injunction or attachment, when to be granted

Prima facie case is essential before either injunction or attachment can be granted Moreover, the Court must be satisfied that interference is necessary to prevent injury which is irreparable, and that the mischief or inconvenience which is likely to arise in consequence of withholding the relief will be greater than that from granting it. DURGADAS DAS v. NALIN CHANDRA NANDAN Cal. 354 (b) ———O XXXVIII, r. 5, O. XXXIX, r. 1—Orders under O. XXXVIII, r. 5, and O. XXXIX, r. 1—Whether discretionary—Interference by Appellate Court.

Orders pressed under O XXXVIII, r. 5 and O. XXXIX, r. 1, Civil Procedure Code, are discretionary, and an Appellate Court ought not to interfere with the exercise of a Judge's discretion unless satisfied that it was not judicially exercised, that is to say, that the Judge acted on wrong principles. The mere fact that the Judges of the Appellate Court might have taken a different view is not a sufficient ground for interference. If the Judge rightly appreciates the facts; and applies to those facts the true principles, that is a sound exercise of judicial discretion.

Neither injunction nor attachment ought to be lightly granted. It would be a serious thing if persons in possession were restrained from making use of the property merely because a suit had been instituted about it It is only where it is essential that property should be kept in its existing condition pending suit that the Court should interfere. DURGADAS DAS v. NALIN CHANDRA NANDAN Cal. 354 (b) ———O. XXXIX, r. 1—Essentials for an order under O. XXXIX, r. 1.

Before any order can be made under the provisions of O XXXIX, r. 1, Civil Procedure Code, the plaintiff must prove some overt act towards the alienation of the properties such for example as negotiations or offers for sale and that the property is in danger of alienation. DURGADAS DAS v NALIN CHANDRA NANDAN Cal 354 (b) ———O. XXXIX, rr. 1, 2, cl. 3—Cl 3 of r 2 whether covers breach of injunctions issued under r. 1.

Clause 3 of r. 2 of O. XXXIX, Civil Procedure Code, applies to disobedience generally of an injunction granted by the Court and the words 'in case of disobedience' in cl. 3 are wide enough to cover breaches of injunctions issued under O. XXXIX, r. 1, for which breaches no penalty is elsewhere provided. MUHAMMAD NAZIRUDDIN v. RAJA RAM Pat. 619

———O. XL, r. 1—Receiver during pendency of mortgage suit — Sums realized by him from mortgaged property, whether form part of mortgaged property —Receiver, when can be appointed.

The nature of the office of a Receiver is simply this : that he is an impartial person appointed by the Court to collect and receive, pending the proceedings, the rents, issues and profits of land or personal estate or other things in question which it does not seem reasonable to the Court that either party should collect or receive. The object sought by the appointment of a Receiver is the safeguarding of property for the benefit of those entitled to it. His possession is on behalf and for the benefit of all the parties to the suit in which he is appointed, and is the possession of all the said parties according to their titles. The property in his hands is in custodia legis for the person who can make a title to it. The title of the real owner is in no way affected either in theory or on principle by his appointment. He collects and receives the rents, issues and profits not upon his own title but upon the title of some persons, parties to the action. The appointment of a Receiver by the Court under O. XL, r 1, Civil Procedure Code, in no way diminishes or enlarges the title to the property which comes into his possession so far as the person otherwise entitled to it is concerned. It follows therefore, that the sums of money in the hands of the Receiver are not sums payable to the mortgagor, but form part of the mortgaged property upon which the debt due to the mortgage was secured. MA JOO TEAN v. COLLECTOR OF RANGOON Rang. 776

———O. XLI, r. 21, O. V, r. 15 (as amended by Allahabad High Court)—Due service—Pardahnashin lady—Personal service, how to be effected—Lady present in house—Summons handed over to relation—Whether due service—Ex parte decree against lady, if should be set aside.

Summons can be delivered or tendered to a pardahnashin lady even though it may not be possible for the process-server to have access to her : nor can a pardahnashin lady be considered to be a person who cannot be personally served. It is the duty of the process server to make an attempt to find ways and means of delivering or tendering the summons to the pardahnashin lady for whom it is intended.

Where, although the lady on whom summons had to be served was not absent from the house, the process-server, without trying for means whereby personal service could be effected, handed over the summons to her husband's brother who did not inform her of it and the appeal against her was consequently dismissed ex parte :

Held, that as the process-server did not comply with the requirements of law provided in O. V, r. 15, Civil Procedure Code, as amended by the Allahabad High Court, she could not be considered to have been duly served and consequently under O. XLI, r. 21, the Court was bound to set aside the ex parte decree passed against her. AMNA v. RATAN LAL All. 676

———O. XLI, r. 22—Cross-objection—Whether can be taken against a co-respondent—Case of co-respondent having nothing in common with that of appellant—Maintainability of cross-objection against such co-respondent.

The expression "cross-objection" is clearly indicative of the fact that it should be directed against the appellant, but it may be taken against a co-respondent also, if there is a community of interest between the latter and the appellant. When the cross-objection is directed solely against a co-respondent, whose case has nothing in common with that of the appellant but proceeds on the same grounds on which the appeal does, it is not maintainable. HUSAIN YAR BEG v. RADHA KISHAN All. 89

———O. XLI, r. 23, O. XLIII, r. 1—Remand of suit to determine it finally—Appeal to High Court, if permissible.

Although the provisions of O. XLI, r. 23, Civil Procedure Code, might not strictly apply where the Court of appeal has remanded the suit to the first Court which has been asked to determine finally the suit by the order of remand, an appeal to the High Court is permissible under the provisions of O. XLIII, r. 1, Civil Procedure Code. MAHAMMAD ALI FAKIR v. KARAM ALI TALUQDAR Cal. 506

———O. XLI, r. 27—Inherent lacuna on the record on all important points—Appellate Court should remit case to the trial Court for further enquiry.

Where, on almost every important point, there is an inherent lacuna on the record and it is not possible to come to a satisfactory finding on the question in issue, the only proper course for the Court of Appeal is to remit the case to the trial Court for further enquiry under O. XLI, r. 27, Civil Procedure Code. RODA SINGH v. UJAGAR SINGH Lah. 329

———O. XLI, r. 27—O. XLI, r. 27, scope of.

Order XLI, r. 27, Civil Procedure Code, cannot be used to test the evidence of a witness. It is intended to obtain additional evidence. DAW MIN BAW v. CHETTYAR FIRM Rang. 511

———O. XLI, r. 35—Two cross-appeals, whether like appeal and cross-objection—Distinction between them.

The case of two cross-appeals is not exactly identical with an appeal and a cross-objection. In the case of an appeal and a cross-objection, there is only one judgment delivered and only one decree is prepared by the Court which embodies the adjudication in both the appeal and the cross-objection. On the other hand, under O. XLI, r. 35, the decree of the Appellate Court has to contain the number of the appeal, the names and description of the appellant and the respondent and a clear specification of the relief granted or other adjudication made. If there are two cross-appeals pending in the High Court, two decrees have to be prepared giving all these particulars. BENARES BANK, LTD., AGRA v. RAJNATH KUNZRU All. 487 F. B.

———O XLIII, r. 1 (m). SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 104 (2) 1067

———O. XLIII, r. 1. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XLI, r. 23 506

———O. XLIII, r. 1 (j). SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXI, r. 92 354 (a)

———O. XLVII, r. 1—Review—Suit for possession of revenue-free land—Profits—Court taking Fasli year for calculating profits and not applying General Clauses Act (X of 1897)—Whether error on the face of the record—Deductions—Arguments about deductions not made at time of original order—Whether can be made on an application for review—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7 (v) (a) (b).

Where in a suit for possession of a part of a village which was revenue-free, the Court in calculating the profits under s. 7 (v) (c) of the Court Fees Act, took the Fasli year and it was urged in an application for review that according to the General Clauses Act, the year to be taken was the calendar year:

Held, that inasmuch as s. 3 of the General Clauses Act states that the definitions would apply unless there was anything repugnant to the context, and in view of sub-s. (a) and (b) of sub-s. (v) of s. 7, Court Fees Act, the Court was right in taking the Fasli year for sub-s. (c) where the land was revenue-free and that it could not be said that, in not applying the General Clauses Act there was any error apparent on the face of the record:

Held, also that whatever argument about deductions was to be made should have been made at the time of the original order and not later on an application for review. CHANDRA SHEKHAR v. MAHARAJ All. 668

———O. XLVII, r. 1 (1)—Delay in filing appeal not due to mistake on the part of appellant—Appellant knowing facts—Appeal dismissed as time-barred—Review—Held, there was sufficient cause.

The error made in the Copying Department in the heading of the copy of the judgment and the consequent delay in filing an appeal may be treated as a sufficient reason within O. XLVII, r. 1 (1), Civil Procedure Code, for review of the order dismissing the appeal as time-barred. BALWANTRAO v. BALMUKUND Nag. 588

———O. XLVII, rr. 4, 7 (1)—Order granting review on ground of error apparent on the face of the record—Appealability of.

No appeal lies from an order granting review under O. XLVII, r. 4, Civil Procedure Code, except on grounds mentioned in O. XLVII, r. 7 (1). Where the ground for granting review is an error apparent on the face of the record, no appeal lies from the order. KESHO RAM v. BHAGWAN DAS Lah. 130

———Sch. II, para. 1, cl (2)—Application to refer dispute to arbitration—Whether should be in writing.

Application to refer a dispute to arbitration need not be in writing as the expression "application shall be in writing" in para. 1, cl. (2) of the Second Schedule of the Code of Civil Procedure is merely directory and not mandatory. JAGAN NATH SINGH v. MADHO SINGH Oudh 290

———— ———— paras. 14, 15, 21, s. 104 (f)—Power of Appellate Court to go into question indicated by para. 14 or para. 15—Decree in terms of award—Whether should bear same date as order filing award.

The words of the first part of para. 21, Sch. II, Civil Procedure Code, clearly imply that proof of the existence of any ground such as is mentioned or referred to in para. 14 or para. 15 is a bar which prevents the Court from ordering that the award be filed. Hence it cannot be held that proof in respect of these grounds should be taken after the order for filing. It follows that s. 104 (f) of the Code empowers the Appellate Court not only to go into the question of the existence of the reference and of the award, but also to go into questions such as are indicated by para. 14 or para. 15. There is nothing in the Code which necessitates the decree bearing the same date as the order filing the award, and one effect of these provisions is that it settles the date for the purpose of limitation of appeal; another effect is that if the trial Court disobeys the direction given in cl. (1) of para. 21 and pronounces judgment in excess of or not in accordance with the award, there will be a remedy by an appeal from the decree as distinct from the appeal against the filing. ABDULLAH KHAN v. BAHRAM KHAN Pesh. 1022

Civil Procedure Code—concld.

——— Sch. II, para. 15—Arbitrator—Procedure opposed to natural Justice—If a misconduct—Plaintiffs asked to rearrange record and sort out exhibits—Award, if vitiated.

Irregular procedure opposed to the principles of natural justice, amounts to legal misconduct on the part of an arbitrator.

Where there has been an opportunity afforded to one side to get an advantage with the arbitrator over the other, either by lack of notice, or by the absence of the other side, and there is even a remote possibility that the advantage so obtained may have unconsciously influenced the mind of the arbitrator, the proceedings are vitiated by a breach of the principles of natural justice, and whether this is so or not must depend on questions of fact.

The arbitrator sent for one of the parties (plaintiff) and asked him to re-arrange the record of the case in proper order and to sort out certain exhibits:

Held, that the plaintiff was used to perform only a ministerial act and an award by him was not vitiated on that account. MUNICIPALITY OF AHMEDABAD v. RAVJIBHAI Bom. 669 ——— para. 15.—Arbitrator basing decision on private enquiries and inadmissible evidence—Validity of award.

Where the arbitrators in arriving at their decision were influenced by private inquiries about the case, their conduct amounts to misconduct and the award will be invalid. SAVARALA VENKATASUBBIAH v. KUMARA RAMIAH Mad. 381

——— ——— para 20. See Arbitrator 1059

——— ——— para. 21. See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, Sch. II, para 14 1022

Companies Act (VII of 1913), s. 86—Directors allotting shares in meeting—Directors not paying allotment money themselves—Resolution allotting shares—Validity of.

Even though none of the Directors of a Company had paid the allotment money on the shares held by them, all acts done by them as such Directors are valid. Where therefore, in a meeting called for the purpose, they allot the shares to the shareholders, the allotment is proper. In the matter of INDIAN COMPANIES ACT VII OF 1913 Lah. 536

——— s. 109 (d)—Assignment of book-debt by company as security for securing existing debt, whether amounts to mortgage of that debt—Registration, if essential—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882 as amended by Act XX of 1929), ss. 130, 134.

An assignment of a book-debt as security for the purpose of securing an existing debt, constitutes a mortgage of that debt and unless it is registered as required by the provisions of s. 109 (d) of the Companies Act, the assignment will be inoprative as against the liquidator and the creditors of the Company. RANJIT RAY v. D. A. DAVID Cal. 193

——— s. 153—Depositor becoming decree-holder against company—Company subsequently embarking on scheme—Such depositor, if bound by it—Remedy of decree-holders

A depositor ceases to be a depositor when he obtains decree against the company and becomes a decree-holder against it. When after passing of such decrees Companies Act—concld.

the company embarks upon a scheme and a meeting is called and notice is sent to all depositors, the decree-holder creditors, are not bound to attend the meeting and any scheme framed at such a meeting is not binding on them. The meeting, though sanctioned by the Court, has no right by a mere definition to include the decree-holders within the scope of depositors, any more than a company has the right by definition to include its general trade creditors. Where the meeting includes the decree-holders as depositors and the Court sanctions it per incuriam or because the circumstances are not sufficiently explained to the Judge, the decree-holders can get the scheme modified by the Court, by having such portion of the scheme which affects them expunged from the scheme. In the matter of DEWANGUNJ BANK AND INDESTRY LD. Cal. 811

——— s. 156. See Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, Art. 112 16

Company. See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 35 852

——— Claim against Company — Liquidation — Subsequent termination of liquidation—Company, how to be represented—Parties—Pleadings.

Where a limited Company is defendant in a suit, the liquidation of the Company cannot make any difference. The change brought about by the liquidation in regard to the suit is merely that in the conduct of its defence, the Company before liquidation will act through the directors but during liquidation through the liquidators and after the termination of the liquidation through the directors once more. DAWSONS BANK, LIMITED v. NIPPON MENKWA KABUSHIKI KAISHA P. C. 1

Compromise. See Legal Practitioner 297

——— Decree passed on compromise—Compromise not recorded—Decree, validity of.

The omission to record the compromise before passing the decree is not fatal to the validity of the decree. The defect is cured by s. 99, Civil Procedure Code. SHAH JAHAN BEGAM v. GHULAM RABHANI All. 1067 ——— Petition on behalf of guardian and on behalf of minors, indivisible — Compromise considered bad as regards minors—Effect on guardian.

When the petition presented by a respondent on his own behalf and on behalf of minor respondents is an indivisible one, if the compromise is held bad in respect of the minors, it must be held to be bad so far as the other respondent also is concerned. MA FATI v. KALI MUTHU Rang. 912

Contempt—Contempt of Court—Writer believing what he states to be true—Whether justification—Evidence to establish truth of allegations—Whether can be led—Election manifesto slandering judiciary—Contempt is punishable—Printer and publisher acing on Advocate's words—Absence of intention—Unqualified apology—Punishment, if called for.

There can be no justification of contempt of Court even assuming that the writer of an election manifesto believed all he stated therein to be true. If anything in the manifesto amounts to contempt of Court he is not permitted to lead evidence to establish the truth of his allegations. Contempt of Court is saying or writing anything about the Court which may lower the prestige of the Court or bring it into contempt.

It is not uncommon to attack abuses and to attack persons in an election manifesto whether the abuses be existent or not, or whether the persons deserve the vituperation which is often showered upon them in these productions, but to slander the whole Judiciary of a Province in an attempt to secure votes at a Bar Council election, is not only contemptible but almost criminal in its purpose.

The passage in respect of which notice was issued was as follows: "I believe you must have seen my name prominently in the press in connection with a contempt of Court case and again under the Legal Practitioners Act last year. I was conducting my private case. It was not a case of a client and was not a case of moral turpitude but even then I was punished twice over for the same alleged offence. We are helpless. Being a fighter and having suffered for the strength of my convictions I can assure you that I will fight for your rights as well."

Held, that the passage was a clear reflection upon the High Court and that it could not be regarded merely as a technical contempt but the casting of the aspersion amounted to serious contempt of Court.

On the proprietor and printers of the press in which the manifestoes containing the above passage were printed, stating that they had no intention to make any aspersion either against the High Court or the Subordinate Judiciary and that they were unaware that what they were printing contained a contempt of Court and further that if they had unwittingly committed contempt of Court they offer an unconditional apology :

Held, that although no doubt they relied entirely upon the Advocate who gave instructions that nothing was being printed that was contempt of Court, it was not unreasonable that they should have relied upon the fact that they had been instructed to do the printing by an Advocate and though undoubtedly guilty of contempt, in view of the unqualified apology tendered by them, no punishment was necessary. RAM MOHAN LAL AGARWALA, In the matter of All 33

Contempt of Court—Article undermining authority of Court of Justice—Held, the article amounted to gross contempt of Court.

Any act or writing tending to undermine the authority of Courts of Justice, or to influence the result of pending litigation, is a most serious offence.

The gravamen of the article in question was that judgment after judgment was being given in the High Court arbitrarily, and that neither law nor facts were discussed, before judgment was delivered. It further said that it was necessary "to restore the confidence of the public that law is discussed and facts are digested before cases are disposed of." It alleged that summary justice was being administered :

Held, that there could be no doubt that the article was as gross a contempt of Court and misrepresentation of proceedings in Court as it was possible to imagine. Nothing could have been more calculated to bring the Court into contempt and to lower its authority with the general public. In the matter of CONTEMPT OF HIGH COURT Lah 695 S. B.

Contract—Breach of—Defaulter, if can defeat his own contract.

No one by his own default can be allowed to defeat his own contract. CONDUCTOR ALFRED In the matter of Lah. 444 (b) ———Consideration—Document found to be without consideration—Enforceability.

Where the plaintiff wants to enforce a document which the defendant alleges to be without consideration and the Court which is the final Court of facts has come to the conclusion that there was no consideration for the document, the plaintiff who is setting up the document must, necessarily fail. NAWAB SINGH v. DALJIT SINGH All.. 928

———Plaintiff's debtor executing bond in favour of defendant—Money left with defendant to pay plaintiff—Suit on failure to pay—Agreement to lend—Enforceability of—Decree against defendant, if can be passed.

Where a person who was indebted to the plaintiff executed a bond in favour of the defendant leaving the entire amount with the latter for payment to the plaintiff and on not receiving payment, the plaintiff instituted a suit on the basis of the bond :

Held, that in substance the plaintiff's case, so far as it was based on the bond, amounted to a claim for enforcement of the defendant's promise to advance money in future, and as an agreement to lend money not being specifically enforceable, no decree could be passed against the defendant HUMELA v. ORI SAHOO All. 550

———Repudiation of, by plaintiff—Earnest money if can be recovered by plaintiff.

When a plaintiff repudiates the contract into which he had entered with the defendants, he would not be entitled to recover that portion of the earnest money which he had paid. RAMCHAND v. CENTRAL FLOUR MILLS OF KASUR Lah. 728

———Sale—Breach by buyer—Vendor, if can keep it alive for recovering heavier damages—Measure of damages.

In a contract to sell and buy it is open to the seller to avoid the contract when the buyer fails to take delivery but he cannot elect to keep alive the broken contract in the hope that he might recover heavier damages for the breach of the contract than he would be entitled to recover at the time of the breach of the contract. In such cases the measure of damages is the difference between the contract rate and the market rate at the expiry of the period agreed upon as the time for delivery in the contract; it is, however, open to the parties to agree that the time for performing the contract of sale should be postponed. In such circumstances, the damages for non-delivery or non-acceptance of the goods will be calculated at the market price of such goods on the last day to which the contract was extended if a date was fixed, or at the date when the plaintiff refused to grant further indulgence, or at a reasonable period after his last grant of an indulgence. MOHANLAL MAKWADI v. GYANIRAM Nag. 778

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 16—Pardanashin lady—No domination of will—Held, relationship was not unequal—Pardanashin lady intelligent—Relations to assist her—Held, there was independent advice.

Where the relationship of the transferee with the transferor, who is a pardanashin lady was not such as would enable him to dominate the will of the transferor and the pardanashin lady was intelligent and was not difficult for her to understand the transaction and the nature and effect of the transaction upon her interest in the property and further she had her father, brother and intelligent neighbours to assist her in the matter:

Held, that it could not be said that the relation between the parties at the time of the transaction was such as to suggest that they were not on equal terms and it could not also be said that she had no independent advice. PURNA CHANDRA CHAUDHURY v. SAROJINI CHAUDHURANI Cal. 1027

———s. 23—Plaintiff advancing money to defendant in consideration of his promise to give a girl in marriage to plaintiff's brother—Non-compliance with promise—Criminal prosecution for offences under ss. 417, 420, 500, Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860)—Arbitration—Bond in pursuance of award—Suit on bond—Maintainability.

The plaintiff had advanced Rs. 63 to the defendant in consideration of the latter's promise to give a girl in marriage to the plaintiff's brother. When the defendant did not comply with the promise, the plaintiff prosecuted him for offences under ss. 417, 420 and 500 of the Penal Code. While the prosecution was pending, the parties referred their differences to arbitration and the arbitrators decided that the defendant should pay Rs 53 to the plaintiff. In pursuance of this award of the arbitrators, the bond in suit was executed and the prosecution was withdrawn:
Held, that although the institution of the criminal prosecution was the occasion for the reference to arbitration which resulted in the execution of the bond in suit, yet it was in reality the civil dispute between the parties as regards the sum of money alleged to have been advanced by the plaintiff to the defendant, which was the subject of reference to the arbitration. Further, one of the offences forming the subject-matter of the criminal prosecution was compoundable by the parties and the other two compoundable with the permission of the Court. Consequently, the real object of the agreement not having been to interfere with the course of justice, the suit should not be dismissed on the ground of the consideration being opposed to public policy. GAYA PRASAD v JAMNA PRASAD Oudh 341

———s. 25. SEE Limitation Act, 1908, s. 19 1074

———s 45. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXII, r. 3 610

———ss. 55, 82—Mercantile contract—Presumption that time is essence, whether arises.
There is no place in mercantile contracts for the presumption that time is not of the essence of contract. MOHANLAL MARWADI v. GYANIRAM Nag 778

———s. 61—Appropriation—Absence of appropriation by creditor or debtor—Duty of Court—Discharge in order of time.
On the principle underlying the provisions of s. 61, Contract Act, the Court should, in the absence of any appropriation by either the debtor or the creditor, direct that the payment should be applied in discharge of the debts in order of time if there be such, and if they are all of the same date, in discharge of each of such debts proportionately. RAM NATH v. CHIRANJI LAL All. 136 F B.

———s. 62. SEE Promissory note 184

———s. 62—Accounts settled—Some amount paid in cash, some given up and hundi for rest—Receipt stating no accounts left except liability on hundi—Hundi, inadmissible not being stamped—Held, original cause of action was put to an end to.
When a cause of action for money is once complete in itself, whether for goods sold or for money lent or for any other claim, and the debtor then gives a bill or note to the creditor for payment of the money at a future time, the creditor, if the bill or note is not paid at maturity, may sue for the original consideration ; but when the bill or note is the only existing contract between the parties and for want of proper stamp or some other reason it is not admissible in evidence, the creditor must lose his money. It is a question of fact to be decided in each case whether the parties intended the bill or note to be an absolute or a conditional payment of the original debt.
The parties settled their accounts, and a sum of Rs. 831 3-3 was found due by the defendants to the plaintiffs. Of this sum, Rs. 234-3-3 were given up by the plaintiffs, and the balance of the liability was discharged by the defendants paying Rs. 100 in cash and executing a hundi for Rs 500 in favour of the plaintiffs; they executed on that very date a receipt making it clear that there remained no other account between them except the liability arising upon the hundi. The plaintiffs brought the present action for the recovery of a certain sum of money on the basis of the hundi, and it was found that the hundi being unstamped could not be admitted in evidence :
Held, that there was a novation of contract, and the original cause of action put an end to FIRM HARJAS-MAL-MEHR CHAND v. FIRM BHAGAT RAM ANAND RAM Lah. 15

———s. 62—Land alleged to be held as brit zar kharidi—Opposite party asserting transaction to be mortgage—Compromise that party in possession should give up possession on payment of money—Decree — Construction — Novation — Mortgage, if created by decree—Subsequent suit to redeem mortgage—Maintainability.
The essence of a novation of a contract lies not in the dissimilarity of the terms between the old and the new contract, but in the intention of the parties to supersede the old by the new.
In a previous suit filed by the predecessor-in-interest of the defendants against the predecessor-in-interest of the plaintiff, the former pleaded that he held a certain land as brit zar kharidi under a deed of 1241 Fasli, while the latter pleaded that the deed was a mortgage. A compromise was entered into and it was agreed that whenever the latter paid a sum of money, the former would give up possession of the property. The suit was decreed accordingly. The plaintiff filed a suit for redemption :
Held, that by the compromise the parties was created a fresh mortgage in respect of the land and the mortgage could be redeemed. BHABHUTI PRASAD v. PARBATI KUAR Oudh 534

———s. 65—Mortgage of insolvent's property by Receiver set aside and adjudication annulled—Mortgagor, when entitled to possession.
A mortgage was effected of the insolvent's property by the Receiver and it was set aside by the District Judge and the adjudication was annulled. The mortgagor subsequently brought a suit against the mortgagee for possession :
Held, that until he was re-paid the sum advanced on the security of the land the mortgagee was entitled to remain in possession. BAKHSHI SINGH v. BACHAN SINGH Lah. 722

———s. 65—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 41—Fraud—Minor—No misrepresentation on part of minor when executing bond—Held, on facts that no fraud was committed and plaintiff was not entitled to return of his money.
Fraud operating to deceive must be found as a fact and whether in any particular case there was such fraud must depend on its own circumstances. It must be shown to the satisfaction of the Court by the party who alleges fraud that he was deceived into action by the fraud Where it has not been found that, at the time when the minor executed the bond and received the money, he was aware that his minority was extended under the law nor has it been proved that he held himself out as being of age or that the plaintiff was deceived by any misrepresentation on his part, there is no fraud or misrepresentation on the part of the minor and the plaintiff is not entitled to return of his money either under s. 65, Contract Act, or under s. 41, Specific Relief Act ;

Contract Act—concld.

Held, in the above case that even if it is permissible to maintain that the power to give equitable relief is more extensive in India than in England, in other words, that Courts in British India can give equitable relief apart from cases which do not come either under s. 65, Contract Act, or s. 41, Specific Relief Act, the plaintiff cannot get any relief in view of the findings of fact which have been arrived at. HARIMOHAN v. DULU MIYA Cal. 1017

——ss. 93, 94—Delivery to be given at godown of seller—Telegraphic notice by buyer, whether adequate application for delivery.

Under ss. 93 and 94 of the Contract Act, the seller is not bound to deliver goods until the buyer applies for delivery, and delivery is to be given at the place at which goods were at the time of the contract for sale. A telegraphic notice is not an adequate application for delivery of goods. The buyer is bound to send some one to take delivery at a place where the goods are and until that is done the seller is not bound to make delivery. MOHANLAL MARWADI v. GYANIRAM Nag 778

——s. 107—Goods neither ascertained nor appropriated—Sale, if complete—Right of re-sale.

Where the goods are never ascertained or appropriated, the property in the goods does not pass from the seller to the buyer, and so there is no question of re-sale. Even if the seller has power to re-sell under s. 107, Contract Act, he has no right to re-sell without notice to the buyer. MOHANLAL MARWADI v. GYANIRAM Nag. 778

Co-owners. SEE Partition Act, 1893, s. 2 223

——Party wall—Right of co owner of party wall—Interference with reasonable use of wall—Co-owners.

Co-ownership implies that each co-owner should have a reasonable user of the thing owned in common and so long as each co-owner uses the wall reasonably without interfering with the enjoyment of that wall by the other party, or without doing anything which would weaken, damage or increase or diminish the wall enjoyed in common, he is entitled to do what he likes. A co-owner of a party wall has no right to do any act which may have the effect of excluding the other co-owner from the wall or interfere with his reasonable use of the wall. PADUMAN DAS v PARBATI All 365

Copyright—Copyright Act 1911 (1 & 2, Geo. V, Ch. 46), ss. 1, 2—Existence of copyright not denied—Representation and performance of the works—Whether constitute infringement of copyright.

Where the existence of copyright in certain books is not denied, then the representation and performance of the works of the author by the defendants amounts to an infringement of copyright under ss. 1 and 2, Copyright Act of 1911. NALADRI NATH MUKHERJEE v. MADAN THEATRES, LTD. Cal. 867

——Printing of books, if necessary, to infringe copyright before Copyright Act, 1911 (1 & 2, Geo. V, Ch. 46.)

Obiter. In order to infringe the plaintiffs copyright in books, it is not essential that the defendant should print the books even before the Copyright Act of 1911. NILADRI NATH MUKHERJEE v. MADAN THEATRES, LTD. Cal. 867

Copyright Act 1911 (1 & 2, Geo. V, Ch. 46), ss. 1, 2. SEE Copyright 867

Co-sharer. SEE Agra Tenancy Act, 1926, s. 227 653

Co-sharer—Adverse possession—Entry by co-sharer into possession of share of other co-sharer, not as co-tenant but in denial of such right—Possession, if enures for benefit of other co-sharer—Possession of tenant-in-common, if adverse to that of his co-

Co-sharers—contd.

tenant—Principle, if applies to person not recognised as co-tenant.

Where a co-sharer enters into possession of the share of the other co-sharer not in his right as a co-tenant but in denial of such right of the co-tenant, it cannot be said that his possession would enure for the benefit of the other co-sharers whom he has excluded from the enjoyment of the property. It is true that the principle of possession between the co-owners is that every co-owner is a tenant-in-common and that the possession of a tenant-in-common is not adverse to that of his co-tenants, but a person cannot be a tenant-in-common with a person whom he never recognized as a co-tenant. KRISHNA CHANDRA DAS v. PURNA CHANDRA DAS Cal. 987

——Mortgage by one, of his undivided share—Partition—Mortgagee can proceed against property falling to mortgagor's share only—Mortgagee, if party to partition.

The property being joint at the time of the execution of the mortgage, one co-sharer can only mortgage his undivided share in the property. Such a right is always subject to the right of the other co-sharers to effect a partition and when such partition is carried out the mortgagee can only enforce his rights against such property as falls to the share of his mortgagor, unless he can show that the partition was fraudulent. It is not necessary that the mortgagee must be a party to the partition proceedings. He has only a charge on the undivided share of the mortgagor and he has no right to prevent the co-sharers from partitioning property. DIWAN CHAND v. MANAK CHAND Lah. 938

——Partition—Absence of building at time of partition—Plot allotted to plaintiff on partition—Other co-sharers, if have right to remain in possession over that plot.

Where a partition has been effected under the provisions of the United Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1901 and the site of the house of one co-sharer has been allotted to the share of another co-sharer, the presumption is that the owner of the house was to retain possession of the house. Where no building existed at the time of partition, the defendants have no right to remain in possession over a plot which has been allotted to the plaintiff in partition. BRAJ KISHORE UPADHIA v PANCHAITI AKHARA All. 667 ——Possession of one—Whether should be considered to be constructive possession of others.

In the case of co-sharers possession of any one of them must be considered to be constructive possession of all unless the person in actual possession ousted his co-sharers in denial of their rights. BABOO SINGH v. RAM MANOHAR All. 824

——Sale by some co-sharers—Co-sharer in possession, if can be presumed to know contents of deed

A co-sharer cannot be presumed to know the contents of a registered document, executed by persons who impliedly denied his title by executing the document. BABOO SINGH v RAM MANOHAR All. 824

——Suit by co-sharer of ex-proprietary tenure against other co-sharers for share of profits—Suit, if cognizable by Civil Court.

A suit by a co-sharer of an ex-proprietary tenure against other co-sharers, for his share of the profits, is within the jurisdiction of the Civil Court. QUDSIA JAN v. ZAHID HUSAIN All. 38

——Suit for one co-sharer for partition—Court-fee payable. SEE Court-fee 815

——Transfer by one of land held in several

Co-sharers—concld.

—Other co-sharers, if can have transfer set aside and take joint possession with transferor.

One of several co-sharers in an undivided mahal cannot transfer to a stranger, lands held by him in severalty and if he does so, the other co-sharers are entitled to have the alienation set aside, to eject the transferees and to take joint possession with the transferors QUTUBUDDIN v. MANGALA DUBEY All. 829

Costs. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s 35 852

———Appellant succeeding only on point which could have been rectified by lower Court itself—Costs, by whom to be paid.

Where the only point on which the appellant succeeds is a point which could have been rectified by an application to the lower Court for amendment of the decree and but for this point, he actually fails, he must pay the respondent's cost of the appeal. MAUNG BA KYWE v. MA NYEIN Rang. 234 ———Costs of Collector, when claimant can be made liable for.

In land acquisition proceedings the claimant should not be called upon to pay the Collector's costs unless his claim was extravagant or the claimant was negligent in putting his case before the Collector. DAWOOD SAHIB v. COLLECTOR OF CHINGLEPUT Mad. 280 ———Discretion—Correspondence of Solicitor undignified—Solicitor deprived of his costs—Discretion, if properly used.

Judges have a very wide discretion in the matter of costs, but it is a discretion which must be exercised judicially. For a Judge to deprive a Solicitor of costs because the Judge disapproves the style of his correspondence and would be glad to see the controversial methods of Solicitors generally altered, is, to confuse the functions of a Judge with those of a school-master. D. N. REGE v. V. G. VIJAYAKAR Bom. 945 ———Privy Council — Whether carries interest—Interest.

The costs of the Privy Council do not carry interest unless such interest is specifically mentioned. CHANDMAL MARWARI v. SHIB PRASAD SINGH Pat. 769

Court-fees—Courts must look to substance of claim and not only form.

Courts of Justice have not to look at the mere form of the suit but should try to find out what the real substance of the claim is. Although it is open to a party to save the amount of the court-fee by framing the plaint in a manner permitted by the law, still the litigants should not be permitted, to deprive the Revenue Authorities of what is due to them by adopting methods of pleading which cannot be supported by the language of the relevant Statute. SRI RAM v. KHAWAJU Lah. 209

———One co-sharer filing suit for partition alleging that he is in joint possession with defendant—Court-fees, payable.

Where the plaintiff files a suit for partition of his share and alleges that he is in joint possession with the defendant co-sharer, the suit is a suit for partition and ad valorem court-fee need not be paid; but if the Court finds that evidence establishes that he is altogether out of possession, it can ask for ad valorem court-fees. TULSI BIBI v. FARRAK BIBI Cal. 815 ———Question of—Depends on allegations in plaint.

The question as to what the proper court-fees ought to be levied on the plaint depends on the allegations which are contained in the plaint. TULSI BIBI v. FARRAK BIBI Cal. 815

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7 (iv-A), Sch. II, Art. 17-A (1)—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 39—Suit for declaration that a registered document is forgery—Prayer for cancelling deed, whether necessary—Proper court-fee.

Where the plaintiff brought a suit alleging that a sale deed which purported to have been executed by him and which was directed by the Registrar to be registered was in fact a forgery by the defendant and praying that the instrument may be declared a forgery:

Held, that it was not incumbent on the plaintiff to have it cancelled or set aside and the suit was governed for purposes of court-fee, by Sch. II, Art. 17-A (1) of the Court Fees Act and not by s. 7 (iv-A). DASARI NAGABHUSHANAM v. KUNAMNENI VENKATAPPAYYA Mad. 948

———s. 7 (v) (a) (b). SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O XLVII, r. 1 668

———s. 7 (iv) (c). SEE Specific Relief Act, 1877, s. 42 209

———ss. 8, 7 (iv) (c). SEE Calcutta Improvement Act, 1911, s. 77 (1) (b) 817

———Sch. I, Art. 1—Appeal against personal liability only—Court-fee payable.

An appeal merely against the personal liability of the appellants can be filed on a court-fee of Rs. 10 only. BULAQI DAS v. LAL CHAND Lah. 752 ———Art. 1—Costs—Appeal against order for costs—Court-fee, if payable.

Ordinarily no court-fee is payable upon costs entered in the decree against which an appeal is presented, but where apart from and independently of any other relief which the appellant seeks, he seeks distinct relief on the ground that by the decree under appeal the costs of the parties have not been properly assessed or apportioned, the value of such distinct relief should be reckoned as part of the subject-matter in dispute for the purpose of the First Schedule of the Court Fees Act. FATEH SINGH v. MAUJ RAI Lah. 558 ———Art. 1, Sch. II, Arts. 11, 17—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 50 (2)—Appeal from order under—Court-fee payable.

The subject-matter in appeal against an order passed under sub-r. 2 of O. XXI, r. 50, Civil Procedure Code, is the liability of the judgment-debtor or the same amount. This amount is clearly ascertainable, and it cannot, therefore, be said that the subject-matter of the appeal is one where it is not possible to estimate it at a money value. The case is governed by Sch. I, Art. 1, Court Fees Act under which the proper court-fee payable is ad valorem on the subject-matter in dispute, i. e., the amount for which the party concerned is sought to be made liable. JUGAL KISHORE-GULAB SINGH v. DINA NATH SIRI RAM Lah. 639 ———Art. 1, Sch. II, Art. 17—Cross-objections—Court-fee on, how to be paid—Principle to be followed.

The court-fee on cross-objections should be paid ad valorem according to the value of the subject-matter in dispute under Art. 1, Sch. I of the Court Fees Act and not on the same principle as laid down for the case of appeals in Art. 17 of the Second Schedule. ABDUL SUBHAN KHAN v. MASARAT ALI KHAN Oudh 293

———Sch. II, Art. 6—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 17—Security bond furnished for setting aside ex parte decree in Small Cause suit—Proper stamp duty.

A security bond furnished under the proviso to s. 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, falls within Art. 6 of Sch. II of the Court Fees Act and requires a stamp of eight annas only.

Court Fees Act—concld.

An order setting aside an ex parte decree in a Small Cause suit is an order made under the Civil Procedure Code and even in cases where the petitioner tenders a security along with the very first application without a previous order of the Court the security bond falls within Art 6 of Sch II of the Court Fees Act. KALAPATI PEDA PITCHAMMA v. CHIRUVELLA PEDAMUNEYYA Mad. 559 S. B.

——— Sch. II, Art 11. See Court Fees Act, 1870, Sch. I, Art. 1. 293, 639

——— Art. 17-A (1). See Court Fees Act, 1870, s 7 iv-A) 948

——— Art. 17 (iii)—Suit for declaration that hypothecation bond was not enforceable and family property mortgaged was not saleable in execution of mortgage decree—Prayer, if merely for declaratory decree—Court fee payable.

Where a suit was brought for a declaration that a hypothecation bond executed by the plaintiff's father in favour of the defendant was unenforceable and that the family property mortgaged by that deed was not saleable in execution of an ex parte decree for sale obtained by defendant on the basis of the said mortgage deed:

Held, that the relief for a declaration that the family property was not saleable in execution of the decree was a declaratory relief and not a consequential relief and as the plaintiff merely prayed for a declaratory decree, for purposes of court-fee, the case was governed by Art. 17 (iii), Sch. II, Court Fees Act. ISHWAR DAYAL v AMBA PRASAD All. 546

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898),

s. 44. See Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, Art. 2 131 F. B.

——— ss. 70, 71, 134 (2)—Procedure under s. 134 (2), when can be resorted to.

It is only if the order cannot be served in the manner provided for service of summons that the publication of a proclamation under sub-s. 2, s. 134, Criminal Procedure Code, may be resorted to. ABDUL JABBAR SARKAR v. EMPEROR Cal. 416 (a)

——— s. 96. See Madras Gaming Act, 1930, s. 5 496

——— s. 96—Madras Gaming Act, 1930, ss. 5, 6—Defects in warrant—Remarks in judgment supplying defects, value of.

The remarks of a Magistrate which are intended to supply the omissions or defects found in a warrant and to vary its terms are not admissible as evidence. The warrant is to be in writing and must contain all the matters that the law requires to be stated there in. PUBLIC PROSECUTOR v. SUBRAMANIA SASTRI Mad. 496

——— s. 103—Search lists—Prosecution's duty to prove case with regard to different items severally.

When in a case there are several search lists, in each of which several items of property are mentioned, the prosecution ought to prove their case with regard to the different items severally, and the different items of property or different groups thereof mentioned in a search list ought to be separately and consecutively numbered either by letters or figures or by some other distinguishing marks and the same numbering should be followed while recording the evidence of witnesses relating to the searches to which those search lists refer. If that procedure is adopted, there will be no difficulty on the part of the Court in appreciating the evidence that is adduced in respect of the searches. RAFIQUEUDDIN AHMAD v. EMPEROR Cal. 687 F B.

——— s. 103—Search—Witnesses to be selected—Qualifications—Provisions should be complied with—Non-compliance—Inference.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Where respectable persons can be found in the neighbourhood, and the Police Officer making a search takes with him persons whose respectability is questionable or who come from a distant locality, the inference is that he was prompted by a desire to have such witnesses as would be easily persuaded to support any story which he might put forward. SADLU v. EMPEROR All 406

——— s. 107 See Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 145 36

——— s. 109—'A satisfactory account of himself,' meaning of—Simply avoiding Police or taking unfrequented route—Whether by itself ground for action under s. 109.

"A satisfactory account of himself" does not necessarily mean that he should give his correct name and address or even the object of his being present at night, but that he should satisfy the authorities by explaining the suspicious circumstances appearing against him. Simply avoiding the Police by a bad character or taking an unfrequented route is by itself no ground for action under s. 109, Criminal Procedure Code. It may be that in some cases simply not giving an explanation may not be enough, for instance, an apparently respectable person returning from the house of his mistress very late at night is using unfrequented streets and avoiding being seen He cannot come under s 109, Criminal Procedure Code: Each case must be decided on its own facts. EMPEROR v. BISHI SAHARA Pat. 729

——— s. 109 (a)—Words 'is taking' in cl. (a), significance of.

In s. 109, cl. (a), the words 'is taking' mean 'has taken' or 'has been taking'. EMPEROR v. BISHI SAHARA Pat. 729

——— s. 109 (a) (b)—Person found with housebreaking implements near wealthy man's house—Admission of object of being there—Person, if can be dealt with under cls. (a) and (b).

If a man be found by the Police with implements of house-breaking lurking near the house of a wealthy man thereby indicating that he is about to commit burglary there and when challenged by the Police he admits the object of his being there, he can be dealt with under cls. (a) and (b). EMPEROR v. BISHI SAHARA Pat. 729

——— s. 109 (a) (b)—Cl. (a), meaning and effect of.

Section 109, cl. (a), Criminal Procedure Code, does not mean that the man is taking precautions to conceal the fact of his being present within the local limits of such Magistrate; but it means that he is taking precautions to conceal his presence and that the concealment is to be within the local limits of such Magistrate. EMPEROR v. BISHI SAHARA Pat. 729

——— s. 134 (2). See Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 70 416 (a)

——— s. 144—Knowledge of order—Question of evidence—Prosecution, nature of proof required by—They can only prove circumstances enabling Court to infer if accused knew of the order or not.

The question of whether a person has knowledge of an order promulgated under s. 144 is a matter of evidence. Where it appears that the order had been promulgated for several weeks, that there had been disturbances in the city, and that notices containing the order had been posted up at various places in the city and none of the accused persons pleaded ignorance of the order when making statements in the Magistrate's Court, it is scarcely conceivable that they had no knowledge of the order passed. In such cases the prosecution cannot be expected to prove everything that takes place in the minds of the accused. They can only prove the circumstances which will enable the Court to infer either that the accused knew of the order or that the accused did not know of it. SHANDER v. EMPEROR All. 185

———ss. 144, 145—Period of sixty days—When begins to run—Dispute as to possession of immovable property—Proceeding under s. 145 should be preferred to that under s. 144.

The period of sixty days referred to in s. 144, Criminal Procedure Code begins to run from the date on which the notices are issued.

Held, on the materials before the Court that it would not interfere after the order had spent itself.

Where the dispute is with regard to possession of immovable property, a proceeding under s. 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is a poor substitute for a proceeding under s. 145 which settles once for all so far as the Criminal Courts are concerned, the question of possession with regard to a particular piece of immovable property. Such cases should be decided under s. 145. PURAN SINGH v. RAMJHARI KOER Pat. 88

———s. 145. SEE Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, Art. 47 1094

———ss. 145, 107—Previous order of Court in land registration case—Weight to be attached to it—Discretion of Magistrate—Interference with, if proper—Keeping case pending till revision against previous order is decided—Propriety of—Duty of Magistrate to receive evidence.

The likelihood of the breach of the peace is sufficient to give the Magistrate jurisdiction. The weight to be attached to a previous order of a Civil or Criminal Court is a question for the consideration of the Magistrate. Where therefore the Magistrate has jurisdiction to proceed under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code, there can be no interference with his discretion even if the matter might have been more suitably dealt with under s. 107. In such circumstances, however, the case ought not to be kept pending for the decision of the application for revision against the previous orders in a land registration case relating to the land in dispute. The Magistrate should proceed with the case and decide it without avoidable delay so that the property may be restored as soon as possible to the party which was in possession of it. He is bound to receive all such evidence as may be produced. GAYA PRASAD SINGH v. RAM SAROBER SARAN SINGH Pat. 36

———ss. 145, 537—Magistrate, if can take action merely on sworn testimony of complainant—Omission to record grounds for being satisfied of likelihood of breach of peace—Whether cured by s. 537—Such omission if a ground for setting aside Magistrate's final order.

Per King, C. J. and Srivastava, J.—There is nothing in the language of s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code to suggest that the Magistrate cannot take action merely on the sworn testimony of the complainant himself, if the Magistrate believes it to be true. If a Magistrate believes the statement of one witness to be true, he is at perfect liberty to act upon it for the purpose of passing an order under s. 145 (1). It is not incumbent upon him to hold a preliminary inquiry himself by examining further witnesses, nor is it necessary for him to call for a report from the Police. If the Magistrate is satisfied on the strength of the testimony of one witness then he can pass an order under s. 145 (1).

When the Magistrate is so satisfied regarding the likelihood of a breach of the peace, his omission to say so in his order is a mere omission to frame his order in accordance with law and as long as no failure of justice or prejudice to the accused has been occasioned, the omission is covered by s. 537, Criminal Procedure Code and cannot furnish a reason for setting aside the Magistrate's final order.

Per King, C. J.—Magistrates are not to understand that defects in procedure are of no importance. Slipshod procedure is to be condemned even though it does not necessarily result in vitiating the whole proceeding.

Per Nanavutty, J.—Before passing an order under s. 145 (1), the Magistrate should call upon the complainant to produce evidence on his behalf to prove that there really was a dispute between him and the opposite parties concerning the plots he mentioned in his complaint, and that that dispute was of such a nature as was likely to cause a breach of the peace. And this preliminary inquiry is necessary to enable the Magistrate to satisfy himself that such a dispute did exist and that it was, in all probability, likely to cause a breach of the peace.

The omission of the Magistrate to satisfy himself of the existence of a dispute concerning land which, in his opinion, was likely to cause a breach of the peace is an omission which goes to the root of the matter as there is an initial want of jurisdiction on the part of the Magistrate to initiate proceedings under s. 145 of the Code, and such an infringement of the Code does not come within the purview of s. 537, for it vitiates at the very outset the entire proceedings of Magistrate. BIBI ASGHARI KHANAM v. EMPEROR Oudh 169

———s. 162—Accused, if can apply for copy of statement any time after witness has been called.

The accused may apply for a copy of the statement of a witness to the Police at any time after he has been called, that is, at any time after the witness has entered the witness-box and while he is giving evidence. The cross-examination of the witness must be adjourned until the necessary copy has been given. NGA U KHINE v. EMPEROR Rang. 66

———s. 162—Accused in appeal if can complain that trial Court refused to refer to statement and at the same time say that Appellate Court is not entitled to refer to them.

The appellant cannot complain that the trial Court refused to refer to the statements, although requested by the appellant to do so, and then say that the Appellate Court is not entitled to refer to them because the appellant has not requested it so to refer. He cannot be permitted to approbate and reprobate at the same time. NGA U KHINE v. EMPEROR Rang. 66

———s. 162—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 30—Statement to Police Officer in course of investigation—How used—S. 162, scope of—Statement of co-accused—When to be used against accused.

Section 162, Criminal Procedure Code, provides that no statement made by any person to a Police Officer in the course of an investigation shall be used for any purpose at the subsequent trial subject to the exception that such statements may be used to contradict witnesses for the prosecution. This section refers only to statements made by witnesses and not to statements by an accused person. Therefore statements made by a co-accused to the Police might be admissible against himself, but they would be inadmissible as against the accused by the ordinary rule that hearsay evidence is excluded. This rule may briefly be stated as meaning that any statement made by a person who is alive and has not been called as a witness is inadmissible to prove the truth of that statement. Under s. 30 of the Evidence Act, the Court may take into consideration the confession of a co-accused. Where, however, the co-accused makes no confession but throws the blame entirely on the accused and tries to exculpate himself such statement cannot be taken against the accused. POTRAM v. EMPEROR Nag. 258

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

———s. 162—Second proviso to s. 162—Part of statement, when excluded—Part of statement when used for contradiction must be proved.

Under the second proviso to s. 162, Criminal Procedure Code, the Judge (or Magistrate) should exclude from the copy supplied any part of the statement which in his opinion satisfies one or other of two conditions, viz, (1) that it is irrelevant or (2) that its disclosure to the accused is both unessential in the interests of justice and inexpedient in the public interest. There are only two separate and distinct conditions under which a part of the statement can be excluded. To justify exclusion under the second of the above conditions the two circumstances mentioned therein must exist together in conjunction. If he excludes any part of the statement the Judge (or Magistrate) must record the opinion on which he bases such exclusion, but not his reasons for that opinion.

Those parts of the statement to the Police which are used in cross-examination to contradict the witness must be proved and brought on to the record. This can ordinarily be done by the admission of the witness that he made the statement, or by examination of the Police Officer who recorded it. If the latter course is necessary, in order to avoid delay, there can be no objection to allowing cross-examination subject to subsequent proof of the statement. NGA U KHINE v. EMPEROR Rang. 66

———s. 162—Statement in nature of confession—Admissibility. SEE Evidence Act, 1872, s. 27 260

———s. 162—Statement made to Police in course of investigation, if can be used without request of accused—Scope of s 162,

Under s. 162, Criminal Procedure Code, a statement made by a person to a Police Officer in the course of an investigation, whether oral or reduced to writing, cannot be used for any purpose, save on the request of the accused (or, his pleader). The Judge (or Magistrate) has no authority to look at the Police papers unless requested to do so by the accused. On the request of the accused, the Judge (or Magistrate) must refer to the statement of a witness to the Police, if it has been reduced to writing, whether that statement is separately, recorded or recorded in a Police diary. The purpose for which the Judge (or Magistrate) refers to the statement is inorder to see whether any part of the statement ought to be excluded under the second proviso to the section, and not for the purpose of deciding whether there is in the statement material for cross-examination of the witness in the manner provided by s. 145, Evidence Act. Subject to any part being excluded under the second proviso to the section, the accused is entitled to a copy of the whole of the statement to the Police. It is not for the Court to decide whether there is any variation between the statement in examination-in-chief and the statement recorded by the Police Subject to the power of the Judge (or Magistrate) to disallow any question which, in his opinion, does not fall within the scope of s. 145, Evidence Act, it is for the accused or his pleader to decide in what manner and to what extent he will use the statement for the purpose of cross-examination; but the cross-examination on the statement must be confined to alleged contradictions between the statement and the evidence-in-chief of the witness, and must be carried out in the manner provided by the latter part of s. 145, Evidence Act, i. e, by calling his attention to the parts of the statement which it is intended to use for the purpose of contradicting him. NGA U KHINE v. EMPEROR Rang 66

———s. 162—Statement of accused—Applicability of s. 162.

Information received from a person accused of an offence is not a statement within the meaning of s. 162 (1), Criminal Procedure Code as he is not a person who, from the information given or otherwise appeared to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case whom the Police were entitled to examine under the provisions of ss. 160 and 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Though s. 162 applies to statements of persons examined as witnesses by the Police in the course of an investigation, it does not apply to the statement of an accused person. MUHAMMAD v. EMPEROR Lah. 260

———s. 162—Statement of accused to Police during investigation—Whether can be used to discredit accused on account of any contradiction.

It is not proper that the Sessions Judge should cross-examine the accused with a view to confronting them with the statements which they made to the Investigating Officer. Statements made even by witnesses to a Police Officer in the course of an investigation are not permitted to be used in evidence for any purpose, except as provided in s. 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code, that is to say, on the request of the accused the Court shall refer to the written statement and direct that the accused be furnished with a copy of it in order that the witness may be contradicted by the use of this statement. It was certainly never intended that an accused person when being examined by the Court for the purpose of explaining anything in evidence against him should be confronted with the statement which he had made to the Police for the purpose of being discredited on account of any contradiction. BHAGWAN DAS v. EMPEROR All. 560

———ss. 162, 537—Infringement of mandatory provision of Criminal Procedure Code, if sufficient to hold that Court failed to administer justice.

If a mandatory provision of the Code of Criminal Procedure is infringed, that does not of itself make it necessary to hold that the Court must have failed in administering justice to the accused. In order that an infringement of the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code should be of such a nature that it does not come within the purview of s. 537 of the Code, it must go to the root of the trial and must in effect vitiate the proceedings. It must in effect amount to an assumption by the Court of a jurisdiction which it does not possess, or a failure to exercise a jurisdiction which it does possess. NGA U KHINE v. EMPEROR Rang. 66

———ss. 190, 192—Cognizance is taken of offence and not of individual offenders—Transfer of case—Sub-Divisional Magistrate transferring case to another Magistrate—Explanation as to intention of transferring Magistrate—(Held, on facts, that whole case was transferred).

Under s. 190, Criminal Procedure Code, cognizance is taken of the offence and not necessarily of the individual offenders whose names transpire in the course of the investigation.

A Rule was issued in respect of five out of nineteen persons who were convicted under s. 147,

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Penal Code. The case was remanded to the District Magistrate calling for an explanation as to whether the Sub-Divisional Officer, who transferred the case to the Magistrate who tried and convicted the accused, intended to transfer the whole case or the case only of those persons against whom the Police recommended that the case should be started. The explanation stated that cognizance was taken only in respect of those persons sent up by the Police and that the intention of the Sub-Divisional Officer was that investigation should proceed only with regard to the persons sent up by the Police:

Held, (on facts) that the explanation of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate that "he took cognizance only in respect of the persons sent up by the Police", meant only that he took cognizance of the offence and his action in transferring the case without excluding any of the accused, showed that he transferred the whole case for disposal. MATHURA SINGH v. EMPEROR Pat. 58 ——ss. 190, 556—Sessions Judge ordering arrest and production of witness before him, for trial before City Magistrate—Magistrate committing him to Sessions—Same Judge convicting him—Magistrate, if justified in taking cognizance—Permission under s. 556 not taken—Defect, if fatal.

In the trial in the Sessions Court a man was produced and examined as a witness for the prosecution. The Sessions Judge came to the conclusion that this witness ought to have been charged as a receiver of stolen property. He consequently recorded the following order. "From the evidence recorded by me in the Sessions Case, I find that there is sufficient material before me for trying the witness under s. 411, Penal Code. I, therefore, order him to be arrested and produced before the City Magistrate, to be tried for the same offence." The City Magistrate took cognizance of this offence and committed the witness for trial in the Court of Session. This trial went on before the same Judge who had made the order for the arrest and for his production before the City Magistrate to be tried. The trial in the Sessions Court ended in a conviction:

Held, that the City Magistrate was justified by s. 190 (a) Criminal Procedure Code, in taking cognizance of this offence.

Held, also, if at the initial stage when the Sessions Judge first took up the case himself he had requested the permission of the High Court to try the case, the disqualification might perhaps have been removed, and that there was a technical defect more serious than could be overlooked. RAHIMBUX KARIMBUX v. EMPEROR Sind 448

—— s. 192. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 190 58

——ss. 195 (3), 476—Order by Small Cause Court Judge, Saugor, under s. 476—Appeal from, whether lies to Additional District Judge, Saugor, or to District-Judge, Jubbulpore.

The Additional District Judge sitting at Saugor determines all matters arising from the Saugor Revenue District and there is no limitation either by general or special orders of the Local Government or by any particular order of the District Judge, which debars the Additional District Judge from hearing an appeal under s. 476, Criminal Procedure Code, which comes before him in the ordinary course of the distribution of the business. Consequently an appeal from an order of the Court of Small Causes, Saugor, under s. 476, Criminal Procedure Code, lies to Additional District Judge, Saugor, and not to the District Judge, Jubbulpore. LOKMAN v. HALKU Nag 863

——— s. 196-A—Conspiracy—Object to commit cognizable offence punishable with rigorous imprisonment for over two years—Sanction, if necessary.

Where the object of the conspiracy is to commit cognizable offences punishable with rigorous imprisonment for more than two years, under s. 196-A (2), Criminal Procedure Code, no sanction is necessary for a charge under s. 120-B, Penal Code. RAMJANAM TEWARI v. EMPEROR Pat. 866

——— s. 197—S. 197, when operates—Offence must be so connected with official duty as to become inseparable from it—Order of Magistrate quashing proceedings—Whether amounts to discharge.

In order to attract the provisions of s. 197, Criminal Procedure Code, the act must be so connected with the official duty as to become inseparable from it. It must be so connected with the official act as to form part of the same transaction. It will be perhaps quite a different thing if for the time being the public officer stops the official work, engages himself in private work and in that connection commits an offence. But it may be that a Judge or public servant may commit an offence as against a stranger while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty.

Where a Deputy Magistrate was engaged in realising taxes and he had threatened the defaulters and immediately he turned round and engaging himself with the complainant took him to task for being near him in a particular manner:

Held, that the offence alleged against him was so connected with the performance of his official duty that it was impossible to say that it was an independent act in no way connected with the realization of taxes, and that it did not matter that the Deputy Magistrate had no jurisdiction over the complainant. Consequently, sanction of the Local Government was necessary for prosecution. RAM SINGH v. S A. RIZWI Pat. 126

——— s. 199—Complaint, if should specify the section under which accused is to be charged.

For the purpose of s. 199 of the Code of Criminal Procedure the complaint need not specify precisely the section under which the accused is to be charged so long as it sets forth matter which, if proved, would warrant a conviction, and a desire is expressed that the accused be punished for what he has done. SAIN v. EMPEROR Lah. 595

——— s. 202.

SEE Evidence Act, 1872, s. 35 1040

SEE PENAL CODE, 1860, s. 182 1070

——ss. 209, 437—Discharge of accused by Magistrate—Order set aside by Sessions Judge and re-trial in Sessions Court ordered—Jurisdiction to set aside the order—"Improper", meaning of.

Under s. 437, Criminal Procedure Code, the Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate has jurisdiction to set aside the order of a Magistrate discharging the accused under s. 209, Criminal Procedure Code, if he is of opinion that the order is improper. It is not necessary that the order should be perverse or manifestly contrary to the evidence in the case.

Per Beaumont, C. J.—The order of discharge may be set aside on the ground that the Magistrate has, however competently, taken upon himself the discharge of a duty which under the Code is entrusted to the Sessions Court, that is to say, the duty of appreciation of evidence of doubtful credibility or in a proper case on the ground that he disagrees with the appreciation of evidence by the Magistrate.

Per Rangnekar, J.—In a case triable exclusively by the Court of Session, the Sessions Judge can set aside the order of discharge and commit the accused for trial: (1) when he considers that the charge was not groundless, and (2) when he considers that there are sufficient grounds for commitment, both on facts and on legal grounds, or even when the proceedings before the inferior Court were not regular and that is the meaning of the expression "improperly discharged."

The result of a careful consideration of the sections and the cases is, as follows :—(1) That it is competent to the Committing Magistrate at any stage of the preliminary inquiry to discharge the accused if he considers the charge to be groundless for reasons to be recorded by him. (2) The Committing Magistrate is entitled to weigh and appreciate the evidence led on behalf of the prosecution and on behalf of the defence, and if on a consideration of this evidence he is of opinion that there are not sufficient grounds of committing the accused or trial, in other words, there is no case which would fairly justify or sustain a conviction at the trial, or no evidence on which any reasonable person can hold the accused to be guilty, then it is his duty to discharge the accused. (3) If after a charge is framed and a list of further witnesses put in by the accused and the Magistrate after examining any such witnesses thinks that there are not sufficient grounds for committing the accused for trial, it is his duty to cancel the charge and discharge the accused. (4) The expression "sufficient ground" means, when credible witnesses make statements which, if believed, would sustain a conviction. (5) The Sessions Judge has jurisdiction to interfere in revision but such jurisdiction should be exercised only if he thinks that the order is illegal or incorrect or otherwise improper. (6) The expression "improper" in this connection means that in the opinion of the Sessions Judge there were sufficient grounds before the Magistrate on which he ought to have made an order for committal. (7) The power in revision must not be used freely. (8) The Sessions Judge must give reasons for his interference, so that if the matter comes to the High Court, there may be materials before it for deciding whether the Sessions Judge acted properly in interfering with the order of discharge. RAMCHANDRA BABAJI GORE v. EMPEROR Bom. 101 F. B.

——— ss. 215, 439—Order admitting evidence in preliminary inquiry prior to committal—Interference in revision.

The High Court will not in the exercise of its revisional powers interfere with an order admitting a certain piece of evidence made by a Subordinate Court in the course of a preliminary inquiry prior to commitment to the Sessions in view of the fact that if the case is committed for trial, it will rest upon the trial Court independently to decide upon the admissibility of the evidence and if it is not committed intervention would have been unnecessary. KATIKINENI VENKATA GOPALA NARAIMHA RAMA RAO v. CHITRLURI VENKATARAMAYYA Mad. 395 (b) ——— ss. 233, 234, 235—Joinder of charges—Offences under s. 3 (1), Indian States (Protection against Disaffection) Act, whether can be consolidated.

Since being the author, the editor, the printer and the publisher are distinct offences under s. 3 (1) of the Indian States (Protection against Disaffection) Act, 1922, they cannot be consolidated for the purpose of holding a joint trial without violation of the mandatory provisions of ss. 233 and 234 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The several acts of the accused in composing the offending article, editing and printing it at a certain place and publishing the same at six different places on different occasions cannot be regarded as "one series of acts so connected together as to form the same transaction" within the meaning of s. 235 of the Criminal Procedure Code. DIWAN SINGH v. EMPEROR Nag. 450

——— s. 237—Charge under s. 353, Penal Code—Conviction under s 323—Legality of—Quære.

Quære.—Whether a man who has been charged under s. 323, Penal Code, cannot be convicted on the failure of the prosecution to prove that the person against whom the criminal force was used was a public servant, under s. 323, Penal Code, because the latter is not a minor offence as compared to the former. DIP CHAND v. EMPEROR All. 540 (a) ——— s. 238—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 454, 441—Charge under s. 454—Conviction under s. 441—Legality of.

Where a person is charged under s. 454, Penal Code for committing trespass with the intention of committing theft, he can be convicted under s. 441, for trespass committed with the object of committing an offence. NIHERA KAHAR v. EMPEROR Pat. 629

——— s. 239—Offences under ss. 406, 174, Penal Code, not committed in course of same transaction—Joint trial, if legal—Acquittal under s. 406, Penal Code, if makes trial under s. 174 legal.

The joint trial of the accused under ss. 406 and 174, Penal Code, the offences not being committed in the course of the same transaction, is illegal. The mere fact that the accused has been acquitted of the charge under s. 406, Penal Code, does not make his trial under s. 174, Penal Code, illegal. DHAN SINGH v. EMPEROR Lah. 163 ——— ss. 274 and 276—18 *jurors summoned in murder case—*8 *present—*7 selected and trial with their aid—Trial valid.

In a murder case 18 jurors were duly summoned for the trial of the case. But when the Judge took up the trial and the names of the 18 jurors were called, only eight of them were found present in Court. Thereupon the Judge chose seven of them and held the trial with the aid of seven jurors :

Held, that it was not the duty of the Judge to send his Court officers to search for jurors in adjacent Sessions Court. The constitution of a jury of seven, in the circumstances, was not, an illegality such as would render the trial invalid. MUKUNDA MURARI PAL v. EMPEROR Cal. 599

——— s. 288—Scope of—Evidence given before Magistrate—Whether can be utilised in support of conviction—Independent corroboration is not necessary.

Under s. 288 of the Criminal Procedure Code, evidence admitted under that section may be treated as evidence in the case for all purposes subject to the provisions of the Evidence Act. It will not be proper to limit the use of such evidence by the proviso that unless there is clearly present, besides the evidence given before the Magistrate, evidence which will show that the evidence given before the Magistrate should be preferred to and substituted for that given before the Sessions Judge, the evidence given before the Magistrate cannot be effectively utilised in support of a conviction. Nor can it be said that evidence admitted under s. 288, Criminal Procedure Code, invariably requires some independent corroboration in the same manner as the statement of an accomplice. RAJA RAM v. EMPEROR All. 657

——— s. 297—Cases arising out of sexual matters —Charges by woman against man—Testimony of woman—Corroboration—Judge's duty in charging the jury—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 376.

The Judge should warn the jury that in cases arising out of sexual matters, when charges are made against a man by a woman, it is dangerous to convict upon her evidence alone and that they ought to require corroboration of her story before they bring in a verdict of "guilty." The kind of corroboration required by the rule must be independent evidence, that is to say, the evidence of some witnesses other than the girl herself. He should make the jury understand that only in exceptional cases would they be justified in accepting her uncorroborated testimony EMPEROR v. NUR AHMED Cal. 584

——— s. 307 (3)—High Court, if can, under s. 307 (3), order re-trial.

A re-trial in a criminnl case should not be ordered too lightly and should be avoided as much as possible. A re-trial certainly should not be ordered, where it can be established that there is really no evidence to go before a jury, because to order a re-trial in such circumstances would be to put the accused to unnecessary harassment.

Under sub-s. (3), s. 307, Criminal Procedure Code, the High Court has ample power in a case, in which there has been no proper or adequate trial, to make an order that the accused persons should be re-tried. RAFIQUEUDDIN AHMAD v. EMPEROR Cal. 687 F. B.

——— s. 307—Sessions Court accepting jury's verdict on one charge and disagreeing with jury on another charge—Reference to High Court under s. 307—Competency of.

It is not open to a Court of Session to accept the verdict of the jury on one charge and disagree with the jury on another charge and refer the matter to the High Court under s. 307 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. RAMJANAM TEWARI v. EMPEROR Pat. 866

——— s. 342—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 75 —Previous conviction—Mere admission, if sufficient —Documentary evidence, necessity of.

All previous convictions which are being relied on for the purposes of s. 75, Penal Code, must be proved in accordance with the law. A mere admission of the accused is not sufficient especially when there is nothing on the record to justify the questioning of the accused under s. 342, Criminal Procedure Code, on that point. SARDAR AHMAD v EMPEROR Lah. 478

——— s. 350 (1), proviso (a)—Applicability— Trial by Bench of two Magistrates — Evidence recorded by one—Dissolution of the Bench—Case proceeded with by Magistrate taking evidence— S. 350 (1), does not apply.

Section 350, Criminal Procedure Code, refers to cases heard by a Magistrate sitting singly, who is succeeded by another Magistrate sitting singly. It contemplates cases in which the second Magistrate is a person other than the first Magistrate and in which the second Magistrate has not had any previous opportunity of hearing the witnesses. Where two Magistrates have heard a case and one of them has recorded the depositions and on the dissolution of the Bench, the Magistrate who has recorded the deposition proceeds with the case, s. 350, Criminal Procedure Code, is not applicable and in such a case no re-trial can be claimed. ABDUL HAKIM v. FOZU MIA Cal. 1003

——— s. 369. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 421 736 F. B.

——— s. 386—Salary not yet drawn by salary earner—Whether can be attached—'Movable property,' meaning of.

The expression 'movable property' as used in s. 386, Criminal Procedure Code does not include salary not yet drawn by a salary earner. Consequently a Magistrate acting under s. 336, Criminal Procedure Code, cannot attach salary, which the salary-earner has not only not drawn, but has not even yet earned. The warrant can issue only after the salary has come into the salary-earner's possession or into that of the bailiff in his behalf. MAUNG SOE HLAING v. MA THEIN KHIN Rang. 742

——— s. 386—Warrant—Endorsement to clerk—Legality. SEE Police Act, 1861, ss. 15, 16 421 (b) S B

——— s. 403 (3). SEE PENAL CODE, 1860, s. 302 287

——— s. 417—Acquittal, appeal against—Principles of interference.

In the case of appeals from acquittals, the decision of the Court below must be clearly wrong before the High Court will interfere, that is to say, a reasonable decision of a Court entitled to deal with the matter should not be set aside merely because the High Court took a different view. EMPEROR v. KURA Lah. 118 ——— ss. 419, 421, 561-A, 369—Order dismissing appeal filed under s. 419—Whether final—When can be set aside—Whether conditions under s. 421 have been fulfilled, is a question of fact—Interference by High Court.

An order passed under s. 421, Criminal Procedure Code, dismissing an appeal filed under s. 419, Criminal Procedure Code is prima facie final.

Such an order cannot be vacated under s. 561-A, Criminal Procedure Code unless it is proved that other of the conditions precedent to the passing of the order as laid down by s. 421 has not been fulfilled and this is a question of fact depending on the circumstances of each case. The burden of proving that either of the conditions has not been complied with, lies heavily on the person challenging the finality of the order.

Where it is proved that either of the conditions precedent has not been complied with, the High Court has power to interfere under s. 561-A and in such a case it is immaterial whether the Bench which is called upon to interfere is composed of the same or different Judges. Where there is no proof that either of the conditions have not been complied with, the High Court, whether the Bench is composed of the same or other Judges, has no power to interfere. SHAHU v EMPEROR Sind 736 F.B.

——— s. 421—Compliance with s. 421—Appellant or his pleader, if must be heard.

Section 421, Criminal Procedure Code, does not require that the appellant or his pleader shall be heard before the appeal is decided, but all that it requires is that a sufficient opportunity should be afforded to them of being head. If a sufficient opportunity of being heard is afforded to either of them, the neglect of the appellant or his pleader who is his agent debars him from claiming a second hearing. SHAHU v. EMPEROR Sind 736 F. B.

——— ss. 421, 369—Dismissal of appeal summarily in exercise of powers under s. 421— Whether judgment.

There is no dismissal of a criminal appeal for default of appearance by a party as in a civil case and therefore when an appeal is summarily dismissed deliberately and openly by a Court of competent jurisdiction in the apparent exercise of the powers vested in it under s. 421, Criminal Procedure Code, it is prima facie, a judgment within the meaning of s. 369, Criminal Procedure Code. SHAHU v. EMPEROR Sind 736 F. B.

——ss. 421, 422, 423, 439—Powers of Appellate Court to dismiss appeal summarily—Appeal not dismissed summarily—Duty of Court to comply with provisions of ss. 422 and 423*—Powers of Appellate Court under s.* 423 and High Court under s. 439*—Whether same—Jurisdiction of Courts conferred by Statute—Courts cannot go outside the provisions.*

Upon the true construction of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Appellate Court is not entitled to dismiss an appeal summarily in terms of s. 421 unless the Court is satisfied that there is no sufficient ground for interfering in accordance with the relief sought in the appeal, and where the appeal is not dismissed summarily, the Court, is bound in order to the disposal of the appeal, to comply with the provisions of s. 422 as to notice, and with the provisions of s. 423 as to sending for the record, if such record is not already in Court.

The terms of s. 421 exclude the possibility of partial summary dismissal, e. g., in so far as the conviction is appealed against. Failing summary dismissal, the provisions of ss. 422 and 423 apply and, the provisions as to notices in s 422 and the provision as to sending for the record in s. 423 are clearly peremptory, and there can be no room for revision at that stage. The words 'admitted' and 'admission' in reference to appeals which are not summarily dismissed, though not infrequently used in the Courts in India, are not happily chosen. From their ordinary meaning they would imply that the appeal requires to be admitted at this stage, whereas the Appellate Court are bound to deal with the appeal, and they can only do so when they have complied with the preliminary steps of giving the statutory notices under s. 422, and sending for the record, which will enable the Court to deal with the appeal in accordance with the provisions of s. 423. The powers conferred on the Appellate Court under s. 423 are as ample as the High Court would have on revision under s. 439, with the exception of the power to enhance the sentence, and if the appeal is before a High Court, and it is thought to be desirable, there is no reason why the accused should not be warned that, at the hearing on the petition, he may be called on to show cause why his sentence should not be enhanced. The jurisdiction of the Court in these matters is statutory, and the Court, however admirable its intentions, is not entitled to go outside these provisions and, in effect, to legislate for itself. EMPEROR v. DAHU RAUT P. C. 386

——ss. 423, 439—Powers of Appellate Court under s. 423 and of High Court under s. 439—Whether same. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, ss. 421, 422, 423, 439 386

——s. 428—Sessions Judge hearing appeal from decision of Assistant Sessions Judge in trial with aid of assessors — Additional evidence, recording of—Legality—Such evidence, if admissible —Sessions Judge forming opinion as to guilt of accused on such evidence—Re-hearing—Transfer to another Judge—Necessity of.

It is only when the Court of Session is sitting to hear an appeal from a judgment of a Magistrate has it got power under s. 428 of the Criminal Procedure Code to record additional evidence itself, or direct it to be taken by a Magistrate, and it is only the High Court, which is the Appellate Court of the Court of Session, that can, under s. 428 of the Code, direct a Court of Session or a Magistrate to record additional evidence in a case pending before it in appeal. The Sessions Judge is not justified by the provisions of s. 428, Criminal Procedure Code, in recording additional evidence while deciding an appeal against the judgment of the Assistant Sessions Judge who tried the case with the aid of assessors. Such evidence is not legally admissible and the accused cannot legally be convicted upon that evidence.

When once a Sessions Judge has formed an opinion as to the guilt of the accused upon the additional evidence recorded by him, it is desirable that a re-hearing of the appeal is not made before the same Judge. An application for transfer to another Court, should, in the circumstances, be granted. HORI LAL v. EMPEROR Oudh 753

——s. 428 (1)—Appellate Court's power to remand case for re-trial with condition to consider evidence already on record.

The lower Appellate Court has no power to order a re-trial with the condition that the evidence already on record should be taken into consideration. If there is to be a re-trial, the accused is entitled to demand that there shall be a de novo trial. Under s. 428 (1) of the Criminal Procedure Code, if the Appellate Court thinks that additional evidence is necessary, it may, after recording its reasons, either take such evidence itself, or direct it to be taken by a Magistrate. If it thinks that further evidence is necessary it should proceed under that sub-section. I'OTRAM v. EMPEROR Nag. 258

——s. 436—Power of High Court to order further inquiry without reference to High Court.

The order of a Magistrate quashing the proceedings amounts to an order of discharge and it is open to the Sessions Judge, if he is of that opinion, to order further inquiry into the complaint without referring to High Court. RAM SINGH v. S. A. RIZWI Pat. 126

——s. 437. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 209 101 F. B.

——s. 438—Reference to High Court—When can be made—Question of law—Necessity of—Reference contrary to findings of facts of trial Court—Legality of.

The High Court will not accept any reference or revision which involves no question of law. The Sessions Judge should not, therefore, make any reference to the High Court or submit any application for revision of any order contrary to the findings of facts arrived at by the trial Court.

Where in an application for maintenance the trying Magistrate finds that the husband was residing within his jurisdiction it must be accepted as correct and it is not open to the Sessions Judge to hold anything to the contrary. DULARE v. SUNDARIA Oudh 726 (a) ——s. 438—Reference—When can be made to High Court—No question of law involved—Reference to be rejected.

A refenence can only be made to the High Court if after accepting loyally the finding of facts arrived at by the trial Magistrate some question of law arises which necessitates interference with the order passed by the trial Court. When no question of law is involved the reference is to be rejected. EMPEROR v. MR. B. A. PETERS Oudh 724

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

———s. 439
See Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s 215 395 (b)
See Criminal Procedure Code, 1893, s. 421 386
——— s. 439—Criminal trial—Power of High Court to interfere with findings of fact in revision—Restrictions in s. 439, Criminal Procedure Code.
Although the powers of the High Court to interfere with findings of fact in revision are not in any way restricted by s. 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code, in practice they are only exercised in exceptional cases and under exceptional circumstances. They are, however, invariably exercised in cases where it is established that the findings of fact reached by the two Courts below are based either on no evidence or on inadmissible evidence or on legally inadequate evidence or are perverse. Diwan Singh v. Emperor Nag. 450
——— s. 476. See Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 195 (3) 863
———s. 476—Order after enquiry that complaint should be made against applicant—Court not expressing in so many words that a prosecution should follow—Order, if rendered illegal—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) s 193.
Where after making an enquiry the Court ordered under s. 476, Criminal Procedure Code, that a complaint should be made against the applicant under s. 193, Penal Code:
Held, that although the Court did not express in so many words that it was expedient that a prosecution should follow, the order was not thereby rendered illegal and that the prosecution for perjury that followed was a perfectly proper proceeding. Ibn Ali v Emperor All. 490
———s. 488—Husband's offer to maintain—Bona fides of offer and sufficiency of reasons for refusal to go back to husband should be considered before making order.
The mere fact that some three years ago the husband beat the wife and turned her out is no reason for holding that the subsequent offer to take her back, was not bona fide or could justify the refusal of the wife to go back to her husband. Unless the Magistrate finds that the offer is not bona fide or that the reason given by the wife for not going back to her husband is sufficient, he should not make an order for maintenance. Nur Muhammad v. Hajran Lah. 609
———s. 488—Maintenance proceedings — Wife, examination of—Husband expressing willingness to take back wife —Duty of Court to examine wife.
Proceedings under s. 488, Criminal Procedure Code are not complaints and hence it is not legally necessary for the wife to be examined. But when a husband expresses his willingness to take back the wife and child, it is the duty of the Magistrate to enquire from the wife her reasons for not going back to her husband and failure to do so amounts to illegality. Nur Muhammad v. Hajran Lah. 609
———s. 488, 489, 490—Second Class Magistrate —Power to pass sentence of imprisonment for breach of order directing payment of maintenance.
A Second Class Magistrate is not competent to pass a sentence of imprisonment for breach of an order under s. 488 of the Criminal Procedure Code directing payment of maintenance. The power to enforce an order for maintenance does not necessarily include the power to sentence a person, against whom it was passed, to imprisonment. In re Kuppini Naiken Mad. 694
———s. 497 (1)—Granting of bail—Considerations to be taken into account by Court.
The High Court's power to grant bail under s. 498 of the Criminal Procedure Code, is not limited by the restriction imposed by s 497 (1). The High Court will not, however, grant bail in non-bailable cases except in special circumstances and according to the exigencies of each particular case.
Bail will not be withheld merely as a punishment. But in granting or refusing bail the Courts will take into consideration, amongst other things, the question whether the accused, if released on bail, is likely to tamper with the prosecution evidence or get up false evidence in support of the defence.
Magistrates are bound to consider whether a prisoner, if released, will suborn evidence and they may well refuse to enlarge on bail a prisoner who is of such a character that his presence at large will intimidate witnesses. Emperor v. Mahammed Panah Sind 113
——— s. 513—Bail—Surety bond, nature and effect of.
Per Muhammad Noor, J.—When a Court orders an accused to be released on bail on his offering surety or sureties the question of the forfeiture of the amount of surety, in case the accused does not appear on the date fixed, is of secondary consideration; the primary consideration is the personal element of the surety or sureties concerned. When an accused is released on bail on his offering surety for the amount ordered, the Court expects the surety to see that the accused appears on the date fixed and also that the surety will take steps for getting the accused arrested in case there is any attempt on the part of the accused to abscond or to avoid attendance in Court. The surety or sureties must have a personal stake in seeing that the accused carries out his obligation. Surja Narain In the matter of Pat. 430 S. B.
———s. 514—Bail bond—Denial of execution of bond—Forfeiture, when can be ordered—Evidence of execution—Necessity of.
Where a person denies the execution of a bail bond and the Magistrate without taking any evidence passes orders forfeiting the bond, the orders cannot be supported as it is necessary that there should be some evidence to prove that the bond was executed by him. Birendra Nath Bakshi v. Emperor Cal. 1120
———s. 526—Accused and his witnesses residing at considerable distance, whether a ground for transfer—For accused to appear in certain place risky and inconvenient—Held, case should be transferred.
The fact that an accused person and his defence witnesses reside at a considerable distance from where they are being tried is ordinarily no ground for transfer; but where it is highly inconvenient and risky for the applicant to appear either as an accused or as a witness in certain place, the case should be transferred from that place. Satbhari v. Muhammad Sidik Sind 1010
———s. 526—Two complaints—One against, and other by, accused—Parties same—Complaint of accused dismissed—Whether ground for transfer of complaint against him.
Interest or bias is not to be inferred from the opinions formed on evidence judicially recorded, and a Magistrate is not, therefore, disqualified to try the second case, merely because he has expressed his opinion on the first case tried by him.
Where two complaints were filed before the same Magistrate, one by the accused and the other against him, in both of which the parties were the same and the complaint filed by the accused was dismissed;

Held, that it was no ground for transfer of the case against him. GHULAMALI v EMPEROR Sind 994

——s. 537. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 145 169

——s. 537—Cross cases—Joint trial—Irregularity, if cured by s. 537, when no prejudice is caused to accused.

Although the joint trial of two cross-cases, the prosecution evidence in one of which constitutes the defence evidence in the other, is an irregularity, it can be cured under s. 537, Criminal Procedure Code, if no prejudice has thereby been caused to the accused. GANGA SINGH v. EMPEROR All. 541

——s. 537—Defect, when can be cured under. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 162 66

——s. 556. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 190 448

——s. 561-A—Inherent powers under, can be exercised by High Court.

Under s 561-A, Criminal Procedure Code, inherent powers in that behalf may be exercised by the High Court and not by a Court of inferior jurisdiction. SHAHU v. EMPEROR Sind 736 F. B.

——s. 562—Offences under s. 114, Railways Act —Offender should be punished irrespective of no previous conviction — Precedents—Full Bench not agreeing with interpretation of penal section, by Division Bench—Altered interpretation, if has retrospective effect—Interpretation of statutes.

Per Full Bench, Mehta, A. J. C., dissenting :—

Offences punishable under s. 114, Railways Act, are easy to commit but not easy to detect. When detection has been successfuly effected, an offender should not go scot-free, even if he has not been convicted before.

Per Mehta, A. J. C.—When a particular penal section of a statute like the Railways Act has been interpreted in a particular way in favour of a subject by a Division Bench of a High Court, the subject has a right to say that he has not committed any offence, and that he had no guilty intention whatsoever in doing an act in the belief that the interpretation was correct. If subsequently that interpretation is found fault with by a Full Bench, so that the very act which at one time was not looked upon as an offence is to be regarded as an offence, the altered interpretation should not have a restrospective effect as if the subject should have anticipated the second decision of the High Court. Even if a technical conviction is recorded, the accused should have the benefit of s. 562 (1) (A), Criminal Procedure Code. EMPEROR v. KODUMAL OCHIRAM Sind 697 F B.

——s. 562—Release on probation of good conduct—Sentence of imprisonment, if can be imposed.

The language of s. 562, Criminal Procedure Code makes it clear that a sentence of imprisonment imposed on a person while he is released on probation of good conduct, is wholly illegal and must, therefore, be quashed. BARKAT v. EMPEROR Lah. 283

Criminal trial SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 439 450

——Accused telling lie—Conviction, if can be based on it—Whether can be used to corroborate approver.

The fact that an accused person tells a lie is not sufficient to convict him by itself, nor can it be corroboration of the approvers' statement. BACHCHA BABU v. EMPEROR All 369 ——Benefit of doubt—Legally insufficient evidence —Moral certainty, if justifies conviction.

There are no better established principles in the administration of Criminal Law in British and British Indian Courts than (1) that a man can be convicted only on legal evidence, and (2) that if there is a reasonable doubt of his guilt on the evidence, he should have the benefit of it. If the evidence is legally insufficient, the gravest suspicion, amounting even to moral certainty, is not enough to sustain a conviction. An accused person is, therefore, entitled to the benefit of these principles. SARDAR AHMAD v. EMPEROR Lah. 478 ——Capital case—Evidence—Nature of.

In a capital case it is important that the more important of the witnesses should be examined in such a way as would enable the Court to properly appreciate their evidence. The evidence should be led in sufficient detail and with due regard to the sequence of events, the facts which the witnesses saw or the acts which they did and also the reasons which actuated them to do the acts being narrated in an intelligent fashion. It is only by this means that a clear and consistent account of the whole thing may be presented before the Judge and the jury. RAFQUEUDDIN AHMAD v. EMPEROR Cal. 687 F. B.

——Case and counter-case—Court if should wait for results of steps in counter-case.

Where there is a case and counter-case, the Court is not in any way bound to adjourn the hearing of the case indefinitely, waiting for the results of the steps taken in the counter-case. When the accused has not in any way been prejudiced by the Magistrate's refusal to grant adjournment, he cannot complain that he was not given proper facilities to have his case argued before him. RAM SINGH v. EMPEROR Pat. 421 (b) S. B.

——Charge solely under ss. 457 and 380, Penal Code—No alternative charge under s. 411, Penal Code—No mention of s. 411 even in charge to jury —If an omission prejudicing accused.

No direct evidence existed to show that the accused committed the house-breaking and theft. Yet the charge against them was framed solely under ss. 457 and 380, Penal Code, with no alternative charge under s. 411, Penal Code. In his charge to the jury the Judge did not mention s. 411, Penal Code, nor inform the jury that it was open to them either to find on the facts that the accused committed the house-breaking and theft or that they were guilty under s. 411, Penal Code, or tell them that they might convict them in the alternative. He left them no choice between a conviction under ss. 457 and 380, Penal Code, and an acquittal :

Held, that the offence under s. 411 being punishable with a lesser sentence than offences under the two former sections, this was an omission which prejudiced the accused. MAVUTHALAYAN v. EMPEROR Mad. 74 ——Confession — Magistrate recording confession, otherwise valid, in his house—Legality of.

Where a confession is otherwise valid, the mere fact of its having been recorded at the Magistrate's house does not vitiate it. GHULAM MUHAMMAD v. EMPEROR Lah. 265 ——Confession of crime by accused—Conviction, if can be based on it even if it is retracted.

When a grown-up man in the full possession of his senses chooses to confess his crime, then he can be legally convicted on his own confession even if it be subsequently retracted. MATHURA v. EMPEROR Oudh 527

——Confession—Retracted confession of accused

Criminal trial—contd.

—Whether can be used in evidence against his co-accused.

The retracted confession of an accused has really little or no evidential value against a co-accused but it can be taken into consideration along with the other evidence against that accused, especially when the Court considers that the confession was both voluntary and true. MATHURA v. EMPEROR Oudh 527 ———Dying declaration, when sufficient to support conviction.

A dying declaration alone is sufficient to found a conviction if, after applying the accepted tests, it is held to be true and genuine. It is not necessary that it should be corroborated otherwise. MASTI KHAN v. EMPEROR Pesh. 276

——— Evidence—Crown not calling prosecution witness examined by it in Committing Magistrate's Court, in Sessions—Sessions Judge thinking him to be material witness—Court's duty—Whether it can compel Crown to examine him as Crown witness or to tender him for cross-examination.

Where the Crown has not examined a witness in the Sessions Court but had examined him in the Committing Magistrate's Court and the Sessions Judge thinks that he is a material witness, it is open to him either to draw an adverse inference against the Crown in not calling the witness or to examine him as a Court-witness. But he cannot compel the Crown either to examine him as a Crown witness or to tender him for cross-examination. EMPEROR v. DULO Sind 1114

———First trial breaking on account of illegality in conducting it—Re-trial, if can be ordered.

When the first trial breaks down on account of any illegality in conducting it, the normal course is a re-trial. DIWAN SINGH v. EMPEROR Nag. 450

——— Government Pleader not producing certain eye-witness—Appellate Court if can summon him.

It is true that it is the duty of the prosecution to produce before the Court all eye-witnesses of the occurrence, but if the Government Pleader takes upon himself the responsibility of not producing a certain eye-witness, then it is not the duty of the Appellate Court to fill up the gap in the prosecution evidence by summoning that witness HORI LAL v. EMPEROR Oudh 753

———Identification — Presence of Police constable —Objectionable nature of procedure — Investigation —Conduct of Police—Administration of criminal justice.

The presence of Police constables in the room where the identification is held is most objectionable.

The administration of criminal justice requires that every act done by the agency responsible for the investigation of crime must be fair, upright and free from taint of any sort. The Police should inspire full confidence in the public and conduct itself in such a regular manner as not to afford any genuine cause of complaint to those with whom it deals. It is then and then alone that justice can be properly dispensed. KARTAR SINGH v. EMPEROR Lah. 263 ———Motive—Crime brought home to accused—Motive should be proved.

If upon the evidence of the prosecution witnesses the crime of the accused has been brought home to him, then the question of the motive with which the crime was committed becomes a matter of secondary importance. The prosecution is seldom able to pry deep into the secrets of unhallowed lives, or to explain the workings of evil minds or the secret desires and passions of a wicked heart. MATHURA v. EMPEROR Oudh 527 ———Motive—One accused not getting his share in loot—Whether motive for making confession against himself.

It is not very natural that an accused person should merely from the annoyance at not getting his proper share of the loot take an action which he must know will put himself in jail. RAM CHARAN v. EMPEROR All. 119

———Review—Case decided by Court of competent jurisdiction—Same Court, whether by same Judge or another, cannot review it.

A Court of competent jurisdiction may decide a case rightly or wrongly; and it is not open to the same Judges much less to other Judges of co-ordinate jurisdiction to review that decision. SHAHU v. EMPEROR Sind 736 F. B.

———Sentence — Murder of wife due to her flagrant immorality — Extenuating circumstance, if exists.

Where the accused had undergone protracted sufferings though the obstinacy, viciousness and flagrant immorality of the deceased, his wife, whom he pushed into the river, there is a mitigating circumstance entitling the accused to a lenient sentence. GHULAM MUHAMMAD v EMPEROR Lah. 265 ———Sentence — Substantial but light sentence —Interference—Propriety—Practice (Lahore High Court).

Where the sentence though light is substantial, it is not the practice of the Lahore High Court to interfere with it. EMPEROR v. TAYAB Lah. 241

Crown—Prerogative—Servant, dismissal of, at will —Railway—Damages.

The right of the Crown to dismiss its servant at will and pleasure exists even though there is included in the contract of service an express term to the contrary, unless the Crown has deprived itself of the prerogative by statute. JAMUN v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA Lah. 395 (a)

Custom SEE Wajib-ul-arz 569

———Burden of proof—Custom not proved—Right of zemindar to tree. SEE Abadi 1031

Custom—Village expenses should be allowed on basis of gross rental.

Village expenses should be allowed on the basis of gross rental. MITTHU LAL v. CHAMELI All. 800

Custom (Punjab)—Abadi— Non-proprietor—Right of occupation.

In the case of non-proprietors who have built on sites presumably with the consent of the proprietors, the non-proprietors and their heirs are entitled to occupy the houses as long as they choose to do so, and the proprietors of the sites can re-claim the sites of the houses only if the non-proprietors abandon the houses or sell the sites without his consent. GANGA BISHAN KUNJ BIHARI LAL v. M FAZAL KARIM Lah. 342

———Adoption—Onus —Latest riwaj-i-am against adoption—Burden of proof.

Where the entries in the latest riwaj-i-am are against adoption, the onus lies heavily on the adopted son to prove that the custom of adoption existed amongst the Sainis of village Sharif Chak in Tahsil Pathankot in 1928 when he is alleged to have been adopted. LAJPAT RAI v. KARAM CHAND Lah. 1020 ———Alienation — Gohana Tahsil of Rohtak District—Male proprietors, powers of.

A male proprietor in the Gohana Tahsil can alienate immovable property freely except for immoral purposes. ABDUL RAFI KHAN v. LAKSHMI CHAND Lah. 875

——— Alienation—Necessity — Application of money—Act of good management.

A vendee is not expected to see to the application of the money by the vendor to the purposes mentioned in the sale-deed.

Where a proprietor sells his land in the village on seeing that his staying there is not safe and with a view to purchase land elsewhere, and he settles there, the sale is an act of good management and cannot be disturbed under any rule of law. ABDUL RAFI KHAN v. LAKSHMI CHAND Lah. 875

——— ———Necessity—Distinction in Punjab Customary Law and Hindu Law.

Both under Hindu Law and the custom of agricultural tribes, alienation of ancestral immovable property is subject to restrictions, but the nature of the restrictions is somewhat different in the two cases. SOHAN LAL v. ISHAR SINGH Lah. 255

——— ——— Necessity—Recital in deed, how far evidence of necessity—No finding that alienor has been extravagant—Vendor need not prove that previous debts paid out of sale consideration were contracted for necessary purposes.

The recital in a deed is clear evidence of the representation it makes and if the circumstances are such as to justify a reasonable belief that an inquiry would have confirmed its truth, then when proof of actual inquiry as regards the necessity for alienation has become impossible, the recital coupled with such circumstances would be sufficient evidence to support the deed.

In the absence of a finding that an alienor has been recklessly extravagant or has been wantonly wasting his property, the vendee is not required to prove that previous debts whether owing to himself or to third persons which have been paid out of the sale consideration were contracted for necessary purposes. He has only to prove the existence of such debts and once that is established and it is not proved that they have been incurred for immoral or illegal purposes, their payment becomes a valid necessity sufficient to support the sale. AKKU v. ALI AKBAR Lah. 179

——— Applicability—Applicability of custom—Family following agriculture for two or three generations—If necessary to substitute custom for personal law—Proof, necessity of.

To hold that a person is governed by agricultural custom solely on the ground that his family has followed agriculture or lived amongst an agricultural tribe for 2 or 3 generations would be to substitute conjecture for proof. There is at best a possibility of such a family adopting the rules of custom, but whether it has actually done so or not is a question of fact which must be decided on evidence and not on conjecture. According to the Punjab Laws Act the initial presumption is that Hindus and Muhammadans are governed by their personal laws and if a custom modifying such laws is alleged, it must be proved. SOHAN LAL v. ISHAR SINGH Lah. 255 ——— Burden of proof — Clear statement of custom—Burden of proof on him who disputes.

The burden is on him, who disputes the clear statement of special custom in Customary Law (Punjab), to prove the contrary. AISHAN BIBI v. ALLAH DITTA Lah. 861

——— Custom in same tribe, if varies according to localities — Adoption amongst Sainis of village Sharif Chak, Pathankot Tahsil in 1928.

It is well established that different customs may prevail in the same tribe in different localities, and that custom cannot be extended by means of analogy.

Held, that it has not been established that the custom of adoption existed amongst the Sainis of village Sharif Chak in the Pathankot Tahsil in 1928 and even if a custom of adoption amongst the Sainis of Pathankot Tahsil be held to have existed, only a person who was below seven years of age or in any case had not yet attained the age of puberty could be validly adopted. LAJPAT RAI v. KARAM CHAND Lah. 1020 ——— Decision in custom case, if a judgment in rem—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 13.

A decision in a custom case is not a judgment in rem. It is only relevant under s. 13, Evidence Act, as a judicial instance of the custom being recognized. It may be that, owing to faulty prosecution, one decision may be arrived at between certain parties while there may be another decision in a suit arising between other persons. JANAT BIBI v. GHULAM HUSSAIN Lah. 212

——— Gift. SEE Hindu Law 1068

——— Arains of District Jullundur—Daughter of sonless proprietor getting property from father by written deed of gift—Whether can gift it to her sister—Gift in lieu of services—Rule of reversion, if applies.

Among the Arains of the Jullundur District, a daughter of a sonless proprietor can gift ancestral property received by her from her father by a written deed of gift to her sister.

The rule of reversion does not come into operation when the gift is in lieu of services. AZIZ MUHAMMAD v. HAJRAN Lah. 167 ——— Practice—Original version of Customary Law in vernacular and English version of the same—Which to be preferred.

If there is any difference in the original vernacular and the English version of the Customary Law, the English version should be preferred on the ground that it is the final draft. AISHAN BIBI v. ALLAH DITTA Lah. 861

——— Reversionary right—Sale of—Whether ipso facto becomes sale of land.

The sale of a reversionary right ipso facto does not become a sale of the land which falls to the reversioner when succession opens out. MIHAN SINGH v. SHIV DITT SINGH Lah. 850

——— Riwaj-i-am of two years—Which prevails.

Where the adoption takes place in 1928, the entries in the riwaj-i-ams of 1913 must govern the case and not those of the riwaj-i-am of 1865. LAJPAT RAI v KARAM CHAND Lah. 1020 ——— ——— of 1868—Gift by Sandhu Jat widow—Self-acquired immovable property of husband—Gift, if valid.

According to riwaj-i-am of 1868, Lahore, even self-acquired immovable property of husband cannot be gifted by the widow. AISHAN BIBI v, ALLAH DITTA Lah. 861

——— Shamilat land— Succession — Whether same rule prevails as for khewat land.

Ordinarily shamilat land is governed by the same rule of inheritance as the khewat land. KARAM CHAND v LOKOO RAM Lah. 514 (b) ——— Succession — Arains of Chunian Tahsil, Lahore District—Sister of last male-holder whether a preferential heir to collaterals of third degree.

Among Arains of Chunian Tahsil, Lahore District, the sister of the last male-holder is a preferential heir to collaterals of the third degree. WARAS v. FATIMA Lah. 841

——— ——— Aroras of Khanewal, District Multan

Custom (Punjab)—concld.

—Whether governed by Hindu Law—Alienation by widow—Cognates, whether can challenge—Hindu Law—Alienation—Widow.

Held, that an Arora of Khanewal in the District of Multan is not governed in the matter of succession by Hindu Law but by Customary Law and the cognates of the propositus have no locus standi to challenge the alienation made by the widow. BAHADUR CHAND v. RAMON BAI Lah 860 ——— Succession—Gaur Brahmins of Kharkhauda, District Rohtak—Non-ancestral property—Daughter is preferential heir to collaterals of eighth degree.

Among Gaur Brahmins of Kharkhauda, District Rohtak, a daughter is a preferential heir to the non-ancestral property of her father as against collaterals of the eighth degree. NOT RAM v. KISHAN DEVI Lah. 1080 ———Gujranwala District—Non-ancestral property of father—Daughters and collaterals of 7th degree—Preferential heir.

A daughter is entitled to succeed to the non-ancestral property of her father in preference to collaterals of the 7th degree and collaterals of the 7th degree cannot possibly be regarded as "near male kindred." KARAM SINGH v. RAM KAUR Lah. 552

——— Muhammadan Gujars of village Bodhaya in Dasuya Tahsil of Hoshiarpur district—Sisters, if preferred to collaterals.

It is well-established that sisters are generally not recognised as heirs and the onus is on them to prove their claim as against collaterals howsoever distant even if the property is non-ancestral. BEGAN v. ALI GOHAR Lah. 340

———Non-ancestral property—Reversioners—Sandhu Jats—District Lahore—Gift to daughters, by widow—Reversioners, collaterals of fourth degree, if exclude daughters.

Among Sandhu Jats of Lahore District, daughters are excluded in respect of non-ancestral property by reversioners as the fourth degree collaterals. AISHAN BIBI v. ALLAH DITTA Lah. 861

———Self-acquired property—Riwaj-i-am entry against married daughters—Onus of proof—Shifting of onus—Presumption held rebutted on evidence on behalf of daughter -Janjuha Rajputs of Jhelum.

Even in the case of a riwaj-i-am unsupported by instances, the presumption lies in favour of its correctness and a duty is cast upon those who challenge it to rebut this presumption. Consequently, the onus is on the daughters to prove that even after their marriage they excluded the collaterals if the property was the self-acquired property of their father. But the presumption in such cases is so weak that on a mere proof of a small number of instances to the contrary it stands rebutted and the onus is then shifted on to the collaterals to prove that they exclude married daughters from the self-acquired property of their father:

Held, in a case of Janjuha Rajputs of Jhelum that the presumption was rebutted by evidence adduced on behalf of the daughters. FEROZE KHAN v. UMAR HAYAT Lah. 872

———Village growing into town—Effect on proprietor.

It cannot be said that when a village grows into a town, the proprietor of the village sites on which houses have been built automatically loses his rights therein. GANGA BISHAN KUNJ BIHARI LAL v. M. FAZAL KARIM Lah. 342

Custom (Punjab)—concld.

——— Wajib-ul-arz of 1855—Ancestral property.

Land under the wajib-ul-arz of 1885 refers only to ancestral land. AISHAN BIBI v. ALLAH DITTA Lah. 861

———Water rights—Batala—ARS—Held, that the custom whereby defendants could use ars of old well for carrying water of new well to fields, existed.

Held, that the defendants had established the existence of a local custom in Batala whereby they could use the ars (water channels) of the old well for carrying the water of the new well to their fields on specified days. MUHAMMAD HUSSAIN v. DIN MUHAMMAD Lah. 842 (a)

Customary Right—Right of privacy—Suit to remove construction affecting right of privacy—Customary right of privacy must be proved to have existed.

In a suit for removal of constructions affecting the plaintiff's right of privacy, it is necessary for the plaintiff to allege that a customary right of privacy existed in the particular neighbourhood in which the plaintiff was living or that he individually or as a member of a particular class was entitled to take advantage of the customary right of privacy. PADUMAN DAS v. PARBATI All. 365

———Villagers having certain legal rights—Court's duty to defend and enforce them.

Where it has been found that the villagers have certain legal rights in the land in suit, and that they have never surrendered those rights, it is the duty of the Courts to defend and enforce those rights. APTABUDDIN KHAN v. JOHAR ALI KAZI Cal. 75

Damages. SEE Crown 395 (a)

Dangerous Drugs Act (II of 1930), ss. 2 (b) (I), (III), 14—'Cocaine,' if implies substance prepared according to formula given in s. 2 (b) (iii)—Cocoa derivatives, if includes 'crude cocaine'.

Section 2 (b) (iii), Dangerous Drugs Act, makes mention of cocaine; and to distinguish it from "crude cocaine" the usual chemical formula has been stated. The word cocaine implies the substance prepared according to that formula, which is well known to chemists. The expression 'cocoa derivatives' also includes crude cocaine. SADLU v. EMPEROR All. 406

———s. 14. SEE Dangerous Drugs Act, 1930, s. 22 267

———ss. 22, 23, 14—Constables not authorised to take steps which they had taken—Trial, if vitiated by this irregularity.

Where the constables are not authorized to take the steps which they have taken, under ss. 22, 23, Dangerous Drugs Act, the irregularity does not vitiate the trial. HABIBULLAH v. EMPEROR Pesh. 267

Debts—Priority. SEE Succession 847

Decree—Assignment of—Validity of assignment at issue—Judgment-debtor having no interest in it—Judgment-debtor, whether bound by it—Execution—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47, O. XXI, r. 16.

Where the issue on the validity of the assignment of a decree decided by the executing Court was an issue solely between the decree-holder and his assignee:

Held, that the decree-holder was bound by the decision and he could not appeal against it. ACHHRU RAM v. FAZAL MOHAMMAD Lah. 974

———Construction—Novation. SEE Contract Act, 1872, s. 62 534

———Decree on compromise is consent decree.

Where there is a compromise, a decree passed thereon, whether the compromise is admitted by both parties or disputed by one of them, is still a consent decree. MOHAMMAD MIA PANDIT v. OSMAN ALI Cal. 915

Decree—contd.

———Decree should not differ from prayer in plaint—Pleadings.

It is wrong for a Judge to pass a decree which is entirely different from the prayer in the plaint. MEYAPPA CHETTYAR v. VENKATACHELLAM CHETTYAR Rang. 997

———Ex parte decree—Appeal from—Adjudication regarding rights and liabilities of the person against whom ex parte decree is passed—Jurisdiction of trial Court to set aside ex parte decree.

Where the Appellate Court has adjudicated regarding the rights and liabilities of the person against whom an ex parte decree has been passed, the ex parte decree against such person cannot be set aside by the trial Court, but where there has been no adjudication regarding the rights and liabilities of such person in the Appellate Court, the trial Court is entitled to entertain an application for the setting aside of the ex parte decree against him. The fact that a person has been impleaded as a pro forma respondent in the appeal does not in any way affect the jurisdiction of the trial Court so far as the setting aside of the ex parte decree against such person is concerned. SOHAN SINGH v. MOOL SINGH Lah. 845

———Execution—Res judicata—Two conflicting decrees—Principles—Cause of action and issues different in suit by A against B at C and suit by B against A at S—Decrees, if conflicting—Executability of decrees.

On the principles underlying the plea of res judicata which aims at avoiding multiplicity of litigation and at securing finality, if two conflicting decrees have been obtained by parties from two different Courts or even from the same Court then the last one should be the effective decree between the parties and the first decree should be regarded as dead. The basis of this salutary rule is that if a party who could raise the plea of res judicata does not raise the same when an opportunity is given to him he must be deemed to have waived it. The plea of res judicata is not one which affects the jurisdiction of a Court. It is a plea in bar and such a plea can be waived.

Where the cause of action of and the issues in, a suit by A against B in a Court at C are different from those in a subsequent suit by B against A in a Court at S, it is not possible for A to plead before the Court at S that the decree of the Court at C was res judicata. In such circumstances there are no two conflicting decisions and it is not possible for B to argue that the decree of the Court at C is incapable of execution. SANSARCHAND LACHHMAN DAS v. DINA NATH DUBE All. 571

———Joint decree in favour of several mortgagees—One of them, if can give valid discharge against others.

In the case of a joint decree passed in favour of several mortgagees one of them cannot give a valid discharge against the other mortgagees. SEWA RAM v. PARBHU DAYAL Oudh 231

———Two conflicting decrees—Which prevails.

In case of conflicting decrees the later one must prevail. The reason for this is that the previous decree cannot be looked into and must be held to have been discharged by the later decree.

The judgment-debtors objected to the execution on the ground that in a previous case the District Judge had held that the assignment in favour of the opposite party was null and void. The lower Court, however, followed the earlier decision of his predecessor, which held that the assignment was good, on the ground that he was bound by the previous order of his own Court. The order of his predecessor was passed on October 5, 1925, whilst the order of the District Judge, on appeal was passed on July 16, 1926, when the matter was in issue in another case:

Held, that the later order i. e., of the Districet Judge must prevail. GHULAM ALI v RAHIMUDDIN KAJIMUDDIN Nag. 726 (b)

Deed—Construction. SEE Charitable and Religious Trusts Act, 1920 409

———Construction—Ambiguity.

A document must be taken as a whole and if there is inconsistency between two parts of it, the case is one of ambiguity. BANAPHAL SINGH v. NOOR MOHAMMAD All. 634

———Construction—Deed to be read as a whole—Effect to be given to all provisions.

It is one of the recognized canons of the interpretation of a document that the document must be read and construed as a whole and due and legitimate effect be given to each and every one of its provisions. BAQA UTLAH KHAN v GHULAM SIDDIQUE KHAN All. 416 (b) ———Construction—Intention—Charge—Mortgage—Clog on equity of redemption—Agreement between parties creating subsequent charges—Necessity of.

Whether a certain document did or did not create a charge on certain mortgaged property for the amount of the debt, depends on the intention of the parties which must be gathered from a reading of the document itself. Where a bond provides that the mortgage deed in respect of the land executed by Sant Singh in favour of the said creditors is a separate bond, that this bond has been executed separately and the amount of the bond will be paid before mortgage deed, the bond does not create a charge.

The weight of authority is against recognizing any clog on the equity of redemption in the absence of a clear agreement between the parties creating a subsequent charge on the mortgaged property. HAKIM SINGH v. GAJJA SINGH Lah. 288 ———Construction—Lease—Taluqdar acknowledging perpetual occupancy rights—Use of expression 'naslan bad naslan'—Provision for payment of malikana dues to lessor and his heirs—Under-proprietary rights, if conferred on tenants.

At the time of the first regular settlement, the plaintiff's ancestors were found to have no under-proprietary rights and they were granted, by the Settlement Commissioner in a suit claiming such rights, merely a decree for tenancy rights for life. At the second regular settlement, the taluqdar granted a fresh lease in which it was mentioned that he acknowledged their "occupancy right, which was for life, to be perpetual." The plaintiff's ancestors were to pay Government Revenue and sewai and malikana dues to the taluqdar and his heirs. He ended by saying that he executes a "perpetual lease" in favour of the persons mentioned and stated that "it behoves the lessees to remain in possession and occupation generation after generation 'naslan bad naslan' according to the conditions of this lease and pay rent to the estate and always remain obedient and loyal to the estate:"

Held, that there were no words which would indicate any clear intention for conferring a proprietary interest or a transferable interest, that the expression 'naslan bad naslan' was not conclusive on the point and that the mere fact that the lease was granted to the lessees and their heirs did not go further than showing that heritable rights were conferred;

Deed—concld.

Held, also that though the word "malikana" is not generally applied to the rent paid by an occupancy tenant but the mere use of this word is not sufficient to show that there was any intention of conferring under-proprietary rights, and that the taluqdar merely wished to grant to the lessees heritable occupancy rights in place of the occupancy rights for life which had previously been conferred upon them by the settlement decree and that there was no indication of any intention of going beyond this and converting their occupancy rights into the rights of under-proprietors. HIRA LAL v. GAJRAJ KUER Oudh 909

——Construction—Letters O. K on delivery orders—Effect. SEE Evidence Act, 1872, s. 115. P.C. 1

——Construction—Mortgage—Held on interpretation, that Receiver appointed during pendency of mortgage suit held rents collected, as part of mortgage security—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 8.

A mortgage deed provided that the property mentioned therein was mortgaged with "all appurtenances to the said premises belonging and all the estate, right, title, interest, property, claim and demand whatsoever of the mortgagors into and upon the said premises to hold the said premises unto the mortgagees subject to the proviso for redemption hereinafter contained:"

Held, that the mortgage was in the form of an English mortgage and that the mortgagee was entitled as a secured creditor of the mortgagor to the rents and profits of the land of which the Receiver was in possession.

Held, also that even if no reference had been made specifically to the transfer of "all the estate, right, title, interest, property, claim and demand whatsoever of the mortgagors into and upon the said premises" by reason of the provisions of s. 8, Transfer of Property Act, in the like manner the rents and profits arising out of the mortgaged land in the hands of the Receiver would form part of the mortgage which was created to secure re-payment of the loan. MA JOO TEAN v. COLLECTOR OF RANGOON Rang. 776

Defamation. SEE Penal Code, 1860, s. 500 638

Divorce—Desertion—Husband bringing concubine into family house—Wife leaving house—Husband, whether guilty of desertion.

In order to constitute desertion, there must be a cessation of cohabitation but there is no substantial difference between the case of a husband who intends to put an end to a state of cohabitation and does so by leaving his wife and that of a husband who with a like intent obliges his wife to separate from him.

Where the husband brought a concubine into the house where his wife was living with him and the wife had accordingly to leave the house:

Held, that the conduct of the husband amounted to desertion. RAI BARI STREE v. RASSINGA NAIK BISSINGH STREE Mad 553 S.B.

Easement—Customary right of privacy—Infringement of—What plaintiff must show—Premises already overlooked—Opening of further apertures overlooking premises—Whether can be said to be not actionable

To succeed in an action to restrain any interference with a right of privacy, a plaintiff must shew not only that such a right of privacy exists by custom in the district in which the premises are situated but also that he has in fact enjoyed such a right and that it has been substantially or materially affected by the acts of the defendant.

Easement—concld.

It cannot be laid down as a rule that where premises are already overlooked, the opening of further apertures overlooking such premises cannot be actionable. Each case depends on its own peculiar facts. TIKA RAM JOSHI v. RAM LAL SAH All. 1056

——Prescription—Immemorial user—Court, whether can infer grant—Grant.

It is open to the Court to infer a grant from immemorial user alone, when such user is open, as of right, and without interruption SHEIKH FAKIR v. MOSLEM MANDAL Cal. 719

——Prescription—Right of way—Mere discontinuance of user is not an interruption or abeyance of enjoyment even though such cessation occurs while right is being acquired.

In order that a prescriptive right may be successfully claimed, the pathway must be enjoyed peaceably and openly as an easement without interruption for more than 20 years. The term interruption refers to an adverse obstruction and not a mere discontinuance of user. A person may be said to be in enjoyment of a right of way during a period of time, though he does not use the way every moment. Cessation of user is not an invariable indication of the abeyance of enjoyment of a right, that is, it is not inconsistent with the continuance of the enjoyment of the right.

Cessation of user for a time while the right is being acquired does not stand on a different basis from cessation when the right has already been acquired by 20 years' enjoyment. JOGESH CHANDRA ROY v. SAGHOHHANDA Cal 833

——Profit a pendre—Presumption—Defendant neither tenant nor licensee—Defendant cutting trees - Proprietor's right to price of timber cut—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), ss. 2, 26.

There cannot be any presumption in the case of an easement that what was the state of facts twenty or thirty years ago has continued since. The law provides that an easement is established only when it is shown that there has been a continuous enjoyment.

The plaintiff was admittedly the proprietor of the land upon which certain bamboo clumps stood. The defendant admittedly was not the tenant nor was there any relationship between him and the plaintiff. The plaintiff came to the Court with a story that there was an agreement under which the defendant would pay the price of the timber cut, and, the defendant denied that he cut any trees during the years in question. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the defendant was in adverse possession for over twenty years:

Held, (1) that such an agreement, if any, naturally would take the nature of a license;

(2) that there could not be any custom strictly so called to appropriate the trees unless the defendant were a tenant. If there had been anything established in the nature of a custom to appropriate the timber, the defendant not being a tenant, it would not be a custom but would be in the nature of what is known in England as a profit a pendre;

(3) that there was an easement, and hence a right to trees was not established by the defendant and the fact that the plaintiff made some sort of admission by saying that he was entitled to take the leaves and branches but not the timber did not assist the defendant. JANGBAHADUR SINGH v. THITHAR SINGH Pat. 966

Easements Act (V of 1882)—Applicability in Bihar.

The Easements Act does not apply to Bihar province, but the law relating to easements which is the law of justice, equity and good conscience in this respect excepting in so far as there is any statute applicable. JANGBAHADUR SINGH v THITHAR SINGH Pat. 966

———s. 18—Right of privacy—Whether a question of fact.

Whether such a custom as a right of privacy exists and the nature and limits of such a custom, if it does exist, are questions of fact and the findings of the lower Appellate Court, if based on admissible and relevant evidence are conclusive. TIKA RAM JOSHI v RAM LAL SAH All. 1056

Elections—Election manifesto slandering judiciary —Contempt of Court. SEE Contempt 33

Electricity Act (IX of 1910), ss. 39, 50—Theft of Electric energy—Prosecution not instituted by Government Electric Inspector but by Executive Officer of Cantonment Board — Quashing of prosecution.

Prosecution for the theft of electric energy can be instituted only by one of the persons mentioned in s. 50 of the Electricity Act. A prosecution not instituted at the instance of the Government or an Electric Inspector, but by the Executive Officer of the Cantonment Board who had no authority from the Board to institute proceedings, should be quashed. DINA NATH v. EMPEROR Lah. 421 (a) Equity—Applicability to question of legal rights.

Where it is a question of legal rights, there is no scope for the application of equitable principles. APTABUDDIN KHAN v. JOHAR ALI KAZI Cal. 75

———When to be invoked—Considerations.

If equity is to be invoked it should be only in favour of persons shown to have acted disinterestedly and in good faith with no intention of securing any unfair advantage for themselves. BABAN MISRA v. BISHWANATH PANDE Pat. 870

Estoppel.

SEE Bombay Hereditary Offices Act, 1874, s. 15 763

SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 11 723

SEE Evidence Act, 1872, s. 116 249 (b)

———Estoppel by representation — What constitutes—Held, no estoppel arose—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115.

For an estoppel by representation to come into operation, there must be a deception which has led the person claiming the estoppel to entertain a false belief about a question of fact and which has also led him on the faith of that belief to change his legal position. Where the parties in the suit were also parties to the deed of sale and it has been held as a fact that the deed of sale was evidence of a transaction by which the parties intended to transfer certain other property but not the property in suit as the respondent was a party to that transaction, it cannot be said that he had been deceived about its true nature by the subsequent conduct of the other party. MUHAMMAD MUSA v. QASIM HUSAIN All. 1063

———Execution—Decree-holder getting symbolical possession—No objection—Subsequent application for execution for actual possession—Competency.

Where in execution of a decree, the decree-holder gets possession and there is no objection, a second application for execution of same decree on the ground that in the former application the decree-holder has obtained only symbolical possession, is not competent. RADHANATH DAS v. SADHAN CHANDRA DEY Cal. 725 ———Principle underlying the rule—Representation —Absence of representation by one person to make another believe in certain facts—Estoppel, if operates —Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115.

The principle upon which the rule of estoppel rests is that it would be most inequitable and unjust if a person by a representation made or by conduct amounting to a representation has induced another to act as he would not otherwise have done, the person who made the representation should be allowed to deny or repudiate the effect of his former statement to the loss and injury of the person who acted on it. Where there has been no representation on the part of the defendants to make the plaintiff believe that she was really the owner of a 14 annas share in the property in dispute, there can be no estoppel against them when they show clearly that the plaintiff is in law entitled only to an 8 annas share in the property left by her father and not to the 14 annas share in that property. RAJANA v. MUSAHEB ALI Oudh 23

Evidence—Admission—Previous statement by party when can be legal evidence.

A previous statement made by a party cannot be made legal evidence in the case and used against him as an admission by merely filing an attested copy of that statement, without putting it to the party concerned. SECRETARY OF STATE v. AKBAR SHAH Lah. 819

———Death Register—Statement in, if evidence of religion of parties.

It is safe to rely upon statements in death registers only with reference to the fact of death and the date of death. As for the description therein of the religion of the deceased, it is doubtful if that statement is admissible, as the statement is not made by him and the statement made by some unknown person as to his religion can carry very little weight. GURUSAMI NADAR v. IRULAPPA KONAR Mad. 708 ———Expert evidence — Finger-print expert—Evidence of—Value.

The evidence of handwriting experts has often been found to be faulty but so far as finger-prints are concerned, it has never so far been found that two finger-prints can be identical in all respects. Consequently the evidence of finger-print experts is entitled to much weight. GANGA SAHAI BHAGMAL v. MOLAR Lah. 799

Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 8, 27—Joint acts of several persons sought to be proved in order to ask Court to draw inference from such conduct —Nature of evidence necessary.

Where joint acts of several persons are sought to be proved in order to ask the Court to draw an inference from such conduct, evidence should be led with some degree of particularity so that it may be possible for the Court to draw the necessary inference from the conduct of each one of the persons concerned in the act. The principle applies not only to evidence relevant under s. 27 but also to that under s. 8, Evidence Act. RAFIQUEUDDIN AHMAD v. EMPEROR Cal. 687 F.B.

———s. 10. SEE Evidence Act, 1872, s. 32 (3) 261

———s. 13. SEE Custom (Punjab) 212

———s. 13—Judgment not inter partes but evidencing possession—Relevancy.

Where a judgment is not inter partes it may be used under s. 13, Evidence Act, as instances when the possession of a party is challenged and found to be correct. SHER BAHADUR SINGH v. MADHO PRASAD SINGH Oudh 1087

——s. 25—Confession to village mukhia—Admissibility.

A village mukhia is not a Police Officer for the purpose of s. 25 of the Evidence Act. RAM CHARAN v. EMPEROR All. 119

——s. 27—Statement of accused in the nature of a confession — Admissibility of—Conduct of accused, if can be taken into account against him.

Although the statement made by the accused to the Police is not barred under the provisions of s. 162, Criminal Procedure Code, it would not be admissible under s. 27 of the Evidence Act if it is held to be of the nature of a confession if no material fact was discovered in consequence of the information received. But the conduct of the accused can certainly be taken into account. MUHAMMAD v. EMPEROR Lah. 260

——s. 30. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s, 162 258

——ss. 30, 114, Illus (b)—Approver—Recovery of ordinary clothes with no special marks of identification—Whether sufficient corroboration—Ornament which can be identified recovered—Corroboration, if sufficient.

The recovery of ordinary clothes which do not have any special marks capable of definite identification does not afford sufficient corroboration to the testimony of the approver and the accused should not be convicted on such meagre corroboration. But the recovery of an ornament which can be identified is sufficient corroboration. KARTARA v. EMPEROR Lah. 305 ——ss. 32 (3), 10—Charge under ss. 420 and 120-B, Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860)—Accused inducing Insurance Company to accept proposal by securing false medical report—Statement of doctor—Admissibility of, under ss. 32 (3) and 10.

The accused was charged under ss. 420 and 120-B, Penal Code, for committing fraud on a Insurance Company by inducing the said Company to accept the proposal for insurance on the life of one M securing a false medical report about the said M and by suppressing and misrepresenting facts about him and his family history, to the said Company.

Held, that conceding that the confession of the doctor that the report was made out according to the instructions of the accused was not admissible in evidence under s. 32 (3), Evidence Act, there could be no doubt that the statement was admissible under s. 10 of the Act, seeing that other evidence in the case disclosed reasonable grounds for believing that there was a conspiracy, and that the doctor was a conspirator. KUNJALAL GHOSE v. EMPEROR Cal. 261

——ss. 32, 11, 13—Statement of boundaries in documents of title between third parties—Admissibility in evidence.

A statement of boundaries in a document of title between third persons who are dead at the time the statement is sought to be put in evidence is admissible in evidence under s. 32 (3) of the Evidence Act only when it is shown first, that at the time the statement was made, it was contrary to the interests of the maker, and, secondly, that at the time it is sought to be used it is a statement of a relevant fact. SONEY LALL JHA v. DARBDEO NARAIN SINGH Pat. 470 F. B.

——s. 34—Day-book entered after four months—Rough notes not available—Ledger from such day-book — Whether a document kept in regular course of business.

A day book, which has been entered after four months from the happening of an event and the rough notes of which are not available, is not a document which can be said to have been kept in the regular course of business. These remarks apply a fortiori to the ledger which is prepared from such a day book. ARJAN SINGH BHAJAN. SINGH v. FIRM SURJAN SINGH ACHARAJ SINGH Pesh. 1006

——s. 35—Entry, meaning of—Opinion of public officer from allegations made before him in inquiry under s. 202, Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), or under O. XXVI, Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) —Admissibility of.

The words "an entry" in s. 35, Evidence Act, are not intended to apply to the opinions of public officers based on or inferences drawn from the allegations made before them in the course of inquiries conducted under s. 202, Criminal Procedure Code or under O. XXVI, Civil Procedure Code, but are confined only to such statements of facts in issue or relevant facts as are made by the public officers concerned, in the course of their official duty and are required to be entered in any book, register or record intended for the purpose. This section is apparently an exception. Such opinions cannot be considered sufficient to prove the truth of the assertions made therein without the test of cross-examination. GHANAYA v. MEHTAB Lah. 1040

——s. 41—Final order in earlier insolvency proceedings—Judgment in rem—Whether can be disturbed by subsequent applications.

Under s. 41, Evidence Act, a final judgment, order or decree of a competent Court in insolvency proceedings has the effect of a judgment in rem and cannot be disturbed by subsequent applications even if not between the same parties. BANSI RAM v. FIRM ANANDI RAM MOHAN Pat. 734

——s. 44—If has application to proceedings under Civil Procedure Code, s. 73.

Per Jack, J.—Section 44, Evidence Act, has no application to proceedings under s. 73, Civil Procedure Code. It is only decrees under ss. 40, 41 and 42, Evidence Act which are referred to in s. 44, Evidence Act and such decrees have no application in execution proceedings. BISWAMBAR BISWAS v. APARNA CHARAN MOHARY Cal. 480 F. B.

——s. 45—Expert evidence—Document typed on same machine as another document—Admissibility of evidence.

The opinion of an expert that one document has been type-written on the same machine as another document is not admissible under s. 45, Evidence Act. The Court may ask the witness points in favour of the view whether the two documents have or have not been type-written on the same machine, but must come to its own conclusion and not treat such assistance as an expert opinion, a relevant fact in itself. BACHCHA BABU v. EMPEROR All. 369

——s. 58. SEE Evidence Act, 1872, s. 114, ill. (e) 450

——s. 90—Document written by licensed stamp-vendor 55 years ago—Benefit of s. 90.

Where a document itself is written 55 years ago by a licensed stamp-vendor and comes out from proper custody, the benefit of s. 90, Evidence Act, can be claimed. KARTAR SINGH v. MEHR NISHAN Lah. 1064

——s. 97—One part of deed indicating that whole grove is sold—Another part indicating that only part is sold—Evidence to prove what was meant to be conveyed—Admissibility.

Where the language of a deed, so far as the boundaries are concerned is indicative of the fact alleged by one party, namely that the whole of a grove was sold, and another part of the deed, referring to the number and area, is indicative of the fact alleged by the other party, that part only of the grove was sold, under s 97, Evidence Act, evidence is admissible to show whether it was meant that the deed should convey the whole of the grove or only part of it. BANAPHAL SINGH v. NOOR MOHAMMAD All. 634

Evidence Act—contd.

———s. 110—S. 110, if applicable to case where Government is party—Berar Land Revenue, Code 1896, s. 41 (1).

The provisions of s 110 of the Evidence Act are equally applicable in a case to which the Government is a party and s. 41 (1) of the Berar Land Revenue Code is not meant to lay down a rule regarding the burden of proof at variance with the provisions of s. 110 of the Evidence Act, it is open for the defendant to rely on the provisions of s. 41 (1) of the Berar Land Revenue Code in proving his title to the land in dispute by showing, in the first instance, that it formed part of a public road within the last 60 years and it will then be for the plaintiff to show either that his title was founded on a lost grant or that he had acquired a title by adverse possession for over 60 years. GOVIND RUPCHAND PATIL v. SECRETARY OF STATE Nag. 264

———s. 114, Illus. (b).

SEE Approver 369

SEE Evidence Act, 1872, s. 30 305

———s. 114, Illus. (b)—Corroboration of statement of accomplice—Nature of—Circumstantial evidence—Sufficiency of.

It is a well established rule of practice to require corroboration of the statement of an accomplice connecting the accused person with the crime; but corroboration is not required in all details. Even slight corroboration is sufficient for the purposes of this rule, if the Court is satisfied thereby about the genuineness of the accomplice's story, so far as it implicates the accused person. To insist on corroboration of the story in every detail, would practically mean requiring independent proof which will do away with the necessity of relying on the testimony of the accomplice at all The corroboration need not be direct evidence that the accused committed the crime; it is sufficient if it is merely circumstantial evidence of his connection with the crime. But evidence in corroboration must be independent. HARI RAM v. EMPEROR Lah. 197

———ss. 114, Ill. (e), 58—Documents filed in Court, whether can be presumed to be documents referred to in order of sanction by Governor-General in absence of prima facie indication that they are annexures to order of sanction—Identity must be proved.

The Court should not presume that the documents referred to in the order of sanction by the Governor-General were documents in question and that they were only forwarded by the Governor-General and reached the complainant through the usual channel, unless there be any indication on the face of the questioned documents to show that they were the annexures to the order of sanction. In the absence of any such indication it would be a violent presumption to raise that these were the documents mentioned in the order sanctioning prosecution. DIWAN SINGH v. EMPEROR Nag. 450

———ss. 114, 133—Statement of approver uncorroborated and unconvincing—Benefit of doubt to accused.

Where there is no material corroboration of the statement of the approver and the statement in itself is not convincing, it is most unsafe to convict the accused on that statement and he should be given the benefit of the doubt. GUJAR SINGH v. EMPEROR. Lah. 149

Evidence Act—contd.

——s. 115. SEE Estoppel 23, 1063

———s. 115—Estoppel—Conditions for operation of the rule—Estoppel and waiver—Distinction—Estoppel by waiver, if possible — Statement to ground estoppel must be clear and unambiguous—Letters "O. K" on delivery orders and bills—Construction—Whether operate as estoppel.

Estoppel is not a cause of action. It may (if established) assist a plaintiff in enforcing a cause of action by preventing a defendant from denying the existence of some fact essential to establish the cause of action, or (to put it in another way) by preventing a defendant from asserting the existence of some fact the existence of which would destroy the cause of action. It is a rule of evidence which comes into operation if (a) a statement of the existence of a fact has been made by the defendant or an authorised agent of his to the plaintiff or some one on his behalf, (b) with the intention that the plaintiff should act upon the faith of the statement, and (c) the plaintiff does act upon the faith of the statement. On the other hand, waiver is contractual, and may constitute a cause of action; it is an agreement to release or not to assert a right. If an agent, with authority to make such an agreement on behalf of his principal, agrees to waive his principal's rights, then (subject to any other question such as consideration) the principal will be bound, but he will be bound by contract, not by estoppel. There is no such thing as estoppel by waiver.

Held, that the letters O. K. on certain delivery orders and bills meant that the details contained in those documents were correctly given and that the statement being one which the maker was entitled to make, it bound his principal; but as it was not a representation that in fact the goods covered from the documents were free of all encumbrances, it could not ground an estoppel so as to prevent the principals from asserting and proving their rights as encumbrancers.

A statement to ground an estoppel must be clear and unambiguous. DAWSONS BANK, LIMITED v. NIPPON MENKWA KABUSHIKI KAISHA JAPAN COTTON TRADING COMPANY, LIMITED P. C. 1

———s 115—Estoppel — Infringement of right allowed on previous occasion—Whether bar to asserting it later on.

Plaintiff is not estopped from asserting his legal rights at any time on the ground that he himself permitted its infringement on some previous occasion. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, MULTAN v. ABDUL GHAFUR Lah. 951

———s. 115—Plaintiff deliberately accepting through his general agent liability to pay under-proprietary rent—Whether can seek for declaration that it is to be paid by others—U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 79—Under-proprietary rent fixed by Assistant Settlement Officer—Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), s. 107—Whether applies.

Where a person has, through his general agent, deliberately accepted before the Assistant Settlement Officer the liability to pay the under-proprietary rent of a holding, he cannot subsequently resile from that position and seek for a declaration to the effect that other persons are liable to pay the under-proprietary rent. And where the under-proprietary rent was fixed by the Assistant Settlement Officer under s. 79 of the Land Revenue Act, and the provisions of s. 107 of the Oudh Rent Act relating to remission of muafi or rent-free grants have no applicability whatsoever. MANZOOR HUSAIN v. DAWAR ALI Oudh 295

——s. 116—Landlord and tenant—Estoppel—

Evidence Act—concld.

Tenant, if should be put in actual possession for operation of estoppel—Tenant, when can deny landlord's title—Tenant in possession under kabuliyat—Suit for rent—Landlord's title, if can be denied on ground of benami.

For the purposes of s. 116 of the Evidence Act, it is not necessary that the tenant should have been actually put into possession by the landlord. It is sufficient if, being already in possession, he passes a rent-note to the landlord acknowledging that a new tenancy has arisen.

A tenant who has been let into possession cannot deny his landlord's title, however defective it may be, so long as he has not openly restored possession by surrender to his landlord. A tenant who wishes to dispute his landlord's title must not only see that the tenancy has come to an end, but that the possession which was in him as a tenant has been surrendered. A tenant who holds over and remains in possession cannot be allowed to use that possession as a lever to support a case in which he denies the landlord's title.

A person executing a kabuliyat and obtaining possession of lands as tenant under the kabuliyat is estopped from denying the title or seisin of the grantor in a suit for rent on the ground that he is only the benamidar of some other person. KRISHNARAO RAGHUNATH YARDI v. GHAMON GHAMA Bom. 249 (b)

———s. 133. SEE Evidence Act, 1872, s. 114 149

———s. 145—Statement made to Police in course of investigation—Use of. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 162 66

———s. 167—Improper admission of evidence—Whether ground of itself for reversing decision.

Under s. 167 of the Evidence Act, the improper admission of evidence is not a ground of itself for reversing any decision if it appears to the Court before which the objection is raised that, independently of the evidence objected to and admitted, there was sufficient evidence to justify the decision. SONBY LALL JHA v. DARBDEO NARAIN SINGH Pat. 470 F. B.

Exchange—Plaintiff employed in Turkey—Salary in terms of Turkish pounds—Plaintiff transferred to Bank's branch in Cyprus—Salary paid in accordance with currency of Cyprus—Retirement—Pension, in what currency payable—Rate of exchange prevalent as each instalment falls due—Whether should be adopted.

The plaintiff was employed by the Ottoman Bank in 1905 and was taken on the pensionable staff thus being entitled on retirement to a pension on the basis of his salary in the year previous to his retirement. His salary was at the beginning expressed in terms which in the result made it payable in Turkish gold pounds. In 1915 paper currency was made legal tender in Turkey. The plaintiff was subsequently transferred to the Bank's branch in Cyprus and he retired in 1931 while in service there. In Cyprus his salary was paid in Cyprus pounds at the exchange rate of 100 Cyprus pounds to 110 Turkish pounds. Subsequently the Cyprus currency depreciated in terms of gold. The question was whether on retirement, the plaintiff became entitled to a pension payable in Turkish gold pounds translated into Cyprus currency at the exchange of the day:

Held, that his pension was to be calculated on the basis of Turkish gold pounds and he was entitled to a monthly pension in Cyprus currency of a sum equivalent to the amount of Turkish gold pounds to which he would be entitled and that the Cyprus currency was to be calculated in accordance with the rate prevailing at the date when each instalment of pension became due. OTTOMAN BANK, NICOSIA v. DASCALOPOULOS P. C. 108

Exchange—concld.

Execution. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 11. 723

———Certificate sale—Re-conveyance of what is sold—Effect.

Nothing is sold in execution of a certificate sale except the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor. When what is sold is reconveyed to the judgment-debtors, they regain what is lost to them on account of the certificate sale. DULHIN PARBATI KUER v. BAIJNATH PRASAD NARAIN SINGH Pat. 213

———Decree for costs of trial Court vacated by High Court—Dismissal of appeal to Privy Council—Execution of Privy Council decree for costs—Judgment-debtor, if can set-off costs realized by decree-holder in trial Court.

Where the High Court vacates a decree for costs passed by the trial Court and the appeal to the Privy Council is dismissed with costs, the judgment-debtor is entitled, in execution of the decree for costs of the Privy Council, to set-off the costs realized before three years by the decree-holder in execution of the trial Court's decree. KRISHNA CHANDRA BHOUMICK v. PABNA DHANABHANDAR CO. LTD. Cal. 991

———Decree for khas possession of certain plot—Whether can be changed in execution.

Where a decree is given for khas possession of a certain plot, it cannot be changed at the time of execution. RADHANATH DAS v. SADHAN CHANDRA DEY Cal. 725 ———Execution Court, when can refuse to execute decree—Decree a nullity—Whether sufficient ground—Decree in terms of compromise against persons, proceedings against whom were ex parte—Question of want of jurisdiction or of decree being nullity if arises.

An execution Court can refuse to execute a decree, on the ground of its being a nullity in the sense of its not being a decree at all in the eye of law either for want of inherent jurisdiction to pass it or for any other reason.

M, B and T executed a mortgage deed in favour of S. Subsequently B alone executed a deed of further charge in favour of S who brought a suit for sale on the mortgage and the deed of further charge and impleaded V, J and C as subsequent mortgagees. The parties entered into a compromise and a preliminary decree for sale was passed in terms of it. S then made an application for a final decree for sale against the six defendants. Though all defendants were served, B alone appeared and as no objection was raised by him, a final decree was passed. Subsequently, V made an application to have the final decree set aside as he had not been served with notice of the application for final decree being passed. Notice of this application was issued to the decree-holder alone, but when the application came up for disposal, two of the other judgment-debtors, C and J also appeared besides the applicant and the decree-holder. The Judge was wrongly informed that the other judgment-debtors had been served, although as a matter of fact no notice had been sent to them. He, therefore, made a note in the proceedings that the other judgment-debtors were absent, though served, and proceeded ex parte against them. The application was granted and the final decree set aside. The same day, February 22, 1930, the plaintiff S and the three defendants who were present filed a fresh compromise, in which some variation was made as regards the order in which some portions of the mortgaged property were to be sold according to the terms of the first compromise. A final decree for sale was prepared in terms of the new compromise. Then S made an application for execution of the last-mentioned decree against all the judgment-debtors. Two of the mortgagors, objected to the execution on the ground that they were not bound by the decree as they were not parties to it:

Execution—contd.

Held, that the final decree passed on February 22, 1930, was not a nullity as against M, B and T, as the case was not one of the Court passing a decree against the mortgagors on the basis of a compromise to which they were not parties but merely one of a decree being passed in terms of the compromise against persons, proceedings against whom were ex parte. The defect was no more than one of an irregular exercise or improper assumption of jurisdiction. The mortgagors might have their remedy by means of proper proceedings against the irregularity complained of, but they could not in the circumstances treat the decree as a nullity. SHEO BEHARI LAL v. MAKRAND SINGH Oudh 759 F. B.

———Notice—Non-appearance of judgment-debtor —Order to execute — Whether operates as res judicata by implication—Res judicata.

When after notice has been issued the judgment-debtor does not appear and does not file objections, the Court is not called upon to make any further investigation into the matter, but it is its duty to order the decree to be executed. The order has to be passed automatically and there is no occasion for the Court to exercise its judgment as to the merits of any possible objection that might have been raised if the judgment-debtor had appeared. In such circumstances it is difficult to say that when the Court has no discretion in the matter, its order directing the decree to be executed is an adjudication of the dispute between the parties which operates as res judicata by implication. OFFICIAL RECEIVER, ALIGARH v. HIRA LAL All. 673 ———Decree in benamidar's name—Real owner's right to execute—Right of real owner's creditor to attach decree.

Where a decree has been passed in favour of a person, it is not open to another person to apply for execution of that decree on the ground that he is the real owner of the decree and the nominal decree-holder is only a benamidar for him.

But the fact that the real owner could not execute a decree passed in his benamidar's name does not mean that he has no property in the decree. Therefore a person who has obtained a decree against the real owner of another decree is entitled to attach the latter decree even though it stands in the name of the benamidar, and a decree declaring his right attached may be made. ASSAN v. MOIDIN KUTTI Mad. 284

———Restitution in favour of judgment-debtor —Surety failing to pay back certain amount—Suit finally decided in favour of decree-holder—Credit to judgment-debtor to the extent of lost amount

In execution proceedings the judgment-debtors had paid the full decretal amount to the decree-holder and when restitution thereof was directed owing to the decree having been set aside, they recovered a certain amount by sale of the sarai belonging to one of the sureties of the decree-holder, but he was subsequently deprived of that sarai on the ground that the surety had no interest in it. In the meantime the suit was remanded and finally decided in favour for the decree-holder. In the final execution proceedings, the judgment-debtor claimed credit for this lost amount:

Held, that whatever might be the equities between the surety and the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor, the judgment-debtor having paid the full decretal amount to the decree-holder originally must be deemed to have failed to recover it in the restitution proceedings to the extent of the lost amount. The decree-holder, therefore, must give credit for this amount to the judgment-debtor. PANNA LAL v. BASANTA MAL Lah. 1011

———Restoration petition on dismissal—On dismissal of restoration application, appeal from order discharging surety—Extension of time spent in application for restoration, if to be allowed—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 5.

Upon the dismissal of the application to restore the execution petition, the decree-holder is not entitled to extension of time for an appeal from the order discharging the surety, in respect of the time spent in the application for restoration. Such a application cannot be considered to be proper alternative remedy for getting the order of discharge of surety set aside, as the liability of the surety is not automatically revived on the restoration of the application. KASHMIRI LAL v. CHUNI LAL Lah. 503

———Sale—Adjournment of sale on giving up objections to sale proclamation—Estoppel of judgment-debtor against raising those objections again.

Where the properties of a judgment-debtor are proclaimed for sale and he gets an adjournment of the sale by giving up his objections to the sale proclamation, he is estopped from raising those objections again. POTTA REDDI v. KARUPPA GOUNDAN Mad. 1013

———Sale—Guarantee of title, if given—Auction-purchaser's remedy when wrong property is sold.

An auction-sale carries no guarantee of title and no guarantee of any other kind and if the auction purchaser purchases rights which have been included in the sale improperly, he must restore possession and must pursue such remedies as the law allows him against those persons who are to blame for it. KABUTRI v. RAM PRASHAD SAHU Pat. 225

Executor—Probate, grant of—If a condition precedent to file suit.

The grant of a probate is not a condition precedent to the institution of the suit by the executor. He has a right to institute the suit as executor before he obtains the probate. Whether as executor he would be entitled to recover the decree or to maintain the same passed by the Court without producing the probate is an entirely different matter, he will be entitled to get a decree, if he produces the probate before the passing of the final decree. PRABHATNATH DAS v. RAMENDRA KUMAR SHAHA Cal. 64

———Wilful default—Onus—Nature of proof—Investing money in unauthorised investment—Liability for loss—Executrices to be paid out of property of deceased monthly in lieu of services—Payment, if gratuitous or debt.

The burden of proof of wilful default in respect of something which the executors could have received, but for their wilful default or neglect, is in the first place, always on the party who alleges the default. It is for that party not merely to give proof of such default, but to prove clearly and affirmatively at least one act of wilful default to the satisfaction of the Court before the Court can make a reference for take accounts on that footing. It must also be shown that the estate has suffered loss or damage, and that such loss or damage is due to circumstances of wilful neglect or default on the part of the executrices.

Executor—concld.

Any executor who invests the moneys belonging to the estate in an unauthorised or hazardous investment is liable for the loss arising therefrom, however prudent such an investment of his own money he might think it to be.

Where under the will each of the two executrices was to be paid out of the property of the deceased Rs. 400 per mensem in lieu of their services, as long as the property is administered, after the death of the deceased ;

Held, that the payment was a sort of commission payable to the executrices by way of remuneration. It was a gratuitous bequest and not a debt. This, however, was not a gift out of the future income of the estate, for the testator had clearly provided that the remuneration must be paid out of his property, meaning out of the corpus of the estate, and was therefore, not a gift in futuro. MAHOMED HUSSAIN HAJI GULAM MAHOMED AJAM v. AISHABAI Bom. 334

Extradition Act (XV of 1903), ss. 7, 9, 10—Surrender of fugitive criminals—Warrant, necessity of.

When a warrant has been received in respect of an extradition offence the procedure should be as under s. 7, Extradition Act. When a requisition is received in respect of any offence the procedure should be as under s. 9, Extradition Act. But when neither a warrant nor a requisition has been received, the Magistrate is empowered to issue a warrant as under s. 10, Extradition Act. It is an essential ingredient of this procedure that there should be a warrant. SANTABIR LAMA v. EMPEROR Cal. 537

———s. 23—S. 23, applicability of—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 54 (7).

Section 23, Extradition Act, refers to the case of persons arrested under s. 54 clause seventh of the Code of Criminal Procedure, that is to say, when a person has been arrested not only without a warrant but also without an order from a Magistrate. Section 54, Criminal Procedure Code, is intended to cover those cases where the Police Officer acts on his own responsibility, that is to say, on suspicion or information as based on facts which the Police Officer has considered for himself. On the other hand where the arrest is made in pursuance of an order of a Magistrate it is that order which must determine the legality or otherwise of the arrest. SANTABIR LAMA v. EMPEROR Cal. 537

———s. 23—Construction should be in favour of subject.

The provisions of the Extradition Act are meant to ensure that the arrest and the detention of persons, who are alleged to have committed an offence outside British territory, should be in accordance with a certain procedure, and the sections of the Act with reference to that procedure should be construed strictly in favour of the subject. SANTABIR LAMA v. EMPEROR Cal. 537

Fatal Accidents Act (XIII of 1855)—Fatal accident—Suit by heirs—Assessment of damages—Guiding principles.

Although the Fatal Accidents Act, 1855, gives a right of action to the legal representatives of a person killed by an accident, only such damages can be awarded as can be shown to have been suffered financially by those bringing the suit. Sentimental damages cannot be awarded nor can damages be awarded merely for the loss of a son, daughter, wife, or husband, unless actual financial damages have been suffered or there was at the time of the accident a prospective pecuniary advantage which was lost by reason of the fatal injury caused to the person in respect of whose death the suit is filed.

Where a boy aged 12 years who was earning Rs. 6 a month was killed by an accident and in a suit for damages filed by his old mother, Rs. 600 were awarded as damages by the trial Judge:

Held, that the award was not excessive. DAVI SINGH v. MANGATHAYAMMAL Mad. 307

Fraud. SEE Contract Act, 1872, s. 65 1017

———Charge of—Substitution of fraud different from one alleged—Whether can be allowed.

A charge of fraud must be substantially proved as laid, and when one kind of fraud has been charged, another kind of fraud cannot, on failure of proof, be substituted for it. A party cannot set up a fraud to which he has himself been a party in order to defeat the opposite party's claim. KRISHNARAO RAGHUNATH YARDI v. GHAMON GHAMA Bom. 249 (b) ———Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VI, r. 4—Party pleading fraud or misrepresentation—Onus.

A party who relies on plea of fraud or misrepresentation, must establish these charges. NAN KEE v. AH FONG Rang. 890

———Joint fraud by plaintiff and defendant—Court finding they were acting together to perpetrate fraud and there is no difference in degree of guilt—Court should not assist either party—Relief sought on basis of transaction—Defence of fraudulent nature of transaction—Maxim—In pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis and nemo allegans turpitudinem—Applicability—Transaction entered into by plaintiff's predecessor—Plaintiff, if can enforce transaction.

Where a plaintiff is relying upon a deed, the defendant is entitled to give evidence of the circumstances under which the document came into existence and when these circumstances include an allegation of a joint fraud by both plaintiff and defendant the particulars of that fraud must be pleaded ; and it is then the duty of the Court to look into the matter, and if the Court comes to the conclusion that the parties were acting together with a view to perpetrate a fraud and did in fact perpetrate the fraud, and that there is no difference in the degree of the guilt of the plaintiff and that of the defendant, the duty of the Court is not to assist either party.

Where the plaintiff is not seeking to avoid a certain transaction but wants relief on the basis of the transaction and alleges that there is a document of transfer in his or his predecessor's favour and possession has not been delivered to him on the basis of the document, possession may so be delivered and if the defendant pleads that the transaction should not be given effect to on the ground that the transaction was brought about in order to perpetrate a fraud on creditors the defendant should not be heard on the maxim nemo allegans turpitudinem, then the principle that is applicable is the principle contained in the maxim in pari delicto. The defendant will be permitted to state that the document is not supported by consideration and the document was executed in order to defraud another person and on proof of the defendant's averments if it is found that the plaintiff and the defendants were in pari delicto the Court shall stay its hand and refuse its support to either confederate letting the estate lie where it falls.

Fraud—concld.

Where the plaintiff is seeking to enforce a transaction which is not supported by consideration and whose object the Court perfectly well knows to have been a fraudulent one, he should not be allowed to do so even if the party to the transaction was not he but his predecessor-in-interest. NAWAB SINGH v. DALJIT SINGH All. 928

——— Sale, when can be impugned on ground of fraud.

In order that a sale may be impugned on the ground of fraud, knowledge on the part of the purchaser or reasonable notice to him, should be established as a fact. RAJBALLABH MISIR v. BISHUN PRASAD SINGH Pat. 81

General Clauses Act (X of 1897). SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XLVII, r. 1 668

——— s. 3 (vii). SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 21 677

——— s. 6—Applicability of, to temporary statute. SEE Special Powers Ordinance, s. 17 447

——— s. 26—Does not act as a bar to trial or conviction but merely as bar to duplicate punishment.

Section 26, General Clauses Act, does not act as a bar to trial or conviction but merely as a bar to duplicated punishment. Where the second trial results in a sentence of imprisonment or transportation, the provisions of s. 26, General Clauses Act, can be complied with merely by the direction that such imprisonment or transportation shall run concurrently with that imposed in the previous case ; in the case of a death sentence there can be no question of a concurrent sentence, for the sentence itself automatically cancels the previous sentence of imprisonment. ARSALA KHAN v. EMPEROR Pesh. 287

Gift—Deed containing specific provision that all debts due from donors or charged on gifted property should be paid by donee—Donee, if a universal donee within s. 128, Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882)—Non-specification of debts in deed—Whether material—Conditions, if contrary to Muhammadan Law—Muhammadan Law—Gift.

Where a deed of gift itself contains a specific provision that all the debts which are due from the donors personally or which are charged upon the gifted property are to be paid by the donee and the donee in fact was expressly made liable for paying off all the debts of the donors and all the incumbrances upon the property, the donee must be held to be a universal donee. The fact that all the debts due from the donors were not specified in the deed of gift is immaterial. The conditions in the deed of gift making the universal donee liable to satisfy the debts of the donors are not void either for uncertainty or for being contrary to any rule of Muhammadan Law. KRISHNA BEHARI v. AHMADI Oudh 303

Government of India Act, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 61), s. 107—Interference with interlocutory orders. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 115 (c), O VI, r. 17 1109

Grant. SEE Easement 719

——— Noabad land—Government, if can settle it with anyone—Government coming to wrong conclusion on question of possession—Settlement, if confers title only on grantee.

The Government had the right to make settlement of Noabad lands with anybody it pleased. Although in making the settlment the fact of previous possession is taken into account, yet if the Sub-Deputy Collector had come to the wrong conculsion on the question of possession, still the settlement made would confer a right on the grantee alone in the land.

Grant—concld.

NISHI CHANDRA SEN v. ROMESH CHANDRA MAJUMDAR Cal. 72

Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), s. 7 (1). SEE Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, s. 47 (1) 65

——— ss. 47 (1), 7 (1)—Interlocutory order—Held, that order was interlocutory order and that no appeal lay.

Where the Court refused an application by a person for being appointed a guardian, but the proceedings were kept pending for further orders after consulting the Collector for the appointment of the Court of Wards or some other person as guardian :

Held, that the order dismissing the application was an interlocutory order and not final according to s. 47 (1) or s. 7 (1), Guardians and Wards Act and as such no appeal could be filed till a final order was passed. MIR ABI MAHAMMAD AHASAN v. ABU NASAR MOHAMMAD YUSUF ALI Cal. 65

Hindu Law—Adoption—Widow's power to adopt —Whether depends on the question of vesting or divesting the estate—Natural son adopted in another family—Mother's right to adopt another son to continue the line.

The power of a Hindu widow to adopt does not depend upon the question of vesting or divesting of the estate. The purpose of an adoption is to secure the continuance of the line, and when the natural son has left no son to continue the line, nor a widow to provide for its continuance by adoption, his mother can make a valid adoption to her deceased husband, although the estate is not vested in her. It is not correct to say that a widow cannot adopt a son to her deceased husband, if by so doing she would defeat an estate other than her own.

Where the natural son with his wife cease, to exist for the purpose of continuing the line in the natural family, as a result of their adoption into another family, his mother is entitled to make an adoption to secure that object. When the adoption so made has served the purpose, it cannot be impeached simply because it would defeat the estate which had vested in some other person. VIJAYSINGJI CHHATRASINGJI v. SHIVSANGJI BHIMSANGJI P. C. 493

——— Bombay School—Widow having no authority to adopt from her deceased husband—Consent of his kinsmen, if should be obtained.

In the Bombay Presidency a widow, who has no authority from her deceased husband, may adopt a son to him, and it is not necessary for her to obtain the consent of his kinsmen. It depends entirely upon her discretion whether she should or should not make an adoption, and her choice in the matter cannot be restricted. VIJAYSINGJI CHHATRASINGJI v. SHIVSANGJI BHIMSANGJI P. C. 493 ——— Alienation—Father—Proof of connection between immorality and antecedent debt—Necessity of.

Under Hindu Law the sons must prove that the debts were incurred by the father for immoral purposes. A connection between the debt and the alleged immorality must be established. SOHAN LAL v. ISHAR SINGH Lah. 255 ——— ——— High rate of interest—Lender must prove necessity for it.

It is incumbent on those who support a mortgage made by the manager of a joint Hindu family to show not only that there was necessity to borrow, but that it would not be unreasonable to borrow at some such high rate and upon some such terms, and if it is not shown that there was necessity to borrow at the rate and upon the terms contained in the mortgage, that rate and those terms cannot stand. KAMTA PROSAD v. DURGA DAT AWASTHI Pat. 961 ——— —Alienation Legal necessity— Lender making enquiries—Unsubstantial part of consideration not applied for legal necessity — Legal necessity, if established.

Where it has been established not only that enquiry was made by the lender that the money was actually required and was expended for the legal necessity but that the lender also made enquiries from the members of the family as regards an amount which formed an unsubstantial part of consideration although no enquiry was made from third persons, then under the circumstances legal necessity is established either on the ground that that amount forms an unsubstantial amount of the consideration or on the ground that enquiries were made of the only persons who could give the lender any information with regard to the matter.

Quære.—Whether in Nazir Begam v. Rai Raghunath Singh, 50 Ind Cas. 434 and Ram Bujhawan Prasad Singh v. Nathuram, 71 Ind. Cas. 933 their Lordships of the Privy Council intended to modify in any sense the principle enunciated in Hanuman Prasad's case, 6 M. I. A. 393. KAMTA PRASAD v. DURGA DAT AWASTHI Pat. 961

——— ——— Widow. SEE Custom (Punjab) 860

———Ancestral property — Accumulations of income of ancestral property, if ancestral property.

Accumulations of income of ancestral property purchased or acquired out of the income or with the assistance of ancestral property, the proceeds of sale of ancestral property, and property purchased out of such proceeds are ancestral property. RAM NATH v. CHIRANJI LAL All. 136 F. B.

———Conversion—Hindu convert to Christianity —Marriage with a Christian lady—Husband and wife ceasing to live together as such—Reconversion of husband to Hinduism—Marriage with a convert to Hinduism—Validity of this marriage.

A person who was a Hindu by birth became a Christian and married a Christian woman but subsequently he and his wife ceased to live as husband and wife. He then reconverted himself to Hinduism and married a woman who was a convert to Hinduism:

Held, that in view of the fact that no particular expiatory ceremonies were observed among the community to which the parties belonged and the absence of any particular ceremonies being prescribed for them by the smriti writers nor the performance of any Homas enjoined on them, it was necessary to look to the sense of the community and it was of particular significance that the community was prepared to receive him and the second wife as man and wife and their issue as legitimate. GURUSAMI NADAR v. IRULAPPA KONAR Mad. 708

——— Debt—Antecedent debt; if should be independent of mortgage security—Debt small—Whether can burden the estate, if not for necessity.

All the antecedent debts included in the mortgage in dispute must be held to constitute valid necessity. They need not be independent of mortgage security.

Where a debt is not for necessity though it forms only a small portion of consideration, the debt should not be allowed to burden the land in the absence of any proof as to necessity. SOHAN LAL v. ISHAR SINGH Lah. 255

——— ——— Debts for joint family— Managers executing promissory notes in their own names— Suit on such notes—Other members impleaded —

Allegation that debt was for benefit of joint family business — Held, that suit was not merely on promissory notes but also on original consideration.

The plaintiffs' case in substance was that though the managers of the joint family and the joint business executed the promissory notes in their own names, the loans were taken by the joint family through their managers for the purposes of the joint family and joint family business; it was not specifically stated in the plaint that the promissory notes were taken as securities for the loans advanced to the joint family:

Held, that it could not be said that the suits were simple suits for recovery of money on promissory notes only but were on the original consideration also. INDU BALA DASSI v. LAKSHMI NARAYAN GANGULY Cal. 1109

——— Family arrangement. SEE Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s. 10 699

——— Gift—Possession, delivery of—Necessity of—Property capable of possession — Repudiation by donor soon after—Effect —Non-delivery, if makes gift invalid—Custom (Punjab)—Gift.

Where the donor has done everything in his power to complete a gift, then the non-delivery of actual possession does not necessarily invalidate the gift, but where the property is capable of physical possession and the donor has repudiated the gift soon after the execution of the deed of gift, the non-delivery of actual possession makes the gift invalid.

Under Hindu Law a gift is not valid unless it is accompanied by delivery of possession of the subject of the gift from donor to the donee. Mere registration of a deed of gift is not equivalent to delivery of possession. It is not, therefore, sufficient to pass the title of the property from the donor to the donee. In cases where physical possession cannot be delivered owing to the nature of the property, it is enough to validate a gift if the donor has done all he could do to complete the gift so as to entitle the donee to obtain possession. DHANI RAM v. LEGHA Lah. 1068 ——— Inheritance. SEE Hindu Law—Succession.

——— Joint family—Alienation — Mitakshara—Undivided member, if can transfer his share—Alienation.

A member of a joint Mitakshara family cannot make a transfer of his undivided share in the ancestral estate for his own benefit. MAHINDRA OJHA v. SITARAM OJHA Pat. 827 ——— ——— business—Adjudication of joint Hindu family as insolvent—Powers of Receiver.

The right of a Hindu father to dispose of the joint Hindu family property in order to satisfy his own debts is properly within the meaning of s. 28 of the Provincial Insolvency Act and vests in the Receiver and the Receiver is entitled to seize the entire family property and transfer it in order to satisfy the debts of the father. It is not incumbent on such a Receiver to obtain an order of the Court to execute it and attach the family property. He can straightway seize the property and sell it under a private deed, it not being incumbent upon him to take out an attachment. In these circumstances the seizure of the property by the Receiver must be taken to be tantamount to attachment of the property by him so as to get his interest crystallised in preference to any creditor who subsequently attaches the same property. BHAGWAN DAS v. LAKSHMI CHAND All. 661

——— ——— business — Mortgage debt contracted by father to finance new business—Sons, when liable—Manager of ancestral joint family business—Power to borrow—Alienation, if binding on minorm embers—Test to decide if business is a new business.

Hindu Law—contd.

Under Hindu Law where the business to finance which, money has been borrowed, is a new business, the sons are not liable for the payment of the loan contracted by the father for this business, unless the transaction was for the benefit of the family and to the benefit of the estate or it was supported by legal necessity. The question whether the particular transaction in dispute was for legal necessity or was for the benefit of the estate and the joint family, is something more than the mere question whether the money borrowed was required for the purposes of a new business. The fact that it was required for a new business would not be any justification. If in addition thereto, it could be shown that there was either a pressure of necessity to continue that business, as it was the mainstay of the family or that the particular transaction was at the time beneficial to the family and the family estate, the transaction would be supported but, of course, on the latter ground. The question whether the transaction was for such benefit or not is a question of fact depending on the circumstances of the case, and it is for the Court to decide whether it was so beneficial and was such as an ordinary prudent manager would have entered into in the interest of the family.

Per Rachhpal Singh, J.—A manager of an ancestral joint family trading business has full authority to take loans and make alienations to raise money for the purpose of that business. Such a transaction will be binding on the entire joint family including the minor members. The creditor is not bound to enquire into the finances of the business so long as the business forms the purpose of the debt. All that is necessary for him to see is that the money is really required for the purpose of the business and there is no element of speculation or gambling in the transaction.

The real test for deciding whether a business is a new business wholly unconnected with the joint family ancestral business, or is an extension of that business is to determine the source which supplied the money with which the new business was started. If the assets or income of the joint family ancestral funds are utilized for opening a new branch, then the new branch will form part of the old business. On the other hand, if the business is started by a manager without any aid from the ancestral family assets, then, it will be a new business. In that new business the other members will have no right nor will any liability attach to them in respect of it. But merely because a business has been extended it cannot be inferred that the extension was a new business started by the manager separately. RAM NATH v. CHIRANJI LAL All 136 F. B.

——Joint family—Execution of promissory note by member—Decree against that member alone—Decree cannot be executed against shares of other members in joint family property—Binding nature of debt cannot be gone into in execution.

Where a person in whose favour a member of a joint Hindu family has executed a promissory note, obtains a decree on the note against the executant alone without impleading the other members of the family as parties to the suit, he cannot execute the decree by attaching the shares of the other members of the family. The question of the binding character of the debt as against the other members of the family at any rate if they are not sons or descendants of the judgment-debtor cannot be gone into in execution proceedings. LAKSHMANA CHETTIAR v. MUTHU CHELLIA GOUNDAN Mad. 574

Hindu Law—contd.

——Joint family—Firm in the names of father and son—Presumption that father is member of the firm—Onus of proving the contrary.

The presumption, in case of a firm which is in the names of father and son, is that the father is a member of that firm and the burden of proving that he is not, lies on the person who asserts it. KALU SINGH-SUNDER SINGH v. RAM LAL Lah. 294 ——————Parties are tenants-in-common—No adverse possession unless there is ouster.

Where the family is joint and there is no division the parties are tenants-in-common and there is no adverse possession of one co-tenant against another unless there is a clear ouster, in other words, demand and refusal. YESHVANT v. GOVIND Bom. 50 ——————Partition—Plaintiff's right to interest subsequent to suit — Difference between claim to interest on amount due to plaintiff and claim to share of interest received by family pending suit.

In a suit for partition, the plaintiff is entitled to get his share of the income which has accrued due to the family by way of interest between the date of suit and the date of the decree. The claim for interest in such a case is not for interest on a sum found due by the defendants to the plaintiff but is for the plaintiff's share of the income of the family which income is derived in the shape of interest, and there is no principle of equity or justice in disallowing interest to the plaintiff in such a case. ANNAMALAI CHETTI v. PALANIAPPA CHETTIAR Mad. 151 ——————Self-acquired property—Burden of proving that it is thrown in common stock—Intention.

The burden of proving that a member of a joint Hindu family threw his self-acquired property into the common stock lies on the person making the assertion, and this burden can only be discharged by proof of the fact that the owner of the property clearly expressed an intention to abandon his separate and exclusive rights in the property in favour of the members of the joint family. The intention may be expressed by words, or may be inferred by the manner in which the profits of the property were dealt with. GOVIND PRASAD v. SHANTI SWARUP All. 1106 ——————Suit based on adjustment of partnership accounts signed by father only—Sons, liability of.

Under Hindu Law, in a suit based on an adjustment of a partnership where the father alone has signed the deed, the sons are not personally liable but their liability extends to the extent of their share in the joint family property. BULAQI DAS v. LAL CHAND Lah. 752 ——————Suit by member against stranger transferee from manager—Stranger setting up title by adverse possession—Time run out against manager—Existence of minor members—Whether saves limitation. SEE Limitation Act, 1908, s. 7 569 ——————Transfer of one member's share to near relation for nominal consideration to save it from creditors—Whether constitutes separation—Right to share in outstandings realised by other members.

Where a member of a joint Hindu family is induced to assign his share in the family property to a near relation (his father-in-law), for a nominal consideration, the transfer being intended not to deprive him of his property, but to save it from his creditors, the transfer does not extinguish his interest in the estate and he does not cease to be a co-parcener in the joint property and he is entitled to a share in the outstandings, if any, realised by the other members on behalf of the family. RAMAKRISHNA AYYAR v. PARAMESWARA AYYAR P. C. 385 ——— Manager of joint Hindu family—Disclaimer, whether binding on members.

A disclaimer by the manager of joint Hindu family which is effective as forfeiture, is binding on the other members in the absence of anything to suggest the contrary. RACHOTAPPA v. KONHER ANNARAO Bom. 516

——— Minor. SEE Minor 607

——— Minority and Guardianship. SEE Promissory note 581 F. B

——— Mitakshara—Joint family—Guardian—Co-parcenary consisting of an adult and minor members—Only adult co-parcener, if can appoint guardian of co-parcenary property of minor.

It is not competent to an only adult co-parcener of a Hindu Mitakshara family to appoint by will or otherwise, a trustee, guardian or manager of the co-parcenary property of a minor co-parcener during his minority. BRIJBHUKANDAS v. GHASHIRAM Bom. 12 F. B.

——— Partition -Statement that transferor has a specific share—Whether constitutes separation

Although from statements of separation in the deed of transfer itself an inference of fact may be drawn that there was a partition, yet simply a statement in the deed that the transferor has a specific share will not constitute separation as a matter of law.

It cannot be said that if an undivided member of a family transfers his share by will or inter vivos, the transfer is valid simply because he specifies the share. MAHINDRA OJHA v. SITARAM OJHA Pat. 827 ——— suit—Creditors are proper parties but decree for payment of their debts cannot be passed.

Though creditors of a joint family are proper parties to a suit for partition of the joint family properties, there is no provision of law under which a decree could be passed in their favour for payment of their debts. MAHAGANAPATHI v. NATESA IYER Mad. 1002 ——— Witnesses not present at partition can testify as to the fact of separation.

The mere fact that the witnesses were not present at the time of the partition of the family would not of itself be sufficient to disregard their evidence testifying to the partition entirely. The matter of separation may be and often is a question of reputation or notoriety. KAMTA PRASAD v. DURGA DAT AWASTHI Pat. 961 ——— Religious Endowment—Property passing from Guru to Chela—Presumption.

The fact that properties passed always from guru to chela the exclusion of blood relations affords a strong presumption of a religious institution, the members of which renounce the world. NIHAL CHAND v. NARAIN DAS Lah. 620 ——— ——— Succession to shebaitship—Laying down rule different from line of Hindu inheritance is invalid.

Rules laid down by the founder of a Hindu debutter for succession to the office of shebait are invalid, if they provide for the office to be held by some one among the heirs of the founder to the exclusion of others, in a succession differing from the line of Hindu inheritance. LAL BEHARY DHUR v.

ADMINISTRATOR-GENERAL, BENGAL Cal. 1071

——— Religious Institution—Tests to determine if a religious institution is a public trust.

A religious or monastic institution may be a public trust for religious or charitable purposes and the question whether it is so or not is to be determined by the evidence in regard to the usage and custom of the particular institution in respect of the duties and obligations attached to the office of the mahant. NIHAL CHAND v. NARAIN DAS Lah. 620

——— Stridhan—Property purchased from income of property settled upon widow in lieu of maintenance—Whether stridhana—Right of alienation.

Property purchased by a Hindu widow from the income of property settled upon her in lieu of her maintenance becomes her stridhan and she is competent to transfer it. RAM DAS v. RAM SEWAK TEWARI Oudh 781 ——— Succession—Wife, if sapinda *of husband—Death of step-daughter—*Stridhana, if devolves on step-mother.

A wife, according to Hindu Law, is a sapinda of her husband, and hence on the death of the daughter when her stridhan property reverts to the next of kin, it devolves on the father's wife (step-mother) who is a sapinda. DULHIN PARBATI KUER v. BAIJNATH PRASAD NARAIN SINGH Pat. 213 ——— ——— Samanodakas — Relationship of samanodakas, whether extends beyond 14th degree.

According to the Mitakshara school of the Hindu Law, samanodakas include only those agnates whose relationship to the deceased extends from the 8th to the 14th degree, and in the absence of any such agnate the estate devolves upon his bandhus. ATMARAM ABHIMANJI v. BAJIRAO JANRAO P. C. 330 ——— Texts—Interpretation—Conflict between text-writers and commentators—Latter must be accepted.

In the event of a conflict between the ancient text writers and the commentators, the opinion of the latter must be accepted. ATMARAM ABHIMANJI v. BAJIRAO JANRAO P. C. 330 ——— Widow—Alienation—Alienation of part of estate for religious ceremonies of daughter's son—Acts done for spiritual welfare of deceased husband—Alienation, if binding on daughter's son as reversioner.

It is very difficult under the Hindu Law, to distinguish positively between sincere religious feeling and idle sentiment. All that can safely be said is that where the point is doubtful and where there is not the slightest suspicion of ulterior motive or fraud, the benefit of the doubt should be given to religious feeling. It is not for a Court of law to disparage the pious acts of devout people.

Under Hindu Law, a daughter's son who offers the funeral oblation is particularly worthy of honour. Consequently, where a widow who is in possession of her deceased husband's estate alienates a part of the estate, to defray debts contracted for family expenses and thread and marriage ceremonies of her daughter's son, the latter act being done as an act conducive to the spiritual welfare of her deceased husband, and not through any compelling necessity, and there was no suggestion of undue extravagence or of fraud: the alienation is binding on the daughter's son as a reversioner. In such cases the test is whether the expenditure was reasonable according to the common notions of Hindus. YELLAMRAJU VENKATASUBBA RAO v. LAKKARAJU ANANDA RAO Mad. 79

——— ——— Compromise — Reversioner, when bound by it—Legal necessity—Spiritual benefit of husband—Benefit must be anterior to alienation—Mortgagé for such benefit—Alienee's duty—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1903), s. 11—First suit dismissed for multifariousness—Suit between landlord and tenant—Second suit on title—Res judicata if applies.

A suit for partition of certain undivided property between two widows was compromised and the main term of this settlement was that each widow should have absolute power to dispose of her own share in the suit property subject to her giving the other widow the right of making the first offer for it. A decree followed in the terms of the compromise, but no reference to a shop which was kept undivided was made in the decree. Subsequently one of the widows adopted the plaintiff. The other widow mortgaged her share in the shop for 999 years to defendant No. 1 but on the day after the mortgage both the widows took registered rent note from one tenant for three years. The adopting widow then sued on behalf of the adoptee to recover the possession of the shop from both the tenant and the mortgaging widow. The suit was dismissed for multifariousness and misjoinder of parties. The plaintiff (adoptee) next sued to set aside the mortgage and to evict the tenant. Defendant No. 1 contested the suit on the ground that the mortgaging widow under the compromise had absolute authority to dispose of her property as she liked. He further contended that the previous suit was conclusive against plaintiff as regards his title to the property and that it was not open to him to raise that question again in this suit. Lastly, he contended that the alienation to him was justified by legal necessity and was, therefore, binding upon the plaintiff:

Held, (i) that the effect of the compromise was not in any way to enlarge the estate or to benefit the estate; its only effect was to increase the powers of the widows themselves adversely to the reversioner, and hence could not be recognised as binding upon the reversioner;

(ii) that res judicata did not apply as the first suit was dismissed without consideration on the merits and it having been a suit between landlord and tenant no question of the plaintiff's rights as against the rights of the mortgagor or mortgagee could have been raised there;

(iii) that since the husband's spiritual benefit was complete before the alienation took place and since no debts had been incurred for the alleged spiritual benefit, the mortgage could he not be justified for legal necessity;

(iv) that the defendant No. 1 could not resist the suit he having failed to make proper inquiries before concluding the mortgage. CHIMANLAL GANPATRAM GHANCHI v. NATVARLAL MAGANLAL Bom. 7 ——— Widow—Co-widows—Transfer by one—Transfer not challenged by other—Presumption of transfer being made with latter's consent.

Where one of two Hindu co-widows executes a gift deed, the deed is voidable at the option of the other co-widow and none else has the right to challenge it during the latter's lifetime. When she has not challenged it, it must be presumed that the transfer was made with her consent. MITTHU LAL v. CHAMELI All. 800 ——— ———Estate—Accretions and accumulations—Intention of widow—Onus of proof.

A Hindu widow has got an absolute right over the income of the estate and if she acquires any property from the saving of that income, it is optional with her either to keep the property separate from the estate or mix it up with it. In the absence of evidence of a contrary intention of the widow, the property does not form part of her husband's estate and the onus of proving that it was not treated by her as her separate property is upon him who alleges it to be so. DULHIN PARBATI KUER v. BAIJNATH PRASAD-NARAIN SINGH Pat. 213 ———Widow—Estate—Joint life tenants succeeding—Whether one can relinquish her right of survivorship—Succession, when will open out, if relinquishment takes place.

Under Hindu Law, if more than one female joint life-tenants succeed to an estate they may divide their life-tenancy and hold portions of the estate separately if they like and this arrangement will continue till their life. In other words, they may convert the joint estate into estates held in severalty. One or more of them may relinquish her or their right of survivorship in that portion of the estate which is held by the other. In that case if one dies, the estate in her possession will not revert to the other who has relinquished but will go to her heirs as if it were her stridhan, and if she alienates any portion of the estate, the alienee will continue in possession of the estate till the death of the last survivor. The joint tenant, who has surrendered her right of survivorship, cannot question the succession or alienation. The inevitable result, therefore, is that succession will not open till the last survivor is dead. DULHIN PARBATI KUER v. BAIJNATH PRASAD NARAIN SINGH Pat. 213 ——— ———Family business—Widow carrying on business as husband's heir—Business debt—Reversioners, if liable to pay from inherited assets.

If a Hindu widow, as an heir, carries on business which she has inherited as an asset, and in doing that business incurs a proper trade debt, which might assume the form of passing a promissory note or hundi, the creditor can recover the money from the assets inherited by the reversioners after the death of the widow. POPAT VIRJI v. DAMODAR JAIRAM Bom. 711 ——— ——— Suit by widows to regain portion of their husband's estate—Suit lost due to technical defect—Decree for costs and mesne profits obtained by creditor—Widows, if personally liable for mesne profits.

Where two widows along with their other co-sharers brought the suit to regain a portion of their husband's estate which was lost on account of the revenue sale, and the widows had a ground to have the sale set aside but lost the suit on account of a technical defect and the decree obtained by a creditor for costs and mesne profits was a decree which could have been realised from the estate of the husband of the widows and the widows carried on the litigation from the income of the estate:

Held, that they should not be held personally liable for the mesne profits. DULHIN PARBATI KUER v. BAIJNATH PRASAD NARAIN SINGH Pat. 213 ——— ——— Widow carrying on litigation regarding estate of husband—Decree, if binding on reversioners—Res judicata, principle of—Whether applies.

In carrying out litigation regarding the estate of her husband a widow represents the estate and the decree obtained against her is binding upon the reversioners, provided that the litigation is honest and is fairly conducted. The rule of res judicata as indicated in s. 11 of the Civil Procedure Code, is not strictly applicable to such cases, but the principle itself has been held to apply so as to bind reversioners by decision in litigation fairly and honestly conducted Hindu Law—concld.

given for or against Hindu females who represent the estate in such litigation. The question in each case will be whether the estate was properly represented by her. She might have been labouring under a personal disability or an estoppel. But unless a decision itself was given on a ground personal to herself, it will not any the least be binding on the reversioners. DULHIN PARBATI KUER v. BAIJNATH PRASAD NARAIN SINGH Pat. 213

Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act (II of 1929), s. 2—'Sister', whether means only sister of the full blood.

The word 'sister' as used in s. 2, Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act must be interpreted according to the plain meaning of the word in the English language, which ordinarily means a sister of the full blood KABOOTRA v. RAM PADARATH Oudh 94

Inam SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 100 763

Income Tax—Duty of Income-tax authorities to satisfy themselves of agent's authority to file returns.

It is the duty of the Income-tax Officers before they accept returns signed and verified by agents to satisfy themselves about the authority of such agents to do so. COMMISSIONER OF INCOME TAX, C. P. & U. P In the matter of Oudh 180

Income Tax Act (XI of 1922), s. 4 (2)—Firm—Retirement of one partner—Account taken of capital and profits—Share of retiring partner paid to him—Amount paid, if assessable as profits

Where the assessee, a partner of a firm, retired from that firm, an account was taken of the capital and of the profits and the assessee was given his share and he went out of the firm with it:

Held, that upon the retirement of the assessee from the partnership, the partnership was dissolved as between all the other members and hence there must be deemed to have been an ascertainment of the shares of all the partners and distribution of the partnership assets. The fact that the other partners continued in business together did not affect the question their doing so being merely in the capacity on a new firm, the legal position being that the old firm had ceased to exist. As the retirement brought about a dissolution of the firm and as on such dissolution the capital and profits of the firm became consolidated, no portion of the amount received by the retiring partner could be assessed to income-tax as profits. COMMISSIONER OF INCOME TAX, MADRAS v. MUTHUKARUPAN CHETTIAR Mad. 705 S. B.

——s. 10—Assessee carrying on business in piece-goods—Dacoity—Loss of sum—Held no deduction could be allowed.

An assessee carried on business in piece-goods and for that purpose accepted deposits from various people and paid interest on those deposits, the money being used in the business. No money-lending business was carried on. A sum of Rs. 14,440 was lost in cash as a result of dacoity on the assessee's firm by an employee with the assistance of and in collusion with others. The assessee claimed deduction of this amount not under s. 10 (2), Income Tax Act, but under s. 10 (1):

Held, that the loss was a loss of capital and no allowance could be made for it. GADODIA & Co., In the matter of Lah. 995

——ss. 10 (vi) and 66 (3)—Printing press—"Type", whether part of machinery or plant is a question of law.

In the case of a printing press whether "type" is part of the machinery or plant is a question of law. AMAR SINGH v. COMMISSIONER OF INCOME TAX, PUNJAB Lah 968

——s. 13—Fresh promissory notes issued by debtor for sum due under old note and interest thereon—Interest under old note treated as received by creditor, and making corresponding entries in accounts—Held, there was material for Income Tax Officer for assessing such interest to income-tax.

Where the assessees have elected to treat the interest due under the original loans as having been received and paid on the execution and delivery of the fresh promissory notes by the debtors, and the interest is entered as having been received both in the interest account and in the personal accounts of the respective debtors, and the creditors accepting the obligations of the debtors under the fresh promissory notes in substitution for the old debts and the interest due thereon, and in past years were content that the interest accruing in this manner should be assessed to income tax, in these circumstances it cannot be held that there were no materials before the Income Tax Officer which would justify him in concluding that these sums represented interest liable to assessment, which the assessee has regarded as being liquidated by delivery of fresh promissory note.

In such cases if the assessees want to escape assessment for such interest, they should so adjust their accounts as to make it clear that the acceptance of a fresh promissory note is not taken as effecting payment of the interest due under the old loan. COMMISSIONER OF INCOME TAX, BURMA v. V. S U R. FIRM, RANGOON Rang. 703 S. B.

——ss. 22 (2), 66 (3)—Notice demanding return of income—Legality of notice, if a question of law—Thirty days' time to furnish return essential.

Under s. 22 (2), Income Tax Act, the Income Tax Officer must give the proposed assessee at least thirty days' time within which to furnish his return. If this minimum is denied, the notice becomes entirely illegal and no subsequent extension of time will cure the defect that initially lay in the notice issued.

The question whether a notice demanding return of income, is illegal for not giving thirty days' time is a question of law within s. 22 (2), Income Tax Act. JAMNA DHAR POTDAR & Co. LYALLPUR v. COMMISSIONER OF INCOME TAX, PUNJAB Lah. 526

——s. 23. SEE Power of Attorney 180

——s. 25-A—Whether contemplates partition by metes and bounds.

Section 25-A, Income Tax Act, contemplates an actual partition by metes and bounds of the joint family property. SALIG RAM RAM LAL v. COMMISSIONER OF INCOME TAX, LAHORE Lah. 203

——ss. 30 (2), 31 SEE Income Tax Act, 1922, s. 66 (2) 124

——s. 31—'Order confirming assessment', in s. 31—Meaning of.

An order confirming the assessment is an order which has reference to the assessment and which affirms it. Where the question of assessment is not even considered and the appeal is rejected as one barred by limitation, the order of dismissal cannot be considered to be one confirming the assessment SHIVNATH PRASAD v. COMMISSIONER OF INCOME TAX, CENTRAL & UNITED PROVINCES, LUCKNOW All 124

——s. 66—Question not raised before Assistant Commissioner—Right to demand reference.

The assessee has no right to demand that the Commissioner of Income Tax should refer to the High Court the question which he had not raised before the Assistant Commissioner. JAMNA DHAR POTDAR & Co. LYALLPUR v. COMMISSIONER OF INCOME TAX, PUNJAB. Lah. 526

Income Tax Act—contd.

———ss. 66 (2), 30 (2), 31—Appeal to Assistant Commissioner filed beyond time—Refusal to admit appeal not being satisfied that appellant had sufficient cause for delay—Appeal, if has proceeded beyond stage referred to in s. 30 (2)—Action under s. 66 (2), if can be taken by High Court.

Action under s 66 (2), Income Tax Act, cannot be taken if the appeal has not proceeded beyond the stage referred to in s. 30 (2), and the High Court cannot direct the Commissioner to state a case. Where an appeal is presented to the Assistant Commissioner beyond time and he refuses to admit the appeal on not being satisfied that the appellant had sufficient cause, no appeal can be registered and disposed of in the manner laid down by s. 31 and no order under s 31 can be passed and hence action under s. 66 (2) cannot be taken. SHIVNATH PRASAD v. COMMISSIONER OF INCOME TAX, CENTRAL & UNITED PROVINCES, LUCKNOW All. 124

———s. 66 (3).

SEE Income Tax Act, 1922, s. 10 (vi) 968

SEE Income Tax Act, 1922, s. 22 (2) 526

Indian States (Protection against Disaffection) Act of 1922, s. 3 (1)—Joinder of charges—Legality. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, ss. 233, 234, 235 450

———s. 3 (1)—Publisher—Meaning of—"Publishing"—Scope of—Criminal responsibility under s. 3 (1)—Extent of.

The word "publisher" appearing in s. 3 (1) of the Indian States (Protection against Disaffection) Act cannot possibly be construed in the narrow sense of the local publisher in which it is apparently used in Act XXV of 1867, but must be given its ordinary meaning. "Publishing" in s 3 (1) cannot, therefore, be restricted to publishing libellous matters merely turned out of a printing press or be confined to "publishing" by an editor or printer thereof. The section fastens criminal responsibility upon any one or more of the four persons, viz, the editor, the printer, the publisher and the author of any handwritten or printed libellous matter against a Prince. The word "publishing" must then be understood in its ordinary significance of "making known, announcing publicly, or bringing to notice". DIWAN SINGH MAFTOON v. EMPEROR Nag. 450

———ss. 3 (1), 5—Sanction to prosecute under s. 3 (1)—Sanction regarding prosecution of one offence only—Prosecution for all offences under s. 3 (1)—Proceedings, legality of.

Where the sanction necessary for the prosecution for an offence under s. 3 (1), Indian States (Protection against Disaffection) authorised the prosecution of the accused only "in respect of the publication of an article (of which a copy and translation are hereto annexed)", and the complainant failed to establish that the article referred to in the sanction was the one on which the complaint was lodged:

Held, that the complainant failed to prove that he was authorised by the Governor-General to lodge the complaint in respect of the article.

Section 3 (1), Indian States (Protection against Disaffection) Act, creates four distinct offences in respect of a written matter which brings or is intended to bring into hatred or contempt, or excites or is intended to excite disaffection towards any Prince or Chief or his administration. It hits anyone or more or these four persons, viz., the author, the editor, the printer and the publisher of the libellous matter Where the sanction of the Governor-General authorises the complainant "to make complaint of an offence under s. 3 of the Act", and very clearly restricts the prosecution to one of the four offences under the section by specifying that it is to be "in respect of the publication" of an article, there is no room for the contention that the prosecution was sanctioned in regard to all the four offences covered by s. 3 (1) of the Act It follows then that the trial of the accused in respect of the three distinct offences of his being the editor, the printer and the author of the offending article is clearly illegal for want of sanction and vitiates the whole proceedings. DIWAN SINGH MAFTOON v. EMPEROR Nag. 450

Insolvency—Joint Hindu family firm adjudicated insolvent—Effect—All members of family, if made insolvents—Allahabad High Court Rules, Chap. XIX, r. 27—Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), ss. 79.

In the case of a firm carried on by a joint Hindu family, the effect of the adjudication of the firm as an insolvent is to make all the members of the family insolvent. BHAGWANDAS v. LAKSHMI CHAND All. 661 ———Money in Receiver's hands consisting of rents of property mortgaged to Bank—Claim by Liquidator of Bank—Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), ss 47, 48—Applicability—Receiver's right to deal with the money.

Where the money which remains in the Receiver's hands, consists entirely of the rents and profits of the property which was the subject-matter of mortgages in favour of a Bank which has subsequently gone into liquidation, the provisions of ss. 47 and 48 of the Provincial Insolvency Act are not in any way material to the claim of the Liquidator of the Bank and the Receiver in the insolvency has no right to deal with the said money. H. HUNTER v. KAHIZ ABID P. C. 426 ———Mutual dealings between creditor and insolvent—Account of what is due should be taken.

Where there are mutual dealings between an insolvent and a creditor, an account has to be taken of what is due from the one to the other in respect of such mutual dealings and the balance of the account and no more is to be paid by the one to the other. KRISHNA CHANDRA BHAUMICK v. PABNA DHANABHANDAR CO., LTD. Cal. 991

———One member surrendering rights by release deed in favour of Receiver—Subsequent attachment of his share by creditor—Whether confers additional rights paramount to those of Receiver.

Where a member of a joint Hindu family firm which has been adjudicated insolvent surrenders his rights by a deed of release in favour of the Receiver, the subsequent attachment of his supposed interest cannot confer upon the attaching creditor any additional right which would be paramount to the rights of the Receiver. BHAGWAN DAS v. LAKSHMI CHAND All. 661

———Trust Deed executed by insolvent—Receiver in insolvency—Whether can deal with property comprised in trust—Property, if subject to be administered by Receiver on behalf of general body of creditors—Assets, if can be administered by Receiver in terms of trust deed.

Where property of the insolvent is comprised in a trust deed, it is not the insolvent's property but is vested in the trustees, it is not competent for the Receiver in insolvency to deal with the property in any way. After the execution of the trust deed the insolvent has no interest in the properties comprised therein and consequently, they never vest in the Insolvency—concld.

Receiver in insolvency and are not subject to be administered by him on behalf of the general body of creditors. Nor has the Receiver in insolvency any right to administer the assets in accordance with terms of the trust. H. HUNTER v. KANIZ ABID
P. C. 426

Interest.
SEE Costs 769
SEE Promissory note 164
——— Interest charged at end of each year after deducting counter-interest— Each party charging interest on overdrawings of the other—Compound interest, if to be allowed.
Where the accounts themselves showed that whenever accounts were settled at the end of each year the parties have charged interest on the overdrawings of each partner, and at the various stages of the case each side was insisting upon the payment of counter-interest on the footing that he was going to recover some amount :
Held, that in these circumstances the plaintiff was entitled to compound interest on the principal charged. SIVAGNANATHAMMAL v. NALLAPERUMAL PILLAI
Mad. 783
———Suit for breach of trust against trustee—Accounts not rendered properly—Liability for interest. SEE Trusts Act, 1882, ss. 19, 23, 37, 62
359

Interpretation of Statutes. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 562 697 F B ———Court's duty to examine language of Statute without any reference to English Law.
In interpreting the statutory provisions of an Indian Act the Courts should examine the language of the Indian Statute itself uninfluenced by any consideration derived from the English Law on which it might have been based. DIWAN SINGH v EMPEROR Nag. 450 ——— Interpretation by Courts conflicting—Amendment of statute.
The legislature must be taken to be aware of the interpretation of the statute enacted by them by the Courts ; and if they find that the interpretations by Courts of Justice are not in conformity with their intention, they should amend it to bring it in conformity with their intention. SOURENDRA MOHAN SINHA v. SECRETARY OF STATE Pat. 1099 ———Language and plain meaning to be examined.
In arriving at a conclusion as to the meaning of an enactment, the proper course is in the first place to examine the language of the statute and ask what is its plain meaning and not to start arguing how the law previously stood. FIRM OF MURLIMAL SANTRAM v. BANARSIDAS & SONS Sind 895 ———Language of Statute should not be departed from.
It is not permissible to depart from the language of a Statute unless there are strong and adequate grounds for it. The functions of a Court of law are merely to interpret the Statute and not to legislate. MOHAMMAD YAKUB KHAN v. AZIZ-UN-NISSA
Oudh 1076
———Marginal note—When can be referred to.
Where a marginal note has been inserted by or under the authority of the legislature, it can be referred to for an exposition of the meaning of the section. ABDUL HAKIM v FOZU MIA Cal. 1003 ———Plain wording of section to be followed.
The sections of an Act must be interpreted on the basis of the plain wordings of the sections themselves. The Legislature must be taken to have meant what they have said and not what they contemplated to say but did not say. RAM RANBIJAY PRASAD SINGH v. RAMGIRBI RAI Pat. 902 S. B.
———Positive enactment—Meaning to be ascertained uninfluenced by previous law or English law.
When there is a positive enactment of the Indian Legislature, the proper course is to examine the language of the statute and to ascertain its proper meaning uninfluenced by any considerations derived from the previous state of the law or of the English law on which it may be founded. DIWAN CHAND v. MANAK CHAND Lah. 938 ———Title and preamble—Enacting part not ambiguous—Whether can be restricted by title and preamble.
The title and preamble of a statute may be relied upon as aids to the understanding of the meaning thereof, or for determining the general object and intention of the legislature in passing the enactment. They may legitimately be consulted for the purpose of solving any ambiguity, or for fixing the meaning of words which may have more than one meaning, or for keeping the effect of the Act within its real scope, but with the important proviso that this can only be done when the enacting part is open to doubt in any of these respects. When the language, object and the scope of the Act are not open to doubt, the enacting part cannot be restricted, extended or modified by reference either to the title or preamble. There is no authority for the suggestion that the preamble of an Act is exhaustive ; it cannot be questioned that there are many Acts wherein a particular mischief or inconvenience is recited in the preamble, but in which the provisions extend far beyond that particular mischief or inconvenience. The evil recited may be the chief motive for the legislation, but the remedy may consistently and wisely be extended beyond the cure of that evil. ABDULLAH KHAN v. BAHRAM KHAN Pesh. 1022

Jurisdiction. SEE Promissory note 164 ———Question of jurisdiction not raised in trial Court—Held, it cannot be raised in appeal.
The plaintiffs filed a suit at Shikarpur against their father and brothers who were residing at Saikarpur and the founder and trustees of Dev Samaj, who resided at Lahore. Some of the immovable property in dispute was situated in Quetta. The plaintiffs sought the following reliefs, among others, for declaration: (1) that the releass-deed executed by their father and their uncle in favour of their grand-father who was dead was of no effect against the sons or grandsons, or at any rate, against the grand sons ; (2) that the partition effected by the grand-father and his sons be set aside as being unfair, or, in the alternative the same be re-opened ; (3) that they had subsisting share in the foreign property and (4) that the trust created by their grandfather did not affect their interest and (5) that they be awarded mesne profits of their share in such foreign property :
Held, that (1) so far as that relief went, a British Indian Court would have had jurisdiction to entertain it in personam and although a part of the property which was the subject-matter of partition was situate outside, the title to such foreign property was only incidentally and not directly in issue.
(2) The declaratory decree, if any, passed against the Dev Samaj would operate as res judicata against them in any suit filed on the strength thereof in the Quetta Court as they were not only British Indian subjects but they had voluntarily submitted to the jurisdiction of the trial Court.

Jurisdiction—contd.

(3) Since a British Indian Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit as regards some reliefs, the Dev Samaj were barred by the provisions of s. 21, Civil Procedure Code, from raising an objection in appeal as to the place in British India where this suit should have been instituted. They could not say that the suit should have been filed at Lahore and not at Shikarpur, and as some of the defendants resided at Shikarpur, the Shikarpur Court was competent to grant leave to the plaintiffs to continue the suit in that Court against defendants who were not residing within its jurisdiction if the plea had been raised at proper time. DEV SAMAJ COUNCIL, LAHORE v. AMRITLAL MOTILAL Sind 677

———Suit filed in Civil Court—Plea that suit was not cognizable in Civil Court—Whether can be raised for first time in Letters Patent Appeal.

Where the plaintiffs file a suit on the allegation that a certain grove was in the possession of the defendants, and choose the Civil Court as the forum, it must be assumed against them that they treated the property as if it was not land within the meaning of the Agra Tenancy Act. A plea that the grove was a tenant's grove and the suit was not cognizable in the Civil Court cannot be entertained for the first time in a Letters Patent Appeal. ANRUDH RAI v. SANT PRASAD RAI All. 569 ———Suit for possession—Land situated in Sub-Division D—Suit filed in Court in M sitting at P—Establishment of Court at D in M District—Execution—Court in M sitting at P, if has jurisdiction to execute decree—Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act (XII of 1887), s 3.

A suit was instituted by the appellants in the year 1911 in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of M (who at that time sat at P), for possession of certain lands situated in the Sub-Division of D and for mesne profits. The suit was decreed, but an appeal by the respondents to the High Court was successful and the judgment of the High Court was affirmed by the Privy Council. The suit was accordingly dismissed with costs. In the month of February 1931, the respondents, the present decree-holders, applied for execution in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of M sitting at P. Since 1911, when the suit was begun, by an order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bihar and Orissa in 1917, a Subordinate Judge's Court was established at D in the District of M and the local limits of his jurisdiction ceased to be included in the local limits of the Subordinate Judge of P from October 31, 1917. The respondents decree holders sought to sell in execution lands situated in the Sub-Division of P, that is to say, outside the Sub Division of D. The appellants judgment-debtors resisted the execution on the ground that the proper Court in which to institute an execution case was that of the Additional Subordinate Judge of D and argued that the Subordinate Judge sitting at P had no proper jurisdiction though it was admitted that the case might afterwards be transferred to him :

Held, that the effect of the Notification was not to transfer the jurisdiction of the Court sitting at P to the Court sitting at D, but to divide the jurisdiction of the Subordinate Judge in the District of M, and that the mere fact that for administrative purposes the Court of the Subordinate Judge was now divided between the Subordinate Judge and an Additional Subordinate Judge and that a certain class of business or an area was allotted to the Additional Subordinate Judge did not make the Court of the Subordinate Judge sitting at P any the less the Court of the Subordinate Judge of M nor did it prevent it from executing the decree. The decree-holder had always the right to apply as of course to the Court which passed the decree for its execution even if it be in respect of property outside the territorial jurisdiction of such Court and even if execution by such Court can be no more than execution by transmission to another Court. CHANDMAL MARWARI v. SHIB PRASAD SINGH Pat. 769

Jurisdiction—concld.

———Suit relating immovable property in foreign country.

Like Courts in England, the Courts in India have a limited jurisdiction to entertain suits relating to foreign immovable property. These Courts have power to exercise a jurisdiction in personam, in respect of foreign immovables against persons locally within their jurisdiction, in cases where there is an equity between the parties arising from contract, fraud, or trust, provided that the decision of title be not directly involved. But such an equity must be of a personal nature, i. e., there must be either a fiduciary relationship or privity of some other kind between the parties. DEV SAMAJ COUNCIL, LAHORE v. AMRITLAL MOTILAL Sind 677

———U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 233 (m)—Suit for recovery of amounts realisable by the Collector from a person on a requisition to the Collector by the Registrar, Co-operative Societies—Whether entertainable by Civil Court.

No suit can be brought into the Civil Court for recovery of an amount realisable by the Collector from a person on a requisition to the Collector by the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, as that is a sum recoverable in the same manner as arrears of Land Revenue, for s. 233 (m) of the Land Revenue Act bars institution of such a suit. KHUD MUKHTAR BANK, UTRAWAN v BHAGWAN DIN Oudh 92

———Valuation—Objection as to valuation, if can be raised for first time in execution

It is not open to the parties during the course of the execution proceedings to raise an objection for the first time regarding the under-valuation or over-valuation of a suit. A person who has himself given the valuation during execution proceedings cannot contend that he had under-valued his application for the filing of the award, which has to be regarded as a plaint in a regular suit. GIAN CHAND v. CHARANJI LAL Lah. 229

———What constitutes—Erroneous order, if can be attacked collaterally.

Jurisdiction is the power to hear and decide and the power to decide is the power to decide erroneously as well as correctly. Consequently, unless an order has been vacated, it is operative between the parties and cannot be ignored and challenged collaterally in different proceedings. FIRM OF MURLIMAL SANTRAM v. BANARSIDAS & SONS Sind 895

Jury trial—Misdirection. SEE Penal Code, 1860, s. 366 662

Karachi Small Causes Courts Act (IV of 1929), s. 32—Section covers any order in any case—Application on pure question of fact, whether, precluded.

By a plain reading of s. 32, Karachi Small Causes Courts Act, there is nothing whatsoever to warrant the interpretation that it covers only "final orders." It is wide enough to cover any order in any case.

Words "according to law" would preclude a multiplicity of applications on questions of pure fact unless substantial injustice has resulted. FIRM MURLIMAL SANTRAM v. BANARSIDAS & SONS Sind 895

Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), s. 23—U. P. Town Improvement Act (VIII of 1919), s. 10 (3) (a)—Compensation, method of calculation—Acquisition of bazar—Principles for assessment—Market value—Compensation is not to be calculated on basis of gross collections.

It is not possible to lay down any general method of valuation in calculating the amount of compensation to be paid in a land acquisition case under the U. P. Town Improvement Act as it is necessary to take the circumstances of each property into consideration in determining the suitable basis of compensation. Where the property is a bazar and the income of the property by its nature is of a fluctuating character, it is necessary to employ a costly staff for making realisations from day to day from the various stall keepers in the bazar, consider able vigilance is required on the part of the collection staff to prevent evasion of payments and close supervision is also necessary in order to prevent embezzlements by the staff entrusted with the realisation of these dues In such circumstances taking into consideration the use to which the land was put at the time of the acquisition, it is difficult to think that any buyer would have been prepared to purchase the property on the basis of the gross collections without making any allowance for the expenditure necessary for making collections. It will, in such case, be most unfair in calculating the compensation on the basis of gross collections. ROSHAN JAHAN BEGAM v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA Oudh 579

———ss 23, 27—Land acquisition proceedings—Contract between Municipality and claimant—Enquiry into, legality of.

In proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act, the Land Acquisition Officer and the Court dealing with the matter on a reference from him have only to decide the market value of the property, subject to the considerations mentioned in s 23 and the following sections. Neither he nor the Court has got the power to enforce a contract which the claimant and a Municipality might have entered into in respect of the lands acquired. DAWOOD SAH B v. COLLECTOR OF CHINGLEPUT Mad. 280

——— s. 32—Compensation—Money invested in securities 20 years before—Re-investment—President's discretion—How used.

It is not incumbent on the President of the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal under s. 32, Land Acquisition Act, to direct a re-investment in land, the investment having been made so far back as 20 years in approved Government securities. The matter rests in his discretion but the discretion must be exercised on correct judicial principles. One of the elements which should be taken into account in the exercise of such discretion is, as to whether the parties who are vitally interested in the compensation money, have really asked for a re-investment in land. SARALA DEBI v. PRESIDENT, CALCUTTA IMPROVEMENT TRIBUNAL Cal. 999

Land Acquisition proceedings—Costs of Collector—Liability of claimant. SEE Costs 280

Landlord and tenant—Claim for additional rent on ground of excess area—Onus—Presumption that standard of measurement prevalent when Record of Rights is finally published is also standard at inception of tenancy.

In a suit for additional rent for excess area the burden of proving that the defendants are holding excess land for which they are liable to an additional rent is in the first instance on the landlord. In such a case the plaintiff is entitled to the benefit of the presumption that the standard of measurement which was prevalent at the date when the Record of Rights was finally published, was also the standard of measurement at the inception of the tenancy. GOPI KRISHNA SAHA v. SURENDRA NATH CHAUDHURY Cal. 154

———Disclaimer in cases not covered by Transfer of Property Act.

There can be no forfeiture by disclaimer in cases not covered by the Transfer of Property Act unless the disclaimer is in matter of record. RACHOTAPPA ISHVARAPPA v KONHER ANNARAO DESHPANDE Bom. 516

———Forfeiture—Tenancies before Transfer of Property Act and those excepted from its operation—Applicability of English Law—Forfeiture by matter in pais of English Law—Applicability in India.

The principles of English Law as to forfeiture apply both to tenancies created before the Act came into force and to those excepted from its operation.

The English Law as to forfeiture by matter in pais does not apply in India at all. RACHOTAPPA ISHVARAPPA v. KONHER ANNARAO DESHPANDE Bom. 516

———Forfeiture, when works—Denial of landlord's title—Forfeiture—Principles—Power of Court to relieve against forfeiture.

The principle underlying the rule that disclaimer of the landlord's title by his tenant works a forfeiture of the tenancy is the principle of estoppel or the principle that a man cannot approbate and reprobate.

A person who has lawfully come into possession of land as tenant cannot, by setting up, during the continuance of such relation, any title adverse to that of the landlord, inconsistent with the real legal relation between them, acquire by the operation of the law of limitation, title as owner or any other title inconsistent with that under which he was let into possession.

The power of the Courts in India to relieve against forfeiture arising by disclaimer on grounds of justice, equity and good conscience is not necessarily limited to the cases where the tenant establishes that the denial was occasioned by fraud, mistake or accident on the part of the landlord, and the tenant was neither careless nor negligent. RACHOTAPPA ISHVARAPPA v. KONHER ANNARAO DESHPANDE Bom. 516 ———Lump rental tenancy—Landlord deliberately and forcibly expelling tenant from part of demised premises—Tenant, if can suspend entire payment of rent.

Where the rent is a lump rental and the case one of deliberate and forcible expulsion of a tenant from a part of the demised premises, no question of equity to an apportionment can possibly arise, and the tenant is entitled to entire suspension of rent till he is restored to possession of the dispossessed portion MAMAMMAD ALI FAKIR v. KARAM ALI TALUQDAR Cal. 506

——— Rent not enhanced for hundred years—Presumption of fixity of rent, if arises.

The mere fact that the tenant only claimed that rent was not enhanced for hundred years is not enough to prove that the holding was at a fixed rent inasmuch as after the preparation of the Record of Rights the presumption for fixity of rent on account of there being no change for twenty years is no longer available to the tenant. RAM RANBIJAI PRASAD SINGH v RAMGIRBI RAI Pat 802 F. B.

———Tenancy, proof of—Suit by tenant against trespasser—Proof, whether sufficient if tenant proves that landlord received rent from him.

Landlord and tenant—concld.

A tenancy can be proved by documentary or oral evidence.

In a suit for possession by a tenant against a trespasser in order to succeed, the plaintiff is not bound to prove the terms of the tenancy. If he can simply prove that the landlord had accepted rent from them, that would be quite sufficient for the purpose of maintaining a suit against the trespasser. SUNDAR ALI v. NUR MAMUD Cal. 733 ——Trees planted by zemindar and standing in holding of tenants—Right of zemindar to timber of trees—Fruits of trees—Right of tenants, in absence of contract to contrary.

When a land is let out to a tenant by a zemindar it is to be presumed that it is let out with the trees. If there was any contract to the contrary reserving the right to appropriate the fruits of the trees standing on the land for the zemindar, it is for the zemindar to set up and prove that contract. Consequently in the absence of any contract to the contrary the tenants on whose land the tree is standing have a right to appropriate its fruits. But the timber of trees planted by the zemindar before land is let out to tenant and standing on the holdings of tenants, whether occupancy or ex-proprietary tenants, belongs to the zemindar. JAGAI KURMI v. HARAKH RAJ SINGH All. 116

Lease—Construction—Property usufructuarily mortgaged—Same property leased to mortgagor—Collateral security clause in lease deed—Suit for rent after more than 12 years—Held, mortgagor was holding over as tenant and rent could be recovered for three years prior to suit—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 116.

The defendant created usufructuary mortgage of his property in favour of the plaintiff on January 18, 1911. The mortgagee-plaintiff instead of actually taking possession of property, granted a lease of the same property to the defendant on January 19, 1911, on a fixed annual rent, payable up to the time of the redemption of the "othi" which was for two years according to the mortgage agreement. The lease deed contained a collateral agreement by way of mortgage under which the property was offered for security for payment of rent due under the lease. Certain amount, towards the rent due under the lease was paid by the mortgagor in 1916, and accepted by the mortgagee. After a period of 12 years, the present suit was brought by the mortgagee for recovery of the sum alleged to be due under the lease deed:

Held, that the usufructuary mortgage deed and the lease deed were parts of the same transaction, and the lease was for a period of two years only and the continuance of possession after the expiration of this period of two years, by the mortgagor must be taken to be that of a tenant holding over on the original terms of the lease.

Held, also that the collateral security clause in the lease-deed not being any part of the terms which constituted the transaction of the lease, the clause could not be carried over after the determination of the lease, i. e., two years.

Held, further that the plaintiff could recover the rent due for three years prior to suit only. GNANADESIKAM PILLAI v. ANTONY BENATHU BOOPALARAYAR Mad 838

Legal Practitioner—Counsel's duty towards client and Court—Whether can make serious allegation in written statement against party on advice of client—Pleadings.

Per Thom, J.—No Counsel is entitled to frame a serious charge against a party to a litigation unless he is in possession of admissible and relevant evidence upon which, if accepted, Counsel could reasonably ask the Court to hold the allegations true. It may well be that the evidence in support of the allegations is untrue and it is certainly not the duty of a Counsel in the ordinary course to test the truth of the witnesses whom he intends to put into the witness-box but at the conclusion of the evidence which he has led he should be in a position to submit as a reasonable proposition to the Court that the evidence which he has led, if accepted, establishes the allegations for which he had made himself responsible. If he is not in possession of such evidence to support them he is not entitled to make grave and serious allegations.

Legal Practitioner—contd.

Per Iqbal Ahmad, J.—It is imperative in the interest of administration of justice that too rigid a test of the conduct of an Advocate in the matter of drafting pleadings should not be emphasized and that the test should be such as not to deter a Counsel from fearlessly placing before the Court such allegations as their clients instruct them to make, so long as those allegations do not appear manifestly reckless and unfounded. It is no doubt the duty of Counsel to use their own judgment, experience and discretion and not to make irrelevant or unduly insulting allegations in the pleadings but it is equally their duty to embody the case of their clients in the pleadings fearlessly provided the instructions received from clients justify the case embodied in the pleadings. While on the one hand a Counsel is expected to be careful and not reckless in drafting the pleadings he cannot, on the other hand, assume the role of a Judge and refuse to embody allegations that his client instructs him to make unless and until he has examined the evidence on the subject. A Counsel is in one sense the mouthpiece of his client, but he does not guarantee or pledge himself for his client's veracity.

Per Allsop, J.—On the one hand Counsel must look to the interests of his client and not be deterred by fear or favour from making any allegations which in those interests it is necessary for him to make. On the other hand, he cannot take shelter behind his client and claim to be an entirely irresponsible instrument in his client's hands. There remains in him a duty and an obligation to his fellow citizens and he is certainly not entitled to make scandalous and serious allegations against those fellow citizens unless he has some basis upon which the allegations can be grounded.

Held, that no action was to be taken against the Advocate, in the circumstances. In the matter of AN ADVOCATE, CAWNPORE All. 1043 S. B.

——Premature threat from Bench—Pleader's duty to protest then and there and apply for transfer—Compromise—Pleader settling case on such threat—Compromise to be set aside.

It is the duty of members of the Bar, if their clients are threatened prematurely from the Bench not to adopt an attitude which may be described as pusillanimous, but protest then and there that they resent such observations; and after consulting with their Attorney instructing them it may become necessary for them to apply for a transfer of the case to the list of another Judge.

Where soon after the premature threatening of his clients by the Bench, the Pleader consented to settle the case:

Held, that the Counsel was intimidated and was not free to consider the whole aspect of the settlement from an unbiased point of view, and that the Legal Practitioner—concld.

Court had an inherent power to set aside this settlement. MOUSELL & Co. LTD. v. GHANSHYAMDAS JAMNADAS Cal. 297

Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879), ss. 12, 13. SEE Legal Practitioners Act, 1879, s 14 430 S B.

———ss. 14, 12, 13—*Legal practitioner becoming surety for accused persons — Propriety of—Court refusing to accept a person as surety—*Mukhtear standing surety and entering into contract of indemnity with that person—Forfeiture of bail bond—Attempt at concealment of true facts—Conduct of mukhtear, if unprofessional Suspension from practice—Propriety.

There is nothing against a legal practitioner becoming a surety for accused persons. But where a mukhtear enters into an agreement, with a person whose security the Court has refused to accept, to the effect that the amount deposited by that person with the mukhtear would indemnify the latter if he suffered any loss on account of the bail bond being forfeited, and the bail bond is forfeited and the mukhtear tries to conceal the above facts from the Court, the contract of indemnity is a public mischief, is highly unprofessional and is unquestionably illegal, being against public policy as it hampers the administration of justice. The further attempt at concealment of the agreement at the early stages of the proceedings is a serious aggravation of the crime. [In such circumstances the mukhtear was ordered to be suspended for three months.] In the matter of SURAJ NARAIN Pat. 430 S. B.

Letters Patent (Patna), cl. 33—Jurisdiction exercised by High Court in reference for confirmation—Nature of—Petitioners having no right of appeal under cl. 33 or Privy Council Act—Whether can proceed direct to Privy Council for royal prerogative—Leave or certificate of High Court, if necessary.

The jurisdiction exercised by the High Court in a reference for confirmation of death sentence is of an appellate character and can in no sense be said to be of an original nature.

Where, therefore, there is no right of appeal granted by the Letters Patent or under the Privy Council Act, those who desire to appeal must have recourse to the prerogative and approach His Majesty in Council direct for leave to present their case. In such cases, that is to say, where an appeal is presented for the exercise of the royal prerogative, either leave or a certificate from the tribunal which passed the appellate decision is not required as a preliminary step. They can proceed direct, without an intermediate application to the High Court, to His Majesty in Council and there obtain leave to present their case. RAHMAN v. EMPEROR Pat. 577 ———cl. 33, strict construction—Necessity of.

The wording of cl. 33, Letters Patent (Patna) is very precise and mus be strictly construed. RAHMAN v EMPEROR Pat. 577

Limitation—Discretion of Court to relieve decree-holders in cases of hardship—Whether exists—Duty of Court to notice the Act and give effect to it even if not referred to in pleadings.

There is no authority to support the proposition that there is some sort of judicial discretion which would enable the Court to relieve the decree-holders from the operation of the Limitation Act in a case of hardship, particularly when it is alleged that the decree-holder was in regard to the proceedings which he took by way of execution in some way misled by some mistake in the form of the preliminary decree. It is impossible to hold that, in a matter which is governed by Act, an Act which in some limited respects gives the Court a statutory discretion, there can be implied in the Court, outside the limits of the Act, a general discretion to dispense with its provisions. Section 3 of the Act is peremptory and the duty of the Court is to notice the Act and give effect to it, even though it is not referred to in the pleadings. MAQBUL AHMAD v. ONKAR PRATAP NARAIN SINGH P. C 205 ———Suit attacking wills — Plaint cleverly worded to avoid limitation—Limitation, if can thus be voided.

Where the suit in substance is a suit attacking the will, it is not open to the plaintiffs by cleverly wording their plaint to avoid the proper limitation for the suit MOHAMMAD ALI KHAN v. ANWAR HUSSAIN Lah. 1104

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 2. SEE Easement 966

——— s. 2—Easement whether includes profit a prendre.

What is known as profit in England is included in India in the term 'easement' in s. 2 of the Limitation Act of 1903. JANGBAHADUR SINGH v THITHAR SINGH Pat. 966

———s. 3. SEE Limitation Act, 1903, s 4 205

———s 4—Scope of.

The provision in s. 4 means the proper Court in which the application ought to have been made and when it is impossible to say that the application was made to the proper Court on the day on which that Court re-opened, s. 4 will not apply. MAQBUL AHMAD v. ONKAR PRATAP NARAIN SINGH P. C. 205 ———ss. 4 and 14, distinction between—Computation under s. 14—How to be made—Period of long vacation—When can be deducted.

There is a marked distinction in form between ss. 4 and 14. The language employed in s. 4 indicates that it has nothing to do with computing the prescribed period. Where there is ground for excluding certain periods under s. 14, in order to ascertain what is the date of the expiration of the prescribed period, the days excluded from operating by way of limitation have to be added to what is primarily the prescribed period. MAQBUL AHMAD v. ONKAR PRATAP NARAIN SINGH P. C 205 ———ss. 4, 14, 3, Sch. I, Art. 181—Application for execution of final mortgage decree—Time during which preliminary decree was executed—Whether can be deducted in computing limitation.

It cannot be said, apart from any other objection, that an application to obtain execution under a preliminary mortgage decree is an application for the same relief as the application to the Court for a final mortgage decree for sale in the suit. Consequently, it is not permissible, on the basis of s. 14, Limitation Act, in computing the period of limitation prescribed for an application for execution, to exclude the period during which the decree-holder was seeking execution under the preliminary decree. MAQBLUL AHMAD v. ONKAR PRATAP NARAIN SINGH P. C. 205

———s. 5.

SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXII, r. 3 610
SEE Execution 503

———s. 5—Appeal not filed in time due to fraud by Counsel's clerk—If sufficient reason for extension of time

Where an appeal is not filed in time due to a deliberate fraud of the Counsel's clerk and there is no fault on the part of the client who has paid everything required to be paid by him or on the part of the Counsel who trusted his clerk, there is sufficient reason for the extension of time under s. 5, Limitation Act. ALLAH WADHAYA v. FIRM HAJI MUHAMMAD RAMZAN-AMIR-UD-DIN Lah. 135

Limitation Act—contd.

——— s. 5—Appeal within time—Absence of names of parties in power-of-attorney—Defect pointed by office after limitation—Defect removed—Extension of time, if can be given.

Where the power-of-attorney in favour of the Counsel for the appellants did not give the names of the parties at the time of filing the appeal but the defect was removed on the office pointing it out after the expiry of limitation :

Held, that the appeal could not be said to be barred by time. At any rate it was a fit case for extension of time under s. 5, Limitation Act KANSHI RAM v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, MOGA Lah. 893

——— ss 5, 12 —Condonation of delay in filing application must be specifically asked for—Figures in copy of judgment—Presumption of correctness.

Where delay in filing an application for review is caused by the supply of wrong information on the part of the copying department which resulted in delay in getting the copy of the decree a person making the application is not entitled to deduction of time under s. 12, Limitation Act, as of right. He has to satisfy the Court that the wrong information was given in circumstances for which he was not responsible, and if the Court is satisfied as to the justness of his contention the Court will then extend the time under s 5, Limitation Act. Where the appeal on the face of it is time-barred it is the duty of the applicant to append to his appeal the reason for the delay and to ask for condonation of the delay under s. 5 of the Limitation Act.

An appellant is entitled to presume the accuracy of the figures which are given him in the copy of the judgment. BALWANTRAO v. BALMUKUND Nag. 588

——— s. 6, Sch. I, Arts. 125, 120—Suit for declaration after death of widows whose alienation is challenged—Limitation—Minority of plaintiff—Suit within three years of majority — Plaintiff, if entitled to benefit of s. 6.

A suit for a declaration filed after the death of the widows whose alienation is challenged does not fall under Art 125, Limitation Act, but is governed by Art. 120 under which Article read with s. 6, the plaintiff will be entitled to bring his suit within three years of his attaining majority. SITAL RAUT v. ADALAT RAUT Pat. 244

——— s. 7—Hindu Law—Joint family—Suit by member against stranger transferee from manager — Stranger setting up title by adverse possession—Time run out against manager—Existence of minor members—Whether saves limitation.

A suit brought by one member of a family against a transferee from the manager raises a question as to the authority of the manager, and in that sense, involves a dispute as to the respective rights of the members of the family inter se. The nature of such a suit is obviously distinguishable from that of a suit brought against a person, who is an entire stranger to the family, who does not claim title through any member of the family and who is setting up his adverse possession as a paramount title. In such cases the manager of the joint Hindu family represents the family as one unit and if time has run out against the manager, limitation is not saved merely because there are some minor members still living. The provisions of s. 7, Limitation Act, do not apply to such a suit. ANRUDH RAI v. SANT PRASAD RAI All. 569

——— s. 9. SEE Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, Art. 23 706

——— s. 12. SEE Limitation Act, 1908, s. 5 588

——— s 14

SEE Limitation Act, 1908, s 4 205

SEE Limitation Act, 1908, Sch, I, Art. 97 1092

——— s. 18, Sch. I, Art. 10 —Fraud—Mere suggestion of fraud is not enough—Nature of fraud to be proved under s. 18.

Where a suit is on the face of it barred, it is for the plaintiff to prove in the first instance the circumstances which would prevent the statute from having its ordinary effect. A person, who, in such circumstances, desires to invoke the aid of s. 18, Limitation Act, must establish that there has been fraud, and that, by means of such fraud, he has been kept from the knowledge of his right to sue, or of the title whereon it is founded. Once this is established, the burden is shifted on to the other side to show that the plaintiff had knowledge of the transaction beyond the period of limitation. Such knowledge must be clear and definite knowledge of the facts constituting the particular fraud. Mere suggestions of fraud do not amount to such knowledge as is required by s. 18 of the Limitation Act. BHAGWANA v SHADI Lah. 654

——— s. 19.

SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. VII, r. 6 819

SEE Mortgage 576

s. 19—Acknowledgment containing words "dewne kite" — Whether promise to pay within Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 25—Extrinsic evidence to explain acknowledgment—Admissibility of—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 96.

The words "4,019-11-6 lekhe baki dewne kite" in an acknowledgment can be reasonably construed as a promise to pay, within the meaning of s. 25, Contract Act.

According to Explanation I to s. 19, Limitation Act, it is not necessary that the writing itself should specify the exact nature of the property or right in respect of which liability is acknowledged and there is to be no bar to extrinsic evidence being admitted for the purpose. NIHALU RAM CHELA RAM v. RADHU RAM HUKMI RAM Lah. 1074

——— s. 19—Document denying and repudiating liability to pay, whether sufficient to extend limitation.

Whether a particular document or letter amounts to an acknowledgment of liability or not within the meaning of s. 19, Limitation Act, must depend upon the terms thereof Under the Indian statute there need not be a promise to pay, but the document in question must, on a fair reading, amount to an admission of liability, absolute or conditional, and in the latter case the condition must be fulfilled. But where the letter or the document relied upon expressly states that there is no liability, and the liability is in fact denied and repudiated, limitation cannot be said to be extended under s. 19 of the Limitation Act. DEBJI GHELABHAI & BROTHERS v. R. D. MEHTA & CO. ASANSOL Cal. 721

——— s. 20—Payment as a matter of grace and not towards admitted debt—Limitation, if saved.

Limitation is not saved by a payment made as a matter of grace and not towards any admitted debt. SITA RAM v. MAHMUDI BEGAM Lah. 238

——— s. 20—Written statement cannot be called in aid for purpose of s. 20.

Limitation Act—contd.

A written statement filed in the suit itself cannot be called in aid for the purposes of s. 20 of the Limitation Act. When the plaintiff institutes the suit beyond the period of limitation prescribed in the Schedule to the Limitation Act, he has to state in his plaint the reasons why the suit is still within time. If there is no such statement the Court has to dismiss the suit. A suit must be tried on the cause of action as laid in the plaint and any inherent defect of the said nature in the plaint cannot be supplied by a written statement in the suit. DEBJI GHELABHAI & BROTHERS v R. D. MEHTA & Co., ASANSOL Cal. 721

——— —s 26. SEE Easement 966

——— s. 28—Applicability. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 145 1024

——— s. 28—Scope of.

Section 28 of the Limitation Act provides that after the expiry of the period prescribed for instituting a suit for possession of any property, the person who should have instituted such suit but has failed to do so, shall cease to have any right to the property. There cannot be a revival of title of which there has been a statutory extinguishment. NANDO KAHAR v. BHUP NARAIN SINGH Pat.. 1094

——— Sch. I, Art. 2—'In pursuance of an enactment', meaning of—Person honestly believing that he is acting under some enactment—Protection of—Police constable making report against plaintiff—Suit for damages—Proof that defendant acted honestly on some information received—Necessity of, for protection of Art 2—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 44.

The words 'in pursuance of an enactment' in Art. 2, Limitation Act, must be interpreted as meaning acting in conformity with an enactment and not merely pretending to act or acting under colour of such an enactment. Where a person honestly believes that he is acting under some enactment, he is protected. But where a person merely pretends that he was so acting and knows that he should not act under that enactment, he cannot be said to be acting in pursuance of any such enactment. No doubt under s. 44 of the Criminal Procedure Code, it is the duty of every person to make a report to the Police the commission of certain specified offences, but there is no such duty cast upon a citizen, much less a Police Officer, to make such a report when no facts exist He would certainly not be acting in pursuance of s. 44 of the Criminal Procedure Code, if he concocts a purely false story and then makes a report of such a false story, knowing it to be false.

Consequently, where a defendant has done an act or omitted to do an act, knowing that he had no ground whatsoever for so acting or omitting to do an act, he does not come within the purview of Art. 2. It is only defendants who have acted honestly, although they might have exceeded the actual power conferred upon them by an enactment who would be protected. Of course, where it is established that the act done was in strict accordance with an enactment, there would be an obvious protection. But even where the power was exceeded, there would be protection in cases of good faith and bona fide belief.

Thus where a suit is filed for damages on the ground that the defendant, a Police Constable, who cherished a grudge against the plaintiff, made a false report at the Police Station stating that the plaintiff was leading a riotous mob, if the defendant were to satisfy the Court that at the time when he made the report he acted honestly on some information received, he would be protected, even though the report might turn out to be absolutely false but not so to the knowledge of the defendant. SHIAM LAL v. ABDUL RAOF All. 131 F B.

Limitation Act—contd.

——— Sch. I, Arts. 7, 36, 102, 120, 124—Suit by archaka against trustees for recovery of emoluments—Limitation—Article applicable—Archaka, status of—'Wages', meaning of.

An archaka is a servant of the temple trustees and the perquisites or emoluments received by him are 'wages' within the meaning of Art. 102 of the Limitation Act. A suit by an archaka against the trustees for recovery of emoluments due to him is, therefore, governed by Art. 102 of the Limitation Act and not by Art. 120 or Art. 36. VEDAGIRI SASTRIAR v. JAGATHGURU SANKARACHARIAR Mad. 591 ——— ——— Arts. 7, 102—Distinction.

Article 7 and Art. 102 deal with different classes of wage-earners. The former deals with a lower class of wage-earner than that dealt with by Art. 102. VEDAGIRI SASTRIAR v JAGATHGURU SANKARACHARIAR Mad. 591

——— ——— Art. 10. SEE Limitation Act, 1908, s. 18 654

——— ——— Art. 11-A— Proceedings under O. XXI, r. 97, Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908)—Held, there was sufficient investigation.

In proceedings under O. XXI, r. 97, Civil Procedure Code, the auction-purchaser was present but did not adduce evidence; the opposite party examined only one witness; there was no opposition regarding another lot and the Court passed an order:

Held, that there was an investigation or an inquiry by the Court, so as to bring it under Art. 11-A, Limitation Act. HARI SADAY SAHA v. MAHENDRA NARAIN RAJ Cal. 702 ——— ——— Art. 23, s. 9—Acquittal of plaintiff—Suit for damages for malicious prosecution—Limitation, when commences—Application for revision—Fresh period for bringing suit—Whether begins to accrue.

So far as the first portion of Art 23 of the Limitation Act is concerned, the limitation for filing a suit for compensation for malicious prosecution is one year from the date when the plaintiff is acquitted. The fact that the defendant files an application for revision against the order of acquittal obtained by the plaintiff in his favour does not enable the latter to assert that though time had once begun to run against him from the date of the order of his acquittal, yet, as he had to contest the application for revision filed against the order of acquittal, as fresh period of limitation for bringing his suit for damages began to accrue to him. SHANKAR PRASAD v. SHEO NARAIN Oudh 706

——— ——— Art. 36. SEE Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, Art 7 591

——— ——— Art. 47—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 145—Proceedings under, decided in favour of defendant No. 2—Defendant No. 1 bringing suit for possession three years after—Suit decreed—Plaintiff resisting possession—Resistance ineffectual—Suit by plaintiff for declaration of title and recovery of possession—Suit, whether barred—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 100.

Section 145 (6) of the Code of Criminal Procedure provides that if the Magistrate decided that one of the parties was or should be treated as being in possession of the land in dispute he shall issue an order declaring such party to be entitled to possession thereof until evicted therefrom in due course of law. Thus if the successful party is evicted by means of a suit by a person other than the parties to the proceeding within the period of three years, the order of the Magistrate being rendered ineffectual, the shorter period of limitation ceases to run against the unsuccessful party, and there can be no room left for the application of Art. 47, Limitation Act, and s. 28, Limitation Act, will not become operative until the expiry of the limitation period laid down in the ordinary law.

Limitation Act—contd.

A proceeding under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code, in respect of certain land between the plaintiff and defendant No. 2 was decided in favour of the latter and more than three years after this the defendant No. 1 brought a suit against defendant No. 2 and got possession in spite of plaintiff's application under O. XXI, r. 100, Civil Procedure Code. Thereupon the plaintiff brought a suit for declaration of title and recovery of possession. The plaintiffs main contention was that Art. 47, Limitation Act, applies only as between original parties to a proceeding under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code, or those claiming under them and that it could not, therefore, be availed of by defendant No. 1 who was neither a party to the proceeding nor was a person claiming under one of the parties:

Held, (1) that s. 28, Limitation Act, was a complete answer to the plaintiff's contention;

(2) that since it was not disputed that defendant No. 2 in whose favour the proceeding under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code was decided was in possession of the disputed land for more than three years and as no step was taken by the plaintiffs to question the order under s. 145 and to evict defendant No. 2 in due course of law within a period of three years which was the period of limitation as provided by Art. 47, Limitation Act, whatever title (if any) the plaintiffs had to the property, was completely extinguished;

(3) that in the circumstances it was not at all necessary for defendant No. 1 to implead the plaintiffs in the suit which they subsequently brought against defendant No. 2 and the plaintiffs not having taken any steps to evict defendant No. 2, could not now question the title of defendant No. 1. NANDO KAHAR v. BHUP NARAIN SINGH Pat. 1094

——— Sch. I, Art. 85—Open account, nature of —Mutual account, essentials of—Balance never standing in favour of defendant — Account, if mutual—Art. 85, if applies.

An open account is one which is continuous or current, uninterrupted or unclosed by settlement or otherwise consisting of a series of transactions. An account current is an open or running account between two or more parties or an account which contains items between the parties from which the balance due to one of them is, or can be, ascertained. Such an account comes under the term of an open account, in so far as it is running, unsettled or unclosed. Mutual accounts are such as consist of reciprocity of dealings between the parties and do not embrace those having items on one side only, though made up of debits and credits.

Where the account between the parties was open and current, but there was no occasion when the balance stood in favour of the defendant, and it was clear from the nature of the dealings between the parties that there was no possibility of the balance standing in favour of the defendant:

Held, that although it was an open and current account, inasmuch as it had not been closed, it could not be said to be mutual and hence Art. 85, Limitation Act, did not apply. FIRM PUTTU LAL KUNJI LAL v FIRM B. JAGANNATH All. 44

——— Sch. I, Arts. 97, 115, s. 14—Promise to execute lease—Consideration paid on October 26, 1926, and January 1, 1927—Breach of promise—Suit for return of consideration filed in Small Cause Court on October 26, 1929—Small Cause Court holding it has no jurisdiction and ordering presentation in proper Court, on May 21, 1930—Suit presented on June 11, 1930—Cause of action, when arises—Suit, whether in time.

The plaintiff instituted a suit to recover two sums of Rs. 75 paid by him to the other party on October 26, 1926, and January 1, 1927. His case was that he made these payments by way of premium or nazrana because the defendant had promised to execute in his favour a lease of a certain holding. He claimed that the sums should be returned on the ground that the defendant had resiled from his promise and refused to execute the lease. The suit was originally instituted in the Court of Small Causes on October 26, 1929. That Court decided that it had no jurisdiction and returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court on May 21, 1930. It was presented on June 11, 1930:

Held, that this was clearly a claim which was governed either by Art. 97 of the Limitation Act or by Art 115, that is, it was either a claim for money paid upon an existing consideration which afterwards failed in that the payments were made in consideration of the promise to execute the lease and the promise was afterwards repudiated or it was claim for compensation for the breach of any contract, express or implied, not in writing registered and not specially provided for.

Held, further that as the second payment was made on January 1, 1927, it was obvious that the breach of the promise occurred after that date, and the cause of action arose from the breach. As the plaintiff was entitled to the benefit of the provisions of s. 14 of the Limitation Act his claim for both the sums was clearly within time. ABDUL SHAKUR KHAN v. RAJENDRA KISHORE SARAN SINGH All. 109

——— Arts. 97, 116, 120—Suit for refund of money wrongly paid—Money paid to redeem mortgage—Suit for foreclosure by person having mortgagee interest—Payment held to be wrongly made—Decree for foreclosure—Suit for refund—Article applicable—Limitation, when begins to run.

The plaintiffs who were the representatives in interest of the mortgagors advanced Rs. 400 to defendants who succeeded to a share of the mortgagee rights, in order to redeem the mortgage. The money was received and defendants executed a deed of re-conveyance of the mortgaged property in consideration of the payment of the mortgage money made to them. L who had acquired an interest in the mortgagees' interest sued for foreclosure. The plaintiffs pleaded that they had already paid Rs. 400 to defendants and had redeemed the mortgage. This plea was not accepted and it was held that the payment had been wrongly made to the defendants. The decree for foreclosure was passed on September 27, 1928, and in consequence of this decree the plaintiffs had to pay a sum of Rs. 471-11-3 to L on February 22, 1929, for the purpose of redeeming the mortgage. Plaintiffs filed a suit for recovering the sum of Rs 400 with interest, which had been wrongly paid to defendants:

Held, that Art. 97, Limitation Act applied and the period of three years ran from September 27, 1928, which was the date of the foreclosure decree. As soon as it had been decided by the foreclosure decree that the defendants wrongly received the money it would have been open to the plaintiffs to institute a suit to recover the money wrongly paid even before they had been compelled to make a second payment of the money to L. Article 116 did not apply as the suit was not framed as a suit for compensation for the breach of any covenant. Nor did Art. 120 apply to the case. SHAMBHU DUTT v. RAM BAKHSH Oudh 299

——— Sch. I, Art. 102. SEE Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, Art. 7 591

——— ——— Art. 112—Company in liquidation —Liability of member to pay calls which are barred under Art. 112—Companies Act (VII of 1913), s. 156.

A member of a company in liquidation is liable in respect of unpaid calls even though the calls were made by the company before it went into liquidation and the suit of the company for its realization had become barred by time under Art. 112 of the Limitation Act. The principle is that when a company goes into liquidation, s. 156, Companies Act, creates a new liability on the share-holders in respect of such calls, which is distinct from and independent of the rights which the company had against them before the winding up. POKHAR MAL v. FLOUR & OIL MILLS CO. LTD. Lah. 16

——— ——— Art. 115. SEE Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, Art. 97 1092

——— ——— Art. 115—Contract for building construction—Before completion contract given to another—Original contractor suing for value of work done—Limitation.

A contract for the construction of a building was given to the plaintiff but before the completion of the work the contract was given to another person. The plaintiff sued for the value of the work already done:

Held, that Art. 115 of the Limitation Act applied and the period of three years began from the date of the breach of contract. SITA RAM v. MAHMUDI RAM Lah. 238

——— ——— Art. 120.

SEE Limitation Act, 1908, s. 6 244
SEE Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, Art. 7 591
SEE Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, Arts. 97, 116 299

——— ——— Art. 123—Suit for recovery of legacy from persons in possession who are legally bound to pay it—Limitation for suit.

A suit for recovery of a legacy from persons in possession of the estate who are legally bound to pay the same is governed by Art. 123, Limitation Act. SRI NATHJI v. PANNA KUNWAR All. 390

——— ——— Art. 124. SEE Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, Art. 7 591

——— ——— Art. 125. SEE Limitation Act, 1908, s. 6 244

——— ——— Art. 132—Plaintiff asking only for money decree—No prayer for enforcement of charge—Art. 132, if applies.

Article 132, Limitation Act will not apply to a case in which the plaintiff does not ask for the enforcement of any charge but simply asks for a money decree against the defendants. SRI NATHJI v. PANNA KUNWAR All. 390 ——— ——— Art. 142—Applicability — Adverse possession—Dispossession of plaintiff—Considerations for deciding the question—Property not capable of enjoyment in possession of one co-sharer —Conduct of vendees from other co-sharers.

Where property in dispute consists of lands actually cultivated or of house capable of actual occupation and the plaintiff sues for possession of such property, on the allegation that he was dispossessed by the defendant, Art. 142 is undoubtedly applicable and the plaintiff must show that his dispossession occurred within twelve years before the institution of the suit. But where the property is of such a nature that it is not capable of actual physical possession or where the property, though capable of physical possession, is in the occupation of one through whom the plaintiff can be in constructive possession, different considerations apply. In considering the question whether the plaintiff was dispossessed within twelve years or whether his possession discontinued within twelve years, the nature of the property and the position of those actually occupying it, if it is capable of actual occupation, must be taken into consideration:

Held, that where the property (a tank) and its appurtenances are not capable of enjoyment and there is no suggestion that the defendants so conducted themselves in relation to the tank purchased by them as to amount to the plaintiff's dispossession, the plaintiff's possession must be taken to have continued till the defendants' possession became adverse as regards continuity and extent. BABOO SINGH v. RAM MANOHAR All. 824

——— Sch. I, Art. 166. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXI, r. 89 603

——— ——— Art. 174—Limitation of ninety days—Whether applies to certificate by decree-holder.

The limitation of ninety days provided by Art. 174 of the First Schedule of the Limitation Act is not applicable to a certification by a decree-holder. FIRM SUNDAR DAS VIR BHAN v. FIRM UMA DATT HANSRAJ Lah 315

——— ——— Art. 181. SEE Limitation Act, 1908, s. 4 205

——— ——— Art. 182—Application for substitution and for execution— Vakalatnama accompanying it not bearing name and signature of pleader—Application, if one in accordance with law—Court not noticing defect and ordering notice—Judgment-debtor not appearing or objecting —Subsequent proceedings— Judgment-debtor, if can object that the defective application did not save limitation.

Where an application for substitution of the names of the decree-holder's sons for execution is signed by a pleader and accompanied by a vakalatnama in which the place meant for the name of the pleader was left blank and the vakalatnama did not bear any signature of the pleader showing that he had accepted it, the application as filed is not one filed by a duly authorised person and is not in accordance with law.

When without noticing the defects in the vakalatnama, the Court ordered notice to issue to the judgment-debtors who did not appear to show cause or raise objections to the application for substitution of the sons of the decree-holder and the Court ordered their names to be brought on record and the execution to proceed, but the proceeding did not fructify and the execution case was struck off:

Held, that in subsequent proceedings it was open to the judgment-debtor to object that the defective application could not serve as a fresh starting point for purposes of limitation as not being in accordance with law. OFFICIAL RECEIVER, ALIGARH v. HIRA LAL All. 673

——— Sch. I, Art 182 (5)—Decree obtained in Small Cause Court—Suit in Munsif's Court for declaration that property of judgment-debtor is attachable in execution of decree—Decree not transferred to Munsif's Court before filing of plaint—Plaint, if step-in-aid—Munsif's Court, if 'proper Court' within meaning of Art. 182—Plaint, if saves limitation for execution.

Where a decree is obtained in a Small Cause Court and subsequently a plaint is filed in a Munsif's Court for a declaration that certain property of the judgment-debtor is attachable in execution of the above decree, although the plaint can be treated as a step-in-aid, yet when the decree has not been transferred to the Munsif's Court for execution before the plaint is filed, that Court cannot be held to be the 'proper Court' within the meaning of Art. 182, Limitation Act and cl. (5) of the Article will not apply for the purpose of saving limitation. KHUSHI RAM v. RAM SUMER Oudh 505 ——— Art. 182 (5)—Execution of decree—Applications against deceased judgment-debtor or wrong legal representative, whether save limitation.

Where owing to a bona fide error an execution petition names the deceased judgment-debtor as the person against whom execution is sought, it is sufficient to save limitation.

An execution petition presented bona fide against a wrong legal representative of a deceased judgment-debtor is still an application to take a step-in-aid of execution sufficient to save limitation. SUBRAMANIA DESIKA v. RANGASWAMI CHETTIAR Mad. 327 ——— Art. 182 (5), Expl. I—Application for execution against surety more than three years after decree—Limitation—Principal judgment-debtor and surety, whether joint-debtors—Applicability of Expl. I.

A surety for the satisfaction of a decree is neither a joint judgment-debtor nor a person against whom a decree has been passed severally with any portion of its subject-matter distinguished as payable or deliverable by him within the meaning of Expl. I to cl. (5) of Art. 182 of the Limitation Act. An application for execution against a surety is not therefore governed by Expl. I but by the simple unqualified words of Art. 182, cl. (5).

Though a surety is technically liable from the date of the decree, in equity his liability arises only upon the failure of the judgment-debtor to satisfy the decree and the decree-holder who is proceeding against the principal debtor is not bound to file a formal and otherwise futile petition against the surety before the period of three years expires in order to keep alive the decree against the surety. SADANALA GANGARAJU v. INDRAGANTI SUBBAYYA Mad 864

Lunatic—Co-heirs refusing to maintain lunatic—Person who is not strictly a co-heir maintaining and supporting—Inheritance to property of lunatic after his death—Co-heirs, if excluded—Rule if equitable—Burmese Buddhist Law—Inheritance.

The share of a person who is insane and incapable of taking care of himself or his affairs should go on his death to the co heir who maintained and looked after him during his life-time The same principle applies to a person who is not strictly a co-heir of the lunatic if all the co-heirs of the lunatic refused to undertake his custody. In an extreme case, these rules are neither inequitable nor opposed to the present day ideas of the Burmans. SAN TUN U v. MA NI MA Rang 115

Madras Abkari Act (I of 1886)—Abkari license—Clauses 27, 37—Partnership to carry on abkari business standing in another's name—Sanction of Collector not obtained—Suit to recover money advanced to licensee—Maintainability—Legality of partnership.

The effect of cl. 27 of the General Sales Notification issued under the Madras Abkari Act is that a partnership in an abkari business is prohibited unless the previous permission of the Collector has been obtained.

The first defendant successfully bid a toddy shop at an auction on July 30, 1927, and the license was issued in his name on October 1, 1927. Meanwhile on August 17, 1927, the plaintiff advanced a sum of money to the first defendant on a promissory note under an agreement to work as partners. No application was ever made for the issue of the license in the name of the partners nor was the permission of the Collector obtained:

Held, that the object with which the money was lent being for the purpose of carrying on a business in contravention of the law and opposed to public policy, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover on the note. CHAVA RAMANAYUDU v. SARYADEVARA SEETHARAMYYA Mad. 544 S. B.

Madras Gaming Act (III of 1930), ss. 5, 6. See Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 96 496

——— ss. 5, 6—Mere fact that occasionally people used to play cards at a place and perhaps for money—Whether makes it a common gaming house.

The mere fact that occasionally people used to play cards at a particular place and perhaps for money, does not necessarily make it a common gaming house PUBLIC PROSECUTOR v. SUBRAMANIA SASTRI Mad. 496 ——— ss. 5, 6—Warrant issued under s. 96, Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898)—Presumption of common gaming house, whether arises.

The presumption referred to in s. 6 of the Madras Gaming Act can only apply to searches conducted in pursuance of a warrant issued under s. 5 of the Act. It does not apply where the warrant is issued under s. 96, Criminal Procedure Code.

The mere fact that reference was made to s. [redacted] the Gaming Act in the application for a warrant does not show that the Magistrate actually issued the warrant under that section. PUBLIC PROSECUTOR v. SUBRAMANIA SASTRI Mad. 496

Madras Local Boards Act (XIV of 1920), s. 225 (3)—Suit for improper cancellation by President of contract with Board—Whether a suit 'in respect of an act done in pursuance of the Act'—Special rule of limitation, whether applies.

Where, during the absence of the President of a District Board, the Vice President accepted a tender made by the plaintiff for a lease of the right to buy tolls, and the President, finding that there was a higher tender, cancelled the acceptance of the plaintiff's tender and the plaintiff filed a suit against the Board for damages for improper cancellation of the contract:

Held, that the suit was one 'in respect of an act done or purporting to be done by the President in pursuance of the Act', within the meaning of s 225 (3) of the Madras Local Boards Act and was time-barred as it was not instituted within 6 months of the accrual of the cause of action. The distinction between actions on contract and actions independent of contract which has been drawn in this connection, though convenient as a working rule, does not accurately represent the basis of the applicability of the rule. The real test is whether what is complained of is some act done in pursuance of the statute. ATHIMANNIL MUHAMMAD v. MALABAR DISTRICT BOARD Mad. 291

Madras Local Boards Act—concld.

Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act (Madras Act I of 1900), s. 6—Landlord's right to set off rent against value of improvements due to sub-lessee.

Where property has been sub-leased by the lessee and the sub-lessee has made improvements, the landlord is entitled, in a suit for eviction, to set off any sum due to him for rent in respect of the holding against the sum found due to the sub-lessee by way of compensation for value of improvements, even though nothing is due to the lessee from the sub-lessee in respect of rent.

In a suit by a landlord for eviction, the landlord is entitled to set off any money due to him for rent in respect of the tenancy against sums due by way of compensation for value of improvements to a sub-lessee to whom the lessee sub-leased the properties NARAYANI AMMA v. NARAYANAN NAMBOODRIPAD Mad. 271

Malabar Law—Joint family—Allotment of property to descendants of some daughters to the exclusion of another daughter—Whether descendants take the property as thavazhi or as tenants-in-common—Right of member to sue for recovery of property from trespassers.

A female governed by the Marumakkathayam Law had four daughters A, B, C and D. Under a razinamah, certain properties were allotted to the thavazhi of A, C and D and their descendants excluding B and her descendants. The descendants of B claiming the property as their own mortgaged the same. The senior member of A's thavazhi instituted a suit for declaring the mortgage invalid and recovering the properties;

Held, even if the thavazhi of A, C and D created by the razinamah was not legally constituted, the right of management under the razinamah vested in the senior male member and if the parties did not take the property under the razinamah as a thavazhi they would be tenants-in-common and the plaintiff as a tenant-in-common was entitled to sue to recover the properties as against the defendants who were trespassers.

Held, further, that having regard to the nature of the exclusive right set up by the defendants to the property, it was not open to them to plead in appeal that the mortgage was binding on the larger thavazhi to which the plaintiff belonged on the ground that the amount was advanced for that thavazhi's purposes. RAMUNNI KITAV v. CHALIKKARA KUNHAYAN Mad. 651

——Karar—Total deprivation of karnavan's powers—Notice to strangers, whether necessary.

Quaere.—Whether, where the effect of a karar is to terminate the karnavan's authority altogether, any disposition made by him in favour of strangers who had no notice of the karar will be binding on the family. RAMUNNI KITAV v. CHALIKKARA KUNHAYAN Mad. 651

Maxim—'Actus curiae neminem gravabit. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XXI, r. 89 603

——Expressio unius est exclusio alterius—Applicability of.

The doctrine expressio unius est exclusio alterius does not affect cases in which the express provision appears, upon the true construction of the contract, to have been super-added for the benefit of the mortgagor and to have been inserted for the purpose of adding to, and not qualifying, the provision which the law implies for his benefit. HARIHAR PRASAD v. GOPAL SARAN Pat. 976

——In pari delicto potior est conditio possidents and nemo allegans turpitudinem—Applicability. SEE Fraud 928

Mercantile usage—Mercantile usage contrary to justice cannot be supported by Court of law.

However well established the usage or practice may be, if it is contrary to natural justice, it cannot be upheld in a Court of law. Consequently mercantile usages, in the conduct of references, cannot be supported if they are contrary to the principles of natural justice. FAZALALLY v KHIMJI POONJI & Co. Bom. 801

Minor. SEE Contract Act, 1872, s. 65 1017

——Compromise by guardian—Effect. SEE Compromise 912

——Guardian acting under authority from District Judge—Stranger purchasing minor's property from guardian—When entitled to protection—Alienation setting aside of—Burden of proof.

A stranger purchasing from a guardian acting under authority from the District Judge, would be entitled to every protection from Courts so long as it is not shown that he acted in a fraudulent or collusive manner, knowing that the debts for the liquidation of which the purchase-money would be applied were not debts lawfully binding on the minor. The burden of proof would, in such a case, lie heavily on any one seeking to set aside such an alienation. But where the purchasers were themselves the creditors of the family whose debts it was the object of the alienations to liquidate, inasmuch as they have the means of satisfying a Court as to the origin and nature of those debts and how they are binding on the minor, the burden of proof is shifted on their shoulders as soon as the plaintiff has established a prima facie case. RAJBALLABH MISIR v. BISHUN PRASAD SINGH Pat. 81

——Implied permission to sue by guardian—Absence of formal order granting leave to sue—Whether fatal to suit.

In a suit by the guardian on behalf of the minor where implied permission of the Court to sue can be presumed, the absence of a formal order granting leave to sue is not necessarily fatal to the suit. PADUMAN DAS v. PARBATI All. 365 ——Liability under promissory note executed by guardian—Whether condition—Suit on debt, if necessary.

The fact that a minor can be made liable only if it was executed for the purposes binding on him does not make the liability under the promissory note conditional.

It is not necessary that the plaintiff should sue in such cases on the debt. YELURI SATYANARAYANA v. YELURI MALLAYYA Mad. 581 F. B.

——Persons dealing with property of minor—Law applicable—Bona fide lender—Certificate from District Judge—When can be got and relied on.

The ordinary law applicable to those who deal with the property of a person under disability is that he must make a proper inquiry to satisfy himself (a) that there is legal necessity for the money and (b) that there is a necessity for the loan or sale to produce that money. A bona fide lender or purchaser may satisfy this obligation to inquire by demanding from the borrower or vendor a certificate from the District Judge that the money is required for a legitimate purpose and sanctioning the loan or sale to supply the need certified. But if he is already aware or has materials in his possession which reasonably put him on inquiry, he is not entitled to substitute the opinion of the Judge in place of his own opinion. RAJBALLABH MISIR v. BISHUN PRASAD SINGH Pat. 81 ———Person executing document for minor—Whether he can be valid guardian in suit, is not pure question of law—Foreign judgment against minor—Minor not represented by proper guardian—Suit in British India on that judgment—Held, there was no cause of action on foreign judgment against minor—No decree against assets of minor.

Minor—concld.

When a person has executed a document or entered into a transaction on behalf of a minor, the question, whether that person can be validly appointed a guardian, in a suit brought against the minor on the document or transaction in question, is not a pure question of law but is one of fact, and for the decision thereof no hard and fast rule of law can be laid down. There is nothing either in the Civil Procedure Code or in the authorities to lay down that such a person cannot be appointed a guardian and under proper circumstances he can be validly appointed a guardian of the minor in such a suit.

A person, having conflicting interest with that of minor was appointed guardian ad litem in a suit in a foreign Court. That Court decided the suit against the minor; upon this decision the plaintiff brought an action in British India;

Held, that since the foreign Court had not followed the rules and procedure prescribed in O. XXXII, Civil Procedure Code or the rules of natural justice, and the minor was not properly represented in the suit, the appointment being prejudicial to the defence of the minor in the foreign suit, the decree passed in that suit against the minor was not binding on the minor and did not avail the plaintiff;

Held, also that the plaintiff had not filed the suit on the original cause of action but on the foreign judgment alone and as the foreign judgment was pronounced without the minor being represented in the foreign Court, there was no cause of action on the foreign judgment against the minor and the suit against him must fail.

Held, further, that no decree against the assets of the minor would be conclusive under s 13, Civil Procedure Code, where the minor had no opportunity to defend the action in which that decree was passed. POPAT VIRJI v. DAMODAR JAIRAM Bom. 711 ———Ratification—Minor just attaining majority—Old promissory note executed by mother-guardian renewed—If proves ratification of old debt—Legal necessity—Hindu Law—Minor.

In order that an act may amount to a ratification, there must be, after majority and after the late minor has acquired full knowledge of the nature and effect of the transaction, some promise or other act, which shows an internal acknowledgment of his liability in respect of the act done on his behalf during minority. Where, therefore, a person, two months after attaining majority, renews the promissory note executed by the late agent of his mother guardian, and such agent, at the time of the renewal is in the employ of the person in whose favour the promissory note is executed, it cannot be said that the act of the minor amounted to a ratification of the act of his mother guardian and the plaintiff must prove that there was a legal necessity. SHRIRAM v. MOHANLAL Nag. 607 names in mortgage-deed—No mention of his own name—Presumption

Mortgage. SEE Deed 288

———Benami—Mortgagee mentioning his children's

Mortgage—contd.

Where a person advances money on a mortgage but the names of his children are mentioned in the mortgage-deeds and his name is omitted therefrom, the presumption arises that he intended these mortgages as advancements for the benefit of his children who are respectively named in the deeds. MAUNG BA KYWE v. MA NYEIN Rang. 234 ———Foreclosure—Mortgagee obtaining possession under sale in execution and mortgagee obtaining possession by foreclosure—Difference, if exists.

There is no difference in principle between a mortgagee who has obtained possession under a sale made in execution of the mortgage decree and one who has obtained possession by foreclosure of his mortgage. SALIK RAM v. JANGJIT BAHADUR SINGH Oudh 498 ———Mortgage of reversionary rights—Validity of in the Punjab—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s 43.

A contract mortgaging a spes successionis in a province where the Transfer of Property Act is not in force can be enforced as an agreement to convey the estate when it falls into possession. A mortgage of the reversionary right of succession is, therefore, enforceable in the Punjab, although it does not effect a transfer of property at the time of the sale. AUTAR SINGH v. LAL SINGH Lah. 880

———Partial redemption—Integrity of mortgage—When can be said to be broken up.

Under ordinary circumstances a mortgage is indivisible but this indivisibility is for the protection of the mortgagee and the mortgagee by his own act can create a situation under which the integrity of the mortgage debt must be held to have broken up. BHEKDHARI MAHTON v. RADHIKA KOER Pat. 635

———Prior and subsequent mortgagees—Prior mortgagee bringing mortgage suit for sale—Subsequent mortgagee can receive his money from surplus money or redeem prior mortgagee—He cannot sell property if prior mortgagee's claim is satisfied before sale—Separate suit, necessity of.

As regards a mortgage suit for sale, the rights of the subsequent mortgagee are very limited; he has the right to redeem the prior mortgage or to receive his mortgage money out of the surplus sale proceeds after satisfaction of the prior mortgage, treating the suit as one for his benefit; but he cannot ask for a sale of the property if the prior mortgagee's claim is satisfied before the sale, nor can he ask for sale of some other property included in his own mortgage: and for either of these purposes he must bring a separate suit for sale on his own mortgage. WAN TAIK YA v. M. S. S. CHETTYAR FIRM Rang. 954 ———Property not mortgaged included in sale proclamation and sold—Mortgagor not rectifying sale proclamation—If disentitled from recovering property—Suit to set aside such sale—Held, it may be treated as an application under s. 47, Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), made on day the plaint was presented.

Where property which is not included in mortgage is included in the sale proclamation and sold the mortgagor is not disentitled from recovering the same, merely because he abstains from rectifying the sale proclamation. Something more is necessary to enable the mortgagee to entitle him to bring to sale in execution of his mortgage decree such property. PROTIVA SUNDARI DEBI v. SARADA CHARAN GOHO Cal. 848

Mortgage—contd.

———Property subject to mortgage not sold subject to it—Auction-purchaser, if can dispute its validity.

Where a property which was subject to a motrgage is not sold subject to the mortgage in execution of a decree, the auction-purchaser can dispute its validity. A P. L. PALANIAPPA CHETTIAR v. A. K. R. M. S. FIRM Rang. 10 ———Purchaser under first mortgage decree—Whether can set up first mortgage as shield in subsequent mortgagee's suit.

A person, who is in the rights of a first mortgagee and of the original mortgagor as acquired at a sale under the first mortgage, is entitled at the suit of a subsequent mortgagee who is not bound by the sale of the decree on which it proceeded, to set up the first mortgage as a shield. RAMNANDAN PRASAD SINGH v. RAM DAS Pat. 663 ———Redemption—Omission to implead persons interested—Redemption of portion on payment of proportionate amount.

If a mortgagee omits to implead persons interested in a portion of the mortgaged property and then brings about the property to sale and purchases it himself, he is bound to allow the redemption of the portion concerned on payment of the proportionate amount. BHEKDHARI MAHTON v. RADHIKA KOER Pat. 635 ———Redemption—Suit by prior mortgagee without impleading subsequent mortgagee—Decree—Purchase of property by prior mortgagee in execution—Suit for redemption by puisne mortgagee—Amount, how to be ascertained—Liability to interest.

Where a prior mortgagee obtains a decree on foot of his mortgage and purchases the mortgaged property in execution of his own decree, to which the puisne mortgagee was not a party, the sale cannot be considered to be of no effect at all. It effectively transfers the mortgagor's right to the prior mortgagee (auction-purchaser), as between the mortgagor and the prior mortgagee, though the sale is not binding on the subsequent mortgagee, who can, in spite of it, exercise his right of redemption. When such a suit for redemption is filed, the puisne mortgagee can set off against the mortgage money the net profits from the property received by the prior mortgagee as auction purchaser. At the same time he is liable to pay interest on the mortgage amount up to date to the prior mortgagee. In the absence of evidence to show whether in the years which followed the auction sale, the profits of the property were sufficient to pay the interest each year on the aggregate amount on which interest was running, if the prior mortgagee claims that redemption may be allowed on payment of a certain sum as due to him on the date when he obtained possession, the Court may pass a decree for redemption on the puisne mortgagee accepting that amount. RAMJI LAL v. ROSHAN SINGH All. 596 ———Subsequent mortgagee having notice of previous mortgage—Whether can challenge terms of previous mortgage.

In the case of mortgages, the subsequent mortgagee does not become the absolute owner and he is the representative-in-interest of the mortgagor only to this extent that he is entitled to redeem the previous mortgage. If the previous mortgage is not invalid or void, he cannot challenge the terms thereof on the ground that interest is excessive or penal as he entered into the subsequent mortgage with his eyes open. The mortgagor in such cases may be entitled to certain reliefs on equitable considerations but no such considerations prevail in favour of the subsequent mortgagees. PHUL CHAND v. SHUGAN CHAND Lah. 1116

———Subrogation—Person performing his own obligation—Right to subrogation if can be claimed.

A person cannot claim subrogation when he simply performs his own obligation or covenant. SUKHRAM DASS v. MAHBUB KHAN Oudh 905 ———Sale of portion of mortgagee's security alleged to be with consent of mortgagee—Evidence of such consent — Registered mortgage — Mortgagee, if should secure title-deeds.

Where it is alleged that a portion of the mortgagee's security has been sold with his consent, very definite evidence must be produced that that consent was obtained.

It is not ordinarily obligatory for a person who takes a registered mortgage to secure the title-deeds of the properties mortgaged and ordinarily his registered mortgage is sufficent protection to him. WAN TAIK YA v. M. S. S. CHETTYAR FIRM Rang. 954 ———Suit for redemption—Proof that mortgage is subsisting Onus—Acknowledgment by mortgagee—Admission by him at sale of his rights, whether amounts to acknowledgment—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 19.

In a redemption suit the onus lies on the mortgagor to show that at the time of the suit his mortagage was still subsisting, and if he relies on any acknowledgment for the purposes of saving limitation, it is for him to prove that that acknowledgment was made when the limitation was still alive. The mere making of an acknowledgment does not and cannot imply that it was being made within time nor does the mere fact of a mortgagee having claimed the status of a mortgagee and not that of an owner at the time of the sale of his rights, estop his assignee from demanding proof from the mortgagor at the time he seeks redemption that the mortgage was subsisting at the time the mortgagee described himself as a mere mortgagee. SHER MOHAMMAD v. KARAM CHAND Lah. 576 ———Undertaking by mortgagor to third party subsequent to mortgage—Mortgagee, if bound.

A mortgagee is not bound by any undertaking given by his mortgagor to a third party subsequent to the date of the mortgage. CHIMAN LAL v. PALI RAM Lah. 394

Muhammadan Law—Gift. See Gift 303

———Beguest to heir, when valid—Consent of other heirs, nature of.

Under Muhammadan Law a bequest to heirs can only be rendered valid by consent of the other heirs. Such consent need not be express. It may be implied by the unequivocal conduct of the other heirs. MAHOMED HUSSEIN HAJI GULAM MAHOMED AJAM v. AISHABAI Bom. 334 ———Essentials to constitute gift—Mere book-entries in respect of money which is subject-matter of gift, if enough.

Under the Muhammadan Law there must not only be a declaration by the donor of his intention to make the gift, but the subject of the gift must be accepted by and on behalf of the donee, and delivery of possession must be given to the donee in the manner which the subject of the gift is capable of. A relinquishment of control over the subject is necessary to complete the gift. Mere book-entries in respect of money which is the subject-matter of gift is not enough to support a gift. There must be some evidence to show that the donor relinquished his control over these moneys and divested himself completely of his beneficial interest therein, Muhammadan Law—concld.

so that he could not have operated upon these sums if he wanted to. MAHOMED HUSSEIN HAJI GULAM MAHOMED AJAM v. AISHABAI Bom. 334

———Muhammadan executor—Probate, if essential.

There is no statutory obligation on a Muhammadan executor to take out probate of the testator's will. A Muhammadan executor can establish his right in a Court without taking such probate. MAHOMED HUSSEIN HAJI GULAM MAHOMED AJAM v. AISEABAI Bom. 334

———Wakf—Fraudulent intent—When can be said to be made out.

It cannot be said that the mere statement in a deed of wakf that the property was free from all sorts of debts and liens, although it may be incorrect, indicates that there was any fraudulent intent. Nor will the mere fact that the mutawalli subsequently made a number of leases for five years which he was authorized to do under the wakfnama would indicate any fraudulent intent. AFZAL HUSAIN v. CHHEDI LAL All. 791

——— ——— Mutawalli effecting usufructuary mortgage of wakf property with previous sanction of Court—Mortgage for justifying necessity—Validity of—Sanction, if can be given retrospectively.

A usufructuary mortgage of wakf property by a mutawalli who is a shia, though made without sanction of the Court may be retrospectively confirmed by the Court Such a mortgage made without previous leave of the Court is not void if made for a justifiable necessity.

Where it is found that by the usufructuary mortgage in question the accumulation of interest under the simple mortgage and the decrees was prevented and the transaction would therefore have been beneficial to the dedicated property and that the transaction should have received sanction, the usufructuary mortgage should be held to be valid in law. AFZAL HUSAIN v. CHHEDI LAL All. 791

Mussalman Wakf Validating Act (VI of 1913), s. 3, proviso—Reservation of ultimate benefit contemplated by the proviso—Whether can be made impliedly—Wakf created in perpetuity—Portion of usufruct reserved for pious and charitable objects—Wakif having in view possible extinction of line of descendants—Use of words 'wakf fi-sabi-lillah'—Wakf—Validity of.

The reservation of the ultimate benefit contemplated by the proviso to s. 3 of the Mussulman Wakf Validating Act can either be made expressly or impliedly. The answer to the question whether the reservation of the ultimate benefit for those purposes has been made by a deed of wakf must depend on the intention of the wakif as disclosed by the deed. In a case where the words "wakf fi-sabi-lillah" have been used and wakif has been created in perpetuity, and there is provision for the appointment of the mutwallis for all time to come, and a portion of the usufruct of the wakf property has been reserved for pious and charitable purposes, and the wakif had in contemplation the possible extinction of the line of his descendants who were to be the principal recipients of the profits of the wakf property, the irresistible conclusion is that the wakif intended by implication to reserve the ultimate benefit for the purposes enumerated in the proviso. BAQA ULLAH KHAN v. GHULAM SIDDIQUE KHAN All. 416 (b)

Negligence See Tort 631

Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 4—Promissor and promisee clearly indicated and also definite promise to pay but worded in participal form—Document, whether a promissory note.

Where in the opening portion of a document the promissor and the promisee are clearly indicated and there is a definite promise to pay though it is worded in the participal form, the document is a promissory note CHOCKALINGAM CHETTIAR v. RAMA MU RAMA PALANIAPPA CHETTIAR Mad. 184

———s. 70. See Promissory note 953

———s. 118—Presumption under.

Section 118, Negotiable Instruments Act, does not raise any presumption that the consideration of the promissory note was advanced for legal necessity and the burden of proving that such advance was for legal necessity rests on the plaintiff making the advance on the promissory note. SHRIRAM v. MOHANLAL Nag. 607

Occupancy holding—Lessee of non-transferable occupancy holding purchasing it during term of lease but before amendment of Bengal Tenancy Act in 1907—Dedication to idol—Validity of—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885)—Amendment of 1907, if retrospective.

The amendment of the Bengal Tenancy Act in 1907 does not affect a right which has already become vested prior to the amendment which has no retrospective effect. Where, therefore the lessee of a non-transferable occupancy holding has purchased it during the continuance of the lease but before 1907 and has dedicated it to an idol, the dedication is perfectly valid. SATYANARAIN SAMI v. JAMUNA BAI Pat. 834 ——— Transfer of non-transferable occupancy holding—Whether void or voidable.

A transfer of a non-transferable occupancy holding is not void but voidable. SATYANARAIN SAMI v. JAMUNA BAI Pat. 834

Oudh Courts Act (IV of 1925), s. 31 (1)—Application for grant of probate transferred to Subordinate Judge—Jurisdiction of Subordinate Judge, if confined to non-contentious cases—Probate.

Where an application for grant of probate is transferred to a Subordinate Judge by an order of the District Judge, the test is whether the Subordinate Judge was acting in his capacity as a district delegate or in the capacity of a Subordinate Judge to whom a case has been transferred by an order of the District Judge. If he is seised of the case in the capacity of a district delegate, his jurisdiction ceases, as soon as the proceedings become contentious. If, on the other hand, he is trying the case as a Subordinate Judge, to whom the case has been transferred by the District Judge, there is no provision either in the Succession Act or in the Oudh Civil Rules confining his jurisdiction to non-contentious cases. It makes no difference in principle whether the proceedings at the time of the transfer had already become contentious or whether they become contentious afterwards. In the absence of any provision taking away the case from the jurisdiction of the Subordinate Judge, when the proceedings before him become contentious, it must be held that the Subordinate Judge is entitled to deal with the case, whether contentious or non-contentious. ANANDPAL SINGH v. RAM CHARAN Oudh 501

Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869), s. 8—Widow holding life estate—Confiscation of estate, and first settlement with her—Her name in list—Widow, as trustee for remainderman—Gift of property—Suit for declaration of under-proprietary rights—Decree against widow, whether binding on remainderman—Trust—Presumption—Person held under-proprietor—Presumption as to possession—

Oudh Estates Act—concld.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11—Held no res judicata.

Where notwithstanding the confiscation of the land by the proclamation of Lord Canning, its restoration by affirming the absolute title of the grantees of summary settlements, and the granting a sanad with the full power of alienation, in her and her name being entered in the list prepared under s. 8, Oudh Estates Act, a widow holding a life-estate constitutes herself a trustee for the remainderman but makes a gift of the property and afterwards contests a suit for declaration of under-proprietary rights which is ultimately decreed, the gift is not binding on the remainderman after her death, but the remainderman is bound by the decree obtained against her. Just as a trustee cannot set up any title adverse to that of the cestui que trust, so also the beneficiary cannot repudiate the bona fide acts of the trustee entered upon for the benefit of the beneficiary or the cestui que trust.

Where a person is held to be an under-proprietor, possession as under-proprietor must also be presumed in his favour.

Since the lessee does not occupy a representative capacity and the lessor cannot be said to be a person claiming through his lessee, a previous decision in a suit by a lessee against a third person cannot operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit by the lessor against the same person. SHER BAHADUR SINGH v. MADHO PRASAD SINGH Oudh 1087

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), s. 7-A—U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 33—Sir land, gift of, subject to charge of payment of profits as maintenance allowance — Sale — Ex-proprietary rights accruing in favour of donee—Liability of purchaser to pay maintenance allowance—Amount payable—Charge—Holder of property, if personally liable—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 100

The benefit which the ex-proprietary tenant gets by having ex proprietary rights created in his once sir plots is a benefit which cannot be filched from him by any arrangement or device entered into by him or by any other person.

Where sir land is gifted subject to the charge that the donee should pay the profits thereof to another as maintenance allowance and the land is subsequently sold giving rise to ex-proprietary rights in favour of the donee, his liability to pay maintenance ceases After the sale, the purchaser is the only person whom the charge-holder can look to for payment of maintenance allowance and the amount payable is the rent which the purchaser receives from the ex-proprietary tenant and not the rent which the latter receives from his sub-tenants.

When an agreement, in the nature of a family settlement, makes provision for certain maintenance allowances, which should be paid out of the taluqa, that agreement does not create any personal liability on the holder of the estate, but creates a charge upon the income of the estate. AKBAR HUSAIN v HUSAIN JAHAN BEGUM Oudh 40

——s. 107. See Evidence Act, 1872, s. 115 295

——ss. 108, cl (10), 135—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 100—Application under O. XXI, r. 100—Alternative remedy provided by s. 108, cl. (10), Oudh Rent Act—Application under Civil Procedure Code to Revenue Court, if barred.

Even though the plaintiffs have an alternative remedy by a suit under s. 108, cl. (10), Oudh Rent Act, their right of making an application under O. XXI, r. 100, Civil Procedure Code, to the Revenue Court is not barred on that account. There is nothing inconsistent with the provisions of the Oudh Rent Act in utilising the alternative remedy by an application under O XXI, r. 100, Civil Procedure Code. THAKUR BAKHSH SINGH v. ABHAIDAT SINGH Oudh 1082

Pardanashin lady. See Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. XLI, r. 21 676

Parties. See Company 1

Partition—Several persons entitled to succeed to property—Property belonging to them jointly—Possession of one is constructive possession on behalf of all—Co sharers.

Where several persons become entitled on the death of the last owner to succeed to the estate of the last owner, the properties belong jointly to all of them and possession of one co-sharer is really a constructive possession on behalf of all. TULSI BIBI v. FARRAK BIBI Cal. 815 ——Suit for—Shares of all parties will be decided usually—Preliminary decree by consent, without rights of defendants—Decree not appealed against—Effect.

It is usual in partition suits to decide the shares of all the parties and not merely of the plaintiffs. But where the defendants agree to passing of a preliminary decree in favour of the plaintiff and partition of his share without their rights being decided and the decree so passed is not appealed against, it cannot be contended that their rights inter se ought to have been decided. HASSAN MUHAMMAD v HUKAM CHAND Lah 469

Partition Act (IV of 1893), s. 2—Claim by co-owner for partition of party wall—If can be resisted—Applicability of s. 2—Co-owners—Party wall.

A claim by a co-owner to partition of a party wall cannot ordinarily be resisted even where the claim causes inconvenience and difficulty of partition:

Held, that in the case of party wall it is impracticable to take any action under s. 2, Partition Act, 1893. MANSA RAM v. NANAK CHAND Lah. 223

Partnership. See Penal Code, 1860, s. 406 439

——Partner taking partnership property to himself and crediting some price of his own fixing in favour of partnership—Other partner, if bound by such valuation—If he can compel former to take such property at proper price found by Court.

If a partner takes the partnership property and credits in favour of the partnership some price of his own fixing, i. e, behind the back of the other partner, the other partner is not bound by such valuation and if he questions the valuation, the Court is entitled to scrutinise it. If his price is not found to be the proper price by the Court, his taking over might be set aside, but he cannot be compelled to purchase them at the price found by the Court to be the proper price. The only result of setting aside his taking over of the property would be that his so-called one-sided purchase is simply set aside and the property remains as partnership property. SIVAGNANATHAMMAL v. S. V. NALLAPERUMAL PILLAI Mad. 783

——Representation by one, whether binds the other.

Any representation by one of the partners will not bind the other partner. RATI LAL NANJI v. UTTAM LAL SARCAR Cal 842 (b)

Party wall.

See Co-owners 365

See Partition Act, 1893, s. 2 223

Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), ss. 43, 53—Registration of design—Design should be new and original and not of a pre-existing common type—Suit for damages for infringement—Defence that design was not new or original—Legality of.

No registration under s. 43 of the Patents and Designs Act is effective, unless the design or configuration sought to be protected is new and original and not of a pre-existing common type. Consequently in a suit for damages for infringement of the plaintiff's design, the defendant can raise the plea that the registered design of the plaintiff was not new and original. QADAR BAKSH v. GHULAM MOHAMMAD Lah. 319 Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 34—Whether applies where there is sudden fight between parties.

Where there is a sudden fight between the parties s. 34, Penal Code, does not apply to the case. MASTI KHAN v. EMPEROR Pesh. 276 ———ss. 34, 114, 302—Two persons going to commit robbery—Armed with guns—Retreating on coming of villagers—Shots fired while trying to escape—One of the villagers killed from shot fired by one of the persons—Other person also is guilty under s. 302 read with ss. 34 and 114.

Two men armed with guns entered into the shop and put the inmates into fear of instant hurt and demanded the keys. Some of the inmates managed to escape, others were put to terror. About this time many villagers came up and wanted to know what was the matter whereupon one of the intruders opened the door and threatened the villagers The intruders fired two shots and got out of the room and proceeded to go away. The villagers pursued them at a distance. The offenders continued to fire at them. At a certain place in the pursuit one of the pursuers came very near the two men and shouted, whereupon one of the two, shot and killed him :

Held, that it was not the primary intention of the two persons to kill any of their pursuers. Their intention was merely to effect their escape from the pursuers. But from the circumstances, it may be concluded that their intention was to effect their escape even though for that purpose it was necessary to shoot any of the pursuers mortally and in the circumstances of this case, the other person who did not shoot should also be convicted under s. 302 read with s. 34 or s. 114, Penal Code. MUKUNDA MURARI PAL v. EMPEROR Cal. 599

———s. 75. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 342 478

———s. 75—Previous convictions outside British India—Relevancy of, in determining sentence.

Previous convictions outside British India cannot be made the basis of a charge under s. 75, Penal Code and a Magistrate is not bound to consider such convictions in determining the sentence even though it is open to him to do so. EMPEROR v. MUTHUSWAMI Mad. 438

———s. 107—Accomplice — Person knowingly aiding in disposal of stolen property—Whether an accomplice.

A person who knowingly aids in the disposal of stolen property falls under the third definition under s. 107, Penal Code, and is an accomplice. MAVUTHALAYAN v. EMPEROR Mad. 74

———s. 114. SEE Penal Code, 1860, s. 34 599

———s. 120-B—Charge of criminal conspiracy—Essentials to be proved—Evidence of association—When of value for prosecution.

To establish a charge of criminal conspiracy, the prosecution must prove an agreement between two or more persons to do or cause to be done some illegal act or some act which is not illegal by illegal means provided that where the agreement is other than one to commit an offence, the prosecution must go further and prove that some act besides the agreement was done by one or more of the parties in pursuance of it. Where the agreement, therefore, is one to do or cause to be done an act which is itself an offence, no overt act, i. e., any act done by one of the parties to the agreement in pursuance of it, need be proved ; the crime of criminal conspiracy is established once such an agreement is proved. Consequently where the conspiracy alleged is one to commit a series of serious crimes mere proof of such an agreement between the appellants is sufficient to sustain a conviction. Proof of overt acts committed by the accused or any of them is not strictly necessary on this charge, but proof that the accused or some of them were concerned in the overt acts alleged would go far to establish that the agreement alleged was in fact made between them. Though proof of overt acts is not necessary in a case yet it may well be that if such acts are proved, the Court will be bound to infer that they are not unconnected and isolated acts, but acts which must have been committed in pursuance of an agreement made between the accused.

Evidence of association to be of any value should suggest something suspicious in such association and no inference one way or another can be drawn from a mere casual meeting or meetings or conversation between the parties in a public place or park where mere acquaintances frequently meet and talk. BACHCHA BABU v. EMPEROR All. 369

———s. 120-B—Conspiracy — Sanction under s 196-A, Criminal Procedure Code, if necessary. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 196-A 866

———s. 149. SEE Penal Code, 1860, s. 301 560

———s. 174. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 239 163

———ss. 182, 211, 202 (1) proviso—Complainant not examined on oath—Magistrate, if can sanction prosecution under ss. 182, 211—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 202.

It is not permissible for the Magistrate to order an enquiry and to sanction the prosecution of the applicant under ss. 182 and 211 of the Penal Code where he has not examined him on oath. BHAGWAN DAS v. EMPEROR All. 1070

———s. 193. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 476 490

———ss. 195, 186—Absence of written complaint by public officer—Conviction under s. 186, legality of.

Under s. 195, Penal Code, cognizance of an offence under s. 186, Penal Code, cannot be taken in the absence of a written complaint by the public officer concerned. Where the public officers concerned, the District Magistrate who issued the warrant, and the Assessment Officer to whom the warrant was addressed, have not filed a complaint and all that was done was that information was given by the person to whom the warrant was endorsed and this did not amount to a complaint under s. 195, there can be no conviction under s. 186. RAM SINGH v. EMPEROR Pat. 421 (b) S. B.

———ss. 202 (1), 211, proviso. SEE Penal Code, 1860, s. 182 1070

———s. 294-A — 'Drawing', meaning of—Publication of scheme of lottery — Scheme not contemplating drawing by mechanical or human agency involving their chance extraction—Whether an offence.

Penal Code—contd.

The meaning of the term 'drawing' in relation to a lottery is that the lots should be drawn by some mechanical or human agency involving their chance extraction. Where under a scheme there was no physical or mechanical 'drawing' to determine the lucky lots which depended on a sort of arithmetical progression based on an original number to be determined merely by the chance death of a bond-holder, then the publication of a scheme involving such a lottery is no offence under s. 294, Penal Code. EMPEROR v. GURBAKSH SINGH Lah. 590

——s. 300, Excep. I—Deceased catching hold of accused's tuft—Latter also catching tuft of deceased and stabbing him with knife—Held, case came within s. 300, Excep. I.

In an altercation the deceased returned the abuse and caught hold of accused's tuft of hair, and gave him a blow with his fist on the back. The deceased and accused then closed with each other and accused caught hold of deceased's tuft also and stabbed the deceased to death by a knife :

Held, that the offence came under s 300, Penal Code, Excep. I as there was grave and sudden provocation. THIRUPATHURAN v. EMPEROR Mad. 408

——ss. 300, 302—Accused armed with deadly weapon thrushing it into the chest of deceased causing instantaneous death—Intention to murder, inference of.

If a man, who is armed with a deadly weapon like a sela, thrusts that weapon into the chest of his victim and causes instantaneous death, he can have only one intention, namely, intention to murder. CHAND SINGH v EMPEROR Lah. 275 ——ss. 300, 302, 304, Part. II—Sudden quarrel—Single dang blow on head—Death—Offence.

Where in a sudden quarrel, the accused deals a single blow with a dang on the head of his antagonist, an old man whose weakness and enlarged spleen might have hastened his death which ensues, the accused is guilty not of murder but of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. GURCHARAN SINGH v. EMPEROR Lah 77 (a)

——s. 302.

SEE Penal Code, 1860, s. 34 599
SEE Penal Code, 1860, s. 300 275
SEE Penal Code, 1860, s. 304 560

——s. 302—Conviction and sentence for offence under s. 307 still in force—Subsequent trial and conviction under s. 302, if barred—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 403 (3).

An accused was tried and convicted on July 22, 1933, of attempted murder of one G and sentenced to imprisonment under s. 307, Penal Code. G died on July 25. The accused was re-tried under the provisions of s. 403, cl (3), Criminal Procedure Code, and sentenced to death under s. 302, Penal Code :

Held, that the previous conviction was no bar to subsequent trial and conviction. ARSALA KHAN v. EMPEROR Pesh. 287

——ss. 304, 302, 149—Accused acting without premeditation and on grave and sudden provocation—Accused beating complainant's party—Actual person causing fatal injury not known—Death—Offence—All are liable for offence.

Where without premeditation but on grave and sudden provocation, the accused more than five in number, attacked the complainant's party and beat them and as a result of the injuries received, one of the latter died, and while it was not known who of the accused party caused the fatal injuries, it was found that though they were not acting in self-defence, they did not take undue advantage or act in a cruel or unusual manner :

Held, that all the accused were responsible for the injuries inflicted but the offence committed was not murder but culpable homicide not amounting to murder and were punishable under ss. 304-149, Penal Code. BHAGWAN DAS v. EMPEROR All. 560

——ss. 307, 326—Essentials for conviction under s. 307—Doctor's testimony that injuries inflicted were not sufficient in the ordinary course to cause death—Conviction under s. 307 is wrong.

To sustain a conviction under s. 307, Penal Code, it is necessary that there must be an act done under such circumstances that death might be caused if the act took effect. The act must be capable of causing death in the natural and ordinary course of things; and if the act complained of is not of that description, the assailant cannot be convicted of an attempt to murder under s. 307, Penal Code. Where the doctor who treated the injured does not say that the injuries inflicted by the accused were sufficient in the ordinary course to cause her death, the principle of deducing intention from the nature of the injuries and their natural and probable consequences is misapplied and a conviction under s. 307 is not sustainable. The conviction must be altered to one under s. 326 and a sentence of 18 months' rigorous imprisonment cannot be considered to be so grossly inadequate as to require enhancement. EMPEROR v. BALLI Nag. 1014

——s. 309—Attempt to commit suicide—Sentence—Discretion of Court.

The law confers upon the Court a very wide discretion in the matter of punishment, and it is not necessary to inflict a sentence of imprisonment upon a person who on account of family discord, destitution, loss of a dear relation, or other cause of a like nature, overcomes the instinct of self-preservation and decides to take his life In such a case, the unfortunate person deserves indulgence, and should be either released on probation of good conduct or sentenced to a fine if he is not too poor to pay the fine. These observations apply with greater force to the case of a woman who attempts to commit suicide in similar circumstances. It is not possible to lay down any hard and fast rule on the subject but the Court must, in each case, consider the motive which has prompted a person to destroy his or her life. BARKAT v EMPEROR Lah. 283

——s 323. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 237 540 (a)

——s. 326. SEE Penal Code, 1860, s. 307 1014

——s. 339—Voluntary obstruction of vehicle—Whether constitutes wrongful restraint.

The voluntary obstruction of a vehicle cannot be held to amount to wrongful restraint within the meaning of s. 339, Penal Code. DURGA PADA CHATTERJEE v. NILMANI GHOSE Cal. 444 (a) ——s. 353. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s 237 540 (a)

——s. 353—Assault—Ingredients of offence—Use of abusive language—Threatening with lathi in heat of temper—Assault, if committed—Sentence.

Whether a particular act amounts or does not amount to an assault depends upon the circumstances of each particular case. A particular act may not amount to an assault in one case, but the same act taken along with the other surrounding circumstances may amount to an assault in another case. Where, therefore, the accused interposed between the attaching officer and the cattle which he was proceeding to attach and being removed under the orders of the officer, he indulged in the use of abusive language and thereafter went away threatening that he would return and teach them a lesson and soon afterwards he came back with a lathi with companions and came sufficiently close to the officers to raise in their minds a reasonable apprehension that actual force was likely to be used:

Penal Code—contd.

Held, that the act of the accused came within the definition of assault.

Held, also that as the accused's subsequent appearance on the scene was in the heat of the moment and soon realising the situation he ran away from the spot and no violence or force was used by him, a sentence of fine would meet the ends of justice. RAM SINGH v. EMPEROR Pat. 421 (b

——— s. 358—Accused using criminal force on grave and sudden provocation—Conviction under s. 358—Propriety of.

Where the accused uses criminal force on grave and sudden provocation given by the patrol who had abused the accused the conviction ought to be under s. 358, Penal Code. DIP CHAND v. EMPEROR All. 540 (a) ——— s. 366—Object of accused to bring pressure to bear on husband of woman—Judge's direction likely to lead jury to believe that this was object of accused—Conviction under s. 366—Legality of—Jury trial—Misdirection

In a case under s. 366, Penal Code, if the object of the accused was to bring pressure to bear on the husband of the woman, it cannot be said that they knew it to be likely that she would be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse.

Where it appeared by the Judge's direction to the jury, the jury were likely to be misled, that is, they were likely to believe that what they had to find was not that the woman was abducted for illicit intercourse but that she was abducted for the purpose of bringing pressure to bear on her husband, and they brought in a verdict of guilty on his understanding, the conviction under s. 366 ought not to stand. NARAIN v EMPEROR All. 662

——— ss. 366, 368, 497—Complaint under ss. 366, 368—All requirements of s. 497, fulfilled—Conviction under s 497, if legal

If a complaint under ss. 366 and 368, fulfils all the requirements of a complaint under s. 497, and clearly makes an accusation of an offence under that section, then, if the adultery complained of is proved, a conviction under that section will not be illegal on the ground that there has been no complaint as required by s. 199 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. SAIN v EMPEROR Lah. 595

——— s. 376. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 297 584

——— s. 377—Attempt at unnatural offence—Some activity on part of accused to thrust male organ into anus of passive agent necessary—Mere preparation is not enough.

The offence made punishable under s. 377, Penal Code, requires that penetration, however little, should be proved strictly. Thus an attempt to commit this offence should be an attempt to thrust the male organ into the anus of the passive agent. Some activity on the part of the accused in that particular direction ought to be proved strictly. A mere preparation for the operation should not necessarily be construed as an attempt.

Where there was an intention on the part of the accused to satisfy his lust by a carnal intercourse against the order of nature and he made every preparation to satisfy that lust, but before he could thrust his organ in, he spent himself; then he cannot be said to have done any act which might be construed as an attempt to commit the offence of sodomy. NOWSHIRWAN IRANI v. EMPEROR Sind 435 ——— ss. 378, 392—Offence under s. 392—Nature of—Removing of property found by chance after quarrel—Held, offence came under s. 378.

Section 392, Penal Code, contemplates that the accused should have, from the very start, the intention to deprive the complainant of the property and should for that purpose either hurt him or place him under wrongful restraint. Where the inception of the struggle was only a quarrel and it was at the end that the accused found a chance of taking the chaplis and the sheet of the complainant in order to ensure the payment of the money due to him :

Held, that the offence was one under s. 378 and not under s. 392, Penal Code. MIR BAZ v. EMPEROR Pesh. 952

——— s. 380. SEE Criminal trial 74

——— s. 392. SEE Penal Code, 1860, s. 378 952

——— s. 394—Medical evidence not proving death from throttling—Confession not made to Magistrate—Ornaments recovered not connected with deceased—Conviction under s. 394, legality of.

Where the medical evidence did not prove that the deceased died from asphyxiation by throttling, some symptoms favouring that view and some not favouring it and the confession was not made before a Magistrate but was only stated to have been made in the village to three villagers whose evidence was of little weight to prove that a confession was made, and although the evidence of ornaments stolen being found in the houses of the accused might be correct, yet the prosecution failed to connect those ornaments with the deceased :

Held, that the prosecution had not proved the charge against the accused under s. 394, Penal Code, and they were entitled to an acquittal. RAM CHARAN v. EMPEROR All. 119

——— s. 406. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 239 163

——— s. 406—Partnership—Accused admitting receipt of money but defending by saying that he returned it—Onus of non-payment.

Where the accused, in a trial under s. 406 against him admits having received the money alleged to have been misappropriated by him, but defended himself by saying that he had made it over to the proper person, the onus to prove the payment is not upon him, but it is on the prosecution to prove non-payment ; for it is only when the latter is proved that the presumption will arise of misappropriation or breach of trust. BHIKCHAND GANGARAM v. EMPEROR Sind 439

——— s. 408—Working partner not contributing anything to partnership—Whether a clerk or servant within the meaning of s. 408—Whether can be guilty of breach of trust or misappropriation.

A working partner who has not contributed anything towards partnership business, is a 'servant' or 'clerk' within s. 408, Penal Code, and can be held guilty of criminal misappropriation or breach of trust. BHIKCHAND GANGARAM v. EMPEROR Sind 439

——— s. 411. SEE Criminal trial 74

——— ss. 417, 420. SEE Contract Act, 1872, s 23 341

——— ss. 420 and 120-B. SEE Evidence Act, 1872, s. 32 (3) 261

——— s. 441. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 238 629

Penal Code—contd.

———s. 452—Trespass into complainant's house to overawe him so as not to employ a person as priest—Interference with religion—Offence not to be treated lightly.

An interference with religion by preventing a person from employing another as his priest by forcibly entering the former's house to overawe him is not to be treated lightly. A fine of Rs. 50 is not excessive. GANGA SINGH v. EMPEROR All. 541

———s 454. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 238 629

———s 457. SEE Criminal trial 74

———s. 486—Counterfeiting trade-mark—Offence, when committed—Test in such cases.

A person who employs a label which in general resembles the label used by another manufacturer, is guilty of counterfeiting a trade-mark under s 486 of the Penal Code, irrespective of the circumstance that the registered trade-mark of the one is quite different from the trade-mark of the other. The test is not, whether a literate purchaser would be deceived if he had the two marks side by side, but whether an ordinary unwary purchaser would be deceived. FAQIR CHAND v EMPEROR Lah. 270

——— s. 488—Inhabited house—Delivery of possession — How to be made—Actual possession not delivered to purchaser—Forcible entry by purchaser—Whether amounts to criminal trespass.

In order to effect delivery of possession of an inhabited house, it is necessary to eject the former occupier, delivery of possession of the house not being a mere formal act effected by beating a drum and putting up a notice. Where the certificate-debtor makes a forcible entry into the house, possession whereof has not actually be delivered to the purchaser, the former cannot be treated as having committed an act of criminal trespass. RAM JANAM SINGH v. MOHAN LALL AHIR Pat. 908

———s. 497. SEE Penal Code, 1860, s 366 595

——— s. 498—Absence of complaint as required by s. 199—Charge under s. 498 added—Question if charge was proper—Whether one of law—Charge under s. 498 without complaint — Jurisdiction to frame—Trial, validity of.

Where a case was committed to the Sessions Court under ss. 366, 420 and 120-B of the Penal Code, but though there had been no complaint by any person competent under s. 199, Criminal Procedure Code, to make one, the Court added a charge under s. 498, Penal Code and the charges under ss. 366 and 498 being tried by jury, a verdict of guilty under s. 498 was brought against some of the accused:

Held, that whether the charge under s. 498 of the Penal Code was or was not proper was a question of law; and under s. 298 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it was the Judge's plain duty to decide that question himself instead of leaving it to the jury and that if the Judge was not really satisfied that the additional charge was not proper, there was no reason whatsoever why he should have treated it as question of fact and left it for the jury to deal with.

Held, also that the charge under s. 498 was framed and tried without any jurisdiction at all, having regard to the terms of s. 199 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and that all the proceedings that followed upon that charge were equally without jurisdiction. RAMJANAM TEWARI v. EMPEROR Pat. 866

———s. 500.

SEE Contract Act, 1872, s. 23 341

SEE Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, s. 7 450

Penal Code—concld.

———s. 500—Defamation—Essence of offence—Articles implying that girls of a college were habitually guilty of misbehaviour—All girls in college collectively and each girl individually suffer in reputation—Complaint for defamation—Maintainability of.

The essence of the offence of defamation is the publication of an imputation with the knowledge that it will harm the reputation of the person defamed.

Where certain articles published in a paper contained scandalous accusations against the girl students of a college and implied that the girls were habitually guilty of misbehaviour described in the article, the inevitable effect on the reader must be to make him believe that it is habitual with the girls of the college to behave in this way. As by the articles all the girls in the college collectively and each girl individually suffer in reputation, an action for defamation is competent by some of them. WAHID ULLAH AHRARI v. EMPEROR All. 638

Pleadings.

SEE Company 1

SEE Decree 997

SEE Specific Relief Act, 1877, s. 42 244

——— Plea of unfair transaction must be specifically raised in plaint—Subsequent events should not be considered while considering whether transaction is fair or not.

If a transaction is attacked on the ground that the transaction was not a fair transaction at all, the party attacking ought to make a specific case in the plaint and ought to join an issue on the point in order to enable the other party to show that the transaction was not an unfair one.

Whether the transaction is one that should be set aside as inequitable would depend upon the circumstances at the time when it was made and not upon subsequent events. PURNA CHANDRA CHAUDHRY v. SAROJINI CHAUDHURANI Cal. 1027

Police Act (V of 1861), ss. 15, 16—Cost of additional Police quartered in village—Distress warrant for realization given to Assessment Officer—Whether can be endorsed to clerk—Property attached, not exclusive property of accused but joint family property—Liability to be attached.

Where a distress warrant for realisation of amount due by way of cost of additional Police quartered in a village is entrusted for execution to the Assessment Officer, there is no provision either in the Code or the rules framed by the Local Government under s. 386 of the Code of Crimnal Procedure enabling him to endorse the warrant to his clerk.

Where the warrant is not for the realisation of fine imposed on any individual but for the realisation of cost of the additional Police quartered in a particular village which was apportioned on the inhabitants of that village, the entire family is the defaulter and the warrant for realization is issued against its head not in his individual capacity but in his capacity as head of the family which was assessed to that cost and the family property is liable to be seized. The cost may be realized as a fine but is not fine.

When an officer is entrusted with a warrant to attach the property of certain persons, his first duty is to ascertain by all means possible what property belonged to that person which is liable to be attached. Having satisfied himself that certain property belongs to that individual, it is his duty to attach that property unless some objection is raised which raises in his mind a reasonable doubt that the property does not belong to the person against whom the warrant has been issued. When no objection is raised, the Assessment Officer will be performing a legal duty when he proceeds to attach property. RAM SINGH v. EMPEROR Pat. 421 (b) S. B.

Police Act—concld.

——— s. 30—Scope of—Power of absolutely refusing permission to take out a procession—Whether can be read into the Act—Breaking promise not to take out procession—Whether amounts to disobeying order issued under the Act.

It is the right of a citizen to use the public thoroughfares, provided that he commits no offence in doing so, and the taking out of a procession is not in itself an offence, nor does it require a special licence, except as provided by s. 30 of the Police Act. Section 30 empowers the authorities to control processions, and the manner in which they are to be controlled, if it is necessary to control them, is set forth in sub-s. (2). Neither in the marginal note, nor in the body of the section, is any express power given to the authorities absolutely to forbid the taking out of a procession. It is impossible to read into the Act any authority for absolutely refusing permission to take out a procession.

To break a promise to the Superintendent of Police made by a person that he would not take out a procession is not to disobey an order issued under the Act and he cannot be convicted. QASIM RAZA v. EMPEROR All. 605

Power-of-Attorney—Agent authorised to represent family in Civil, Criminal, Revenue, registration and mutation proceedings—Whether includes power to incur debts.

Where an agent has a power of-attorney authorising him to represent the members of the family in Civil, Criminal and Revenue Courts and in registration and mutation proceedings, there is no presumption that he was authorised to incur debts on behalf of the family. SHRIRAM v. MOHANLAL Nag. 607

——— Construction—Income-tax return signed, verified and filed by agent—Whether permitted by terms of power of attorney—No evidence as to knowledge of assessee—Income-tax authorities not changing their position due to implied representation—Estoppel, if arises—Income Tax Act (XI of 1922), s. 23—Production of account books by assessee—Whether implies ratification of filing of return by agent.

A return of income for an year was filed on behalf of a taluqdar by his mukhtar who also signed and verified the return. The relevant clause of the mukhtarnama was as follows:

Therefore, I appoint..... as my mukhtar-i-ams and any suits (nalishat) filed by them in Civil Courts, Revenue Courts, Collectorates, Criminal Courts, Appellate Courts, in the Settlement Department, Cantonment, Police, Municipalities in British India Chief Court, High Court, Commissioner's Court, Board of Revenue and other Government departments, or any applications (darkhwasts) filed by them on my behalf..... .....or plaints, memoranda of appeal, or written statements, or affidavits filed in support of any application..... All such proceedings shall be accepted by me as having been done by me personally —

Held, (1) that though there was no mention of the income-tax department, the words "other Government departments" were sufficiently wide to include the department of Income-tax.

(2) that the general object of the power was that the agent should be able to represent his principal in proceedings in Courts so as to dispense with the necessity of the principal appearing personally but it did not give the agent any authority to sign or verify the return of income for the purposes of assessment of income-tax.

(3) that there was no evidence that the return was filed with the authority or even with the knowledge of the assessee and even if he had the knowledge, as the income-tax authorities had not in any way changed their position to their detriment on account of any implied representation on the part of the assessee about the mukhtar's authority to sign and verify the return, no question of estoppel could arise.

(4) that the production of the account books by the assessee in pursuance of notice, did not constitute any ratification in respect of the return of income. In the matter of COMMISSIONER OF INCOME TAX, C P. & U. P. Oudh 180

Practice. SEE Appeal 743

———Appellate Court—Credibility of witness—Appellate Court, if can differ from original Court.

It is dangerous for an Appellate Court to differ from an original Court on the question of the credibility of witnesses and basing its opposite decision on mere inferences from the statements which the witnesses are recorded to have made which an Appellate Court cannot make with such certitude as can the Court which originally heard the witnesses. DAW MIN BAW v. CHETTYAR FIRM Rang. 511 ———Appellate Court deciding that decision of trial Court was wrong on legal issue—Suit should be remanded for trial on remaining issues.

Where an Appellate Court decides that the decision of the trial Court is wrong on a legal issue, it should remand the case for trial on the remaining issue and it should not decide an issue of fact itself in the absence of evidence on it. MEYAPPA CHETTYAR v. VENKATACHELLAM CHETTYAR Rang. 997 ———Bar Council—Findings by—Importance given by High Court.

The High Court usually attaches great weight to the finding of fact of a Committee of the Bar Tribunal. In the matter of AN ADVOCATE, HIGH COURT, ALLAHABAD All. 1054 S. B.

———Courts should apply proper law and give proper relief—Litigant is not obliged to put down provision of law under which he seeks relief.

It is the business of the Court to know the law and it is only incumbent upon the litigant to come before the Court and state the facts in respect of which he seeks the remedy. He must ask for such remedies as he requires and there is no obligation on him to inform the Court under which Statute or Rule he is entitled to claim those remedies. If he does not state the Statute or the Rule or if he states a wrong Statute or wrong Rule, that in no way relieves the Court of the obligation of itself applying the appropriate rule or section. KABUTRI v. RAM PRASHAD SAHU Pat. 225

———Defendant submitting to the ruling of Court as to burden of proof and producing his evidence—Subsequent refusal—Plaintiff's evidence over—Application for further evidence by defendant refused—Held, he ought to be allowed to adduce evidence subject to paying plaintiff's costs—Burden of proof.

Practice—contd.

When a suit was taken up the Vakils on both sides were absent. The Munsif then put the plaintiff into the witness-box and elicited an answer to a question. By that time the plaintiff's Vakil turned up and said that the burden of proof was not on the plaintiff and that the defendant should begin. The Munsif then put the defendant's agent into the box as a witness on the defendant's side and began to examine him himself. After some examination the case was adjourned. The defendant's Vakil turned up later and continued the examination of the witness. Later on, the defendant put in an application that the burden of proving issues lay on the plaintiff and that he (plaintiff) should be directed to begin. The defendant's petition was dismissed. The examination of the defendant's witness No 1 was continued and witness No. 2 on her side was also examined in part and some documents were filed. The suit was then adjourned. On the adjourned date defendant's witness No. 1 was re-called and examined, but the defendant's Vakil declined to proceed with the further chief examination of defendant's witness No 2. The plaintiff's Vakil was then allowed to cross-examine him and his evidence was closed. The defendant's Vakil put in a memorandum that day declining to let in any further evidence as the burden of proof lay on the plaintiff. The evidence on the plaintiff's side was then taken and the case was proceeded with. When the plaintiff's evidence was closed, the defendant's Vakil wanted permission to adduce evidence on the defendant's side. This permission was refused by the Munsif and the case was finally closed and a decree was given in favour of the plaintiff:

Held, that the defendant's Pleader was not justified in refusing to adduce further evidence, after he had submitted to that ruling and proceeded with the examination of defendant's witnesses Nos. 1 and 2. In view of the circumstances it was necessary in the ends of justice that an opportunity should be given to the defendant to adduce evidence. But this concession could be given only on condition that he pays all the costs of the plaintiff except the institution fee up to date irrespective of the result of the suit. SIGAPPI v. KATHAYEE Mad. 190 ———Duty of Court—Plaintiff's case rejected—Court, if can proceed on equitable grounds to grant relief without considering risk taken by defendant.

The Court is not justified in rejecting practically the whole of the plaintiff's case as made out in the plaint and then proceeding to give her some relief on equitable grounds without taking into consideration the risk which the defendant was taking in this transaction. PURNA CHANDRA CHAUDHRY v. SAROJINI CHADDHRANI Cal. 1027 ——Evidence — Plaintiff wanting to explain certain acknowledgment after defendant's evidence —Court, if can refuse evidence material to decision.

Where in a suit the question is whether certain letters written by the defendant are acknowledgments, the defendant admitting that they were written by him but professing ignorance as to whether they referred to the amount in dispute, and the plaintiff wants to give evidence to explain these letters, the Court should not refuse to record any evidence and then draw any adverse inference if it thinks fit to do so from the circumstances in which that evidence is given and in refusing to record evidence which is material for the decision of the case, the Court acts illegally. NIHALU RAM CHELA RAM v. RADHU RAM HUKMI RAM Lah. 1074

Practice—concld.

———Finding of fact based on evidence, whether final.

A finding of fact arrived at by a Court of fact is final, if such finding is based on evidence. GOPI KRISHNA SAHA v. SURENDRA NATH CHAUDHURY Cal. 154

——— Lahore High Court. SEE Criminal trial 241

———New plea—Fresh evidence necessary—Whether can be raised in appeal.

Where plea was not taken in the lower Court, nor was it raised in the grounds of appeal, but it had been submitted as an additional ground of appeal:

Held, that the appellants could not raise this new point on appeal for deciding which it was necessary to take evidence. ARJAN SINGH-BHAJJAN SINGH v. FIRM SURJAN SINGH-ACHARAJ SINGH Pesh. 1006

———New point—Point of law—No additional evidence necessary—Whether can be raised in second appeal.

Where a point was one of law and no additional evidence was necessary nor was it necessary to make assumptions before the point could be decided;

Held, that it could be raised in second appeal. MATI LAL DAS v ADITYA CHANDRA DAS Cal. 720

———Person appearing before Judge as accused —Whether raises presumption that Judge has hostile feelings towards him.

Per Thom, J.—Because an accused person appears before a Judge in his Court it is ludicrous to suggest that that Judge should be presumed to entertain towards him any feeling of hostility or that the Judge, impelled by malice, would pursue the party into his private life and use his influence to prejudice the party and undermine his interests or defeat his legitimate intentions. In the matter of AN ADVOCATE, CAWNPORE All. 1043 S. B.

———Privy Council—Concurrent findings based on appreciation of evidence—Whether will be disturbed by Privy Council.

Concurrent findings of the Courts below, proceeding upon an appreciation of the evidence adduced by the parties, will not be disturbed by the Privy Council RAMAKRISHNA AYYAR v. PARAMESWARA AYYAR P. C. 385 ———Suit against some only of the legal representatives of deceased debtor—Maintainability—Decree, if binding on other legal representatives not impleaded—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 52.

There is no law that all the legal representatives of a deceased person must be impleaded. It is sufficient that the plaintiff sues those persons whom he considers to be the legal representatives after enquiry. If such persons are sued, the suit is a good one and the decree will be effective to the extent of the property of the deceased which has reached their hands and a suit of this nature cannot be defeated by reason of the fact that two other sons have not been impleaded though the sons who are not impleaded will not be bound by the decree. ALI MUHAMMAD v. ALI MUHAMMAD Lah. 285

———Suitors should feel that Court does not decide as to veracity of witnesses before they are seen in witness-box.

It is of cardinal importance that suitors in Courts of justice should enter and leave the Courts with a feeling that whatever may be the upshot of actions which are commenced and fought out, the Court at any rate does not make up its mind as to the truth or untruth of their witnesses before the witnesses have been seen in the witness-box. MOUSELL & Co., LD. v. GHANSHYAMDAS JAMNADAS Cal. 29

Pre-emption—Purchaser with equal rights with pre-emptor associating in purchase with person with inferior rights— Whether can resist pre-emptor's claim.

If a purchaser having an equal right of pre-emption associates with himself in the purchase, a person with rights inferior to those of the pre-emptor, he is not entitled to resist the claim of such pre-emptor to enforce his rights even as to his share of the purchase. BHAGWANA v. SHADI Lah. 654

———Sale disguised as mortgage to avoid pre-emption—Suit for pre-emption—Limitation, when commences.

Where a sale is disguised as a mortgage in order to avoid pre-emption, a suit for pre-emption can be brought within one year from the date on which the fraud is discovered. BHAGWANA v. SHADI Lah 654

Press and Registration of Books Act (XXV of 1867), s. 7—Presumption under—Identity with publisher of offending matter on production of copy of declaration—Whether can be deduced—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 500.

At the trial of a person for publishing a libel contained in a newspaper, the presumption permitted to be raised by s. 7 of Act XXV of 1867, as to his identity with the publisher of the offending matter, on production of the copy of his declaration given under s. 5 (?) ibid, is restricted to the prima facie proof that he was the publisher only at the place specified in the declaration and does not extend to the proof of the fact that he was also the publisher of the libel at places not specified in the declaration. DIWAN SINGH v. EMPEROR Nag 450

Presumption—Copy of judgment—Presumption as to accuracy of figures SEE Limitation Act, 1908, ss. 5, 12 588

Probate SEE Oudh Courts Act, 1925, s. 31 ( ) 501

———Application for sale of property covered by will after obtaining probate— Application not specifically headed as one under Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), s 307—Duty of Court.

Where an application for sale of property covered by a will is made by a person who has obtained probate of the will but the application is not specifically headed as being one under s. 307, Succession Act, it is the duty of the Court to find out whether it had jurisdiction in the matter of the application or not under any provision of law. MADHO RAM v JAI CHAND RAI All. 933

Promissory note—Loan and note contemporaneous —No anterior liability apart from note—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 62.

Where the promissory note as well as the loan are contemporaneous, there is really no question of a definite anterior liability apart from the note. CHOCKALINGAM CHETTIAR v. RAMA MU RAMA PALANIAPPA Mad. 184

———Loans independently of them—Creditor, if can sue on original cause of action which arose out of same transaction as execution of note.

Where there is a loan independently of the note the creditor is not debarred from suing on the original cause of action by the fact that the cause of action arose out of the same transaction in the course which the promissory note was 'executed." INDU BALA DASSI v. LAKSHMI NARAYAN GANGULY Cal. 1109

———Note executed by guardian of minor—Guardian not signing as such—Minor described as maker in body of note—Liability of minor—Guardian's power to execute promissory notes on behalf of minor—Frame of suit—Hindu Law—Minority and Guardianship.

A promissory note was executed by the mother of the minor defendants. In the body of the note the minor defendants were described as the makers with the words 'represented by their mother and guardian V,' but the note was signed by the mother V without any such description attached to her name. The pro-note was itself executed in renewal of an earlier promissory note executed by the defendants' father:

Promissory note—contd.

Held, in a suit upon the note, that it was binding on the estate of the minor defendants. In inferring the intention of the parties in such a case one must look at all the surrounding circumstances and the liability of the minor in such cases under the Hindu Law is not affected by the fact that the promissory note was made by the guardian. YELURI SATYANARAYANA v. YELURI MALLAYYA Mad. 851 F. B.

———Payment, where to be made—Principle that debtor should make payment where creditor resides—Whether applicable to negotiable instruments—Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 70.

The principle, that in the absence of any specific agreement as to the place where the payment of a debt is to be made, it is the duty of the debtor to make the payment where the creditor resides, or where his place of business is, is not applicable to negotiable instruments. Payment due under a promissory note, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, is ordinarily to be made at the usual place of business of the maker or at his residence. GOPIKISAN SHEONARAIN v. JETHMAL GOVERDHANDAS Nag. 953

———Pro-note not paid at maturity— Creditor, if can sue on original debt — Contract—Jurisdiction —Money agreed to be paid and actually paid at Madras—Agreement and subsequent promissory note made outside Madras—Suit at Madras for recovery of money paid—Jurisdiction—Interest.

When a cause of action for money lent is once complete in itself, and the debtor then gives a promissory note to the creditor for payment of the money at a future time, the creditor, if the note is not paid at maturity, may always, as a rule, sue for the original consideration, provided that he has not endorsed or lost or parted with the note, under such circumstances as to make the debtor liable upon it to some third person.

A letter was given which empowered the holder of that letter to go to the plaintiff's Madras firm and require the plaintiff's agent at Madras to pay at Madras to the order of the defendant. After this the defendant executed a promissory note in favour of the plaintiff for the same amount, the promissory note containing a clause for interest. These transactions took place outside Madras. The payment, however, was made in Madras The suit for recovery of money lent and interest thereon was filed at Madras:

Held, that since the payment was agreed to be made and in fact made at Madras, part of the cause of action had arisen at Madras and therefore the Madas Court had jurisdiction.

Held, further, that the suit having been based on the contract of loan and not on the promissory note, the plaintiff was only entitled to interest at a reasonable rate from the date of demand and not at the rate provided by the promissory note. MURUGAPPA CHETTY v. NACHIAPPA CHETTY Mad. 164 ———Usage in Burma and India among Nattukottai Chettiars—Held, on usage, that firm was payee and sole proprietor could sue on it.

A promissory note was executed to K. S. A. V. Ramiah Raja, and the firm was carrying on business under the style of K. S. A. V.:

Promissory note—concld.

Held, in accordance with usage prevailing in Burma and India among Nattukottai Chettiars by which a Chettyar firm described generally by initials of firm prefixed to name of partner and agent, that the firm was the payee under the note and the appellant who was the sole proprietor of it could sue on it. K. S. A. V. CHETTYAR FIRM v. MAHMOO Rang. 935

Provident Funds Act (XIX of 1925), ss. 4, 5 (2) —Nominee holding certificate, whether entitled to preference to another having obtained prior certificate.

The effect of s. 4, Provident Funds Act, is that in a competition between two persons it is the nominee who holds a certificate who is entitled to the money. Where, therefore, a widow holds a succession certificate in respect of assets of her deceased husband but subsequently a nominee of her husband obtains a succession certificate for the provident fund amount, the latter is entitled to the money and the former's certificate is no bar. ATUL CHANDRA SEN v. KAUNAMMAL Cal. 749

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), ss. 4, 53 —Transfer by insolvent—Transferee transferring property to third party—Receiver's application for annulment of insolvent's transfer—Third party not impleaded—Order of annulment, if binding on third party—Right to show that original transfer was made in good faith.

Where the transferee of an insolvent transfers the property to a third party and the Receiver has knowledge of it, but in a subsequent petition by the Receiver for annulment of the transfer made by the insolvent, the third party is not impleaded, he is not bound by an order of annulment made against the transferee from the insolvent It will, therefore be open to him to show that the original transfer by the insolvent was made in good faith and for valuable consideration and also to show that he himself acted in good faith and paid full consideration being unaware of the insolvency proceedings. AMIR AHMAD v. SYED HASAN All. 684

——— ss. 4, 52—Execution sale—Judgment-debtor adjudicated insolvent — Insolvency proceedings—Court refusing to set aside sale—Subsequent application by insolvent and another creditor to set aside sale—Maintainability.

In certain execution proceedings the property of the judgment-debtor was put up for sale and sold. The debtor was declared insolvent. In the proceedings in insolvency taken by the Receiver under s. 4, Provincial Insolvency Act, the Court found that no fraud was committed in respect of the sale. Subsequently, some year after confirmation of the sale, an application was made by the insolvent together with another creditor and they asked under s. 4 or the Act for a declaration that the very sale, which had been the subject of the earlier decision by the Judge in insolvency on the application of the Receiver, was invalid, and again raised the question of the jurisdiction of the Court under s. 52 of the Insolvency Act. The sale was held to be illegal and without jurisdiction :

Held, that the matter had been already decided in the earlier application and that decision being a judgment in rem could not be disturbed by subsequent applications even if not between the same parties.

Held, also that the Receiver not having taken any steps to appeal from the order in the earlier proceedings, it was not right, having taken that definite attitude and taken advantage of that attitude, that the auction-purchaser should be prejudiced either on behalf of the insolvent or on behalf of the creditors by an attempt to set aside the sale which took place so long ago and when a previous attempt to set aside the sale had failed. BANSI RAM v. FIRM ANANDI RAM MOHAN Pat. 784

——— ss. 4, 56 (3) proviso—Property sold—Receiver claiming it as insolvent's—Delivery of possession to purchaser, when can be given—Decision on question of title—Necessity of.

The house in dispute was claimed by the Receiver as the property of the insolvents. The appellants denied the title of the insolvents and claimed to be the owners of the house in dispute. They preferred an objection in the Insolvency Court putting forward their claim and denying the right of the insolvents. The appellants' objection was dismissed for non-appearance. The Receiver subsequently sold the house to the respondent, who applied to the Insolvency Court for delivery of possession of the house to her. The appellants objected to any delivery of possession being made. In their objection they reiterated their title to the house and repudiated that of the insolvents. The insolvency Judge summarily dismissed the objection on the ground that a similar objection had been previously dismissed :

Held, that before the question of title is decided either by a decree in a separate suit or by an order under s. 4, Insolvency Act, the appellants could not be dispossessed from the property which, to all appearance, they claimed in perfect good faith to be their own and the fact that the appellant had not pressed his objection on a certain occasion did not justify the Insolvency Court in treating the property as belonging to the insolvent. DWARKA PRASAD v. SUNDER All. 1037

——— s. 28—Creditor obtaining decree on understanding that debtors are insolvents—Remedy—Separate execution—Legality of.

Where a creditor has obtained a decree on the understanding that he was getting a decree against certain insolvents, his exclusive remedy is to go to the Insolvency Court and get rateable shares in the assets and not to proceed separately by way of execution and claim priority as against the Official Receiver. BHAGWAN DAS v. LAKSHMI CHAND All. 661

——— s. 28—Right of Hindu father to dispose of Joint Hindu family property to satisfy his debts —Whether property within meaning of s. 28. SEE Hindu Law—Joint family business 661

——— s. 28 (4)—On death of person property devolving on undischarged insolvent—Property vests in Receiver—Mortgage of such property by insolvent —Receiver not claiming property in insolvency proceedings—Property if revests in mortgagor—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 3.

Where on the death of a person the share of his esate devolves on an insolvent, it forthwith vests in the Receiver, and a mortgage of that share by the insolvent is invalid.

Although the property vested in the Receiver, if he never claimed it in the insolvency proceedings, in the absence of any order to the contrary, the property in question must be considered to have revested in the mortgagor on his discharge, and the principle laid down in s 43 of the Transfer of Property Act would be applicable and on the re-vesting of the property in the mortgagor the mortgagee will be entitled to enforce the mortgage. DIWAN CHAND v. MANAK CHAND Lah. 938

——— s. 28 (6) (2)—Secured creditor can realize security by filing suit without obtaining leave of Court

A secured creditor of the insolvent is entitled

Provincial Insolvency Act—contd.

notwithstanding s. 28 (2), Provincial Insolvency Act, to realise the security by filing a suit or otherwise in accordance with law without obtaining the leave of the Court in that behalf. M. K. M. CHETTYAR FIRM v. MAUNG THAUNG Rang. 227

——ss. 47, 48—Applicability. SEE Insolvency 426

——s. 52. SEE Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, s. 4 734

——s. 52—Attachment of properties of debtor in execution of decree—Subsequent appointment by insolvency Court, of interim Receiver — Order of stay of execution and order under s. 52 by insolvency Court—Legality—Remedy—Proper proceedure.

Where after the attachment of property of a debtor in execution of a decree against him, the insolvency Court admits a petition for insolvency by the debtor and appoints an interim Receiver, it is only the Executing Court that can pass an order under s. 52, Provincial Insolvency Act, on an application made to it and not the insolvency Court and where, on an application by a petitioning creditor the execution proceedings are already stayed by the insolvency Court and also an order passed under s. 52 of the Act, on an application by the decree-holder, directing the Receiver to sell the property for realising the costs of the suit and of the execution, there are two alternatives either of which may be adopted. One of these alternatives is for the insolvency Court to direct the Receiver to make a proper application to the Executing Court in order to obtain the necessary order under s. 52, Provincial Insolvency Act ; and the other alternative is for the decree-holders to apply to the Executing Court for the sale of the properties under attachment in order that their dues may be realized, in which case the insolvency Court has to vacate the stay order which he had already made. MATHURESH CHAKRAVARTY v. S. R. MILLS CO., LTD. Cal. 77 (b)

——s. 53. SEE Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, s. 4 684

——ss. 53, 54—Mortgage by father and sons—Father alone adjudicated—Mortgage can be avoided under ss. 53 and 54 only in respect of father's share—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 53.

Where a father executed a mortgage of properties belonging to him and his two minor sons to one of their creditors acting on his own behalf and as guardian of his minor sons; and the father alone was subsequently adjudged an insolvent :

Held, that the transfer by the insolvent father alone to the extent of his own share therein would come within s. 54 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. The transfer of the sons' shares cannot be dealt with either under s. 53 or s. 54 of the Insolvency Act, though it may be sought to be avoided under s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act. SUBRAMANIAN CHETTIAR v. SUBBARAYA GOUNDEN Mad. 611

——s. 54—Debtor in embarrassed circumstances —Mortgage in favour of one of them giving him a vendictive preference to punish the others—Transaction, if falls within s. 54—Vindictive preference, whether fraudulent.

Where a debtor who was in embarassed circumstances being pricked in mind on account of the refractory conduct of some of the creditors who declined to reduce the interest as desired by him created a mortgage practically over his entire property in favour of one of them giving him a vindictive preference with a view to punish the other creditors.

Held, that the transaction came within s. 54 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. SUBRAMANIAN CHETTIAR v. SUBBARAYA GOUNDEN Mad. 611

——ss. 54, 53—Advance of fresh loan when giving preference to creditor—Effect of.

Where a creditor at the time of receiving a fraudulent preference by way of mortgage from a debtor in embarassed circumstances advanced a fresh loan to the debtor :

Held, that though the transaction could not be strictly viewed as a fraudulent preference within s. 54 of the Insolvency Act so far as the fresh advance was concerned, yet it could be avoided under s. 53 of the said Act even in respect of the fresh advance. SUBRAMANIAN CHETTIAR v. SUBBARAYA GOUNDEN Mad. 611

——s. 55, proviso—Mortgage during pendency of insolvency proceedings against mortgagor—Mortgagee having notice of same—Transaction, if protected—Execution of mortgage when old Act III of 1907 in force—Mortgagee taking mortgage in his favour with knowledge of insolvency proceedings pending against mortgagor—Mortgagee, if protected under Act III of 1907, s. 38.

Under s. 55, Provincial Insolvency Act, a transferee under a transaction made before the order of adjudication is protected only if the transfer is for valuable consideration and the transferee had no notice of the presentation of the insolvency petition. In order to bring his case under the proviso to that section, the plaintiff must show that both these conditions co-exist, but where it is found that he had notice of the fact that the petition of insolvency was pending at the time when the mortgage in his favour was executed, he cannot avail himself of the protection given by the proviso to s. 55.

It is a well settled rule of interpretation of Statutes that in the absence of a provision to the contrary a new law ought not to be construed so as to interfere with vested rights. Where therefore the mortgage had been effected six months before the new Act V of 1920 came into force and according to the law then in force, the mortgage was valid notwithstanding the fact that it had been made at a time when a petition for the adjudication of the mortgagor was pending, for it was effected for valuable consideration and was protected by the proviso to s 38 of Act III of 1907 and the mortgagee therefore, had acquired a valuable right and this right could not be lost by the subsequent change in the law made by the enactment of Act V of 1920 and repeal of Act III of 1907. FIRM MELA MAL-SHIB DYAL v. THAKAR DAS SUD Lah. 1084

——s. 56 (3) proviso. SEE Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, s. 4 1037

——ss 59, 68. SEE Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1913, s. 3 (5) (a) 693 F. B.

——s. 68—Sale by Official Receiver at public auction—One person making highest bid and depositing one-fourth of price—Subsequent higher offer by another—Registered deed in latter's favour —Deed, if can be cancelled by Insolvency Court —More appropriate proceedings should be taken.

The Insolvency Court cannot summarily set aside a registered sale deed. Where, therefore, the Official Receiver sells a house of the insolvent at public auction and one person R offers the highest bid and deposits one-fourth of the price but subsequently another person G offers a higher price and the Official Receiver under order of the Court executes a registered sale deed in G's favour, it is not open to R to apply to the Insolvency Court for cancellation of the sale deed. The matter in controversy should be settled in more appropriate proceedings, granting leave, if necessary, for a suit against the Receiver and the third person claiming rights under the sale deed. KESHAB DEO v. RAJENDRA KUMAR BHATTACHARJI All. 563

Provincial Insolvency Act—concld.

———s. 79 SEE Insolvency 661

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 17. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 115 575

———s. 17. SEE Court Fees Act, 1870, Sch. II, Art. 6 559 S. B.

———Sch. II, Art. 38—Suit "relating to maintenance"—Proceedings under s. 488, Criminal Procedure Code, by wife against husband—Husband agreeing to provide maintenance to wife—Wife bringing suit in Small Cause Court for arrears of maintenance—Maintainability.

Where the parties are husband and wife, and some years ago the latter took proceedings against the former under s. 488, Criminal Procedure Code, and in the course of that litigation an agreement was entered into between them whereby the defendant agreed to pay to the plaintiff maintenance at certain specified rates and the plaintiff brings a suit for arrears of maintenance alleged to be due under the agreement, the suit is one "relating to maintenance" and is clearly excluded from the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes by Art. 38 of the Second Schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. PARBATI v TEK SINGH Lah. 965

Public Gambling Act (III of 1867), s 7—Private room, rented by members of one caste and containing paraphernalia of club, whether prima facie gaming house.

A private room containing all the paraphernalia of a club and rented by members of only one caste is not prima facie a common gaming house within the meaning of the Act. ADAM ALI v. EMPEROR Sind 971

Public Purposes Land Acquisition Act (VI of 1857)—Works of Public Utility Companies Act (XXII of 1863), s. 26—Scope of—Declaration made under Act VI of 1857—Courts, if can hold that it was not for a public purpose—Acquisition of land declared to be for public purpose—Effect of.

The Works of Public Utility Companies Act (XXII of 1863), is for works of public utility to be constructed by private persons or companies in contradistinction to the Public Purposes Land Acquisition Act (VI of 1857), which was for the acquisition of land for "public purposes". The earlier sections of the Act of 1863 make provision for the machinery by which the promoters, as they are called in the Act, are to satisfy the Government that the matter in hand is a matter of public utility and a matter for the purpose of which the land should be acquired under the Act, and, amongst other things, provision for the survey of the lands which are sought to be acquired.

What is contemplated by s. 26 is a definite declaration by the Government that they are proceeding under the Act of 1863 and that the land is required for the said work; and that when once that declaration is made the declaration is conclusive for the authorities to exercise their powers under the Act to acquire land for purposes of public utility. The latter part of the section merely provides that after the declaration has been made under the earlier part of s. 26 the Government proceeds to acquire the land by the use of the machinery provided in the earlier sections of the Act of 1857.

Public Purposes Land Acquisition Act—concld.

Having exercised powers under Act (VI of 1857), and made the declaration, it is not open to any Court to hold that it was not for a public purpose. The two Acts give powers of acquisition for different purposes. The declaration under the one Act that the acquisition was for a public purpose is conclusive as is the declaration under the other that "the land may be taken under the Act,". Consequently where it has been declared that the land is acquired for a public purpose, it is not competent for any one to canvass the question whether the land was used for a public purpose or not. JAINTY CENTRAL COLLIERY, LTD. v. JAGDISH PRASAD SINGH Pat. 98

Punjab Alienation of Land Act (XIII of 1900), ss. 2 (3), 15—Trees, whether land.

Trees, whether fruit trees or otherwise, cannot be considered to be "land" within s. 2 (3), Punjab Alienation of Land Act. Reading ss. 2 (3) and 15 of the Act together the terms "land" in s. 2 (3) must be confined to the ordinary meaning of "land" especially as there is a distinction drawn in the Act itself between land and the products of the earth or land. BHAGWANA v GOPI Lah. 659 F B.

———s. 3 (2)—Decree passed in violation of s. 3 (2) —Whether a nullity.

A decree passed in violation of the terms of s. 3 (2) of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act is not a nullity. Such a decree unless set aside, in appeal or revision cannot be treated as a nullity. It is not a decree passed without jurisdiction. SARBALAND v. PREM DAS Lah. 615

———ss. 3 (2), 14, 21-A, (2)—Decree in violation of s. 3 (2), if a nullity—Remedy by Deputy Commissioner—S. 14, application of—Alienation by decree of Court—Deputy Commissioner's power to change nature of alienation

The only course open to the Deputy Commissioner in a case where a decree is passed by a civil Court which offends against the provisions of s. 3 (2) Punjab Alienation of Land Act, and this defect is brought to the notice of the Deputy Commissioner, is that under s. 21-A (2) of the Act, which authorises him to move the higher Civil Court for revision in accordance with the Act. The permanent alienation cannot be converted by himself, under s. 14 of the Act, into a temporary one.

Section 14 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act has no application to a case where a permanent alienation of land in favour of non-agriculturist has been effected by a decree of Civil Court. It deals with those cases only in which the dispute as to the validity of the alienation has not been taken to a Civil Court and that Court has not passed a decree in connection therewith. SARBULAND v. PREM DAS Lah. 615

———s 14. SEE Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, s. 3 (2) 615

———s. 14.—Scope and Applicability. SEE Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, ss. 3 (2), 14, 21-A (2) 615

———s. 21-A (2). SEE Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, s. 3 (2) 615

Punjab Courts Act (VI of 1918), s. 38. SEE Suits Valuation Act, 1887, s. 9 153

———s. 41 (3)—District Judge refusing certificate —Second appeal, if competent—High Court, whether can send case back ordering grant of certificate.

Where a District Judge considers an application before him and finds that a certificate should not be granted, a second appeal is not competent without a certificate and the High Court has no power to send back the case to him for re-consideration

Punjab Courts Act—concld.

or with an order to grant the required certificate. JANAT BIBI v. GHULAM HUSSAIN Lah. 212

——— s. 44. SEE Civil Proceuure Code, 1908, s. 115 533

Punjab Court of Wards Act (II of 1903), s. 43 —Ward of Court—Disability removed except in respect of joint property of his and another ward —Capacity to enter into fresh contract—Debt incurred during minority, if can be ratified.

Where the effect of a notification was to remove the legal incapacity of a ward of Court except in respect of any property which he owned jointly with another who continued to be under superintendence :

Held, that the former person was not thenceforth a ward of Court and was capable of entering into a fresh contract after the removal of the disability, but that he was not in a position to ratify any debt incurred during his minority. PRABH DIYAL v. MUHAMMAD NAWAZ SHAH Lah. 1009

Punjab Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1887), s. 116—Question regarding ownership of garden and kotha—If a question of title.

The question whether the garden and the kothas in the garden are the joint property of two brothers or the sole property of one of them is a question of title within the meaning of s. 116, Punjab Land Revenue Act. MUZAFFAR ALI v. GHAZANFAR ALI Lah. 282

Punjab Limitation (Custom) Act (I of 1920), Art 1 (c)—Alienation, if includes testamentary disposition—No mutation on its basis —Time, when begins to run

Under the Punjab Limitation (Custom) Act, "Alienation" includes any testamentary disposition of property. When alienation is not made by means of a registered deed, and no mutation on the basis of the will is entered in the register of mutation, the time begins to run from the date on which the alienation came to the knowledge of the plaintiffs. Where, therefore, the plaintiffs came to know of the existence of the wills on February 17, 1916, a suit instituted in 1926, is barred by time. MOHAMMAD ALI KHAN v. ANWAR HUSSAIN Lah. 1104 Punjab Municipal Act (III of 1911), s. 172—Order to demolish structure—Legality of—Sanction once given, if can be revoked on ground of mistake.

Section 172, Punjab Municipal Act, authorises the Committee to prosecute an offender or demolish a structure only when it is erected without its permission in writing. Where, however, a person applies for permission to construct an overhanging balcony in anticipation of sanction and the Committee grants permission inflicting a penalty and the penalty is paid, s. 172 does not apply even if the sanction be in contravention of the bye-laws of the Committee.

There is no provision in the Punjab Municipal Act enabling the Committee to revoke a sanction once given. A sanction to build given by a Committee cannot be revoked on the ground that there had been a mistake. FAQIR CHAND v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, LUDHIANA Lah 491

——— s. 172 (1)—Grant of sanction under s. 172 (1) —Imposition of conditions, legality of.

In granting sanction under s. 172 (1), Punjab Municipal Act, the Municipal Committee cannot impose any condition on the grantee nor can a sanction once granted be revoked. KANSHI RAM v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, MOGA Lah. 893 ——— ss. 172 (1), 188—Sanction under s. 172 (1) —Form of—Seal of Municipal Committee—Value of.

Punjab Municipal Act—concld.

The plaintiffs applied to the Municipal Committee to build two tharras of certain measurements in front of their shops, abutting on the public street and overhanging a municipal drain. The matter was placed before the Municipal Committee and on July 19, 1930, the following resolution was passed: "Sanctioned as recommended by the Building Sub-Committee. The necessary agreement deed be obtained before issuing the permit." No permit was issued to the plaintiffs, but they were given by the office of the Municipal Committee a copy of the plan which they had filed in the said office. This plan bore the seal of the Municipal Committee with the words "manzur-shud" meaning "granted." There was also a reference in their map, to the resolution :

Held, that the plan containing the words quoted above, accompanied with the seal of the Municipal Committee must be considered as permission in writing.

No particular form is prescribed in which the permission is granted under s. 172 (1), Punjab Municipal Act.

The seal of the Municipal Committee when affixed, is equivalent to signature of the Secretary or some other competent Municipal Officer. KANSHI RAM v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, MOGA Lah. 893

——— s. 173—Municipal Committee if can let out one portion of public street for private purposes

The Municipal Committee has no right to interfere with the enjoyment of the right of way by the public on a public street by letting out a portion of it to a particular individual for a private purpose. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, MULTAN v. ABDUL GHAFUR Lah. 951

——— s. 173— Scope and applicability of— Structure made with permission of Municipality years ago—Continuance after expiry of period without payment — Offence, if committed—Remedy of Municipal Committee—Civil suit.

Section 173, Punjab Municipal Act, applies only to encroachments which have recently been made and it is the act of building or erecting the encroachment which has been made punishable and the section does not apply to encroachments or erections which have existed for some years. Where a movable encroachment or projection was made some years ago and with the permission of the Municipal Committee on payment of rent, no offence is committed if the structure is continued after the period fixed without payment of rent. In such a case the relation between the parties is that of landlord and tenant or licensor and licensee and hence the aggrieved party should seek his remedy in the Civil Court. UTTAM SINGH v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, RAWALPINDI Lah. 384 ——— ss. 189, 172—Local body, if can give sanction in contravention of bye-laws—Sanction given on penalty—Penalty paid—Committee, if estopped from withdrawing sanction.

A local body has no power to grant sanction for a building in contravention of its own bye-laws. But where a Municipality has granted the sanction and accepted the required penalty from the applicant, it is estopped from withdrawing it and requiring the applicant to demolish the structure. FAQIR CHAND v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, LUDHIANA Lah. 491

——— s. 221—Bona fide dispute of ownership— Obstruction offered to contractor— Held, no offence committed.

Where there exists a bona fide dispute regarding the ownership of a plot of land between the Municipal Committee and the accused and it is doubtful whether the Committee could direct its contracto to pave the disputed land and thus constitute him a person legally authorised under s. 221, Punjab Municipal Act, the accused will not be guilty of offence under s. 221 of the Act, if he, on the contractor proceeding to pave the site, tells the contractor that the property belonged to him and should not be paved. WAJID ALI SHAH v. EMPEROR Pesh 548

Punjab Pre-emption Act (I of 1913), s. 3 (5) (a) —Sale of insolvent's property by Receiver, whether a sale in execution of order of Court—Whether subject to pre-emption—Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), ss. 59, 68.

The sale of the property of an insolvent by the Receiver is not a sale in execution of an order of the Court within the meaning of s. 3, sub-s. (5) (a), Punjab Pre-emption Act of 1913 and consequently is subject to the right of pre-emption. GURBAKHSH SINGH v SARDAR SINGH Lah. 693 F. B.

Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), ss. 5, 6, 8.

SEE Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, s. 77 (3) 320

———ss. 59, 60—Widow surrendering her share in occupancy right to landlord two years before her death—Assignee of co-tenant, being stranger to family, if can assail the surrender.

Under s. 59, sub-s. (3) read with s. 60 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, a surrender, even if assailable can be attacked by the landlords alone and by none else and where the surrender by a widow has taken place in favour of the landlords themselves, it is perfectly valid and unimpeachable. By s. 59, sub-s. (1), cl. (c), on the termination of the widow's interest under s. 59, sub-s. (1) cl. (b) it is only the male collateral relatives of the widow's deceased husband who are entitled to succeed to the occupancy rights and an assignee from a co-tenant being a stranger to the family and not falling under that category has no right of succession and consequently no right of attack. Even if it be conceded that the assignee is entitled to inherit the rights by virtue of the rule of survivorship among joint tenants, there is nothing left to be inherited at the time when the widow died, she having already surrendered her interest two years before. HARGOBIND v GURDAS MAL Lah. 836

———ss 77 (3), 5, 6, 8—Dispute as to validity of attachment of occupancy rights of judgment-debtor — Jurisdiction of civil Court to determine nature of occupancy rights.

Where the dispute between the parties is one in execution proceedings and is as to whether occupancy rights of the judgment-debtor fall under s. 5 or s. 6 or 8, Punjab Tenancy Act and are attachable or not, it is not covered by s. 77 (3) of the Act and is, therefore, cognizable by a civil Court. PRABHU v. BANWARI Lah. 320

———ss. 77, 100—Scope of s. 77—Suit against defendants as trespassers—Court finding them to be tenants-at-will—Suit becomes cognizable in Revenue Court only—Duty of Civil Court to return plaint for presentation before Collector—Passing of decree without observing provisions for ejectment—Decree, if can be registered as decree of Revenue Court

All suits by a landlord to eject a tenant can only be instituted and heard and determined by a Revenue Court under s. 77 (3) (e) of the Punjab Tenancy Act. Although the defendants are described as trespassers in the plaint, when the Court comes to the conclusion that defendants were holding the land as tenants-at-will, and, therefore, could not claim that they were in adverse possession of the land as against the proprietors, the suit becomes one in which it is necessary to decide a matter which under s. 77 can only be heard and decided by a Revenue Court, and the Civil Court should then return the plaint for presentation to the Collector.

A definite procedure is prescribed for the ejectment of tenants under ss. 41, 42 and 43 of the Punjab Tenancy Act. If a decree is passed in favour of a plaintiff without observing the provisions regarding the ejectment of a tenant, it must be held that the tenant was prejudiced by the mistake as to jurisdiction and it would be inequitable in these circumstances of register the decree of the Civil Court as a decree of the Revenue Court, MUHAMMAD v. ALLAH DITTA Lah. 242

Railway.

SEE Crown 395 (a)

SEE Tort 631

———Railway Company does not insure against negligence of consignor.

A Railway Company does not insure against the negligence of the consignor. It is the duty of the consignor to have his goods properly packed, such as would be damaged unless properly packed. This is even so where the responsibility of a carrier is much more than that of a Railway Administration. MANNILAL ANANDJI v. B N RY. LTD. Cal. 1052

Railways Act (IX of 1890), s 72 (1) (2)—Liability of Railway Administration—Whether as bailee or insurer or carrier—Misconduct—Rain water entering wagon by great force of wind—Whether amounts to misconduct

In India the liability of a Railway Administration is not that of a common carrier. It is not an insurer. Its liability is that of a bailee as defined in the Contract Act. If there is no negligence there is no liability. Whatever the term 'misconduct' may imply, the word implies something more than negligence. If rain water enters a wagon by the great force of wind the omission of the Railway Company to provide absolutely water-tight doors, such as would not permit even a drop of water to enter, would not amount to misconduct. To insist on such a high standard would be to make an Indian Railway Administration virtually an insurer and not a bailee MANNILAL ANANDJI v. B. N. RY., LTD. Cal. 1052

———s. 76 — Scope of— Damages not caused by misconduct and negligence of Railway servants—Consignor, if entitled to benefit of s. 76—Court relying on s. 76—Misdirection as to law—Interfernce in revision.

The provisions contained in s. 76, Railways Act were made for the protection of plaintiffs who had suffered loss but who were not in a position to prove in what manner the property had been damaged or destroyed after it had been consigned to the Railway, because in the ordinary course of events they are not in a position to know how the loss has been caused. But the Act has not anywhere provided that a plaintiff is absolved from the duty of proving that a Railway Administration is liable for causing the loss or deterioration of the goods. If it is clear that the damage has been caused by the misconduct of the Railway servants, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to prove how their misconduct had caused the loss. But where from the evidence it seems to be highly probable that the goods which were consigned in a damaged condition and remained in the train fr over ten days had deteriorated for this reason and not through any misconduct and negligence on the part of the Railway Administration and the Judge relies entirely on s. 76, the Judge in doing so misdirects himself as to the law on the point and his decision being a result of the misdirection, is liable to be interfered with, SECRETARY OF Railways Act—concld.

STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL v. NARAIN DAS SHYAM LAL All. 97

———s. 114. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 562 697 F. B.

——s. 114 —Applicability of—Whether applies to transferors alone.

Section 114, Railways Act, applies to purchasers and transferees of tickets and not to the transferors alone. EMPEROR v. KODUMAL OCHIRAM Sind 697 F B.

Receiver—No attempt made to interfere with his right to property in his care—Receiver, if a necessary party—Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), s. 47.

The Receiver of the property of a party to litigation, is not a necessary party if no attempt is made thereby to interfere with the right of the Receiver to the property entrusted to his care, where the subject-matter of suit is not in the possession of the Receiver.

A suit was instituted to set aside a Court sale in respect of property not included in the mortgage;

Held, that the suit might be treated as an application under s. 47, Civil Procedure Code, made on the day on which the plaint was presented. PROTIVA SUNDARI DEBI v. SARADA CHARAN GOHO Cal 848

———Propriety of appointment of, in suitable case —Whether can be challenged.

The propriety of appointing a Receiver in a suitable case cannot be challenged. MA JOO THAN v. COLLECTOR OF RANGOON Rang 776

Record of Rights—Entry of the name of mahant in column of owner, whether a proof that property is his private property—Religious endowment.

The Revenue Authorities can only function through a human agency. They cannot enter into any transaction with a legal entity like an idol installed in a thakardwara. The name of the mahant or trustee is, therefore, generally entered in the column of owner, so that the Revenue Authorities may have dealings with him in all those matters which concern the thakardwara or the religious institution in question. Therefore, the mere entry of the name of the mahant in the column of owner does not prove that the property was his private and exclusive property. RAGHUNATH DAS v. GAJPAT RAI Lah. 554

Registration—Security bond filed in Court—No person named as obligee — Registration.

Where in a security bond filed in Court no person is named as the obligee, the bond is given to the Judge of the Court and therefore, if not presented by the obligors, ought to be presented by the Judge or by a person holding a duly authenticated power of attorney from him. DAW MIN BAW v. A. V. P. L. N. CHETTYAR FIRM Rang. 511

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 7 (1) (c). SEE Award 1022

———s. 17. SEE Registration Act, 1908, s. 49 47

———ss. 17 (1), (b), 21—Sale deed—Property mentioned as existing in district where deed is registered not actually existing but introduced as fictitious item—Deed containing clause making it non-testamentary instrument creating vested rights —Document, whether valid.

There was a clause in a sale-deed executed by the defendants in favour of the plaintiffs, which ran in these words: "Be it known that if in future owing to any dispute about the above mentioned family arrangement and amicable partition it be found or become divulged that we the executants have not the entire 16 annas right in the properties sold, then of the immovable properties left by our father in the District of Dacca and Goalpara and in the Garo hills including the properties given in the schedule below, the total 6 annas 4 gandas 9 kaks 2 tils inherited by us the executants from our father, will be counted as sold to you the recipients of the deed. On the strength of this kobala being owner and possessor of our 6 annas 4 gandas 9 kaks 2 tils share in the immovable properties left by our father including the properties given in the schedule below, you either jointly or on partition, will enjoy and possess the same in whatever way you like down to your sons grandsons and other heirs and legal representatives":

Registration Act—contd.

Held, that this clause in the document satisfied the requirements of s. 17, sub-s. 1, cl. (b), Registration Act, inasmuch as the document by reason of this clause would be a non-testamentary instrument which purported to create or declare, though in future, a right vested or contingent in favour of the plaintiffs. That being the position the document would be registrable in the District of Dacca even though as a kobala transferring the three items of property mentioned in the document it would not be so registrable

Held, further that treated as a kobala the document could not be registered in any Registration Office in the District of Dacca in view of the fact that the only property which purported to have been covered by it as lying within the District of Dacca was a tin-shed which had no existence whatever and inasmuch as the introduction of a fictitious item of property in the sale deed for the purpose of getting it registered at a particular place would make the registration of the document invalid. But the document regarded as a non-testamentary instrument falling within cl. (b), sub-s. 1, s. 17 could be registrable at a Registration Office in the District of Dacca and it was not invalid. NURANNESSA KHATOON v. OSMAN GANI Cal 926

———ss. 17, 49—Agreement executed in 1879—Proof that the property was worth more than Rs. 99 —Unregistered document, if can be used for proving nature of possession.

In the absence of reliable evidence on the record to show that the value of the property covered by an agreement executed in 1879 was more than Rs. 99, it is very difficult to hold that, in those days when the value of the property was very small, the property covered by the agreement was worth more than Rs. 99.

Unregistered documents can be used for determining the nature of the claimant's possession. KARTAR SINGH v. MEHR NISHAN Lah. 1064

———s. 21. SEE Registration Act, 1908, s. 17 (1) (b) 926

——— s. 21—Properties sufficiently identifiable— Document registered—Document if operative.

Section 21, Registration Act, merely lays down certain particulars which have got to be complied with before a document can be accepted for registration. If the properties are sufficiently identifiable, the document, if registered, would be operative in respect of such properties as would be found to answer the description contained in the document. NURANNESSA KHATOON v. OSMAN GANI Cal 926

——— —s. 49. SEE Registration Act, 1908, s. 17 1064

———s. 49—Mortgagors basing their claim for possession, on redemption of sub-mortgage—Mortgages unregistered— Maintainability of suit.

In order that the ruling in Maung Sin v. Maung So Min (1) 129 Ind. Cas. 511 should be applicable, there must be privity of contract between the real owner and the person in possession, under which contract the person in possession has been allowed to obtain possession. When the plaintiffs-mortgagors do not suggest that the mortgagees are in possession of property by their leave and licence, but they base their claim on the fact that they have redeemed the mortgages in favour of the sub-mortgagees and assert that because they have redeemed these mortgages from the sub-mortgagee they are entitled to possession of the lands, their suit is a suit for possession of lands which have been redeemed and of which the person in possession has failed to deliver possession after the redemption, and, therefore, it depends entirely upon proof of the mortgages. If the mortgages are incapable of proof for want of registration, the suit of the plaintiffs must of necessity fail. MA PO v. MA BWIN Rang. 204

Registration Act—concld.

——ss. 49, 17—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 55—Unregistered agreement of sale—Deed not operating as transfer of any interest in immovable property—Suit for specific performance—Document, admissibility of.

An unregistered agreement for sale of immovable property of value of more than one hundred rupees but not operating as a transfer of any interest in the property, can be used in evidence in an action for obtaining specific performance of the contract. ABDUL LATIF MIAN v. DEBI MAHTON Pat. 47

Religious endowment. SEE Record of Rights 554

——Bona fide endowment—Test.

One test of a bona fide or a nominal endowment is to see how did the founder treat this property, or how have descendants treated it and has the income of the endowed lands been continually applied to the object of dedication. ARUNACHALAM CHETTIAR v. OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE, MADRAS Mad. 772

——Shrine—Surplus income, if belongs to pujari.

In cases where there is no deed of endowment of lands, or where it is ambiguous, usage is relevant evidence to determine whether lands and the offerings were after their acquisition endowed entirely for the temple or were only burdened with the actual expenses thereof, the surplus being held by the pujari for his own benefit. PURAN DAS v. SHIROMANI GURDWARA PARBANDHAK COMMITTEE Lah. 324

Religious institution—Sikhs and Udasis —Distinction.

The Sikhs are a Hindu sect. The first Guru preached the unity of God but, apart from that, he was in other respects apparently a Hindu. History of Sikhs and Udasis and their practices described.

The Udasis occupy a position between Hindus proper and Sikhs proper, and in some cases where they become heads of Sikh Gurdwaras, it is difficult to distinguish them from Sikhs proper, except that they may privately worship at the samadhs of their predecessors. SUNDAR SINGH v. NARAIN DAS Lah. 396 ——Succession from Guru to chela—Presumption as to dedication.

Where natural heirs have been excluded from succession, there is a presumption that the institution has been dedicated to religious uses even though there is no direct evidence of dedication. SUNDAR SINGH v. NARAIN DAS Lah 396

Remand—Point not considered by lower Court—Remand for considering it—Power of High Court to order.

The High Court has ample power to make a remand in order that a point which has not been considered by the lower Court, may be considered by it. MA FATI v. KALIMUTHU Rang. 912

Rent—Remission of rent—Whether automatically follows from remission of revenue.

Remission of rent automatically follows the remission of revenue. AKBAR HUSAIN v. HUSAIN JAHAN BEGUM Oudh 40

Res judicata.

SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 40 268
SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. IX, r. 9 158
SEE Decree 571
SEE Execution 673
SEE Hindu Law 213

——Application rejected—Order not set aside—Second application, if maintainable.

Where an application for stay is rejected and the order is not set aside, a second application for stay is barred by res judicata even if the first order is erroneous. FIRM OF MURLIMAL SANTRAM v. BANARSIDAS & SONS Sind 895

——Title to particular lands not directly and substantially in issue in former suit—Subsequent suit, if barred.

Where the plaintiff who was in possession of lands in virtue of sale-deeds in favour of his predecessor in-title, filed a suit in respect of the lands and it was held therein that the sale-deeds were bogus and that the real owners were other persons, and he subsequently brought a suit for possession of other lands which he alleged to have leased to the defendants who contended that the plaintiff's title to the lands was extinguished by the decision in the former suit:

Held, that the plaintiff's title to these lands was not directly and substantially in issue in the former suit and that his claim as real owner was not barred by res judicata.

Held, also that the tenants-defendants were estopped from denying the plaintiff's title as landlord. KRISHNARAO RAGHUNATH YARDI v. GHAMON GHAMA Bom. 249 (b)

Riwaj-i-am—"Qarabati", meaning of.

Whatever the origin of the word "qarabati" may have been as used in Riwaj-i-am, there is no doubt that it is now used to denote all kinsmen whether near or distant. BEGAN v. ALI GOHAR Lah. 340

Sale—Whole of judgment-debtor's property purchased—No provision made for decree-holder—Purchaser himself not creditor—Part of consideration genuine—Alienation if wholly invalid—Purchaser if can be given charge on property—Extent of charge.

The plaintiff was not a creditor He had bought property consisting of the whole of the judgment-debtor's immovable properties and no provision was made for payment of the decree debt. The Court found that only a portion of the consideration was genuine:

Held, that an alienation having been made to defeat or delay creditors was wholly invalid even though consideration might have been given for some part and must be set aside in its entirety. The purchaser could however be given a charge on the property to the extent of the encumbrance which he has discharged. SUPPAN ASARI v. ALIMA BIBI Mad. 17

Set-off—Mutual dealings, whether include claim for unliquidated damages.

The term 'mutual dealing' has been given by the decisions a very extended meaning. It includes not only the case where a person owes a debt to the insolvent but also where there is a claim for unliquidated damages. Damages for breach of covenant can be set off under the said provisions against a claim for rent. KRISHNA CHANDRA BHOUMICK v. PABNA DHANABHANDAR CO. LTD. Cal. 991

Shamilat land. SEE Custom (Punjab) 514 (b)

Shipping— Collision — Regulation for preventing collusions at Sea, Art 16*—Position of vessel, how to be ascertained by another vessel, within the meaning of the Regulation—Importance of implicit obedience to Regulations pointed out.*

In order that the position of a vessel may be ascertained by another vessel within the meaning of the Regulation for preventing collisions at sea she must be known by that other vessel to be in such a position that both vessels can safely proceed without risk of collision. The data on which an inference is founded may be so conclusive as to raise the inference to the level of a certainty. But where such inference is taken, the vessel so taking it, takes the chance of her inference being right.

It is important that there should be implicit obedience to the Regulations on whose observance navigators are entitled at all times to rely. If a vessel unjustifiably takes the risk of disregarding one of their injunctions, she must suffer the consequences NIPPON YUSEN KAISHA v. CHINA NAVIGATION COMPANY, LTD. P. C. 61

Sikh Gurdwaras Act (VIII of 1925), s. 2 (4)— Hereditary office-holder, meaning of—Sikhs and Udasis, differences.

The definition of the term 'hereditary office-holder' in s. 2 (4) of the Act, contemplates participation in the management or performance of public worship in a Gurdwara or in the management or performance of any rituals or ceremonies observed therein. SUNDAR SINGH v. NARAIN DAS Lah. 396

——— s. 5—Petition under s 5, if can be maintained by benamidar—Benami.

An action can be maintained in the name of the benamidar in respect of property, though the beneficial owner was not a party to it, the latter being fully affected by the rule of res judicata. In fact the question whether the property is held benami by any one arises only between the real owner and a benamidar and though consideration moved from the real owner, he can still give a complete title to the benamidar and the benamidar is entitled to possession as against every one, except the real owner. PURAN DAS v. SHIROMANI GURDWARA PARBANDHAK COMMITTEE Lah. 324 ——— ss. 8, 14 (2), 15, 12, 7, 9—Petition under s. 8—Persons competent to file—Locus standi.

A petition under s. 8, Sikh Gurdwaras Act, is only competent, if made by (1) any hereditary office-holder or (2) twenty or more worshippers of the Gurdwara; and under s. 14 (2) the forwarding of the petition to the Tribunal for disposal is conclusive proof that the petition was received by the Government in time and in the case of a petition forwarded by worshippers of a Gurdwara under the provisions of s. 8, that the provisions of s. 8 with respect to such worshippers were duly complied with. Nothing is said about a petition forwarded by a hereditary office-holder under s. 8 except that it must be held to have been presented in time. It follows that the locus standi of such a petitioner can be challenged and would have to be decided before the trial can proceed. This position is not affected by s. 16 (1) of the Act, which can only apply to a petition, properly before the Tribunal. SUNDAR SINGH v. NARAIN DAS Lah. 396 ——— ss. 8, 15, 7—Parties to petition—Death of petitioner — Procedure — Dismissal of petition—Effect—S. 15, scope of.

There are no respondents in a petition presented under s. 8, and hence s. 15 has been enacted, empowering the tribunal by advertisement or otherwise, to enquire if any person desires to be made a party and to join any person whom it considers should be made a party. The practice is that the Tribunal ascertains the names of the Sikh worshippers who forwarded the petition under s. 7 of the Act and these persons are notified by beat of drum in the locality to come forward while notice is sometimes sent to some of them. The Shromani Gurdwara Parbandhak Committee is also notified. This Committee sometimes is added as respondent, called objector by the Tribunal, but it refuses to be so added as a rule if the original worshippers named in the petition under s. 7 or some of them are prepared to contest the petition under s. 8 and to be made objectors. The intention of s. 15 is to allow the Tribunal to consolidate rival or conflicting claims, if convenient, and to furnish a means of getting respondents or objectors to contest petition and thus to permit of petitions being tried as suits because the petitions themselves name no objectors. There is nothing in this section which can be read as permitting the Tribunal arbitrarily to add or substitute one petitioner for another, while such a course is clearly against the scheme of the Act. A petition can only be put in under s. 8 within 90 days of the notification published under s. 7 (3).

It is not open to a petitioner or petitioners under s. 8 to dispute the existence of a Gurdwara, which may be interpreted as meaning place of worship. It can only be claimed that it is not a Sikh Gurdwara, i. e., Sikh place of worship. A petition under s. 7 can only be presented by 50 or more worshippers of a Gurdwara, and that petition along with a list of all rights, title or interests in immovable properties, inclusive of the Gurdwara, and in all monetary endowments, which the petitioners claim to belong to the Gurdwara, is published by the Local Government by notification under s. 7 (3). When such a notification is published, an hereditary office-holder, can petition under s. 8 within 90 days that it should be declared not to be a Sikh Gurdwara. Further, by virtue of s. 7 (5) the publication of a notification under the provisions of s. 7 (3) shall be conclusive proof that the provisions of sub-ss. 7 (1) (2) (3) and (4) have been duly complied with, that is, that the petition was presented by 50 or more Sikh worshippers of the Gurdwara, etc., etc. The trial of a petition under s. 8 must thus presuppose that there are at least more than 50 worshippers and that there is a Gurdwara, or place of religious worship frequented by them. It cannot be contended in such a petition that there is no Gurdwara or place of worship. SUNDAR SINGH v. NARAIN DAS Lah. 396

——— s. 16 (2) (iii)—Gurdwara Baghichi Thakran in Gujranwala City, if a Sikh Gurdwara.

Gurdwara Baghichi Thakran in Gujranwala City is not a Sikh Gurdwara within the meaning of s. 16 (2) (iii), Sikh Gurdwaras Act. SUNDAR SINGH v. NARAIN DAS Lah. 396 ——— ss. 18 (1) (e), (5)—Presumption under, when arises.

Where the oral evidence on the question as to whether the money came from the Gurdwara is unconvincing and unreliable and there is evidence that the family of the mahant has ancestral land, a share of which was given to the mahant and the mahant could have been given gifts of money and these would certainly not be the property of the Gurdwara of which he was the mahant, it is clear that he had other sources of income and there is no evidence worth considering that the money was supplied from Gurdwara income, there is no presumption under s. 18 (1) (e) of the Sikh Gurdwara Act.

Sikh Gurdwaras Act—concld.

In order to bring themselves within the presumption arising from s. 18 (1) (e) of the Sikh Gurdwaras Act, the Gurdwara have to prove that the acquisition of the right, title or interest in question was made with funds proved to have belonged to the Gurdwara. PURAN DAS v. SHIROMANI GURDWARA PARBANDHAK COMMITTEE Lah. 324

Solicitor—Bill of costs—Taxation — English Law—Applicability in Bombay.

The law and practice in England relating to Solicitors and to taxation of bills of costs applies in Bombay Presidency, except where that law or practice is inconsistent with the rules or practice of the High Court. D. N. REGE v. V. C. VIJAYAKAR Bom. 945

Special Powers Ordinance (X of 1932), s. 17—Ordinance in force on date when prosecution is begun but not in force on date of conviction—Conviction, legality of—Applicability of s. 6, General Clauses Act (X of 1897), to temporary Statute.

The provisions of s. 6, General Clauses Act, are not applicable to a temporary Statute, which expires automatically on a given date, but applies only to Statutes which are "repealed" by another enactment, and, therefore, proceedings which are pending under an Ordinance on the date of its expiry could not be continued, in the absence of a clear statutory provision to this effect. Consequently where a prosecution is begun when the Ordinance is in force but it is not in force on date of conviction, conviction is illegal and ultra vires. KALYAN DAS v. EMPEROR Lah 447

Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 21 (b)—Suit for injunction by Secretary of Local Board in Civil Court—Maintainability—(Quære).

Quære.—Whether a suit for an injunction by a Secretary of a Local Board filed in a Civil Court is at all maintainable and whether any relief for injunction can be granted in the face of the provisions of s 21 (b) of the Specific Relief Act. MUHAMMAD MUSTAFA ALI KHAN v. DISTRICT BOARD BAREILLY All. 593

———s. 39. SEE Court Fees Act, 1870, s. 7 (iv-A) 948

———s. 39—Suit under—Court's function to order instrument to be cancelled.

In a suit rightly framed under s. 39, Specific Relief Act, it is the Court's function to order the instrument to be cancelled and to send a copy of its decree to the Registrar. The plaintiff need not pray for it. DASABI NAGABHUSHANAM v. KUNAMNENI VENKATAPPAYYA Mad. 948

———s. 41. SEE Contract Act, 1872, s. 65 1017

———s. 42—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7 (iv) (c)—Father referring matter to arbitration—Decree in terms of award—Son filing suit for mere declaration that father had no authority and that proceedings subsequent to reference are null and void—Maintainability—Consequential relief must be asked—Court-fees payable—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O VI, r. 17—Plaint, amendment of—If can be allowed at the stage of hearing of appeal.

The father of the plaintiff had agreed to refer the matter in dispute to arbitration and a decree had been passed in the terms of the award. The son subsequently filed a suit for a mere declaration, that the father had no authority to agree to refer the matter to arbitration and that the proceedings from the date of reference to the date of the decree were null and void:

Held, that the suit was not maintainable. The plaintiff must have asked for consequential relief and such a relief can only be for setting aside the decree which has already been passed by a competent Court and should have paid ad valorem court-fee according to the provisions of s. 7 (iv), (c), Court Fees Act.

Held, also, that the High Court would not be justified in permitting the plaintiff to remodel his plaint and thus alter the frame of the suit at the stage of hearing of the appeal. SRI RAM v. KHAWAJU Lah. 209

———s. 42—Declaration under s. 42—Discretion of trial Court—When can be interfered with.

The matter of granting a declaration claimed under s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act is one within the descretion of the Court. So once the trial Court has, in the exercise of the discretion vested in it under s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, granted the declaration to the plaintiff under that section, the Appellate Court should not, as a rule, reverse the decree, unless it finds that the discretion has been improperly exercised. SITAL RAUT v. ADALAT RAUT Pat. 244

———s. 42—Suit for declaration that plaintiff is daughter's son of deceased—Plaintiff not pressing for relief that deeds executed by deceased's widows were not binding on him—Whether fatal to suit—Pleadings.

Where the plaintiff is the person who will succeed to the estate of his maternal grandfather S and it cannot be seriously argued that the passing of the bulk of the estate into the hands of persons who had no right to it did not involve any danger to the estate, his suit should not be thrown out on the technical ground that the plaintiff while asking for a declaration about his being the son for the daughter of S did not press for the further relief that the deed of gift executed by the widows of S should be declared to be not binding on him.

Nor can the suit be thrown out merely on the ground that the plaintiff had not stated in so many words in the plaint that the persons in possession, the descendants of the alienees, had either denied or were interested in denying his title. SITAL RAUT v. ADALAT RAUT Pat. 244

Stamp Act (II of 1899), s. 6—Deed both lease and mortgage—Stamp duty payable.

Where a deed is to be taken both as a lease and as a mortgage, it must bear a stamp leviable in the case of a mortgage, which requires a higher stamp duty. GNANDESIKAM PILLAI v. A. B. BOOPALARAYAR Mad. 838

———Sch. I, Art. 57, Exemption (e)—Supurddar acknowledging receipt of attached property from amin, and agreeing to produce same whenever demanded, or on failure, agreeing to be personally liable—Document, whether liable to duty.

A bond executed by way of security to account for property received by vitue thereof, even though executed by a surety, is a security bond within the meaning of Art. 57, Sch. I, Stamp Act.

The terms of the document executed by supurddar were that the supurddar acknowledged having received the attached property from the amin and agreed to produce the same whenever demanded by the Court or the amin and further agreed that in case of failure, the Court would be at liberty to realise the price thereof from his person and property :

Stamp Act—concld.

Held, that the bond was security bond within the meaning of Art. 57, Stamp Act, but Exemption (e) under that Artiele exempted it from the payment of stamp duty. In re THE CHARGEABILITY OF STAMP All. 1034

Straits Settlement Ordinance No. 56 (Limitation), ss. 9, 3—Verbal assignment by attorney to himself of property known to be his principal's —Property vests in him in trust for principal—Purpose of trust must be found in object for which he was appointed—Held, that the purpose for which property vested in attorney as attorney of administrator, was specific.

Where a verbal assignment was made by the appellant, as attorney of the administrator, to himself, of property known to be his principal's :

Held, that he was in a fiduciary capacity and the only result of the proceeding was that the property became vested in him in trust for the administrator.

Held, also that the appellant dealt with the property in a fiduciary capacity antecedent to such dealing and the purpose for which it became vested in him must be found in the purpose for which that pacity was conferred upon him.

Held, further that the purpose for which the property became vested in the appellant was specific. If he was regarded in the light of a trustee for the administrator, the purpose was specific. But even if it was to administer the estate and account for the residues to the next of kin, the purpose was also specific. KASIVISVANATHAN CHETTIAR v. CHOKALINGAM CHETTIAR P. C. 855

Succession—Debts—Priority—Personal debts of deceased take priority to all claims against heirs who are in possession of property.

When an heir succeeds to the property of the deceased, he takes it subject to the charge of his debts. In other words, that portion of the property does not devolve in fact on the heirs, which is required to satisfy the debts of the deceased and it stands apart, as it were, for the creditors of the deceased. That being so, the personal debts of the deceased being a first charge on the property left by him, takes priority over all claims against the heirs who were then in possession of the property. ATMA RAM v MUKHI RAM Lah. 847

Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), ss. 102, 103. SEE Will 310

———s. 109 — Scope of—Construction — Claim found against defendant No. 1, but dismissed due to finding on question of estoppel and s. 41, Transfer of Property Act, raised by defendants Nos. 2, 3—Issues not raised by defendant No. 7—Held, claim against defendant No. 1 could not be dismissed.

All that s. 109, Succession Act XXXIX, provides is that the bequest shall take effect as ifthe death of the legatee had happeneh immediately after the death of the testator. In other words, in order to prevent a lapse it must be assumed that the legatee surrived the testator. The section does not contain any provision that on such assumption being made the bequest is to take effect only in favour of the lineal descendants. To hold that in such a case the bequest is to take effect only in favour of certain heirs and not in favour of others will be putting a construction on the section for which no warrant can be found in the plain and clear language of it.

The operative part of an order said that the plaintiff's claim failed by reason of the findings on issues Nos. 5 and 6. These issues dealt with the question of estoppel and s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act.

Succession Act—concld.

They were framed on the pleas raised by defendants Nos. 2 and 3. No plea of estoppel was raised by defendant No. 1 and there was nothing on the record to substantiate such a plea on her behalf. There was nothing to show that the defendant No. 1 has in any way changed her position to her detriment on account of any conduct or acquiescence on the part of the plaintiffs:

Held, that the plaintiffs' claim against defendant No. 1 could not be dismissed by reason of findings on issues Nos. 5 and 6. MOHAMMAD YAKUB KHAN v AZIZ-UN-NISSA Oudh 1076

———s. 118. SEE Will 310

———s. 213—Whether applies to wills made by Hindus of the Punjab—Legatee, if can sue without probate.

Section 213, Succession Act, does not apply to wills made by Hindus of the Punjab and relating to immovable property situate in the Punjab. The legatee can therefore claim rights under the will without probate. SOHAN SINGH v. BHAG SINGH Lah. 309

———s 307. SEE Probate 933

———s. 379. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 141 1118

Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887, s. 9—Rules framed under, by Lahore High Court, r. 4—Suit for perpetual injunction and order to demolish wall—Valuation of—Appeal in suit—Whether lies to District Judge—Punjab Courts Act (VI of 1918), s 38.

A suit, in which the plaintiffs in the plaint seek to establish or to negative any right to maintain or close a door or a widow or raise or alter or demolish a wall, must be valued by the plaintiff at a sum exceeding Rs. 100 and not exceeding Rs. 500, according to r. 4 framed by the Lahore High Court under s. 9 Suits Valuation Act. A suit for issue of a perpetual injunction ordering the defendant to demolish a wall built by him near the plaintiff's ventilator and to restrain him from building a second storey on his shop within five feet of the plaintiffs' windows. falls under this rule and must be valued at a sum exceeding Rs. 100 and not exceeding Rs. 500. In such a suit a first appeal lies only to the District Judge. MUNSHI RAM v. RAM SARAN Lah. 153

Surety—Surety for appearance of judgment-debtor —Execution application dismissed for default of decree-holder and surety discharged—Restoration of execution petition—Liability of surety, if revived.

Where a judgment-debtor who has been arrested in execution of a decree is released on a surety furnishing security for his appearance but due to the default of the decree-holder to appear on the due date the execution petition is dismissed and the surety is also discharged, the liability of the surety does not automatically revive by the mere restoration of the execution petition. KASHMIRI LAL v. CHUNI LAL Lah. 503

Tenants-in-common—Sole possession by one tenant-in-common continuously for a long period—Ouster —Presumption.

Sole possession by one tenant-in-common continuously for a long period without any claim or demand by any person claiming under the other tenant-in-common is evidence from which an actual ouster of the other tenant-in-common may be presumed. KRISHNA CHANDRA DAS v. PURNA CHANDRA DAS Cal. 987

Tort—Negligence—Contributory negligence—Finding that plaintiff's servants could not have averted damage by any means humanly possible—Failure of plaintiff to extinguish fire—Whether constitutes contributory negligence.

Tort—concld.

Where in a suit for damages for loss through fire caused by a spark falling from the ash-pan of a Railway engine, it was found that the servants of the plaintiff could not have averted the damage by adopting such steps as were humanly possible:

Held, that the plaintiff could not be held to be guilty of contributory negligence. B. B. & C. I. RAILWAY Co, v. DWARKA NATH All. 631

———Negligence — Injury by faulty structure of building—Responsibility for safe upkeep—Plaintiffs to prove special circumstances making owner liable.

The general rule in cases of injury due to the faulty structure of a building is that the person responsible to the general public for the safe upkeep of the building is the occupier rather than the owner, when the owner himself is not in possession. It is for the plaintiffs to show that there were some special circumstances which render the owners liable rather than the lessees.

To make the owner liable he must have been aware at the time of leasing out of the property that the property was in a condition imminently dangerous to the occupiers of the adjoining property. H. D. HIRAMANAOK v. BALKISHEN Lah. 1035

———Negligence—Railway— Damage caused to plaintiff's property by spark from engine—Burden of proof as to whether proper precaution was taken lies on Railway Company.

In a suit for damages brought against a Railway Company on the allegation that the plaintiff's property adjoining the Railway line was destroyed by a spark from the engine of a running train the burden of proof as to whether proper precaution had been taken to avoid emission of such sparks lay on the Railway Company and the latter would be liable if it failed to take all reasonable precaution. B. B. & C. I. RAILWAY Co v. DWARKA NATH All 631 ———Person procuring act of another, when liable for consequences—Motive, whether material.

There are two grounds only upon which a person who procures the act of another can be made legally responsible for its consequences. In the first place, he will incur liability if he knowingly and for his own ends induces that other person to commit an actionable wrong. In the second place, when the act induced is within the right of the immediate actor and is, therefore, not wrongful in so far as he is concerned, it may yet be to the detriment of a third party; and in that case, the inducer may be held liable if he can be shown to have procured his object by the use of illegal means directed against that third party. The motive or intention of the person doing the act is nihil ad rem. If it is a lawful act, however ill the motive might be, he has a right to do it. If it is an unlawful act, however good his motive be, he would have no right to do it. Motives and intentions in such a question is absolutely irrelevant. NAN KEE v. AH FONG Rang. 890

Trade-Mark—Burden of proof—Defendant using same number as trade-mark as plaintiff—Burden of proving and probability of deception.

Where the defendants have used an identical number as the plaintiff's on their goods, the burden is upon them to disprove the probability of the deception, and not upon the plaintiffs to prove it. ANGLO INDIAN DRUG Co v. SWASTIK OIL Co. LTD. Bom. 641 ———Combination of numerals, if can form a trade-mark.

Trade-Mark—contd.

A combination of numerals can form a trade-mark, if distinctive. ANGLO INDIAN DRUG Co. v. SWASTIK OIL Co. LTD. Bom. 641

———how assigned.

A trade-mark is generally transmitted in connection with the goodwill of a business, and can only be assigned in writing. ANGLO INDIAN DRUG Co. v. SWASTIK OIL Co. LTD. Bom. 641

———if can be applied to goods which are not sold.

A trade-mark must be applied to goods offered for sale and not to those which are neither manufactured nor sold at the date of the suit. ANGLO INDIAN DRUG Co. v. SWASTIK OIL Co. LTD. Bom. 641

———Infringement— Nature of proof required of plaintiff— Reasonable probability and no proof of actual deception required—Plaintiff must establish that particular mark indicates that goods are those of plaintiff.

In actions for infringement of trade-marks the plaintiff has to prove that his goods were known to the public by some distinct name, marks, badge, get-up, or appearance, and that the defendant's use or imitation of the same is likely to mislead the public into a belief that the defendant's goods are those of the plaintiff. The actual length of time during which a trade-mark is used or employed is not an important element for consideration. It must, however, have been used or employed long enough to render it probable that a reputation in the market has been acquired.

There must be a reasonable probability and not a mere possibility of deception. It is not necessary to prove that the defendants had the intention to deceive. It is also not necessary to give proof of actual instances of deception. Such evidence, namely, evidence of actual instances may often be useful to the Court, though the Court has to exercise its own judgment as to the probability of the deception.

Protection cannot be granted unless a plaintiff establishes that the particular mark indicates not merely a certain quality of goods but also that they are the goods of the plaintiff's manufacture. ANGLO INDIAN DRUG Co. v. SWASTIK OIL MILLS Co LTD. Bom. 641 ———"Passing off"—Gist.

The gist of a passing off action is deceit, for "passing off" is one of the ways whereby the goods of one trader are sold by another in a manner calculated to deceive the purchaser into thinking that they are the goods of the former. ANGLO INDIAN DRUG Co. v. SWASTIK OIL Co. LTD. Bom. 641

———property in—If exists apart from goods.

There can be no property in a trade-mark apart from the goods of which it has become the symbol. ANGLO INDIAN DRUG Co. v. SWASTIK OIL Co. LTD. Bom. 641 ———Right to use particular trade-mark—Limitations in India and England.

In England a trade-mark is registered not only for a particular article but for a class of goods under which that article falls, and if any one else attempted to put on the market goods which could be included in that class under another trade-mark, the Registrar might refuse to register it. In India the right to use a particular trade-mark is confined to the article to which it is affixed, but it is open to the plaintiffs to establish by proper and sufficient evidence that the particular trade-mark has been so identified and associated with the plaintiffs' products that their name would suggest itself to a purchaser on seeing it on any other product which the plaintiffs allege is a product "allied" to or of the same description. There is, however, this limitation that the acquisition of an exclusive right to a trade-mark in connection with a particular article of commerce cannot entitle the owner of that right to prohibit the use by others of such mark in connection with goods of a totally different character. ANGLO INDIAN DRUG Co. v. SWASTIK OIL Co. LTD. Bom. 641

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s 8.

SEE Deed 776

—— —— s. 10—Absolute condition or limitation—Property given to son by father on condition that the son will not alienate during father's lifetime—Condition, if void—Hindu Law—Family arrangement.

Where a Hindu father by way of family arrangement gives certain property to one of his sons but imposes the condition that the son will not alienate some of the said property during the lifetime of the father, the condition is not void under s. 10, Transfer of Property Act, the condition not being absolute. TOOK CHAND v. RADHA KISHEN Lah. 899

——— s. 41—Transferee raking on khasra paimash or police records of levy of punitive tax—Obligation under s. 41, if discharged.

The khasra paimash is not a record of title but a mere record of survey and carries with it no presumption of correctness so far as the question of ownership is concerned. A Municipality is generally interested more in the assessment of tax than in the determination of ownership, and for its purposes an occupier is as good as an owner. Moreover, in the preparation of documents like khasra paimash a Municipality is concerned more with the measurements of the buildings with a view to safeguard its own interest against any encroachment on the public streets than in the ascertainment of the title of persons owning such buildings. In the same way the Police department when taking a census of the houses for the purposes of levying the punitive tax is merely interested in recording the names of the occupants from whom they could levy the contribution. The transferees cannot be said to have discharged their obligation under s. 41 by merely raking out of old records of the Municipality or that of the Police department. KARTAR SINGH v. MEHR NISHAN Lah. 1064

——— s. 41—Whether applies to auction-purchasers.

The transfer referred to in s. 41, Transfer of Property Act, must be a voluntary transfer which is effected by an act of the ostensible owner. It is not, therefore, applicable to an auction-purchaser. PURAN MAL v. SHIVA LAL All 86

——— s. 43.

SEE Mortgage 880

SEE Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, s. 28 (4) 938

——— s. 52—Lis pendens—Lease of land while proceedings under O. XXI, r. 100 pending—Lessees bound by results.

Where a lease in favour of defendant No 2 is executed of lands in dispute during the pendency of the proceedings in the Revenue Court by defendant No. 1 consequent on the application made by the plaintiffs under O. XXI, r. 100, Civil Procedure Code, for restoration of possession, the doctrine of lis pendens is applicable and the defendan No. 2 is bound by the results of the proceeding and where on defendant No. 1's failure to bring any suit against the plaintiffs to establish the right which he claimed to the possession of the property the order of the Revenue Court, directing that the plaintiffs be put into possession of the property, becomes conclusive under

O. XXI, r. 103, as against defendant No. 1 the landlord, and also becomes conclusive as against defendant No. 2, the lessee. THAKUR BAKHSH SINGH v. ABHAIDAT SINGH Oudh 1082

——— s. 53. SEE Provincial Insolveney Act, 1920, s. 53 611

——— s. 53—Scope of—Gift — Compromise and decree affirming validity of gift deed—Compromise, if can be deemed collusive—'Collusive', significance of.

Under s. 53, Transfer of Property Act, a deed, unless it was meant by the executant thereof to be fictitious, is only voidable at the option of the creditors; and if it is not avoided by the latter, it is a perfectly valid instrument as between the parties to it.

If the plaintiff and the defendant in an action compromise, and the compromise is given effect to in the decree, it cannot be considered to be collusive, unless it is a fraud on the rights of third persons. The word "collusive" is not a term of art and generally implies an understanding between two persons in fraud of the rights of third persons. As between the parties to a transaction no question of collusion can arise only because they acted in concert—a characteristic which is common to all agreements. A party to it or any one claiming under him is estopped by the compromise and the decree affirming the validity of a deed of gift executed by him. Nor is a third party entitled to raise any question in respect of the binding character of the deed of gift. QUTUBUDDIN v. MANGLA DUBEY All. 829

——— s. 55. SEE Registration Act, 1908, s. 49 47

——— s. 55—Material defects in property and title thereto—Buyer, if bound to complete the sale—Material defect, what constitutes.

A buyer is not bound to complete the sale if there are defects in the property or in the title to the property which are material and also latent, that is to say, not discoverable by the exercise of ordinary care, or if the title is not free from reasonable doubt. A defect to be material must be of such a nature that it might be reasonably supposed that if the buyer had been aware of it he might not have entered into the contract at all, for he would be getting something different from what he contracted to buy. The liability of property to be compulsorily acquired may be fairly said to amount to a material defect which is not capable of being discovered with ordinary care. LALLUBHAI RUPCHAND v. MOHANLAL SAKARCHAND Bom. 564

——— s. 55—Restrictive conditions in the nature of easements, if material defect—Vendor, if bound to disclose—Vendor and vendee

Restrictive conditions in the nature of easements imposed on the property, are material defects and it is the duty of the vendor to disclose them to the vendee His failure to do so, would entitle the vendee to refuse to complete the sale. LALLUBHAI RUPCHAND v. MOHANLAL SAKARCHAND Bom. 564

——— s. 55—Title free from reasonable doubt, meaning of.

The meaning of a title free from reasonable doubt is a marketable title which can at all times be forced upon an unwilling purchaser. Specific performance should not be allowed even though the Court takes a favourable view of the title if it appears that its opinion may fairly and reasonably be questioned by other competent persons. LALLUBHAI RUPCHAND v. MOHANLAL SAKARCHAND Bom. 564

——— s. 60. SEE Bihar and Orissa Public Demand Recovery Act, 1914, s. 7 63s

Transfer of Property Act—contd.

———s. 60, proviso—Mortgage—Subsequent lease by mortgagor to mortgagee—If a clog on the equity of redemption.

A permanent lease by a mortgagor to a mortgagee is not always void as being a clog on the equity of redemption. On the contrary the proviso to s. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act contemplates that the equity of redemption may be extinguished, without limiting the method of extinguishing it by sale of the equity of redemption to the mortgagee. RAMDHANI SAHU v. PITAMBAR SINGH Pat. 972

———s. 65. SEE Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s. 95 756

———ss. 76 (g), (h), 77—Mortgagee in possession—Liability to account—Whether exists only in absence of contract to contrary—Circumstances under which no liability exists—Only part of interest to be paid out of usufruct—S. 77, if applies—Mortgage before coming into force of Transfer of Property Act—Liability of mortgagee to account, if recognized before the Act.

Under s. 76, cls. (g) and (h), Transfer of Property Act the mortgagee in possession must keep full and accurate accounts, and all his receipts from the mortgage property (subject to allowance for certain specified and permissible expenses) are to be credited in favour of the mortgagor in reduction of the amount due for interest or in reduction of the principal if the receipts exceed the interest due; and if, there is still a surplus, it is repayable to the mortgagor. These clauses are not qualified by any such proviso as "in the absence of a contract to the contrary"; therefore they apply in all cases, contract or no contract to the contrary excepting those in which s. 77 makes them inapplicable. Section 77 only comes in where the mortgagor is from the outset safe from being confronted at the time of redemption with a demand for anything more than the principal sum advanced, and does not cover the case in which only a part of the interest is to be paid out of the usufruct; and the omission must have been intentional.

The liability of the mortgagee to render account was well recognised even before the coming into force of the Transfer of Property Act Consequently, even if the document dates from before the Act, these provisions will apply. KAMLA PRASAD v. BAMDEO MISSIR Pat. 22

———s. 82—Intention of.

The intention of s. 82, Transfer of Property Act, is not that the lien of the mortgagee should be divided, but simply to determine the liability of the purchasers of the property inter se. DIVAN TAIK YA v. M. S. S. CHETTYAR FIRM Rang. 954

———s. 92—Mortgage—Subrogation—Subsequent mortgagee paying off prior mortgage—Presumption as to intention to keep it alive as shield against intermediate mortgagee—Intermediate mortgagee paying nothing towards redemption—Whether can get benefit of redemption of prior mortgage—Agency, doctrine of—Applicability.

The subsequent mortgagee in paying off a prior mortgage must be presumed to have intended what was to his benefit and he ought to be deemed to have intended to keep alive the prior mortgage to be used as a shield against the intermediate mortgages.

A held a mortgage deed executed by B in respect of a plot of land which was included in the property mortgaged under the deed in suit executed by B and C in favour of the plaintiff. On the strength of his mortgage A claimed priority in respect of his mortgage which was earlier in date. The plaintiff claimed that he had redeemed certain prior incumbrances upon the mortgaged property and that he was thereby subrogated to the rights and interests of those prior mortgagees and thus acquired priority as against the intermediate mortgage held by A. The consideration for the mortgage deed in suit consisted partly of certain sums of money made payable by the mortgagee plaintiff for the redemption of the prior mortgages. It was proved that the plaintiff had in fact paid off the prior incumbrances;

Held, that as a matter of a justice and equity, there was no reason why the intermediate mortgagee should get the benefit of the redemption of the prior mortgages when he has paid nothing towards such redemption and that the plaintiff could claim to be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagees whom he had paid off.

Held also, that the doctrine of agency could not be applied to deprive the claim of the plaintiff to be subrogated. SUKHRAM DAS v. MAHBUB KHAN Oudh 905

———s. 92—Whether safe guide to follow in cases arising before amending act.

Even if s. 92 Transfer of Property Act, has no retrospective effect, nevertheless the rule laid down by the legislature in s. 92 would be a safe guide to follow as laying down correctly the rule of justice, equity and good conscience for cases arising before the passing of the amending Act of 1929. SUKHRAM DAS v. MAHBUB KHAN Oudh 905

———s. 92—Widow—Purchaser from widow discharging mortgage debt—Reversioner, if entitled to possession only on payment of mortgage debt paid—No allegation of bad faith on part of purchaser—Good faith, if to be proved.

Where a purchaser from the widow holding a life-estate discharges a mortgage debt out of the consideration for the mortgage and on the death of the widow, the reversioner sues for possession of the property, credit should be given to the mortgage amount paid by the purchaser. In such case, if the plaintiff reversioner does not impute bad faith on the part of the purchaser, the latter is not bound to allege or prove good faith. BABAN MISRA v. BISHWANATH PANDE Pat. 870

———s. 95—Redemption of portion of mortgage—Charge, when accrues.

A charge created by redemption of a mortgage by the holder of a portion of a mortgaged property, does not accrue until payment of the whole mortgage debt. BIRENDRA KESHRI PRASAD v. BAHURIA SARASWATI KUER Pat 756 ———ss. 95, 65—Subrogation—Interest to be paid to co-mortgagor—Discretion of Court—Co-mortgagor, if can enforce terms of mortgage bond on subrogation.

The effect of the old s. 95, Transfer of Property Act, was not to place the person claiming to enforce the charge completely in the position of the mortgagee in such a manner that he could enforce the terms of the mortgage deed against those mortgagors who had not borne their share in the redemption. The question of what interest should be payable to the co-mortgagor paying the debts, on what amount, and from what date, is one at the discretion of the Court; and the plaintiff is not entitled to claim as a matter of right that interest should be calculated at the rate specified in the bond. The limited right of subrogation created by s. 95, Transfer of Property Act, must not be treated as if in fact it entitled the co mortgagor to enforce the terms of the mortgage bond. BIRENDRA KESHRI PRASAD v. BAHURIA SARASWATI KUER Pat. 756

Transfer of Property Act—contd.

——s. 100.
See Bihar and Orissa Public Demands Recovery Act, 1914, s 7 635
See Oudh Rent Act, 1886, s. 7-A 40

——s. 101—"Or otherwise than subject thereto", meaning and effect of—Subsequent mortgagee seeking foreclosure — Whether can foreclose and obtain possession subject to charge of prior mortgagee in possession.

The words 'or otherwise than subject thereto' in s. 101, Transfer of Property Act, refer to the second eventuality mentioned in the section, namely, that of the subsequent mortgagee trying to sell the property and not to that of his seeking foreclosure. No doubt, a subsequent mortgagee who has obtained a decree for sale can avail himself of either of the two alternatives provided for in the section, namely, he can either redeem the prior mortgage or sell the property subject to that mortgage but a subsequent mortgagee seeking foreclosure of the property cannot foreclose and obtain possession of the property subject to the charge of the prior mortgagee who is already in possession on the basis of a prior foreclosure decree. In the latter case the subsequent mortgagee has no alternative but to redeem the prior mortgage. Salik Ram v. Jangjit Bahadur Singh Oudh 498

——s. 116. See Lease 838

—— s. 116—Tenant holding over after expiry of lease—Institution of suit for rent—Effect—Tenancy from year to year— Whether can be presumed—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 51—Rent to be paid by such tenant.

If a tenant holds over after the expiry of his lease he ordinarily becomes a trespasser, unless the landlord in some manner signifies his intention of recognizing the continuance of the tenancy. Such intention will be sufficiently indicated by institution of a suit for rent. When the tenant is found to be continuing in possession he will be presumed to be a tenant from year to year, in the absence of any evidence providing that he holds on a different tenure.

As for the amount of rent payable, in the absence of evidence of a special contract varying the amount to be paid, the provisions of s. 51, Bengal Tenancy Act will apply, since those provisions apply to all agricultural tenancies; and from year to year the rent which was payable in the previous year will be presumed to be the rent payable for the holding. In the absence of proof of any contrary arrangement, he must be deemed to be governed by the same conditions as governed his tenancy while he was holding under the kabuliyat. Ramsunder Tewari v. Dulhin Bataso Kuer Pat. 367

——s. 123—Mere unexpressed intention to dedicate—Effect—Subsequent transfer, whether invalidated.

A mere unexpressed intention to dedicate certain property cannot have the effect of a formal dedication so as to invalidate the transfer of that property to a third person made after the idea had been formed in the mind of the transferor. Although it may be true that in spite of the provisions of s. 123, Transfer of Property Act, such a dedication may be effective without an instrument in writing, there must be a real dedication whereby the property is completely given away and the owner completely divests himself of his ownership. Birendra Keshri Prasad & Narain Saheb v. Bahuria Saraswati Kuer Pat. 756

——s. 128. See Gift 303

Transfer of Property Act—concld.

——ss. 130, 134, as amended by Act XX of 1929. See Companies Act, 1913, s 109 (d) 193

Transfer of Property Act (Amendment) Supplementary Act (XXI of 1929), s. 10—Whether in force in North-West Frontier Province.

The general rule is that an amending Act, unless otherwise stated, is territorially co-extensive with the Act which it amends, and Act XXI of 1929 does not provide any exception to the general rule. As s. 10 of Act XXI of 1929 amends the Registration Act which is in force in North-West Frontier Province, s. 10 of Act XXI of 1929 is also in force in North-West Frontier Province. Abdullah Khan v. Behram Khan Pesh. 1022

Trust—Purpose of trust—Fiduciary capacity—Trust for administration. See Straits Settlement Ordinance No. 56 (Limitation) ss 9, 3 855

——Trustee, if authorised to give possession of property before receiving purchase money.

Trustees are not authorised to give possession of property comprised in a trust for sale before receiving the purchase money. Tirunarayana Pillai v Manickavachagam Mad. 359

——Trustee's legal representatives— Breach of trust—Cause of action, if survives against legal representatives of deceased trustee.

The cause of action for breach of trust survives against the legal representatives of a deceased trustee and legal representatives of a deceased trustee can be proceeded against in respect of breaches of trust by the deceased. Tirunarayana Pillai v. Manickavachagam Mad 359

——When effective— Communication to cestui que trust.

The general rule is that a trust to be effective must be communicated to the cestui que trust or that he should at least know about it. The question as to whether there has been an irrevocable trust or not must be a question of fact in almost every case.

Where a certain fund is set apart in the books for the purpose of charity and it is so continued for 60 years but there is no evidence that the owners of the fund intended to part with the ownership and control of it, and its existence was never communicated to the general trustees of the temple and there is no document creating the trust except the entry in account book and this fund is treated as an asset in partition, no irrevocable trust fund is created. Arunachalam Chettiar v. Official Assignee, Madras Mad. 772

Trusts Act (II of 1882), ss 19, 23, 37, 62—Breach of trust—Suit for, against trustee—Accounts —Nature of proof—Trustees not rendering accounts properly—Liability for interest— Accounts to be taken must be common account and not on footing of wilful default.

Where in a suit for the breach of trust, the plea is that the trustees have not kept proper accounts or furnished them to the beneficiaries, it is not sufficient to show that the account was not regularly and correctly kept from day to day but was mostly written up for the purpose of being produced in Court What is more important is the question whether the account as far as it goes can be shown to be untrue in the sense that the actual receipts are not entered or the expenditure entered is fictitious or excessive. Thus the faults in the mode of keeping accounts are to be distinguished from the faults involving dishonesty or misconduct.

An accounting party not rendering accounts properly but retaining trust moneys (such as the unpaid purchase moneys due by them on the several benami purchases) in their hands must pay interest even if the debt by its nature does not carry interest.

Trusts Act—concld.

In a suit for breach of trust the account to be taken must be a common account which will give the beneficiaries liberty to surcharge and falsify but not an account on the footing of wilful default. TIRUNARAYANA PILLAI v. MANICKAVACHAGAM Mad 359

——— s. 62—Conditional release where trustees have purchased trust property— Power of Court to order.

Under s 62, Trusts Act, the Court has no power to make an order directing a conditional re-sale conditional on such sale producing a higher price than that for which the trustees themselves bought. TIRUNARAYANA PILLAI v. MANICKAVACHAGAM Mad. 359

U P. District Boards Act (X of 1922), s. 48—Agenda paper mentioning that draft resolution and report regarding dismissal of Secretary would come up for final decision— Whether constitutes sufficient notice under s. 48.

Where the agenda paper as issued for a meeting of the District Board made it clear that a draft resolution of the members regarding the dismissal of the Secretary together with the explanation and the report of the Sub-committee would come up before the Board on a certain date for final decision:

Held, that this undoubtedly notified that final orders would be passed on the matter and that it necessarily included a resolution adopting the draft resolution as proposed by the members and hence constituted sufficient notice within the meaning of s. 48, U. P. District Boards Act, for a resolution for adopting a resolution for dismissal of the Secretary. MUHAMMAD MUSTAFA ALI KHAN v. DISTRICT BOARD, BAREILLY All. 593

U. P. Excise Act (IV of 1910), s. 60 (a)—Charge for being in possession of liquor in excess of quantity allowed by law—Conviction under s. 60 (a)—Conviction for possession of liquor not lawfully obtained —Whether can be made.

Where the accused was charged for being in possession of country liquor in excess of the quantity than he was allowed by law and was convicted under s. 60 (a), U. P. Excise Act of 1910, and it was found on revision that the evidence did not prove that the total quantity in his possession was more than that allowed by law and then the prosecution urged that the conviction was right inasmuch as he was in possession of a bottle of country liquor which was not proved by the accused to have been lawfully obtained :

Held, that the accused could not be convicted for an offence with which he was not charged and hence the conviction was bad and should be set aside. SHEONANDAN v. EMPEROR All. 492

U. P. Honorary Munsifs Act (II of 1896), ss. 7, cl. (4), 9. SEE Civil Procedure Code, 1908, s. 102 95

U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 4—Person acting as lambardar and collecting rents— Presumption —Whether he can say that he was not legally appointed.

Where a person was the de facto lambardar, and acted as such and collected rents, he cannot afterwards say that he had not been legally appointed. Having accepted the post of lambardar, it must be presumed that he consented to perform the obligations which go with the post. MITTHU LAL v. CHAMELI All. 800

——— s. 34—Suit by assignee of profit from co-sharer for profits for certain period—Held, that no report under s. 34 was required—Held, also that assignee was entitled to bring such suit in Revenue Court.

The suit was in respect of the profits for the years 1333 to 1335 Fasli. These profits were transferred to the plaintiff after they had accrued. It is obvious that the plaintiff could make no report under s. 34 of the Land Revenue Act. He had obtained no right either in the mahal or in any share of it or in the profits of it in respect of the year in which the transfer was made or in respect of any subsequent year. There was no right subsisting in him which could be entered in the register. What was transferred in this case was not a right to the profits in a mahal at any time after the transfer but it was a transfer of a sum of money or a debt or any actionable claim which had already accrued to the transferor. There could be no entry in any register of proprietors in respect of this amount and consequently no report could be required and the right to sue could not be based on the making of any such report. In these circumstances an assignee of the right to recover, in a Court of Law, profits which had already accrued to the assignor is entitled to bring a suit in the Revenue Court. ASHFAQ ALI KHAN v. INAYAT PEG All 1103

——— s. 36. SEE Oudh Rent Act, 1886, s. 7-A 40

——— s. 42—Scope of—Held, upon facts, that the decision of Revenue Court did not bar the civil suit —Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926), s. 121.

The scope of s. 42, U. P. Land Revenue Act, is very limited and is limited to the case of a dispute relating to class and tenure. Where the question is, who is the tenant, s 42 has no relation to such a dispute It is a mistake to read into s. 42 all the provisions of s. 121 of the Agra Tenancy Act.

In an application for the correction of jamabandi, under s. 42 of the Land Revenue Act, 1901, the relief sought by the applicants was that their names might be entered as "tenant-grove-holders" against the land in dispute. The case in the Revenue Court was fought on the basis of possession. The applicant-defendant stated that he had been in possession over the land in dispute for about 16 years. The application was contested by the plaintiff. He stated in his written statement that he had been in possession over the land in dispute. The Revenue Court framed the following issues : "(1) Whether the defendant No. 2 (plaintiff) holds the grove in suit as proprietor ? (2) Whether the applicant is in possession as a grove-holder ?" The first issue was decided against the defendant (plaintiff in this case) and the second issue was decided in favour of the defendants-applicants (the appellants). No declaration was made by the Revenue Court as to whether the defendants were the tenants of the plaintiff. The only order passed by the Revenue Court was :—"The area shall be recorded as "grove" inside the abadi and the applicant as the grove-holder." There was nothing in the whole of the order to show who was the land-holder ;

Held, that though the application was described as one under s. 42 of the Land Revenue Act, yet it could not have been made under it, because the applicants did not state that they were the tenants of the opposite parties. The dispute between the parties was regarding the entries in the annual register. Even if the order of the Revenue Court be regarded as one made under s. 42 of the Land Revenue

U. P. Land Revenue Act—concld.

Act, it cannot operate as res judicata. Hence the suit by the plaintiff in Civil Court for declaration that he (the plaintiff) was the owner in possession of the plots of land and the tress thereon is not barred. KALP NATH CHAND v. SAMAR DHUJ CHAND All 1097

——s. 42—Tenancy admitted—Applicability.

Section 42 of the Land Revenve Act applies where the tenancy is admitted and the dispute relates to the class or tenure of the tenant. KALP NATH CHAND v. SAMAR DHUJ CHAND All. 1097

——s. 79. SEE Evidence Act, 1872, s. 115 295

——s. 86. SEE U. P. Local Rates Act, 1914, s. 7 701

——s. 86—Chaukidara cannot be regarded as ground rent but is a cess—Such cess not recorded in last settlement—Whether recoverable.

Chaukidara cannot be regarded as ground rent for the houses of the raiyats but is apparently a cess. When no such cess has been recorded in the last settlement, it is not recoverable under the provisions of s. 86, U. P. Land Revenue Act. MUHAMMAD-UD-DIN v. BHUPAN All. 658

——s. 118—Heap of manure or cattle trough—Whether "a dwelling house or other building" within meaning of s. 118.

A heap of manure or a cattle trough is not a "dwelling house or other building" within the meaning of s. 118 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act. A co-sharer to whose share a plot of land, over which another co-sharer has made cattle troughs or stores heaps of manure, is allotted in partition, is entitled to actual possession of the plot BRAJ KISHORE UPADHIA v. PANCHAITI AKHARA MAHA NIRWANI FIRQA GOSHAIYAN NAGA All. 667

——s. 233 (m). SEE Jurisdiction 92

U. P. Local Rates Act (I of 1914), s. 7—Superior proprietor's right to recover cesses from lessees or under-proprietors—Lease deed by which superior proprietor undertook to pay old chaukidari and patwari rates—Whether takes away right to recover cesses—U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 190'), s. 86, if applies.

Under s. 7, U. P. Local Rates Act, the superior proprietor has a legal right to recover the cesses from his lessees or under-proprietors. A lease under which the superior proprietor undertook to pay the old chaukidari and patwari rates that were then recoverable from landlords does not take away that right. Nor does an order of the Settlement Commissioner that the defendants-pukhtadars (lessees) were not liable for cesses take away the legal rights conferred upon the plaintiff who is the superior proprietor to recover the local cesses imposed by the Local Government under the U. P. Local Rates Act. Section 86, U. P. Land Revenue Act has no applicability to the case. MOHAMMAD AGHA v. BAIJNATH SINGH Oudh 701

U. P. Municipalities Act (II of 1916), ss. 186, 307, 318—District Magistrate making appellate order under s. 318 upholding legality of notice issued by Board under s. 186—Criminal Court trying case under s. 30 for failure to comply with notice—Whether can go into the question of legality, validity, or reasonableness of notice.

Per King, C. J., and Srivastava, J.—When the District Magistrate has made an appellate order under s. 318, U. P. Municipalities Act, upholding the legality or the validity of the notice issued by the Board under s. 186, the Criminal Court which tries a case under s. 307, for failure to comply with the notice, cannot go into the question of the legality, validity or reasonableness of the notice. Where the accused has admittedly failed to comply with the notice, he is guilty of an offence under s 307.

U. P. Municipalities Act—concld.

Per Zia-ul-Hasan, J, (dissentiente)—A Criminal Court can, in a prosecution under s. 307 of the Municipalities Act for failure to obey a notice issued by a Municipal Board under s. 186 of the Municipalities Act, go into the question of the legality, validity and reasonableness of the notice. EMPEROR v. MUMTAZ HUSAIN Oudh 344 F. B.

——s. 321—Authority in s. 321, scope of.

The word "authority' in s. 321 is sufficiently wide to cover both civil and Criminal Courts EMPEROR v. MUMTAZ HUSAIN Oudh 344 F. B.

U P. Town Improvement Act (VIII of 1919), s.10 (3) (a). SEE Land Acquisition Act, 1894, s. 23 579

Vendor and purchaser—Purchaser agreeing to pay vendor's creditor—Creditor's right to sue purchaser —Privity of contract.

Where a purchaser of mortgaged property agreed with his vendor to pay off the mortgage out of the sale price which was reserved with him for this purpose and he, (the purchaser) wrote to the mortgagee that he will pay the mortgage amount and requested him not to press the mortgagor.

Held, that the purchaser made himself personally liable to pay the mortgage amount and the mortgagee pas entitled to recover the amount personally from the purchaser. MUDALA VENKATAREDDI NAIDU v. DHORWADA VENKATA VARAHA NARASIMHARAO Mad. 302

Wajib ul arz—Custom requiring permission of zemindars *for sale—*Zemindars constituting a joint Hindu family—Consent of manager—Sufficiency of —Landlord and tenant.

Where a custom is recorded in the wajib-ul-arz under which a tenant's grove can be sold with the permission of the zemindars, and the zamindars constitute a joint Hindu family, the consent of the managing member or karta will be enough to validate the transfer. ANRUDH RAI v. SANT PRASAD RAI All. 569

Will—Construction—Benign construction should be used—Intention of testator should be given effect to.

A will contained, "I appoint my sons K and R to be the shebaits of the Thacoors and I direct that upon the death, retirement or refusal to act of any of them or any of the future shebaits, the then next eldest male lineal descendant of K or R shall act as a shebait in place of the deceased or retiring shebait or shebait refusing to act as such—it being my intention that the eldest for the time being in the male line of my said sons shall always remain as joint shebait, and in the event of the death or refusal to act of any shebait, the then next male member of the branch to which the shebait dying or refusing belonged shall act as a shebait in his place and stead :"

Held, that the testater wished to provide that K and R should be the first shebaits, and that upon the death, retirement or refusal to act of either of them or of any of the future shebaits, the then next eldest male lineal descendants of K and of R should be the joint shebaits representing K and R's branches of the family respectively—and that there should be only two shebaits at any time.

Held, also that the provision in the will for the succession of the eldest in the male line was invalid, because it excluded some of the founder's heirs according to Hindu Law. Further, the testator did not intend to give to either K and R an estate of inheritance or an absolute estate, but at most only a life-interest, because he provided for the succession on their death, retirement or refusal, of persons who were not their heirs according to Hindu Law.

Will—contd.

The attitude to be adopted in construing a Hindu will is that a benignant construction is to be used, and that if the real meaning of the document can be reasonably ascertained from the language used though that language be ungrammatical or untechnical, or mistaken as to name or description or in any other manner incorrect, provided it sufficiently indicates what was meant, that meaning shall be enforced to the extent and in the form which the law allows, but effect should be given to the intention of the testator.. LAL BEHARY DHUR v. ADMINISTRATOR-GENERAL, BENGAL Cal 1071

———Construction—"I give my niece all my personal property and effects", meaning of—Words, if sufficient to constitute her residuary legatee of the personality of deceased—Bequest void under s. 118, Succession Act—Bequest, if would fall into residue—Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), ss. 102, 103, 118.

The testatrix, after devising certain immovable property to Bishop F bequeathed also to the Bishop certain personal property of which she was possessed. The will then proceeded; "I give and bequeath to my niece Mrs. B of Insein two plots of land near the A. B. M. School, for her sole use and benefit. I also give to my niece Mrs B all my personal property and effects":

Held, that the will must be construed as a whole. Prima facie the words "I give all my personal property and effects" were sufficient to constitute Mrs. B a residuary legatee of the personalty of the deceased within s 102, Succession Act, and hence prima facie under s. 103, Mrs. B was entitled to all the personal property belonging to the testatrix at the time of her death of which she had not made any other testamentary disposition which was capable of taking effect. The bequest to Bishop F was void under s. 118 of the Act. The bequest of personality to Bishop F would therefore fall into the residue of which Mrs. B was the legatee;

Will—concld.

Held, also that there was nothing to be found within the four corners of the will, to justify the Court in arriving at a conclusion that the testatrix, who gave all her personal property to Mrs. B intended thereby that Mrs B should only receive a specific legacy of personal property and effects exclusive of the personal property bequeathed to Bishop F, and that in no event should the personality which formed the subject-matter of the legacy to Bishop F fall into the residue. ELIZABETH O'DONOGHUE v. SUTHERLAND Rang. 310

WORDS AND PHRASES:—

———Cause of action—Meaning of.

It is quite correct to define "cause of action" as meaning all the congeries of facts which it is necessary for the plaintiff to establish before he can ask the Court to grant the relief which he claims in the suit. SAMARENDRANATH MITRA v. PYAREECHARAN LAHA Cal. 882

Collusive, significance of SEE Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s. 53 829

Drawing, meaning of. SEE Penal Code, 1860, s. 291-A 590

In pursuance of an enactment, meaning of. SEE Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, Art. 2 131 F. B.

Movable property, meaning of. SEE Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 386 742

Practicable, meaning of. SEE Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, s. 30 (a), (b) 902 S. B.

Qarabati, meaning of. SEE Riwaj-i-am 340.

Wages, meaning of. SEE Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, Art.. 7 591

Works of Public Utility Companies Act (XXII of 1863), s. 26—Scope of. SEE Public Purposes Land Acquisition Act, 1857 98

INDIAN CASES

1935 JOURNAL Vol. 155

[The Editors do not hold themselves responsible for the views expressed by contributors.]

CRIMINAL LAW IN 1934.

The number of important decisions in the past year affecting criminal law has been by no means great, but, as in previous years, a few decided cases have added notably to this branch of the law, and it is proposed here to give a brief review of these.

There are really only two decisions of outstanding importance. The first, Maxwell v. Director of Public Prosecutions (151 L. T. Rep. 477), was particularly noteworthy, because it was the first case since 1921 to be taken to the House of Lords on the certificate of the Attorney-General that it involved "a point of law of exceptional public importance." The point at issue was the limits of cross-examination of a prisoner as to character under section 1 of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898—or, to put it more specifically, whether a previous charge resulting in an acquittal is a legitimate means of attacking a prisoner's character. Briefly stated, the facts were as follows: William Maxwell, a herbalist, was charged at the Assizes with the manslaughter of a woman patient, the allegation of the prosecution being that her death was due to treatment by him with the object of procuring a miscarriage. He was also charged with using an instrument for the like purpose upon the same woman on an earlier occasion. Some years previously he had been charged with the manslaughter of another woman patient in similar circumstances, and that charge had terminated in an acquittal. At the trial he put his character in issue, and when he came to be cross-examined it was sought to attack his character on the basis of that previous charge. After the detailed circumstances had been put to him he was asked by Counsel for the Crown: "That matter was inquired into at the Assizes at Leeds, and you were acquitted by a jury?" and his answer was "Yes." The prisoner was convicted on both charges and appealed to the Court of Criminal Appeal on the ground that, as the previous charge had resulted in an acquittal, the above cross-examination was inadmissible. The court dismissed the appeal, holding that the language of section 1 (f) of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, permitted the cross-examination of a prisoner who had put his character in issue on any previous charge, whether the charge had resulted in an acquittal or not. On appeal by the prisoner, the House of Lords reversed that decision, and in their considered opinion the following principles were enunciated. As a general rule it is not permissible to attack a prisoner's character on the basis of a previous charge which has resulted in an acquittal, for the fact of such a charge having been made is generally irrelevant, in that it neither goes to show that the prisoner did the act for which he is being tried nor does it affect his credibility. In exceptional cases, however, it may be permissible to put to a prisoner in cross-examination a previous charge which has resulted in an acquittal, where the object of the question is to lay the ground for further cross-examination on a statement made or evidence given by the prisoner in the earlier trial which tends to throw doubt on his evidence at the later trial. But, the opinion of the House proceeded to add, even where the question whether a prisoner has been convicted, charged, or acquitted does go to his credibility, it should not be admitted if the jury are likely to be misled into thinking that the question is relevant not to credibility, but to the probability of the prisoner having committed the offence for which they are trying him. It is, perhaps, worthy of comment that in Rex v. Waldman (24 Cr. App. Rep. 201) a prisoner who was charged with receiving stolen goods put his character in issue, and was cross-examined on two previous charges one of which had resulted in acquittal but the other in conviction. The above decision of Maxwell v. Director of Public Prosecutions (sup.) was relied on on behalf of the appellant, but the Court of Criminal Appeal distinguished the cases and held that, as in the later case there had in fact been a previous conviction, even assuming the question on the previous charge resulting in acquittal to have been irregular (a matter which they did not expressly decide), no substantial miscarriage of justice had in the circumstances occurred and the appeal should be dismissed under the proviso to section 4 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907.

The other outstanding decision—Rex v. Donovan (152 L. T. Rep. 46; (1934) 2 K. B. 498)—dealt with the question how far, on a charge of assault, consent of the person alleged to have been assaulted can be a defence. In reality, the decision of the Court of Criminal Appeal did little more than reaffirm principles already laid down in Reg v. Coney (46 L. T. Rep. 307; 8 Q. B. Div. 534), but, prior to the Court's decision, there was some authority for the view that a person might consent to any assault which did not amount to a mayhem. The principles enunciated in Rex v. Donovan (sup.) were that consent can never be a defence to a charge of assault, where the alleged assault consists in an unlawful act, and that, as a general rule, it is an unlawful act to strike another person with such a degree of violence that bodily harm is a probable consequence, that rule being subject only to certain well-recognised exceptions, e. g., in the case of friendly athletic contests or rough but innocent horseplay. The facts of the case were somewhat peculiar. The prisoner was charged with indecent assault and common assault on a girl aged seventeen. It was proved that he was addicted to a form of sexual perversion generally known as flagellation, and that he had adminstered to the girl a number of blows with a cane. These blows had left seven or eight red marks on her body, and the beating was described by a medical witness as "a fairly severe beating." At the trial the prisoner relied on the defence of the girl's consent and the chairman, overruling a submission by the prosecution that consent was not an available defence in such a case, summed up on the basis that consent or non-consent was the real issue for the jury, but omitted to direct them that the onus of negativing consent lay on the prosecution. The jury convicted, and the Court of Criminal Appeal quashed the conviction in view of the unsatisfactory course which the trial had taken. The Court delivered a considered judgment in which they enunciated the principles set out above, and added that the proper direction for the jury in such a case was, first, were the blows struck likely or intended to cause bodily harm? If the jury took the view that they were, then the act of the prisoner was per se unlawful and the consent of the girl could not be an available defence. If, however, they took the contrary view, then consent did become an available defence, and they must convict only if they were satisfied that the prosecution had discharged the onus which lay upon them of negativing consent.

The remaining decisions in the year are of less importance and complexity, and may be summarised very briefly. Two small points have arisen with regard to indictments. In Rex v. Walker (24 Cr. App. Rep. 117) it was laid down that, in an indictment for cruelty to a child under section 1 of the Children and Young Persons Act, 1933, it is better to include the word "wilfully" in the Particulars of Offence, although that word does not appear in the appropriate form in the Forms of Indictment in the Appendix to the Rules made under the Indictments Act, 1915. Again, in Rex v. Hyde (151 L. T. Rep. 20) it was held that an indictment, for arson of goods in a building, contrary to section 7 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861, was bad in law in that the words "under such circumstances that if the building had been thereby set fire to, the offence would have amounted to felony" were omitted from the Particulars of Offence.

A point with regard to the proof of the first marriage on a charge of bigamy arose in Rex v. Lamb (150 L. T. Rep. 519). Under section 42 of the Marriage Act, 1836, a marriage which takes place in a register office by certificate after notice is rendered null and void if persons "knowingly and wilfully intermarry . . . under the provisions of the Act . . . without due notice to the superintendent registrar." In the above case it was proved that the prisoner, with the knowledge and consent of the other party, had given the notice in a false name. The Court held that the notice still remained a "due notice" for the purpose of the above section and that the marriage was not thereby invalidated.

There is one decision which is likely to be of some importance to practitioners and which will serve to correct any wrong impression which may have gone abroad as a result of the comparatively recent decision in Rex v. Naylor (147 L. T. Rep. 159; (1933) 1 K. B. 685). In Rex v. Littleboy (151 L T. Rep. 570; (1934) 2 K. B. 408) the prisoner set up a defence of alibi for the first time at the trial and the Judge in his summing-up commented on this, saying that the value of the defence was lessened by reason of the fact that the Police had had no opportunity of testing it. The Court of Criminal Appeal held that, though comments on non-disclosure of defence prior to trial must be made with care and with fairness to the prisoner, comments of the above kind, relating merely to the value of the defence, were not open to objection. They added that all that Rex v. Naylor (sup.) had intended to decide was that it was wrong to refer to the silence of a prisoner when before the magistrates as evidence against him or as possible corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice.

In Rex v. Manser (25 Cr. App. Rep. 18) the Court of Criminal Appeal had once again to deal with the troublesome question of corroboration of the evidence of a young child, and held that, where the evidence of a young child requires corroboration as a matter either of law or practice, the requisite corroboration cannot be supplied by the unsworn testimony of another child which itself, by statute, requires corroboration.

In Rex v. Holding and Rex v. Long (178 L. T. Jour. 330; 25 Cr. App. Rep. 28) emphasis was once again laid on the duties of Courts of quarter sessions in dealing with incorrigible rogues committed for sentence. It was said that there must be an inquiry into the circumstances of the conviction at petty sessions and an opportunity afforded to the prisoner of cross-examining any witness called for the Crown and of addressing the Court before sentence is passed, and that it is by no means to be regarded as a matter of course that the maximum sentence of imprisonment is in all cases appropriate.

Two rather unusual cases of murder may next be noted. In Rex v. Martin, Ansell and Ross (24 Cr. App. Rep. 117) those present in the Court of Criminal Appeal witnessed the rare spectacle of two persons convicted of murder walking out of the dock scot free on the determination of the appeal. The case against Ansell and Ross was a thin one, the only direct evidence against them being that of their alleged accomplice Martin. The judge, after properly warning the jury that they should look for corroboration of Martin's evidence, when dealing with the case against Ansell and Ross, enumerated a number of matters capable of being regarded as corroboration, but, per incuriam included in that number a conversation between Martin and one of the Crown witnesses after the commission of the crime. This conversation was not even admissible evidence against Ansell and Ross, and their convictions were, in the circumstances, quashed. In Rex v. Davidson (25 Cr. App. Rep. 21) the prisoner was convicted of the murder of his young son, and the case was remarkable for the fact that the body had not been found and that there was no direct evidence that the boy was dead, apart from the prisoner's own statement, consisting in confessions made before the trial, retracted on oath at the trial and replaced by sworn evidence as to finding the boy accidentally drowned. The Court, however, held that this amounted to sufficient evidence of the corpus delicti.

In conclusion, it may be worth observing that the recent decision of the Court of Criminal Appeal in Rex v. Stringer (148 L. T. Rep. 503; (1933) 1 K. B. 704) which was regarded by many as to some extent unsatisfactory and difficult to follow, has been now rendered obsolete by the provision in section 34 of the Road Traffic Act, 1934, that upon a charge of manslaughter there may be a conviction for dangerous driving, although the conditions as to notice of intended prosecution, etc., laid down in section 21 of the Act of 1930 have not been fulfilled.—The Law Times.

MOTORISTS AND CHILDREN.

A personal injury case of a somewhat unusual nature, and one of interest to the entire motoring community, came before Mr. Justice du Parcq on the first day of this term (Howard v. Pickfords, Limited), and raised the quesion whether motorists who have left their cars unattended for a short time in a street frequented by children playing ought, on returning and before driving off, to search the vehicle thoroughly for any odd child who may have been misguided or mischievous enough to secrete himself on any part of it! In the case in question a motor van belonging to the defendants, well-known carriers, was driven into a street in the East End where normally there is not a great deal of traffic and where large numbers of chidren were in the habit of playing. Frequently, as is the nature of children, and much to the inconvenience and annoyance of drivers, they played around stationary vehicles and sometimes climbed on to them. On this particular occasion there were a number of children playing about in the street when the driver drew his van up on his off-side of the street and left it while carrying out his duties. A little boy, aged seven years—the infant plaintiff— while the driver was absent, seated himself on the near-side running-board of the van. The driver, on returning, drove off, and, swerving across to the other side of the street to get to his near side, the child was thrown on to the pavement and sustained, among other injuries, a fractured pelvis. The case for the plaintiff was that where the van was left unattended in a place in which the driver knew quite well that children played and had in fact clambered on to motor vehicles, he ought not to have started the van and put it in motion without first having made quite sure that there was no child on it. He ought, it was submitted, to have searched the vehicle and looked all round it. The defendants contended that there no negligence because nobody could say that it was part of the ordinary duty of a driver of a motor vehicle to assume that there may be a child on the running-board and to search the vehicle before driving off. "What," asked counsel for the defendants, "is to be the position of any driver of any motor vehicle in London if my clients are to be held guilty of negligence? Any one of them who, when driving a car stopped for a few minutes to go to a tobacconist's or other place, saw only the one side of the car nearest the kerb when he returned. Would one ever dream of troubling to walk right round the car to see if there was anyone on the other side?"

After hearing the evidence Mr. Justice du Parcq accepted that of the driver to the effect that when he returned to his van he saw no children near it. The position in law on the question of negligence in such cases has been dealt with in a number of authorities. In Cooke v. Midland and Great Western Railway of Ireland (100 L. T. Rep. 626; (1909) A. C. 229), where a child was injured while playing on a turntable—a machine attractive to children and dangerous as a plaything—it was being used, in the words of Lord Macnaghten, with "tacit permission," and as Lord Atkinson said, "with the leave and licence of the defendants," the railway company. In the present case, while admittedly the driver knew that children did sometimes climb on to his van, it was obviously impossible to maintain on that evidence that there was anything amounting to "tacit permission" or to "leave and licence." The children were neither encourged nor permitted to get on to the van, and nothing the driver did or said could ever have led them to think that they were allowed to do so. "It is quite impossible to say," said Mr. Juslice du Parcq, "that because sometimes children climbed on to the van, and the driver was unable to prevent them, that he was licensing them to do so." As regards the case of trespassers, the general principle is laid down in Robert Addie and Sons (Collieries) Limited v. Dumbreck (140 L. T. Rep. 650; (1929) A. C. 358) that where children are trespassing on somebody's land they do so at their own risk, and there is no duty to protect them from injury. Nobody, of course, is entitled knowingly to injure a trespasser or to set a trap for one. As was said by Lord Dunedin in Addie's case (sup.): "If a person is a trespasser, then the only duty the proprietor has towards him is not maliciously to injure him: he may not shoot him; he may not set a spring gun, for that is just to arrange to shoot him without personally firing the shot. Other illustrations of what he may not do might be found, but they all come under the same head—injury either directly malicious or an acting so reckless as to be tantamount to malicious acting." In that case it was held that the conduct was not so reckless as to be "tantamount to malicious acting." In Excelsior Wire Rope Company, Limited v. Callan and others (142 L. T. Rep. 531; (1930) A. C. 404), however Lord Dunedin expressed the view that in that case there was such negligence that even if the child was a trespasser the defendants were still liable. "Assuming," he said, "as did Lord Justice Scrutton, that the children were trespassers, I think that, to use the words of Viscount Hailsham in Addie's case, the appellants' servants acted 'with reckless disregard of the presence of the trespasser,' or, to use my own, 'that the acting was so reckless as to amount to malicious acting'."

The Court of Appeal in the later case of Mourton v. Poulter (113 L. T. Rep. 20; (1930) 2 K. B. 183) suggested that there might be some difficulty in reconciling the decisions in Addie's and the Excelsior case, but, said Mr. Jusice du Parcq, however that might be, "it is plain that there is no contradiction between the principles underlying the decisions in the two cases." Mourton v. Poulter (sup.) was a case in which it was held that a duty was owed to a trespasser not to do any act that would alter the condition of the land and might injure him without first giving him warning. There the defendant was cutting down a tree and, knowing that it would soon fall, cut the last root without a last warning to children who were near, and one of them was injured. "To me," said Mr. Justice du Parcq, "it is quite plain that that case might well be held to fall within the malicious acting." So, too, no doubt, would the act of the driver in the present case if he had known that a child was on his running-board and had, perhaps, thought to frighten, but not harm him, by driving off without warning. That, however, was not the case; he did not know that the child was there. Giving judgment, Mr. Justice du Parcq said that he had to fulfil the double duty of judge and jury, and he thought that if the jury felt that the circumstances in the present case were such that any reasonable man would have known that there was so high a probability that it could not be ignored that there might be a child somewhere on the van, then the driver was doing a reckless thing if he drove away without looking. Unless they were so satisfied, they ought to find a verdict for the defendants. Applying the law to that view of the facts, he held that there was no negligence on the part of the driver at all. He (his Lordship) must assume that the child knew that he was doing something which would get him into trouble if he was caught. The driver did not see him, and he was quite sure that it did not enter the driver's head that such a thing had happened. He was quite satisfied that there was no negligence at all on the part of the driver, and he gave judgment for the defendants, with costs.—The Law Times.

Extracts from Contemporaries.

A Posthumous Child.

Another case in which an appeal from the Court of Appeal was last week allowed by the House of Lords was Elliot v. Joicey and others: the salient facts in which were very shortly these. Mrs. Rose Elliot who had been given a power of appointment over certain funds by the will of a Mr. John Joicey by her will, executed in 1910, exercised that power by appointing the funds subject thereto in favour of all her children her surviving in equal shares She directed that each share should be retained by Mr. Joicey's trustees and held upon trust, in the event of any child of hers "leaving any issue him or her surviving," for that child absolutely but in the event of such child "not leaving any issue him or her surviving" such share was to accrue by way of addition to the share or shares of her other child or children. The question for decision was whether one of Mrs. Elliot's sons Mr. T. W. H. Elliot, died "without leaving any issue him surviving" having regard to the fact that a posthumous child was born to him alive about a month after his death. Mr. Justice Clauson held that the share passed to the representative of the deceased son's estate, and the Court of Appeal upheld that view. Mr. R. B. Elliot, one of the surviving sons of Mrs. Rose Elliot, appealed.—The Law Times, February 23, 1935.

The Judgments.

The contentions put forward on behalf of the appellant were quite shortly (1) that the words "born in the lifetime," "living" and "surviving" did not, in their natural meaning, cover the case of a child en ventre sa mere at a relvant date; and (2) that the judgments under appeal had unduly extended the artificial rule of construction under which such words were deemed to include a posthumous child if there were a gift to such child. Lord Russell of Killowen, giving judgment called attention to the fact that Mrs. Elliot's will was a Scottish will to be interpreted according to Scots law. That fact seemed to have been overlooked by the courts below. How did the matter stand under English law? There had been many cases in England in which posthumous children had been held to be included in gifts to children born in their father's lifetime, or living at his death, but the foundation of those decisions had been, not that the natural meaning of the words used included such children, but that as had been said by Vice-Chancellor Leach "the potential existence of such a child places it plainly within the motive and reason of the gift." His Lordship referred to several cases (which we hope to consider in our Conveyancing columns shortly) and quoted the judgment in the latest House of Lords case on the subject—Villar v. Gilbey (1907) —where Lord Loreburn said that the construction which included posthumous children was a straining of language, a fiction or indulgence permitted solely on the ground that it was for the unborn child's benefit enabling it to take under a disposition. With the utmost respect for the Court of Appeal he (Lord Russell) could not accept the rule without the limitations which the Lord Justices thought had been removed and in the case before their Lordships the words must bear their ordinary and not their fictional meaning. According to the present law of England this appeal must succeed. The Scots law being certainly not more favourable to the claims of a child en ventre sa mere —and if Burns' Trustees v. Burns (1917. S. C. 117) were rightly decided even less so —this appeal must be equally successful under Scots law. Lord Tomlin and Lord Macmillan gave judgment to the same effect, Lord Tomlin saying cogently that he did not think the enrichment of the parent's estate could amount to a benefit for his child.—The Law Times.

Medical Examination Without Consent.

The right of a police surgeon to examine an accused man without his consent was challenged by counsel at a Justice's Court recently. It does not appear that any considered judicial opinion, binding upon a criminal tribunal at first instance, exists, although disapproval of the practice was said to have been expressed by Mr. Justice Swift at Assizes on the Northern Circuit. The question is, of course, part of the larger one as to the powers of the police over the persons of those in custody, but not yet tried and convicted, and, therefore, in the eyes of the law, still to be regarded as innocent citizens. The extent of such powers was incidentally discussed in 1933 by the Justiciary Appeal Court at Edinburgh, when the actual point for decision was whether the police had a right, by common law, to take finger prints forcibly if they could obtain them in no other way. The majority judgment of that Court in favour of the police is obviously not conclusive on the present point, and, of course, it would not be binding south of the Tweed. One of the majority judges (Lord Sands) considered that, so far as the taking of finger prints was concerned, there was no question of the man being compelled to give evidence against himself. He went on to remark that "An Ephraimite who was compelled at the point of a Gileadite's sword to pronounce the word Shibboleth might perhaps have complained that he was compelled to incriminate himself. But not so the man whose finger prints were forcibly taken. He was entirely passive, and was not compelled to do anything by any exercise of his own will or control of his body.— The Law Journal.

A Technical Assault.

In the absence of any details as to the nature of the examination objected to last week, it is difficult to offer an opinion upon its legality or otherwise. The case was "a motoring one." The Police Order in such an instance (according to "Taylor's Principles and Practice of Medical Jurisprudence," 9th Edn., p. 59), is that "The services of the divisional surgeon will be at once obtained to certify as to the prisoner's condition, before the charge is entered, irrespective of whether the charge is or is not denied, in every case in which a person is charged with:

(a) being drunk while in charge of a vehicle other than a motor vehicle.

(b) driving, attempting to drive or being in charge of a motor vehicle while being under the influence of drink to such an extent as to be incapable of having proper control of the vehicle."

The legality of the examination made by a police surgeon called in under such circumstances would appear to depend entirely upon its nature. If it can be made without committing any technical assault upon the prisoner or compelling him to perform certain actions, it might be held permissible. But if, on the other hand, it goes beyond a mere inspection, and if, in the course of it, the prisoner is compelled to go through certain tests without his free consent, it would clearly be open to grave objections and might well be held an unwarrantable interference with the freedom of the subject.—The Law Journal, March 9, 1935.

Imprisonment for Debt, etc.

At a recent luncheon meeting of the Howard League for Penal Reform to hear Sir John Fischer Williams speak on "Imprisonment for Debt," Lord Arnold, who took the chair, referred in course of some preliminary remarks to the recently published report on the work of the Government Committee on the question, and said that in 1934, 20,416 persons were imprisoned: 11,244 for non-payment of fines, 6,089 for wife maintenance and affiliation orders, and 3,083 for non payment of rates. The report, Lord ARNOLD said, was "notable for its humanity" and must not be pigeonholed. Sir John Fischer Williams intimated in regard to imprisonment for non-payment of fines that the fault lay, not with the magistrates, but with the system. In many cases the magistrates did not consider it likely that a fine would not be paid and did not therefore seriously take into consideration the alternative of imprisonment. In such cases the defendant did not come before the Court again, but went automatically to prison. With regard to maintenance orders, Sir John alluded to the fact that, it being left to the wife or mother to enforce the order, payments were often allowed to accumulate until they reached a fantastic amount. At present the Court has no power to cancel a part, it can only wipe off the whole debt or allow it to stand. It was suggested that an officer of the Court be made responsible for the receipt of such payments, and at the end of, say, a month, report the offender to the Court if no payment were made. After some statements concerning non-payment of rates and a commendation of the Scottish system of compounding for rates, Sir John concluded: "If we are to have a proper respect for personal liberty and dignity there should not be imprisonment except after deliberate consideration by authority into the circumstances of each case, and no one should be imprisoned unless it is considered that he has overstepped the line which distinguishes civil from criminal liability." We are indebted to The Times for the foregoing information.—The Solicitors' Journal.

Imprisonment in Default.

The debate in the House of Lords on 27th February, arising out of the Report of the Departmental Committee on imprisonment in default of payment of fines and other money showed general agreement that there ought to be no delay in implementing the recommendation of the committee. Lord Feversham, who spoke for the Home Office said that so far as the committee's report involved amendments of the law, their proposals had been noted for careful and sympathetic consideration when an opportunity for legislation arose, and the Home Office would bear in mind the fact that the House had emphatically expressed its opinion that legislation should ensue as soon as possible.

Inasmuch as there would probably be no opposition to a Government Bill on the basis of the committee's proposals there would be but little demand on Parliamentary time and the opportunity for legislation ought to arise almost as soon as the Bill can be prepared.

Meantime, it was stated, the Home Secretary was contemplating the issue of a circular calling the attention of justices throughout the country to suggestions in the report which might be adopted, under the existing law, so as to reduce the number of committals to prison. This has been translated by one newspaper poster as "New Orders to J. P.'s", a misleading and quite unfounded suggestion that the executive gives instructions to those exercising judicial office. The Home Office issue no orders to magistrates. Its circulars often convey information and sometimes make proposals, which are of value particularly to those justices in the provinces who, while taking a keen interest in their work have few opportunities of discussion or of obtaining information about present-day views and movements—Justice of the Peace.

Circumstantial Evidence.

In delivering the judgment of the Court of Criminal Appeal in R.v. Harvey last week, Mr. Justice Avory said that counsel's argument for the defence seemed one of a kind very familar in cases of circumstantial evidence—that each item by itself was consistent with innocence. That was not the proper way to regard the matter; the proper way was to ask whether all the circumstances taken together made such a chain of evidence as to be only consistent with guilt.

There is, indeed, no need to be distrustful of circumstantial evidence. Often it is more trustworthy than so-called direct evidence. Witnesses are often at fault in recollecting what they saw or heard. Often the chain of circumstantial evidence consists of links about which there is no dispute. When the chain is complete, then as Mr. Justice Avery observed, the question is whether the whole is consistent only with guilt.

The process of examining the evidence is rather like that of testing drunkenness. Each separate symptom might by itself be consistent with sobriety : a smell of liquor may be due to only moderate consumption of drink, a quick pulse may be due to excitement, absence of reflexes may arise from disease, and so on. But the dilemma of the defence may be that the explanation of one symptom is quite incompatible with the explanation of another, and in the end the only explanation that fits in with all the symptoms is drunkenness. So with circumstantial evidence; one item may be explained this way, the next another way, and so on. But if at last it be found that the various explanations cannot all fit in with one another, but that all the items taken together are consistent only with guilt, the conclusion is irresistible—Justice of the Peace, March 9, 1935.

REVIEW.

Law of Arbitration in British India : By Mr. P. L. Paruck, B. A., LL. M., Attorney-at-Law, High Court, Bombay : Published by Messrs. N. M. Tripathi and Co., Princess Street, Bombay: 1935: Price Rs. 5.

The book under review is a welcome addition to the existing books on the subject and is a lucid commentary on the Indian Arbitration Act and the Second Schedule of the Civil Procedure Code. Parts I and II deal with these enactments. In Part III mention is made of Acts and Regulations under which arbitration is either directly compulsory or indirectly made compulsory by rules framed. The appendix gives the texts of the Indian and English enactments on the subject including the English Arbitration Act, 1934. The learned author has taken considerable pains to make his book useful alike to the legal profession and the mercantile community. Principles underlying the sections have been aptly illustrated with relevant case-law. The suggestions made about the procedure to be followed by persons appointed arbitrators are sure to be found useful by the mercantile community. We commend this commentary to the legal profession.

Wit & Humour.

A True Dilemma.—Some time ago a Judge was presiding in our Court who was rather hard of hearing. A case was being tried in which the Attorney for plaintiff was very hoarse and found it difficult to talk; one of the Attorneys for the defendant was crippled, having to use a crutch; the Stenographer was having difficulty in taking the evidence and thereupon and Attorney present made the following remark: "Plaintiff's Attorney can't talk, Defendant's Attorney can't walk, Judge can't hear and Stenographer can't read her notes. Therefore, this Court is in a H ... of a fix."—Case and Comment.

Suspenders Needed.—A reader writes us: "Objected strenuously during the trial of an action to a question asked a witness by my opposing attorney. It was a question of law involved and I stated to the Judge that my opponent was caught in Court with his pants down. The Judge adjourned Court for five minutes to allow my opponent to get his pants on."—Case and Comment.

INDIAN CASES

1935 JOURNAL Vol. 155

[The Editors do not hold themselves responsible for the views expressed by contributors.]

Notes and Comments.

Hindu Law of Inheritance—Samanodakas.

The conflict of views between the various High Courts on the important question of Hindu Law as to the exact scope of the expression 'Samanodaka' as used in the Hindu Law of Inheritance, has been set at rest by the recent decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Atmaram v. Bajirao, 155 Ind. Cas. 330. In defining the scope of the expression, their Lordships base their view on the principle that in the event of a conflict between the ancient text writers and the commentators, the opinion of the latter should be accepted, as the commentators, "while professing to interpret the law as laid down in the Smritis, introduced changes in order to bring it into harmony with the usage followed by the people governed by the law." After discussing the texts and the views of the commentators, Sir Shadi Lal, who delivered the judgment of the Board, has laid down that according to the Mitakshara School, "Samanodakas include only those agnates whose relationship to the deceased extends from the eighth to the fourteenth degree, and in the absence of any such agnate, the estate devolves upon his bandhus", thus reversing the decision of the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court in Bajirao v. Atmaram 1930 N. 265: 125 Ind. Cas. 686. It may be noted that in Bai Devkore v. Amritram, 10 Bom. 372, this word was interpreted to include all agnates without any limit of degree and this view was followed in Ram Baran v. Kamla Prasad, 32 All. 594: 6 Ind. Cas. 698, a Mitakshara case, although the Bombay case came from a Province where the authority of the Mayukha was supreme. But in Rama Row v. Kuttiya, 34 Ind. Cas. 294: 40 M. 651 the Madras High Court held that Samanodakas do not include relations beyond the fourteenth degree and this view (See also Narain v. Chandi, 9 All. 467) has been approved by their Lordships in Atmaram's case in 155 Ind. Cas. 330.

Hindu Law: Only adult co-parcener: Right to appoint guardian of co-parcenary property of minor co-parcener.

The question as to the competency of an only adult co-parcener of a Hindu Mitakshara family to appoint by will or otherwise, a trustee, guardian or manager of the co-parcenary property of a minor co-parcener during his minority is the subject of a recent Full Bench decision of the Bombay High Court in Brijbhukandas v. Ghashiram 155 Ind. Cas. 12. The necessity of a reference arose out of the conflicting views expressed in Harilal v. Bai Mani, 29 Bom. 351 and Mahableshwar v. Ramchandra, 38 Bom. 94: 21 Ind. Cas. 350, the former deciding that he had no such power, which the latter held that he had such power and that an alienation by a guardian so appointed would be binding on the minor. The Full Bench of the Bombay High Court has expressed itself in favour of the former view thus bringing itself in conformity with the decision in the Madras Full Bench case of Chidambara v. Rangasami, 41 Mad. 561: 45 Ind. Cas. 905. The view that a dying father had the power to appoint a guardian for his minor sons is inconsistent with the very basis of the joint family system with the incidence of survivorship, as at the moment of the father's death, the property passes by survivorship to his minor sons and he is not competent to authorise anybody, to deal with the property of the minors. The Bombay case of Mahableshwar v. Ramchandra, 38 Bom. 94: 21 Ind. Cas. 350 proceeded on the ground of convenience and the argument as to convenience has been met by the learned Chief Justice in the recent Full Bench case with a quotation from the Madras Full Bench case to the effect that "to put a person in a definite legal relation to property of which he is not the owner, is a step which cannot be taken unless there is legal authority for taking it. Its convenience and justice may be admirable reasons for the legislature to take action," but they cannot suffice to set in motion a Court of law.

Estoppel: Conditions.

The conditions under which estoppel operates have been discussed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in their recent decision in Dawsons Bank v. Japan Cotton Trading Company, 155 Ind. Cas. 1. It has been pointed out that estoppel is not a cause of action, and if established, it may assist a plaintiff in enforcing a cause of action by preventing a defendant from denying the existence of some fact, the existence of which would destroy the cause of action. Their Lordships proceed to point out that: "It is a rule of evidence which comes into operation if (a) a statement of the existence of a fact has been made by the defendant or an authorised agent of his to the plaintiff or some one on his behalf, (b) with the intention that the plaintiff should act upon the faith of the statement, and (c) the plaintiff does act upon the faith of the statement". Waiver is distinguished from estoppel by denoting the former as contractual and as capable of constituting a cause of action and as being an agreement to release or not to assert a right. Their Lordships proceed to illustrate the distinction by saying: "If an agent, with authority to make such an agreement on behalf of his principal, agrees to waive his principal's rights, then (subject to any other question such as consideration) the principal will be bound, but he will be bound by contract, not by estoppel." There can be no such thing as estoppel by waiver.

Prisons of the Future.

In an illuminating article on this subject, a learned contributor to the latest number of the Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology discusses what the prison of the future should be like. He quotes the definition of an ideal prison as formulated by Ex-Attorney-General William D. Mitchell to the effect that "The prison of the future should be at once a disciplinary school for those who can be reformed, a place of permanent segregation for the incorrigible and a laboratory for the study of the causes of crime." This definition is brief and to the point. Adopting this definition as the basis, suggestions for prison reform have been made, and though conditions in India are far behind those obtaining in America and other countries, they may be kept in view as pointing out the way to prison reform:

(i) "The prison buildings and equipment of the next generation will be so constructed and devised so as to lend themselves to the application of constructive programme of rehabilitation. They will be of strong construction where strength is needed, but will give prominent place to the hospital, the laboratory, the school, the mental hygiene clinic, the workshop and farm and they will have a library as well."

(ii) "The prison of the future will be manned by persons who will be trained in the science of human nature". To this we will add that the same principle should be applied in the case of non-official visitors to Jails in India.

(iii) "Much attention will be given in the prison of the future to realization that an idle mind is the Devil's Workshop, that idleness in prison is a public menace. Private interest in prison labour is to be abolished. The prisoner must not be exploited."

(iv) "Some way must be found to individualize the corrective and protective treatment to be given to the inmates of the prison of the future. This will be the most difficult, yet most hopeful of its functions".

(v) "Delete the word prison from the designation of their ideal Institution and substitute therefor a word and concept less opprobrious and less odious".

The suggestions are perhaps too idealistic, but if followed, they will certainly give us ideal prisons, out of which the prisoner will emerge a better man and a useful citizen and there will cease to be any necessity for classifying offenders as first offenders and old offenders.

AGREEMENTS FOR TAX-FREE PAYMENTS.

One of the better-known peculiarities of our law is expressed in the proposition that a gift by will of an annuity of £x, free of tax, is valid, and an agreement to pay an annuity of such an amount as, after deduction of income-tax thereon at the standard rate, will leave £x, is valid, but an agreement to pay an annuity of £x, free of tax, is effectual only to create an annuity of £x, subject to tax. This is the result of the enactment—which originated, we believe, as s. 115 of the Income Tax Act, 1806, and now appears as r. 23 (2) of the All-Schedules Rules in the Income Tax Act, 1918—that every agreement for payment of interest, rent or other annual payment in full, without allowing the deduction of tax at the source which the Act provides for, is void.

The general scheme of the Income Tax Acts, it need hardly be said, is that the gross amount of any annual or quasi-annual sum which A is legally bound to pay B is deducted from the taxable income of A and included in that of B: the payment is made less tax, and A and B are respectively debited and credited with the amount of the tax. Thus, if A has to pay B £100 a year, and income-tax is 4*s*. 6*d*. in the pound, he pays £77 10*s*.; £100 is excluded from his taxable income and included in B's; and the income tax on their respective incomes so ascertained is increased by £22 10*s*. in the case of A, and diminished by £22 10*s*. in the case of B.

In this scheme an agreement that a particular liability shall be discharged without deduction of tax is out of place. The payment contemplated is the tax on the sum named, in addition to the sum named, less tax, which would have been payable if the agreement had not been made; and if such an agreement were valid, a difficulty would arise in regard to the tax on the amount, equal to the tax so agreed to be paid. Thus, if, in the case just put, A agreed with B that his £100 should be paid without deduction of tax, and the agreement were valid, a question would at once arise as to whether the £22 10*s*. (representing tax), so agreed to be paid, formed part of the taxable income of A, or of B; and either result would be in conflict with the scheme of the Acts. If it formed part of the taxable income of B, the payee, the tax on it would have to be collected from B, which would be inconsistent with the scheme of deduction of tax at the source. To inculde it, on the other hand, in the taxable income of A, would be inconsistent with the system whereby a sum which a man is legally bound to pay is excluded from his taxable income. But if the sum were treated as a voluntary payment, naturally it would be impossible to exclude it from A's taxable income or include it in B's; and it may be that the provision avoiding agreements to pay without deduction of tax was made with the object of attaining uniformity and certainty as to the incidence of the tax on the tax without causing injustice or dislocating the scheme of the Acts. In other words, the Legislature may be taken to have said: "If A being bound to pay B £100 a year, agrees to pay it without deduction of tax, the difference between £100 and £100 less tax shall be included in A's taxable income, whether A pays it or not; but as a corollary to that we will say that the agreement to pay it shall not be enforceable against him." Whether this was the reason or not, the provision, considered in reference to agreements for full discharge of existing liabilities, is reasonable and intelligible.

An agreement to pay, free of tax, a sum not existing before is not an agreement of the kind just mentioned. There is no agreement to discharge without deduction an antecedent liability; on the contrary, the liability is itself created by the agreement, and is in effect defined by reference to the balance remaining after deduction of income-tax as prescribed by the Act. And in this case the liability is different in amount; the intention being that the payee shall be relieved of all tax, and that the payer shall, therefore, pay not only the tax on the sum named, but the tax on that tax and so on ad infinitum; in other words, shall pay such a sum as after deduction of income-tax thereon will leave the sum mentioned.

The courts, as is well known, have never made, nor, apparently have they considered any such distinction as is here suggested, but they have applied the provision to all agreements, of whatever nature and however worded, for provision of a sum "free of tax" or without "deduction of tax". Indeed in the case of a sum "free of tax", not existing before, the question appears originally to have been not whether the provision applied, but whether it did not avoid the agreement in toto, so as to relieve from all liability to pay anything whatever: see Readshaw v. Balders (1811), 4 Taunt. 57.

This leads to the absurd situation mentioned at the beginning of the article. The present writer suggests that the provision was intended to apply solely to agreement not to deduct tax in fulfilling an obligation to make a payment from which tax is deductible under the Act: and was not directed to agreements creating oblibgations for the first time and measuring them, in effect, by reference to the net amount remaining after income tax had been deducted. The present provision (r. 23 (2)) reads thus: "Every agreement for payment of interest, rent or other annual payment in full without allowing any such deduction shall be void". If for "payment of" had been substituted "discharge of a liability for", the present situation might not have arisen, and it could never become necessary for a man who inadvertently agreed to pay "£x free of tax" instead of "such a sum as after deduction of income-tax thereon at the standard rate will leave £x", to explain to the court, in an action for rectification, that in agreeing to pay £x free of tax he intended to become liable, in effect, to provide £x free of tax. Mistakes in drafting occur on occasion, and perhaps it is not too much to hope that by some suitable amendment the provision may be placed on what is here suggested to be its proper footing.—The Solicitors' Journal.

LIABILITY TO TAX OF INTEREST AWARDED BY JUDGMENT OR AWARD

It is sometimes difficult to determine whether interest awarded under a judgment or other judicial order, or an arbitrator's award, is to be regarded as "interst of money," and liable to tax under Schedule D, para. 1 (b) of the Income Tax Act, 1918, which applies inter alia to all interest of money, annuities and other annual profits or gains not chargeable under any of the other schedules to the Income Tax Act, 1918.

In the recent case of Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Barnato, the respondent was entitled under his father's will to, inter alia, a share in the partnership business. The respondent brought an action against the turstees of the will for failing to pay the respondent the whole of the sums due to him. The matter was referred by the trial judge to a Special Referee, the Order of Reference directing, inter alia, that the inquiries and accounts should be taken on the basis—apparently admitted by the defendants to the action—that the plaintiff was entitled to compound interest on certain items.

The referee made an award for a total sum, without expressly distinguishing between principal and interest; but it was established that part of the sum awarded represented compound interest on the above items of the claim.

Mr. Justice Singleton, differing from the commissioners, held that the sum awarded as interest constituted "interest of money," and was accordingly liable to tax under Schedule D, para. 1 (b), of the income Tax Act, 1918.

It may be of advantage to examine the principles established by the case.

To begin with, it would appear from, inter alia, the Barnato case, that, although there may be a presumption that a lump sum award does not include interest, it may be rebutted by evidence that interest has in fact been included. Furthermore, the fact that a sum is referred to in the award as interest will not necessarily render it "interest of money" for tax purposes.

One of the tests would appear to be whether the interest has a "contractual" origin, or is of a "penal" character. In the former case it would be taxable; in the latter, not.

"Contractual" interest includes that payable by arrangement on moneys due under a contract, but remaining unpaid: and "penal" interest that awarded to a beneficiary against a trustee on the ground of fraudulent conversion or breach of trust, such interest representing the loss or damage suffered by the person who has been wrongfully deprived of his money. An instance of this is afforded by Re National Bank of Wales (81 L. T. Rep. 363; (1899) 2 Ch. 629), where the action was based on a misfeasance on the part of a company director in sanctioning the payment of dividends out of capital.

But in some cases it may be very difficult to draw the line between penal and non-penal interest. Thus in Schulze v. Benstead (7 Tax Cas. 30), where a trustee was ordered to pay interest on a sum representing the purchase price of part of the trust estate which the trustee, through his negligence, had caused to be lost to the estate, it was held that the interest was not penal, and was accordingly liable to tax. Had the interest in question been awarded on the ground of fraudulent conversion by the trustee, or at a "penal" rate of interest, the position might have been otherwise.

The rate of interest awarded by the court may, therefore, be an important factor.

As the Lord President pointed out in Schulze v. Benstead (ibid., at p. 34): "Where a pursuer recovers damages with interest from the date of the decree, I do not think that that interest is chargeable. It is part of the damages. But where a sum is due on a definite date, with interest from the date of the advance... the case is different. The interest ought to have been in the creditor's hands on the stipulated date, and is none the less interest when it is recovered along with the principal under the decree."

The date, therefore, from which the interest is directed to run, may accordingly also be of importance.

Reference again may be made to Simpson v. Executors of Bonner Maurice (14 Tax Cas. 530). In this case an award had been made in favour of a British national against the German Government by the Mixed Arbitral Tribunal. The award provided inter alia, for the payment of a sum in respect of the damage or injury to property, rights or interests of the claimant pursuant to Art. 297 (e) of the Treaty. It appeared that the claimant had certain securities in a bank in Germany during the war, and that the bank had during the war paid over to the German Custodian of Enemy Property certain sums representing dividends and interest due to the claimant's estate (the claimant having since died). The tribunal awarded, inter alia, that a sum representing interest at the rate of 5 per cent. on the amounts thus transferred by the bank, should be paid to the claimant's estate. It was held, however, that this interest was not "interest of money" but represented the compensation payable under the Treaty to the claimant's estate, in respect of the claimant and his estate being deprived of the power of disposition over the property in question in the meantime.

Mr. Justice Rowlatt pointed out in his judgment: "The Treaty did not give [the claimant] any right to interest, nor did it declare the Treuhander (i. e., the German Custodian of Enemy Property) a trustee so as to found any consequential claim for interest; it did not empower the tribunal to give interest as such, or to make any declaration as to the character of the purpose for which the Treuhander had held the money. The Treaty gave compensation, and the tribunal which assessed the principal sum has assessed it on the basis of interest. I think this sum first came into existence by the award, and no previous history or anterior character can be attributed to it. It is exactly like damages for detention of a chattel, and unless it can be said that damages for detention of a chattel can be called rent or hire for the chattel during the period of detention, I do not think this compensation can be called interest."

This case would, therefore, appear to suggest as a test, whether the right to the interest arose solely under the order or judgment, or whether it arose at some anterior time, and as such, was given due effect by the order or judgment.

The above cases appear to contain the salient principle for determining whether interest awarded by a court or a tribunal is or is not interest of money for the purpose, but the reader's attention may at the same time usefully be drawn to such cases as Sweet v. Macdiarmid (7 Tax Cas. 640) and Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Ballantine (8 Tax Cas. 595):—The Law Times.

Extracts from Contemporaries.

Swift Justice.

A French journalist, writing in Le Journal recently, gave unstinted praise to the expeditious methods of English criminal justice. Under the heading :

"Le record de l'assassin. Vent qui plaidant coupable de vit condamner a la peine capitale en quatre minutes.....Mais c'est aux assises de l'Old Bailey." he compared our procedure very favourably with the dilatory system which across the Channel can prolong a prosecution over a space of two years. But what would the writer have said to the dispatch of the old Old Bailey methods illustrated in a case which the future Hawkins, J., once timed as a young man? The prosecuting counsel examined the first witness. "I think you were walking up Ludgate Hill on Thursday, 25th, about half-past two in the afternoon and suddenly felt a tug at your pocket and missed your handkerchief which the constable now produces. Is it that?" "Yes, sir". "I suppose you have nothing to ask him?" says the judge to the prisoner. "Next witness". This is a policeman. "Were you following the prosecutor on the occasion when he was robbed on Ludgate Hill? Did you see the prisoner put his hand into the prosecutor's pocket and take this handkerchief out of it?" "Yes, sir". "Nothing to say, I suppose"? says the judge to the prisoner. Then to the jury he observes : "Gentlemen I suppose you have no doubt? I have none." "Guilty, my Lord." Then comes sentence : "Jones, we have met before. We shall not meet again for some time. Seven years' transportation. Next case". Time—two minutes fifty-three seconds.—The Solicitors' Journal, March 2, 1935.

Truth for a Change.

At the annual dinner of the Flyfishers' Club, Lord Justice Roche, remarking on the presence of Sir Boyd Merriman, P., Hilbery, J., and Judge Lilley, observed what a change it was for them to sit in the veracious company of fishermen instead of in the "Palais de Justice" which was so rarely a "Palace of Truth". Even outside the Divorce Division, which has been called "the Supreme Court of Lies", there is too much ground to fear that the scales of justice have to weigh more questionable matter than the fisherman's scales. One of the best stories in this connection concerns the cross-examination of a certain expert witness by the future Lord Coleridge, C. J., when he was at the Bar. The witness was giving evidence in favour of a proposed harbour. "But, sir, isn't there a reef of rocks that would be a great inconvenience to you? "asked Coleridge. "Oh yes, undoubtedly there is, but we propose to get rid of it in a certain way." "Very good ; but when you have gid rid of it, would there not be a very awkward sand-bank to contend with?" "Certainly, but we shall provide against that." But when you have removed both these obstacles would you not have a great deal of trouble from the current of the river when in flocd?" "Clearly, but we should be able to encounter that difficulty". "You have seen the place, have you not?' "Oh, yes". "Well, I never did. I have invented alike the reef, the sand-bank and the river."—The Solicitors' Journal.

Executors and Beneficiaries.

A recent correspondent to The Times raises an interesting and, in its way, an important question regarding the duties of executors towards the beneficiaries under a will. The practice of reading the will after the funeral is stated to be obviously open to objection, but "probably better than the state of things to which it has given place." It is pointed out that, through the executors' neglect to give them notice, the beneficiaries are ignorant of the benefits to which they are entitled until the former choose to obtain a grant of probate, and even then the will is not searched by persons who have no reason to suppose that they are beneficiaries. A suggestion is made that the law be altered so that it should be obligatory upon executors "to apprise the beneficiaries within, say, one month of the death, of the benefits confered upon them," and that all executors of small estates should be obliged to apply for a grant of probate within a period of, say, three months of the death, or such other time as the court may direct. The hardship, to which the letter alludes, occasioned by non-disclosure of a benefit at an early date, is undoubtedly often very real—cases may readily be imagined in which a professional or business career might well have been saved by knowledge of the existence of a legacy, etc.—and early information is often particularly desirable when a person is given a choice of say one from a number of objects. We doubt, however, whether the matter is one for legislation. Obvious difficulties would arise in the case of large estates or where settlements with vested or contingent remainders were created by the will, or again, in cases of a large number of, possibly rival, testamentary instruments. If executors were placed under a legal obligation to supply copious information of this character, it is doubtful if many would be found willing to discharge an office already involving sufficiently onerous duties. Moreover, in cases of small pecuniary legacies, to which the suggested practice seems particularly apposite, the information thus imparted would only, in ordinary circumstances, precede by a sufficiently short space of time the distribution of the legacy, while the information itself would, necessarily, be conditional in character dependent, that is, upon the sufficiency of the estate to meet debts, death duties, prior gifts, etc. Notwithstanding the foregoing difficulties we incline to the view that the imparting of early information in appropriate cases should be regarded as good practice and one to be generally adopted.—The Solicitors' Journal.

Sales of "Goods."

We commented last July (78 Law Journ., p. 56) on the decision of Mr. Justice Acton in Robinson v. Graves, and noticed that it appeared to be well founded on Lee v. Griffin (30 L.J. Q.B. 252). The question at issue was whether a contract to paint a portrait was a contract for the sale of goods within the Sale of Goods Act, 1893, with the usual consequences as to the necessity for a memorandum in writing. The learned Judge below held that it was such a contract, and Mr. Justice Blackburn's judgment certainly appears to provide a firm foundation for it. Now, however, the Court of Appeal has given a decision in the artist's favour, and founded its judgment on Clay v. Yates (1 H. & N. 73). The result is that the Court has to look at every contract of this kind and decide whether, on the facts, it is a contract for work and labour or one for the sale of goods. If the skill of the workman is the predominant consideration which induces the buyer to order, and the marble or canvas are merely ancillary, then it is a contract for skill and labour, and there is no need, in the case where the product of both costs more than 10*l.*, for a written contract. The judgment must be accepted with due respect, but may lead to practical inconvenience. In the case in hand no doubt the skill of the artist was the predominant element or ingredient in the product. But it is easy to put cases in which a decision upon the point would not be so easy. Portrait painters may all be on one side of the line; but where are the expert carpenter, mechanic and boat-builder?—The Law Journal.

Morals and Law Courts.

Judges and magistrates (lay and stipendary) have often remarkd that "this is not a Court of morals but a Court of law," but it is extraordinarily difficult to find any authority as to what exactly is meant thereby. Within the last week, the declaration was made, and dicta in another Court of equal authority, seemed quite inconsistent with the declaration. We know, of course, that a great part of the Decalogue and other moral rules are part of the common law and of the statute law; and that, on the other hand, infringement of certain of the Ten Commandments or of the unwritten rules of the Regiment for Officers and Gentlemen, does not afford any ground for a criminal prosecution or for the issue of writ or summons in a Civil Court. The Court is concerned with morals only in so far as they have been embodied (broadly speaking) in "Halsbury's Laws of England."

Yet morals will, almost inevitably, intrude. In that civil action for slander Cox v. Rendall, at Lincoln Assizes, the conduct and duty of one who was not a party to the action were appropriate matters of observation and comment; and we all know how effectively cross-examination as to credit may injure the value of an immoral but law-abiding witness. It is almost impossible to make morals irrelevant in a Court of Law.—The Law Journal, February 23, 1935.

When Chancellors Preached.

Although Lord Sankey was once described by an Archbishop as the founder and upholder of the Church in Wales, it has not been alleged that he ever preached a sermon. Yet his predecessors, the Lords Chancellors of olden days, preached many. They were, of course, as a rule persons more versed in religion than in law, drawn as a rule from the ranks of bishops, archbishops and cardinals. On the opening of Parliament, the King would sit in his chair in the Painted Chamber while the L.C.

would give out a text and deliver a sermon thereon, corresponding roughly to the King's Speech of modern times. Lord Campbell, in his "Lives," gives many examples, of which the speech of John Stafford, L.C., is one. When Parliament met after a long interval in 1445, "to sanction the marriage of Margaret of Anjou, daughter of the titular King of Sicily and Jerusalem," the Chancellor, we are informed, "put forth all his strength in painting the felicity of this happy union," selecting for his text, "Justitia et Pax osculatæ sunt."

The first breakaway from the sermonic mode was by Cardinal Morton in the reign of Henry VII, when he first addressed Parliament as Lord Chancellor on November 3, 1488: "The custom of taking a text from the Holy Scripture was dropped by him, and he rather conformed to the modern fashion of a King's Speech, though with more of detail and of reasoning than would now be considered discreet on such an occasion."—The Law Journal.

The Man in the Street Appears in Court.

Perhaps the most noteworthy passage in the Mother's Rights case, In the Matter of Jean Crichton, An Infant, during the hearing in the King's Bench Division (Talbot and Hilbery, JJ.) of the appeal from the order of Atkinson, J. (described by Talbot, J., as a most able and experienced Judge), was the introduction into our legal book of weights and measures of the Man in The Street. We all know how difficulties are often, in cases tried with or without a jury, solved by reference to the notion called the Reasonable Man; but the Man in The Street is something new, if not strange. Said Talbot, J.: "It is natural that the child should be unwilling to leave Mrs. Hinckes and Mrs. Hinckes unwilling to part with her; but I think the Man in The Street would be surprised to hear that there was any doubt about the matter."

I am told that commercial lawyers are wondering whether a reference to the Man in the Docks would have made any difference to the judgment of MacKinnon, J., in British Steamship Co., Ltd. v. Louis Dreyfus & Co.—an appeal on an award in the form of a special case under s. 7 of the Arbitration Act, 1889. Having accepted the contentions of Mr. W. McNair on behalf of the shipowners on the main issue and decided that they were entitled to 13*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*, the cost of putting bulk grain into bags for the purpose of putting the ship into "seaworthy trim" in London, he held that they were not entitled to the 12*l.* claimed for emptying the grain back into bulk for the necessary method of discharge at the second port of discharge at Avonmouth.—The Law Journal.

Restriction of Experts.

I am told that practitioners at the "patent" Bar are perturbed by the observations of Lord Tomlin as to the kind of questions one ought not to ask the expert witnesses. The limitation of the number of experts, as under the New Procedure is, they say, understandable and sometimes workable. But given an expert, with a formula or a specification for elucidation, they don't know what will happen if Counsel may not ask him what the thing conveys or means to him as a chemist or an engineer. To Counsel, they say, even to the old hands, it too often conveys, as it were, nothing at all. Furthermore, if the expert is to be deprived of his function as hitherto misapprehended, and is to confine himself to facts unaided by opinions and inferences, the additional burden thrown on Counsel and Judge will be sensibly—indeed in some cases fatally—increased.

As to the medical witnesses commonly called for purposes of proof in "running-down" cases, civil and criminal, the dicta, as reported, of Swift, J., in a criminal case at Bristol were as follows:—

"Everybody agrees that a man is killed, and yet we have a doctor to prove he is dead, a nurse to prove he is dead, and an ambulance driver to prove he is dead. The doctor quite rightly says: 'Before I say he is dead I want 8*l.* 14*s.*'; the nurse says: 'Before I say he is dead I want 5*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*,'; and what in the world the ambulance man will want I haven't the faintest idea."

The accused had first pleaded "Not Guilty," and the prosecution must prove its case strictly. So it was explained. To which the Judge made answer: "It is an absurd waste of public money. These witnesses could have been bound over conditionally.—The Law Journal".

INDIAN CASES

1935 JOURNAL Vol. 155

[The Editors do not hold themselves responsible for the views expressed by contributors.]

ENTICING AWAY A SERVANT.

Once again when, on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, the case of Stretch v. Sim was tried before Mr. Justice Talbot and a Common Jury, the High Court had to consider an unusual but ancient cause of action, namely, the alleged enticing and procuring of another man's servant. In Stretch v. Sim, the plaintiff alleged, inter alia, that on or prior to April 12, 1934, one Edith Saville was in his service as a housemaid at Applewood, Cookham Dean, Berkshire, and that on that day the defendant wrongfully enticed and procured the said Edith Saville to depart from the said service unlawfully and without the consent and against the will of the plaintiff. The defendant denied that Edith Saville was in the plaintiff's service on April 12; in the alternative he alleged that he did not know that Edith Saville was in the plaintiff's service. The Jury found that the plaintiff had established his case and awarded him 25*l*. damages.

This cause of action became common in the second half of the 14th century, probably as a result of the economic conditions existing in England after the Black Death. Fitzherbert, in his Abridgement under the title "Laborers," summarises a number of cases relating to the enticing away of servants. It seems clear that the lawyers of the 15th century distinguished between "taking" and "procuring" and that the action could be framed in three ways: first in trespass vi et armis; secondly, on the case; and thirdly, under the Statute of Labourers, 23 Edw. 3.

In the following centuries this cause of action appears with fair regularity in the reports. By the 16th century, the law relating to enticement was more exactly defined and more widely extended. In 1591, in Adams and Bafealds Case (1 Leon. 240) the Court considered whether the harbouring of a servant with knowledge of his breach of contract with another employer was actionable; in Garret v. Taylor (1620, Cro. Jac. 567) the master's remedy against persons who attempted to interfere with his servants was discussed; in Bird v. Randall (1762, 3 Burr. 1345) it was held that no action lies for enticing a a servant from his master when the servant has paid the stipulated penalties for leaving; in Nichols v. Martyn (1799, 2 Esp. 732 N. P.) Lord Kenyon, C.J., held that the inducing of a servant to leave his master's service at the expiration of the term for which the servant had hired himself was not actionable.

The economic and social developments of the 19th century introduced further refinements into the law relating to enticement. Complex economic ties invited an answer to the question "Who is a servant ?" Changing political ideas necessitated a judicial definition of "enticing and procuring" a servant to break his contract of employment. The development of Trade Unions brought forward the defence of justification. Finally, the abolition of the old forms of action made it necessary to discover what was the gist of this action.

In Lumley v. Gye (1853, 2 L.J. Q.B. 463; 2 E. & B. 216) Wightman, Erle and Crompton , JJ., held, Coleridge, J., dissenting, that an action lies for maliciously procuring a breach of contract to give exclusive personal services for a time certain, equally whether the employment has commenced or is only in fieri, provided the procurement be during the subsistence of the contract and produces damage; and that, to sustain such action, it is not necessary that the employer and the employed should stand in the strict relationship of master and servant. The dissenting judgment of Coleridge, J.

derogated from this decision. This learned judge held that the action for procuring a servant to depart from his employment is founded on the Statute of Labourers, and is strictly confined to cases where the employer and the employed stand in such a relationship as was within the contemplation of that Statute.

The decision in Lumley v. Gye was later applied in Bowen v. Hall (1881, 50 L. J. Q.B. 305; 6 Q.B.D.333) and in De Francesco v. Barnum (1890, 63 L.T. 514). In this latter case Fry, L.J. specifically repudiated the suggestion that the action was founded upon the Statute of Labourers. The House of Lords reviewed Lumley v. Gye in Quinn v. Leathem (70 L.J. P.C. 76; 1901 A.C. 495). Lord Macnaghten in his judgment in that case said that Lumley v. Gye was relevant and that, speaking for himself, he had no hesitation in saying that he considered that the decision was right, not on the ground of malicious intention but > "On the ground that a violation of legal right committed knowingly is a cause of action, and that it is a violation of legal right to interfere with contractual relations recognised by law if there be no sufficient justification for the interference."

Two questions remained unanswered: "What is inducement?" and "What is justification?" The authorities do not give a definite answer. In South Wales Miner's Federation v. Glamorgan Coal Co. (74 L.J. K.B. 525; 1905, A.C. 239) the difficulties surrounding both these questions were indicated, but the learned Lords in their judgments were careful to confine themselves to the facts of the case. The learned editor of the last edition of Salmond on Torts (8th Edn. at p. 391) distinguishes advice from inducement. "To induce a breach of contract means to create a reason for breaking it; to advise a breach of contract is to point out the reasons which already exist. The former is certainly actionable; the latter has never been held to be so, and is probably innocent."

The defence of justification is no better defined. In Read v. Friendly Society of Stonemasons (1902, 2 K.B. 88) it was decided that the justification which will be sufficient to exonerate a person from liability for his interference with the contractual rights of another must be an equal or superior right in himself, and it will not be sufficient for him to show that he acted bona fide or without malice or in the best interests of himself or others or on a wrong understanding of his own rights. The principles here indicated have been followed in Smithies v. National Association of Operative Plasterers (1909, 1 K.B. 310) and in Pratt v. British Medical Association (1919, 1 K.B. 244, 265). In Brimelow v. Casson (1924, 1 Ch. 302) Russell, J., held that the defendants, who were members of the Theatrical Joint Protection Committee, were justified in inducing theatre proprietors to break contracts, their object being to improve the status of the theatrical profession and to stop the evils which resulted from underpayment in it. This decision has received the approval of Sir Frederick Pollock (40 L.Q.R. 139), but the editor of the last edition of Salmond on Torts, at p. 393, suggests that it is difficult to reconcile this decision with authority.

The damages in enticing actions are at large. In Gunter v. Astor (1819, 4 Moore C.P. 12) a pianoforte maker brought an action against the defendant for enticing away his workmen. The workmen were employed on piecework, and each man was entitled to leave his employment on completing the task allotted to him. At the trial Dallas, L.C.J., was of the opinion that the plaintiff had fully made out his case and he left the jury to ascertain what damages the plaintiff had sustained by the misconduct of the defendants. The jury assessed the damages at 1,600*l*. On a motion for a new trial on the ground that the damages were excessive, Park, J., said, at p. 14:—

> "It has been said that the plaintiff has only sustained damage for the value of the half-day's labour of his workmen; but it is not for the Court to ascertain the precise damages he is entitled to, as that was most properly left by my Lord Chief Justice to the jury."

In Exchange Telegraph Co. v. Gregory & Co. (1896, 1 Q.B. 147), where the cause of action was procurement of breach of contract, Lord Esher, M.R. at p. 153, said:

> "In such a case the jury may give any damages. It is not necessary to give proof of specific damage. The damages are damages at large."—The Law Journal, February 23, 1935.

LARCENY: INTENT PERMANENTLY TO DEPRIVE OWNER.

A case (unreported) was recently heard at the London Sessions, which raised a point of some interest, as to what is a sufficient "intent permanently to deprive the owner" for the purpose of constituting the offence of larceny.

The evidence in that case was that two persons were charged with stealing timber from a wharf on the Thames. One of the prisoners who was in a boat was seen to remove pieces of timber from the wharf which were allowed to slip into the river. The wood was carried down stream, but was rescued lower down the stream by the other prisoner, who also was in a boat. The rescued timber was thereupon taken by the prisoners and placed on the wharf of the Receiver of Wrecks, apparently with the object of obtaining a reward for their recovery. The prisoners were acquitted in the above case, so that no actual decision fell to be given on what might otherwise have been an interesting point of law, as to whether the above facts, even if the prosecution could have succeeded in establishing them, would have constituted larceny.

Definition of Larceny.

According to the Larceny Act, 1916, a person steals who, without the consent of the owner fraudulently and without a claim of right made in good faith, takes and carries away, anything capable of being stolen with intent at the time of such taking, permanently to deprive the owner thereof, etc.

What will constitute a sufficient intent to deprive the owner permanently of the chattel taken away?

Authorities Reviewed—Trespass without Larceny.

In such cases it may be that only a trespass has been committed, but no larceny.

Thus in "Hale's Pleas of the Crown," Vol. 2, page 661, it is said: "The taking may amount only to a trespass and the circumstances in such cases must guide the judgment...So where a man takes another's harrow or plough and after ploughing his own land, returns it to the place whence he took it, or tells the owner of his using it. So taking a horse off the common, and after riding returning it there again, is but a trespass. But if the party had sold it, this would be declarative of the first taking being felonious; and in doubtful cases the safest rule is to incline to acquittal rather than conviction." Thus if a person to search another with the intent of robbing him, but finding nothing, were to pull off the bridle of his horse and throw it away, this apparently would not be larceny (ib., at page 661).

In Phillips and Strong's case (ib., at page 662), two persons entered a stable at night and rode off on a couple of horses which were in the stable at the time. The horses were thus ridden for a distance of thirty-two miles and were then left at an inn, the prisoners subsequently continuing their journey on foot. The jury found that the prisoners merely intended to ride the horses and afterwards leave them. It was held that this was not larceny. This case would appear to be on all fours with the "joy-riding" motor cases of recent times, which did not constitute a larceny, but were eventually made a statutory offence by section 28 of the Road Traffic Act, 1930.

In some cases there may be a larceny of goods which have been taken away, but no larceny of other goods taken at the same time as where a car or other conveyance is taken for the purpose of removing the stolen chattels. Thus in R. v. Crump (1825), 1 C. and P. 658, it was held that if a person stealing other property take a horse, not with intent to steal it, but only to get off more conveniently with the other property, such taking of the horse is not a felony.

Larceny notwithstanding intent to Return Chattel to Owner.

Reference again may be made to Reg v. Richards (1899), 1 C. and P. 532, which appears to indicate that there may be larceny of a chattel, even though it is intended that it should be returned to its owner. In this case A was supplied by his employers with a quantity of pig iron to be put into a furnace and melted, A being remunerated according to the weight of the metal which ran out of the furnace and became puddle bars. A placed into the furnace with the pig iron an iron axle, belonging to his employers, which was not pig iron, the effect of which would be to increase the weight of the metal which would run out of the furnace, and thereby incidentally to increase his remuneration. It was held that if the prisoner put the axle into the furnace with a felonious intent to convert it to a purpose for his own profit that was larceny.

Larceny notwithstanding absence of pecuniary advantage to taker.

At the same time, however, it might be pointed out, that a larceny might be constituted, even though no pecuniary benefit is to attach therefrom to the person taking the chattel.

Thus in R. v. Morfit, R. and R. C. C. 307, it was held to be felony for a servant clandestinely to take his master's corn and to give it to his master's horse. So again in R. v. Cabbage, K. and R. C. C. 292, it was held to be larceny for a person to take another's horse and destroy it, so that the horse might not contribute to furnish evidence against another person who had stolen it.

Reg v. Richards (supra) may usefully be contrasted with Reg v. Holloway (1848), 2 C. and K. 942. In the latter case the servant of a tanner took skins from his employer's warehouse to the foreman of the tannery pretending that he had done work on them for which he was to be paid, his intention being to return the skins after he had been paid. It was held, however, that this did not constitute larceny, and that the case was indistinguishable from R. v. Webb and Moyle (1835) 1 M. C. C. 431. In the latter case it was held not to be larceny for miners paid according to the quantity of ore brought to the surface, to remove ore from the heaps of other miners and to add them to their own with a view to increase their wages, since the ore still remained in their employers' possession. On the other hand it would be larceny to take fat belonging to one's employer, with the intent of inducing him to purchase it, and offering it to him for sale, Reg v. Hall (1849), 2 C. and K. 947.

It may be of advantage to quote from Lord Denman's judgment in Reg v. Holloway (supra). "In the case . . . of a horse taken away for a year and then to be returned, it would seem to be rather singular if the law did not make that larceny. But if we were to hold that wrongfully borrowing a thing for a time, with an intention to return it, would constitute a larceny, many very venial offences would be larcenies. In late cases there has been an understanding that, to constitute larceny, it is essential that there should be an intent to deprive the owner permanently of his property. It is certainly an odd excuse for a person who is challenged with his master's property that he meant to return it, after having cheated his master . . . in the first place, and his fellow workmen in the second; still a man can hardly do this without committing some offence, although it be not larceny."

In conclusion, reference may be made to Reg v. Poole (1857), Dears and B. 345, in which case Reg v. Holloway (supra) was approved. In that case the prisoner was employed as a glove finisher, and was paid according to the number of gloves finished. The prisoner took a quantity of finished gloves out of a store room on the same premises, and without removing them from the premises laid them on the table, on which it was the practice to lay gloves which were finished so as to obtain payment for the work done, with the intent of obtaining payment for work which in fact had not been done. It was held that the prisoner could not be convicted of larceny.

The test suggested by Erle, J., in this case, in order to constitute larceny, was "whether the person who takes the property assumes to exercise dominion over it as owner" as when he offers to sell the goods, even though it may be to the real owner of the goods (as in Reg v. Hall (supra)).

Conclusion.

If one were to apply the principles of these cases to the evidence in the case which was recently tried at the London Sessions, and referred to at the outset of this article, it would certainly be arguable that there was no sufficient intent to constitute larceny, since the prisoners evinced an intention to return the goods to the owner thereof, through the medium of the Receiver of Wrecks, and their sole apparent object was merely to obtain a reward. This, of course, might have constituted an attempt to obtain money by false pretences, if some further steps had been taken by the accused in the furtherance of their plan, e. g., by representing that they had salved the timber and were entitled to a reward, but the links in the chain of their acts did not as it were stretch to a sufficient length to justify the preferring of any such charge.

This question as to whether there is the necessary intent is one that often raises nice problems for solution, but owing to the subtlety of the distinctions made by the law itself, it is one that is often likely to be overlooked.—Justice of the Peace.

Extracts from Contemporaries.

The Indian Courts.

We referred recently ..... to the Government of India Bill, and shortly noticed Part IX, which deals with the Judicature. Chap. I establishes and provides for the Federal Court, and Chap. II the High Courts of British India. Judges of the Federal Court are to be appointed by the Crown, and a person will not be qualified for appointment unless he (a) has been for at least five years a judge of a High Court in British India or in a Federated State; or (b) is a barrister of England or Northern Ireland, or a member of the Faculty of Advocates in Scotland, of at least ten years' standing; or (c) has been for at least ten years a pleader of a High Court in British India or in a Federated State. The Court will consist of a Chief Justice of India and such number of other judges as the Crown shall deem necessary, not exceeding six, unless the number is increased on an address presented by the Federal Legislature. The judges will be appointed by the Crown, and this, though not expressly stated, no doubt includes the Chief Justice. The Federal Court will have original jurisdiction in disputes between the Federation or any of the Provinces or of the Federated States, if and so far as the dispute involves a matter of legal right; and an appeal will lie to the Federal Court from a High Court in British India if the High Court certifies that it involves a substantial question of law as to the application or interpretation of this Act, or any Order in Council made thereunder. The Federal Legislature may also provide for appeals from a High Court in British India to the Federal Court in civil cases, and the Federal Legislature may abolish direct appeals from High Courts to the Privy Council. Appeals to the Federal Court from a High Court in a Federated State are apparently to be restricted to questions of law arising on the application or interpretation of the Act or any Order in Council made thereunder.—The Law Journal.

A Protest from Calcutta.

The High Courts in British India will be the High Courts in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and the other provinces named in Clause 209. Every High Court will consist of a Chief Justice and such other judges as the Crown may from time to time deem it necessary to appoint. Every judge of a High Court will be appointed by the Crown, and will hold office until he attains sixty, but provision is made for resignation or removal. The qualifications of a judge are, as to English barristers and Scottish advocates and Indian pleaders, similar to those for judges of the Federal Court; but there is also added the qualification of being "a member of the Indian Civil Service of at least ten years' standing who has for at least three years served as, or exercised the power of, a district judge." We have received a copy of a Representation which has been made by the Calcutta Bar, the Bar Association, and the Incorporated Law Society with respect to the appointment of Civil Service Judges. The Representation is based on the proposals of the Joint Parliamentary Committee as to the High Court in India, but these proposals are now, we believe, incorporated in the Bill. The Bar and these societies are not opposed altogether to the eligibility of Civil Service Judges for a High Court, but they are opposed, for reasons which they state in detail, to Civil Service Judges being eligible for appointment as Chief Justices; and they are of opinion that lawyer judges should not be less than two-thirds of the whole number. The Representation appears to be eminently reasonable. As regards the Chief Justiceship, it is pointed out, among other things, that the appointment of a Civil Service Judge "will impair public confidence in the High Court, both on account of his lack of legal training and of his service associations with the Executive"; and the plea for at least two-thirds of the judges to be lawyer judges is properly based on the technical legal requirements for the Bench. The Representation will, we hope, be considered when this part of the Bill is taken in Committee. It also urges the entire separation of the Subordinate Civil Judiciary from Executive control.—The Law Journal.

Income Tax and "Actual Cost" of works.

The salient facts in the case of Birmingham Corporation v. Barnes (Inspector of Taxes)—an interesting revenue case disposed of by the House of Lords on Friday of last week—were very shortly as follows: Some years ago the Corporation laid a new tramway track between Erdington and the works of the Dunlop Rubber Company. The company agreed to pay £10,000 and further dispatch moneys under certain conditions, and the Corporation treated the moneys so paid as receipts of the tramway undertaking, their expenditure on the permanent-way showing the actual sums expended less the sums paid to them by the Dunlop Company. A little later the Corporation started to reconstruct certain other tracks on which they expended upwards of a quarter of a million pounds, and in respect of this reconstruction they received from the Unemployment Grants Committee grants which amounted to more than £46,000. The question which arose was as to the amount which the Corporation was entitled to receive as an allowance for wear and tear under rule 6 of the rules of Cases I. and II. of Sched. D. Sub-rule (1) of that rule provides for the deduction from profits of a just and reasonable allowance, and sub-rule (6) says in effect that no deduction for wear and tear shall be allowed which, if added to deductions previously allowed to the person by whom the trade is carried on, will make the aggregate allowances exceed the "actual cost to that person" of the machinery and plant in question, including capital expenditure thereon by way of renewal, improvement, or reinstatement. The life of the tramways was computed at twelve years, and in the tenth year of their existence the question as to the limit of the aggregate fell to be determined. Were the dispatch moneys and the grants to be deemed a part of the cost to the Corporation of the works in question, or were they to be deducted from such costs as constituting expenditure borne by others? As Lord Atkin said in giving judgment, the case had evoked an equal division of judicial opinion, Mr. Justice Finlay having decided in favour of the Corporation and the Court of Appeal (Lords Justices Slesser and Romer; the Master of the Rolls dissenting) having taken the alternative view.—The Law Times, March 16, 1935.

The Judgment.

At the start of his judgment in the above case Lord Atkin said that, in view of the division of opinion above mentioned, no one would be inclined to give an opinion as one not admitting of doubt. In his opinion "the actual cost to the person by whom the trade is carried on" had no relation to the source from which that person had received the money. If the word "actual" had any effect it merely emphasised the word cost, and meant that such cost must be accurately ascertained and not merely estimated. But it was said that the words "to the person" in the phrase "actual cost to the person" indicated that the section was intending to confine the relief to an aggregate sum which the person carrying on the trade had defrayed out of his own resources, the burden of which had to be borne by him. He (his Lordship) confessed he did not think that that was the natural meaning of the words. What a man paid for the construction or purchase of works seemed to him (his Lordship) to be the cost to him whether or not someone else had given him the money before or had promised him to pay it after the event. The actual cost to the person was the same thing as the amount expended by the person, and the Corporation's appeal must be allowed. The other noble and learned lords concurred. Now although the case was of importance owing to the amounts at stake, its history in the Courts does emphasise the waste of judicial time due to want of definition in the drafting of statutes and rules. There were so few effective arguments either way, and the decision might so easily have been different. The purpose of rule 6 was to relieve traders from taxation when they had expended their resources in a certain way. A man says to his friend, "If you will insure your life, I will agree with the insurance company to be solely liable for the premiums." Is the insured entitled to relief in respect of the premiums? He would be if the gift were one towards meeting the friend's yearly expenses, made conditionally on an insurance being effected. But in the case in question there was no choice as to how the contributions were to be expended, and the amounts contributed to the cost were determined by the amount of the cost itself. The decision might easily have gone the other way. —The Law Times.

Mr. Justice Singleton.

A correspondent writes: The elevation to the Bench of Mr. Justice Singleton reminds me of a slender and delightful book in blue—"Conduct at the Bar and Some Problems of Advocacy, Being Two Lectures by J. E. Singleton, K.C."—published only two years ago. It was indeed a high compliment to be invited by the Council of Legal Education to expound before those proceeding to the Bar the method in which their professional duties ought to be discharged. The exposition combines in a marked degree lucidity with felicity of expression and practical help with loftiness of purpose. Mr. A. M. Langdon, K.C. (Director of Legal Education) remarks in the Introduction:

> "But of correct behaviour, of the true professional spirit, of the proper understanding and wise use of the tools of the craft, every aspirant at the Bar should make himself the master."

May I respectfully say that of these qualities the new Judge is an exemplar of his time.—The Law Journal.

* * *

The Duty of the Advocate.

It is difficult to select from this little book of forty pages, for it contains so many wise hints valuable to members of the Bar—the ripe experience of the acknowledged leaders of modern advocacy, including the learned author himself. But perhaps those words cited from "The Ethics of Advocacy," by Lord Macmillan, at the beginning of the second lecture, express in the concinnity of a sentence, and in words difficult to improve, the answer to the question, What is the duty of the Advocate?

> "The code of honour of the Bar is at once its most cherished possession and the most valued safeguard of the public. In the discharge of his office the advocate has a duty to his client, a duty to his opponent, a duty to the Court, a duty to the State and a duty to himself. To maintain a perfect poise amidst these various and sometimes conflicting claims is no easy feat."

These lectures are the answer to this question, "writ large." The Lord Chancellor recently said that "the Law" must be as a rock upon which a man may set his feet and be firm. The Bench and the Bar are the supreme body in the State whose professional and public purpose is the endless "quest of justice." Mr. Justice Singleton declared with truth:

> "The greatest safeguard against revolution, riot and the like is that the public should have confidence in judicial tribunals and in their decisions."—The Law Journal.

Legal Research.

If the call for legal research fails to touch a responsive chord in the minds of many of the profession the blame cannot certainly be attributed to Lord Macmillan, whose advocacy of the subject is untiring and ever eloquent. Again, last week, at the annual dinner of the University of London Law Society, he adverted to the subject and expressed the hope that it would be possible to inaugurate an institute of legal research which, besides helping to make better known the early development of legal ideas and the growth of the system such as we have it to-day, would reveal the extraordinary fascination which the law can exercise on the mind of the student. Lord Macmillan declared that it was preposterous to think of the law as dry as dust. Long ago Lord Bramwell, a practical man if ever there was one, said: "The law is so dry? I deny it. Of the four volumes of Blackstone's Commentaries three, to my mind, are most agreeable reading." Research is in the air at the moment. In Scotland the Stair Society, intended to do for that country what the Selden Society has done, and is doing, for England, has been successfully launched and has issued a programme of its intended publications which should not only be interesting in themselves but likewise useful in throwing light on present-day problems. Not all members of the solicitor branch of the profession, we venture to hope, resemble him in whose office Sir Harold Morris spent some part of his legal youth, and who said to him on leaving, "I hope you will do well at the Bar. I can't say that I have any particular advice to give you, but if you want to please solicitors always bear in mind that though the love of the law is a great thing, costs are even more important." No doubt costs are important, being sometimes facetiously termed the real merits of litigation, but there is a grandeur about the law itself to which legal research will more fully testify; —The Solicitors' Journal, March 16, 1935.

An Unusual Appeal.

The Court of Criminal Appeal in R. v. Vent (the Times, 5th March) dealt with a rather unusual type of application for leave to appeal. The defendant had pleaded guilty at his trial for murder, and he now sought leave to appeal against his conviction. He could not, of course, appeal against sentence, since that was fixed by law. He could, however, appeal against conviction on any ground which involves a question of law alone; and, with leave, on a ground which involves a question of mixed law and fact on any other ground deemed by the court to be sufficient.

There may be an appeal against conviction even after a plea of guilty. Thus in R. v. Ingleson (1914), 11 Cr. App. Rep. 21, such a plea was accepted in circumstances which ought to have led to its being refused, and the Court of Criminal Appeal sent the case back for a rehearing.

In R. v. Vent, the learned judge at the trial asked counsel to see the prisoner and explain to him the effect of his plea. Counsel came to the conclusion that there was some question as to the state of mind of the prisoner and so informed the judge. A doctor gave his opinion that the prisoner was fit to plead, and the prisoner then again pleaded guilty and refused legal aid. Counsel invited the Court of Criminal Appeal to order a medical examination, and also to consider whether a jury should not have been empanelled to try the question whether the prisoner was fit to plead.

The court refused leave to appeal and declined to investigate the state of the prisoner's mind, which was now a matter for the proper authorities.

The case does, however, show once more that the court will entertain an application for leave to appeal against conviction even after a plea of guilty. But, as was said by the Lord Chief Justice in R. v. Lucas (1908), 1 Cr. App. Rep. 60, "It will require a very strong case and exceptional circumstances to induce the court to give leave to re-open a case in which the prisoner has pleaded guilty:—Justice of the Peace.

Constructive Murder.

When medical men commit a felonious operation and death follows, and then a charge of murder, the exact wording of the charge to the jury is a matter of importance and of some nicety. Mr. Justice Singleton had such a charge before him at Liverpool recently, and, according to the lay report, said, in his charge, that anyone who performed an illegal operation, and in so doing used violence causing death, was guilty of murder; but that if the jury did not think that violence was used and believed that the operation had been carried out with skill, they should find manslaughter. This they did. With all due respect, we submit that the use of force and the use of skill are not the vital tests in this matter. The proper test, in our view, will be found in Mr. Justice Avory's charge to the jury in Rex v. Lumley (22 Cox, at p. 635). The question is whether the prisoner, when he did the act, contemplated, or must as a reasonable man have contemplated, that either death or grievous bodily harm would ensue to his patient from the operation. If the answer on either point be yes, then a verdict of guilty of murder is correct. It seems to us to result from this decision that the jury must be told to consider the state of the prisoner's mind and of a reasonable man's mind when in his position. Violence of action and the skill used may be relevant as showing the prisoner's state of mind, but cannot themselves determine this grave issue:—The Law Journal.

Wit & Humour.

Against the Law.—He—"When I marry I shall lead a handsome girl and a wonderful cook to the altar."

She—"Heavens! That would be bigamy!"—Case and Comment.

Disguise.—"What's the idea of that cross-eyed man for a store detective?"

"Well, look at him. Can you tell who he is watching?"—Case and Comment.

True of Most Fish Stories.—Lawyer Fisherman—"I tell you it was that long. I never saw such a fish!"

Friend—"I believe you."

—Case and Comment.

They Were Beauties, Too.—Magistrate—"The policeman says that you and your wife had some words."

Accused—"I had some, sir, but I didn't get a chance to use them."

—Case and Comment

INDIAN CASES

1935 JOURNAL Vol. 155

[The Editors do not hold themselves responsible for the views expressed by contributors.]

HANDWRITING PROBLEMS*

By

F. BREWESTER, F. R. M. S., F. R. S. A.,

Document Specialist, CALCUTTA

(Copyright.)

(Specially written for "Indian Cases and Criminal Law Journal")

FORGERIES.

1. Now, that we have got some idea how handwriting is produced, and the causes that produce it, we may usefully turn our attention to the subject of forgeries, more especially the forgery of signatures, as they are, by far, the most common. Before we do so, however, it is necessary to consider some psychological aspects of the problem.

2. When a normal writer sits down to make his signature, he does so in the manner that he has acquired by constant repetition and practice. It is to him a semi-automatic act, requiring no conscious thought or volition. He merely reproduces in a semi-automatic manner the brain-picture that is recorded on his sub-conscious mind. He has not to think of the form or the design he has to put on paper. It comes as natural and easy to him, as the act of walking, or the faculty of speech. In producing a signature, the genuine writer does so with all those personal traits, and all those personal idiosyncrasies, which he has learnt and stored up in the brain. As I have already explained, a signature is made as the result of a very complex series of harmonious mental and muscular actions, which are brought about by repeated practice. There are exceptionally few writers who, once they have acquired any degree of fluency in writing, can suddenly and at will write a completely different design of signature. Our "Brownies" must be educated before such an act can be accomplished, and, of course that takes time, and patience.

3. The forger is in quite a different position. Usually he has no qualifications at all for the task he undertakes. He is also an opportunist, in that he must perform his task at a particular, and perhaps, limited time, or forego the opportunity. The forging of a signature is an entirely new and unfamiliar act, and as a consequence the mental and muscular co-ordination to produce a perfect imitation is almost wholly lacking. The act is not a semi-automatic, or unconscious, act as with the genuine writer, but is purely a self-conscious proceeding, which requires considerable concentration and fixity of purpose. The design, or brain picture, is not contained in the mind, but has to be evolved suddenly from the model at hand. The forger has also to get rid of his own personal habits, so far as he can, and to assume those of the person whose signature he is imitating. He cannot write with the speed of the genuine writer, even though he may make a fairly accurate reproduction of the forms of the letters.

4. In addition to being an opportunist, the forger is frequently hampered by bein g obliged to reproduce his handiwork on a particular piece of paper, and he must also be familiar with the personal, and other affairs of the person whose signature

* The previous Articles on the subject appeared in 154 Ind. Cas. pages 1, 9, 33 41, 49—[Ed.]

he is imitating. In many instances, also, he must be aware of the routine, or the procedure, followed by his potential victim. Further he has to have accurate knowledge of the victim's whereabouts on a given date, and very often also the whereabouts of the victim's friends and acquaintances.

5 Last, but not by any means least, is the fact that the act of forgery is a criminal act, the consequences of which may be serious if the malefactor is caught. This fact is, perhaps, more important than any other, for it is well known that there are many skilful penmen who can imitate a signature tolerably well when the imitation is done as an exhibition of skill, but who would fail utterly if they were required to make a spurious signature that might land them in jail. This fear of punishment, therefore, urges the forger to take every possible precaution to ensure that his handiwork shall pass muster, and in taking such precautions he has to concentrate his attention in such a way that his work is laboured, awkward, and in many instances, crude. In this regard I should like to draw attention to the following extract from Osborn's "Questioned Documents", 2nd Edn.:—

"Realization of the fact that forgery is a criminal act, the fear of discovery, and the painful anxiety to do the work well, all combine to bring about a mental and muscular condition in the writer that make it very difficult, if not impossible, to do the work in a skilful manner. An actual criminal forgery undoubtedly is a poorer piece of work than could be executed by the same writer merely as an exhibition of skill".

As a consequence most forgeries betray themselves by their slowdrawn, bedraggled appearance, and, indeed, it would be more correct to say that many of them are drawings, and not writings.

6. In view of what I have already stated, it is not difficult to perceive that it is an almost superhuman task to reproduce successfully a particular signature, so that it will escape detection when examined by a competent examiner. In most instances, the forger concentrates only on the general form of the signature, and if he considers that he has reproduced that fairly well, he is satisfied. In concentrating on the form of the signature, he altogether neglects (if he ever thought of them) of such things as the speed of the writing, the many little inconspicuous features of the signature he is imitating; the position of the pen in relation to the line of writing; the proportion of one letter to another; the places where shading exists in the original, and the condition or state of the stroke edges. Sometimes also he selects a pen altogether different from that which the genuine writer is in the habit of using. To put it briefly, there are so many things to think about, and to do, at the same moment, that it is practically impossible to think, or to do, all of them. Try the task, and you will find this to be true.

7. I wish it to be clearly understood I am not for a moment suggesting that every forged signature must fail in all the respects I have indicated. Some are, in fact, so good that their detection is not an easy matter, and can only be accomplished by painstaking care, combined with the knowledge and experience of what to look for. Detection is also sometimes rendered difficult if the forged signature is a short one, consisting of a few strokes, and if it is written with a broad pen and viscous ink.

8. I am, of course, aware of the alleged exploits of the celebrated "Jim, the Penman", and what a marvellous forger he was supposed to be, but so far as I can determine from what I have read, his temporary success (and I underline (italicise) the word "temporary") was entirely due, not to his ability with the pen, but to a series of fortuitous circumstances that materially assisted him in his nefarious practices. If he were really so clever as he is alleged to be, how is that he was caught? Clever though he may have been, his downfall was brought about by one of those gross acts of stupidity which so many forgers commit.

9. I am also well aware that there are said to be some clever professional forgers in India. I have seen and examined many examples of their alleged handiwork, which I had not the slightest difficulty in detecting. Perhaps this was due to that carelessness which seems to be the inevitable lot of those who forge more than once. It must also be remembered that the professional forger (if he exists) is much more immune from detection and punishment than the non-professional forger, and, consequently, it is theoretically possible that his product should be much the better of the two. Even so, however, I have not, as I have already stated, seen a single example over many years of practice, of a forgery that was said to have been done by a professional forger that I had any difficulty in detecting.

10. So far as I remember, the best forgery that I have ever seen was done by an almost uneducated youth, who practised for a long period before committing the actual forgery, the English signature of a person who could write his name only. When a search was made, hundreds of sheets of paper were found in his desk on which he had been practising the signature.

11. Forgeries of signatures are chiefly of two kinds, namely by tracing, or by copying. Let us deal with the traced forgery first. A genuine signature is obtained and used as the model. There are various ways by which the tracing can be done. One way is to put the model up against a window pane, to place above it the paper on which the forgery is to appear, and then to trace on it the outline of the model below. This is a crude and unsatisfactory method, first, because there is no support for the hand, and secondly, if a pen is used it has to be held in such a way that the ink will not flow. Instead of using a pen and ink, a pencil may be used to trace the outline, which is afterwards inked over, but such a procedure is fatal. If done in this way the strokes in the forgery are thick and muddy, and it is always possible to see parts of the pencil outline projecting beyond the ink strokes. It is not by any means a simple operation to ink over a pencil outliue so that it is completety covered with ink. Even assuming that this can be done, it is easily possible to discover the pencil outline by bleaching out some of the ink, that is, if an ironbase ink has been used. If a carbon ink, such as the common "country" ink, is used, the ink cannot be bleached, as carbon is impervious to any known chemical. A variation of this method is to use a stylus to trace the outline, and then to ink it over, but if a stylus is used, there will be nearly always a raised outline on the back of the paper. I recently had an enquiry of this kind, which it was easy to prove by photographing the back of the paper with a reversed plate.

12. Another method that is sometimes adopted is to place the paper on which the forgery is to appear on a table; to place on top of it a carbon paper; above the carbon paper is placed the model, and then the outline of the model is traced on to the paper below. The result is a thin outline of the model, which must, of course, be inked over. As with a pencil outline, the carbon outline is nearly always visible here and there, or it can be discovered by bleaching out the ink. I have in my hands at the moment of writing, an extremely interesting example of this method. The outline was made by means of a carbon paper but instead of ink being used, the outline was covered with an indelible pencil. Viewed under low power, the difference between the carbon particles of the outline, and of the indelible pencil, was easy to see. The reason why an indelible pencil was used was because the genuine writer signed all his business letters with such a pencil, for the purpose of press copying. The forged documents had also been press-copied.

13. There is yet another method that is sometimes employed. This consists of placing the model on a glass-topped table, under which there is a strong light, and then tracing the outline on to the paper on which the forgery is to appear. This is a most dangerous method, because the paper being quite flat, and the outline easily visible, the ink flows readily, and it is possible in these conditions to write, instead of being obliged to draw. With an apparatus of this kind, which is quite easy to make, it is possible to simulate the pressure and shading of the model extraordinarily well, and there is an absence of that drawn, tremulous, appearance which characterises so many traced forgeries. I have in my hands at the moment a series of eleven forged documents which were prepared in this way. At the first glance it was difficult to imagine that they could be forged, so well were they done, but like most of his tribe, the forger had committed almost unbelievable stupidities. As I think it would not be in the interests of public policy to disclose the method by which it is possible to demonstrate the fact of a tracing over a glass-topped table, I regret that I cannot do so.

14. A curious thing about many traced forgeries is that the actual model is often produced in Court as "evidence"! Presumably the idea is that as it is just like the admitted signature, it must, therefore, be genuine! No greater folly could be committed for in such circumstances, the degree of coincidence between the genuine article and the forged product is the most absolute form of proof that can be had. No further proof is needed. Let me explain this.

15. The human hand (and the brain) is not capable of reproducing writing, or signatures, like a machine. In all genuine writing there is always some natural variation, which is always within well defined limits. No person can in the normal manner of writing, make his signature twice exactly alike. Try it and see. Therefore, when two signatures coincide, in length, in the position and location of the several strokes, it is absolutely certain that one of them is a forgery by tracing. This has been proved over and over again.

16. It is necessary to be cautious about this doctrine of superimposition. The doctrine does not apply in every instance. There are a few writers of short signatures who often sign in such a way that one signature is almost an exact replica of another. So close is the degree of superimposition that to one who does not know one might be considered a tracing from another. I have had several instances of this kind to deal with. In one instance several short signatures known to be genuine coincided in a most extraordinary way with one another. More or less exact coincidence in genuine signatures is likely to appear in short names, such as "Ram Das" in Urdu; "P. Roy" in Bengali, or "M. Day" in English. It is unlikely in the extreme that coincidence of any kind will appear in lengthy signatures, such as Madrasis write. Where, however, coincidence does appear in short signatures, there is usually a complete absence of that drawing effect which is so often found in traced forgeries.

17. It is well to bear in mind that absolutely exact and microscopic coincidence will not be found even in the most carefully executed tracing. This is because of the great difficulty of going exactly over an outline, as it requires a high degree of skill to follow exactly the path of any but the simplest of strokes. There are bound to be very slight divergences here and there, but such divergencies do not alter the fact that a tracing has been made, but rather do they strengthen it, for the reason just explained.

18. There is another circumstance that must be mentioned in regard to traced forgeries. Sometimes, either by accident or by design, one of the papers is moved in the act of tracing, when, of course, the forgery will not fit the model as a whole. It will, however, usually be found in such circumstances that if one part of the tracing fits the model, the other will not, but if the paper is moved it will be found that the second part will then fit. In some quarters the danger of exact coincidence is well known, and accordingly, one of the papers is designedly moved by the operator to avoid leaving dangerous evidence of his handiwork. It is seldom, however, that the paper is moved more than once, so that the two parts of the forgery will fit the model exactly if they are moved into appropriate positions.

19. The doctrine of superimposition has been carried to ridiculous lengths by at least one of the many so-called "experts". In one trial one of them had the impudence to say that a signature was a traced forgery because if the alleged forgery and the alleged model were placed in position for each separate letter, the two signatures would coincide exactly. There were twelve letters in the signature, which meant that the papers were supposed to have been moved twelve times.

20. It often occurs, especially in connection with Wills, that the alleged executant's signature is traced in three or more places, and in such an event it is easily possible to prove definitely the fact of the tracing, even though the model is not forthcoming.

21. There are two satisfactory methods by which a forgery can be proved to be a tracing if the model is present, or if two or more were traced from the same model. One is to photograph all the signatures exactly to the same scale, and to make positives, or transparencies, which, when superimposed, one upon the other, will readily show the exact degree of coincidence. The other is to photograph all the signatures under ruled squares drawn on glass. Either, or both the methods, may be utilised, when they will show with startling clearness the fact of tracing. The ruled glass method, however, needs a good deal of patience and technical skill, and for that reason probably it is never used by any of the numerous handwriting "Professors". At least it has never been used by any of them so far as my knowledge goes.

22. The lawyer, or the Judge, who wishes to satisfy himself as to whether a signature is traced from another, can easily do so without the aid of photography. Nowadays, it is possible to obtain in [redacted]dia, a trans- "cellophane" for wrapping d, and similar placed over a e made on it, must be used. be placed over en the degree of nce evident, I use ly in chamber work, ation in Court, If cele" is not available, transparent drawing first be rubbed over that ordinary writing fluid "take".

23. Of course, it is not always that the model is produced, and then the investigator has to confine himself to an examination of the physical facts, as disclosed in the writing itself. The following summarised hints will, I hope, be useful to those dealing with a traced forgery :—

(1). Does the signature appear unnatural and drawn in appearance? A traced forgery is usually a drawing, and not a writing, and the drawing action results in a dull, lifeless, inert product

(2). Look at the width of the strokes As a rule, the strokes in a traced forgery are of uniform width and there is no natural shading. The lack of shading may be made up by retouching, or penpainting, as it is sometimes called.

(3). See if there are sudden, abnormal, or numerous changes of direction in the strokes. Owing to the concentration requisite to adhere to the outline or model, which is not always clearly visible to the eye, the forger deviates slightly here and there from the intended path.

(4). Look for traces of pencil, carbon, or ink outline, and also for indentations made by a stylus Examine the back of the paper for a raised outline.

(5). See if there are any unnecessary pen-lifts, or lifts in unlikely places. An unnatural pen-lift often occurs in the middle of a stroke or curve which the genuine writer would make in one single sweep of the pen. Note if the pen was put down again exactly at the spot where it was lifted. Court the number of such pen lifts.

(6). Are the beginnings and ends of free strokes blunt or tapering. The tracing movement is usually co-terminous with the movement of the pen, resulting in blunt initial and final parts of strokes.

(7). Does the signature follow a model of the period in which it purports to have been made? Sometimes a signature of a wrong period is chosen as the model.

(8). Examine for superimposition, in the manner already explained. Great caution must be exercised if the signature is a short one of a few letters.

(9). Thin papers are always suspicious because a tracing is more easily done on them than on a paper which is opaque Of course a tracing may appear on any kind of paper, but the use of thin paper is suspicious because of the comparative ease by which a tracing can be made on it owing to its transparency.

24. It has more than once been offered as an explanation for the presence of a pencil outline in a signature, that the pencil signature was first written, but when this was objected to, and a pen and ink signature called for, the alleged writer then covered up the pencil outline in ink. Such an "explanation" may seem to be very plausible, but it is highly fallacious. In such an altogether unusual circumstance, a genuine writer would not carefully and meticulously go over the pencil outline in such a way as to hide as best he could all traces of the pencil outline, but it is just what the forger does. The genuine writer would probably do one of two things. Either he would score out the pencil outline and make his signature afresh in ink, or if he did attempt to go over the pencil outline, it would be done in such a careless manner that most, if not all, of the pencil outline would be easily visible. I have on hand at the moment an investigation in which the genuine writer almost wholly neglected a pencil outline or draft, he had first written in a lengthy document.

25. Several instances have occurred in which a whole document has been traced from another, the most common form of this kind of fraud concerning receipts, promissory notes, or short endorsements. In almost all such instances the wording is the same, except for the rate, the amount, and the date, which are filled in by the manipulator to suit his immediate purpose, and quite frequently he commits the colossal stupidity of producing the actual model he used.

IMPERIAL ACTS, 19

ACT NO. IV OF 1935.

THE SALT ADDITIONAL IMPORT DUTY (EXTENDING) ACT, 1935.

Received the assent of the Governor-General on the 21st April 1935, and is published in the Gazette of India, Part 4, dated April 27, 1935.

An Act further to extend the operation of the Salt (Additional Import Duty) Act, 1931.

Whereas it is expedient further to extend the operation of the Salt (Additional Import Duty) Act, 1931; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. Short title.

This Act may be called the Salt Additional Import Duty (Extending) Act, 1935.

2. Amendment of section 1, Act XIV of 1931.

In sub-section (3) of section 1 of the Salt (Additional Import Duty) Act, 1931, for the figures "1935" the figures "1936" shall be substituted.

ACT NO. V OF 1935.

THE INDIAN MINES (AMENDMENT) ACT 1935.

Received the assent of the Governor-General on the 21st April, 1935, and is published in the Gazette of India, Part 4, dated April 27, 1935.

An Act further to amend the Indian Mines Act, 1923, for certain purposes.

Whereas it is expedient further to amend the Indian Mines Act, 1923, for the purposes hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. Short title and commencement.

(1) This Act may be called the Indian Mines (Amendment) Act, 1935.

(2) It shall come into force on the 1st day of October, 1935.

2. Amendment of section 3, Act IV of 1923.

In section 3 of the Indian Mines Act, 1923 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act),—

(a) for clause (c) the following clause shall be substituted, namely:—

"(c) 'child' means a person who has not completed his fifteenth year;"

(b) clause (cc) shall be re-lettered as clause (ccc) and before that clause as so re-lettered the following clause shall be inserted, namely:—

"(cc) 'day' means a period of twenty-four hours beginning at midnight;" and (c) after clause (j) the following clause shall be inserted, namely:—

"(jj) where work of the same kind is carried out by two or more sets of workers working during different periods of the day, each of such sets is called a 'relay';".

3. Amendme
1923.

(1) For claus section 10 of th clause shall be s

"(c) a person
Inspector ed by the

(2) To sub-sectio said Act, the follo added, namely:—

"(e) two persons t of miners, wh in accordance with provisions:—

(i) if there are one or more registered trade unions having in the aggregate as members not less than one-quarter of the miners, the said persons shall be nominated by such trade union or trade unions in such manner as may be prescribed;

(ii) if sub-clause (i) is not applicable and there are one or more registered trade unions having in the aggregate as members not less than 1,000 miners, one of the said persons shall be nominated by such trade union or trade unions in such manner as may be prescribed and the other by the Local Government;

(iii) if neither sub-clause (i) nor sub-clause (ii) is applicable, the said persons shall be nominated by the Local Government.

Explanation.—In this clause 'miner' means a person employed, otherwise than in a position of supervision or management, in any of the mines for which the Mining Board is constituted."

4. Amendment of section 20, Act IV of 1923.

Section 20 of the said Act shall be renumbered as sub-section (1) of section 20 and to that section as so re-numbered the following sub-sections shall be added, namely:—

"(2) The Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, direct that accidents other than those specified in sub section (1) which cause bodily injury resulting in the enforced absence from work of the person injured for a period exceeding forty-eight hours shall be entered in a register in the prescribed form or shall be subject to the provisions of sub-section (1).

(3) A copy of the entries in the register referred to in sub-section (2) shall be sent by the owner, agent, or manager of the mine, within fourteen days after the 30th day of June and the 31st day of December in each year, to the Chief Inspector."

5. Amendment of section 22, Act IV of 1923.

In section 22 of the said Act, for the word "or" the words "and shall cause every report submitted" shall be substituted.

6. Insertion of new sections 22-A, 22-B, 22-C and 22-D in Act IV of 1923.

In Chapter VI of the said Act, before section 23 the following sections shall be inserted, namely :—

"22-A. Weekly day of rest.

No person shall be allowed to work in a mine on more than six days in any one week.

22B. Hours of work above ground.

(1) A person employed above ground in a mine shall not be allowed to work for more than fifty-four hours in any week or for more than ten hours in any day.

(2) The periods of work of any such person shall be so arranged that, along with his intervals for rest, they shall not in any day spread over more than twelve hours, and that he shall not work for more than six hours before he has had an interval for rest of at least one hour.

(3) Persons belonging to two or more relays shall not be allowed to do work of the same kind above ground at the same moment :

Provided that for the purposes of this sub-section persons shall not be deemed to belong to separate relays by reason only of the fact that they receive their intervals for rest at different times.

22-C. Hours of work below ground.

(1) A person employed below ground in a mine shall not be allowed to work for more than nine hours in any day.

(2) Work of the same kind shall not be carried on below ground in any mine for a period spreading over more than nine hours in any day except by a system of relays so arranged that the periods of work for each relay are not spread over more than nine hours.

(3) No person employed in a mine shall be allowed to be in any part of the mine below ground except during the periods of work shown in respect of him in the register kept under sub-section (1) of section 28.

22-D. Special provision for night relays.

Where a worker works in a relay whose period of work extends over midnight, the ensuing day for him shall be deemed to be the period of twenty-four hours beginning at the end of the period of work fixed for the relay, and the hours he has worked after midnight shall be counted towards the previous day."

7. Substitution of new section for section 23, Act IV of 1923.

For section 23 of the said Act the following section shall be substituted, namely :—

"23. Prohibition of employment of certain persons.

No person shall be allowed to work in a mine who has already been working in any other mine within the preceding twelve hours."

8. Repeal of section 23-A, Act IV of 1923.

Section 23-A of the said Act is hereby repealed.

9. Amendment of section 23-B, Act IV of 1923.

In section 23-B of the said Act,—

(a) in sub-section (1),—

(i) for the word "shifts" the word "relays" and for the word "shift" the word "relay" shall be substituted, and

(ii) after the word "relay" as so substituted the following sentence shall be inserted, namely:—

"The notice shall also state the time of the commencement and of the end of the intervals for rest fixed for persons employed above ground.";

(b) in sub-section (3), for the word "shift" the words "relay or in the rest intervals fixed for persons employed above ground" shall be substituted, and the comma and all the words after the words "before such change" shall be omitted ; and

(c after sub-section (3) the following sub-section shall be inserted, namely :—

"(4) No person shall be allowed to work in a mine otherwise than in accordance with the notice required by sub-section (1)."

10. Amendment of section 24, Act IV of 1923.

In section 24 of the said Act, for the words, figures and letter "section 23 or section 23-A", the words, figures and letters "section 22-A, section 22-B, section 22-C, section 23, or sub-section (4) of section 23B" shall be substituted.

11. Amendment of section 25, Act IV of 1923.

In section 25 of the said Act, for the words, figures and letter "section 23 or section 23-A" the words, figures and letters "section 22-A, section 22-B, section 22-C, section 23, or sub-section (4) of section 23B" shall be substituted.

12. Insertion of new section 26-A in Act IV of 1923.

Before section 27 of the said Act the following section shall be inserted, namely:—

"26-A. Young persons not to be allowed underground without certificates of fitness.

No person who has not completed his seventeenth year shall be allowed to be present in any part of a mine which is below ground, unless—

(a) a certificate of fitness in the prescribed form and granted to him by a qualified medical practitioner is in the custody of the manager of the mine, and

(b) he carries while at work a token giving a reference to such certificate."

13. Amendment of section 27, Act IV of 1923.

In section 27 of the said Act, after the word "child" the words "or has not completed his seventeenth year" shall be inserted.

14. Substitution of new section for section 28, Act IV of 1923.

For section 28 of the said Act, the following section shall be substituted, namely:—

"28. Register of employees.

(1) For every mine there shall be kept in the prescribed form and place a register of all persons employed in the mine showing, in respect of each such person,—

(a) the nature of his employment.

(b) the periods of work fixed for him,

(c) the intervals for rest, if any, to which he is entitled,

(d) the days of rest to which he is entitled, and

(e) where work is carried on by a system of relays, the relay to which he belongs.

(2) The entries in the register prescribed by sub-section (1) shall be such that workers working in accordance therewith would not be working in contravention of any of the provisions of this Chapter.

(3) No person shall be employed in a mine until the particulars required by sub-section (1) have been recorded in the register in respect of such person and no person shall be employed except during the periods of work shown in respect of him in the register.

(4) For every mine to which the Local Government may, by general or special order, declare this sub-section to be applicable, there shall be kept in the prescribed form and place a register which shall show at any moment the name of every person then working below ground in the mine."

15. Amendment of section 30, Act IV of 1923.

In section 30 of the said Act,—

(a) after clause (a) the following clause shall be inserted, namely:—

"(aa) for prescribing the form of the register referred to in sub-section (2) of section 20;";

(b) in clause (e), for the words "to be more than thirteen years of age" the words "to have completed their fifteenth year" shall be substituted;

(c) after clause (e) the following clause shall be inserted, namely:—

"(ee) for prescribing the form of the certificates of fitness required by section 26-A and the circumstances in which such certificates may be granted and revoked;"; and (d) in clause (f), for the word "register" the word "registers" shall be substituted.

16. Amendment of section 31, Act IV of 1923.

In sub-section (3) of section 31 of the said Act, after the words "British India" the words "which is, in the opinion of the Governor-General in Council, concerned with the subject dealt with by the regulation" shall be inserted.

(To be continued.)

AN CASES

JOURNAL Vol. 155

emselves responsible for the views expressed by contributors.]

HANDWRITING PROBLEMS*

By

BREWESTER, F. R. M. S., F. R. S. A.,

Document Specialist, CALCUTTA

(Copyright.)

(Specially written for "Indian Cases and Criminal Law Journal")

FORGERIES.

1. Before leaving the subject of traced forgeries, I should like to mention another example in which the tracing method is employed. This consists of tracing a whole document from words, or sentences, in one or more genuine writings. This form of fraudulent document is most likely to be found in wills, and in anonymous letters, though, of course, it may appear in any kind of spurious document. If the model (or models) is produced, as it very often is, it is not very difficult to prove the fact, but if it is not, the evidence of tracing will be evident by one or more of the signs already indicated, but in addition it is probable that the words or sentences will be irregularly aligned.

2. Let us now turn our attention to copied, or freehand, forgeries. This form of fraud occurs most frequently with signatures. The manipulator secures a genuine signature, and after perhaps, one or two feeble attempts to practise it, he makes the signature on a piece of paper. It is not often that a forger has the patience, or the opportunity, to practise his nefarious work until he becomes thoroughly proficient. Often, also, many forgers have not the manipulative ability to succeed in the task they set themselves. Remember that it takes perseverance, time and patience to get the 'brownies of the brain" to work harmoniously together to perform a new act.

3. It should also be remembered that the less the forger has to do the more likely he is to be successful. The shorter a signature is, the greater the chance of success for the forger, though much will depend upon his dexterity with the pen. Some of those who forge even the shortest of signatures have practically no ability whatever for the task. In short signatures it is obvious that the traces of forgery may not be so clear, or so many in number, as in a long signature. It is easier to make a single stroke than four connected ones.

There are some persons who write illegible, bizarre, signatures that no one can read, and many of them write in this way because they imagine that such signatures are more difficult to forge than others. That is not true. The more flourishes and meaningless curves there are, the better the chance of success for the forger. The most difficult kind of signature to forge successfully is one that is written in one single and continuous movement of the pen from beginning to end, and, in which there are fine, or hair, strokes, combined with graceful shading and complete legibility. In many of the Indian scripts, a person signing his name adds that of his father, and also his residence. This is an excellent practice, and a good protection against the forger. All documents of any importance should always be signed in this way. No important document, and particularly a will, should ever be signed without an attestation clause of some kind, such as, "I, John Henry Augustus, hereby state in my own handwriting that I have read and understood the contents of this will, and accordingly write my usual signature, thus:"

* The previous Articles on the subject appeared in 154 Ind. Cas. pages 1, 9, 33, 41, 49 and 155 Ind. Cas. 33—[Ed.]

5. The signatures of those who write but little, such as many of the peasant class, are often written in a very crude way. Such signatures offer the greatest chance of success to the forger because they are produced in much the same way that the forger works, that is, more or less in the fashion of a drawing. Even so, most, if not all, genuine writers of this type, write, however poorly they may do so, and they do not draw as the forger usually does. Some peasants, especially in the Punjab, write with a thick ink and a broad pen in such a way that their signatures are thick, heavy-looking, or even bedaubed. The course heavy paper so often used in the Punjab makes the work of the forger still easier, and it is sometimes impossible to say whether a disputed signature of this type is genuine or spurious. Such signatures are comparatively easy to imitate, if the imitator is at all capable.

6. If a signature is slowly written in the way that many peasants write, and if, at the same time, it is short in length, it is theoretically possible to forge it successfully, though there is a vast difference between theory and practice. Many signatures of the kind indicated are written purely with the action of the fingers, and as this is the action nearly always used by the forger, it is easy to understand that the task of imitation is thereby rendered all the easier. It frequently happens, however, in forgeries of this kind that the imitator possessss greater skill with the pen than the genuine writer, which will be evident by the firmer strokes in the imitation.

7. Once the finger movement is left behind, the task of the forger becomes proportionately greater, that is to say, the successful forgery of a wrist movement writer is much more difficult than the forgery of a finger movement writer, and the successful reproduction of a forearm movement writing is still more difficult.

8. It is extremely difficult to forge successfully a signature of moderate leng or a it speed
The s quently uneven, themselve path betw there. Whi form more o of exceeding with the speed an imitation of it is quite likely found several care lifts, where none exist article. By a carefully conceale
I mean one that is not at once but one where the pen was lifted in the paper, and put down again almo exactly on the same spot, giving a superficial appearance of continuous writing, when in fact, the imitation may be made in several separate movements of the pen. Sometimes these fraudulent pen-lifts are so carefully and meticulously done that they cannot be seen with the naked eye, but they are usually easily visible under a hand lens, or a miscroscope.

9. A defect very often found in freehand, or copied forgeries, is that they are longer in length than the genuine signature. The reason seems to be that the imitator is unable to make the connecting strokes of the same length as the genuine writer, because of concentration on the model he is copying. A question that is sometimes asked in cross-examination is whether the forger had a model before him at the time, or if he made the forgery from memory. It is impossible to answer a question of this kind definitely, but the probability is that in most forgeries the model is kept in view, since, as already explained, the forger is generally a novice who makes no preparation for the task he undertakes.

10. Where natural tremor exists in a signature, however poor it may be, it is practically impossible to imitate it successfully, and naturally, the more pronounced the tremor is, the greater the difficulty. Natural tremor is rhythmic, and usually occurs throughout a signature, though it is curious thing that one or more strokes may sometimes not show a trace of it. Natural tremor usually consists of short strokes to the right and left of a given path, and if I may so express it, are regular in their irregularity. Another curious thing about writing with natural tremor is that the most complicated character will be made in a single movement of the pen, and if the pen is lifted from the paper, it is put down again at some distance from where it was lifted, or the second stroke is jumbled up with the stroke first written. Unnatural, or fraudulent tremor, is quite different, and once it is understood, it is not difficult to recognise. Generally, it is not regular, or rhythmic, the divergences from the main path of the stroke are longer than in natural tremor, or they may be a series of short strokes all carefully joined together. Further, it will usually be found that even the most simple character will be made with carefully concealed pen-lifts.

11. Quite a common fault with the forger is that he does not know when to leave well alone. Many otherwise possible forgeries as first done are made to look just what they are by being carefully retouched, or gone over. This retouching may be caused by the necessity of giving shading to the forgery in the place, or places, where it exists in the model, or it may be due to an intense desire not to leave undone anything by which the forgery could be detected at sight. Here let me remark, that it is not true, as some "experts" wrongly state that retouching can be common to both forged and genuine writings and signatures, and therefore, their presence in a signature is no evidence of forgery. Statements of this kind are both unjustifiable and unwarrantable. There is a vast difference between genuine and fraudulent retouching. It is true that there are some writers, microscopic in number, who occasionally add a stroke to a writing or signature, usually for the purpose of remedying a defect. such as when the ink fails to flow. Such retouching is usually quite obvious and can be easily seen, whereas the retouching of the forger is meticulously done, and is not always easy to see. Another great point of difference is that the number of times a genuine writer will retouch is far less than the number of times the forger touches up his handiwork. It follows, therefore, that there is a difference in retouching both in nature and number, in genuine and forged writings and signatures. I must not be understood as saying that in every forgery there must be retouching; some are quite free from it.

12. Another indication of a genuine signature is that sometimes a writer will omit something, such as a dot; or short stroke, but it is very seldom such things are omitted by the forger, whose object is to omit nothing, for fear that his handiwork may be thereby discovered. It is a matter of complete indifference to most genuine writers whether a small detail is left out of a signature now and then. When dots are put in by a forger, they are almost invariably in the form of a nearly perfect circle, which may be made by more than one circular movement of a pen. Most genuine writers, on the other hand, do not make the dot in the form of a perfect circle, but in the form of a short stroke, the beginning of which may be thicker than the end, that is wedge-shaped. Further, most, if not all, genuine writers are quite careless as to where they place a dot, so long as it is fairly near to the letter with which it is concerned. The forger, on the other hand, is generally careful to see that the dot is placed as correctly as possible.

13. Not only do most forgeries fail in the matter of speed, but they also fail in regard to line quality, or the condition of the stroke edges. As already stated, the slower a stroke is made the more rough, or uneven, generally will be the state of the edges. As a forger usually draws, it follows that the stroke edges are more likely to be rougher than a signature which is really written. As a general proposition, it may be said that the faster one writes, the cleaner and smoother will be the state of the line quality. Much nonsense has been written and spoken by some of the "characteristic" experts on the subject of line quality. It has been incorrectly stated that:—

> "For purposes of identity or otherwise, and that is the precise purpose required in respect of handwritings in Law Courts, it is clear, therefore, that line quality is not a reliable criterion, much less a writing characteristic for proving or disproving that a certain writing is or is not in a certain person's handwriting... and experts who vaunt a lot about line quality, are only sounding a term which really has no definite bearing on handwriting identification."

This long-winded statement is typical of the incorrect utterances made by irresponsible "experts", whose only object seems to be to mislead, but it is only fair to say that the statement quoted was made many years ago. That the statement is quite wrong will be evident from the following quotation from "Questioned Documents" by A. S. Osborn, 2nd Edition, who is regarded by all unprejudiced persons, as the world's leading authority.

> "The fundamental and usual defect in a forgery is, however, not divergence in form, but a quality of line like that shown in Figure 158. Close scrutiny of line quality alone often furnishes the basis for grave suspicion that a signature is not genuine," (The italics are mine).

14. In connection with this matter of line quality, I think it is advisable to consider the matter of reed pens, which are so extensively used in the Punjab. It is always difficult to generalise, but I think it is not incorrect to say that writing with reed pens is generally more rough at the edges of strokes than the writing with metallic pens. I have, however, seen writing with reed pens which was quite as smooth and clean as that done with a metallic pen. Now, the greater roughness of reed pen writing does not by any means imply that the line quality produced is precisely the same as that in a forgery. Far from it. The two are usually distinct and separate. It is difficult to describe the appearance of the two, but a little practice will soon enable one to distinguish one from the other. If an attempt must be made to give a description, I should say that in genuine reed pen writing, although the line quality may be rougher that in writing with metaltic pens, yet the roughness is consistent throughout the stroke, and at the same time, there are usually none of those deviations so common in forgery. In a forgery, also, there may be blunt ended strokes, and also carefully concealed pen lifts. The best thing to do in order to understand the difference, is to write normally with various widths of reed pens, and then to try and imitate the signature of another. The difference in the line quality of the two will not be difficult to discern.

15. In a lengthy piece of writing made with a reed pen, it is possible that the pen may need to be trimmed at some stage or another. When this happens, the spot at which the newly trimmed pen was applied will usually be obvious because of the difference in the widths of the strokes before and after trimming. The trimming or non-trimming, per se. does not cause either the new or the old writing to have a line quality like that generally found in forgeries. A reed pen with a loose particle of the wood at the nib points would make a stroke something similar to that made by a metallic pen with a hair, or fibre, but it is highly probable that if the pen were in such a condition the impediment would be removed the moment its presence was detected.

16. In order to assist the lawyer or the Judge who may have a problem in hand to arrive at a correct conclusion the following summarised hints, which are taken chiefly from my book "Contested Documents and Forgeries" are given.

First. Note the writing ability displayed, that is, whether the movement shown in the signature is easy and rapid, cramped and strained, or vigorous or lethargic. Look for evidence of hestitation, labour or awkwardness, as shown by heavy or unequal strokes, or by deviations from what should be a straight line or a symmetrical curve. Although a forger may simulate the form of each letter in a signature tolerably well, he almost invariably fails in reproducing a signature at the correct speed.

Second. Observe closely the line quality, whether rough or smooth, uniform or divergent, or inconsistent in parts. In many forgeries the stroke is not a clean one lying in the shortest path between two points, but consists of a series of short irregular, or wedge-shaped, strokes, all haltingly joined together without lifting the pen from the paper. As stated above, line qualify is usually the fundamental defect in a forgery, even if it is otherwise a good imitation of the form of the genuine signature.

Third. Note the frequency of the shading, and the places where it occurs. Many forgeries lack completely the graduated shading of the genuine signature, and very often it will be found that there is no perceptible variation of stroke anywhere, all the strokes being practically of the same width.

Fourth, Look for evidence of retouching, or overwriting. Because of inability of reproduce in a natural way the shading habits of the genuine writer, the forger is obliged to thicken the strokes at the appropriate places by a second application of the pen, so as to approximate to the habits shown in the genuine signature that is imitated.

Fifth. Look carefully for concealed pen-lifts and count the number of them. Note also, whether such pen-lifts occur in the middle of what should be a continuous straight stroke, or in the middle of what should be a continuous curve. Examine also the beginning and ends of strokes comprising parts of a particular letter. A genuine writer generally makes them in a continuous operation but the forger is often obliged to make them in two or more.

Sixth. Compare the length. A common failing of freehand forgeries is that they are longer in length than the genuine signature.

Seventh. Look for blunt ends at the terminals of down and horizontal strokes. Owing to the drawing motion employed, many (if not all) of the terminals are co-terminous with the movement of the pen, which causes the ends of the strokes to be of the same width, or even wider, than any other part.

Eighth. Most writers who are good, or even moderately good, penman, commence their signatures with a short initial impulse movement that is not transmitted on to the paper, but which is nevertheless recognisable by the presence of a fine, or tapering, initial stroke. If the signature in dispute shows at any part of the initial stroke, or character, that it is as broad or broader than the remainder, then there is cause for suspicion.

Ninth. Observe the beginning and end parts of signature Many instances are known where the consciousness of the fraudulent act so obsesses the forger, that at the commencement of his attempt he betrays himself by indications of tremor, or want of firmness. As he gains confidence the strokes become firmer, and more rapidly made, but towards the end of his task the consciousness of guilt again assumes command and there is doubt and hesitancy. This psychological process inevitably causes the middle portion of the signature to be better than the initial and final parts. Any inconsistency of this kind denotes a performance that is incompatible with the work of a genuine writer.

Tenth. Consider the presence or absence of tremor. Natural and fraudulent tremor differ considerably. The former is likely to be even and rhythmic, but the latter will probably be uneven and irregular, or it may occur in any place. Look for inconsistency. The forger may put tremor in the first stroke, but frequently forgets his assumed role, and may make other strokes firm and straight.

Eleventh. See whether the disputed signature contains evidence of better control of the pen than that of the genuine writer. This will be evident by the presence of firmer strokes than the genuine writer is capable of making.

Twelfth Consider the matter of the pen used. Most writers favour of particular kind of pen, and feel uncomfortable if a strange pen is used. The forger is likely to use a pen of a different kind It may be too broad or too fine.

Thirteenth. Note the exact point of contact of the connecting strokes in cursive writing. A genuine writer may persistently run a connecting stroke from the base of one letter to the top of another, but the forger may make the connnection at the base.

Fourteenth. Observe the alignment, that is the relation of the character with regard to a line, whether real or imaginary. Some writers have a rise or fall in alignment in a combination of two or more characters, whenever they precede or follow particular letters, that is very characteristic.

17. There are many other points which the specialist would consider according to the nature of the problem in hand, but if the lawyer or Judge carefully considers the fourteen above stated, it is most likely he will not fail to arrive at a right decision. From a study of the fourteen points stated, it will be quite evident that the so-called "characteristic" tests so frequently said to be followed in this country would afford no assistance whatever, and here I may remark that in a book which is considered to be an authority by followers of the "characteristic" cult, there is given an illustration showing that nine out of ten "characteristic" were effectively disguised in a particular signature by the same writer. This alone shows how absurd is the so-called "characteristic" tests, for if they are so permanent and immutable as they are said to be, how is that nine out of ten of them can be changed at will, leave alone one of them? Perhaps it is because, as has been impertinently stated, that they are "based on such scientific principles that the reasonings cannot be appreciated, much less understood, by the average mind". Apparently, then, the protagonists of the "characteristic" theory must have super-minds! Arrogance could scarcely go further.

18 I will deal with another common form of forgery in my next article.

"PUBLIC NUISANCE AND SPECIAL DAMAGE"

By M. Shafi, Esq., B. A., LL. B., Pleader, Ludhiana.

In the case of a 'public nuisance' (obstruction to public way is certainly a public nuisance). There are four remedies open in India. They are:—

I. Under the Criminal Law:—

1. Proceedings under s. 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

2. Criminal prosecution under Indian Penal Code.

II. Under the Civil Law:—

3. A suit under s. 91, Civil Procedure Code. With the consent of the Advocate-General.

4. A suit at the instance of a private individual who has suffered 'special damage' by reason of the nuisance.

That the fourth proposition has been the established law in India since 1877 and even before nobody can deny. This proposition was laid down after a review of all the authorities of English Law in Satku v. Ibrahim, 2 B. 457. This is the basic ruling and all the other High Courts in India have, while laying down the proposition that no action is maintainable without proof of 'special damage' in cases of public nuisance, have followed this authority or English authorities. For instance, Bhawan Singh v. Narotam Singh, 2 Ind. Cas. 365; 31 A. 444; Muhammad Raza Khan v. Muhammad Askari Khan, 85 Ind. Cas. 304; 46 A. 470; Manilal Jibhai v. Ishvarbhai Samalbhai, 87 Ind. Cas. 934; A I. R. 1925 Bom. 367 at p. 368; Raj Kumar Singh v. Saheb Zada, Ray 3 C. 20; Lallu v. Jamiyat, 72 P. R. 1877; Chhajju Mal v. Ganda Mal, 4 P. R. 1895; Ardeshir Jivanji v. Aimai Kuvarji, 117 Ind. Cas. 513; 53 B. 187. But in Manzur Hassan v. Muhammad Zaman, 86 Ind. Cas. 236; 47 A. 151. Their Lordships of the Privy Council have disapproved of the principle laid down in Satku v. Ibrahim, 2 B. 457 and the reasonings given therein. Their Lordships at page 237 observe with regard to this ruling. "The judgment really proceeds entirely on English authorities which lay down the difference between proceedings by indictment and by civil action".

In their Lordships' opinion such a way of deciding the case was not proper. "The distinction between indictment and action in regard to what is done on a highway is a distinction peculiar to English Law and ought not to be applied in India."

With this pronouncement by the highest tribunal in the British Empire it can no longer be asserted now that the principle enunciated by Satku v. Ibrahim, 2 B. 457, is still good law in India. This ruling having been disapproved by their Lordships, of the Privy Council, rulings based upon this case, viz., Satku v. Ibrahim, 2 B. 457 must be deemed to be no longer binding upon the Courts in India. The Hon'ble Judges of the Lahore High Court in Municipal Committee of Delhi v. Mohamad Ibrahim, 152 Ind. Cas. 850; A. I. R 1935 Lah. 196, remarked with regard to Satku v. Ibrahim, 2 B. 457 and the rulings based upon this "if the foundation fails the superstructure must fall". In Chhajju Mal v. Ganda Mal, 4 P. R. 1895 which was based upon Satku v. Ibrahim, 2 B. 457 has been held to be no longer good law . . . . and we have no hesitation, therefore, in holding that in face of the Privy Council ruling mentioned above, i. e., Manzur Hassan v. Muhammad Zaman, 86 Ind. Cas. 236; 47A 151 the Punjab Chief Court judgment is no longer good law."

The result of all this is that now in India any individual person can bring a suit for removal of obstruction to a public way (obstruction to a public way is certainly a public nuisance) without proof of special damage. This principle now has the authority behind it of at least three High Courts in India, viz. Shiv Narain v. Din Dayal, 134 Ind. Cas. 673; A. I. R. 1931 Nag. 189, Mandakinee Debee v. Basanta Kamaree Debee, 147 Ind. Cas. 811; 60 C. 1003 and Municipal Committee of Delhi v. Mohamad Ibrahim, 152 Ind. Cas. 850; A. I. R. 1935 Lah. 196. The Hon'ble Judges of the Lahore High Court say at p. 853, as follows:—

"The question of special damage is very simple. In such cases it is not necessary to prove that any special injury has taken place, before a person wronged by the Committee can take action against it . ." ". . The principle of English law which requires proof of special damage in such cases is not applicable to India."

The Calcutta High Court relying on the Privy Council authorities Manzur Hassan v. Muhammad Zaman, 86 Ind. Cas. 236; 47 A. 151 in Mandakinee Debee v. Basanta KamareeDebee, 147 Ind. Cas. 811; 60 C. 1003, has laid down the law as follows:—

"A member of the public can maintain a suit for removal of obstruction of a public high way if his right of passage through it is obstructed without proof of special damage," and further it was held "That the principle of English Law which requires proof of special damage is not applicable to India."

The result of these authorities is that the proof of special damage in the case of public nuisance as a condition precedent to the maintainability of the suit is no longer required and any person whose right of way is obstructed can bring a suit for removal of the obstruction.

The next question is whether there should be an actual obstruction to the person suing.

Public nuisance has not been defined in the Code of Civil Procedure but by virtue of s. 3c (44) of the General Clause Act, the definition given in s. 268, Indian Penal Code is to be applied to Civil Law. In Sheikh Chand v. Laxman 36 Ind. Cas. 534 at p. 536 it is remarked: that this is the definition that is to be applied in Civil Law.

Under s. 268, Indian Penal Code "a public nuisance is an act or illegal omission which causes any common injury, danger or annoyance to the public or to the people in general who dwell or occupy property in the vicinity or which must necessarily cause injury, obstruction, danger or annoyance to persons who may have occasion to use any public right."

The principle is well established that encroachment on a public way, however, small it may be, must necessarily result in obstruction to persons who may have occasion to use that way, vide Emperar v. Nisar Muhammad 86 Ind. Cas. 1006; 6 L. 203 Queen-Empress v. KidarNath, 23 A. 159 at p. 162; Queen-Empress v. Virappa Chetty, 20 M 433.

On the basis of these authorities quoted above it is suggested to the Hon'ble Members of the Legislative Assembly to amend s. 91, Civil Procedure Code, so that the words 'though no special damage has been caused' be omitted.

Extracts from Contemporaries.

Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Probably no other event during the current year will more forcibly direct the attention of lawyers to the debt they owe to the great men of the past who have assisted in making the Common Law what it is to day than the death of the Honourable Oliver Wendell Holmes, which occurred in Washington during the first week of the present month. Speaking of his retirement from the Bench of the Supreme Court of the United States in the year 1932 at the great age of ninety-one, we ventured to say of him :

"When he pays the inevitable debt of nature he will need no orator or poet to hand on his fame to posterity; by his great series of judgments he has placed himself among the unforgettable men in judicial history."

The high estimate of his qualities and achievements expressed on every hand since the announcement of his death convince us that in speaking of him as we then did our words were free of exaggeration.

But Oliver Wendell Holmes did not have to wait until his retirement and death for a just appraisal of his worth. Of the many tributes to him while he was in the midst of his activities we shall only mention that of Lord Chancellor Haldane on the occasion of the visit of the American and Canadian Bars to London in 1924, and that of Sir William Holdsworth at the Dedication of the Northwestern University Law School Buildings, Chicago, in 1927.

Lord Haldane said :

"Most of us have been brought up on his book on the Common Law, and we recognize it as the work of one who is not only a consummate master of the Common Law, but who is also a ripe and finished scholar."

Sir William Holdsworth said :

"Mr. Justice Holmes's book on the Common Law is as well known to all our law schools and lawyers as it is on this side of the Atlantic. We do not, it is true know so well as you his long series of judgments on all branches of your law; but we know enough of these to admire that combination of legal learning, statesmanship and literary quality, which is the mark of mastery of the law to which few lawyers have ever attained in the course of its long history. . . . . I think that it would be equally true to say that just as Coke by his decisions and his writings helped the English law through the difficult transition from mediaeval to modern, so Mr. Justice Holmes, by his decisions, is helping to adjust your law to modern conditions."

It is perhaps worthy of mention that the present-day realist school of juristic thought has seized upon Holmes's definition of law as "What the Courts do" to support the contention that the law is perennially uncertain because the judge in deciding a case reaches his decision on 'emotive' rather than on logical grounds. But is that 'definition' essentially different in meaning from the old law that "The Judge is the voice of the law?" Dr. A. L. Goodhart has recently pointed out that when Holmes so described the law in his essay on "The Path of the law" he was not attempting a complete philosophical analysis of the law but merely used his definition to distinguish law from ethics. Indeed so far from denying the importance of logic in the frame-work of law Holmes, in the essay referred to, does not hesitate to say that "in the broadest sense it is true that the law is a logical development, like everything else." The realists are said to favour the theory of the behaviourists as to the physical basis of the emotions, and while Holmes would have been alert to assign bowels of mercy to the law it is difficult to think of him admitting that any emotive process that might lead a judge to temper justice with mercy would find its stimulus in intestinal glandular activity.

Oliver Wendell Holmes lived a long life and before it closed could look back with satisfaction upon the way he had used it. One could have no greater happiness. Hoc est vivere bis, vita posse priore frui.—The Canadian Bar Review, March 1935.

Counsel and the Law's Delay.

At a special generel meeting of the (English) Law Society held In London on the 25th January, Mr. C. L. Norton brought up for consideration the time-worn problem of delay in the hearing of actions by reason of Counsel being engaged in another Court than that in which some particular cause is set down for trial. In speaking to his motion Mr. Norton said :

"Every solicitor knew the nightmare of uncertainty whether learned counsel to whom brief had been delivered and fee paid would actually be present to conduct the case. The Bar had secured a monoply by immemorial custom. The litigant was compelled to employ a barrister, and it was reasonable that the barrister's attention and attendance should be enforceable. Only too frequently, at 5 o'clock in the evening before the case came on, the clerk to the counsel who was briefed would telephone that Mr. Blank found himself in a difficulty, and wanted the solicitor either to leave the case in the able hands of his junior or to take back the brief. . . . The Judge would not postpone the action, but would simply say that someone else should have been briefed. The solicitor could not explain his difficulty to the Judge but must remain deaf-mute; he and his client were simply treated as if they did not exist."

If the problem is really as vexatious as Mr. Norton repreeents it to be, its solution ought not to be long delayed. To this end he suggested that causes should be set down some reasonable time before the actual date of hearing—which seems to us a very obvious means for enabling counsel to arrange his several engagements with convenience. Another suggestion was that there should be a return to the system which had prevailed in the Chancery Division under which counsel had to attach themselves to particular courts. A third suggestion was that the courts should be on the telephone so that solicitors could be informed when their attendance would be actually required. Fourthly, Mr. Norton suggested that the courts should sit all the year round, holidays being so allocated that the individual Judges would have reasonable resting periods. This, of course, would depend on the number of Judges being sufficient to keep the business going throughout the year. Lastly, he declared that a litigant should have an absolute right to have his case postponed if his counsel were not ready to conduct it. But the force of this contention was somewhat impaired by Mr. Norton's ealier statement in the course of his remarks, that "it was not in the interests of litigation that there should be a small number of super-men whom every solicitor ran after, so that the other men, who would be quite as good if they had the experience and the opportunity, never had a chance." Isn't that a matter that is wholly under the control of the solicitors themselves —is there any embargo upon a solicitor's freedom to brief any counsel he thinks proper?

Mr. Norton's motion that the Council of the Law Society be urged to make such representations as would "lead to the appropriate remedy" met with criticism to the effect that it was faulty in not indicating the nature of the representations that the Council should make in order to secure the appropriate remedy, and that he erred in imputing the blame to the Bar for the existing state of affairs when it was really attributable to the way the cause lists were framed in the courts. The motion however, passed by a substantial majority, and while vague in its terms may suffice to set the proper machinery of reform in motion.—The Canadian Bar Review, March 1935.

INDIAN CASES

1935 JOURNAL Vol. 155

[The Editors do not hold themselves responsible for the views expressed by contributors.]

HANDWRITING PROBLEMS*

By

F. BREWESTER, F. R. M. S., F. R. S. A.,

Document Specialist, CALCUTTA

(Copyright.)

(Specially written for "Indian Cases and Criminal Law Journal")

FORGERIES.

1. An exceedingly common form of forgery is by means of an addition, an alteration, an interpolation, an interlineation, or by substitution. The various forms of this kind of forgery are almost legion. Some of them are very crudely done and can be detected at sight, while others may be so carefully executed that it is sometimes difficult to detect them, or if they can be detected, it is not easy to prove the fact in a Court of law. This difficulty is enhanced if the point in contest is a small, or a microscopic one, and if its presence is sought to be explained from the other side by disingenuous explanations, or even by perjury. A good many of these problems are concerned with the identity or difference of the ink used in the disputed portion, and in the other parts of a document, and, therefore, it is to ink we shall first direct our attention. The subject of ink in relation to contested documents is nearly always a highly technical one. Many jurists have no scientific knowledge, or training, and it is an exceedingly difficult task to demonstrate satisfactorily minute difference between two inks in a crowded Court. Moreover, many Courts fight shy of the lengthy explanation, or demonstration, that may sometimes be necessary, and, consequently, what should be a scientific proceeding is often a mere statement by a witness which the Court records without really understanding what has been said. It naturally follows that when judgment has to be pronounced the Court is in a quandary. As a consequence, frequently it places no value on the technical evidence on the record, particularly if one specialist is opposed by another, but relies entirely on the statements of other witnesses, many of whom may be deeply interested. It seems to me, therefore, desirable to study the matter of inks first, so that we may have some substantial grounds for coming to a decision.

2. In India there are two chief kinds of ink in use, namely, (1), the common "deshi" or "country" ink, and (2), inks made from iron, logwood, or aniline dyes. Let us deal with the "deshi" ink first. This is a pure carbon ink, consisting of granules of carbon suspended in water, with perhaps the addition of gum. The carbon particles can be purchased in small packets in the bazar, and the ink is then made up by adding the prescribed quantity of water, and gum. The ink is almost invariably used with a reed pen, and is common in the Punjab, United Provinces, and in other parts of the country also. There is very little difference in the "powders" as made by different manufacturers, except that one may be coarser than another. Even the same powder in the hands of two different persons, may not yield the same tinge of ink on paper, because of the addition of more or less water than is prescribed. Further, it is a common sight to see scribes haphazardly adding a dollop of water to an inkpot, the "ink" in which has already seen its best days, and is already far too tenuous. There is also another circumstance which has some bearing on the appearance of a carbon ink on paper, and that is the addition of gum, or some other resinous substance. The general effect of the addition of gum is that the ink is thicker, or more muddy, than when it is not added, and when the ink is thoroughly dry on the paper the gum can often be seen under the microscope in the form of thin, dry, flakes in various parts of the writing. The more numerous the flakes, the greater the quantity of gum.

* The previous Articles on the subject appeared in 154 I. C. pages 1, 9, 33, 41, 49 and 155 I. C. 33 & 41.—[Ed.]

3. Theoretically, writing with carbon ink should normally be quite black in appearance, but as pointed out above, we know that it is not always so. Except in very old documents, and not always in those, it is exceptional to find that the ink is really a dead black. As a rule, if carefully examined, such ink will be found to have a tinge of brown colour in it, and some writings are so pale-brown in colour that they appear as if they had been made with a decoction of tea, or coffee. As a broad generalisation, it is perhaps, not incorrect to say that in really old documents, the carbon ink will be found to be a really dense black, because in those days scribes appear to have taken greater pains in the preparation of the ink than they do now, and also perhaps the carbon of olden days was purer than the present-day product.

4. There is another phenomenon connected with carbon ink to which I must refer. Carbon can be found, or can be made, in various states. If it is made from an unsuitable base, such as charred wood, it may be that, what seems to be a carbon residue, is not in fact carbon at all. If, then, writing is made with such a supposed carbon, it will at first appear to be quite black, but in the course of time it is likely to become brown. The explanation is that when the writing was first made it was practically black, but as, in fact, it contained little or no free carbon, but a mixture of compounds of a tarry nature, possibly impregnated with a small amount of iron, it became brown in the course of time, chiefly due to the small amount of carbon in the composition of the ink, and the action of oxygen on any iron that may be present.

5. A really good carbon ink has the advantage that it is immediately black, or nearly so, and that it will remain in that condition for an almost indefinite period. No change of any kind occurs, because of its physical properties, but it has the disadvantage that it lies only on the surface of the paper, and does not form a compound with it. Consequently, as it does not penetrate the fibres of the paper, it is not difficult to wash off. I do not think it would be in the public interest to state the methods by which this can be done, but I may say that the longer the ink has been on the paper the more difficult is the task of removal. Even if a carbon ink has been completely removed from a paper, its removal can be detected without much difficulty, by a particular chemical process, which I do not propose to reveal. Such a chemical process cannot be applied in a Court, but must be done in a laboratory, and, consequently, when papers are not permitted to be examined where proper facilities are available, fraud often succeeds. In fact, most ink problems cannot satisfactorily be dealt with in a Court room. A laboratory is essential.

6. A peculiarity of carbon ink writing is that it cannot be affected by any known chemical, and it is, therefore, impossible to differentiate one carbon ink writing from another by chemical means. The only resource open to the investigator is by examination under the microscope in a good light, and with various magnifications, though in many instances one carbon ink can be differentiated from another by means of the naked eye, or a good hand lens. Endeavour should be made to determine the manner in which the carbon particles are distributed; their size, and whether coarse or fine. The presence of gum flakes should also be looked for. As such ink is often "sanded", particles of "sand" may be present. Such "sand" is easily recognisable, as it appears in the form of comparatively large granules, of a black, or deep blue-black, colour. Also examine the back of the paper to see how far, if at all, the ink appears to be semi-visible. Study the colour also, and if the page examined is part of a book, look carefully at the back of the previous page to see whether or not there is an "offset". Sometimes, carbon inks contain a small amount of iron. This can be tested for, by using a solution of potassium ferrocyanide, but it must be determined whether the iron is in the paper and not in the ink, as in some papers there may be an iron residue.

7. Notwithstanding the spurious claims of those who pose as "experts", I say, most emphatically, that it is impossible from an examination of the carbon ink alone, to say what the age of a writing is. The most that can be done is to decide whether one ink has the same composition as another, and from that premise to draw any conclusion that may be permissible. In many instances, there are surrounding facts that will enable one to say definitely that one carbon ink writing was not made at the same time as another. Thus, if the problem is to determine the age of a carbon ink writing, this cannot be answered by merely examining the ink. It may, however, be possible to say that the ink of a particular portion, (such as an addition or an alteration) is not in the same physical condition as the ink in the other portions, and it may also be possible to point to differences in colour, or tinge. Particularly where there is an alteration, or addition, it is quite likely that the width of the pen may be different. This difference can be accurately measured with an instrument known as a "Line Measure". Should the question be whether the ink in one portion of a writing is the same as, or different from, the ink in another part of the same document, it is necessary to be extremely cautious, for, as I have already shown, the same carbon ink may be in two different states on different occasions. All that can be said is that the physical condition is, or is not, the same. If it is found that the composition of the ink in an added part is different from that in the other parts of a document, it is usually safe to conclude this clearly proves that the two writings were not made at the same time.

8. Another problem that sometimes arises is whether documents of different dates, or a succession of book entries, were made in the normal course, or whether they were all made at the same time, and not on different dates as the entriers suggest. Problems of this kind can only be solved by careful and patient examination of the ink, coupled with a measurement of the width of the strokes. I should like to make it quite clear that there is a variety of questions regarding the subject of ink, which give the pretender plenty of scope for his fertile imagination, but which no competent and honest specialist, who has the slightest self-respect, will attempt to answer. Each problem, therefore, has to be decided on its merits, according to the physical facts available. Let me give two recent instances, in which such carbon-ink problems were successfully solved.

9. There was a family quarrel, and accounts were called for. These were duly prepared in a bahi. Later on, the scribe who had prepared the accounts was "persuaded" to remove half of a particular page, and to insert in its place half a page taken from another part of the same book. The new half was joined to the old half by means of gummed strips of paper, and suitable entries were then made. The tampering had occurred not long after the original entry, and as it was done by the same scribe, it presented a most formidable problem. There was a slight difference in the width of the strokes in the entries in the old and the new halves but not sufficient to justify a conclusion that the two had been made at different times. The investigator was not satisfied, so he removed the gummed strips of paper, when he at once discovered that the serrations of the two edges of the old and the new halves did not match. A suitable photograph easily demonstrated the fraud.

10. A document written in Urdu on three sheets of stamped paper was in dispute, the point at issue being whether some words on the last sheet had been interpolated, after the document was written and signed. In the first two sheets, the lines of writing were more than two inches apart. The last sheet had three lines of writing. The first and third lines were also about two inches apart, but the second line was at about an equal distance from the first and third. Further, the ink was of a different tinge, being darker than the writing elsewhere, and a different pen had been used. The addition was made by the scribe who prepared the original document, shortly after it had been signed.

11. Many mistakes have been made by ignorant persons in mistaking a carbon ink for some other kind of ink. This mistake occurs by using a chemical reagent, and then applying blotting paper. When the blotting paper is applied, the ink on the stroke tested partly, or wholly, disappears, and if the reagent happens to be one that also bleaches, those who are not familiar with the subject, hastily and wrongly, conclude that the colour has been bleached and, therefore, consider the ink is not a carbon ink. What really happens is that the carbon particles are loosened and absorbed mechanically by the blotting paper. If the chemical really did cause the change, it would do so without the application of the blotting paper.

12. From what has been stated above, it will be readily understood that problems relating to carbon ink are usually difficult, and that it is sometimes impossible to solve them, either in or out of Court, particularly in the former circumstance. Much will depend on the nature of the problem and the amount of physical evidence available. In any event, the best possible course to follow is to have the document thoroughly examined at the earliest possible moment by a specialist who knows his business, and who is thoroughly qualified technically.

13. Logwood ink. Logwood ink is made from the Logwood tree, which is indigenous to Central America. The ink is usually made from an extract of logwood chips, and not from the chips themselves. There are various forms of logwood inks in combination with other substances, but the special characteristic of most of them is their immediate dense colour on paper; their great freedom of flow, and the fact that they do not readily corrode steel pens. They are easy to make and are comparatively cheap, and are mostly used in schools, where permanency of writing is not essential. A solution of hydrochloric acid will conclusively determine logwood ink, which becomes a distinct red, or purple red on the application of the chemical. Inks made from aniline dyes have practically "killed" logwood ink.

14. Aniline inks. These are made from various coloured powders obtained from coal-tar derivatives. They can be obtained in a variety of shades, with which to clothe writing in many-hued vestments. Many of them are of the most delicate tints, and are in extensive use in India, because of the brilliant colours they give, and the cheapness with which ink can be made from them. Most aniline dyes are readily soluble in water, and need only an extremely small proportion of powder to water to give a satisfactory writing fluid. Some of them yield a satisfactory ink even if mixed in the proportion of 1 to 200 parts of water. They are particularly suitable, and are in wide use, for fountain pens. Who has not seen many lawyers in the Bar Room with a battery of fountains stuck in their pockets, each of them filled with ink of different colours, such as purple, green, blue and black? When made up into a solution these inks keep well, and because of their extreme solubility practically no suspended matter is in evidence. Although the writing with such inks is not readily affected by different chemical reagents, yet it can be removed or smudged by water. The great drawback, however, is their extreme fugitiveness, as when exposed to light and air, they rapidly fade, and, moreover, they lack the permanency of good iron-gall ink, even when kept secluded from light and air. Lawyers would be well advised to eschew the use of such inks, because they are dangerous, and certainly no important document of any kind should be written or signed with them. In fact, it would be a wise ordinance if the use of such inks for legal documents of any kind were prohibited altogether. I recently had to investigate a number of documents, including "Minute Books", which were written in aniline ink, and although the writing was comparatively recent, the ink had percolated into the paper beyond the edges of the stroke proper, which had the appearance of having a definite shadow on either side of it. This spreading rendered it difficult to ascertain exactly the edges of the stroke proper. Also some of the writing was so faint as to be almost illegible.

15. Aniline black, or nigrosine. Ink made from this dye makes a blue-black, or purple-black, stroke on paper. The ink does not become darker as time goes on, but it is easily smudged by water, or affected by dampness. It can be washed off the paper, even after a considerable lapse of time. Writing done with this ink is readily distinguishable, because the strokes have a characteristic microscopic dark edge on both sides, and in this respect differ radically from the stroke edges of writing made with carbon ink. Moreover, carbon ink is not affected by any chemical, whereas aniline, or nigrosine ink is affected by water or chemicals. Then also, almost all the aniline inks rearly always have a peculiar metallic lustre, and sometimes show a clear second colour. When both the primary and the secondary colours are visible, the ink is said to be dichroic.

16. Coloured aniline inks. Almost any conceivable coloured ink can now be made from coal-tar derivatives. The principal aniline dyes used for the manufacture of coloured inks are as follows:

Red. Eosine: Erythrosine; Ponceau Scarlet Cotton Scarlet, and Scarlet.

Green. Neptune Green S. G.; Light Green S. F. (Yellowish); Light Green S. F. (Blueish), and Diamond Green G & B.

Blue. Methylene Blue; Acid Blue; Pure Blue; Soluble Blue T, and Indigo Carmine.
Violet Acid Violet 4. B. L., Methyl Violet
Yellow. Fast Yellow and Tartrazine.

Typewriter ribbons are almost invariably impregnated with an aniline dye, which is thickened by glycerine, or other medium, so that the dye may be retained in the ribbon. Appropriate chemical tests will readily distinguish any one of the above named dyes from any other, but it would be too long and too technical to detail the process here. Suffice it to say, for example, that if the body of a document is written with one kind of aniline blue ink and the other part in another kind of aniline blue, suitable tests will distinguish the two, although they may appear to be the same to the naked eye, or even under the microscope.

17. Iron-gall inks. These are, perhaps the most impotant of all writing fluids, and consequently deserve close attention. As the name implies, their chief basis is a chemical combination of iron, and tannic acid. The two principal components of such inks are an iron salt of some kind, such as farrous sulphate, in combination with the tannin extracted from gall nuts, myrobalans, or any suitable tannin bearing substance. When such iron-gall inks are used in a fresh condition, and if not exposed to the air for any time, the marks they make on paper are quite colourless, and almost invisible, until such time as they are acted upon by the oxygen in the air. If partially oxidised by exposure to the air, and of sufficient blackness to be immediately legible, such inks have the drawback that they do not act with the same vigour as when not oxidised, and they do not penetrate the fibres of the paper to the same extent. Moreover, such partially oxidised iron-gall inks may be removed from the paper, simply by washing.

18. The general invisibility of the marks made with freshly made iron-galls inks is overcome by introducing what is known as a "provisional colour." A colour of some kind, such as indigo, but nowadays an aniline dye, is incorporated in the ink at the time of manufacture, and this provisional colour at once causes the writing to become clearly and distinctly visible. Hence the general name of "blue-black", a familar example of which is "Stephen's Blue-Black." According as the writing is exposed to the air, so the provisional colour gradually disappears, but at the same time, the iron, acted upon by the oxygen in the air, gradually develops into a dense and permanent black. It will be easily understood that the provisional colour will remain in evidence for a length of time, depending upon the amount of the colour introduced, and the proportions of tannin and iron. This matter of the development of the eventual permanent black-colour is of considerable interest to the investigator, for obviously, an ink in which the provisional colour is still clearly visible, cannot be as old as an ink that is quite black, and in which no trace of the provisional colour can be seen. In this, as in other matters, caution is necessary. It has hitherto been universally accepted that any ink containing evidence of a provisional colouring could not possibly be say, fifteen, or more, years old, but recent research has shown that this doctrine is no longer tenable in every instance

19. It is most important to understand what occurs when writing is done with an iron-gall ink containing a provisional colour. When the writing is first made what is seen is primarily the provisional colour. Then, as the ink is acted upon by the oxygen in the air, the provisional colour gradually vanishes, while the mixture of tannin and iron turn black, and at the same time the ink eats into the fibres of the paper, and forms a chemical compound with it. The time taken for an iron-gall ink to become apparently black varies according to the composition of the ink. Some inks will become apparently black in about two years, but others will take as long as about four years. I have used the word "apparently" advisedly, for the first apparent blackness is not really blackness at all, but a deep purple in the densest parts. As the process of oxidation goes on, the purple gradually fades, until eventually a dead black appears, which stage may not be reached until the ink has been on the paper for about eight, or more, years, since the writing was first made. The ink will then remain in this condition for a number of years, until eventually there appears a slight yellow discolouration on the edges of the strokes.

20. The importance of the phenomenon just described will be readily understood when forged documents, alterations, additions, etc., of an alleged old date are produced, for, if it can be shown that the condition of the ink is incompatible with the condition of a really old ink, then there is clear proof of fraud. Wills, for example, are sometimes produced, that are alleged to have been written many years before, but which, when carefully examined, will show that even the stage of the first apparent blackness has not been reached. The phenomenon is also important where alterations, or additions, are the subject of enquiry. The average individual, and I include the forger, has not the least idea that two apparently similar black inks are quite different when viewed closely by a skilled observer. One ink may show a distinct gray tinge, whereas another will show a tinge of green, yellow or even purple. Just as "All coons look alike" to most persons, so any two black inks seem to be the same to the forger.

21. To determine the age of a writing from the ink alone is a problem that the careful specialist always fights shy of. By this I mean, that given a piece of writing, and asked to state whether it is two, three, or ten years old, by an examination of the ink alone, the competent specialist will not undertake to answer the question. It is, however, altogether a different proposition to make a microscopical examination of two inks, and to determine whether one of them has been on the paper longer than the other. In most instances, this can be done, though where there is a comparatively short interval of time between the two writings, nothing can be done.

22. If there is one direction more than another which seems to offer scope for the activities of pretenders, it is in regard to matters concerning ink. Some of these ignorant performers will unblushingly swear that (1) a writing is not more than one or two years old; (2) that one writing was written ten days before another, or (3) that the carbon ink is so many weeks old, and so on. There seems to be no limit to their colossal effrontery. I cannot imagine, however, a more glaring instance of brazen impudence and hypocritical humbug than that which occurred in one of our Courts about the middle of 1934. A mere youth posed as an "expert" who claimed to be such after six months' alleged training. In the course of his evidence he stated that the ink on one of the documents could not be more than about nine months old. He further stated that his conclusions were based on the photographs he had taken (and not on the original documents, mark you!), most of which were about as useless as photographs could well be. Asked in cross-examination for the reasons which led him to speak of the age of the writing, he said that this was because the process of oxidation was not complete. Pressed still further, he made the astonishing statement that from the photographs he could see that the oxidation process was still going on!!! Comment is superfluous, though it may be remarked that this sort of "expert" evidence is on a par with that of the alleged finger-print expert who testified in Court that a finger print was so many months old. Dishonest performers of this type can be easily exposed, if the cross-examiner knows his business.

23. My experience over many years is that problems relating to additions, interlineations, alterations, and the age of a document, are often left until it is too late to profit by any changes that may occur in the ink used for the writing. As explained above, all iron-gall inks undergo change from the moment they are put on paper. The first steps in the darkening process are much more repaid than the latter ones. It will, therefore, be obvious that if the document can be put into the hands of a specialist soon after it is written there is a greater chance of quickly detecting the rapid changes in the first stage, than the slower changes in the later stage. These early changes can be detected, either by microscopical examination, chemical examination, or by means of the Colour Microscope, devised by Osborn. I, therefore, strongly impress upon all lawyers that in problems of this kind, it is to their interest to have them examined by a competent specialist at the earliest possible moment, and in fact, the same advice holds good for all classes of problems concerning disputed documents, but it is specially applicable to ink problems.

24. There are many other matters concerning, alterations etc., which I think it is desirable that jurists should know about, but as this article is already long enough, I will defer them for a future article.

UNIVERSITY LIBRARY. LAW COLLEGE

IMPERIAL ACTS, 1935.

(Concluded from page 40, (Journal) Ind. Cas., Vol. 155.)

17. Amendment of section 38, Act IV of 1923.

Section 38 of the said Act shall be re-numbered as sub-section (1) of section 38, and

(a) in the said section as so re-numbered, after the word "provisions" the words, brackets and figure "of sub-section (1)" shall be inserted; and

(b) to the said section as so re-numbered and amended the following sub-section shall be added, namely:—

"(2) Whoever in contravention of a direction made by the Local Government under sub-section (2) of section 20 fails to record in the prescribed register or to give notice of any accidental occurrence shall be punishable with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees."

18. Amendment of section 46, Act IV of 1923.

In sub-section (1) of section 46 of the said Act, after the word "exempt" the words "either absolutely or subject to any specified conditions" shall be inserted.

Extracts from Contemporaries.

Income Tax.

When we read that a taxpayer having been defeated by the tax collector in the Court of Appeal, has bravely gone on to the House of Lords and won, we feel it difficult to repress feelings of unholy joy. This has lately happened (Astor v. Perry, p. 222 post). The appellant made a revocable settlement of his property in New York State to a trust company, who had to pay or apply the income to or for his use for his life. The question in issue was a simple one. Was the whole of the income chargeable to British income tax whilst the appellant was resident amongst us, or only such part of it as actually came to his hands here. With the distinguished exception of the Court of Appeal, all the Courts decided that the second was the right view. The issue depended on the meaning to be attached to the words "any income" and "deemed" in sec. 20 of the Finance Act, 1922. It was a great battle and a notable victory, but, with the decision of Finlay, J., in Marchioness of Ormonde v. Brown (17, Tax Cas. 33) to rely on, the appellant must, we think, always have had good hopes of success.—The Law Journal.

Vagrancy.

The Vagrancy Act of 1824 is one of the older criminal laws which still remain on the Statute Book; and we notice that a private bill was introduced this week in the Commons to amend one of its provisions. A person may be charged and dealt with as a rogue and vagabond under s. 4 if he commits any one of a great number of offences. One is committed if he is found "wandering abroad and lodging" in a barn or outhouse, etc., even in the open air, "not having any visible means of subsistence and not giving a good account of himself." A well-to-do citizen, with money in his pocket, may sleep out by the roadside if it suits his tastes; but if he is a poor man and cannot give "a good account" (whatever that may be) of himself, he may soon be in a police court and have to go to prison. No doubt the lawgivers of King George IV's day thought that the penniless tramp under a hedge was a potential danger, whereas the well-to-do man in this position was a mere curiosity. The law worked fairly well for a century; but cases have occurred where it led to hardship and even, as the proposer showed, to tragedy. The House therefore gave ear to this proposal, of which we shall soon hear more.—The Law Journal, March 30, 1935

Assessments on Married Women.

That a married woman may be ordinarily resident in this country and yet escape liability to tax would appear to be the purport of a somewhat curious case which came recently before Mr. Justice Finlay (Browning v. Duckworth, p. 79 ante). In this case the husband was admittedly not resident in the United Kingdom, and the matrimonial home was in Alexandria. The wife, however, made regular visits to England each year, the period of her stay varying from between 4½ to 5½ months. In the circumstances she was considered by the Special Commissioners to be ordinarily resident here even though her husband was not so resident. But, on the other hand, as she was clearly living with her husband, the provisions of r. 16 of the General Rules of the Income Tax Act, 1918, applied to her case. According to that Rule the profits of a married woman living with her husband are to be deemed to be the profits of her husband and are to be assessed and charged in his name and not in her name or in the name of her trustee. The position therefore was, that the Revenue was not entitled to make in this case any assessment upon her in respect of certain War Loan interest to which she was entitled. The assessment which in fact had been made upon her was accordingly held to be bad. The income-tax machinery clearly failed in this case, since the only person on whom the assessment could be made, if at all, was the husband, but he was a person not resident in this country, and no assessment could be made upon him even in the circumstances:—The Law Journal, March 30, 1935.

Actio Personalis.

At Birmingham Assizes this week, the effect of the new law as to the survival of rights of action was considered by Mr. Justice Humphreys. A father recovered from a motorist two sums in damages for his daughter's death—300*l.* under Lord Campbell's Act and 500*l.* for the pain and suffering caused to his daughter before her death. There is to be an appeal as to the second sum; but on a true reading of the new law we may submit that the respondent is in a strong position. The learned Judge ruled that the effect of the new Act was that if a complete cause of action came to the deceased before her death, her administrator could recover whatever, had she lived, she could have recovered herself. This view was submitted in these columns last year (78 Law Journ. p. 320), and we are gratified to see that the learned Judge has endorsed it. It is to be regretted, however, that no further claim was made in respect of a shortened expectation of life as outlined by Mr. Terrell in his article. That this is a head of damage is in accordance with the views of the Court of Appeal in Flint v. Lovell (51 T. L. R. 127), though in that case the injured person was, fortunately, alive to recover for himself. But the principle there once admitted, the bereaved plaintiff at Birmingham had, it seems, a good case on this point.—The Law Journal, March 30, 1935.

"Goods": Artist and Artisan.

It may be that the judgment of the Court of Appeal in Robinson v. Graves threw some illumination on that dark passage in our legal system wherein distinctions are said to have been drawn between the "future" goods of the artist and the artisan, or rather between the products of some artists and some others. Would the sale of a lady's frock before its making cease to be a sale of goods within the meaning of s. 4 of the Sale of Goods Act, 1893, if the designer and maker were an artist of such eminence that the value of the material were as small, in comparison with the artistry, as the value of the canvas, colouring matter, oils and brushes, in the portrait of Miss Finnegan, completed in accordance with the order of Mr. Graves as given at the cocktail party in or about July, 1932? One supposes that the answer is in the affirmative.

Yet if the bargain was made on completion of the work the sale would presumably be within s. 4, as the sale of Cleopatra's Needle or any Old Master would be. "I can imagine nothing more surprising to a client," said Greer, L. J., "who went to an eminent artist to have a portrait painted, than to be told that he was making a bargain with the artist about the sale of goods." But might there not be some ill-feeling or a little surprise if he was told it was a labouring job—a contract for work and labour? In any case I am not sure about the distinction. Would it be different if the artis were not "eminent"? Might not the future shoe or the future sea-chest be as much a work of art as the future bust? I suppose the answer is that it might; in the words of Baron Martin (Clay v. Yates 1 H. & N. 73, at p. 79): "Every case must be judged by itself."—The Law Journal.

THE END.